1. In drawing Men on to a right way of Believing, we ſpeak not at all againſt Duties; but only diſcover, and bid Men beware of this Corruption which ſo naturally accompanies the Performance of them in Mens Hearts; which becauſe it is ſo natural and ſo prevalent, and ſo dangerous, therefore it is as much to be ſpoken againſt. Now this Corruption is but accidental to the Duties; and therefore the Duties however ought to be performed, and are holy and good. We ſpeak not againſt the things, but the Ground of performing them, with an Eye to them, as any thing that might move God to give you Chriſt, which you are apt unto. And thus as when we ſpeak againſt Merits of Works in our Controverſy with the Papiſts, we ſpeak not againſt Works, but their performing them upon that Ground: Or, as when we ſpeak againſt things lawful, and ſay, that more are damned for things lawful than unlawful, and that they condemn themſelves in what they allow; and, that more are caſt away upon Sands than upon Rocks, viz. groſs Sins: We in this ſpeak not againſt the Lawfulneſs of the things, or forbid Men to uſe them; but againſt their Corruption that place ſo much their Happineſs and Reſt in them, that they are kept from God their chiefeſt Good. Now as things lawful ſtep in betwixt God and Men, ſo Duties ſtep in betwixt Chriſt and them, but both through their Corruption; and in this Senſe Luther ſaid, Cavendum eſt a peccatis, imo a bonis operibus. We are to beware of Sins, ay and of good Works too.

2. When we tell you that the performing of Duties in many does hinder Faith,the Meaning is not that of themſelves they do ſo, for one Command of God doth not hinder another; but it is ſo by reaſon of your Corruption that is apt to reſt in them, ſo they do hinder Men. As the Law ſtirred up Concupiſcence, and was the occaſion of Evil, ſo are Works the occaſion of Oppoſition to Faith; and therefore the Apoſtle ſays (Rom. 9. 29, 30.) many that are profane attain to the Righteouſneſs of Faith ſooner than others that follow the Righteouſneſs of the Law, not that the Righteouſneſs of the Law is in it ſelf contrary; no, this is not Paul's Meaning, for (ver. 32.) he makes the Queſtion how it came ſo to paſs, Wherefore? becauſe they ſought it not by Faith: had they ſought Righteouſneſs in a right way, Duties would not have hindred them. For this you muſt conſider, that Grace and Works, Faith and Works, are oppoſed: But how? Only in point of Juſtification, and attaining of Chriſt; ſo that we ſhould not look to them, or uſe them with an eye to them a Cauſes to move God to beſtow Chriſt on us. Herein they only claſh; and it i Man's corrupt Opinion too that ſets them at odds. It is the Pride of Nature tha will bring Duties in to juſtle out Faith, elſe they would not hinder but further eac other: Not ſo much Works as Boaſting are excluded by the Law of Faith, Rom.3.27 Let the Heart lay boaſting aſide, and reſting in them and Faith, and they will d well otherwiſe, and both glorify God; or as Luther ſays, when Faith goes to believ and to deal with Chriſt, then ſhe ſhuts Works out, and will be with her Spouſ alone; naked Chriſt with naked Faith, and Works ſtand at the Door as Servants that when Faith will walk abroad, they may attend her.

3. We ſpeak not againſt Duties, but would reduce you to a right Method an Order in attaining to the right Performance of them; and that is, to get Faith fir as the Cauſe of all Obedience, and which makes all accepted, without which God i not well pleaſed with all you do, and not to look at Duties as the cauſe of Faith Bona opera non pariunt fidem, ſed fides parit bona opera. Good Works do not bring fort Faith, but Faith brings forth good Works. Titus 3. 9. Theſe things affirm conſtant that thoſe which have believed may be careful to maintain good Works. That is the righ Method, firſt to exhort Men to believe, then to fall a doing. A Phyſician bids h Patient firſt take Phyſick, and then drink Broth; he forbids him not to drink, but t take Phyſick firſt: ſo we exhort you to take Chriſt, and then fall a working.

4. Whereas you may ask, Are Duties no Helps afore Faith? I anſwer fourthl Holy Duties may be conſidered both as Duties commanded to be performed by Go and ſo we ſay all ought to perform them. And ſecondly, alſo as Means appointe by God to convey Chriſt, as Conduit-pipes convey Water; or to bring us to Chri as Boats convey us over the Water, and ſo they are Back-doors to let us in to Chriſt And ſo we exhort you to them. But the thing we ſpeak againſt is, that either Me reſt in the Performance of them as Duties only, and look not at them further Means; or if they do, yet regard them rather as Motives to move God to beſto Chriſt than ſimply as Means, in the uſe of which God beſtows Salvation. Now the Heart reſts in them, or looks at them in this manner, then we ſpeak againſt them.

th

5. When we go about to ſhew you the Vanity and Emptineſs of them, we do it not that ſimply they are vain in themſelves, but vain to that End you uſe them for, and that is to get Chriſt for them, or to be juſtified by them. For tho they ſerve not to that End, yet they may ſerve for another, the other Ends above-mentioned. If a Man that is troubled in Conſcience would go and take Phyſick, his taking Phyſick may be uſeful to him, and not in vain, for he may other ways have need of it; but yet to the end to cure the Wound of his Conſcience, we may ſay it is in vain, to make him look to a higher Means: And ſo when we ſay, the Labours of Chymiſts going by their Art to get Gold, is vain and ridiculous, we do not mean that it is ſimply ſo; for it is many ways uſeful, yet not to make Gold. So we ſay of Duties; they are uſeful, but not to juſtify you, not as you think by your Art to get and work Chriſt out of them; no.

6. When we ſpeak againſt reſting in Duties, what is our Scope? To bring Chriſt and you together, naked Chriſt and the naked Soul; that you may not embrace Clouds but Chriſt in all; that you may not reſt till you have Chriſt in your Eye beyond all Duties; that you may have the Work of Faith in your Eye above all Works. This is all our Scope, as it was Chriſt's; who directed them above Works to Believing, as that great Work of God: And as it was Paul's Scope, who directed them to ſeek it by Faith; Rom. 9. 32. We ſpeak not againſt Duties as Servants to attend Faith, but we would marry you to Chriſt, and have him to be your Husband, and not Duties your Paramoers.

CHAP. III.

Cautions about uſing our Endeavours to believe. We muſt act in Subordination to God's Power, as working in us both the Will and the Deed. We muſt alſo renounce all Ability in our ſelves.

PHIL. 2. 12, 13.

Wherefore my Beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my Preſence only, but now much more in my Abſence; work out your own Salvation with Fear and Trembling. For it is God that worketh in you, both to will and to do of his good Pleaſure.

HAving proved that we are to uſe Endeavours to believe, and that a right and due Performance of Duties is not imcompatible with Faith; my next Buſineſs is to add ſome Cautions to be obſerved in uſing our Endeavours, and in attempting to believe, and going forth to believe, and continuing ſo to do. There are Cautions which it becomes thoſe to have, who are in dependance upon God, and his Free Grace, and his Power, to work Faith in them at pleaſure, as the Text hath : He works (ſaith the Text) the Will and the Deed according to his good Pleaſure. Now altho the Apoſtle ſhews here how the Soul is to manage and behave it ſelf not only in the Point of believing, but in working out our Salvation in all the particular Duties of it; yet what the Apoſtle ſaith here is in a more ſpecial manner applicable to Believing, becauſe that is what we are ſaved by; Believe on the Lord Jeſus, and thou ſhalt be ſaved. It is the great Work of God.

In the Text you have,

1. A Duty, which is that I am exhorting you to, to work out your own Salvation, which is eminently by Believing; for it is Faith unto Salvation, Believe, and thou ſhalt be ſaved; and work it out (ſaith he) to Perfection, as the word ſignifies.

2. You have here the Manner in which this is to be done, (which is the thing I uſe the Text for) it is with Fear and Trembling.

3. Here is that which ſhould cauſe this Fear and Trembling in working out our own Salvation, and that is the Point in hand, for it is God that worketh in you both to will and to do; therefore ſaith he, work it out with Fear and Trembling. And this now (the Words being rightly opened and interpreted) doth hold forth how th

Part 3. Soul in all its Endeavours, in a Subordination and Dependance upon the Power o God to make the Faith I put forth true Faith, and to help me both in the Will an the Deed: It ſhews how the Soul, I ſay, ought to demean it ſelf to God therein, as i Dependance upon that Power.

I will firſt open the Words a little, and then proceed: The Papiſts ſay, that b Fear and Trembling here, is meant Doubting, (oppoſing it to all Certainty and A ſurance of Salvation) a Doubting whether that God will ſave you or no; whic (ſay they) keeps the Heart awful: For they go only a legal way, and a way t work upon Self-love only; and I confeſs if that were the Way of God's workin Grace and Faith upon a Man's Heart, if it were to work meerly upon Self-love an in a legal way, their Interpretation would be the beſt; for it is with a Fear an Trembling whether ever God will work it in me, yea or no; and therefore to hav that Awfulneſs continually upon a Man's Spirit, would be beſt to rouze Self-love and to provoke that, and work upon that. But this Senſe cannot ſtand, for the Te hath reſpect to that place in the Old Teſtament which theſe Words are taken out of and (as Auſtin obſerved long ago) theſe Words are taken out of Pſal. 2. 11. An the Septuagint there uſeth the very Words in the Greek, which are uſed he by the Apoſtle, and therefore ſurely the Holy Ghoſt had an Eye to it. Now ſai the Pſalmiſt there, ver. 11. Serve the Lord with Fear, (ſpeaking of Chriſt) and r joice with Trembling, kiſs the Son, &c. which is indeed eſpecially Believing on hi cloſing with him. Now if it were meant of that Popiſh Doubting, it had been t greateſt Contradiction in the World to ſay, Rejoice with Trembling; becauſe f me to rejoice in that Salvation which Chriſt bringeth to me, and to be doubtful of i is a Contradiction. Yea, the word here rejoice ſignifies the higheſt Rejoicing, rejoice ſo as to leap for Joy; as high a Rejoicing as rejoicing with Joy unſpeakab and glorious, for it is a Rejoicing with Glory. So then he commands at once t higheſt Aſſurance, the higheſt Rejoicing, and yet withal to tremble; he ſpea therefore of ſuch a Fear and Trembling not as hath Doubting, but ſuch as may ſta with the higheſt Joy that is; and therefore he doth not mean a Diffidence, a co tinual Heſitation and Dubitation, or a Conſternation of Mind, as they would car it; for then I ſay it had been the greateſt Contradiction in the World to bid the rejoice with Trembling, if by Trembling had been meant a Conſternation and Di fidence of Mind.

But beſides this, you ſhall find if you ſearch the New Teſtament, that this Phra of trembling, as it is uſed there, hath plainly another Meaning and Senſe than t which the Papiſts put upon it.

It is oppoſed firſt to High-mindedneſs or Confidence in ones ſelf; Rom. 11. 2 Be not high-minded, but fear. Fear therefore is oppoſed to Self-conceitedneſs, a to truſting in a Man's ſelf, and therefore it notes out a working out of our Salv tion with the higheſt Submiſſion and Dependance upon God, who is the Worker it. And that this ſhould be the Meaning of the word here in the Text, is cl from what follows; For it is God (ſaith he) that worketh in you both the Will and Deed: and therefore Fear and Trembling is oppoſed to Conceitedneſs, and Hi mindedneſs, and Confidence in a Man's ſelf; and it is an Exhortation to Submi on, as I might ſhew you out of James 4. 7. where he ſaith, Submit your ſelves God, ſpeaking how they ſhould behave themſelves for God to give them Grace, (in opening that Place would appear:) I ſay then, it is oppoſed in the New Teſtam to High-mindedneſs and Conceitedneſs, and is put for a Submiſſion to God, to low and empty in a Man's ſelf, in reſpect of any Strength in a Man's ſelf.

And then again it is put for a Fear of offending or diſpleaſing one; ſo the Ph of Fear and Trembling is uſed again and again in the New Teſtament. You recei Titus (ſaith he, 2 Cor. 7. 15.) with Fear and Trembling: With Fear and Trembl they received that holy Meſſenger of God, that was an holy Evangeliſt; what, w they in a Fear, in a Heſitation and Dubitation that Titus would do them Hu No, ſurely that Popiſh Interpretation of Fear and Trembling cannot be applied their receiving of Titus; but it hath this Meaning, they were afraid of doing a thing which might offend or diſpleaſe, or be diſtaſteful to a Man ſo eminently ho and he being an Evangeliſt, they received him with all Submiſſion to his Doctri and therefore the word Obedience is annexed to it, remembring the Obedience of you

b

with Fear and trembling you received him. Even as if Chriſt himſelf were upon e Earth and a Man ſhould converſe with him, how would a Man fear in all his ays leſt he ſhould do any thing that ſhould not be ſutable to ſo holy and ſo hea- nly a Spirit as he hath in whom God dwelleth. So that indeed the Meaning of ſe words, Work out your Salvation with Fear and Trembling, is this, it is as if the poſtle had ſaid, Seeing you have a Work begun in you by God, (for ſo he tells em they had, and gives them as much Aſſurance of it as the Teſtimony of an poſtle could do, ch. 1. v. 6. Being confident of this very thing (ſaith he) that God o hath begun a good Work in you, will perfect it until the day of Jeſus Chriſt:) As therefore by his Power hath begun to work in you all at the firſt, ſo you muſt de- nd upon the ſame Power to continue to work in you the Will and the Deed, and t you are to co-work with him, in a continual Subordination to that Power which th begun to work in you; you are ſo to work out your Salvation as to fear to of- nd that God upon whom your Salvation dependeth, to tremble leſt you omit any pportunity wherein this God begins to work upon you; for you muſt be beholden him for Salvation, if ever you have it, and it is he that worketh in you the Will d the Deed: Work out therefore your Salvation with your own Endeavours, but ith the higheſt Fear and Trembling, that is, with the greateſt Humility and Sub- iſſion of Mind, and Dependency upon the Power of God, who muſt do all, with- t all Self-confidence, or Self-conceitedneſs, or truſting in your own Power, and ith the greateſt Fearfulneſs to diſpleaſe that God upon whoſe good Pleaſure the ill and the Deed in perfecting of it dependeth. In a word, this Exhortation of e Apoſtle is a Caution againſt Security, and the giving over of the Uſe of all eans and Ways further to work out our Salvation. It is a Caution againſt Pride d Self-conceitedneſs, and going on out of High-mindedneſs in our own Strength. teacheth us how to manage our Hearts in the Uſe of our own Endeavours, name- , ſo as to fear to offend that God upon whoſe Power we depend for ſo great a ork, and alſo to tremble to omit any Opportunity wherein this God doth work pon us. This is the general Scope of the Words. And ſo you have the Meaning the Phraſe. I ſhall now come to ſuch Particulars, as added to all the former I e delivered, will perfect and compleat this particular Subject which I have oken of concerning Faith, which you may remember was this, namely, to ſhew u how to manage and guide our Souls for the manner of our endeavouring after lieving, and in believing: How to manage our Souls, I ſay, and our Endeavours, ter ſuch a manner as that we may co-work with God in a way of Subordination to s Power.

1. Therefore (and I ſhall keep my ſelf exceeding much to the Senſe of theſe ords, with Fear and Trembling) we do work with God in a Subordination to his wer, when we go forth in a Renunciation of all our own Abilities, in a conti- ed Diſtruſt of all our own Abilities. And this is to work it out with Fear and mbling, becauſe God works in us the Will and the Deed; Be not high-minded, aith he) but fear; be not ſelf-conceited, do not ſtand to go forth upon your own gs. There is no Danger at all for Men to attempt believing, and to attempt it ain and again, whilſt ſtill they go forth in doing of it, with a perpetual Renun- tion of their own Strength, We uſe to tell you, (and we tell you Truth in it) t there is nothing hinders Faith more than a Man's own Endeavours to believe: t how? Endeavouring in his own Strength. And when we ſay that Self, and in Self, and from Self, is againſt Faith, the Meaning is this, that Confidence in Man's ſelf, and in his own Endeavours, is that which undoeth Men. The great iſchief lies in the riſing up of ſuch Thoughts as theſe, I will go pray, and I will lieve, and I will work out a Faith in Chriſt, which the Heart is exceeding apt to, and you that have Experience of the ſpiritual Conflicts and ſpiritual Attempts d Exerciſes of Spirit in the way of Believing, cannot but find it. The Heart, I , is apt ſtill to be ſaying, as he in Pſal. 73. 9. I thought to know this, and this is which we ſpeak againſt; as the Apoſtle James (ch. 4. 13, 15.) teacheth Men to eck themſelves; Go to now (ſaith he) ye that ſay, To Day or to Morrow we will go o ſuch a City, and continue there a Year, and buy and ſell, and get Gain, &c. reas you ought to ſay, If the Lord will, we will do this or that; but now (ſaith he) u rejoice in your Boaſting. What he ſaith of civil Actions, and of our Dependance on God therein, holdeth much more, infinitely more of ſpiritual Actions: Why?

Part 3.

Becauſe that an ordinary Providence accompanieth us in civil Actions; the ſame Providence that accompanieth Beaſts in all their Actions, doth accompany Men in an ordinary way, and ſo Men may better ſay of ſuch things, We will go to ſuch a City, and do this, and do that; yet you ſee the Apoſtle checks their Hearts in the midſt of ſuch Thoughts: much more then are we to ſuppreſs all ſuch Thoughts in things that are ſpiritual, in which we depend upon God only, and upon him alone, and upon a good Pleaſure of his in a more immediate manner. We ſhould take our Hearts at it, and do but watch your Hearts and you will take them at it again and again. It may be that ſuch Thoughts will not come into diſtinct Propoſitions in your Hearts and Spirits, but they will lie there taken for granted. We ſhould take our Hearts at it, I ſay; and when you find your Hearts will go out to attempt any ſpiritual thing, or to attempt Believing, and to ſay, I will do this, or I will do that, and ſo go forth upon that Ground, and in your own Strength, aſſiſted by ſuch a Conceit, you ſhould, when your Hearts are ſo doing, check your ſelves: Even as they ſaid in Jer. 2. 18. What haſt thou to do in the way of Egypt? ſo you ſhould ſay to your Hearts when you find them ſo doing, What haſt thou to do to go out in thy own Strength, in any Confidence in thy ſelf? Men may ſay, and it is ordinary for them to do ſo, That it is God that doth all, and we can do nothing, and yet in the mean time truſt in themſelves, and in their own Strength. The Phariſee himſelf (as the Text ſaith, Luke 18. 9.) truſted in himſelf, yet if you read on, you ſhall find him thanking God for all that he had, and that he was not like other Men, as if that God had done all, and he had done nothing; whereas the very Scope of that Parable is to ſpeak againſt thoſe that truſted in themſelves. Let this Point, continual acting Self-renunciation (that is, continually to act a renouncing of your ſelves in your going forth in all things that you do, eſpecially in the Point of Believing) be ſettled on your Hearts. You are as frequently to exerciſe theſe Acts negatively, as to exerciſe Acts affirmative or poſitive, that is, as frequently to renounce your own Strength in the doing of a thing, as to do it. I will not inſiſt upon ſuch Places where when the Saints have done thus and thus, ſtill they cry, Not unto us Lord, not unto us, as Pſal. 115. 1. (tho there is the like Reaſon in the doing of a thing, that there is after the doing of it). And ſo in Iſa. 26. 12. Lord, thou haſt wrought all our Works in us and for us; they are not content only to ſay ſo, to acknowledg that God doth all, but as it follows there, (ver. 17, 18.) they add, We have been with Child and in Pain, and we have as it were brought forth Wind. Thy Soul it may be hath been humbled and terrified; thou haſt had a world of Conceptions within thee, but ſtill thou haſt brought forth nothing; ſay thou then, Lord thou haſt wrought all my Works in me and for me. What, I ſay, they do when God had wrought all in them, that do thou ſtill whilſt thou art a co-working with God. So in Hoſ. 14. 3. when they were to ſeek Salvation, becauſe ſuch Thoughts of Self-confidence will ariſe, they do prevent and foreſtal them, they do renounce beforehand all carnal Confidence, Aſhur ſhall not ſave us. Why do they ſpeak this, but becauſe they knew their Hearts would be apt to run to Aſhur, for he ſpeaks there not of temporal Deliverance but of ſpiritual, and alludeth to what they were wont to have Recourſe unto for temporal Deliverance, to expreſs what the Spirits of Men are apt to have Recourſe unto for ſpiritual: Aſhur (ſay they) ſhall not ſave us: They lay that for a Concluſion before they begin, We will dam up that Door, there ſhall not a Thought come in of having Recourſe unto any thing, or of having any Confidence in our ſelves, or in any thing in us, or in any thing we can do, but in thee the Fatherleſs find Mercy. The Scripture delights much to run upon theſe Negatives. It is not content only to expreſs poſitively that we are to believe, and that we are thus to believe, and upon this to believe; but that we are in the doing of it to renounce whatſoever is in us. To give you ſome Inſtances for it:

1. See how the Apoſtles ſpeak, Gal. 2. 16. (for they ſpeak of their own Faith there) Knowing that a Man is not juſtified by the Works of the Law, but by the Faith of Jeſus Chriſt, even we have believed in Jeſus Chriſt, that we may be juſtified by the Faith of Chriſt. Here now were two Principles laid in their Hearts; here was firſt a negative one, and that Principle was rivetted in them, they knew they could never be juſtified by any Works of their own, Knowing (ſaith he) that a Man is not juſtified by the Works of the Law. And he comes in with a Negative again, That we might be juſtified by the Faith of Chriſt, and not (ſaith he) by the Works of the Law. Th was the firſt Principle that was inlaid in their Hearts, and then the ſecond is a poſitive one, But by the Faith of Jeſus Chriſt. And as this was the Opinion and Judgment of the Apoſtles, ſo their Practice was anſwerable, for mark the Practice of their Hearts upon this, We therefore (ſaith he) have believed in Jeſus Chriſt, that we might be juſtified by the Faith of Chriſt, and not by the Works of the Law. While they believed they excluded the Works of the Law in their own Hearts, and renounced them. There was an Act, I ſay, of Renunciation, even in the Work of Believing. Not by the Works of the Law (ſaith he) but by the Faith of Jeſus Chriſt.

wa

2. Where the Apoſtle expreſſeth the Doctrine of Faith, Epheſ. 2. 8. (and Mens Hearts ſhould anſwer the Doctrine) he comes in with two Negatives there alſo, Not of our ſelves, (ſaith he) and not of Works. He hath two Negatives to all the Affirmatives that are there: Why? To teach the Hearts of Men, that ſtill in the way of Believing they ſhould ſhut the Back-door, as I may ſo expreſs it, that no Thoughts of Self-confidence may come in and mingle themſelves with the reſt of their Souls when they go to believe. As Abraham when he ſacrificed had a double Work, one was to kill the Sacrifice, and to lay it on the Fire, and to offer it up; and the other was to drive away the Fowls that came down upon the Carcaſes: So you have a double Work when you go to believe, if you will go forth in the Power of God. As you are to attempt to believe in a Subordination to the Power of God, ſo you are to beat off and drive away all Thoughts of Self-confidence and Self-conceitedneſs, to be ever a renouncing of your ſelves, as you would be of Luſts that riſe up.

3. You have the like Expreſſions in Rom. 9. 16. that ſo you may ſee how the Scripture runs ſtill upon Negatives, to teach Mens Hearts what to do. It is not (ſaith he) of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth. And the Apoſtle there brings it in by the by as a Concluſion of what he had ſpoke concerning the Doctrine of Election. So then (ſaith he) it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that ſheweth Mercy. One would have thought it had been enough to have ſaid, it is of God that ſheweth Mercy: No, but he would bring in the Negative, he would have Men renounce their own Willing, and their own Running, and to depend upon that God that ſhews Mercy.

Now, if thou haſt had abundant Experience, and lieſt under a deep Senſe of thine own Unability to believe, the many Experiences thou haſt found of attempting in vain (as thou thinkeſt) to believe, are apt to diſcourage thee. But do thou now mind what the Spirit of God ſhall direct thee to, and that is this: Do not go turn all the Experiences of the Vanity of thine own Attempts into Diſcouragements, that becauſe thou haſt found it to be in vain, therefore it ſhall be ſo for time to come; no, but go turn them all into Self-renunciation; let all this confirm thy Heart that Faith is therefore not of our ſelves; let it, I ſay, confirm thee in that more, and inlay that Principle into thy Heart more, ſo as that thou ſhouldſt maintain that againſt the next time in all the Attempts thou ſetſt upon in believing. And if thou doſt ſo, thou doſt work with Fear and Trembling, thou doſt go forth and co-work with God in a Subordination to his Power to glorify that alone. Diſcharge all thine own Strength continually, diſcharge it of any Help at all that thou expecteſt from it. If it would riſe up and attempt, diſclaim it; yea, becauſe it will riſe even whilſt thou art ſetting upon the Work, let it be the firſt thing thou doſt to ſay, Aſhur ſhall not ſave us; Lord, not of my ſelf, not any thing in me, but through thy Power, I throw my ſelf upon thee. Suppoſe that the Act thou aimeſt at be to go out of thy ſelf only to Chriſt, yet if thou haſt but this Thought, I will go out of my ſelf to Chriſt out of my own Power, or without renouncing of thy ſelf, thou art ſtill in thy ſelf. Such Thoughts hinder God from working: even as Jeſus Chriſt did not work Miracles in his own Country becauſe of their Unbelief; ſo whilſt ſelf thus riſeth up and mingleth it ſelf with that Strength which God giveth, God withdraws his Aſſiſtance. The Words in Heb. 10. quoted out of Hab. 2. 4. His Soul which is lifted up, ſignify, as Pareus well obſerveth, ponens ſeipſum, &c. that is, that Soul that doth make a Bulwark of it ſelf, and truſteth in it ſelf; for when the Heart betakes it ſelf to its own Strength, and goes out in that, it leaves to truſt in God; and it is not Endeavours, but it is Endeavours without renouncing of what is in a Man's ſelf endeavouring, which fruſtrateth Faith, for God hath ſaid, In his own Strength ſhall no Man prevail, 1 Sam. 2. 9. Men that are convinced of the Neceſſity ceſſity of Chriſt, and that they muſt get Chriſt, what do they ſay within them ſelves? I will pray, and I will faſt, and I will go to Chriſt: that ſame [I will] ſpoi all. They are like to Swimmers that are beginning to ſwim, their very ſcrablin and pawing in the Water of themſelves at firſt, their very Eagerneſs is it whic makes them ſink, whereas if they lay but ſtill and committed themſelves to th Stream, even that would carry them. To act out of a Man's own Strength is op poſite to the very fundamental Law of God, it doth prevent and ſupplant the Powe of God in working with us. That I may expreſs it to you by a Similitude which more familiar, you know that the Apoſtle expreſſeth Faith by the opening of Door, in Acts 13. Now a Man's Endeavours to this are like as if a Man in the W ter ſhould be to paſs through a great Sluce, and he ſhould go on the back-ſide of i and pull and pull, the more that he pulls, and the more he would open it by pullin the worſe he is; whereas now if he would commit himſelf to the Stream, it wou open it, and he might paſs through it. So that now that is the firſt thing, Fear a Trembling imports a renouncing of all Confidence in a Man's ſelf. And let a Ma attempt ſtill with a Renunciation of a Man's ſelf, and all in a Man's ſelf, and a and practiſe this, and then attempting to believe will never hurt him, or put hi off from Faith, but he will find that God will co-work with him in the doing of it

CHAP. IV.

We muſt uſe our Endeavours to believe, being fearful of doing any thing to offe that God upon whoſe Power we depend to work Faith, and all other things in us.

2. FEar and Trembling here in relation to God's working the Will and the Dee in us, is extended alſo to Fearfulneſs of offending, of ſinning againſt tha God that muſt work. So that now that Soul that depends upon the Power and goo Pleaſure of God for working Faith in him, and would work in a Subordination t this Power of God, the Law of this Dependance lays this Obligation upon him, tha in relation hereunto he ſhould be fearful even in this reſpect, of offending or prov king God upon whom he doth depend to work in him both the Will and the Dee There are, I ſay, many Motives to keep us off from offending God, but eſpeciall when the Soul hath this Conſideration in his Eye, his being in a continual Depe dance upon God for working of Faith, or for working out his own Salvation. Th Apoſtle, Jam. 4. 5. doth give ſuch Sinners Direction as indeed were fallen back, o had ſtrong Luſts to which they were ſubjected, how they ſhould demean their Sou towards God for the giving of them more Grace to overcome their Corruptions Do ye think that the Scripture ſaith in vain, The Spirit that dwelleth in us, luſteth Envy? The Words are taken out of Gen. 6. for we have them no where elſe in a the Old Teſtament; The Imagination of the Thoughts of Man's Heart are evil, an only evil continually. The Apoſtle here puts in for Evil, Envy, by a Metonym for all the reſt, for that Sin theſe Jews were moſt guilty of: He therefore inſtance in that peculiarly, as being peculiar to that Nation, and he had ſpoken of Envying and Strifes which they had amongſt themſelves in the Words before. Now, ſait he, it is true, this is your Nature, and you have it from the Womb, but there is God that giveth more Grace, and it is his Gift; But he giveth more Grace, ſaith h ver. 6. that is, he hath Grace and Power enough to overcome this Spirit of Envy i you, and he hath promiſed to do it. But then let me tell you this, you muſt d pend upon this God, and you muſt walk as thoſe that do depend upon God to gi more Grace to overcome this Corruption. Now what he ſaith in the general to ſuc is applicable to the point in hand. Now what doth he preſcribe them? He pr ſcribes them Submiſſion to God, and Emptineſs in a Man's ſelf of all Confidence himſelf; He reſiſteth the Proud, (ſaith he) and giveth Grace to the Humble: ſubm your ſelves therefore to God; reſiſt the Devil, and he will flee from you, ver. 7. He bi them firſt ſubmit unto God as he that was the Giver of all this Grace, whereb their Corruptions muſt be overcome; that is, Give your Souls up to him to wrought upon in his own way; and altho you are to uſe Endeavours, (as afterwar he directs them to humble themſelves, &c.) yet in all, ſaith he, ſubmit to Go and go to him, and tell him, that he is as free to work or not to work as he pleaſet

Lord, (ſay to him) I urge not any thing in my ſelf, I put my Mouth in the Duſt, I preſent my Soul before thee, and ſubmit unto thee. For that is certainly the Meaning of Book 3. for he ſpeaks not here in reſpect of Afflictions, but in reſpect of a Dependance upon God for to give more Grace, if you mark the Coherence. A Man ſhould not ſay, I have prayed and faſted theſe many Years, and yet God doth not come: Submit your ſelves to God, (ſaith he) acknowledg thine own Unworthineſs, and thine own Vileneſs, that ſuch is this curſed Nature of thine, as it is pure Grace to give thee any thing, and if it be Grace it is free; why doſt thou complain as if God were bound to give it thee? No, (ſaith he) ſubmit to God. That's one thing, but that which is proper to the ſecond Particular I mentioned is what followeth, Reſiſt the Devil, and he will flee from you. Altho this Luſt of Envy riſe, (ſaith he) yet it never comes to any Act of Conſent, never breaks forth into any Act of Conſent, never produceth any groſs Effect, but the Devil is in it. Now then, reſiſt thou the Devil. What is the Meaning of that? Thou that dependeſt upon God to ſubdue this Spirit of Envy in thee that is ſtill ariſing, reſiſt the Devil. He means this, that the Luſts in a Man put him not upon a groſs Act without the Devil; the Devil is in it then, therefore reſiſt, keep thy Will ſtedfaſt againſt this Satan, reſiſt the Devil, and he will flee from thee. There is a Compact as it were between God and Satan in ſuch Caſes, he doth ſay to Satan, if that the Soul doth reſiſt thee thou ſhalt flee: Even as when Chriſt was tempted, there was this Law of the Temptation, that if Chriſt did reſiſt, if he ſtood out from Conſent, the Devil was to leave him. So that indeed and in truth, the Effect of this Exhortation, reſiſt the Devil, it is this, that tho theſe Luſts riſe again and again, yet they ſhould, in Dependance upon God who gives more Grace, not give up their Will to the Conſent, for the Devil can never hurt us without the Conſent of our own Wills. It is, I ſay, to take heed of giving Conſent to a groſs Sin when we are in Dependance upon the Power of God to give Grace or Faith, or any thing elſe we would have of his Spirit. And he mentioneth this, to what end and purpoſe? Not as if theſe moved God to work, for a Man's Fear to offend God doth not move him to work, but becauſe it is uncomely, it is againſt the Law of Dependance, againſt the Obligation of it to do otherwiſe. When a Man depends upon the Power of God to work more Grace, to work the Will and the Deed, for a Man then to commit groſs Sins, is againſt the Law of Dependance. So you have it in Heb. 2. 6, 7. Take heed leſt your Hearts be hardned through the Deceitfulneſs of Sin. As he bids them take heed of Unbelief, ſo of being hardned with the Deceitfulneſs of Sin, it is all one with reſiſting the Devil in the Interpretation I have given; for as Unbelief makes a Man depart from God, ſo Conſent to ſin keeps Men in Unbelief, and ſo caſteth the Work behind-hand again and again. Now tho a going on in a Dependance upon God with a Fearfulneſs to offend God upon whom a Man dependeth, doth not move God to do any thing, for what he doth is of Grace, yet notwithſtanding by way of removing an Impediment it hath its Place, for there would be a Hindrance otherwiſe. As a Patient that takes Phyſick can do nothing to make the Phyſick work, yet he can abſtain from what ſhall hinder the working of it; he can abſtain from drinking, or from eating before it, or whatever elſe is required: and as a Woman, tho ſhe cannot conceive, yet ſhe may take heed of what is any Hindrance of Conception, of Journies, and violent Motions, and the like: So it is here, tho a Man cannot further his own Salvation by working any thing at all, ſimply conſidered, as what himſelf doth, and tho a Fearfulneſs to offend move not God ſimply, yet the contrary would put God off, that is certain; and it is againſt the Law of Dependance between God and us. Therefore ſaith the Apoſtle here, while Chriſt is forming in your Hearts, take heed of doing any thing that will provoke the great God; and if you will have more Grace, reſiſt the Devil, and you will find this to be true, he will flee from you. So that tho this Fearing and Trembling doth not help forward our Salvation, propriè & per ſe, as they ſay, that is, in it ſelf properly, or as if it did reach the Effect it ſelf, yet it doth it per accidens, it removeth that which would be deſtructive, and would hinder. Tho it doth not move God, yet not to do it may provoke God.

If you ask what Sins a Man ſhould forbear in Dependance upon God, and upon the Power of God in working Faith?

1. I may inſtance even in this of Envying, becauſe James inſtanceth in it. There are ſome Sins that are more contrary to a Dependance upon the Power of God to work in us; as now to think with one's ſelf I have waited thus long upon God, and he doth not anſwer; I have attempted to believe, and I know not whether I have true Faith in me or no; but others have; ſuch a Soul was wrought upon but the other Day, and he is full of Aſſurance. Envying at this, and thinking much of this is contrary to dependance upon God; take heed therefore, leſt the Devil go and get thy Conſent to ſuch Envyings; take heed leſt thou nouriſh and cheriſh them in thy Heart; reſiſt the Devil in theſe, that he may flee from thee; for theſe, I ſay, are contrary to that Dependance thou haſt upon the Power of God: for is not hi Power free? You luſt and have not (ſaith he, Jam. 4. 2.) becauſe you ask amiſs, and you envy and luſt, and have it not while that Diſpoſition is in you; for remembe it is Grace which is the thing you ask, and if it be Grace, ſhall not God do with hi own Grace what he will? Therefore if he will give it to another ſooner than unto thee, ſhalt thou envy him? What art thou depending upon? art not thou depending upon the Power of God? and is not that free? Submit thy ſelf to God, and pu thy Mouth in the Duſt. It was Cain's Sin, that when he was to deal with God fo Acceptation, and his Brother's Sacrifice was accepted and not his, he was wroth and full of envy againſt his Brother, and that ſpoil'd him, and undid him. It was Eſa his Sin, that he envy'd, becauſe Jacob was accepted and not he. When thou ſee others that have attained to much Aſſurance, and to much Faith, and ſtill thy Spirit is kept under Hatches, under Temptation, and under much Unability to believe this Example of other younger Chriſtians than thou, that have attained ſooner tha thy ſelf to much Aſſurance, becauſe God flows in upon them; the Example of this I ſay, ſhould rather encourage thee, than cauſe thee to repine. As Beggars at a Doo though they are not ſerved firſt, yet when they ſee others ſerved, they do not repin at this, but they are encouraged to ſee that ſtill others as they come are ſerved; ſuppoſe others are ſerved firſt, yet God will lift thee up in his due time, as th Apoſtle ſaith, Submit unto God (ſaith he, Jam. 4. 7.) and he will lift thee up i his due time. So Peter alſo hath it, 1 Pet. 5. 6. God hath a time to lift thee up thou wilt ſubmit unto him. You know the Example of the Woman of Canaa when Chriſt ſaith to her, firſt let the Children be ſerved: She anſwers; Yea, but Do may have Crumbs when the Children are ſerved; let me but have Crumbs while they are ea ing, or Crumbs after they have done, it will ſerve my turn. She was ſo far from repinin that Chriſt had Children, that he would firſt give to this, and then to that befo her, that ſhe ſays, Lord, I confeſs I am a Dog, give me but the Crumbs when th have done. Such a Spirit as this, that thus goes forth in a Dependance upon Go without repining, and thus ſubmits unto God, with ſuch a Spirit will God co-wor Let it be ſo far, I ſay, from cauſing thee to repine, as let it ſtrike thy Heart with Senſe of thy own Unworthineſs, and encourage thee to continue in thy dependanc

2. So likewiſe, Impatience is another Sin; when thou haſt waited long, O tho crieſt out, I can wait no longer, as the Pſalmiſt ſaid. He ſpake it in reſpect evil Doers, and their Proſperity in temporal things. Fret not thy ſelf becauſe evil Doers, as being a thing oppoſite to Quietneſs and truſting in the Lord. For Soul to be thus turbulent, and to be up in Arms if God come not preſently, th is contrary to Dependance. Remember that God giveth Grace to the Humbl Grace to thoſe that put their Mouths in the Duſt, Iſa. 30. 7. Your Strength is to ſtill: and (as Lam. 3. 28. hath it) to ſit alone. There is a double ſitting alone, ſitting ſtill: the one is to do nothing at all, and not to ſtir to lay hold upon G and upon Chriſt at all; this is not the ſitting ſtill, or ſitting alone the Proph means, but there is a ſitting ſtill in reſpect of Impatiency; of quelling all imp tient Thoughts, in oppoſition to Turbulency of Spirit, which ariſeth from Man's ſelf; that if God muſt not give him what he would have now, he can ſt no longer. I ſay the Heart muſt be quiet, it muſt be ſedate, it muſt ſubmit to Go wait upon God, and he will do it in his due time. And ſo much for the ſecond D rection imported by this Fear and Trembling.

CHAP. V.

We ought to uſe our Endeavours to believe, being very watchful not to neglect any gracious Opportunities which God affordeth us.

WE ſhould alſo tremble for fear of omitting any Opportunity that God giveth. That you have alſo, James 4. it follows there (v.8.) Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. And when God doth draw nigh to you to give more Grace, then eſpecially draw near to him. Now drawing nigh to God is coming to ſuch Duties, or uſing ſuch Means wherein God doth draw nigh to a Man. Mark the Apoſtle's Phraſe, He doth not only ſay, Go pray, or go humble your ſelves, or faſt, and the like (altho he exhorts to theſe afterwards in the Caſe of Relapſing) but he prefaceth all here with this; Firſt, Draw nigh to God: that is, point the Aim of your Souls to be to draw nigh to the Preſence of God, and let nothing ſatisfy you in all you do, but God's drawing nigh to you; which if you do, you will never reſt in any Duties you perform. He exhorts you ſo to draw nigh unto God. I will not inſiſt upon that, but as I take it theſe Words; and ſo likewiſe, the trembling to omit any Opportunity, do import, that there are ſpecial Times wherein one hath a more ſpecial Dependance upon the Power of God, for the working of Faith. There are ſpecial Times, I ſay, in which God doth draw nigh, and a Man ſhould tremble to omit any ſuch Opportunity. It is intimated in the Text here likewiſe, Phil. 2. 12,13. for it is God (ſaith he) that worketh in you the Will and the Deed, according to his good Pleaſure. Mark that Expreſſion; there is a good Pleaſure of God (ſaith he) which exalteth and ſheweth it ſelf in this, in helping Men, and working with Men when he will, and how he will, and at ſuch a time as he himſelf beſt thinks meet. Now then as the diſeaſed Men (you know it is the ordinary Compariſon) that lay at the Pool, when the Pool was ſtirred, preſently ſtept in; ſo ſo you join with God, and work out with God, when you find that he begins to work as ſometimes he doth, in a more eſpecial manner. You ſhall find in Jer. 31. 18. that when Ephraim found that God began with him, having been formerly wild and unaccuſtomed to the Yoke, when God began to chaſtiſe him, and ſo to work upon his Heart afreſh, Ephraim ſays, thou haſt chaſtiſed me, and I was chaſtiſed; Turn thou me, and I ſhall be turned, that follows: I take the meaning to be this; it is as if he had ſaid, Lord, I have gone on like an unruly Heifer unaccuſtomed to the Yoke, thou haſt begun ſo far as to lay a great Chaſtiſement upon me, and thou haſt awakened my Heart: O Lord, take this time to turn me! Now turn me, and I ſhall be turned: Alas, I cannot do it of my ſelf, I ſhall be an Heifer again if thou letſt me alone, but thou begunneſt to chaſten me, and to open my Heart, and it is in order to turning to thee: Lord, now turn me, and I ſhall be turned. When you find God doth draw near to you, uſe all that Strength that God doth give you in drawing nigh to you; convert the whole Stock of to attempts on believing. If a Man have but a little Stock to trade withal, he will employ it in what is abſolutely neceſſary, he will not go and lay it out in every thing which ſoon it may be ſpent upon, but what is abſolutely neceſſary and beſt for him. When God doth draw near to thee, and begins to enlighten thee, do not go and pray after Knowledg, and Gifts, and the like; no, turn thy Strength to Faith, to believe, that is the one thing neceſſary, and God will be as willing to help thee that way as another, for this is the great Work of God. And let me ſay this to you likewiſe, When God doth draw near to your Hearts by Promiſes, or by Exhortations, attend to them. You read the Word, and you attend upon the Word, and you have Exhortations and Promiſes delivered to you in the Word; now thou that art a poor Soul, and lieſt at the Pit's Brink of Believing, thou comeſt and heareſt a Promiſe that doth nearly concern thy Condition, for it ſpeaks to the very thing, to that which thy Soul hath long deſired and ſought for, and is a Promiſe fitted and ſuted to thy preſent Condition; or there is an Exhortation made to thee in what thou readeſt or heareſt, that is as fully directed to thee as thou canſt deſire, to ſtir thee up to do that which thy Soul ſaith, this is the thing which thou muſt do next: Now I ſay, When God comes thus nigh you, either by ſuggeſting Promiſes thus, or by what Part 3. means or ways ſoever it be, (and the more occaſional the better) whether by Exhortation, or the like; be not coy now, for God draws near to thee, do thou cloſe in and clap in with that Promiſe, or with that Exhortation, and ſay, Lord now ſet this Exhortation upon my Heart, this Promiſe upon my Heart; this is the thing thou haſt ſpoken of ſo long, now ſet it upon my Heart. Be not faithleſs but believing, ſaith Chriſt to Thomas, John 20. 27. There is a Coineſs and an Averſeneſs in the Soul to put it off, ſaying, I ſee not enough to perſwade me: but be not faithleſs (ſaith Chriſt) but believe. Chriſt had anſwered Thomas to his own Deſire, had fitted him juſt, for ſaith Thomas, Unleſs I ſee the Prints in his Hands and in his Side, I will not believe. Why, ſaith Chriſt, now have I uſed a means and a way fitted to thy own Deſire, here are my Hands, and here is the Hole in my Side, feel them, and be not faithleſs but believe, ſtrike in now with this to believe. So I ſay to thee, God comes with Promiſes and Exhortations that do fully ſute thy Condition, now do thou look up to God, be not faithleſs but believe.

I ſhall give you ſome ſutable Inſtances, firſt in Promiſes, and then in Exhortations.

1. When any Promiſe comes that is fitly ſpread for thy Sore, (as I may ſo expreſs it) a Plaiſter fit as can be, a Promiſe that is ſuted to the Wants and Indigencies of thy own Eſtate, Lord, ſay thou, do but ſet this Seal upon my Spirit. Still as he offers and brings thee a Promiſe, do thou go and ſpeak to him again; as he ſpeaks to thee in a Promiſe, do thou urge him to fulfil it. Thus I ſay when God doth thus draw near to you, do you draw near to him. I ſhall give you but an Inſtance or two of the Soul's thus drawing near to God.

1*ſt*. The firſt is the Inſtance of the Apoſtle Paul in Rom. 15. 9—13. he had there in ver. 9, 10, 11. begun and heaped up four Promiſes together (I do not know the like in all the Scripture) of the Old Teſtament that did aſſure him that God did intend Mercy to the Gentiles: That the Gentiles (ſaith he) might glorify God for his Mercy, as it is written, I will confeſs to thee among the Gentiles. And again he ſaith, Rejoice ye Gentiles with his People: And again, Praiſe the Lord all ye Gentiles. And again Iſaiah ſaith, There ſhall be a Root of Jeſſe, and he that ſhall riſe to reign over the Gentiles, in him ſhall the Gentiles truſt. Here were Promiſes now fully fitted to the Romans who were Gentiles, ſpeaking to their very Condition, to help and to ſtrengthen their Faith. When he had delivered theſe Promiſes that thus nearly did concern them (and the laſt of all the Promiſes he mentioned, was, In him ſhall the Gentiles truſt) inſtantly what doth the Apoſtle do? He claps in with a Prayer to God for them, (teaching them what they ſhould do upon the like occaſion) a Prayer that God would make good theſe Promiſes to them. Now the God of Hope, ſaith he, (thoſe are the very next Words) the God of Faith, (for Faith and Hope are oftentimes taken for one in the Scripture) fill you with all Joy and Peace in believing. The Promiſe before was, In him ſhall the Gentiles truſt; here comes a Prayer now, O Lord wilt thou make good theſe Promiſes to theſe Gentiles, teaching them by this what they themſelves ſhould do upon all ſuch Occaſions. The God of Hope (ſays he) fill you with all Peace and Joy in believing, that ye may abound in Hope through the Power of the Holy Ghoſt. The thing exhorted to being above their Power, and lying in God alone to work, to ſhew this Dependance, and what way they were to take upon all ſuch Occaſions, he prays thus for them. And this was the uſual manner of the Apoſtle, for you ſhall find him praying in all his Epiſtles for thoſe to whom he wrote, and he tells them the Words he uſed for them in his Prayer, and his end was, to teach them to pray for the ſame thing. When he would exhort the Epheſians to pray that God would give them Eyes enlightned to know the great things of the Goſpel, how doth he do it? I alſo (ſaith he, Epheſ. 1. 15, 16.) after I heard of your Faith in the Lord Jeſus, ceaſe not to give Thanks for you, making mention of you in my Prayers. Therefore you your ſelves are much more bound to do it. It was but a more artificial way of the Apoſtle's to ſet them on work by his Example, that if he did thus for them, much more they ſhould do it for themſelves. The Text is extreme pertinent to the thing in hand, that when God comes thus to us in a Promiſe, we ſhould preſently clap in with God. When the Apoſtle had ſpoken of Truſt in God, or Hope in God, to which the Gentiles ſhould come, and there was a Promiſe and Prophecy to that purpoſe, he knew that God was only to work it, therefore he goes to him, and goes to him as the God of Hope. And why is he called the God of Hope? Becauſe he alone is the God that works Hope in the Heart. His Prayer then is, Thou haſt ſaid, that the Gentiles ſhall hope in thee; thou that art the God of Hope work it in theſe Gentiles. He calls him the God of Hope in the ſame Senſe that he had called him the God of Patience and Conſolation, in ver. 5. after having ſpoken, ver. 4. that the Scriptures were written to give us Comfort and Patience: For a Man muſt have all his Comfort from the Scriptures, for Comfort from them is the true Comfort, and a Man muſt keep to them: Thou art the Author of all Comfort, (ſays the Apoſtle) therefore comfort them; for that is the Meaning of it. So here he calls him the God of Hope, becauſe the thing he deſires is Hope in God, and he was the only God to work it. Now as the Promiſe was that the Gentiles ſhould truſt in him, ſo the thing he prays for is, that they may be fill'd with all Joy and Peace in believing. And when you hear a Promiſe, do not pray barely and ſcantily for the thing promiſed. He had mentioned no more but truſting in Chriſt, but he prays you ſee for Joy and Peace, and for abounding in it too, and that through believing: and (let me tell you that too) all Joy and Comfort that is not in the way of believing is no true Joy and Comfort. And then, Thirdly, He adds, Through the Power of the Holy Ghoſt. It is the Power of God muſt work it. He goes forth in the Senſe that it is the Power of God that muſt do it for them, yet becauſe God had promiſed to do thus and thus, he doth therefore ſtrike in to move God that was the God of working Faith to do it by the Power of the Holy Ghoſt. You ſee the Place is every way pertinent to the thing in hand, for he had ſpoken of a Promiſe, and of a Promiſe to the Gentiles at large, which Promiſe depends for the fulfilling of it upon the Power of God and of the Holy Ghoſt; he therefore preſently prays that God would make it good to theſe Gentiles, and thereby he teacheth them that when they hear ſuch Promiſes they ſhould go to God who is the God of that Promiſe and of that Work, to work it in them, and that in a Dependance upon the Power of God. God indeed is not much taken or moved of himſelf by this, for he is moved only by what is in himſelf, but he takes an occaſion to do it when we thus go to him with his own Promiſe; and therefore let us ſtrike in ſtill as a Promiſe is brought to us by his Providence, either in the preaching, or reading, or hearing of the Word, or any other way, or occaſionally, that ſuteth our Condition.

2dly. There is another Inſtance of the Woman of Canaan, Mark 7. 27. our Saviour Chriſt did ſeem to put her off, but the truth is, he did intimate a Promiſe to her, (and therefore I quote the Story of it as it is in the Evangeliſt Mark) Let the Children firſt be filled, (ſaith he) for it is not meet to take the Childrens Bread and caſt it unto Dogs. He doth not deny the Dogs wholly, mark it, but he was a Miniſter of the Circumciſion to confirm the Promiſes made unto the Fathers, as you have it Rom. 15. 8. He was to ſerve the Circumciſion firſt: now he doth not ſay that the Dogs ſhould not have the Leavings, no; but ſaith he, but let the Children firſt be filled. This poor Woman catcheth hold of that Word preſently, for that Word had a hint in it, therefore thought ſhe, ſurely the Dogs may have the Leavings, they may have the Crumbs that fall while the Children are eating; and therefore ſhe retorts this upon Chriſt, that tho the Jews were Children, and ſhe a Gentile being a Dog, yet according to the Analogy of that very Similitude and Metaphor he uſeth, ſhe might have Crumbs, and when the Children were fill'd ſhe might have what was the Refuſe and Overplus. Thus Chriſt you ſee gives this ſecret hint, and there was indeed a great hint in it. Now ſaith the Text, (this is it I quote it for) Chriſt ſaid unto her, For this Saying go thy way. One Evangeliſt hath it, Be it as thou wilt, thy Will be done as it were, and not mine; thou ſhalt carry it: but here the Text ſaith, For this Saying go thy way, the Devil is gone out of thy Daughter. Chriſt in appearance ſpeaks half Popery, that he ſhould thus reſpect her Faith and her Saying; therefore Bellarmine urgeth it for the point of Faith to juſtify a Man in a formal and in a meritorious way. No, but the Meaning is this, that upon the occaſion of her Expreſſion of her Faith thus taking hold of the Promiſe, and catching hold upon what Chriſt had ſaid, and retorting it upon him again thus, he ſpoke thus graciouſly to her. As ſhe upon occaſion of his Words ſaid, the Dogs may have the Crumbs, he upon occaſion of her Saying is overcome, and yieldeth to her. So ſay I, when thou takeſt occaſion upon a Promiſe to ſtrike in, as this poor Woman did, upon occaſion of thy ſtriking in, God cometh in to thee; he is taken oftentimes with the retorting of a Man's Spirit to him again with his own Words. You will ſay when you hear Promiſes, O if I knew they belonged to me in particular, I ſhould be incouraged to lay hold on them. Alas! do but think with your ſelves how remote the Inſtances of Promiſes I have given you, both as to the Romans and this Woman, were from determinately pointing at them. The Promiſes the Apoſtle reckons up were made to the Gentiles, and there were Millions of Gentiles beſides theſe Romans, yet the Promiſes being indefinite to the Gentiles, the Apoſtle prays, that God would fulfil them to the Romans. How remote was the poor Woman of Canaan from the Promiſe: She was a Dog, and there were ten thouſand thouſand Dogs ſuch as ſhe, yet ſhe takes hold of the hint that Chriſt gave her, and her need makes her clap in and ſtrike in with it. Therefore do not ſtand and ſay, Till God fit the Promiſe to me, that I ſhall have a full and abſolute Aſſurance that this Promiſe is mine, I will not believe: No, ſtrike in afore; Paul did here for the Romans, and you ſee the poor Woman did ſo.

2. The like I may ſay for Exhortations. When God doth come with Exhortations to you to believe, the Promiſe is laid before you, and you are preſſed and urged to lay hold upon them. Conſider now that excellent Saying of Luther, Faith doth but ſuffer God to do good to it. When God I ſay comes and pins Promiſes to you, puts them into your Heart, when he doth come with Exhortations in the Miniſtry of the Word to lay hold, then lay hold, and ſtrike in, for God draws near to you; ſay, Lord ſet this Exhortation upon my Heart, let that which thou exhorteſt me to, work it in me. You ſhall find this, that in the Scripture there are Exhortations to ſuch things as you cannot do, as to make you a new Heart. You have ſuch an Exhortation in Ezek. 18. 31. where the Prophet exhorteth us to make us new Hearts. Saith the poor Soul, Alas how can I make my ſelf a new Heart! Lord, thou knoweſt I cannot do it. What doth God beſides? As he makes this Exhortation in Ezek. 18. 31. ſo in the ſame Ezekiel, ch. 11. 19. he makes Promiſes of giving a new Heart; I will put a new Spirit within you, (ſaith he) and I will take away the ſtony Heart, and give you an Heart of Fleſh. Here now as in one Place he exhorts them, ſo in another Place he makes a Promiſe to give it. The Apoſtle James giveth them this Exhortation, (James 4. 8.) Cleanſe your Hands ye Sinners: And the ſame you have in Jer. 4. 14. Waſh thine Heart from Wickedneſs. Now look in Ezek. 36. 25, 26, 27. and you ſhall find a Promiſe that God will pour his Spirit upon them, and waſh them from all their Filthineſs. And ſo in Deut. 10. 16. he exhorts them to circumciſe their Hearts; you ſhall find in the ſame Book, ch. 30. 6. this Promiſe, I will circumciſe thy Heart, and the Heart of thy Seed. Well then when you hear Exhortations to any thing, conſider, that God's Promiſes are as large as his Exhortations, as to the Matter of them; that is, there is nothing he exhorteth unto, but there is ſome Promiſe or other for to work it. Now then I ſay, when God comes and exhorts thee to that which thou art next to do, do thou go and urge God with his Promiſe, and ſay to him, Lord, this is that thou now exhorteſt me to, and it is that which I have waited for long, and now thou putſt me upon it afreſh; thou haſt made a Promiſe to work it, Lord work it in me according to thy Promiſe. Thus I ſay, when God comes upon thee with an Exhortation, ſtrike thou in with him when he draws near to thee, draw thou near to him. And this is another way o working out our Salvation with Fear and Trembling, fearing to omit any Opportunity wherein God comes near us, either by Promiſes that concern our Condition or by Exhortations; and where Exhortations come near thee, there Promiſes ar made anſwerable in ſome Place or other, and do thou urge the Promiſe togethe with the Exhortation; and not only tell him of his Promiſe, that he hath pro miſed to give what he exhorts thee to, ſubmitting thy ſelf to him, laying thy ſelf a his Foot; but alſo tell him this, that it is as eaſy for him to ſpeak the Word in th Heart to do it, as it is for him to ſpeak to thy outward Ear, for he may do the on as well as the other. You ſhall find that God wiſheth that there were ſuch an Hear in his People that they would do thus and thus: Tell him it is as eaſy for him to d it, as it is for him to wiſh it. What ſaith the poor Man in Mat. 8. 2? Lord, i thou wilt, thou canſt make me clean. The truth is, he had not a Promiſe, he had no thing to have Recourſe to but the Power of God, which now we are dealing wit in the point of Faith, ſpeaking to a Soul that is in dependance upon it. This I a ſure of, (ſaith he) it muſt lie in thy Will if thou doſt not do it for me, for it is i thy Power to do it. What ſaith Chriſt in anſwer? Shall any Soul come to me, an ſay at latter day, that he told me I was able to do that for him which in Faith he ask'd, and would not, or ſhall challenge me that I did not? No, I will (ſaith he) be thou clean. Chriſt will not have a Soul to be fruſtrated that comes thus, and acknowledgeth his Power, and ſubmitteth unto it, for ſo this poor Man did; Lord (ſaith he) I am unworthy to be healed; (for it is a modeſt way of Expreſſion) it lies only upon thy Will, and I ſubject my ſelf unto it. And ſo the Ruler whoſe Daughter was ſick, deals juſt ſo with his Power; Mat. 9. 28. Speak the word (ſaith he) and ſhe ſhall live. He ſubmitteth himſelf to him. When poor Souls, I ſay, do thus as it were lie at the catch, and wait for a Word, or for an Incouragement from God, and upon occaſion of a Word of Exhortation from God, do go to him and tell him of his Power, that if he will he is able; and when he hath made an Exhortation and a Promiſe, do urge this upon him, the Lord will hear ſuch a Soul in the end, and he will in the end ſatisfy his Deſire. Nay, ſuppoſe thou beeſt guilty of a great deal of Unbelief and Impatience, and envying of others, and what is ſaid in the Word by way of Reproof comes near thee, and ſtrikes thy very Soul, go thou and take an occaſion upon thoſe very Reproofs, to go to God to work the contrary of that in thee which he reproveth thee for. In Luke 17. 5. the Apoſtles ſaid unto the Lord, Increaſe our Faith. The truth is, it doth not cohere with the Words before, and ſo all Interpreters do generally acknowledg; now then the comparing of one Scripture with another will help us out. What is Chriſt's Expreſſion in the Words afterward? If you had Faith as a Grain of Muſtard-ſeed, ye might ſay unto this Sycamin-tree, Be thou plucked up by the Root, and be thou planted in the Sea, and it ſhould obey you. Now if you look in Mat. 17. 20. there you ſhall find it thus; Jeſus ſaid unto his Diſciples, becauſe of your Unbelief you could not caſt him out; for verily I ſay unto you, if ye had Faith as a Grain of Muſtard-ſeed, ye ſhall ſay unto this Mountain, Remove hence to yonder Place, and it ſhall remove, and nothing ſhall be unpoſſible unto you. Now clearly, by comparing one Place with another, (Chriſt uſing the ſame Expreſſion, If ye have Faith as a Grain of Muſtard-ſeed; and ſpeaking in one Place of removing a Sycamin-tree, (for he uſed both certainly) and in another of removing a Mountain) it is evident that the occaſion of the Apoſtles ſaying, Lord increaſe our Faith, was, that Chriſt chid them for their Unbelief, and told them that the Reaſon why they could not caſt the Devil out of the Child was, becauſe they were a faithleſs Generation. And now upon Chriſt's chiding them thus for their Unbelief, what do they do? Lord (ſay they) increaſe our Faith. Poor Men! So that now when God meets by a Reproof with what the Heart is in this way guilty of, let that be an occaſion to thee, as it was to the Apoſtles here, for to go to God, and thus to pray to him, Lord, do thou take this away from me, do thou work in me the contrary to that thou reproveſt me for. And as that Prayer had an Effect upon Chriſt to give more Faith to his Apoſtles, ſo thou wilt find a ſutable Effect of thy Prayer too.

Laſtly; Acknowledg ſtill all that God doth do for thee in the way of Believing. I told you in one of the Premiſes I made, that God doth give Power to one thing when he doth not to another, and that you are to act ſo far as he gives Power. This Text in Phil. 2. 12, 13. hath it, that he works the Will, and he works the Deed; firſt the Will, and then the Deed it ſelf, and he goes on thus by degrees, and this of his good Pleaſure. He will work the Will firſt one day, and the Deed another; he will produce a Deſire after the thing, and then the thing it ſelf afterwards. Now ſtill as God doth work, acknowledg his good Pleaſure in it; and ſo far ſtill as God enables thee to do, to act in the way of believing, ſo far do thou acknowledg his Grace and good Pleaſure in it: Lord, (ſaith the poor Man, Mark 9. 24.) I believe, help thou my Unbelief. Chriſt asked him, if he could believe? how far he could go in believing? Lord, (ſaith he) I can believe a little, help thou out with the reſt. He acknowledgeth God in the one, and hath Recourſe to him for the other. In Rom. 9. 17. ſaith the Apoſtle, It is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that ſheweth Mercy. His Scope is, that they ſhould be thankful to God, and not aſcribe any thing to their own willing, or to their own running, when they had done; and withal to remember, that in depending upon the Power of God, the greateſt Dependance of all was upon his Mercy. The thing I ſay is to that purpoſe worth your Obſervation, and you may make a diſtinct thing of it if you will. When thou art in a Dependance upon God, and practiſeſt theſe fore-mentioned tioned Rules, tho weakly, yet thou ſinneſt againſt him again and again, and art put off by it; and whereas thou art to work out thy Salvation with Fear and Trembling, thou provokeſt him oftentimes, and ſinneſt again and again againſt him, yea againſt the very Obligation of that Dependance thou haſt in thy Eye for Power from God to work and help forward Faith in thee. To comfort thee in this, obſerve how theſe Words come in, they come in as a Corollary from the Teſtimony of Moſes in the Verſe before; for he ſaith to Moſes, I will have Mercy on whom I will have Mercy, and I will have Compaſſion on whom I will have Compaſſion. So then ſaith he, It is not in him that willeth, nor in him that runneth, but in God that ſheweth Mercy. Why doth he uſe the word Mercy here? Becauſe that Soul that is in Dependance upon God to work the Will and the Deed in Salvation, hath as much to do (if not more) with the Mercy of God as with the Power of God, for it is Mercy ſets that Power on work. Suppoſe thou ſinneſt againſt him, and provokeſt him, yet be not diſcouraged, remember that in willing and in doing thou haſt to deal with God that ſheweth Mercy. In waiting on his Power thou wilt ſin againſt him again and again, therefore ſtill remember it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that ſheweth Mercy. So here in the Text it is intimated too, It is God that works according to his good Pleaſure, that is, the good Pleaſure of his everlaſting Will, as it is in Epheſ. 1. 5. Now the Apoſtle doth not uſe this Speech to take Men off from running, but to put them in mind, that if in running they do backſlide, and do contrary to God's Pleaſure, and provoke that God upon whoſe Power they depend, they ſhould yet remember, that he hath Mercy as well as Power. His Mercy then ſhould incourage thee ſtill to depend upon that Power, tho thou ſinneſt againſt that Power, and ſtill thou ſhouldſt have Mercy and Power in thine Eye. The Pſalmiſt puts them both together in Pſal. 62. 11, 12. God hath ſpoken once, twice have I heard this, that Power belongeth unto God; alſo unto thee, O Lord, belongeth Mercy. Therefore now if you will go to work out Faith with God, and to work out your own Salvation in a way of believing, as you are to have Recourſe to the Power of God, ſo you muſt have Recourſe to his Mercy; and tho you fail in theſe Directions, yet remember that it is not in him that willeth, nor in him that runneth, but in God that ſheweth Mercy out of the good Pleaſure of his Will.

OF THE OBJECT and ACTS
OF Juſtifying Faith.

PART III.
Of the Properties of Faith.

BOOK IV.

Tho Faith be a difficult Work above our Power, yet God commands us to uſe our utmoſt Endeavours to believe. The Reaſons why God commands us ſo to do, and how the Infinite Power of God in working Faith, and our own Endeavours are very well conſiſtent together. Diſcouragements remov'd, which may ariſe either from our own Unability to believe, or from the Senſe of our great Sinfulneſs, or from the Thoughts of an abſolute Decree of Election, reſolving to ſave only ſome particular Perſons. Directions to guide us in our Endeavours to believe.

CHAP. I.

Tho Faith be a difficult Work above all our Abilities, yet God commands us to uſe our utmoſt Endeavours to believe, and it is our Duty ſo to do. The Reaſons of it aſſign'd.

HEB. IV. 11.

Let us labour therefore to enter into that Reſt, leſt any Man fall after the ſame Example of Unbelief.

WHEN I prov'd before that all our natural Powers are ſo far from helping us to believe, that in this Matter they diſable us, I might likewiſe have come to the Affections, and it were eaſy to ſhew how that they are all againſt the Work of Faith, and oppoſite to it, and in this I might be very large. For take all thoſe Affections which we call good, and are raiſed up in the Hearts and Spirits of Men, while in their natural Condition, as Zeal for God, (which Men are capable of) as the Apoſtle calls it in Rom. 10. 2. Zeal you know is the intending of all the Affections: now one would think that in the Heart of thoſe Men where we ſee a Zeal of God, or a Zeal for God, this Zeal ſhould not be an Enemy unto Faith; yet the Apoſtle tells us plainly it is in that, Rom. 10. I do my Country-men (ſaith he) no wrong: (ver. 2.) For I bear them Record they have a Zeal for God, but it is not according to Knowledg, i. e. it is not according to Faith, for by Knowledg he means Faith there; for ver. 3. ſays he, They have not ſubmitted themſelves unto the Righteouſneſs of God. I might inſtance, I ſay, in all other Affections whatſoever that are good. And as for evil Affections, you will eaſily believe, that they are Enemies to Faith, as all the Luſts of Men are. You need take but one Scripture for it, John 5. 44. Chriſt ſpeaks there in the Language of Impoſſibility, of Inconſiſtency, that Faith ſhould ever be wrought in the Heart whilſt Luſts remain, that they and Faith ſhould ſtand together. How can ye believe (ſays he) if ye receive Honour one of another, and do not ſeek that Honour that is of God only?

In Book 2. of this third Part.

I might likewiſe ſhew you, that all that comes from us, either take Righteouſneſs that is paſt, or all Endeavours for time to come, as they cannot help us to the Attainment of Faith, ſo they are Enemies to the way of Believing. If we conſider all the Righteouſneſs that comes from us, let corrupt Nature be never ſo much advanced, it is an Enemy, it ſtrengthneth the Enmity that is in the Heart againſt the way of believing. Men cannot have a Righteouſneſs of their own, (as they count it) but they are conceited of it. If Men have any Appearance of Righteouſneſs, O it muſt needs be Grace, it muſt needs preſently be accepted. And the Conceit of our own Righteouſneſs is that which hinders us from ſeeing need of, and looking after Chriſt and Faith. The Phariſees thought themſelves righteous, and they were ſo far from Faith and Coming unto Chriſt, that Chriſt profeſſeth he came not to call ſuch, Mat. 9. 13. As the Law was not given for a righteous Man, (the Law in the legal Tenour of it) ſo nor the Goſpel neither. Faith, in the fundamental Law of it, (as I have formerly expreſs'd it) is directly oppoſite to that Concei of a Man's own Righteouſneſs, which is in every ones Heart by Nature. Herei lies the Pith of Faith, to believe on him that juſtifies the Ungodly, and that in oppoſition to all in a Man's ſelf; ſo you have it, Rom. 4. 5. You know Laodicea, tha thought her ſelf rich, was kept off from going to Chriſt to buy Gold of him: an the richer a Man's Heart and Life is of appearing Goodneſs, the lother he is t break (as he muſt do) and become a Bankrupt, that he may have Chriſt; the lothe he is to ſuffer ſo much Loſs, and to count all things elſe but as Dung and Droſs, a the Apoſtle ſaith. As a Man's own Righteouſneſs for time paſt, ſo ſome kind o Endeavours for time to come, are a hindrance to Faith. I do not only mean Endeavours of Changes, and Reformations of Heart and Life, and the like, that theſ undermine Faith; but oftentimes Endeavours after Faith it ſelf (when they are pu forth in a Man's own Strength) do hinder and undermine Faith. Endeavours fo the time to come, if they be not guided aright, do ſecretly undermine Faith, an the Work of it. A Man when he ſees his former Sinfulneſs and Want of Chri and the Neceſſity of Faith, and hath ſuffered a Shipwrack of all his own Righteouſneſs, yet he begins to build a Ship anew of his own Coſt, and he thinks by haling, and tugging, and rowing, in the end to arrive at Chriſt; and whilſt a Ma doth ſo, Jeſus Chriſt goes as faſt from him as he makes after Chriſt, whilſt he do it out of his own Strength. Whereas if a Man would give up and lay his nake Soul, that little Cock-boat which hath ſo great a Venture in it, if he would put into the Ship of God's Free Grace, as I may ſo expreſs it, and commit it ſelf un it and unto Chriſt, and ſuffer the Streams and Gales of the Spirit in the uſe Means, (uſing of them but as Means) to carry him along, the Soul would atta unto Faith: But Men ſeek after Faith it ſelf, not in a way of Faith, but as a Wo of the Law in their own Strength, which Strength Man under the legal Covena once had. To beat down this Preſumption is the Apoſtle's Deſign, Rom. 9. 1 So then it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that ſhewe Mercy. In ſuch a Preſumption a Man condemns himſelf in what he allows, (as t ſame Apoſtle ſays in another caſe) a Man undoes himſelf in what he endeavoure and if God be not the more merciful, a Man goes to Hell endeavouring and ſtrivi to go to Heaven. This the Apoſtle clears in this Chapter out of which I have no choſen my Text, which refers unto the Example of the Iſraelites; for he had p pounded the Example of the Iſraelites and their Unbelief, and their falling ſhort Canaan, as Types of us under the Goſpel. Now it was not only their Luſts, Fleſh-pots of Egypt, that hindred them from coming into Canaan, but it was cauſe they ſought to go into it, and yet not by a way of Faith. You know God offered to carry them thither, to caſt out their Enemies before them, if they would have gone in his Way (even thoſe that periſhed they might have entred) but that Way they rejected through Unbelief. And then you ſhall find in Numb. 14. 40. that they would enter upon the Work in their own Strength, and roſe up early in the Morning to do it; but what doth God do for this? He brings them back again to the very brink of the Red Sea where they were afore. So it is even with poor Souls, that have gone far in the Wilderneſs, and are nigh Heaven, nigh as it were to believing; and yet not ſubjecting their Souls and Endeavours unto God's Way of working Faith, but attempting it in their own Strength, they are caſt behindhand again, and in their own Senſe are as far off as at firſt: and when God hath humbled them for endeavouring in their own Strength, they are fit to enter. For God hath ſaid in 1 Sam. 2. 6. By his own Strength ſhall no Man prevail: but Men ſeeing no Strength in themſelves to ſave themſelves, and being convinced of that, yet think they may go out in their own Strength to get this Chriſt that ſhall ſave them, and ſo being ſtill in themſelves, they never prevail, for by a Man's own Strength he ſhall never prevail: ſo doth the Holy Ghoſt ſpeak, he ſpeaks it of all things elſe, but eſpecially it holds true in the matter of Believing.

You ſee in this Text, Heb. 4. 11. that the Holy Ghoſt makes an Exhortation to us by Faith, to labour to enter into that Reſt: And this Text I ſhall make no other uſe of, nor of any thing about it, but meerly ſo far forth as it may become a Subject to this Common-place we have in hand. And there are two Ends or Purpoſes which this Text will ſerve for: The one is to ſhew you, that notwithſtanding what you have heard, that Faith is not of our ſelves, it is the Gift of God; yet we are to labour to enter into that Reſt, and labour to believe. And the ſecond thing it ſerves for is this, (and it is a great Point) that an indefinite Promiſe, that is, a Promiſe that God will ſave ſome, not naming who, is a ſufficient Ground to draw in any Man's Heart to believe, take whatever Ground of Faith is held forth in the Word. And this is natural to the Text, and to the coherence of it; for he had ſaid, ver. 6. It remains that ſome muſt enter into Reſt: and his Inference from that is this, which we have here in the 11*th ver.* Let us labour therefore to enter into that Reſt. When Men hear that Faith is not of our ſelves, but that it is the Gift of God, there are theſe three things do uſually ariſe in the Spirits of Men.

1. Either Men do cavil at this Doctrine, as lying as a Stumbling-block in their Way, that if all that we can do cannot produce Faith, but it is the Gift of God, and that God muſt do all, then ſay they, Men were as good ſit ſtill and not labour and endeavour at all after it, for God muſt do all: and theſe are Cavillers.

2. On the other ſide, ſuch poor Souls as deſire to attain to Faith, and to labour for it under the uſe of Mans; yet hearing that Faith is not of our ſelves, yea that a Man's own Endeavours, if they be out of a Man's own Strength, as I have ſaid, cannot obtain Faith, yea, they are Hindrances unto Believing; they are diſcouraged and diſheartned from all Endeavours; they think it cuts the Sinews of all Endeavours, ſtrikes at the Root, and cauſeth all to wither.

3. There are thoſe that do expreſly teach, and have taught this Doctrine, that a Man having ſeen his loſt Condition, is to do nothing elſe but to ſtand and wait, whenas God (without any Puttings forth, or Actings towards Faith) will by an Almighty Power overpower his Soul to believe.

Now then, that there may be an Anſwer and Satisfaction given to all theſe three, I have taken this Text as the Bottom for that Diſcourſe, that ſhall be an anſwer to them all.

After I have opened the Text very briefly, and ſhewn you how it is a Bottom to what I ſhall deliver, then I will come to do theſe three things more eſpecially. I ſhall anſwer firſt the Objection made, as it is a Cavil. I ſhall ſecondly anſwer it as it is a Diſcouragement to good Souls. And thirdly, ſhew you what kind of Endeavours they are, and how they are to be managed which God hath appointed to attain unto Faith.

But firſt I muſt open the Text, and I ſhall do that exceeding briefly. You ſee it is an Exhortation that we ſhould endeavour to enter into that Reſt.

1. Let us conſider what is meant by entring into Reſt, which is to be the Object of our Endeavour. There are two things intended by it.

1. The

Part 3.

1. The firſt is more general, viz. the Poſſeſſion of Heaven, that we are to make ſure of that, that we be not as the fooliſh Virgins, upon whom the Door was ſhut, whenas others entred in, Matth. 25. 10. Thus entring into Reſt, is often taken in Scripture for the full Poſſeſſion of Heaven. So in the 10*th* Verſe of this very Chapter, our Saviour Chriſt's aſcending into Heaven, is called his entring into Reſt after his Work was ended, as God entred into Reſt after his Work was ended. And (Mat. 25. 23.) when Men come to poſſeſs Heaven, it is called entring into their Maſter's Joy: As when a Man is ſaid to have a full Poſſeſſion of an Office given him, he is ſaid to enter upon it. An Heir that was under Age, had a Right and Title to his Inheritance; yet he enters upon his Land and Eſtate when he comes to Years: So that now if you take it in this Senſe, then this is the meaning of it, that we ſhoul endeavour to be found in the Number of thoſe that ſhall enter into that Reſt.

But ſecondly, by entring into Reſt, is meant more particularly the Attainment o true ſaving Faith, whereby we come to have a ſure Title to that Reſt in Heaven, and to make at preſent thereby ſuch an Entrance upon it as gives a Right before Poſſeſſion, which comes afterwards. And this I make plain to you by theſe two Reaſons.

Firſt; By what is ſaid at the third Verſe of this very Chapter, We which have believed do enter into Reſt: So that Faith is clearly and plainly an entring into Reſt, i the Apoſtle's Senſe in this Chapter. In having an Eſtate of Land paſt, beſides th Writings there are two Ceremonies uſed, there is entring upon ſome Part of it, and there is a giving of ſome Piece of the Ground, as a Tuft of Earth, and the like. So i it here, we by Faith do enter upon this Reſt, and we receive then an Earneſt of Joy the Seal of the Spirit, the firſt Fruits of Heaven. 2. It is evident alſo that b entring into Reſt is meant Believing, by the very Words that follow my Text, fo the very next Words are, Leſt any Man fall through the ſame Example of Unbelie He ſets before their Eyes the Example of the Iſraelites, and of thoſe Iſraelites tha went far towards Canaan; and yet (ſaith he) through Unbelief they never entred into it: Now let us (ſaith he) take heed of falling through Unbelief as they did let us therefore labour to attain to true Faith, by which we enter into Reſt, an have ſuch a Right to it as we ſhall never be diſpoſſeſt. And ſo now you ſee that b entring into Reſt is meant Believing.

Secondly; The Word here tranſlated Labour, ſignifies to ſtudy to enter into tha Reſt, to have all the Powers and Faculties in us intended in attaining to true Fait He expreſſeth it by a Word that ſignifies the Labour of the Mind, which is prope to Scholars and Students, whoſe Minds are taken up with the greateſt Intentio and the greateſt Labour. Now (ſaith he) there was never any Scholar ſtudie more to find out what is Truth, giving up his Underſtanding unto God who is th great Enlightner, never any Philoſopher ever gave his Mind more to find out natural Truths, than a Believer doth to attain unto true Faith; We are to ſearch fo it as for Silver: When he therefore ſaith, Let us labour to enter into that Reſt, hi meaning is, that we ſhould uſe the utmoſt of our Endeavours to attain to it, and t attain, as to the Reſt, ſo to the entring into that Reſt. And ſo I have done with th Expoſition of the Words, and you ſee how they are a Bottom to that Diſcour which I mean to proceed in. I ſhall come now to thoſe Particulars which I have lai down to diſcourſe of. 1. I am to anſwer this great Cavil, made either by ſecu profane Perſons, or by thoſe that are oppoſite to the Doctrine of Free Grace, vi that if Faith be not of our ſelves, and all that is within us be againſt it, and that Go muſt do all, then we are not to endeavour. The Apoſtle you ſee, ſpeaks point blan againſt it; and notwithſtanding the Iſraelites (who were Types of temporary Believers under the Goſpel, and of ſuch as attain not to true Faith) endeavoured to ent into Canaan, and yet fell ſhort: he makes this Uſe of it, that we ſhould therefo labour for to enter into that Reſt. But for the anſwering of this as it is a Cav more particularly; 1. I ſay this, that this Doctrine that it is God which wor Faith, and that doth all in us in the Matter of Believing, is attended upon and clogged in this, with a like Cavil that all other Myſteries of the Goſpel are. The Myſtery of the Goſpel lies in this, it is a reconciling of Contradictions; and all yo Cavillers take part with one part of the Contradiction to overthrow the other. A now, that God ſhould peremptorily elect Men to Salvation, and yet Man's Wi ſhould be free; how can theſe two ſtand together, ſay the Cavillers againſt free Gra and God's everlaſting Love? So likewiſe when they hear that God works Converſio n Men unreſiſtibly, ſay they, how can this be if God work upon the free Will of Man? So now here, when we ſay that it is God only worketh Faith, and that it is his Gift, and that all our Endeavours are not able to produce it; what do they preſently conclude and retort upon us? then we were as good lay all Endeavours aſide. But really this is all one with that Deceit which hath damned many a Soul, viz. if be elected, whatever I do I ſhall be ſaved. It is all one with that kind of Cavil of he Papiſts that hath accompanied the Doctrine of Juſtification by Chriſt alone, and y Faith in him, and that without Works; for, ſay they, we were then as good do o good Works at all. So now is it here, if that Faith be not of our ſelves, but it is he Gift of God; then ſay they, we were as good ſit ſtill and endeavour nothing at ll. This is the firſt thing in the General that I premiſe; that it is, I ſay, but a like Cavil to all thoſe that carnal Men have made againſt all the Truths of God, the Myſtery of which lies in reconciling theſe Contradictions. But,

Secondly, To ſpeak more directly to thoſe that cavil thus, and that ſay, it is therefore in vain to uſe Endeavours. Let that Man appear or ſtand out from all the reſt the Day of Judgment, or now in this World, that is able to ſay, I uſed my utmoſt ndeavours to attain Salvation, and could not attain it, God would not give it e. If he did not uſe his utmoſt Endeavours, then God is clear. I will not ſtand ow to diſpute, whether de jure, as we ſay, if a Man ſhould uſe his utmoſt Endeavours, God infallibly would work Grace in that Man's Heart; but, de facto, we may hallenge all the Sons of Men. And let me tell you this, that at the latter Day hen Men ſhall come to be condemned (I ſpeak this to clear God) God will not go nd ſay, I therefore condemn you becauſe you did not put forth an Act of ſaving ſtifying Faith; no, but he will condemn Men becauſe they did not put forth that ttermoſt, which through that Aſſiſtance corrupt Nature had from him they might ave put forth. When God comes to judg all Mankind, it is ſaid, That he will judg em that lived under the Law by the Law; and them that lived without the Law, he will g without the Law, Rom.2.12. Now it is true, in rigour, whether Men know the aw or not, God might condemn them upon it as if they knew it, for they knew it ce in Adam, and are bound to know it: but he will not go that way to work; but f Men have lived without the Law, he will conſider them but ſo far forth as the ight of Nature went, and ſo far judg them; and if they have lived under the Law, hen he will proceed in Judgment ſo far as the Law went, and that Spirit and Strength at accompanies the Law: and ſo if they lived under the Goſpel, he will condemn em for not uſing that Aſſiſtance, that Spirit and Strength that accompanies the earts of Men that live under the Goſpel, and leads them on to Faith. He will not ndemn Men for Negatives, but rather for what is poſitive, becauſe they loved Darkneſs rather than Light, and becauſe they would not believe, but cleave to their Luſts. For if any Man attempted and fell ſhort, the Impediment did lie in his own Will. That Point will never come to be diſputed whether he could or no; God will cut f all with this, he would not, Impii non poſſe eſt ejus non velle. The Impotency of a cked Man is his not willing; and yet this Inability to will is not meerly a moral, but atural Impotence. That they cannot, is reſolved by Chriſt into their Luſts as the eaſon, Joh. 5. 40, 44. Ye will not come to me that ye might have Life; and how can ye lieve, (and why, where lies the Difficulty?) that receive (ſays he, *v.*44.) Honour from another? The Impediment lies in themſelves, in their willing the contrary, their loving Darkneſs more than Light. If indeed the Impediment were extrinſical wholly, a Door lock'd on thee, or that God held it ſo faſt in his Hand that thou uldeſt not wring it out, then there were room for complaint; but it being intrinſical, in thy Will, thou haſt no cauſe to complain.

3. For anſwer to this Cavil, I ſay, that there is no Man would make this Cavil, would complain, that endeavoureth in a right Way; and if he endeavoureth not a right Way, there is reaſon God ſhould complain rather of him. For I ask, Upon what ground is it that thou thinkeſt to attain unto Faith? If thou thinkeſt to obtain it for thy own Endeavours, and by them to compaſs it, I ſay this plainly to thee, s pity thou ſhouldeſt ever attain it that way: 1 Sam. 2, 9. He will keep the Feet of s Saints, and the Wicked ſhall be ſilent in Darkneſs, for by Strength ſhall no Man prevail. And my Reaſon is this, becauſe it would be diſhonourable unto God, for God ver gave it upon thoſe Terms; if he ſhould, he then ſhould loſe the Glory of his race, and Grace ſhould be no Grace, it would be then of Debt, as the Apoſtle ſaith in Rom. 4. 1, 2, 3. Now then if ever God give it, he will give it of Free Grace, or he will not give it at all; not of Works (ſaith he, Epheſ. 2. 9.) leſt any Man ſhould boaſt. On the other ſide, if any one doth endeavour in a Subordination unto Grace, in a Dependance upon Grace as it is free, that he is content to venture his Endeavours upon the Free Grace of God towards him in Chriſt, as thinking that nothing he doth moveth or ſwayeth God any thing at all, but that God is as free after twenty Years Endeavours of his, as the firſt day; I ſay, if any one doth endeavour thus, that Man ſhall be ſure to attain it, and he ſhall have no Cauſe to complain. And if he ſhould miſs, he would not complain, becauſe he ſought it upon ſuch Terms, that God was ſtill free, and he depended upon Free Grace, and he endeavoured ſtill in a Subordination thereunto; and ſo however he had his end, and he would never complain. In a word, either a Man ſeeks Salvation in Subordination to Free Grace, or not; if not, it is Juſtice to deny him, becauſe his Endeavours, if they ſpeed, would derogate from God's Grace: If he ſeeks Salvation ſubordinately to Free Grace, then however it falls out, he will have his end, for if he obtains, he ſays not, Unto my Endeavours, but to thy Grace be the Glory, and ſo he magnifies Free Grace. If he obtains it not, yet Lord (ſays he) thy Grace is magnified, and the Freeneſs of it demonrſtated in this, that ſo many Endeavours miſs'd, becauſe thou wert free whether thou wouldſt ſave me, or not.

faith

4. Let all ſuch Cavillers conſider, that the Scriptures do ſpeak the clean contrary, and thoſe very Places that hold forth that God doth all according to his good Pleaſure, do infer from thence that we ſhould therefore endeavour in our Proportion. You have it in Phil. 2. 13. Beloved Brethren (ſaith he) work out your own Salvation with Fear and Trembling, for it is God that worketh in you both to will and to do of his good Pleaſure. Here the Apoſtle lays down this Poſition as ſtrongly as any Caviller upon Earth can, for he tells us that it is God that not only works the Deed but the very Will in us; and that he doth not only give Power to the Will, and then the Will puts forth the Act, but that he works the very Act of Will, It is God (ſaith he) that works both the Will and the Deed; and this he ſaith he doth of his good Pleaſure, he ſo works it as he will not be obliged to do it to this Man or that Man, or upon this Man's Endeavours, or that Man's Endeavours, but out of his good Pleaſure, when and where, and how he will. Here I ſay, the Objection is made as ſtrong as any Man can make it to raiſe this Cavil upon it, therefore let us do nothing. But ſee how the Apoſtle urgeth it to the quite contrary, Let us therefore (ſaith he) work out our own Salvation with Fear and Trembling, for it is God that works in us both to will and to do of his good Pleaſure. And again, whereas Men are apt to cavil and ſay, Many have endeavoured, and they have miſt, therefore we had as good fi ſtill; what doth Chriſt ſay? He infers likewiſe the clean contrary from it in Luke 13. 24. Strive to enter in at the ſtrait Gate; for many will ſeek to enter, and ſhall not b able: Not be able through their own Luſts, and through their own Wills that undermine their Endeavours. Obſerve it, he draws the very clean contrary Inference, that becauſe many do ſeek to enter, and ſhall not be able, therefore, ſaith he, d you do more, he bids them take more Pains, Do you ſtrive, (ſaith he) wreſtle i out, even as Wreſtlers and Contenders for Maſteries uſe to do, (as the Apoſtle ſait in 1 Cor. 9. 24.) endeavouring to put nothing to the venture, or to an Uncertainty as far as poſſibly you can; Thus ſtrive (ſaith he) for many have ſought to enter, an have not been able. So that now theſe that make this Cavil muſt needs run poin blank againſt the Scripture, which you ſee makes an Inference quite contrary to i I might add alſo that of our Saviour Chriſt in John 6. 27. where when they h taken a great deal of Pains to follow him for the Loaves, he diverts their Labour t ſomething elſe, and he bids them labour or work for the Meat that endures to eter nal Life. But they might ſay, why but it is a thing that is not of our ſelves, it i the Gift of Chriſt, and why ſhould we labour after it? yes ſaith Chriſt, Labour yo for the Meat which endureth to everlaſting Life, which the Son of Man ſhall give you and notwithſtanding he is to give it you, yet do you labour for it. But I ſhall mak uſe of this Place when I come to ſhew you what Acts we are to put forth, and trul one plainly in a word is this, to believe, for ſo it is there, (ver. 28, 29.) Upon th ſay they unto him, what ſhall we do to work the Works of God? or, what do you mea by this Labouring? Saith Chriſt, This is the Work of God, that ye believe on hi whom he hath ſent. He puts them upon Believing it ſelf, and the exerciſing thereo 2dly. Now to proſecute thoſe three Heads mentioned, I ſhall ſhew you, and give a Reaſon or two why tho Faith is not of our ſelves, but is the Gift of God, yet notwithſtanding he requires Endeavours at our hands as means to attain it; and tho he works both the Will and the Deed of his good Pleaſure, yet his good Pleaſure is that we ſhould co-work with him. How to manage and guide your Endeavours herein I muſt ſpeak to in the laſt Head. In the mean time there are theſe Reaſons why God hath joined both the one and the other.

1. That by our labouring and endeavouring we may ſhew and acknowledg what our Duty is. It is God's Command that we ſhould believe and lay hold upon Jeſus Chriſt, and caſt our ſelves upon him for Salvation, therefore it is our Duty, and we are to labour to attain this, and to labour after it in Truth and in the Spiritualneſs of it; not ſo much to ſhew what we are able to do, but what we ought to do, and what our Duty is to do. It is not requir'd to ſhew our Ability, but our Readineſs. Our Weakneſs and our Inability doth not cut the Bond of our Duty. We ſet young Children to School with their Hornbook at their Girdles oftentimes, long before they have Skill, or are capable of Skill to read them; we teach them to take up a Book, to look upon the Letters, to ſhew them thereby what it is we would have them do, and what it is we intend to bring them up to. So doth God himſelf with us. And we do like and approve it in little Children that they will ſit at School with a Book thus in their hand, rather than be ſtill at home careleſs, playing with Babies and Rattles, and the like.

2. God requires Mens Endeavours to this very purpoſe, that Men may ſee their Unability, which is a great Leſſon that furthers Faith. Nature will and doth think it can believe and repent till it makes Trial; and as we uſe to put conceited Perſons upon Services to ſhew them their Folly and their Weakneſs upon Trial, ſo God deals with us. Men if they ſaw not their own Unability, would be apt to ſay in their Hearts, as they, Deut. 8. 17. My Power, and the Might of my Hand hath done this: and they would not ſee their Diſability but by attempting to do ſomething. Thus Chriſt ſuffered the Woman that had the bloody Iſſue to uſe all Means elſe e're he cured her, to ſhew her the Unability and Inſufficiency of all Means; and ſhe ſpent all upon Phyſicians that could do her no good, that ſo ſhe might fly to him. And thus God left Nature to uſe all her Shifts and Inventions to attain to Happineſs, and to uſe all her Wit and Strength e're he ſent his Son into the World; 1 Cor. 1. 21. After that in Wiſdom Men knew not God, that is, after Trial made of the Strength of natural Wiſdom, but not till then, it pleaſed God to ſave by the Fooliſhneſs of Preaching them that believe.

3. God hath appointed our Endeavours and Means to be uſed, not as Duties only, but as Teſtimonies and Evidences that we do wholly depend upon God for to work all our Works in us and for us, ſeeing in the uſe of Means and Endeavours of ours God uſeth to come. Careleſneſs giveth over the uſe of Means, but when a Man dependeth upon God for a thing, that Dependance will make him to uſe thoſe Means whereby to attain it, as a Teſtimony he doth depend upon God, and ſo God requires it. In Luke 5. 4. when Peter had fiſhed all Night and caught nothing, ſaith Chriſt unto him, Launch out into the Deep, and let out your Nets for a Draught; Simon anſwering, ſaid unto him, Maſter, we have toiled, toiled to Wearineſs, (ſo the word ſignifies) and toiled all the Night, which is the opportune Seaſon for Fiſhing, and have caught nothing; nevertheleſs (this is it I quote it for) at thy Word I will let down the Net. His Meaning is, as if he ſhould have ſaid, altho all the Endeavours we have uſed hitherto have been fruſtrate, notwithſtanding the fair Opportunities we have had, having had all the Night before us to fiſh in, and we have took abundance of Toil, caſt in the Net again and again, and all to no purpoſe, yet at thy Word (that Phraſe implies that he did it merely in a Dependance upon Jeſus Chriſt, and upon his Word) at thy Word (ſaith he) I will let down the Net, as an Evidence that he depended upon the Word of Chriſt, and ſubjected himſelf unto it, when he himſelf had little Hope, as thoſe Words imply, We have fiſhed all Night and have caught nothing. When they uſed Rams-horns ſeven Days in compaſſing the City of Jericho, they did not uſe them as a Means that would be effectual in it ſelf to the blowing down of the Walls, but they uſed them as Signs that they believed his Word, and that they did depend upon him to effect that which they deſired, becauſe God had ſaid and appointed that in that Means he would do it. So doth God command and require Endeavours, not ſo much as Means, tho they have likewiſe the Nature of Means, but as Signs that we depend upon him who worketh all in all, and hath appointed to work them by thoſe Means.

4. God hath appointed us to uſe Endeavours, and that we ſhould ſtrive to enter into that Reſt, that Salvation may be prized, that the Gift of Faith may be valued. It is not that thoſe Endeavours promote our Salvation ſo much, but it is that it may coſt us ſomewhat, to the end that we may value it. The Salvation of Men coſt God much, it coſt him his Son, it coſt his Son his Blood, it hath coſt the Holy Ghoſt abundance of Attendance upon us. Now we are the Men to be ſaved, it is our own Salvation: therefore there is a great deal of Reaſon that it ſhould coſt us ſomewhat too. Thoſe things that come to us very lightly, we do as lightly regard them, it is in the Nature of Man ſo to do, and God deals with us as with Men. Things, I ſay, that are eaſily gotten, are lightly eſteemed; we may ſee it by Experience in thoſe that think they have had Faith ever ſince they can remember, how ſlightly do they ſpeak of it, and how lightly do ſuch kind of Souls eſteem of it. If we had Salvation and Faith dropt into our Mouths, we would the more lightly regard it; therefore God would not have us ſlothful for the attaining of Faith, not ſlothful for the diſcovering of Faith, not ſlothful in holding faſt the Profeſſion of Faith unto the end; ſo you have it in Heb. 6. 12. We deſire (ſaith he) that every one of you do ſhew the ſame Diligence, (that is, after Converſion, which you had ſhewn before) to the full Aſſurance of Hope unto the end, that ye be not ſlothful, &c.

5. Even for this very Reaſon doth God require us to endeavour, though he himſelf works all, that when our Endeavours without him have prov'd unſucceſsful, his Power in working Faith at laſt might appear the more. When a Man hath endeavoured and uſed the Means long, and to no purpoſe, as he thinks, if in the end God comes in, it magnifies his Free Grace and his Power towards us. As in that Inſtance before quoted in Luke 5. 5. when they had toiled all Night, and took nothing, that then there ſhould be ſo great a Draught of Fiſhes taken by caſting down the Net once more, this made Peter fall down amazed, this made him acknowledg Jeſus to be the Lord, and to ſay to Chriſt, Depart from me, for I am a ſinful Man; ſo ſtruck was he with the Greatneſs of that Power that appeared in that Work. God doth ſometimes hide his Power under Means, and lets Men endeavour that they may ſee even by Experience their own Inability, which Leſſon is hardly otherwiſe learned. We had ſcarce ever learned this great Leſſon, that it is God that works Faith in us, but by the Experience of our own Inability, and that Experience of our own Inability is taught us from attempting Endeavours according to God's Command. Nature is apt, and will be apt to try if it can work Faith out of it ſelf, it is apt to think I will take the Promiſes and this Heart of mine, and ſtrike the one againſt the other till Sparks come out; and till a Man ſee by his own Experience that nothing comes out, he will never believe himſelf to be ſo unable to attain it as he is. We uſe to put conceited Perſons upon hard Services and Buſineſs to the end they may even by their own Experience ſee their Folly and Weakneſs. It is Experience that muſt teach us the Truth of this Doctrine, or elſe we are apt to ſay as they in Deut. 8. 17. My Power, and my Might, and my Hand hath done it. And therefore Chriſt ſuffer'd the poor Woman that had the Iſſue, firſt to uſe all means, to ſpend all that ſhe had upon Phyſicians, that when the Inability of all Means e ſhould appear, the Cure he was to work on her might the more be magnified.

6. In the laſt Place, I add this as an Anſwer unto this Cavil, that in uſing the Means God hath appointed, and ſuch Endeavours as God requires of us, there is nothing derogated from the Power of God in working when he works Faith, neither doth the Power of God exclude ſuch Endeavours, but both may well ſtand together. Firſt, I ſay, the Uſe of them doth nothing derogate from the Power of God working, no more than the Clay and the Spittle which Chriſt uſed to reſtore the blind Man to his Sight. They of themſelves could conduce nothing to the effecti of it, but in ſeeming Appearance would rather put ones Eyes out more; yet Chriſt who might have reſtored him otherwiſe, would have this uſed, and his Power no leſs appear in the working of it thus, than if he had wrought it immediat without it? So God may and doth ſhew as much Power in our uſing the Means, in working without them. Did not God, think you, ſhew as much Power in tak of a Rib from the Man to make the Woman of, and in taking red Earth to make

Body of the Man out of it, as he ſhew'd in the firſt Day's Creation, when he made all things out of meer nothing? God even in ſome Miracles ſeem'd to uſe Means which might have ſome ſhew and colour of working the Effect wrought, as in healing Naaman's Leproſy, the waſhing in Jordan might ſeem to have likelihood of a Remedy for a Diſeaſe, and God did it to hide his Power. Thus too in ſuch Works as are ſtanding Works, (as the Converſion of Souls is, which is the ſtanding Miracle of the World) God loves to hide and clothe his Power under our Endeavours, and in uſing Means as well as in working it immediately; and as he is found of thoſe that ſought him not, ſo he is found alſo of thoſe that ſeek him; and alike Power and alike Free Grace appears in both. And then again on the other ſide, the Power of God doth not exclude Mens Endeavours, for tho God doth not work Faith in Men for their Endeavours, as the moving Cauſe, neither doth he work by them as adjuvant Cauſes, that reach the Effect, yet as concomitant Inſtruments he doth. You have that clear in that Expreſſion of the Apoſtle in 1 Cor. 3. 8. at the 7th Verſe he had ſaid, that neither is he that planteth any thing, nor he that watereth, but God that giveth the Increaſe: Yet notwithſtanding at the 8*th* Verſe he ſaith, that we are Co-workers with God, and Labourers together with him. So that I ſay, altho Man doth nothing, and it is God that doth all, and Faith is not of our ſelves, but is the Gift of God, yet there are Endeavours and Means that God hath appointed for the attaining of Faith, and both theſe may ſtand together. And ſo let this be enough, if not too much, for the anſwering of that Objection as it is a Cavil, namely, that if God work all, and we do nothing in the producing of Faith in us, then Men were as good ſit ſtill, and not labour and endeavour at all after it.

CHAP. II.

Diſcouragements againſt uſing our Endeavours to believe, which ariſe from the Thoughts of the Difficulty of Faith as being above our own Power, conſider'd and anſwer'd.

I Come now to anſwer the Diſcouragements of poor Souls, that even lie at the brink of Believing, (as I may ſo expreſs it) who yet being ſenſible of their own Inability to believe, and that they are not able to attain Chriſt without Chriſt and Faith, are therefore apt to ſink into Diſcouragements, and to think it is in vain to attempt it, to practiſe or to go about Believing, or to put forth any Act of Faith at all, eſpecially if they have done it, and felt no Comfort in their own Senſe, nor felt any Power coming in beyond what in an ordinary way doth aſſiſt Men. I ſay in that caſe they are apt to be diſcouraged, and to give it over as in vain, and not to ſet upon it. Now for their ſakes I ſhall do two things:

1. I ſhall remove their Diſcouragements.
2. I ſhall give what Directions are ſutable unto ſuch Souls, which indeed in the Cloſe will be this, (as you ſhall ſee afterwards) to put them upon Believing, and upon exerciſing the Acts of Faith continually, for ſo Chriſt did, and ſo did the Apoſtles.

I will firſt remove their Diſcouragements: and to ſuch Souls as are ſenſible of their own Inability, the firſt thing I ſhall ſay, as in relation to their Diſcouragement, is this, That to be caſt down in the Senſe of thine own Unability and Inſufficiency to believe, or to act any ſpiritual Good as of thy ſelf, is a great part of Faith. It is the negative Part, it is the emptying Part, as I may ſo call it, as the other is the filling Part; it is part of that Poverty of Spirit which Chriſt makes the Promiſe to in Mat. 5. 3. Now if the Senſe of thy own Unability be kept within its own Bounds, and thou carrieſt this Principle continually along with thee in thy Heart, the more thou haſt of it the better it is, for ſtill as God digs deeper in diſcovering this unto thee, the higher he builds in the Work of Faith and Believing, and he will certainly do it; and ſo far it is but a Foundation of giving all unto God. And let me ſay this to you, God's end in bringing Men to Salvation that way, viz. to take all Power from them of what is in themſelves, it was not that any ſhould be diſcouraged, but that they might go out of themſelves unto him for Help: and therefore now to maintain a conſtant Senſe thereof is one Direction which I ſhall afterwards give you. But I will now ſpeak to the Diſcouragement it ſelf. When your Souls are brought to this Emptineſs as in your ſelves, for you upon this to be diſcouraged, and to give over the Work, do but conſider the Ground of this, and conſider the Sinfulneſs of this. For a Man to be diſcouraged, and to give over the Work, either becauſe he cannot do it, or becauſe he thinks it will never be done; and therefore he will do nothing, no not that which he finds his Heart ſtrengthned to do, becauſe he knows not whether it be the Power of God in it yea or no; for a Man I ſay thus to be diſcouraged, is to deſpair of the Power of God: It is to add to the Senſe of thine own Inability, a Deſpair of the Power of God too. You muſt know it is a Peeviſhneſs if a Man doth not wait upon the Power of God in its way, as it is on the contrary a meek and humble Temper to wait upon the Free Grace of God in the Freedom of it. Yea the truth is, the Ground of this Diſcouragement is the higheſt Pride: for when a Man hears that he can do nothing of himſelf, tho withal he hears that God is able to work Faith, and to work it inſtantly, if therefore he will ſit ſtill and do nothing, the Ground I ſay of this is the higheſt Pride: for the true Reaſon of this Diſcouragement (if you reſolve it into its Cauſes) is indeed this, that Men would have their own Endeavours to be Means to compaſs Grace. This is the way of Nature. Now altho thou ſeeſt thine own Inability, yet thy Nature riſeth up with another Corruption; and becauſe thou canſt not have it by thy ſelf, and becauſe thou canſt not prevail by thy own Strength, when it is once diſcovered, therefore thou wilt do nothing at all. This I ſay is the working of Pride one way, even as to be conceited of a Man's own Strength (till he is ſenſible of his own Inability) is the working of it another way. It is all but Pride working two ſeveral ways, that becauſe a Man findeth that it is not in his own Power to attain unto Faith, to attain the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and that he cannot compaſs it to himſelf in his own way, even as Men do Wealth, therefore he will ſit down in a pet diſcouraged, and fling off all. It is not therefore the Doctrine, that we can do nothing, and that God muſt do all, that diſcourageth, but it is the Pride and the Corruption that is in the Spirits of Men. For would Fleſh reject and renounce uſing Endeavours as in its own way, and uſe them in a way of Subordination unto God and to his Power, a Man would be ſo far (if he come once to this) from being diſcouraged, as there is nothing more will quicken. As when a Man comes to ſubmit unto God, when his Heart is brought to lie down at the Feet of Free Grace, inſtantly he hath Peace: So when the Heart is once brought to renounce ſeeking Salvation in a Man's own Strength; and not only ſo, but to ſet upon the Buſineſs in a Subordination to the Strength and Power of God, the Strength and Power of God falls upon that Man.

2dly, Let me ſpeak to this Diſcouragement by way of Removal or taking of it away. In the way of Believing there are two eminent Diſcouragements; the one is concerning the Will of God, whether he will accept me into Grace and Favour; and this ariſeth from the Doctrine of Election, that ſeeing Salvation and the Free Grace of God is pitched but upon a few, how there can be an Object of Faith propounded to the Sons of Men, and a Ground for them to believe, that do not know whether they be elected yea or no: or how do I know whether this Chriſt is mine or no, whom you bid me to believe upon? and unleſs I be elected, all that I do will be in vain, and all will be fruſtrate. But beſides this, there is another Diſcouragement, and that is concerning the Power of God, that is requiſite to the working of Faith; Becauſe we are unable of our ſelves to believe, (will ſome ſay) and it is God that worketh Faith in us, therefore I will not put forth any Act of Faith until I feel the Power of God in my own Senſe coming upon me, over-powering me, and drawing my Heart to believe. The truth is, that both theſe Objections or Diſcouragements do in a manner come to one, at leaſtwiſe there is a great deal of Parallel betwixt them, and the ſame thing that anſwers the one will anſwer the other. I will afterward anſwer the firſt Objection, by ſhewing, that Election is ſo far from being a Diſcouragement, that it is the greateſt Incouragement to any Soul in the way of Believing that can be. But now I ſhall only make a Parallel of this Objection with the other, and ſo ſhew you how the Diſcouragement may be taken away by the ſame Reaſon or Conſideration in the one, that it is removed and taken away in the other. I ſay both theſe Diſcouragements are alike, and they come all to one; for a Soul that doth not know whether it is elected or no, whether God will accept it, doth but venture its Faith, and its going to God, and to Chriſt in a Subordination to his free Grace upon God's good Pleaſure, and the Freedom of his Will: and one that is ſenſible of his own Inſufficiency, doth but venture his Believing, and endeavoureth in a Subordination to the Power of God, ſo as the thing comes all to one; yea, ſo far as any Man may have Hope and Ground to think that God may accept of him, (which may be the Ground for Faith notwithſtanding Election) ſo far may that Man have a Hopefulneſs that the Power of God will accompany him in the exerciſing of Faith. And the Reaſon of it is clearly this, becauſe the Power of God is ſet a-work by his Will, and both theſe are commenſurable and proportionable; and ſo far as the Will of God goes, ſo far his Power goes; and ſo far as I have Hope, and have ground to hope that God may accept me, ſo far I have ground alſo to wait upon him, to put forth that Power to accompany me, and to ſtrengthen me, and enable me in believing, and in all the Acts of it. As therefore Men do make a Venture upon the Will of God in caſting themſelves upon it to ſave them, and accept them (and it is the beſt Venture that ever was made) ſo far Men ought to attempt the Exerciſe of Faith without Diſcouragement, in a Way of Subordination unto the Power of God, and to put themſelves into the Stream of it. The Truth is, when all is done, God will be truſted in both.

3. Join but theſe two following things together, and do but conſider what a great Encouragement this Doctrine is, that it is God only that muſt work in us, rather than a Diſcouragement. I ſay, join but theſe two things together, which are both true; firſt, That God doth all, which is the Objection: but ſecondly, take this in too, That this God who doth all, uſeth graciouſly to come and join with Men while they are acting and exerciſing of Faith, and his Power raiſeth them to believing ſavingly and ſpiritually: if you conſider theſe two things together, then inſtead of a Diſcouragement, it is the greateſt Encouragement that ever was or could be ſuppoſed to be. Now thus it is; only God will be free, he will take his own time, he will ſhew his Liberty in the Time as well as in the Perſon. But when we take the Pen in our Hand, and often attempt to write after the Copy, though of our ſelves we know not how to write a Letter, yet in Obedience to him, going about to do our Duty, he takes us by the Hand, and ſtrengthens and enables us to do it. The poor impotent Man at the Pool of Betheſda, that attempted to go in, and cried out to go in, and could not for thirty Years; yet at laſt the poor Man having continued thus long lying there, Jeſus Chriſt came and heal'd him; not becauſe he lay there, but to ſhew that he bleſſed his waiting on him. In that Jam. 4. what ſays the Apoſtle, Jam. 4. 8. Draw nigh unto God, and he will draw nigh unto you. To draw nigh unto God is to draw nigh unto him, as in putting ones ſelf under Ordinances and Means (as of Korah, Dathan and Abiram, it is ſaid they did draw nigh unto God) ſo by believing. Let us draw nigh (ſaith he) with full Aſſurance of Faith, Heb. 10. 2. And when Men put themſelves under ſuch Means where God's Preſence uſeth to be, then doth God uſe to draw nigh unto them, Draw nigh unto God (ſaith he) and he will draw nigh unto you. I could give you a multitude of Places, as Prov. 1. 23. I will pour out my Spirit upon you: and Mat. 7. 7. Seek, and you ſhall find: and Luk. 11. 13. He will give the Spirit unto them that ask. Thus God though he doth all, yet he is graciouſly pleaſed to join with us (and how I ſhall ſhew you by and by) and to act us through his Strength acting of us, and to come in and work that for us which we aim at: And if ſo, then it is the greateſt Encouragement to us which can be that God doth all. If that God ſhould have ſaid to you that are the Sons of Men, I will give you aſſiſting Grace, which yet I leave to the Liberty of your Wills to join withal, or not to join withal; in this Caſe all the Sons of Men, when it had been thus of themſelves and their own Power, would have fallen off from God, and would have turned this Grace into Wantonneſs. But if God ſhall ſay, I will not deal with you according to the Way or the Will of the Creature, but whilſt I aſſiſt your Will to do thus and thus, I will come in with a farther Power, and I will do all for you and all in you; and ſo draw the Creature to wait upon an higher Power, and to act in a Subordination thereunto; this way of Salvation is the greateſt Encouragement that can be: and why is it ſo? Becauſe that in this Caſe God undertakes to do all, and it is better to a wait in way of Uncertainty (if I may ſo expreſs it, though it is not ſo) in a Dependance upon the Power of God this way, than to have gone gone the other way as Adam did, and as all legal Chriſtians do: for what ſaith the Heart? Here is my comfort, that that God in Dependance upon whoſe Power I act ſtill ſo far as he aſſiſteth, and depend upon his Power to work all in me, he is able, and nothing is too hard for him. I have an hard Heart, a baſe unbelieving Heart, apt to depart from the living God, but I depend upon the Power of God to overcome this hard Heart, to draw me in to the Lord Jeſus, and there is nothing too hard for his Engagement. I ſay, to depend upon ſuch a Power, whenas you have that Power alſo that doth engage it ſelf, that when he doth give a Will to uſe ſuch and ſuch Means, he often and ordinarily comes in; to depend, I ſay, upon ſuch a Power is the greateſt Encouragement that can be.

Part 3.

I ſhall make a Parallel of it now, with the throwing of a Man's ſelf upon the free Grace of God to ſave him in the way of Election. Men uſually ſay, that Election is the moſt diſcouraging Doctrine in the World; but really whoſoever throws himſelf upon the Riches of the free Grace of God, and depends upon ſuch a Love as God manifeſteth to the Elect to ſave him, will find all Objections are anſwered, whether they be taken from Unworthineſs, or any other Reaſon, they do all vaniſh before it, only this one remaineth, whether thou art the Perſon or no. And for that I ſay, there is an eaſy Anſwer, that the indefinite Promiſe (as I ſhall in the Sequel ſhew you) is the Ground of Faith. So now when you come to depend upon the Power of God, Faith doth as it were make but one Venture, and that is at firſt; for if once you find that Power of God to be engaged, it is ſo engaged as that it will for ever do all in you, and carry it on for ever afterward, and that you may be ſure of. So that indeed all the Venture you make is at firſt to get this Faith wrought in you; but if this Power be once engaged, it will go on, it will everlaſtingly ſave you; and therefore Chriſt ſtill makes an Encouragement of it, when he had ſaid (Mat. 19. 24.) how hard it is for a rich Man to enter into Heaven, as hard as for a Camel to go in at the Eye of an Needle, the Diſciples the Text ſaith, were diſcouraged; What Man then ſhall be ſaved? ſay they. It was meerly becauſe they did dream of being ſaved by ſomething in a Man's ſelf. How doth Chriſt anſwer? With Man this is impoſſible (ſaith he) but with God all things are poſſible. He tells them this to raiſe up their Hearts again; therefore (ſaith he) do but you venture upon the Power of God, though the Work be thus difficult, and that will overcome your Luſts, and that will ſubdue the hardeſt Heart, and ſtrongeſt earthly Mind. Chriſt, I ſay, in that place, makes it an Encouragement, and indeed it is the greateſt.

4. The next thing that I would ſay for the Encouragement of ſuch is this, that if God do give thee an Heart to labour and to endeavour ſtill to renew thy Faith, and thou doſt renew thy Faith continually upon it, God will beſtow and doth beſtow uſually the thing in the end. In Luk. 11. there is a Parable exceeding clear to this Purpoſe; Chriſt there exhorts them to pray and to continue to pray, and he doth it upon this Ground; by the Parable of a Man's Friend coming to him, whom in the End he heareth, becauſe of his Importunity, ver. 8. Now though God doth not hear for thy Importunity, yet when he gives thee a Heart that doth in a way of Importunity and Conſtancy exerciſe Acts of Faith, never ſtand diſputing whether they be true Acts of Faith: ſuppoſe thou haſt not true Faith at preſent, ſuppoſe thou ſhouldſt not have it, ſuppoſe thou be but a temporary Believer, if he enable thee to continue thus, he doth uſually join with the Believer in the end. And ſo Chriſt concludeth that Parable, and bids them ſeek and they ſhall find; for, ſaith he, he giveth the Spirit unto them that ask him, ver. 13.

5. Though God doth all, yet he doth it uſually in the Uſe of Means, and in them uſeth to come. When we have the Pen in our Hands, and offer to write, though we make never a true Letter; yet he often takes a Man by the Hands and guides and ſtrengthens it. The Man that lay at the Pool, when though impotent, he ſtill attempted to go in, though he could not, Joh. 5. 7. yet he ſtill lying at the Pool, Chriſt comes and heals him: yea, though the Principle out of which they uſe the Means be not ſpiritual but natural; yet God takes the Advantage of it to work. It was not a right Ground moved Naaman to waſh in the Waters of Jordan, and yet God healed him, uſing the Means, which elſe he would not have done.

6. Though ſome ſhould have failed that have uſed the Means (as Believers themſelves ſometimes;) yet this ſhould not diſcourage men to neglect them. It diſcourages not in other things, Men forbear not procreating, becauſe it is God puts in Soul, and the Dependance is well nigh as great in the firſt as in the ſecond Birth: Men forbear not to ſow becauſe ſome Years have proved barren: We forbear not to reach, becauſe every Sermon takes not Effect; we are not diſcouraged, becauſe God hath bidden us wait if at any time he will give Men Repentance, 2 Tim. 2. 25. f Preachers wait for the Salvation of others, then Men ought to do ſo for their wn; and ſo much more ſhould they (whoſe Salvation it is) be content to venture Endeavours, becauſe ſays the Apoſtle, Phil. 2. 13. It is their own Salvation. Men ill venture Journeys for their own Preferment.

7. That ſome have miſſed, ſhould quicken us the more to the more heed-taking; or they failed becauſe they put not more Strength to the Work, but grew ſlothful nd negligent. Upon this Ground our Saviour Chriſt provok'd his Diſciples; Luke 3. 24. Strive (ſaith he) to enter into the ſtrait Gate, for many ſhall ſeek to enter in, d ſhall not be able. That which theſe Men would uſe as a Diſcouragement, Chriſt rns into a Reaſon: therefore do you ſtrive or wreſtle, or put to your utmoſt rength; for many have ſtriven, and faintly endeavoured, that came ſhort; there re loſe it not for a little more Pains. So the Apoſtle in 1 Cor. 9. 24. Becauſe many n that miſs, therefore he exhorts them to endeavour ſo to run that they may obtain, o endeavour to make all ſure; ſo do I, (ſays he) I therefore ſo run, not as uncer- inly, that is to ſay, this Conſideration quickens me to uſe my utmoſt Care and ndeavour.

8. That God doth all, ſhould ſo much the more quicken us alſo: ſo the Apoſtle rgues, Phil. 2. 13. Work you out your Salvation with Fear and Trembling, for it is God works in you the Will and the Deed, i. e. Seeing this great Work depends upon God, to work how and when he will of his good Pleaſure, let not us think there ore to be idle, but ſet our ſelves to the uſe of thoſe Means with the more Fear and Trembling, which God hath declared his Pleaſure is that we ſhould uſe; as thoſe that wholly depend upon his working all in all, and therefore fear to provoke him and ut him off, tremble to neglect any Means or Opportunity he hath appointed.

9. If God give Men a Heart to continue endeavouring, tho he gives it not there- ore, yet it is a ſign he means to beſtow Grace on them. It is his Bounty and Mer- y to ſet thy Heart a-work about Salvation, and it is a Mercy which he affords to ew; be thankful for what thou haſt received, and not diſcouraged, and God may ive thee more. There are but a few in the World that do ſeek him, and if he hould turn away any that do, he would have fewer.

10. The Ground why Men are diſcouraged is, becauſe they would have their Endeavours a Means to compaſs Grace, and think by their own Strength to pre- ail; which when it is diſcovered to them, that it is bootleſs to endeavour, then ey ſit down diſcouraged, and ſit down in a pet, and fling all away, becauſe they nnot have Grace in their way. But if that be the Root of the Diſcouragement, is Pride and Corruption, and not the Doctrine that God doth all, which diſcou- geth. For would Fleſh renounce the Opinion of its own Strength, and its uſing Endeavours its own way, and uſe them in Subordination to God as Means appoint- by him only, then this Doctrine would diſcourage no Man but quicken him. So t Endeavours are not ſpoken againſt, but this way and ground of Endeavouring, thinking by what we do to obtain Mercy; and it is not this Doctrine that God h all, which diſcourageth, but Pride and Corruption, which becauſe it hears it n do nothing, therefore it will do nothing; for there are other Motives enough perſwade a Man to endeavour, as that it is a Man's Duty, &c.

Object. But you will ſay, If I ſhould act Faith upon God and Chriſt, I ſhould do all in a natural way, it would be a natural Act, and not a ſpiritual Act; and doth d in ſuch Caſes come and join with Men by his Almighty Power, working Faith them? To that I anſwer, that ſometimes God doth do ſo. I will give you but Inſtance of it, parallel thereunto, it is of Naaman the Syrian; he came not out his own Country in a way of Faith, but he had a providential Hint given him a Maid that lived with him, that was a Jew, that if he went into the Land of ael, he ſhould be cured by a Prophet that was there. And when he came into Ju- y, and had ſpoken with the Prophet, he had a Reproof from one of his Servants, o told him it was but a very ſmall Matter he was bid to do, and it was no great ineſs for him to try: Upon this he went and tried, and upon no other ground this; yet you ſee God cured him, and cured both his Body and Soul at once.

When

Part 3. When the Woman of Samaria came to the Samaritans, ſhe brought abundance of them unto Chriſt, and her Speech did beget a kind of Faith in them; but when they came to Chriſt himſelf, then ſay they, Now we believe, not becauſe of thy Saying, but for his own Word. So that indeed and in truth tho God begins to act a Man's Spirit, ſuppoſe in a natural way firſt, yet he doth turn it into a ſpiritual way in the very Act. When thou takeſt a Pen in thy Hand to write, then God takes thee by the Hand, and writes for thee. It is in this as it is in Prayer; a Man goes to Prayer, puts himſelf into the Preſence of God, and the Holy Ghoſt falls upon him, and he not knowing how nor what to ask, he teacheth him what to ask with Groans that are unutterable, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks.

11. Let me ſay this to you, It is Incouragement enough to you to act and exerciſe the way of Believing, (as I ſhall ſhew you afterwards) it is I ſay Incouragement enough that God may thus join with you, although neither I nor all the World can give thee any certain Evidence that he will. I dare not ſay (not for all this World, as ſome do) that if a Man uſeth ſuch Abilities as God giveth him well, then God will certainly give him Faith, if he go on ſo to do. To make a Certainty of it, I ſay I cannot. But it is Incouragement enough, tho there cannot be a Certainty made out, that God oftentimes doth ſo, and it may be the Ground of a thouſand Duties. Thou art a poor Soul, and knoweſt not whether thou haſt Faith or no, yet thy Soul deſires to receive the Lord's Supper, and art in queſtion whether thou ſhouldſt or no: Why if there be that Work which thou haſt Reaſon to judg may be Grace, it is a Ground for thee to perform that Duty, for otherwiſe none can go to the Lord's Supper but thoſe that have Aſſurance. And anſwerably to this, What knoweſt thou (ſaith the Apoſtle Paul) but that thou who art a believing Wife, ſtaying with thy Husband that is otherwiſe troubleſome to thee, mayſt convert him? and upon this, what knoweſt thou, tho thou art not at a Certainty God will, there is a Ground of ſtaying with thy Husband, and of uſing all Means to bring him unto God, and it is Encouragement enough? Tho then you have acted Faith, and ſtill you find not the Power of God come upon you in your Senſe, drawing you to believe ſo as you aim at, this I ſay ought not to diſcourage you; why? Becauſe you ought to do as much for your own Salvation as you would do for anothers, or as Miniſters, or as a godly People are to do for the Salvation of another. We forbear not to preach becauſe every Sermon taketh not effect, becauſe in 2 Tim. 2. 25. God hath bid us wait if at any time God will give ſuch an one Repentance. Now if that be a Motive and an Incouragement ſtrong enough that God may do it, then it may be Encouragement and Motive ſtrong enough to thee, that God may at laſt ſtrike in and give thee Power to believe. It is the Apoſtle's own Words (I quote it as comparing it with what a Man may do for his own Salvation upon the like Ground he is to do for the Salvation of another) in Phil. 2. 12. Work out your own Salvation with Fear and Trembling, for it is God that worketh in you both to will and to do. I put the Emphaſis upon the word your own. If Men are to wait thus for the Salvation of others, becauſe God may peradventure give them Repentance, much more then, tho God doth all, art thou to wait, and in the mean time to act Faith, and to work out thy own; why? becauſe it is thy own Salvation. And that others have miſſed who have endeavoured, is not a Diſcouragement neither ſo much as an Incouragement, for there are thouſands that have obtained. I have known ſome Souls that have gone to God, and have taken Jeſus Chriſt tremblingly, and the Word hath ſtuck in their Teeth whilſt they were giving Thanks unto God for giving them Jeſus Chriſt, and God hath fallen upon them, and given them full Aſſurance of his Love before they had done. I ſay thouſands of Souls have gained this way, as well as ſome have miſſed. We of his Fulneſs (ſaith the Apoſtle in John 1. 16.) have received Grace for Grace. Therefore as Men coming from a Dole, who have gone there and have obtained, are Examples of Incouragement unto others, ſo ſhould the Example of all ſuch who have obtained Faith and Salvation encourage thee. Let me ſay this to you, Faith is the greateſt Venture in the World, (ſo I uſe to expreſs it) and when all is done, you muſt make a Venture upon it. You make a Venture upon God's Will when you throw your ſelves upon it to accept you; and you make a Venture upon his Power when you act Faith, with a Subordination thereunto to work Faith upon you. You muſt reſolve to caſt away your own Endeavours for the glorifying of his Power, as you muſt caſt away your own Righteouſneſs for the glorifying ng of his Free Grace, and to be glad to put your Mouths in the Duſt; and yet if there may be any Hope, and if there may be Faith, you ought to work out your Salvation, becauſe he worketh in you both the Will and the Deed. In all things elſe Men do ſo, Husbandmen caſt the Seed into the Ground, and wait for the Increaſe, becauſe it is God that giveth it, and Men do the like for Preferment. In all ſuch natural things I ſay Men do act upon a Dependance and in a Subordination to the Power of God, and ſhould they not do ſo in Matters of Salvation?

CHAP. III.

That the Senſe of hainous Sins is another great Hindrance of Faith, which diſheartens Men from endeavouring to believe. Theſe Diſcouragements anſwer'd, and removed.

THO God commands and encourageth us to believe, yet there are certain Diſcouragements lie in Mens way. As therefore when the Children of Iſrael were to return from the Captivity, God bids his Miniſters take away the ſtumbling-Blocks; (Iſa. 57. 14. Caſt up, caſt up, take away the ſtumbling-Blocks out of the way of my People, that they might not be hindred in their Journey, ſaith the Lord) ſo when we do exhort you to be reconciled to God, there are certain ſtumbling-Blocks to be removed, there are certain Diſcouragements which we muſt therefore remove; the chiefeſt whereof is the Boundleſneſs and Hainouſneſs of Mens Sins; and when their Eyes are opened to behold them, they are apt to be diſcouraged with the ſight of them, and to think that Reconciliation belongs not unto them. Now then I ſhall diſplay the Riches of God's Mercies in pardoning the greateſt Sins, to take away this Diſcouragement, as it hinders you from coming in to Chriſt. And if Sin be the greateſt of them, that ought not to diſcourage you from coming in for Mercy; for do but conſider the Sins of Manaſſeh, as they are ſet down, 2 Kings 21. 2 Chron. 33. it is ſaid ver. 5. that he did much Wickedneſs in the ſight of the Lord, and provoked him to anger.

1. His ſinning was much for Continuance, for it is ſaid he was King over Iſrael 55 Years, being 12 Years old when he began to reign, and it was towards the latter End of his Days when he humbled himſelf.

2. His Guilt was much in regard of the Sins themſelves, for he made a Covenant with the Devil, gave away his Soul to him, ver. 6. he dealt with familiar Spirits. Add to this Murder, and that of the Innocent: for it is ſaid, he filled the Streets of Jeruſalem with Blood, from one end to the other, ver. 16. So to this Idolatry, a Sin greater than all the other, and it was the worſt ſort of Idolatry, 2 Chron. 33. 9. He made them to do worſe than the Heathen whom the Lord had deſtroyed before them. Add to this, that it was a Relapſe, tho not of himſelf, yet of the whole Kingdom: for tho his Father had deſtroyed the Images, broken down the Altars, yet he did build them up again, and ſet up Idolatry in the Houſe of God, and he there ſet up a carved Image, the Idol which he had made; all this he was guilty of, 2 Chron. 33. 3——10. And thoſe Sins were not confined only to his own Perſon, but he made Iſrael alſo to ſin; and for theſe Sins were the Children of Iſrael carried into Captivity, Jer. 15. 14. He would not pardon them in regard of a temporal Puniſhment. And Manaſſeh did all this againſt Admonition, 2 Chron. 33. 10. He ſinned alſo againſt Education, for he had a good Father, and he lived twelve Years under his Government, in which time no doubt but he inſtructed him; and he ſinned alſo againſt the greateſt Mercy that could be, for he was made King of God's own People. Thus you ſee his Sins were very great; and yet for all this the Lord had Mercy on him; 2 Chron. 33. 12, 13. And when he was in Affliction, he beſought the Lord, and humbled himſelf greatly before the God of his Fathers, and prayed unto him, and he was intreated of him, and God heard his Supplication, and brought him again to Jeruſalem into his Kingdom. He humbled himſelf greatly becauſe he had ſinned greatly; for when one hath ſinned greatly, without great Humiliation the Lord will not give Mercy: but when he did ſo, the Lord did hear him, and brought him to his own Kingdom. A greater Sinner than he could not be, and yet ſee how gracious and merciful the Lord was to him.

Part 3.

Object. But this was but the Example of one Man, it is not like the Lord will deal thus with me or any other.

Anſw. Look but to that Nation which was Co-partner with him, the People of the Jews; ſee how they combined with him in the ſame Sin, Jer. 2. 2. (for Jeremy lived in thoſe Days, and he made his Prophecy to this People) Go and cry in the Streets, I remember the Eſpouſals, and the Kindneſs of thy Youth, &c. There he ſhews how they ſinned againſt their Education, when they were brought up in the Wilderneſs under the Hands of Moſes and Aaron, for then Iſrael was Holineſs unto the Lord; ver. 21. Yet I had planted thee a noble Vine, holy and righteous Seed; how then art thou turned a degenerate Plant of a ſtrange Vine unto me? They ſinned alſo againſt Deliverances, againſt Promiſes of Amendment; ver. 20. Of old time I have broken thy Yoke, and burſt thy Bonds, and thou ſaidſt, I will not tranſgreſs, &c. They ſinned alſo againſt much Mercy; ver. 5. What Iniquity have your Fathers found in me? Have I been a barren Wilderneſs unto you? The Lord was not a Wilderneſs, but a Paradiſe abounding in infinite Mercies towards them. They ſinned alſo againſt many Prayers; Jer. 3. 4. Didſt thou not cry unto me, Thou art my Father, and the Guide of my Youth? God doth as it were by way of Mockery lay open their Hypocriſy, and reproacheth them, that when they had ſinned then they cry'd out, Thou art my God, and the Guide of my Youth. They ſinned alſo againſt Example; yet now what doth God ſay unto them; Jer. 3. 6, 7, 8. Behold what Iſrael hath done, ſhe is gone up to every high Mountain, and hath played the Harlot, and I ſaid after all this, Turn you to me, but yet ſhe turned not, &c. Yet ſee what the Lord ſaith, ver. 12. Go and proclaim thoſe Words in the North, Return O backſliding Iſrael, (ſaith the Lord) and I will not cauſe my Anger to fall on you. And whereas they had a Proverb amongſt them, If a Man put away his Wife, and ſhe go from him, and becomes another Man's Wife, ſhall he return unto her? No; yet ſays God, Tho thou haſt plaid the Harlot with many Lovers, return unto me; only acknowledg thy Fault that thou haſt tranſgreſſed againſt me, and I will graciouſly receive thee. Jer. 3. 1, 19. the Lord makes an Objection, (in that ver. 19.) ſaying, How ſhall I put thee amongſt the Children, and give thee a pleaſant Land, a goodly Hoſt of the Heritage of Nations? They were ſuch a polluted People, that he could not tell how to take them to himſelf; yet if they would but come and ſay, Thou art my Father, and ſubmit themſelves, the Lord would receive them. Thus we ſee the Lord was not merciful to one Man only, but to a whole Nation. See this Inſtance farther, Ezek. 20. 7. Caſt ye away every one your evil Works, but they rebelled againſt me. But ſaith God, ver. 9. I wrought for my Name's ſake, &c. After he had brought them out of Egypt, and gave them his Judgments and Sabbaths, yet there alſo they rebelled as much as in Egypt; (ver. 13. But the Houſe of Iſrael rebelled againſt me in the Wilderneſs, &c.) what doth follow, ver. 14. Yet I wrought again for my Name ſake, that it ſhould not be polluted, &c. And again, ver. 15. I alſo lifted up my Hand that I ſhould not bring them into the Land that I promiſed them, &c. Yet, ſays God, (ver. 17.) nevertheleſs I ſpared them, &c. Notwithſtanding for all this (ver. 21.) the Children of Iſrael rebelled yet again, they walked not in God's Statutes, but provok'd his Fury againſt them; and yet (ſays God, ver. 22.) I withdrew my Hand, and wrought for my Name's ſake, &c. But (ver. 28.) when they came into the Land which God had given them, when they ſaw every green Tree, and every high Hill, they committed worſe Abominations there, they offered their Sacrifices, &c. Yet (ſaith God, v. 41.) I will ſanctify you, and accept you, when I bring you out from the People, and I will be ſanctified in you before them. Thus alſo in Neh. 9. there are brought in I know not how many yets of Sinnings, and yets of Mercies, one after another, as ſtriving which ſhould overcome: Mercy enters firſt, and begins ver. 8, 9, 10. and then comes in their Rebellion, ver. 16, 17. and an Aggravation of that their Sinfulneſs, ver. 16. but a yet of Mercy follows, ver. 19. Yet in thy manifold Mercies thou forſookeſt them not. Tho he had ſpent manifold Mercies, yet he goes on nevertheleſs in Acts of Mercy; and tho they perſiſted in Acts of Sinnings ſix or ſeven times, yet God hath the laſt Word in Mercy, ver. 31. And this God hath not done to one Man, but to a whole Nation, therefore Sin ſhould not be a Bar to hinder you from coming in to believe on Chriſt, and to be reconciled to God.

1ſt. Becauſe God is merciful. If Men were not Sinners, God would not have had an opportunity to ſhew Mercy, for Mercy is a helping of thoſe that are in Miſery: And if we were not Enemies, there was no need of Reconciliation. All the Saints in Heaven had not had need of Reconciliation, if they had not been Enemies.

2dly. He delights in Mercy: If he had not delighted in it, would he have bruiſed his only Son for it, and have made him an Offering, Iſa. 53. that ſo a way might be opened for a Diſplay of Mercy by Satisfaction made unto Juſtice? And if he had not had Pleaſure in Mercy, he would not have delighted to have put his Son to Grief.

3dly. There is very abundant Mercy in God; 1 Pet. 1. 3. who according to his abundant Mercy, &c. And Epheſ. 2. 7. it is called the exceeding Riches of his Mercy; not only Riches, but exceeding Riches, that will never be drawn dry.

4thly. He may pardon the greateſt Sins, becauſe his Mercy is free; and as he doth not look to any Good in the Creature to move him to ſhew Mercy, ſo he doth not look at any Sin to diſſwade him, and therefore Sin cannot hinder thee from Reconciliation; and thus herein conſiſts the Freeneſs of Grace. Now this is the Difference between Love, Mercy and Grace; that a Man may love one that never offended him, and Mercy is towards thoſe that are in Miſery, but Grace doth what it doth freely, and doth not look at any thing in the Creature. In Ezek. 36. 22. it is ſaid, God wrought for his Name ſake, and therefore becauſe God works for his own Name ſake, no Evil can hinder him from ſhewing Mercy. See then how eaſy a thing it is for God to ſhew Mercy. A ſtomachful Man will ſay, that he can do any thing but pardon: But God is the Father of Mercies, and ſo he doth beget Mercies. And as it is natural for the Ear to hear, the Eye to ſee, ſo it is natural to God to ſhew Mercy.

5thly. God will pardon the greateſt Sins, becauſe of the end he aimed at in ſetting up this way of Grace and Mercy: It was for the Praiſe of the Glory of his Grace, (Epheſ. 1. 6.) that Sin ſhould not hinder; nay the more Sin there is, the more is his Grace glorified: As it is with a Phyſician that profeſſeth to come merely to ſhew his Skill; the greater the Diſeaſe is, the gladder he is, for he ſhall ſhew the greater Skill if he cure it. When to ſhew Mercy is the Plot of Grace, Sinfulneſs and Miſery is the Subject of that Plot for it to be ſhewn in. What Contrivances will Mercy have to ſhew it ſelf in this caſe; where Sin doth abound, there doth Grace abound much more: and therefore it is that God doth let his People many times run on ſo far in Sin, becauſe Grace may abound ſo much the more.

To help you in this do but lay to heart the Examples of ſuch whom God hath pardoned, he hath ſhewn Mercy to me firſt, (ſaith Paul, 1 Tim. 1. 16.) and do you think that he did begin and end with him? No, he ſhewed Mercy to me firſt, (ſays the Apoſtle) that I might be a Pattern to them that ſhould believe to eternal Life. Think of that which Chriſt ſays, Mat. 12. 31. All Blaſphemies ſhall be forgiven but that againſt the Holy Ghoſt. Here you ſee all manner of Blaſphemy, (which is the higheſt kind of Sin) and that againſt the Son of Man, and the Means of Grace (which is a higher degree) pardoned. Chriſt who hath been at the ſealing of ſo many Pardons, ſaith, that he hath ſeen all Sin pardoned, except the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt.

Object. Well, but you will object, That your Sins have been of long Continuance.

Anſw. I anſwer, The Mercies of God have been from everlaſting; God hath laid up Thoughts of Peace from the Beginning; and therefore tho thy Sin hath been for many Years, yet it hath been but as Yeſterday with God; and as long as thou haſt not been ſinning longer than he hath been thinking of Mercy, caſt not off all Hope of Mercy. God's Mercy is like a mighty River that hath run from everlaſting: Do but think how long Men did lie in their Sins before the Flood, and yet he forgave them.

Object. But you will argue the Reiteration of your Sins.

Anſw. I anſwer, That God doth reiterate his Mercy, Iſa. 55. 7. he multiplies Mercies to pardon, and heaps up Mercy, &c. And we do not only read of the Greatneſs of his Mercy, but alſo of the Multitude of his Loving-kindneſſes; and it is ſaid, that he doth heal Backſlidings, (and what is a Backſliding but the falling into the ſame Sin again?) and what is the Reaſon of this? Becauſe he loves freely; and therefore tho he fall into the ſame Sin again, yet do but remember the ſure Covenant of Mercy and Grace that he hath made.

Object. But you will ſay, I have ſinned ſtubbornly.

Anſw. I anſwer; God doth pardon that alſo; Iſa. 57. 17, 18. He did go on ſtubbornly, but yet (ſaith God) I have ſeen his Ways, and I will heal him; I create the Fruit of the Lips, Peace, Peace to them that are afar off. The Lord can help tho we be never ſo far off from him.

Uſe. The Uſe of all this is, not to encourage any to ſin againſt God, though the World be ready to practiſe it, and to ſay, Becauſe Grace abounds, therefore Sin may abound much more. But it ſhould not imbolden any to ſin againſt him, for his Anger ſhall ſmoke againſt ſuch an one. But if any Soul is caſt down in the ſight of his Sins, let him look upon the infinite Riches of Mercy and Grace in God, and they will take away that Bar that hinders him from Reconciliation; and tho his Sins be never ſo great, yet if they be not againſt the Holy Ghoſt, they may be pardoned; yea, all Blaſphemy elſe. Chriſt, under whoſe Hands all Pardon goes, doth ſay it. Therefore believe againſt the time of Diſtreſs, take hold of the Mercy of God in Chriſt; but curſed be that Heart that doth make himſelf by this preſumptuous: You may truſt in God as much as you will, only your Hearts muſt be conformable; and if you walk worthy of Reconciliation, you cannot truſt too much.

CHAP. IV.

That Men ſhould not be diſcourag'd from believing by the Doctrine of Election. That the Conſideration of God's having by his electing Decree appointed only ſome few choſen by him unto Salvation and eternal Life, ought to be no Diſcouragement to obſtruct our Endeavours to believe.

THO by the foregoing Conſiderations Men may be brought to acknowledg that the Greatneſs of their Sins ought to be no Bar to their Believing; yet many will ſtill ſtumble at the Doctrine of particular Election, as importing that God deſigns Salvation only to a few. Therefore (ſay they) tho we ſhould come in, and ſeek it never ſo earneſtly, yet we might miſs of it. If indeed we could be certainly aſſur'd of obtaining it, this would give Life and Hope to ſtir for it.

But for Satisfaction of this Scruple we ſhall not need to fetch an Anſwer from the Univerſality of God's Love to all, or of Chriſt's Death extended to all on condition they will: I ſhall therefore rather propound ſuch Conſiderations as may perſwade Men, notwithſtanding the true Doctrine of abſolute Election, to come in and believe, and which may convince them of their Neglect, and of their juſt Damnation if they do not; and to this end I propound theſe enſuing Conſiderations.

1. Unleſs thou didſt undoubtedly know that thou ſhouldſt certainly miſs of Salvation, and unleſs God had declared that thou art none of the Number, there is Hope concerning thy being ſaved: There is an it may be, which is as much as we find many Promiſes expreſſed in. Thus, as in Zeph. 2. 3. ſo in Joel 2. God exhorts them to turn unto him with their whole Heart, for he is gracious, &c. and who knoweth if he will turn and repent, and leave a Bleſſing behind him? If it be no more, yet God expects that you ſhould have upon this a Hope which may quicken you, and ſtir you, to caſt your ſelves upon his Free Grace; and ſince all is in him, to refer your ſelves to his Mercy, depending upon him in the Uſe of all Means. Let us turn, ſay the poor Ninivites, (who therefore will riſe up in Judgment againſt thee) for who can tell but the Lord may repent of the Evil? &c. and God did repent, Jonah 3. 9, 10. They ſaw there might be a Door of eſcaping, and they were, tho Priſoners, yet of Hope, (Zech. 9. 12.) and venture they would for a Pardon, tho they did not know certainly they ſhould obtain it.

2. But further, ſuppoſe it more unlikely than likely, that thou ſhouldſt ſpeed in this Suit, that conſidering it is a caſe of abſolute Neceſſity, to ſeek out for Reconciliation and Peace, there is a ſtrong Ground to move thee to ſeek out for it, and to ſpend the utmoſt of thy Endeavours to attain it, and to think it an infinite Mercy, that it is not declared to be abſolutely impoſſible for thee. In caſe of abſolute Neceſſity we ſee Men weigh not Improbabilities, but do put themſelves and all their Endeavours upon a Venture, tho the Buſineſs be very uncertain: As for Example, Men being preſſed to the Wars, tho it be certain that ſome ſhall die, and thoſe in all probability who fight in the Fore-front, or venture upon ſome deſperate piece of Service, yet it being neceſſary for them to undertake that Service as commanded them upon pain of Life, and there being ſome Poſſibility that they may eſcape, and that it may fall out ſo, in this caſe they are content to hazard and venture themſelves. Therefore alſo why not much more in this caſe ſhouldſt not thou venture, tho there were more Unlikelihoods that thou ſhouldſt not obtain, than that thou ſhouldſt? But I will give you another Example of the two Lepers, 2 King. 7. 3, 4. they reaſoned with themſelves, If we enter into the City, then the Famine being in the City, we die there; if we ſit here, we die alſo: Come let us fall into the Camp of the Aramites, if they ſave our Lives, we ſhall live; and if they kill us, we are but dead. Thus in a caſe of neceſſity they choſe that which tho it had many Improbabilities in it, yet might fall out otherwiſe than they fear'd. There was an if it may be made of ſaving their Lives, and yet a moſt unlikely one, for they did not know but that the Aramites might be reſolved to cut off all the Jews, and ſpare not a Man alive; and if they meant to ſpare any Jews, yet of all others they might well think they would cut off them, becauſe being Lepers they were unfit for Service or Imployment, and might infect the Camp. And now then ſuppoſe that this were thy caſe, that of all others thou wert moſt likely not to obtain Mercy, that being a Perſecutor, a Contemner of Grace, &c. ſhouldſt in all probability be cut off, yet there being ſome Poſſibility in a caſe of ſuch Neceſſity, come in and venture thy ſelf. And the Neceſſity is greater in thy caſe; for as to theſe Lepers there might have been ſuppoſed ſome miraculous way of preſerving them, but for thee there is no other way than of Faith, God hath no other: and then the Death which the Lepers ſhould die, both in one way and the other would be alike; but if thou ſeekeſt not, thou wilt die a worſe Death.

3. But in this caſe of Reconciliation there is (ſuppoſing the Doctrine of particular Election) both a Certainty that God intends it for many, and it is of equal and indifferent Likelihood in view, that it is intended for thee as for any other, which beſides that great Neceſſity to enforce thee, may add much Encouragement and Hopes to thee. For thou heardeſt before, that none of thy Sins are any Bar at all, (and if any thing, they muſt hinder) no Sin but that againſt the Holy Ghoſt. Tho there be many Signs of Election, yet none of abſolute Reprobation. But on the contrary, no former Dealings of God with thee, nor no Dealings of thine with him, tho never ſo baſe and injurious, no Circumſtance of any Sin, either that it hath been ſo often and ſo long lain in, and committed after ſuch Mercies, Conviction, Deliberation, can exclude thee from Hopes of Mercy; nay none of theſe do argue thee further off from Mercy than another that is in the Eſtate of Nature with thee. There is nothing can be ſaid concerning thee, but it might have been ſaid of ſome who have Reconciliation with God for their Portion. As no Temptation hath befallen you but what is common to Man, (ſays Paul, 1 Cor. 10. 13.) ſo nothing can be objected againſt thee but hath been and is common to thoſe who have obtained Mercy. No Leproſy makes thee unfitter or unlikelier to be ſaved than another. So that lay but theſe two together; Firſt, that ſome in all Ages ſhall find Mercy, and that thou art as fairly capable of it, and as nigh as another, ſince there is no Qualification in the Statute to exclude thee, no Exception againſt thy Country, Sex, Age, Parts, &c. for God did look to none of all theſe when he choſe Men; Acts 10. 34. He is no Reſpecter of Perſons: ſo as thou mayſt ſay, (as they did, Acts 15. 11.) I believe that through the Grace of Chriſt I may be ſaved as well as they, for Grace is free, and requires nothing in the Perſon not in one way nor other, to whom it intendeth Favour; and therefore I ſeeing nothing againſt my Hope of having Salvation, as well as nothing why I ſhould deſerve it, I am as near it as another, and therefore will ſtand for it. In 1 Kings 20. 31. when they heard the Kings of Iſrael were merciful Kings, and that they had ſpared others in the like caſe that they and Benhadad were in, and when they ſaw nothing in their Condition which had not been pardoned in others, they upon this ſay, Let us put Ropes about our Neck, peradventure the King of Iſrael may ſave thy Life. It was but a peradventure, and a greater one than can be ſuppoſed in thy caſe, for they had heard only in the general of the Kings of Iſrael, but whether this King

Ahab

Part 3.

Ahab were of ſuch a Diſpoſition, they knew not, and yet they ventured upon it t ſeek to him: but thou heareſt that this great God is a God gracious, merciful, & and that he hath pardoned thouſands in the like Condition.

4. Thou art not only thus equally capable of it as well as another, but there is Probability and a Likelihood that God doth intend thee, becauſe thou haſt hear that he is a merciful God, and willing to be reconcil'd by his own Appointment The News of it is directed to thee by himſelf, and he hath bidden thee to ſtand fo it, and to come in for it: For the Word of Reconciliation which we preach is mad known but to a few, and thoſe too to whom it comes, it comes as an Act of Mercy, and by God's Direction it comes rather to one Place than another, rather to one Ma than another: As why was Paul forbidden to go into Bithynia, (Acts 16. 7.) an called to go into Macedonia, and bidden (Acts 18. 10.) to ſtay at Corinth and preach but becauſe, as God ſays there, I have much People in this City. When the Plagu comes to a Place wherein any Man lives, whenas other Places are free, he fear leſt God might intend to take him away by it rather than the others in other Places and ſtill looks on himſelf if he hath no Token on him: So when the Goſpel come to the Place wherein thou liveſt, and thou haſt not the Sound of it confuſedly, bu the Knowledg diſtinctly of it to thy Ears, thou haſt Cauſe to think it exceedingly probable, that God doth intend thee for Salvation, and that the Kingdom of Go is come nigh thee. It is a great Probability of Election, that the Goſpel is come t thee, 1 Theſſ. 1. 5. and it is a ſign that God means to ſave thee, and hath choſe thoſe to whom he makes known this Myſtery of his Will of reconciling and gathering Souls to himſelf, Epheſ. 1. 9. Thoſe Servants of Benhadad had no Intimation o Mercy from Ahab himſelf, or by his Direction, but thou haſt from God: For th Myſtery hid from all Ages, and now from moſt of the World, is revealed unto thee and he hath directed the Goſpel to thee in an eſpecial Providence; and ſince he hath not proclaimed this Pardon to all Perſons, but to a few, therefore thou being among them to whom this Proclamation of Mercy is ſent, haſt Cauſe to put in for it, and much Encouragement alſo to do ſo.

5. Eſpecially this Goſpel offering great Salvation as an Addition to this Peace and Reconciliation made with God, ought to excite and encourage thee to ſeek it. The Lepers thought only to ſave their Lives, and ſo did Benhadad, for he was perhaps out of Hope of having his Kingdom again: But thou haſt not only Hope of ſaving thy Life, but of having eternal Life; and this added to the Capableneſs of thy attaining it, and the Probability annexed to it, ſhould exceedingly quicken thee to ſeek out for it. For in caſe of Preferment, when a great Office is void, a Living o a Fellowſhip in a College, which will certainly be beſtowed on ſome, as ſoon as a Man ſhall hear of ſuch a thing, and have a hint of it from the Party that beſtows it, and be told from him that he is as fair for it as any other, that he is as capable, that there is no Clauſe in the Statute to exclude him, and ſhut him out, and that he hath as good Means to make for it as any other, how would he be quickned to uſe his utmoſt Endeavours, to lay out his Money, and to put in for it, when yet he knows that there are many Suitors, and that the Place can be beſtowed but upon one? Now this is the caſe in hand, The Goſpel offereth great Salvation, ſo great as the Apoſtle can no otherwiſe expreſs it, (Heb. 2. 3.) but in this Phraſe, How ſhall we eſcape if w neglect ſo great Salvation? And this thou art as fair for, and canſt make as good Means for it, if thou comeſt to Jeſus Chriſt, as another. This the Apoſtle intimates, 1 Cor. 9. 14. ſpeaking of his endeavour to be Partaker of the Goſpel and the Salvation in it: Know ye not (ſaith he) that they which run in a Race run all, the bu one receives the Prize? Yes, all will venture, and therefore why not thou? Will not this Practice of Men in caſe of a corruptible Crown, as he calls it, tho there be an uncertain Tie in it, condemn the Neglect of ſeeking an incorruptible Crown, (as ver. 25.) and ſtop Mens Mouths from pleading, that few can attain, and ſome may miſs it?

6. Conſider God's manner of revealing and making known this Reconciliation to be had, (ſuppoſe but by a few) yet it is indifferently to be propounded unto all, as importing that all ſhould be ſtirr'd up at the Hear-ſay of it, with the Hope of it, to endeavour after it. Chriſt bad them ſay to every Houſe to which they came, (Luke 10. 5.) Peace be to this Houſe; and God expects that every one to whom this News comes ſhould look out for Peace, as a thing belonging to him, Luke 19. 42.

Yea he commands all to whom it comes to ſtand for it, and to uſe all Means to attain it, 1 John 3. 23. Acts 17. 30. and he will condemn Men if they neglect to do ſo, Heb. 2. 3. and not only doth ſo, but beſeecheth you to be reconciled, to come in and ſeek it at his Hands: and if one that had a great Preferment in his Gift ſhould do ſo, would it not mightily encourage you with Hopes to attain it, if he ſhould ſend to thee to ſtand for it?

7. With this News which thou haſt heard of Willingneſs in God to be reconciled, &c. thou either art affected and moved to come in, or not affected; for one of theſe two things muſt fall out. If thou beeſt not affected at all to liſten after it, thou haſt no Cauſe to complain that thou ſhalt not obtain it: for can any complain he cannot obtain that which he hath no Heart to, nor Mind to obtain? But if thou beeſt affected with it, and haſt a Heart deſirous to obtain it, if thou art ſet awork to ſeek out for it, if God hath enamoured thee with his Son, and given thee an high Eſteem of Reconciliation with him, and given thee a Heart to ſeek after it; this may give thee a rational Preſumption of Succeſs, for there is more than a Probability that it is intended for thee, and that thou art a Son of Peace: Luke 10. 6. for if it be hid, it is hid to them who are loſt: In whom the God of this World hath blinded the Minds of them which believe not, 2 Cor. 4. 4.

Profeſſors who have a Work of the Spirit upon them, have uſually ſpent their chiefeſt Thoughts in poring upon that Work, to diſcern the Truth of it from a temporary Work, and ſo by way of Signs to apply conditional Promiſes unto themſelves, thereby both diverting from Faith in Chriſt, and from looking up to him, (and ſo diſhonouring him) and alſo putting too much upon their own Graces. Now I would have them rather to make this Uſe of all ſuch Workings, that tho they doubt of the Truth of them, yet they ſhould however look on them as Encouragements in a way of Believing, to facilitate the Work of Faith the more: That tho no ſuch Works can be made a Ground of Faith, yet they may help to remove Stumbling-blocks which lie in the way of it; even in as full a manner as Encouragements from the Promiſes of the Covenant, as made to Believers and their Seed, may help the Children of Believers more than others when they come to believe. For there are but a few in the World whoſe Hearts God enlightneth and affecteth with the Powers of the World to come; and half of them whom he doth ſo ſtir, are uſually ſuch as are elected, and ſavingly wrought upon: Thus there were as many wiſe Virgins as fooliſh among Profeſſors. Now therefore tho thou canſt not tell what to make of thy Work in it ſelf, nor art able to ſay whether it be Grace or no, and ſo canſt not fetch Aſſurance from it, yet thou mayſt from it be encouraged to hope that poſſibly thou belongeſt to the Election of Grace, and ſo it may help thee to go to Chriſt with more Probability of Succeſs: For now thou art not within an hundred to one of Salvation, but at leaſt within two to one; ſo that it is but half odds that thou art one to whom God may ſhew Mercy. And thus encourag'd (uſing it no farther) thou mayſt go to Chriſt lighten'd of many Fears at which others ſtick, thou having ſo fair a Lot for Heaven. But becauſe ſuch are in this reſpect in the like Probability of Salvation, as the Children of believing Parents, I refer them unto that Conſideration, that what Encouragement their being under their Parents Covenant may give them, the ſame may theſe ſtrong Workings and Stirrings of the Spirit of God give theſe.

8. If thou wilt ſeek Salvation, and doſt continue to ſeek it, there is a Certainty that thou ſhalt obtain it; and it is a falſe Slander to ſay, that there being few elected, therefore my Salvation may prove uncertain, tho I ſeek it. Now that there is a Certainty promiſed to ſeeking, is plain from what Paul ſays, 1 Cor. 9. 26. I therefore ſo run, not as uncertainly, that is, I ſo run that I ſhall be ſure to ſpeed. He had ſaid in ver. 24. (as I ſhewed before) that in the Olympian Games many run, but yet but one receives and wins the Crown, and yet many will run, tho it be ſo uncertain; but, ſays he, in endeavouring after Salvation in the Goſpel, of which he there ſpeaks, if you will but endeavour to run as you ought, with your utmoſt Might, you ſhall be ſure to obtain: as many as will take Pains to do it, and uſe all Means, (as he ſpeaks there) ſhall be ſucceſsful. Some indeed fall ſhort through lazy running; but (ſays he) ſo run that you may obtain, that is, there is a running and a ſeeking which will certainly obtain; I therefore (ſays he) ſo run, and ſo running ſhall obtain, not as uncertainly, but ſo as I ſhall be ſure to enjoy the Prize. And ſo Chriſt alſo hath ſaid, Seek and you ſhall find, knock and it ſhall be opened to you: And he backs this by a ſtrange convincing Demonſtration to aſſure them of it; Luke 11. 4, 5. I one come to a Friend at Midnight, and deſires ſome neceſſary thing of him, tho h be one who hath no liſt to riſe, ver. 7. nor regardeth the relation of Friendſhip a all in it, ver. 8. but ſaith, he hath all his Children already in Bed with him, ver. 7 yet for his Importunity ſake he would riſe in the Night: Now then I ſay unto you (ſays Chriſt) knock and it ſhall be opened: Tho the Door ſeem ſhut againſt thee, th thou ſhouldſt think God intended not Friendſhip to thee, and had as it were all hi Friends about him already, yet he will open to and let thee in, ver. 10. He confirms it by Experience, that there was never yet any turn'd away, but every on that asketh receiveth, and that ſeeketh findeth; and there was never any yet tha did ſo that was ſent away empty.

CHAP. V.

Some general Conſiderations premiſed to open a way for the following Directions t guide us in our Endeavours to believe.

HAving thus removed the Diſcouragements of Faith, I now come to ſome Directions to guide us in our endeavouring to believe.

I ſhall firſt in general explain to you what I intend, by way of premiſe, that ſ my Scope and Meaning may be apprehended. My Scope is not to give Directions about all Ways, and Means, and Helps outward and inward, to attain Faith, ſuch as you would give to mere carnal Men, (that is, to Men that do lie ſtill in the Profaneneſs of their Hearts, and in the Looſneſs of their Eſtates, unſenſible of any thing) I will not, I ſay, go about to ſhew what ſuch Men ſhould do, and what Endeavours they are to uſe: No, I ſpeak to ſuch as are under Diſcouragement, and that lie under the Senſe of their own Inability to believe, for it is that Objection which occaſioneth what I ſhall ſpeak. I do not mean neither to ſhew you what preparative Works there are to Faith, or to inſiſt upon them; but I ſpeak to a Soul that is brought to the brink of Believing, that is convinced of its poor ruined State, which indeed is the firſt Part of Faith, (for ſo Self-emptineſs is) one that lies at the Pool, (as the Cripple at Betheſda) that is made ſenſible of his own Diſability, and lies under that Diſcouragement. I am only, I ſay, now to deal with ſuch an one, and therefore all that I ſhall ſpeak ſhall be pertinent as to the Condition of ſuch a Soul, and I ſhall not meddle with any thing elſe.

Now the Queſtion is this, What ſuch a Soul is to do? Whether, as ſome have ſaid, to lie ſtill, and only to wait (as they in Acts 1. 8.) for the Power of the Hol Ghoſt to come upon them? Whether he is not to ſtir till ſuch time as God comes and to his feeling and ſenſe overpowers his Heart to believe? Whether (I ſay) til God comes with ſuch a Power as is infinitely beyond his own, and enables him t believe, and draws his Heart unto it, he is not at all to attempt it till then, not only becauſe it is in vain, but becauſe otherwiſe it will be an Attempt in his ow Strength? or whether, yea or no, the Soul ought not (as the Text here hath it) t labour for to enter, and to ſet his Feet into that Reſt by Believing?

I have two things to ſay to this. Firſt, Some Generals are to be premiſed. Secondly, Some Directions are more particularly to be deliver'd. The Generals whic I premiſe ſhall be theſe four:

1. That God in working Faith in the Hearts of his Elect, altho he always ſhew an Almighty Power, the ſame that wrought in Jeſus Chriſt when he was raiſe from Death to Life, yet notwithſtanding he doth not always ſo affect the Spirits o thoſe in whom he works Faith, as to make it appear to their Senſe, that it is a Powe of that Almighty Proportion. I ſay, God doth not always in the Senſe of the Party himſelf come with a predominant over-powering Power when he draws the Soul t believe. He doth not always come as he did upon the Prophets, with a ſtrong Hand in a Man's own Senſe, but he oftentimes ſweetly inſinuateth himſelf, and gently ſlideth into a Man's Heart, and mingleth himſelf, and his Spirit, and Power wi their Spirits, in a way of a compliance to the Pace (if I may ſo expreſs it) even o

the

e natural Motions in their Hearts, and in a ſweet and ſtill way, yet omnipotently rries them on ſo to act. God is exceeding free in the working of Faith and Grace the Spirits of Men, and he doth deal variouſly. In Job 33. 29. having deſcribed Work upon one that lies on his ſick Bed, how he is troubled for his Sins, and then ds for a Meſſenger, one among a thouſand, to ſhew unto him his Uprightneſs, &c.
ſe things (ſaith he) worketh God oftentimes (mark that word oftentimes, not alys) with Man. God is found of ſome that ſought him not, and others he puts em upon ſeeking long before they find him. The Power of the Holy Ghoſt comes on a Man as Wind, but it doth not come always as a ruſhing mighty Wind, in at predominant over-powering Senſe, as that he ſhall feel it to be a Wind exterlly that doth thus and thus move him, (as it came upon the Apoſtles, Acts 2.) but ntimes comes like a ſtill Wind, in a ſtill ſmall Voice, as you know it did unto lijah, 1 Kings 19. 12. When the Spirit of God came upon the Prophets, ſometimes carried them by a ſtrong Hand, as the word is; but how doth he deal with hraim and the ten Tribes, Hoſ. 11. 3? (and his dealing with them that were his ople then, is a Type of his dealing with his People under the Goſpel) he dealt ith Ephraim as a Nurſe dealeth with her Child when ſhe teacheth him to go.
hen Ephraim was a Child (ſaith he) I loved him, I taught him alſo to go, taking n by the Arms. This Compariſon of a Nurſe teaching of a Child to go, and ſo ining her Strength with the Strength of the Child, would be a full Compariſon, that the Nurſe did put the inward Strength into the Child, as God doth; but t allowing that Diſparity, it holds forth thus much however, and ſerves thus far illuſtrate the thing in hand, viz. that God in working upon a Man doth apply imſelf as it were to his natural Pace, and yet works ſtrongly. He doth not ſay, at God dealt with Ephraim as Chriſt did with the lame Man, make him go and ap and dance as it were preſently; no, he doth not let him feel always ſuch an mnipotent Power coming upon him as ſhall enable him ſo to do; but he deals ith him as a Nurſe deals with her Child when ſhe teacheth him to go. Now a urſe you know doth not take and hurry the Child, doth not come with a Power at ſhall be ſenſible to it beyond and above its own, and remove it from one Place to other, as ſhe is eaſily able to do; but firſt ſhe ſets the Child gently down, and en lets it try if it can feel his Legs, (as you uſe to ſay) and then if it can ſtand up-the Ground, and then lets it try to ſet one Foot before another. Juſt thus as the urſe deals with a Child, and applies her ſelf to its weak State and Condition in aching it to go, ſo doth God unto his Children in teaching them to enter into this eſt, and to believe, and in guiding all their Steps therein. He firſt letteth a Man e he cannot ſtand, letteth him ſee there is not a Power in himſelf, then ſets his Heart upon Chriſt, and lets him try if he can ſtay and reſt upon him, when yet he nnot walk in Chriſt as he thinketh; and then he taketh him by the Arms, when t it may be he cannot ſet one Foot before another, and ſo gives him now a little rength, and then a little Strength, inſinuating and ſliding in his Power, his ſuporting and aſſiſting Power, according to the Pace of the Motions of a Man's Heart:
nd altho in the working of Faith he gives all Power, and Faith is not of our ſelves, t is the Gift of God; yet he doth not always come with ſuch an Almighty and ver-ruling Power, (when a Man is ſenſible of his own Emptineſs) as to the Man's enſe ſhall hold proportion with the Power that raiſed Chriſt from the Dead. That me drawing that is ſpoken of, John 6. 44. No Man cometh unto me except the Fa- her draw him, you may interpret by Hoſ. 11. 4. I drew them with Cords of a Man:
at is, I did not overhale them; but as one Man would perſwade another, ſo I in-uated my Love and my Power to them, humano more, tho there was an Almighty ower went with it. And it is interpreted alſo by what follows in John 6. 44. They all be all taught of God. He by his Almighty Power puts an Inſtinct into the Heart for that is his Teaching) after Chriſt and after Free Grace, and cauſeth the Man o renounce himſelf, and ſo ſets the Heart earneſtly intent upon theſe things. The Heart would have Chriſt, and ſays he, why may not I have Chriſt? and what is beween me and Chriſt? A thouſand ſuch Thoughts God caſteth in, and yet it is but ike an Inſtinct, tho God himſelf be at the bottom of it. As we are ſaid to be taught f God to love one another, it is not by a ſudden ſhedding, in an inſtant, into the Heart, abundance of Love unto the Saints; but it is, as I may ſo expreſs it, by a ill and ſecret Touch of the Heart, whereby it is drawn on to love them, ſuch as Part 3. when the Iron is touched with the Load-ſtone. And obſerve, whom doth Chriſt ſpeak this of when he ſaith, (John 6. 44.) No Man can come unto me except the Father draw him? It appears evidently by what follows at ver. 64. of that Chapter, that he ſpeaks of his Diſciples: There are ſome of you (ſaith he) which believe not, therefore ſaid I unto you, that no Man can come unto me, except it were given unto him of my Father. Now had all theſe Apoſtles when Faith was wrought in them, think you, ſeeing themſelves firſt unable to believe, had they the Senſe of an omnipotent Power, that with a ſtrong Hand carried on their Souls to believe, in a ſenſible and diſcernable way? Clearly no; for ſee what is ſaid (John 14. 6, 7, 8.) of theſe very Men of whom Chriſt ſaith, they had not come unto him unleſs the Father had drawn them, and unleſs the Father had taught them: See what is there ſaid of theſe very Men, I ſay, whom God had ſhewn ſo much Power in drawing them unto Chriſt: Whither I go you know, (ſaith Chriſt) and the way you know: Thomas ſaith unto him, Lord, we know not whither thou goeſt, and how can we know the way? Either Chriſt here muſt ſpeak what is falſe, or Thomas muſt ſpeak what is falſe, one would think, in appearance. The truth is, Thomas he did know, and he did not know; and whereas (John 6. 45.) he ſaith, They ſhall be all taught of God to know him, here (John 14. 7.) he ſaith, If you had known me, you had known my Father alſo; and from henceforth ye know him, and have ſeen him. Philip ſaith unto him, Lord, ſhew us the Father, and it ſufficeth us: Jeſus ſaith unto him, Have I been ſo long time with you, and yet haſt thou not known me, Philip? He that hath ſeen me, hath ſeen the Father. Yet Philip was drawn unto God, and drawn unto Chriſt, and was drawn too by being taught of God, and taught of Chriſt. There is no way then to ſolve it but this, that God when he works Faith, doth not always come with ſuch a Power upon the Soul that he ſhall be ſenſible that there is ſuch an omnipotent Power upon him working Faith in him; no, oftentimes, tho a Man doth the thing, and truly believeth, and doth it by the Power of God working on him, yet he ſcarce can diſcern it from his own Power, and from his own Thoughts. This Truth is evident (and whoever he be that denies it, his own Experience ſhall confute him before he die) by the Light that God puts into the Soul concerning the Manifeſtation of himſelf unto us. There is a conſtant Light that a Chriſtian carries about him, that he walks by, ſuch as is in the Day, whether the Sun ſhine or not ſhine, which yet notwithſtanding keeps to the Pace of a Man's own Underſtanding; and there is a Light which ſometimes comes in upon a Man, and is like the Sun breaking through a Cloud, that a Man can look up and ſee the Sun, and can confidently ſay, Now I do ſee the Sun; and yet both theſe Lights are ſupernatural, and both from the Almighty Power of God: and he that hath that ordinary Light of Faith, which keeps Pace with his own Underſtanding, he believes, and he believes truly and ſtrongly too; and when thoſe extraordinary Lights ceaſe, the ordinary one remains, and carries on the Soul to Jeſus Chriſt, and to Faith in him. Job all his Life had enjoyed an ordinary Light of Faith. I have heard of thee (ſaith he, Job 42. 5.) by the hearing of the Ear, but now mine Eyes have ſeen thee: There came another Light in then. So I take it, Paul when he was under that great Temptation, (2 Cor. 12.) he prayed, and he would fain have had his Requeſt, fain have had his Corruption ſubdued, fain have had ſuch a Power manifeſted in his Weakneſs as he might have ſeen Satan trampled under his Feet preſently: No, ſaith God, my Grace is ſufficient for thee. God inſinuated himſelf ſtrongly to ſupport him, tho Paul felt not ſuch a ſenſible Power as might preſently overcome the Temptation. The truth is, it is in the matter of working Faith in the Heart, as it is in the Temptations of Satan. There are Temptations of Satan which a Man cannot diſcern from his own Thoughts; and yet the Devil is ſtrong in ſuch Temptations. And again, there are Temptations in which a Man apparently feels the Devil, and can diſtinguiſh them from his own Thoughts, as in all thoſe helliſh Blaſphemies that are injected and caſt into the Soul. So it is in the Workings of God, he doth ſometimes inſinuate himſelf into the Soul ſo ſtilly and ſecretly, that a Man cannot diſcern thoſe Inſinuations from his own Thoughts, but takes them indeed to be his own, and yet there is the mighty Power of God that acts the Spirit all that while. And then again, there are mighty Workings of God that come with a Noiſe, with a Stupendouſneſs. I ſhall only add one Confirmation of it from Epheſ. 1. 19. where the Apoſtle prayeth that their Eyes may be opened to ſee the Power of God that wrought in them that believe, and in their own Hearts.

2. The ſecond general Premiſe that I ſhall add is this, That God in carrying on the Heart to believe, gives Power to one Act and not to another; and he hath appointed that one Act to be a Step and a Degree unto another. In 2 Theſſ. 1. 11. the Apoſtle prays, that God would fulfil all the good Pleaſure of his Goodneſs, and the Work of Faith with Power. The word fulfil ſignifies to perfect and accompliſh a thing by Degrees, to be doing of it I know not how long, as a Man is about perfecting ſome Maſter-piece of Work, or as a Painter is perfecting of a Picture, which he is fain to go over again and again before he hath fulfill'd that Idea he hath in his Head: So is the very Work of Faith in the Heart, which is what God hath in the Idea of his own good Pleaſure and Will, and he is a long while in perfecting it. You read in 1 Theſſ. 3. 10. that there was ſomething lacking in their Faith, and a great deal lacking too: And here he prays, that God would fulfil that Work of Faith; (and you ſee he ſaith it is the Work of Faith with Power) that he would fulfil one Part after another, and ſo as to make one a Step unto another. After you believed you were ſealed, ſays he, Epheſ. 1. 13. After they had ſuffered a while they were eſtabliſhed, 1 Pet. 5. 10. Hence now;

3. (Which comes to the point in hand) A Soul that is ſenſible of his own Inability to do any thing of it ſelf, and is caſt down in the Apprehenſion thereof, may and ought to act in and towards believing, ſo far as it finds its Spirit ſtrengthned by God, not examining or ſtaying till it knows certainly that this is ſuch a Power and ſuch a Strength as is ſo from God, as will now at this Inſtant enable it truly and throughly to believe. Why? Becauſe (as I ſaid before) God doth not always carry on the Work of Faith by ſuch an over-powering Light, eſpecially at firſt, but applies himſelf to the Pace of a Man's Underſtanding and Will; yet notwithſtanding, becauſe God doth give Power to one Act and not to another, ſtill ſo far as a Man finds his Spirit ſtrengthned by God, ſo far let him join with God, and all in a Subordination to the Power of God to work further; for ſtill there is ſomewhat lacking to your Faith; and in ſuch a way as this, you will ſtill find that God will come in and ſhew you greater things than theſe. In 2 Cor. 12. Paul would have had a Power inſtantly to overcome that Temptation; no ſaith God, My Grace ſhall be ſufficient for thee, i. e. that Power that I proportion out to thee ſhall be ſufficient to uphold thee; improve that, and join with that which I ordinarily give thee, and it ſhall be ſufficient to carry thee through, tho thou doſt not attain what thou prayeſt for; for the truth is, Paul prayed for more, and all the Anſwer from God was, My Grace is ſufficient for thee. In James 4. 8. (ſaith he) Draw nigh unto God, and he will draw nigh unto you. Do but mark what that Place holds out; when he ſaith, And he will draw nigh unto you, he doth evidently mean a ſenſible drawing nigh of God to a Man's Spirit, that the Soul ſhall be able to ſay, This is God, and I feel my Heart filled with his Preſence. Now in order to this he bids us draw nigh firſt unto God. If now we ſhould exhort a Man that is caſt down thus in the Senſe of his own Inability, and ſhould ſay unto him, Draw nigh unto God, and he will draw nigh unto you, what would he ſay? He would ſay, God muſt draw nigh unto me firſt before I can draw nigh unto him, for I have no Ability to do it; why then do you ſay, Draw nigh unto God? he muſt firſt draw nigh unto me, even as he muſt love me firſt before I can love him. Of neceſſity therefore the Apoſtle muſt ſuppoſe an inſenſible drawing nigh of God unto a Man's Spirit to enable him to draw nigh unto God, that ſo God may draw nigh unto him ſenſibly, and apparently, and evidently. So far forth therefore as thou findeſt by an inſenſible Power in thee, that thy Heart is ſtrengthned to draw nigh unto God, do thou draw nigh unto him, (ſtill maintaining a Senſe of thy own Inability to do any thing of thy ſelf) and if thou wilt draw nigh unto him while he doth thus inſenſibly draw nigh unto thee, he will draw nigh unto thee manifeſtatively, ſo as thou ſhalt be ſenſible of his Preſence. I quote that Place for this, that God doth give us Strength to do one thing which is in order to ſome farther thing; he doth give an inſenſible Strength to draw nigh to him, ſo that the Heart finds it ſelf enabled to go into the Preſence of God, and caſt down it ſelf before him: In this caſe, ſaith the Apoſtle, go and draw nigh unto him, join with this Strength you find, and you ſhall find a farther Strength, for the Promiſe is there of an apparent drawing nigh, which the other was not. The like is certainly the meaning of Luke 11. 13. where Chriſt ſaith, He will give the Spirit unto them that ask him. Will not a Man be apt to ſay now, How ſhall I ask the Spirit if I have not the Spirit?

rit? Therefore without all queſtion this is his meaning, that when a Man doth find that he doth want the Spirit, as he thinketh; yet ſaith he, ſo far forth as thou findeſt thy Heart ſtrengthned to ask, (which is yet the Spirit's working) go and ask. Here is the Spirit working inſenſibly to ask, as in order to obtaining the Spirit in a ſenſible way. The like is certainly the meaning of all thoſe Places, Seek and ye ſhall find, ask and it ſhall be given you, &c. So that this is the thing I drive at, Let every one of you in the way of believing and acting of Faith (ſeeing God goes thus ſtilly and yet ſtrongly, ſeeing likewiſe that God doth do one thing that is in order to another, ſtep after ſtep, perfects the Work of Faith with Power) ſo far forth ſtill as you find that your Hearts are ſtrengthned to do any thing that is ſpiritually good, tho it may be you cannot diſcern that it is ſpiritually good in the doing, yet ſtrive to do it. Tho James himſelf had ſaid, Every perfect Gift is from above; and that no Man can have Wiſdom (if he will have a perfect Gift of it) but he muſt have it from the Father of Lights; yet ſaith he, If any Man lack Wiſdom, let him ask it of God, James 1. Let every Man ſay that he will go ſo far as he finds Strength to carry him, for God perfecteth the Work of Faith with Power. When that poor Man came to Chriſt, (Mark 9.) and asked him if he could do any thing? ſaith Chriſt, ver. 23. yes, if thou canſt believe. Do but obſerve that Phraſe, If thou canſt believe: it implies indeed that he could not do it without a Strength and Aſſiſtance, therefore the poor Man afterwards ſaith, Help thou mine Unbelief: yet Chriſt puts him upon this, ſo far as thou findeſt thy Heart heartned, (as I may ſo expreſs it) ſo far as thou findeſt thy Heart any ways ſtrengthned, that thou canſt ſay I can thus far believe, try, and put it forth; and ſo the poor Man did, Lord (ſaith he) I do believe, help thou mine Unbelief. So now, there is many a poor Soul that is not able to ſay, I have a Heart to take Jeſus Chriſt; no, on the contrary, I have not the Boldneſs to do it; yea when I go about to do it, my Thoughts fail me, and my Heart miſgiveth me in doing of it; I have no Strength at all to lay hold upon Jeſus Chriſt. But canſt thou go unto him? Yes, I find that (the Soul will ſay) I have that Strength put into me, that tho indeed I cannot lay hold of his Perſon, yet I can go unto him, and I can lay my ſelf down at his Feet. Still ſay I, ſo far forth as thou findeſt thy Heart ſtrengthned, ſo far forth ſtill join with that Strength, and act under God's Activity upon thee. Say within thy ſelf, Tho I cannot go to him to lay hold upon his Perſon, yet I can go to him to have Power to lay hold upon him: Go ſo far with it, put forth ſo far as thou findeſt thou canſt put forth. The truth is, God takes you as little Children by the Arms, tho his Power go along with you: Now if the Child had but Knowledg when the Nurſe firſt teacheth him to go, what would it ſay? I cannot ſet one Foot before another: It's no matter will ſhe ſay, therefore ſet your Feet upon the Ground, and try whether you feel them or no: and ſtill ſo far forth as the Child findeth Strength, ſtill ſo far it ſhould act and go, being ſtill held by the Arms by the Nurſe: So do thou in a Subordination to the Power of God that is working Faith in thee, and fulfilling the Work of it with Power. So far as thou findeſt thy Heart heartned or ſtrengthned to put forth Acts of Faith, or any thing towards believing, ſo far ſtill enter.

Thoſe Men that would have a Soul that is ſenſible of his own Inability lie and wait till God come with a ſenſible Power to enable it to believe, and not to ſtir till then, what do theſe Men do? They exhort that Soul to wait for a Power from above, do they not? Yes, this is all one with what I ſay, for where hath the Soul that Senſe? Certainly from God: And where hath it that Power to wait? Certainly from God: No Man can ſay, Jeſus is the Lord without the Holy Ghoſt, much more to be ſenſible of his own Unbelief. Then the meaning muſt needs be this, that ſo far forth as God ſtrengthneth the Soul to act, ſo far forth it ſhould act; or imagine it is in an ordinary way ſtrengthned to wait, ſay I, if thou findeſt thy Heart ſtrengthned by God to go further, go further; ſet one Foot before another, for God doth apply his Power to the Pace of a Man's Will and Underſtanding, and that not always in a diſcernable way as it is a Power, but as a Nurſe doth to a Child. Even to wait for the Righteouſneſs of Faith and the Power of God, is a Work of the Spirit, and an Almighty Work too; ſo ſaith the Apoſtle, (Gal. 5. 5.) We through the Spirit wait for the Righteouſneſs of Faith. And therefore as the Apoſtle ſaith in another caſe, So far as any Man hath attained, ſo far ſtill let him join with that Power, that is, ſo far forth as he finds his Heart ſtrengthned, (and the Holy Ghoſt ſtill ſtrengthneth Men when they act any thing) ſo far let him ſtill put forth. You ſhall find that Paul took the ſame Courſe; Phil. 3. 12, 13. I do reach forth (ſaith he) to thoſe things which are before, and I preſs towards the Mark, &c. I do reach forward; I ſtretch all my Sinews. The word there is a Metaphor taken from a Man in a Race, or that is running towards the Goal; he doth not only uſe his Feet, but he runs with his Hands ſtretched out, that where his Feet may not come, his Hands, if poſſible, may come; ſo ſaith he, I do reach forth, I do follow after it as much as ever I did after perſecuting the Church, (for the word is the ſame) ſo that ſtill he applied himſelf to what he had attained, and ſtill ſo far as he could, ſo far he reached, and yet all this was the Grace of God in him. So I ſay, let the Soul of every Man, that is thus made ſenſible of its own Inability, act ſo far forth as he findeth the Spirit of God ſtrengthning him. Do what thou haſt to do with all that Might thou findeſt thy Spirit aſſiſted withal.

4. The fourth and laſt general Premiſe which I ſhall mention, and which indeed doth follow from all the former, is this, That ſuch Souls are not to ſtay from exerciſing Acts of Faith till they feel and diſcern that they are clothed with ſuch a Power as will and doth enable them truly to believe. They are not, I ſay, to ſtay until they diſcern this, that now I have ſuch a Power fall upon me, now I will believe, and this I have waited for, and I muſt lie waiting for it till I find this Power. I yield this indeed, that you may ſeek and wait for the Aſſurance of ſuch a Power that ſhall over-power your Spirits over and above the ordinary Pace of the natural Motion of your own Hearts, to believe in Chriſt. Such a thing God vouchſafeth, ſuch a thing the Apoſtle prays for towards the Epheſians, ch. 1. 19. ſuch a thing the Apoſtles themſelves waited for, (Acts 1. 4.) till Power from an high came upon them; and the Promiſe is made unto us for believing and ſealing us as well as unto them, Acts 2. 41. We may therefore wait for ſuch a Power to perſwade our Hearts to believe beyond the Pace, I ſay, of the Motions of our own Spirits. But yet that which I add withal is this, that you are not to ſtay from attempting to believe till you feel ſuch a Power come upon you, not to ſtay till you can ſay, I feel a Divine Power now clothing me, which will enable my Soul to believe. For,

1ſt. To ſtay from attempting to believe till you feel ſuch a Power, is perhaps ever to ſtay. Not only becauſe that God oftentimes doth not give it even to thoſe whom he doth give Faith unto truly, but how doſt thou know but that there is ſuch a Power now upon thee as if thou doſt join with it thou ſhalt truly believe, which before thou didſt not? For that muſt needs be ſeen when the thing is done, it is not ſeen in the Cauſe, it is not ſeen in the feeling the Power and the Proportion of that firſt, but it is ſeen in the Effect, it is ſeen in the acting of it, it is ſeen in the thing a doing. If a Mariner that is to ſet a Ship over Sea, would ſay, I will ſtay till I feel ſuch a Wind blow as I ſhall be ſure will carry me over, and laſt till I come thither; or a Wind that ſhould take the Ship out of the Port, and go and throw it on the other ſide, before I'll ſtir or hoiſt up Sail, or give up my Veſſel to the Wind, for this that now blows is not high enough, it is too ſtill; this Man might ſtay for ever, and never go over Sea. But what do wiſe Mariners do? Why when they ſee a Gale, tho it be but a ſtill Gale, yea tho it be but a ſide-Wind, if there be a Neceſſity to go, they will hale and tow out with it; and tho when they are at Sea it begins to turn, yet ſtill they wait, and make uſe of a ſide-Wind, and oftentimes meet with that Wind that doth directly carry them over indeed.

2dly. To ſtay for ſuch a Power firſt, and wait for it, till thou mayſt be able to diſcern that it will enable thee and overpower thee to believe before thou attempteſt it, is to expect from God (e're thou putteſt forth an Act of Faith) a greater Aſſurance than of Election. And would you ſtay till God perſwade you that you are elected, before you believe? Will you have that to be the firſt thing God perſwades you of, and to be the bottom of your Faith? In thy deſiring ſuch a Power to come upon thee as to thy Senſe ſhall be ſuch, thou deſireſt a harder Matter, a greater thing than for God to come upon thee with his Love, and to teſtify unto thee that thou art elected, and that he hath loved thee from everlaſting, becauſe ſuch a Power as ſhall be ſuch in thy Senſe, is the immediate Fruit of that Love and of that Will in him, I mean not the Fruit in thee, but from himſelf. Nay, it is more than to ſtay believing till God aſſure thee and perſwade thee that thou art elected, it is to ask a thing yet more hard: and what is the Reaſon? Becauſe Election is a ſtanding permanent thing, a Foundation always remaining, and is at all times, and if w could apprehend it, might be demonſtrated to the Soul: but ſuch a Power as ſha riſe to that proportion as to thine own Senſe, thou ſhalt think I am now clothe with it, and ſhall be enabled to believe, that comes when God pleaſeth, and is fleeting thing, and ſo thou putſt thy Believing upon the Evidence of that which not permanent, but is arbitrary and fleeting, and very difficult to be.

3dly. Wilt thou conſider this, that tho indeed it is the Power of God that give Ability to believe, yet it is not the Senſe of the Power of God in my Heart tha gives me my Warrant to believe, therefore I am not to forbear till I feel ſuch a Pow er. It is, I ſay, indeed the Power of God that gives thee Ability, but it is not tha which gives the Warrant or the Ground. It is the Command of God to believe o the Name of his Son, and it is the indefinite Promiſe that Chriſt came into th World to ſave Sinners, indefinitely thus expreſs'd, and the like, that is the Groun of Believing. Therefore now upon the Command thou art to attempt the Duty and to look up unto God for Power to accompany thee in that Duty, and thou ar not to ſtay and wait firſt to be clothed with ſuch a Power as a Warrant or Ground fo thy Believing, as if elſe thou ſhouldſt believe in vain. Yea, when thou haſt pitch' upon the right Ground of Believing, and attempted to believe, this Power uſuall comes in and accompanies it. Thou art to do thy Duty according to the Comman that's the Warrant, to begin and to leave it unto God to enable thee, to aſſiſt thee t do it truly, as well as perform any Command elſe. It's true indeed, no Man dot believe in the Event unleſs God doth draw him, yet no Man doth firſt believe upo this Ground, becauſe he feels that God doth draw him. I acknowledg that Go may apply himſelf to ſuch an Error in the Souls of ſome, as I have found he hat done; for God doth apply himſelf ſometimes even to our Errors rather than he wi loſe an elect Child of his, which is the Freedom of his Grace, and ſo he may do i this caſe. One whoſe Spirit is poſſeſs'd with ſuch an Apprehenſion of ſuch an Ob jection and ſuch a Miſtake, God may come upon him and draw him to believe by ſenſible Almighty Power; but herein God doth in his Infinite Grace and Mercy ap ply himſelf to this Error rather than loſe his Child. Even as in the firſt Age of Re formation, when they taught that all Faith was Aſſurance that a Man's Sins wer forgiven, (which is as great an Error as can be, it condemns the Generation of ma ny of the Righteous) and yet God did apply himſelf unto this Error in the Experi ence of the moſt of that Age, and came upon them accordingly.

Laſtly; To end this 4th general Premiſe; For thee to ſtay Believing till thou fee eſt thy ſelf clothed with ſuch a Power, it is indeed all one, and in a manner like t thoſe other Bars which are cried down ſo much, and many of them juſtly, an which do keep thouſands from Believing. Men think I muſt have this, or I muſ have that firſt e're I believe, and ſo they are detained from Believing; and if i were not for the infinite Goodneſs of God to them, they would be ever learning, an never come to the Knowledg of the Truth, (as the Apoſtle ſaith in another caſe, 2 Ti 3. 7.) they would ever be in the way of Believing, and yet never believe. On hears that there is ſuch a Courſe of Humiliation to be run through; and as Me that are to be cured muſt run through ſuch a Courſe of Phyſick, or ſuch things muſ be taken by way of Preparation for ſuch a Medicine, ſo they are told that firſt thi Diſpoſition muſt be wrought in them, and then that, (many of which, the truth is muſt have Faith preceding them, or they cannot be wrought, as it may be eaſil demonſtrated) and a Man muſt go through each of thoſe, in their ſeveral degrees before he muſt attempt to cloſe with Chriſt: Whereas now go and take ſuch a Sou that hath run through all thoſe ſeveral Methods and Courſes, when it comes to be lieve in the Lord Jeſus, it is ſo far from being helped in his own Apprehenſion, b having had ſuch things wrought in him, that it is poſſeſs'd with the clean contrar Thoughts. In Souls that are moſt humbled, this is as it were the laſt thing in thei being ſo humbled, that they ſee nothing in themſelves; and this very Sight of them ſelves, when they are ſufficiently humbled, would be a hindrance of coming an cloſing with Chriſt nakedly: for whenas a Man ſhould cloſe with Chriſt nakedly and with Chriſt immediately, to come unto him under the Sight and Senſe of ſuc a thing wrought before, would be a Hindrance unto Faith. So, as the Work o Preparation is never a Warrant or a Ground unto any to believe, tho it may really b a Preparation without which a Man would not believe, but it is not ſo apprehen vely to the Party: So it is here, indeed it is the Power of God really that doth en-le to believe, but it is not the Power of God apprehenſively, viz. that I ſee I am othed with ſuch a Power, and I wait till I am clothed with ſuch a Power, and ſo I elieve. There are a great many of ſuch Diverſions from Jeſus Chriſt. One ſaith, muſt have Chriſt before I can have Faith: another ſaith, I cannot take Chriſt till find I have Faith; whereas God giveth Faith and Chriſt and all at once; and thy king Chriſt is thy Faith and thy Believing; and upon thy attempting to believe, od gives all theſe at once. In thy going to him he gives thee Power to come, as hriſt ſaith, in doing of his Will a Man ſhall know him; ſo in falling to believe a an believeth. As in that Queſtion, whether the Soul be firſt created, and then fuſed into the Child, or how, we uſually anſwer that it is created and infuſed, nd knit and united to the Body, and all at once; ſo we may ſay here. But I ſay y thoſe things before-mention'd and anſwer'd, Satan diverts Men from that which e Apoſtle calls them to labour for, and that is to believe, and to enter into this eſt, Heb. 4. 11, And ſo much now for thoſe Generals which I have mentioned y way of Premiſe.

ſively

CHAP. VI.

Directions given to guide us in our endeavouring to believe. That we ought to furniſh our Thoughts with all ſuch Conſiderations as are Motives and Encouragements of Faith, and lay them up in our Hearts, and meditate often upon them. That we ſhould attempt to exerciſe the very Act of Believing it ſelf. Objections anſwered.

WHAT remains is to give ſome Directions to guide us in our Endeavours to believe.

Direct. 1. The firſt that I ſhall give is this; To provide and lay up in thy Heart ll Conſiderations that are matter for Faith and Believing: That altho the true Act f Faith be from the working of God alone, yet do thou caſt in the Seed, (they are he Materials of Believing) and retain them in thy Soul. As for example now, to go over ſome Inſtances, it's true thou canſt not ſee the Excellence of Chriſt ſpiritually without an Almighty Power, which thou muſt wait till God be pleaſed to enable thee with: Suppoſe this; yet all thoſe Excellencies materially thou canſt lay together, and thou canſt furniſh thy Heart with the Conſideration of them, which are the Materials that are to draw and win thy Heart to Chriſt. So if we conſider all thoſe Promiſes of Free Grace, that Chriſt came into the World to ſave Sinners; and, Look to me all ye ends of the Earth and be ſaved; and, I am thy Saviour, and there is none beſides me, &c. And alſo if we conſider all ſorts of Anſwers to all Objections made of thy Unworthineſs and thy Sinfulneſs, &c. all ſuch things thou mayſt collect together and furniſh thy Heart continually withal, theſe thou mayſt ſtudy and chew upon, and revolve them in thy Mind; as they of old that ſacrificed, who tho it's true could not bring Fire from Heaven to burn their Sacrifice, yet they could, in Dependance upon God, lay their Sticks together, and fetch the Bullock out from the Stall, and bring it to the Altar, and lay it thereon, and bind the Sacrifice to the Horns of the Altar, and wait till Fire came from Heaven and ſet all on a Flame. Suppoſe thou wert thus to wait till the Power of God come ſenſibly upon thee, yet in the mean time thou mayſt go thus far. The word which the Apoſtle here uſeth, (Heb. 4. 11.) which we tranſlate, Let us labour, is, let us ſtudy; and it ſignifies the Study of the Mind. Let us ſtudy (ſaith he) as a Man whoſe Head ploddeth upon a thing, and gathers together many Notions and Materials for ſuch a Head, ſo let us ſtudy to believe and to enter into that Reſt. Saith Solomon, Prov. 2. 11. If thou wilt receive my Words, and bide my Commandments within thee; (it is Wiſdom that ſpeaks it, and by Commandments there is not meant only the ten Commandments, but it is a Goſpel-Precept, and they are the Promiſes, the Revelations of God that he means) If thou wilt do ſo, (ſaith he) if thou ſeekeſt for Wiſdom as for Silver, and ſearcheſt for her as for hid Treaſure, then ſhalt thou underſtand the Fear of the Lord. And yet (ver. 6.) he ſaith, The Lord giveth Wiſdom, and out of hi Mouth cometh Knowledg and Underſtanding; which in the Language of the Old Teſtament is as much as to ſay he giveth Faith. But yet (ſaith he) do thou hide a the Promiſes and all the Commands within thee, do but thou ſearch for them, an take them out of the Veins where they lie in the Scriptures, and treaſure them u in thine Heart, and then God will come and he will mint Faith for thee before thou art aware of it. Thus ſaith the Prophet, (Lam. 3. 19, 20.) Remembring I remembred (as it is in the Original) my Afflictions; he chewed upon them: So likewiſe remembring, he remembred what might comfort him, viz. all the Materials of it. This I call to mind, (ſaith he, ver. 22.) therefore have I Hope. In Iſa. 66. 11. th Promiſes are called the Breaſts of Conſolation, which he ſaith they ſhall ſuck an milk out. Now if thou findeſt thou canſt not ſuck, or if thou ſuckeſt and non cometh, yet do as Children do, who oftentimes lie with the Breaſt and the Teat i their Mouths, ſo do thou; lie with ſuch Thoughts and Promiſes as are the Material of Faith in thy Heart. And whilſt thou endeavoureſt to ſuck, or perhaps canſ not, yet lying ſo, thou ſhalt it may be find it flowing in upon thee before thou ar aware of it; and whilſt thou takeſt ſomething of this into thy Mouth, ſomewhat will go down.

Part 3.

I might likewiſe inſtance in all ſuch Motives as the Scripture uſeth to be urg'd unto God to move him to be merciful and favourable to a poor Soul. All ſuch Thoughts alſo thou mayſt live in the midſt of, and dwell in, and gather together a bundle o them, and lay them up in thy Heart, and meditate on them continually. This is a certain Rule; look what Motives the Scripture holds forth as thoſe which move God; they, whilſt the Heart thinks of them, move it to believe, rather than they move God to be merciful: and the Intention of all the Motives the Scripture uſeth to move God to be merciful to us by, is rather to ſtrengthen and to beget Faith in us, to move and raiſe up Faith in our Hearts, that God will be thus merciful to us, and to ſtir up hopeful Thoughts thereof, rather than to move God himſelf. Multitudes of theſe Inſtances might be given: As Pſal. 119. 12. when David would deſire God to teach him his Statutes, who only was able to do it; what ſaith he? Bleſſed art thou, O Lord, teach me thy Statutes. Here now is a Motive, and a mighty one, it is as if he had ſaid, Lord thou art full of Happineſs, and thou art bleſſed in thy ſelf, and liveſt in the midſt of Happineſs, and knoweſt no Sorrow, knoweſt not what the Miſery of a poor Sinner is (i. e. not in Experience) that is ready to periſh; thou art bleſſed, but I am a poor loſt thing, without thy Help I periſh fo ever: O communicate ſome of that Bleſſedneſs unto me, enjoy it not alone, let a Soul ready to periſh be bleſſed by thee. Such things as theſe move God: why do they move him? Becauſe they are the Thoughts of his own Heart which moved him to communicate himſelf to Sinners, moved him to chooſe Men to eternal Life. Now look what doth and hath moved God in his own Nature and in his own Will from everlaſting, do thou take ſuch things into thy Thoughts, and urge them unto God, and they will beget Faith in thee before thou art aware. So likewiſe (Pſal. 143. 9, 10, 11, 12.) ſaith the Pſalmiſt, Teach me, and quicken me, &c. Why? For thy Spirit is good. What moveth God to ſave a poor Sinner, and to amend a naughty Heart? Becauſe his Spirit is good, and full of Goodneſs; Thou art good, and doeſ good, ſaith he. The Pſalmiſt likewiſe uſeth the ſame Motive, Pſal. 119. 68. And Chriſt himſelf puts ſuch Motives as theſe into our Thoughts, and theſe beget Faith when the Soul liveth in them: Your Fathers (ſaith he, Mat. 7. 11.) know how to give good things to their Children, how much more ſhall your heavenly Father give the Spirit to them that ask? He ſpeaks to a Soul that thinks he wants the Spirit, yet becauſe this Soul hears indefinitely that God is a Father to ſome Sinners, and that he is an heavenly Father, who exceeds in Bowels all earthly Fathers; therefore ſaith Chriſt, How much more ſhall not he give good things, yea give his Spirit to them tha ask? Now I ſay, whilſt we take all ſuch Motives, (and when I ſay Motives, I mean not Motives to believe, drawn from our own Good, but ſuch Motives as move God, for they are the greateſt Support of Faith, and do rather ſerve to move us and ſtir our Hearts to believe than to move God, altho they did move God once, for they were the Cauſe why he did from everlaſting purpoſe Good to us) whilſt we take theſe I ſay into our Souls, and there let them lie, and think of them, and revolve them again and again, there is a Strength, a Hopefulneſs begotten in the Soul from them, even as the Stomach, by having Meat put into it, is ſtrengthned by the Food's being concocted and digeſted, and aſſimilated to it.

Now the Reaſon why ſuch Souls may thus far labour and ſtudy to enter into this Reſt, why they may take all ſuch things into conſideration as are Materials of Believing, is clearly and plainly this: Becauſe if thoſe that are Miniſters of the Word, and the Preachers of it, are to preſent Promiſes and ſuch Motives to beget Faith in Men, if they may preſent them to their Judgments, and Underſtandings, and Thoughts, then thoſe Conſiderations and Promiſes, and the like, ſuch Souls ought to digeſt, to revolve, to think upon, and ſtill to ſay, Why is not my Portion herein? In this Heb. 4. 1, 2. the Word (ſaith he) namely the Goſpel, (for ſo the word ſignifies in the Original) it was preached unto them, but it profited not, becauſe it was not mingled with Faith in thoſe that heard it. He compares Faith there to that digeſtive Faculty (as the word implies) in the Stomach, which works upon the Meat, and ſo by degrees doth aſſimilate the Meat into the Body, and into the Likeneſs thereof: Now, ſaith he, that was the Reaſon the Word profited them not, becauſe they did not mind thoſe Promiſes, they did not take them into their Thoughts, they did not ſtudy them, (as the word here in the Text alſo ſignifies) and it is anſwerable to what he had ſaid, ver. 1. Let us therefore fear, leſt a Promiſe being left us of entring into his Reſt, any of you ſhould come ſhort of it: Come ſhort of it by not revolving thoſe Promiſes, and exerciſing your Thoughts upon them.

Direct. 2. But then, Secondly, We are to attempt the Exerciſe of the Act of Believing. Let me urge that upon you alſo, for I ſhall ſpeak to the thing it ſelf fully and punctually. Let Men exerciſe themſelves, I ſay, to the Act of Believing, in the conſideration of ſuch Promiſes, and of all ſuch Motives as are in Scripture held forth as moving God. And when I ſay they are to exerciſe the Act of Believing, my Meaning is concerning going to Chriſt, and relying on him, and reſting on him, and caſting themſelves upon him. They are not ſimply to ſeek to be humbled, or to abſtain from Sin, or to practiſe Holy Duties in expectation of Mercy, tho all theſe are to be done, but to inure the Heart to familiar and conſtant Acts of Believing: This is what I direct and exhort unto, and ſhall give you Grounds for it. Take the very Words of this Text, Heb. 4. 11. Let us labour or ſtudy to enter into that Reſt, which I told you is Believing. And why is it called entring into that Reſt? Men think when they come to believe, that they have a great long Journey to go, as the People of Iſrael had in the Wilderneſs, and that they muſt go through this and through that firſt; ſee this and ſee that firſt in themſelves, and ſo perhaps ſtay in the Wilderneſs forty Years; whereas the Apoſtle tells us plainly, it is but going over the Threſhold, it is but entring into that Reſt. Therefore, ſaith he, do you attempt to do it, do you labour or ſtudy to do it, it is but a Step, ſaith he; you are even at the Door, and what is the Door? It is the Door of Faith; We that believe have entred into Reſt, ſaith he, ver. 3. Such Souls ſhould make this their daily Task and Study, and indeed all Souls ſhould do ſo. All a Man's Labour, (ſaith Solomon, Eccleſ. 6. 7.) it is for his Mouth. You heard before that Faith was compared to the digeſtive Faculty in the Stomach, it being that which works upon the Promiſes as the Stomach doth upon the Meat. All a Man's Labour, ſaith he, it is for his Mouth: Indeed of the moſt Men it is the great Labour, that they may eat, and by eating live. Now all a Man's Labour it ſhould be for this Mouth of Faith, and to furniſh it, that he may live, and live by Faith; and as Chriſt compares it to the eating of his Fleſh, and the drinking of his Blood, therefore above all elſe labour for this, and for all other in order unto this. And that I may put ſuch Souls upon this in an immediate manner, do but conſider all theſe Scriptures which I ſhall now give. Firſt, that Chriſt ſays, (John 6. 27, 28, 29.) Labour not, or work not, for the Meat that periſheth, but for that Meat that endureth to everlaſting Life, which the Son of God ſhall give you, for him hath God the Father ſealed. Then ſay they unto him, What ſhall we do that we may work the Works of God? Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, This is the Work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath ſent. I told you even now, that all the Labour of Man it was for his Mouth; now here Chriſt makes uſe of that Similitude, and tho I cannot ſay he alludeth to it, yet he ſpeaks in that Alluſion, and it is a Place that may have an Alluſion thereto. Labour not, ſaith he, or work not, for the Meat which periſheth, for outward Meat, which is obtained by outward Labour, but labour for that Bread which the Son of God ſhall give you, Part 3. that is, himſelf; for a Man goes to Chriſt for Chriſt, and Chriſt doth give himſelf to a Sinner coming to believe on him; ver. 35. I am that Bread of Life, namely, which the Son of God giveth. Now as he alone is that Bread, ſo it is Believing alone that doth make us Partakers of that Bread; (as that 35*th* Verſe ſheweth) I am that Bread of Life, he that cometh unto me ſhall never hunger, and he that believeth on me ſhall never thirſt. Mark now the Coherence of theſe Words one with another to that which now I aim at. Before our Saviour Chriſt had ſaid, Labour or work not for the Meat which periſheth, but for that which endureth to everlaſting Life. Theſe Jews they plainly, and nakedly, and ſimply, and honeſtly aſk Chriſt, without cavilling, what peculiar thing they ſhould do? (and in that caſe Jeſus Chriſt always anſwers plainly:) What ſhall we do (ſay they) that we may work the Works of God? (by Works of God they mean Works acceptable to God). You would have us labour, what Works will you put us upon? They thought now that there was not one ſpecial Work only, but many Works, therefore they expreſs it in the plural; and yet they thought there might be ſome other thing he would teach them than what Moſes's Law did. Chriſt you ſee both anſwers at once their Queſtion, and explains what he meant by labouring for that Meat which endures for ever, and the thing he puts them upon is this, to believe on him whom God hath ſent; and this, ſaith he, is the Work of God. It is as if he had ſaid, You ſpeak of Works, I put you upon this as the Work. It is called the Work of God, as a broken Heart, Pſal. 51. is called the Sacrifice of God, that is, that which is acceptable unto God, which God delighteth in eminently. And as he puts them upon Believing alone eminently, ſo he puts them upon it immediately. Theſe Jews whoſe Hearts (according to their Queſtion, and Chriſt's Speech before) were ſo taken off from the Conſideration of earthly Bread, come unto Chriſt thus with a naked ſimple plain Queſtion, to be inſtructed by him, as they in the Acts did when they aſked the Apoſtles what they ſhould do to be ſaved? You ſee how Chriſt anſwers them, he puts them upon Believing, and thereby explains what he meant by labouring or working for that Meat, in his own Exhortation in the Words before. And as he did here, ſo upon all Occaſions elſe he did likewiſe; ſaith he to the poor Man, (Mark 9. 23.) If thou canſt believe, &c. Come try, let me ſee, ſaith he, whether thou canſt. The poor Man had ſaid unto Chriſt, If thou canſt do any thing; and Chriſt ſaith unto him, Do not doubt of Power in me, for there is Power enough in me, but canſt thou believe? come let me ſee. He puts him you ſee upon Believing. And ſo likewiſe, in another Place, ſays Chriſt, Strive to enter in at the ſtrait Gate: The Words in the Text here do clearly interpret his Meaning to be to put them upon Believing; you know it is called the Door of Faith in the Acts, which Chriſt calleth the ſtrait Gate, and bids them ſtrive to enter in. Labour, ſaith the Apoſtle, to enter into that Reſt; and we that believe have entred into it, ſaith he, Heb. 11. 3. As Chriſt did thus, ſo did the Apoſtles alſo, they did ſtill put Men upon Believing as well as upon Repenting. When the Jailor in the Acts did, in a plain and blunt manner, aſk them what he ſhould do to be ſaved? Believe in the Lord Jeſus, ſay they, and thou ſhalt be ſaved, and thy Houſhold. Was the Jailor, think you, to wait and expect till he received a Power to enable him to believe? No, but ſo far as he found his Heart ſtrengthned, ſo far he was to attempt it. And as this was the Command, ſo they always held it forth clearly and nakedly to them. And to clear it more to you, that Souls are thus to make Experiment of Believing continually, conſider but this farther. What Courſe will you take? Will you ſeek to God by Prayer, (as you are to do) and by the Performance of all other Duties? Or will any Man direct you to Prayer becauſe it is your Duty, and becauſe the Spirit of God may fall upon you in Prayer, as oftentimes he doth upon Men? The ſame ſay I alſo, and there is juſt the ſame Reaſon; do thou fall upon Believing, and tho thou beginneſt and attempteſt to do it with a quavering Heart, and layeſt hold upon Chriſt with a trembling Hand, yet the Power of God may fall upon thee in the doing of it. You uſe to ſtir up your ſelves to other Duties, and that becauſe they are commanded, (for I ſuppoſe now that ſuch a Soul as I ſpeak to reſolveth not to do nothing, if you mean to be idle there is an end of it) now if you mean to do any thing, attempt to believe; you have no more Power to do any Duty than you have for Believing, or at leaſt it muſt be the Almighty Power of God that muſt help you to perform any Duty ſpiritually as well as to believe: therefore ſo far forth as you make Conſcience of performing any other Duty, make conſcience of this. In Iſa. 64. 7. theſe two are joined together, None calleth upon thy Name, and ſtirreth up himſelf to take hold of thee. Here is Prayer, calling upon God, and Believing, both joined together, and ſtirring up themſelves to do it; for what is it to take hold of the Lord? It is the ſame in Iſa. 27. 5. Let him take hold of my Strength, that is, let him believe, (it is taking hold of the Arm of the Lord) and let him ſtir up himſelf to do it, let him reach as far as he can to take hold of it.

I ſhall now in the next Place anſwer ſuch Objections as oppoſe my preceding Aſſertions.

Object. 1. One Objection will be this; If I have not God's Power to concur, I ſhall not have true Faith, I ſhall not put forth a true Act of Believing, and therefore I were as good forbear to exerciſe or attempt to do it.

Anſw. 1. I anſwer firſt; This holds againſt the Uſe of all Duties elſe as well as againſt Believing: For unleſs the Power of God doth enable thee, thou canſt not think a good Thought, and according to this thy Argument thou ſhouldſt forbear all Thoughts that are materially good, as well as the Act of Believing. If you are not nor ought to be deterred from any other Duty, why ſhould you be from this?

Anſw. 2. Secondly, I anſwer, Do you ſtill try and renew Thoughts and Acts of Faith howſoever: For if in thy attempting to believe God doth accompany thee, and evidence to thee that he doth come in, and fall upon thee, and perhaps manifeſt his Love unto thee, thou ſhalt have cauſe for ever to bleſs God. If that thou doſt attempt and thou falleſt ſhort, yet notwithſtanding thou wilt then ſee thy Defect, and thou wilt be humbled in thy own ſight, as thou art in the defective Performance of all other Duties, and ſo wilt be put upon going to God for Power with more Eagerneſs. But however do not therefore forbear.

Anſw. 3. Thirdly, Suppoſe that thy Attempt to believe be in it ſelf for the kind of it but a natural Act, that is not yet ſpiritual; yet tho thou ſow it a natural Act, (as I may ſo expreſs it) it may riſe up a ſpiritual one in the very doing; and tho thou ſoweſt it in Weakneſs, God may make it riſe in Power. God oftentimes ingrafts true Acts of Faith upon thoſe literal Notions we have of God and of Chriſt. It is evident by this, that after a Man believeth ſavingly, who had much Knowledg of the Goſpel before, (and materially his Thoughts now are but the ſame Thoughts he had before, only they formally differ) God comes now in with a new Light, and Grace hath alter'd all into Spirituals. And in the exerciſing ſuch Thoughts of Faith doth God come in, and changeth them in the very doing. When Chriſt intended to do that Miracle of turning Water into Wine, he doth not firſt change the Water into Wine, but he bids them pour it out, and in the pouring of it out the Water was turned into Wine: So is it here: Even as the Loaves multiplied in the breaking and dividing of them. God doth change thy Attempts to believe (they being done in Subordination to his Power) into genuine true Thoughts of Faith whilſt thou art a thinking, and thou believeſt thy ſelf into true Believing through the Power of God before thou art aware of it; and by plunging thy ſelf, and by exerciſing thy Heart and Thoughts, and by wallowing up and down (how ſhall I expreſs it?) in that Sea of Blood, thou wilt feel thy Conſcience eaſed, and grow up to a ſteadier Familiarity in Believing, and that in a way thou knoweſt not how. You find this in other Duties, that when you go to Prayer deadly and coldly, you meet with Life and Quickneſs from God even in the Duty. Why may it not be ſo here?

Anſw. 4. Laſtly, To ſuch Souls as ſtick at this Objection, I anſwer; Would any Man exhort you unto any Means in order unto Faith, as to pray, or to hear, or to think of your Sins, and the like? Why not to Believing, why not to the Acts of Faith together with all theſe, and above all theſe? For mark it, If you be put upon Prayer, what is Prayer? This is certain, if thou thinkeſt with thy ſelf, I ſhall now make but a natural Prayer, and it will not be a ſpiritual Prayer, let me tell thee this, let the Prayer thou makeſt be what it will be, ſo far forth as thou prayeſt in any Reality, ſo far thou haſt Faith, proportionably to thy Prayer. Conſider what I ſay; If it be a ſpiritual Prayer thou makeſt, and God turns it to be ſo, then he gives thee ſpiritual Faith; therefore thou mayſt as well concurrently believe as pray, for Prayer is but the venting of Faith. Therefore if thou wilt ſay, I will forbear the Act of Believing becauſe it may prove a natural Act, an Act of mine own, and not genuine and true, thou mayſt upon the ſame Grounds as well forbear Praying, for ſo far forth as thou haſt an Ability to pray aright in Faith thou haſt to believe, for Prayer is the acting of Faith, take it in its Proportion, that is, whether you conſider it naturally or ſpiritually. Men may exhort you to Means of Faith, but this you will ſtill find, that all thoſe Means are as difficult things as Faith it ſelf: and therefore the Apoſtle (Rom. 10.) you ſee directs unto Faith as the moſt eaſy and ſhort Cut of all the reſt; you may forecaſt, ſaith he, this and that, but the Word is nigh thee, even in thy Mouth and in thy Heart, that is, the Word of Faith which we preach, ver. 8. The Apoſtle ſpeaks juſt thus, as if one ſhould be brought to a Table full of Meat, and he that is brought ſhould ſay, What is it I ſhould do that I may eat of this Meat, and be Partaker of it? Certainly any one would anſwer, The Meat is here on the Table, do thou fall a eating: So doth the Apoſtle ſay, The Word (ſaith he) is nigh thee; it's next door to thy Mouth, and to thy Heart, and thy Lips, do but digeſt it, (which is the mingling it with Faith, as he ſpeaks in Heb. 4.) do but take it in thy Thoughts and Apprehenſion, (and then it is in thy Heart) thou ſtandeſt now at the Threſhold, do but ſtep in; Enter in, ſaith he. But will the Man ſay, I muſt have a Stomach to it? Mark what I ſay, If eating and taſting will be the way to beget a Stomach, were it not beſt to fall to? So it is here; Taſte and ſee how good the Lord is. If there were Meat that would get a Man a Stomach by eating it, aſſuredly then a Man would firſt fall to and eat: now this Meat (which is Jeſus Chriſt) doth do ſo. If coming into the Sun would give Eyes to a Man, and cauſe the Films to fall off as well as give a Man Light to ſee himſelf with, a Man that is blind would not ſtand complaining of his Blindneſs, and ſay, I will not go abroad, for I cannot ſee this Sun, I will rather ſtay here in this dark Dungeon, in this Priſon, till the Sun force it ſelf through the Walls, or come in at ſome Cranny, and ſo cauſe the Scales to fall off my Eyes. No certainly, he would go abroad into the Air, that ſo the Sun might cure him of his Blindneſs. Jeſus Chriſt is the Sun of Righteouſneſs, and he hath healing in his Wings, viz. in his Beams, Mal. 4. 2. It is an elegant Metaphor, comparing theſe diffuſive Beams to the ſpreading of the Eagle's Wings over her young ones.

How doth the Iron come to have Virtue to cleave to the Load-ſtone? It is by being brought to the Load-ſtone: So doth the Soul get Power to cleave unto Chriſt by coming unto Chriſt; and the longer the Soul is kept off from exerciſing Thoughts of Faith upon Chriſt, it is like the Iron kept from the Load-ſtone, it grows weaker and weaker.

Object. 2. A ſecond Objection is this; you will ſay, I may build my ſelf up in a temporary Faith by this Courſe, whereas it were better for me to go and ſearch into the Falſeneſs of that, if it be falſe.

Anſw. 1. If you take the way of the Scripture, I do not know how any Man ſhall be fully able to anſwer all thoſe Temptations about a Man's being a temporary Believer, but only by believing: I have known many Souls beaten into that way at laſt, and never could have Peace till then. And I find this likewiſe, that take the Epiſtle to the Hebrews, (and there is no Book in the New Teſtament, nor no Paſſages in the New Teſtament that hint more about temporary Believers than that Book doth, for he ſpeaks of Men that fall away through Unbelief, after inlightning, and he ſpeaks extreme ſuſpiciouſly of the Jews, for certainly many of them were ſuch) what Courſe doth the Apoſtle take in this Epiſtle to keep them from falling away? He doth not go about ſo much to diſcover to them that their Faith was a temporary Faith; no, but all the Courſe of that Epiſtle to ſuch kind of Men (ſuppoſing ſuch among them) ſtill runs upon this, to renew Faith, and to take heed of departing from the living God through an evil Heart of Unbelief; and let us (ſaith he) hold the hope of our Confidence unto the end, Heb. 3. 6, 14. I ſay, the whole Epiſtle doth not lie ſo much in diſcovering this to be genuine, and that to be falſe Faith, as in exhorting them to believe, for God indeed often converts ſuch into true Faith whilſt they exerciſe it. And certainly, let Men go on in a way of Believing, and either their Sins will make them leave off believing, or their believing will make them ſound. And this you will find, that there is no way to cut the Knot of all theſe Temptations, nay there is no way for a Man, of a temporary Believer to become a true Believer, but by exerciſing Faith continually, ſo far forth as God ſtrengthneth his Heart. And then as he ſaid of Prayer, that it will either make a Man leave ſinning, or his ſinning will make him leave praying; ſo believing will either make him leave

eave his Unſoundneſs, or his Unſoundneſs will make him leave his Believing. If Man be a true Believer, and be troubled with that Temptation, it is the only way to end it: And if he be a temporary Believer, and in that State, it is the only way o make him ſound; It is that you ſee which the Apoſtle directs to.

Anſw. 2. Thou mayſt for ought thou knoweſt, be but in a Temptation that thou rt, or that thou mayſt prove a temporary Believer. That Power which hath hitherto aſſiſted thee, may be the ſame Power which accompanies Workings unto Salvation, and then thou loſeſt time to try it out that way; and to try it out, it is the difficulteſt Controverſy in the World that ever any Soul entred upon; and thou wilt never bring it to a Concluſion or Determination but by Believing. That muſt ſtill end that Controverſy: thou mayſt ſooner get a new Title by believing afreſh, than try out thy old Title: and after that thou haſt renewed Acts of Faith, then thou wilt ſee the Truth of all the Work formerly wrought in thee, and not before.

Anſw. 3. On the other ſide, if thou ſhouldſt be a temporary Believer at the preſent, which yet thou knoweſt not, then conſider that the way to make thee ſound is to put thee upon believing and renewing thy Faith. Mark what I ſay, it is the way to make thee ſound. If indeed that Faith were nothing elſe but a ſecure taking for granted that a Man is in the State of Salvation, that might indanger thee. But that is not it that I put thee upon when I put thee upon Believing, but it is to have a conſtant Recourſe, in a ſenſe of thy Wants, unto Jeſus Chriſt, both for Juſtification and for Sanctification, and to act and exerciſe Faith upon him, and to whet thy Soul upon him, and to do this continually. Now take this Courſe, and let all thy Imperfections and Hypocriſies thou ſeeſt or ſuſpecteſt to be in thee, drive thee unto Chriſt to make thee ſincere, let them drive thee unto Chriſt for Juſtification, make that Improvement and Uſe of them, ſtill to put thee upon Believing; if any thing will make thy Heart ſound, this will do it. Thus having Recourſe unto Chriſt, thou wilt ſee farther Light to diſcern thine own Emptineſs and Hypocriſy ten thouſand times more than by poring upon and ſtudying out thy own Condition, by comparing that Act and this Act together, and this by-end and that by-end, and the like: For if thou goeſt thus by Faith unto Jeſus Chriſt, thou dealeſt with the Fountain of Grace; and by exerciſing thy ſelf to Faith in him, and ſo acquainting thy ſelf with him, thy Heart will be changed before thou art aware of it. As Solomon ſaith, He that walketh with wiſe Men ſhall be wiſe: So he that acquaints himſelf thus with the Lord Jeſus, conſtantly renewing Acts of Faith upon him, he ſhall learn Wiſdom, he ſhall learn Holineſs, he ſhall learn how to go out of himſelf; he will ſhed Light into him for to ſee his Emptineſs more, and he will ſhed Spirit into him for to fill him more.

The Obſervation which I make upon the Epiſtle to the Hebrews, is to this Purpoſe and Effect: The Apoſtle there writes to all the Jews, whether temporary Believers or other, but ſuppoſe they were ſuch that did profeſs the Name of Chriſt in the Strictneſs of it, yet he ſpeaks exceeding ſuſpiciouſly of many of them. The Holy Ghoſt in no Book holds forth ſo much the State of a temporary Believer, and the Iſſue and Terror of it, than in that Epiſtle, both in the 6th, 10*th*, and 12*th* Chapters: and therefore he ſpeaks more diſtinctly of the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, which a temporary Believer is nearer to fall into, and he threatneth and aweth them with that: yet notwithſtanding, you ſhall find that there is no Epiſtle that doth by way of Exhortation (tho the Apoſtle in other Epiſtles may commend the Doctrine of Faith, as he doth in the Epiſtle to the Romans, and in other Places) ſo much exhort Men continually to Believing, all and every Man; Leſt any Man (ſaith he) fail and come ſhort of the Grace of God: and, leſt there be found in any Man an evil Heart of Unbelief. Read the 3*d* Chapter, it is the whole Scope of it, and it is the whole Scope in a manner of this 4*th* Chapter. He lays before them the Example of thoſe that fell in the Wilderneſs, and tells them it was Unbelief was the Cauſe of it, therefore he bids them labour or ſtudy to enter into that Reſt, and to take heed leſt they fall after the ſame Example of Unbelief: You are now (ſaith he) of the Houſe of God, if you continue to be ſo; ye are Partakers of Chriſt if you hold faſt your Confidence. So that I ſay, we are not ſo much to trouble our ſelves with that great Controverſy, whether we be temporary Believers or no, when we find the Holy Ghoſt ſtirring in us, but to improve that Strength we have from the Holy Ghoſt in direct Acts of Faith towards Jeſus Chriſt, going out to him for a Supply of all Imperfections and Defects: And thus having Recourſe unto him, it will make a Man ſound; and as he ſaid of Praying, that Praying would either make a Man leave his Sinning, or his Sinning would make him leave Praying; ſo certainly it is in the Matter of Believing.

Anſw. 4. The laſt Anſwer I ſhall give to the Objection is this; Thou canſt no ſay thou art a temporary Believer, thou mayſt fear it. A true Believer may fear it, but he cannot ſay he is ſuch: and a temporary Believer, tho there is that in the Word which if it were opened might convince him, and ſhall do ſo at latter day, yet uſually he cannot ſay it of himſelf that he is ſuch an one. Therefore now thou that wilt abſtain from putting forth Acts of Faith for fear leſt thou mayſt build thy ſelf up in a way of temporary Believing, conſider this, that tho thou mayſt build up a temporary Faith, yet thou mayſt not forbear putting forth true Acts of Faith, fo thou mayſt be a true Believer for ought thou knoweſt, therefore thou art to go and caſt thy ſelf upon Chriſt, to follow on the Motions of the Holy Ghoſt and tha Aſſiſtance he gives thee. For wouldſt thou quench the Motions of the New Creature? If thou kneweſt them to be ſo, I am aſſured thou wouldſt not; but if thou knoweſt them not, yet thou oughteſt not to do it. I remember what a poor Chil about ten Years of Age once ſaid, I am oftentimes (ſaid he) tempted to take Jeſus Chriſt, I ſee ſo much Beauty in him, but I fear I ſhall be a Hypocrite in doing of it. What a pitiful thing was this, that ſuch a Temptation ſhould keep ſuch a Sou (when he is again and again provoked by the Holy Ghoſt) from laying hold upo Jeſus Chriſt, from taking of him?

Direct. 3. The third Direction is only a farther Exhortation to continue to renew Acts of Faith, and not to ceaſe or faint, or to give over. The very Scope of this 3*d* Chapter of the Hebrews is to put them upon renewing Acts of Faith, and holding out to do ſo continually. He doth both bid them continue to do it, and alſo he bids them daily to renew Acts of Faith, and expreſſeth it under both kinds of Expreſſions. Firſt, he exhorts them to a Conſtancy of holding out; ver. 6. To hol faſt their Confidence and the Glory of their Hope, or the Rejoicing of their Hope, or their Faith, unto the end. And ver. 14. To hold faſt the beginning of their Confidence ſtedfaſt unto the end, oppoſing it there to departing from the Living God; and therefor by Faith to abide and ſtay by God. But that is not all, he exhorts them likewiſe to renewed Acts of Faith; you ſhall ſee his Expreſſions in the 7*th* Verſe, and ſo in other Verſes; Wherefore as the Holy Ghoſt ſaith, To day if ye will hear his Voice, ver. 7. Hearing his Voice there is Believing; ſo he interprets it himſelf in the end of the Chapter. So likewiſe, ver. 13. he bids Chriſtians to exhort one another daily, whil it is called to day, and therefore anſwerably to renew their Faith daily; for that is his Scope, and the thing he calls upon them to do in anſwer to thoſe Exhortations. So ver. 15. Whileſt it is ſaid, To day if ye will hear his Voice, harden not your Hearts: and Unbelief will harden your Hearts, ſaith he. I obſerve this, that he doth ſpeak to theſe Jews converted; ſuppoſe whether ſome were Temporaries or no, however he ſpeaketh to them all, even as we uſe to ſpeak to any Soul that is a coming on to Chriſt, whom we would move to turn to God at a Sermon, telling him, that now is the Day of Grace, now is an acceptable time, and therefore cleave to him, and turn to him. Even ſuch kind of Motives as we would uſe to ſuch an one doth the Apoſtle uſe to them that are already converted or enlightned at leaſt, and had long profeſs'd the Name of Chriſt; Whileſt it is called to day, (ſaith he); and take heed leſt at any time (ſo the word is in the Original, ver. 12.) that you do ceaſe from Believing, or leſt there be in any of you an evil Heart of Unbelief, in departing, or neglecting it: but to day (ſaith he) hear his Voice. So that indeed and in truth what we would ſay, or any Man would ſay unto one that is now to be converted, the ſame he ſaith to them; for a Chriſtian's Life it is and ought to be a continual renewing of Faith; and ſo a Renewal of his Converſion, as you have them put together; Luke 22. 32. I have prayed thy Faith fail not: when thou art converted, ſtrengthen thy Brethren. And the Apoſtle contents not himſelf only to ſpeak in the Language of Words of Conſtancy, and to bid them to do it daily; To day, &c. in a poſitive way, but he uſeth Negatives too, Take heed leſt at any time there be in any of you an evil Heart of Unbelief, ver. 12. Take heed leſt you let go your hold, leſt you ceaſe to believe; for if you do not renew Acts of Faith, certainly corrupt Nature will renew Acts of Unbelief; and if one be not acted, or if it be intermitted, the other will ſteal up.

the Houſe of God are we (ſaith he) if we do thus daily hear and obey his Voice: And, we are made Partakers of Chriſt, if we hold faſt thus the beginning of our Confidence. I take it his meaning is this; The Doctrine (ſaith he) which we teach, it is the right way to Heaven, and you need not doubt of that, (ſaith he) for it is that which will build up the Houſe of God, and will make Men Partakers of Chriſt: Now (ſaith he) if ye continue thus to act Faith, and do but practiſe according to that Doctrine that is taught in the Houſe of God in the Church, you will become his Houſe indeed and in truth, according to the Doctrine taught in the Church.

Object. Now there is an Objection will alſo attend this Direction, which I would meet withal, and that is this: Yea, but will the Soul ſay, I have renewed Faith often, and done it long, and I find not yet that Power accompanying my Faith which doth evidence it to be true: And notwithſtanding all I have done, I do not yet know whether all the Acts of Faith I have put forth be not in vain; and as they have been, ſo they may ſtill be, and therefore I had as good give over.

Anſw. I will anſwer thee, ſpeaking to this Objection, ſo far as it relateth to the Point in hand, viz. the Power of God coworking with us.

1. Firſt of all conſider what Chriſt ſaid to Peter when he came to waſh his Feet, (John 13.) and Peter reluctated; What I do now (ſaith Chriſt) thou knoweſt not, but thou ſhalt know hereafter; and if thou kneweſt thou wouldſt not reluctate. Chriſt requires Obedience to that, the meaning whereof he knew not at the preſent, but ſhould know afterward; and when the Holy Ghoſt came upon him after Chriſt's Aſcenſion, he found that Chriſt thereby had ſeal'd up to him the waſhing away of his Sins, for God made that unto them a temporary Sacrament, tho Peter knew not the meaning of this at the preſent; and thus Chriſt doth many things unto us which we know not the meaning of till afterwards. So ſay I to thee that ſayſt, thou haſt exerciſed Acts of Faith a long time, and knoweſt not whether it be true: Thou mayſt know hereafter, (tho thou knoweſt not now) when the Spirit comes on thee, and brings all things that are paſt to thy Remembrance, and lets thee ſee the Truth of all that God hath wrought in thee; when he comes to ſeal up to thee thy Redemption unto the day of Redemption, there will a Light come that will ſhew thee that thou haſt all this while been a believing, and a believing truly and acceptably unto God, and therefore however continue ſtill doing ſo.

2. Tho thou haſt put forth Acts of Faith never ſo long, or never ſo often, and hitherto in vain, (if in vain, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks) yet continue ſtill to do it; and that becauſe God works it of his good Pleaſure, you know that is the Encouragement. Phil. 2. 14. Work out your Salvation, for it is God that worketh in you of his good Pleaſure. And in 2 Tim. 2. 25. he bids them preach to Men, and to continue in ſo doing, to ſee if God at any time will give them Repentance. Tho a Man hath preached multitude of Sermons, and Men have heard multitude of Sermons, yet preach ſtill, and go to Sermons ſtill; for tho all the former have been in vain, there may come a time in which God may give Repentance unto Men. And the Apoſtle, Heb. 3. 12. uſeth the very ſame word, (tho I confeſs it is not in our Tranſlation) Take heed leſt at any time there be in you an Heart of Unbelief. In this caſe I ſay, as Paul ſaith in Heb. 10. 35. he ſpeaks it indeed in regard of Afflictions or Temptations outward, but all that is there ſaid is applicable to this Temptation, and to Temptations inward; Caſt not away your Confidence, (ſaith he) ver. 35. And ver. 36. Ye have need of Patience, that after you have done the Will of God ye might receive the Promiſe; for yet a little while, and he that ſhall come will come, and will not tarry. Suppoſe now thou haſt acted Faith, and findeſt as thou thinkeſt nothing come, yet do not throw away that Confidence, that Faith, that Acting upon Chriſt, begotten in thee; caſt it not away, as Men are apt to do when they cannot attain the thing they ſeek for preſently. I ſay, in this caſe to thee, as the Apoſtle ſaid there, You have need of Patience: and what was the Reaſon he thus ſpake, You have need of Patience? Becauſe the truth is, God will try every Soul that doth believe, he will try their Patience; if not with outward Afflictions, yet with inward; and if not with inward, then with outward. Now I apply this to thee in this caſe, for if any Soul needeth Patience, then ſuch a Soul as this that makes this Objection needs Patience; he needs it becauſe God puts him to it, and Patience there is put for a patient Continuance, as in Rom. 2. it is called and interpreted, and ſo the meaning is, You need a patient Continuance in renewing ſtill your Confidence and Believing, that when you have done the Will of God herein over and over, merely in Submiſſion to him, you may inherit the Promiſe. He puts that in to quiet them in the mean time. And ſo ſay I to thee that art ready to faint, and to give up all, quiet thy ſelf with this, that it i the Will of God thou haſt done all this while, and that it is his Will thou ſhouldſ rather act Faith upon him, and have Recourſe unto him, than to have forborn it and tho thou knoweſt not whether it be true Faith or no, yet it is the Will of Go thou ſhouldſt do it. You have need of Patience, (ſaith he) that after you have don the Will of God, you may receive the Promiſe: for yet a little while, and he that ſhall com will come, and will not tarry. Thou wilt find that God in the end will come, and will give thee, to thy own Senſe, ſpiritually and truly to believe. In the mean time, I ſay, quiet thy ſelf with this, that that which thou art a doing is the Work of God; This is the Work of God, (ſaith Chriſt) that ye believe on him whom he hath ſent. And this is the waiting and ſitting ſtill that the Scripture ſpeaks of. It is no to ſit ſtill and to do nothing toward Believing, but it is doing the Will of God in continuing ſtill to believe. And then the Apoſtle adds, The Juſt ſhall live by Faith Will a Man deliberate whether he ſhall put forth Acts of Life or no, whether he ſhall breathe or no? Why, there is a neceſſity for him to breathe, it is that whereby he liveth; and therefore tho thou fetch thy Breath hardly, yet fetch it ſtill, for thou dieſt elſe. So he ſaith here, that Faith is our Life, therefore continue to put forth the Acts of Faith, or elſe thou dieſt. In Rom. 5. ſpeaking of the Effects of Faith (for that is the Scope of that Chapter from the beginning towards the middle) he ſaith there, that Trials and Afflictions (whereof this is the greateſt) breed Patience, and what doth Patience breed? It breedeth Experience: When a Man hath patiently continued to wait, to exerciſe Faith, in the end he cometh to experienc that he hath true Faith: (you may apply it unto this as well as unto any othe Temptation whatſoever) and what is the Iſſue of Experience in the end? It breedeth Hope, that is, Aſſurance; for it is clear it is ſo meant, becauſe he adds, Becauſ the Love of God is ſhed abroad in our Hearts. It produceth, I ſay, that Effect in th end. So that ſtill I ſay to ſuch Souls, they had need of patient Continuance in renewing their Confidence, and in living by Faith, and in the end he that ſhall com will come. And as the Apoſtle there in Heb. 10. adds, The Juſt ſhall live by Faith ſo he adds likewiſe, If any Man draw back, my Soul ſhall have no Pleaſure in him. Th word is a word uſed amongſt Souldiers, not to recoil, not to give over, being wear of waiting, or the like. Now as the General hath no Pleaſure in ſuch a Souldier, ſ ſaith he, in ſuch an one my Soul ſhall have no Pleaſure. And he adds the greateſt Motive in the World why Men ſhould continue ſtill thus to act Faith, tho their Patience be thus tried; for, ſaith he, it is believing to the ſaving of the Soul, (ver. 39) but this drawing back, this recoiling, and ſeeking to do it, tendeth to Perdition We are not of them who draw back unto Perdition, (ſaith he) but of them that believe t the ſaving of the Soul, that is, that continue thus to believe: for his Meaning an his Argument lies thus; you muſt hold out, ſaith he, and continue to believe, fo you cannot be ſaved elſe; and if you will forbear to act Faith thus, what will be th Iſſue of it? You will draw back, and then God will come to have no Pleaſure i you; and this, ſaith he, tendeth to Perdition; you hazard Perdition by it, therefore it is neceſſary to continue ſo believing. Now I ſay, to ſuch a Soul as is wear ed out with ſuch a Temptation as this is, Whether doſt thou mean to be ſaved, ye or no? Thou wilt ſay to me, Yes. Very good; Whether doſt thou mean ever t renew Faith upon Chriſt again or no? If thou ſayſt, Never; I have nothing to ſa to thee, but only this; thou draweſt back to the certain Perdition of thy Soul. I ever thou meaneſt to renew Faith again, or elſe thou canſt not be ſaved; then ſay I, tho thou haſt been diſcouraged a thouſand and a thouſand times, yet continu to do it ſtill, for if ever thou comeſt to Salvation, it muſt be by having freſh R courſe to Chriſt, and exerciſing Acts of Faith upon him. Now by diſcontinuing t do it, thou doſt not get more Power to believe; if it were ſo, there were ſomethin in it; but thou draweſt back, and putteſt thy Perdition upon a Hazard, thou putteſt thy utter hardning upon a Hazard, therefore ceaſe not, no not for a Momen And let me ſay this to thee likewiſe, Thou art diſcouraged, becauſe what thou ha done hitherto is in vain, and therefore thou feareſt that what thou ſhalt do will be i vain alſo. When thou comeſt to thy Death-bed, or to lie under any great Afflictio or Temptation, thy Diſcouragement will be greater than now, for then Satan wi

Part 3.

te

ell thee, thou haſt often renewed Acts of Faith, and thou haſt found it to be in ain, and thereupon haſt drawn back from God, and diſcontinued the exerciſing of uch Acts, and therefore thou haſt Cauſe now to fear that God will have no Pleaſure n thee. There is no way therefore, ſay I, but for thee to hold faſt thy Confidence, nd to live by Faith, (thou haſt need of Patience, I confeſs that) and let the Ne-eſſity of the thing put thee upon it, for it is as neceſſary as the ſaving of thy Soul is, t is believing to the ſaving of the Soul.

Object. But you will ſay, I am weary, I have ſo long time exerciſed Faith, and can-ot find whether my Faith be true or no, I find no Strength by it, little or no Support by t. What ſaith the Apoſtle, Heb. 12. 12. (for there is no Epiſtle where he ſpeaks to his Point in hand more than this to the Hebrews) Lift up the Hands which hang down, nd the feeble Knees. Tho even all your Strength be gone through Wearineſs, yet ſe the Strength you have; tho theſe Hands hang down through Wearineſs, yet ith that Strength you have lift them up once more, yea again and again. It is not n this as in other Wearineſs. In other Wearineſs a Man gets more Strength by diſ-ontinuing to labour; but where this kind of Wearineſs is through long waiting, y diſcontinuing thou ſhalt not have more Power againſt the next time. No, but thou wilt lift up the Hands that hang down, thou wilt find that God will help to ft them up too. In Iſa. 40. 28. the Prophet there ſpeaks to thoſe that are ready to int for waiting upon the Lord, and he bids them conſider; Haſt thou not known, aith he) haſt thou not heard, that the everlaſting God, the Lord, the Creator of the nds of the Earth, fainteth not, neither is weary? Conſider (ſaith he) that God hath reated the Ends of the Earth, and he upholds them every Moment, he hath done ſo om the Beginning of the World; and tho the Earth is continually changing, and e World a moving, yet he fainteth not to hold up all this, as he did not faint at rſt when he created it; and he giveth Power to the Faint, and to them that have no ight he increaſeth Strength. When thou thinkeſt, I am even weary, I can believe o longer, yet lift up thoſe Hands that hang down, and ſtrengthen thoſe feeble nees, what Strength thou haſt put forth; and that God who is the Creator of the nds of the Earth, that fainteth not, neither is weary, will give Power to the aint, and increaſe Strength to them that have no Might. Take a poor Soul now hat finds a Defect of ſpiritual Strength, O ſaith he, I have no Strength at all. If hou wert a young Man, and wert put to do Acts of Activity, thou wouldſt think hou haſt natural Strength enough to do ſuch things withal: Now the Prophet tells hee, that thou who haſt the Senſe of no ſpiritual Strength in thy ſelf, thy Caſe is ore ſure to have Strength continued to thee, waiting upon the Lord, than a young Man that hath never ſo much Strength for youthful Feats; Even the Youths (ſaith e) ſhall faint, and be weary, and the young Men ſhall utterly fall; but they that wait pon the Lord, tho they have no Strength, they ſhall renew their Strength, they ſhall ount up with Wings as Eagles, they ſhall run and not be weary, and they ſhall walk and ot faint. Therefore continue, he that ſhall come will come in the end; and in e mean time he that upholds the Ends of the Earth upon nothing, he upholds thy Heart to believe upon nothing. I mean, Faith is a thing depending upon nothing in Man's ſelf. The Prophet, I ſay, compares the promiſed Supply of ſpiritual trength with a preſent Stock of natural Strength, which a young Man having, he hinks himſelf able to do any natural Action. Yea, (ſaith he) they ſhall mount up ith Wings as Eagles. An Eagle when he grows old grows callow, as you call it, hat is, all the Feathers come off; but waſhing himſelf in Fountains, his Wings and eathers come again, and he mounts up anew; ſo (ſaith he) thou ſhalt renew thy trength; tho thou art even faint and grown weary, and tho thou thinkeſt thy old tock of Strength is gone, and thou haſt believed all that Strength out, and that hy Soul is naked, and that there is nothing left, yet wait upon the Lord, look again to is Holy Temple, (as Jonah ſaith) and he will renew thy Strength, and bear thee up as ith Eagles Wings.

FINIS.

[illegible] thou hast often renewed Acts of Faith, and thou hast found it to be a [illegible] upon hast drawn back from God, and discontinued the exercising of [illegible] therefore thou hast Cause [illegible] God will have no Pleasure [illegible] is no way therefore, say I, but for thee to hold fast thy Confidence [illegible] Faith, (thou hast need of Patience, I confess that) and let the Ne- [illegible] put thee upon it; Faith is as necessary as the saving of thy Soul is, [illegible] away of the Devil.

[illegible] I say more, [illegible] Support [illegible] Ver. 12. [illegible] there is an Epistle where he speaks to [illegible] hands which hang down [illegible] strength be gone through Weakness, [illegible] Hands hang down through Weakness, yet [illegible] once more, yea again and again. It is not [illegible] other Weakness a Man gets more Strength by dif- [illegible] this Kind of Weakness, is through long waiting [illegible] having more Power against the next time. No, but [illegible] ways, thou wilt find that God will help [illegible] these [illegible] are said to [illegible] know [illegible] everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the [illegible] fainteth not, neither is weary? (saith he) that God hath [illegible] he upholds them every Moment, he hath none to [illegible] and [illegible] the Earth is continually [illegible] and [illegible] to hold up all this, as he upholds [illegible] giveth Power to the Faint, and to them that have no [illegible] (then thou thinkest) I am exceedingly [illegible] up those Hands that hang down, and strengthen those feeble [illegible] and that God who is the Creator of the [illegible] fainteth not, neither is weary, will give Power to the [illegible] Strength to them that have no Might. Take a poor Soul now [illegible] of spiritual Strength, O saith he, I have no Strength at all. If [illegible] Man, and were put to do Acts of Activity, thou wouldst think [illegible] Strength enough to do such things withal: Now the Prophet tells [illegible] the Sense of thy spiritual Strength in thy self, thy Case is [illegible] Strength continued to thee, waiting upon the Lord, than a young [illegible] Strength in youthful Years: Even the Youths shall [illegible] and the young Men shall utterly fall; but they that wait [illegible] they shall renew their Strength, they shall [illegible] Eagles, they shall run and not be weary, and they shall walk and [illegible] he that shall come will come in the end; and [illegible] the Ends of the Earth upon nothing, he upholds thy [illegible] upon nothing, I mean, Faith is a thing depending upon nothing in [illegible] like Eagles, I say, compares the promised Supply of spiritual [illegible] present stock of natural Strength, which a young Man having, he [illegible] to do any natural Action. Yea, (saith he) they shall mount up [illegible] Eagles. [illegible] when he grows old, grows callow, as you call it, [illegible] Feathers [illegible] but walking himself in [illegible] his Wings and [illegible] and he mounts up anew; so (saith he) they shall renew their [illegible] uncertain and grown weary, and thou thinkest thy old [illegible] strength is gone, and thou hast believed all thy Strength out, and that [illegible] and that there is nothing left, yet wait upon the Lord, seek again to [illegible] (as Jonah saith), and he will renew thy Strength, and bear thee up as [illegible] Wings.

OF THE CONSTITUTION, Right, Order, AND GOVERNMENT OF THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

By THO. GOODWIN, D.D.

LONDON,
Printed by Tho. Snowden, for T. G. in the Year 1696.

THE
Government of the Churches of Chriſt.

BOOK I.

Of the Right Inſtitution of the Churches of Chriſt. That the Order and Government of thoſe Churches, are Eſtabliſhed by Divine Inſtitution. What is the Nature of Divine Inſtitutions, and how the Knowledge of them is conveyed to us; that Chriſt hath ſetled Ordinances for Worſhip, and Diſcipline, which are to continue unto the End of the World; that the Power of Church Cenſures, and Excommunication hath its Inſtitution in a more eſpecial manner from Chriſt, as Head of the Church.

CHAP. I.

A Brief Scheme of the ſeveral Opinions concerning the Conſtitution, and Government of the Church of Chriſt. The Truth Stated, and Vindicated.

IF it were granted that the Churches in the New Teſtament, were formed and fixed Bodies, yet the queſtion would ſtill remain about the Tenure whereon they hold their Formation and Conſtitution; of what kind that Tenure is, whether of Divine Inſtitution; and therefore it will be moſt Seaſonable, and Conducing to the Underſtanding of all that follows, to give a general Proſpect of the ſeveral Opinions about Church Conſtitution, that are amongſt us, ere we proceed.

There are three eminently differing Opinions, one of which will certainly prove to be the Truth of God, and which ſoever of them (when all of them are once throughly and fairly examined) ſhall be found to be the Truth, we ſhall Rejoyce, though it prove that we do ſuffer loſs in our own.

1. Our Presbyterian Brethren hold the Inſtitution of Church-State, to fall upon the whole univerſal Church, as one great Body by Inſtitution; and then likewiſe upon all the parts thereof, according to the Diviſion and Subdiviſion of the whole into ſeveral Subordinations of greater and leſſer Bodies, or fixed Aſſemblies, National, Provincial, Claſſical, or Congregational; ſo as the Univerſal Church on Earth being by Chriſts Inſtitution, a Body Politick, and a Kingdom in the Total Conſideration of it, and being a Similar Body, conſiſting of Similar or like parts for State and Condition, it becomes throughout ſuch in all parts thereof. Even as every part of water hath the Nature of the whole, ſo every Integral Church, be it leſſer or greater,

National,

Church National, Provincial, Congregational, &c. as they are all Churches, ſo in their Proportion, they are all of them Seats of Government by an equal Uniform, general Inſtitution; and the whole being Ordained ſuch, each part, by Aſſociation and Conſent, doth become ſuch alſo: For Chriſt by one great Charter granted to the whole, did at once Authorize and Endow all ſuch particular Subordinations with Eccleſiaſtical Power; only left the Diſtribution of this vaſt and great Common-Wealth and Pody Politick, into its parts greater or leſſer, to be made by General Rules for Edification and Order, as the Law of Nature and Human Wiſdom ſhould ſee fit. But yet all is ordered with this Law, that the leſſer Bodies ſhould be ſubject to the greater, from top to bottom, and ſo all to the Church Univerſal, and the Judicature thereof; ſo as Judicatory Appeals might be made from the leſs to the greater, by vertue of this Divine Right granted to the whole. And this is ſaid to have been the Scope of Chriſt in his firſt Inſtitution, Tell the Church; and by it this kind of Power and Government being wholy given to the Elders of the Church, is to be Tranſacted by them in their Conſiſtories and Aſſociations, even from Congregational to General Councils, and is therefore only Practicable by the meetings of Elders choſen and ſent from the leſſer Aſſemblies to the greater, as Abſtracted from, and without the convening of the Saints, whereof they are Elders; for Convention of all the particular Saints, is not only Unpracticable in thoſe greater Bodies, but in Claſſical Aſſemblies too. And we do freely give this Teſtimony of Honour to this Opinion, that of all other grounds unto which the Presbyterian Divines have in theſe latter Days, when put to prove their Government, had Recourſe, this is the moſt Conſiſtent and Faireſt Principle (if it could be proved) to rear up all their Subordinations at once, and to Endow the Conſtitution of them with a Divine Right, which as the Soul in the Body will be equally Diffuſed through every part thereof, and which if it prove true, we muſt all turn Presbyterians.

2. Some other Godly and Reverend Divines, who do with us wholy Reject any ſuch Politick Modell, as an Invention of Man, (which Reareth up a Worldly Frame and Theater for Elders, through ſeveral Stairs, to enter upon the Heritage of the Lord) yet agree with our Presbyterian Brethren in this Principle of the Catholick Univerſal Church, being a Similar Body in the whole, and all the parts thereof. So that as a Congregation is in no further Reſpect or Conſideration a Church, nor to any other End, Uſe, or Purpoſe, than is the Univerſal: So likewiſe the Warrant for, and the Priviledge of Congregational Churches, being a Seat for Ordinances and Elders, is but from the bare general Grant and Priviledge given to the Church Univerſal, which is one Day Ordained to meet together in Heaven, and ſhould now on Earth Aſpire to the State and Perfection thereof. And by vertue of this Canon Law and Charter only, Saints gather into particular Churches, and enjoy Ordinances, and all power of Government executed therein. So that the whole Conſtitution and Order of Congregational Churches, is only by vertue of that General Law of Communion of Saints, without any further Superadded Inſtitution of Chriſt, either Effectively ordaining of all ſuch other Bodies of Saints, to be the Seat of Ordinances, or Endowing them with any further Priviledge or Power of Government, than the whole Body of Saints in the World hath. In a word, the Appointment of Congregational Bodies is according to this Opinion only virtual, and ariſing from the General grant to the Univerſal Church, and founded but upon the Common Law of the Communion of Saints. Theſe two Opinions, though thus agreeing in that forementioned General Principle, yet do differ, as two Extreams. The one, as we conceive, diffuſeth a pretended Inſtituted Policy too vaſtly, engaging all Saints, and particular Churches to Subject their Conſciences, under pain of Excommunication, to the Determinations and Deciſions of all the Clergy in the World; which is by this Conſtituted as one Body, Inſpired with this Soul of Government in all the Diviſions of them, as parts of the whole; and ſuch a Government may poſſibly iſſue in the greateſt Tyranny. The other whilſt they betake themſelves to the Common Priviledge of the Church Myſtical and Univerſal, and meerly to that Law of Communion of Saints that is therein, doth hereby ſhut out and Exclude all Government or Cenſures, but ſuch as the Common Law of Communion of Saints, and the Law of Nature common to all Societies, will admit, yea, and in the Conſequence thereof, takes away all Inſtitutions whatſoever of any ſuch Diſcipline or Cenſures, whereof if particular Congregations be found the Seat, thoſe Congregations themſelves alſo muſt be by Inſtitution.

3. We profeſs, (as in other things) ſo in this to run a middle way, which for ought we yet ſee, the Scripture chalks out to us.

1. We maintain that Aſſertion of a Church Univerſal, as the General Body of all, and that particular Churches are as parts thereof: Yet ſo as with our own Ameſius (and others who have been Eſteemed Orthodox Divines) we conceive that the notion or conſideration of Church, which the Univerſal Body of Saints ſtands under, is meerly and purely Myſtical, and ſuch alſo to be the Union and Communion thereof, as with Chriſt, ſo of all the Members thereof among themſelves. And further we Aſſert, this Notion or Name of Myſtical Church, to be given not only to the Inviſible company of the Elect, and Real Members of Chriſt the Head; but to the viſible company of Profeſſors of Chriſtianity, that do walk as Saints, and are eſteemed as ſuch by Saints through the World. Unto whom as taken in the Lump and outward view, as Chriſt is reckoned to be an outward Head to them, as on Earth conſidered; ſo upon whom alſo taken in the lump and outward viſibility, as well as upon the inviſible company, the Notion of the Church Myſtical may be put, it being in this Diſtinction oppoſed to a Church inſtituted, or that which is a politick Body under Chriſt.

2. We Aſſert, that untill the Myſtical Body of the Elect ſhall meet together in Heaven, God hath appointed and ordained the viſible Saints on Earth, being diffuſed over all the World, and thin Sown therein, to be knit together in particular Bodies, over which he hath appointed, Elders, Paſtors, and Teachers, Officers by his Inſtitution; which Bodies conſiſting of both, ſhould be the Publick Holders forth of his Truth and Worſhip, and the Subject of the Priviledge of all Ordinances, and Seats alſo of a Power and Government, for theſe Saints to be Subjected to, and Reduced in caſe of Scandalls; And the Honour of Chriſt is hereby to be vindicated, and his Ordinances kept pure, although there were no Chriſtian Magiſtrates in the World, that would take Cognizance of ſuch Scandalls.

3. And further we conceive, that the gathering of Saints into ſuch particular bodies to Chriſt, thus to be the Seat of ſuch Officers, Ordinances of Worſhip and Government, is by a General Inſtitution and Endowment of Chriſt, over and above the Catholick Warrant of Communion of Saints, although including and taking in all the Rules and Laws thereof. And accordingly the meaſure and proportion and extent of theſe bodies, and what the limits and bounds thereof were to be, is ſet forth by Inſtitution; as alſo the Organization of this body, what kind of Officers or Original Members ſhall be in it. Theſe are all to be found ſet out by him, as in his Wiſdom he foreſaw would beſt ſuit thoſe ends which this Inſtitution of ſuch bodies of Saints ſhould ſerve to, and as ſhould be fitted to the Priviledges theſe bodies are endowed with; Chriſt having alſo (as to his own Inſtitution he doth) made an anſwerable ſpecial bleſſing (which ſpecial promiſe of bleſſing doth indeed, if there were no more, make an Inſtitution and Ordinance of that thing to which 'tis made) of being with ſuch Aſſemblies of his, over and above the bleſſing which from the Virtual Catholick Relation and Communion between Chriſtians in general, and on occaſional ways, would flow.

4. Theſe inſtituted bodies of Churches, we humbly conceive to be, for the bounds and proportion, or meaſure of them, only Congregational, which are the fixed Seat and Subject of all Ordinances of Worſhip, and who are the Seat of all ſorts of Officers or Organical Members, that ſerve for the uſe of the whole; and that theſe alſo, by and with their Officers, are the ſole Seat of that Government, and the Acts thereof, which may more properly be termed Government, i. e. that is, judicially to bind the Soul, (which is accompanied with a promiſe, that ſuch a Soul ſhall be bound in Heaven) and in Chriſts Name alſo to deliver to Satan, &c. which is an inſtituted puniſhment, over and above the Sphere of that Catholick Communion, and beyond what any company of Angels or Saints as Members of, or by vertue of the Catholick grant, can or ought to take on them, execute and pronounce: And from which rightly Adminiſtred, there can be no Appeal; nor of which no Act of Repeal can be made by any Supream Court on Earth; though, if not rightly Adminiſtred, it is null, and of no force. And theſe bodies thus Endowed hath Chriſt appointed, as under Schools of his Foundation, wherein by the Enjoyment of all his Ordinances, his Saints living therein whilſt on Earth, might be Tutored, built up and form'd and faſhioned for that great Univerſity, when all the Saints ſhall meet in Heaven;

Heaven. And thus over and above the general Communion of Saints, there are, and ought to be, by Chriſts Inſtitution, Political, Eccleſiaſtical Bodies or Churches, that are the Seat of a Spiritual Government, wherein we joyn with the firſt Opinion.

5. And yet we further affirm, that out of the Circuit and Bounds of theſe inſtituted Priviledged Seats for Worſhip and Government, taking all theſe Saints, Elders, and Churches, whether in a City, Province, Nation, yea, the whole World, among them as ſo conſidered, that Common Law of the Myſtical Communion of Saints, which the Catholick Relation obligeth to, takes place; ſo that as there is a Law of ſingle Communion and Non-communion, between Saint and Saints, in caſe of offence, ſo between Church and Church, or greater or leſſer Combinations of Churches, as occaſion is, or may be, of intercourſe either way. And therein Churches proceed with Churches, not politicè, or as Arm'd by Chriſt with a Judicial Power of giving up to Satan; but they proceed and deal each with other, modo Myſtico, or with a Moral Declarative Power only; which Law of Myſtical Communion, yet obligeth them to all the ſame Duties for Subſtance, each to other, that that Political Power obligeth them in a Congregation unto. And thus far we alſo joyn with the ſecond Opinion, Humbly profeſſing, that either to make the Church univerſal in the whole, and all the parts, to be a Political Inſtituted Body, Arm'd with Government, as the firſt Opinion doth; or on the other ſide, to make the Communion and Power in Congregational Bodies, and the Inſtitution thereof, to be but Virtual, from what is given to the Church Univerſal, and but ſimilar thereunto, as the ſecond Opinion doth; to be both of them miſtaken: apprehending much rather the Truth, to lye in a Communion of Saints here on Earth, compounded, and made up (for the kind thereof) of both kinds of conſtitution; the one a fixed inſtituted and political Communion, ſuperadded to the obligation of the Myſtical Relation of Saints one to another, as ſuch, and this to be in and between the Members of a particular Congregation; the other ſimply Myſtical, and Moral, and Occaſional, and that to be between Congregations each with other, and indeed between all the Churches in the World. So as whilſt theſe Saints are knit and united into ſuch particular Churches, for the Enjoyment of Ordinances, with power to preſerve them pure, they yet are both, as Saints, and as a Church to hold all ſorts of correſpondency, and are by Chriſt obliged to all ſorts of Communion, and which accordingly we do profeſs to hold and maintain with all Saints and Churches, according to the ſeveral Degrees of Purity amongſt them.

This being a true Scheme, and general proſpect of the ſeveral Opinions amongſt us, the particulars of all which we ſhall in order purſue in this Diſcourſe, in ſuch a due Method as may conduce moſt to clear the Truth; I ſhall now apply my ſelf to conſider, whether theſe particular Churches, or fixed Bodies of Saints and Elders, (whether Congregational or Claſſical, or what ever elſe they ſhall prove to be) are to hold their conſtitution and formation by any ſpecial Divine Inſtitution. For the clearing of which, we ſhall have occaſion firſt to have to do with that principle forementioned, whether over and above the General Charter of the Church univerſal, and the Laws and Rules of the Communion of Saints belonging thereunto, there is not a Superadded Inſtitution for the conſtitution of particular Churches, and for the endowing them with theſe Priviledges, which as Churches is found to be beſtowed upon them; and then we ſhall prove, that even the ſetting forth the bounds and limits of thoſe Bodies, the extenſive power of Elders, and meaſure and proportion of theſe Churches that are the Seat of Government, muſt alſo neceſſarily be ſet forth by ſuch a ſpecial Divine Inſtitution.

CHAP. II.

That the Conſtitution of a Church, and the Rules of its Order and Government, are Eſtabliſhed by a certain Inſtitution of Chriſt. Some Propoſitions laid down in order to the Demonſtration of this Truth.

THE Church univerſal, is a Church by an higher ground than by that Inſtitution, it is rather the Object of Gods Decree. And their meeting in Heaven, and making a general Aſſembly, is not ſo much by virtue of a command, or by appointment declared in his Revealed Will, as by a Decree of his ſecret will, and through the Efficacious Power of it, the ſame that raiſeth them, wraps them up in the Clouds, and after carries them to Heaven, and preſents them together at latter day, as it is ſaid of Chriſt, Pſ. 2. As their Worſhip, there is only natural Worſhip, not any thing that belongs to the ſecond Command, ſo, nor is their meeting by virtue of that command. But now if all the Saints on Earth were no more than could meet in one place, yet that theſe ſhould meet as a Church for ſuch and ſuch Ordinances, which in Heaven they ſhall not have, this muſt needs be from an Inſtitution of Chriſt's, over and above their being the Church in general; as the Ordinances themſelves are Eſtabliſhed by ſuch an Inſtitution. For they gather together in his Name, and Excommunicate in his Name, as well as they Baptize in his Name; and therefore if Baptiſm be an Inſtitution, their gathering together muſt be an Inſtitution alſo. And indeed if the Government and the Worſhip be by Inſtitution, the ſeat or ſubject muſt needs be ſo. As if the Officers and the Laws of a Colledge or Incorporate Town be by a Law and a Charter, the Colledge or Incorporation it ſelf, the form of it, and warrant to be ſo, muſt be much more. Nothing in any Kingdom depends more upon a Charter and the Supream Authority, than the imbodying of Men into ſocieties, and the enabling them to Act in them. And ſo the conſtitution of theſe Spiritual Bodies, the Churches, hath a neceſſary dependency on this Authority of Chriſt. Thoſe Bodies to be ruled, they are called the Houſe of God, and the Church of God. If he Rule not his own Houſe well, how ſhall he take care of the Church of God? 1 Tim. 3. 5. Why is it called the Church of God, but becauſe of Gods Inſtitution, as the Lords Supper, and the Lords Day, have their Names from the Lords Inſtitution? And it is called the Houſe of God, and the Temple of God; and as the Temple was by Inſtitution, ſo this Church of Chriſt too.

And indeed, that to which a promiſe is, for that there is a command; which is all one with an Inſtitution; and an Inſtitution is conveyed in a promiſe. In the Old Teſtament all their Solemn Aſſemblies, (which were the Types of ours) were by an Inſtitution, both who, and where, and how, as thoſe for Worſhip in the Temple, the Synhedrim for Government; therefore the things Typified much more.

But farther, what the Apoſtles did teach the Saints to become, for that there is an Inſtitution; for they taught nothing but what Chriſt commanded them, Matth. 28. ult. And when they had taught them to become Churches, they wrote to them as ſuch, and the Holy Ghoſt owneth them as ſuch. And the Holy Ghoſt did Ordain, by Inſtitution, Paſtors and Teachers, and ſet them as Overſeers over each Flock, as an whole Flock, Acts 20. 28. Therefore ordained the bounds of their Flocks too.

Again, the Seven Churches are Seven Candleſticks, whereof the Type was the Candleſtick of God, made by Gods Appointment. In the Candleſtick there were two things, 1. Matter, which was Gold, that they ſhould be Saints. 2. Forme, which is therefore Chriſt's Inſtitution, to be caſt into ſuch or ſuch a Mould. And for one Candleſtick then, there are many Candleſticks now. Seven in, Rev. 1.20. And the Form of theſe many are now as well from Chriſt, as the Form of that one then was.

And as it is Gods Houſe, he hath not left it unto Man to Frame his building to what proportion he pleaſeth; Chriſts body Inſtituted, (which is Reſembled unto the Natural body, throughout the Epiſtles) is to have ſet Limits of it, a Maximum quod ſit; and as the Natural body, if it have all the parts that can have communion natural in the ſame common Acts of Nature together, though it be never ſo ſmall, is a perfect body, ſo it hath alſo a preſcription of bigneſs, and bounds are ſet it, both for parts, and a Maximum quod ſit, for proportion of ſtature, which none ſhould exceed. Thus Chriſt hath alſo conſtituted his Body the Church, in a due meaſure and proportion.

But to make a diſtinct demonſtration, that the Form, and Order of Congregational Churches is of Chriſt's Inſtitution, I ſhall proceed in this Method.

1. I ſhall prove that God hath not left the Government of his Church to be ordered by the Laws of Nature, or the Arbitrary Maximes of Humane Reaſon, but hath preſcribed Rules for it by his own Inſtitution.

2. I ſhall ſhew what is the nature of a Divine Inſtitution.

3. I ſhall deſcribe the ways whereby Chriſt hath derived his Inſtitutions to us, to aſcertain us that they are Genuinely his own.

4. I ſhall demonſtrate the Order, and Worſhip, and Ordinances of the Churches of Chriſt, to be of a perpetual continuance.

5. I ſhall prove that Excommunication, being more than Non-communion or caſting out of the Church, hath in it a ſuper-added Inſtitution of Chriſt.

6. I ſhall at laſt ſhew that a Congregational Church, is by Chriſt's Inſtitution the only Subject, and Seat of Church Government; and the Grand Charter of the Power of the Keys is granted to it alone.

1. To prove that Chriſt hath not left his Churches deſtitute of Rules for her Government, but hath eſtabliſhed them in his Divine Word of the Scriptures, I ſhall lay down, and demonſtrate theſe following Propoſitions.

Propſition I. That the Right Government of a Church, is a part of Worſhip under the New Teſtament; which is evident;

1. Becauſe all means of Worſhip are called The Keys of Heaven, Mat. 16. 18, 19. And by Excommunication Men Bind and Looſe, as well as by Preaching or by Praying. 2. This Act of Government, Excommunication, is parallell'd with Prayer; The Agreement of the Church to caſt out is parallell'd with this, What two ſhall agree to ask, Mat. 18. 19. 3. Excommunication is done in the Name of Chriſt and in the Power of Chriſt, which is the ſame thing that makes Baptiſm a part of Worſhip? Baptize them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt, Mat. 28. 19. So as the Lord's Supper alſo is conſtituted. 4. In Rom. 12. all is called λογικὴ λατρέια, reaſonable Worſhip, which referreth to Ruling afterward, as well as Teaching and Exhorting. And 5. If a contribution to uphold the Miniſtry, and giving to poor Chriſtians, be called a Sacrifice, and a Service done unto God, 2 Cor. 9. 12. (the word is λεὶτυργια) then Church cenſures alſo as well may have that name; and therefore muſt have a rule for them as well as other parts of Worſhip. And therefore now to determine as who ſhall Baptize, and who ſhall Adminiſter the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, depends upon his having a Power to do it; ſo to determine who ſhall Excommunicate, there is ſome Rule to direct us.

Prop. II. The Law of Nature is not ſufficient to ſet up any thing which is parallel to a Divine Inſtitution.

As for example. If the Government of Congregations by Elders and Officers be in a particular Congregation ſet up by Divine Inſtitution; No Law of Nature alone will be ground enough to erect the like Power in any other company of Elders, if they have not that other by Inſtitution. The Laws of Nature may indeed direct us how to manage Ordinances that Chriſt hath erected, according to the common nature in which thoſe Ordinances partake with other things civil. As if that there be many Prophets in a Church, the Law of Nature will teach that they ſhould not ſpeak many at once, becauſe it is againſt the end of Prophecying; but the Laws of Nature would not be ſufficient to erect an Order of Prophecy in the Church, which Jeſus Chriſt hath not appointed, although Speech is a natural means to perſuade by. The Laws of Nature will alſo teach us to take the benefit of Ordinances, if they be Inſtituted by Chriſt. As ſuppoſing that Chriſt had appointed a Superiour Power, a Superiour Court over Churches, having the ſame Power which the Churches have: The Laws of Nature would have taught me to have made uſe of this, but would never have warranted the erection of ſuch, armed with the ſame Power, if Jeſus Chriſt ſhould not be found to have appointed it. The Propoſition is evident by theſe Reaſons;

1. Becauſe that Inſtitutions and Ordinances flow from Chriſt, not as the Author of Nature, but as the Author of Grace, as Lord and King of his Church, and ſo depend upon his Will; if therefore he by his Will have made one inſtitution, the Laws of Nature cannot make a parallel to it, and parallel it is if it be ſuppoſed to have the ſame power and influence that the other hath which Chriſt hath inſtituted.

2. Nothing can work beyond its own Sphere; And therefore, tho' the Laws of Nature may be ſanctified to ſubſerve the inſtitutions of Chriſt, yet not to raiſe up any thing anew parallel to an inſtitution of Chriſt. A Spiritual Court parallel to ſuch a Spiritual Court as Chriſt hath inſtituted, is what exceedeth the power of Nature, as truly as that it is not in the power of Nature to produce a Spiritual Act of Grace, parallel to what the Holy Ghoſt produceeth. Natural gifts, and natural parts may be ſubſervient unto Grace that ſanctifieth them, but they cannot produce or educe the leaſt Spiritual Act. And thus Chriſt's Government excludeth not Nature, but will take in the help of it, but exceeding it; Nature cannot be the riſe of any part of it.

Prop. III. That there muſt be a ſpecial Divine Inſtitution for the Government of the Churches of Chriſt.

For all Church Power and Government which hath a Spiritual puniſhment annexed to it, muſt be by ſpecial Inſtitution; and that is in a ſpecial manner Government, by a Divine Inſtitution, which hath a Power annexed to it, to inflict a Spiritual puniſhment beyond what is in the common nature of the act it ſelf to do. And therefore although to withdraw from every brother that walketh inordinately, be from the common Law of Chriſtianity, in all ſorts of Arbitrary converſe; yea and to throw out of a fixed Body or Society, to have power to do ſo, be from the common and ordinary nature of all other Societies, if the Laws of thoſe Societies be ſo and ſo tranſgreſſed; yet that there ſhould be a delivering over to Satan with the Power of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that this ſhould be annexed to the caſting of a Man out, this is apparently by Special Inſtitution, for no Body of Men by the common Law of Nature could have power ſo to do. So alſo although upon all admonitions there is a binding the Sin upon the Conſcience, ſo far forth as the nature of the Sin is laid upon it, which is common to all other reproofs of any kind in other ſorts: Yet that there ſhould be a promiſe that where ſuch and ſuch, rather than others, do bind Sin upon a Man's Conſcience on Earth, by their Sentence and Judgment, this Sin is alſo bound upon them in Heaven, Mat. 18. 18. this muſt be from an Inſtitution ſuperadded. Whether Chriſt's Will that this ſhould be done by ſuch and ſuch, be apparent to us by an expreſs command in the Letter of it, or is held forth in ſome example or ſome promiſe which do imply it: Yet it is an Inſtitution becauſe it holds forth a ſupernatural efficacy. For whatſoever is ſet apart by God Electively, and cull'd out from other things to be the inſtrument of a ſupernatural power and efficacy, that is ſuch by Divine Inſtitution; and all ſuch power as is thus ſupernatural, muſt be diſpoſed of and executed according to his Mind, by his own inſtruments, and where he hath placed it. Every man is to admoniſh his Brother upon that common ground, that he is to love him and not to hate him; this is a common ground belonging to all ſorts of Men whatſoever; but that any ſelect company of Men ſhould be peculiarly ſingled out to have power to admoniſh a Man, to bind Sin upon him, this is from the Inſtitution of Chriſt. And that they ſhould have the promiſe of the power of Jeſus Chriſt to accompany them, that this ſhould be in order to a throwing the Sinner out, and a delivering him up to Satan if he repent not, this is from Chriſt's Inſtitution. Thus God doth take things that by the common Law of Chriſtianity do ſerve for ſuch an end, and yet over and above puts an Inſtitution upon them to ſerve for ſome ſpecial end in ſuch a way, by ſuch and ſuch perſons; as in thoſe inſtances given of reproving and admoniſhing by any Chriſtian, which ſerveth to a Spiritual end, he takes it up to be performed in a Church and by Elders in publick, in a more ſpecial manner, to have a further efficacy in it, becauſe he hath put a further Inſtitution upon it. Thus alſo the gifts out of out which Men Preach and Pray, they are common to multitudes of Men, and are given in a providential way, and not by Inſtitution; but yet that Men ſhould exerciſe theſe by way of Office, in a conſtant ſelected way, and ſeparated hereunto, this is by ſpecial Inſtitution. So likewiſe God doth take ſuch things as have a ground in the Law of Nature, and over and above ſtamps his Inſtitution upon them in a ſupernatural way further than naturally they ſerve to. So that Chriſt's Inſtitutions they do not exclude natural grounds, but comply with them, only elevate them, cauſe them to exceed their natural power and force, with a peculiar efficacy and bleſſing, and ſo fall in with the Rules of Nature. Thus that not two or three ſhould ſpeak at once in a Church, it is in it ſelf a Law of Nature common to all men, that Women ſhould not ſpeak in publick, but be ſilent, it is the Law of Nature; yet over and above they are delivered as the Commands of God, which he that is Spiritual acknowledgeth as the Apoſtle ſaith, 1 Cor. 14. It is the Law of Nature that no Man ſhould War upon his own Charges, that the Labourer is worthy of his Hire, &c. and the Apoſtle alledgeth theſe for Miniſters Maintenance, 1 Cor. 9. 7. and yet withal addeth, ſo I ordain in all the Churches, and makes an Inſtitution of it. And for the due companies of Men to meet and aſſemble themſelves together; and no more to aſſemble than can meet in one place to be edified by Ordinances, agrees with that Law of Nature that is common to it as to other things. But yet this which had but a natural and moral foundation, hath Jeſus Chriſt now made an Inſtitution of, and hath therefore put His own Name upon it, and called it, A gathering together in his Name, and he hath enabled them with a power beyond the power of nature in the throwing of a Man out, for it is to give him up to Satan.

Chap. I.

So alſo in the judging of a Man for having committed a ſin there is always a kind of cenſure. In a large ſenſe indeed, Vita eſt cenſura, and thus a man condemns and cenſures another by his practice and example, and ſo a Godly Man doth judge Wicked Men, and they are reproved and judged by all the Saints; but there is alſo a ſpecial judicature out of Authority, and the power of Jeſus Chriſt accompanying of it, namely that ſpoken of in 1 Cor. 5. 12 when he ſaith, Do not ye judge thoſe that are within? What have I to do to judge them that are without? Therefore this is by ſpecial Inſtitution. And in this place of the Corinths compared with, Chap. 6. this differing way of Judgment, one by way of Inſtitution, and the other by way of the common Law of Nature, ſeems to be held forth by the Apoſtle himſelf, for when he comes to ſpeak of judging the inceſtuous perſon for his ſin, with a ſpiritual power, the Power of the Lord Jeſus, he makes that a ſetled Government, do not ye judge them that are within? As they were a Body to Chriſt. But when in chap. 6. he ſpeaks of taking up differences about things of this Life, though he would have the Saints do it among themſelves by way of Arbitration, and not to carry it out of themſelves (for the ſake of avoiding ſcandal) to Heathen Magiſtrates, yet this latter he doth found only on the Canon Law: It is not an Ordinance though it was Chriſt's Will and Command it ſhould be in that caſe. Therefore he doth not bid them go to the Elders to take up differences, or to the whole Church, but he bids them take whom they would, the leaſt Saint, who is able to judge, upon that common ground of ability, whereby one day they ſhall be able to judge the World. So that this latter was only occaſional, and by way of Arbitration, according to the Law of Nature, whereas the other was a conſtant and ſetled Government, and that inveſted with ſpiritual power ſupernatural, which the other is not.

All the duties that are performed in a Church they are duties amongſt all Chriſtians by the common Law of Chriſtianity; for by the Law of Love, they are to inſtruct, to pray for, to reprove, to avoid, &c. as occaſion is: But that all theſe ſhould be performed in a publick body of Saints, gathered together, not occaſionally but fixedly, and that ſpecial perſons ſhould have the power or part of the power committed to them, ſeparated thereunto, and that it ſhould be done in ſuch and ſuch an order; all this both becauſe of the conſtancy of it, of the electiveneſs of it, and the ſpecial power and efficacy that doth accompany it over and above what is promiſed in an ordinary way to the common Law of Chriſtianity; muſt needs be an Inſtitution.

So that whatſoever be the ſubject or the inſtrument in a conſtant and elective way of a ſupernatural power, or a ſupernatural Adminiſtration over and above what is common to all Chriſtians, or Societies of Men; that Power muſt be placed by Inſtitution, whoever hath it, or wherever it is. It is not a ſupernatural quality indeed, but it is a relative reſpect, whereby a company of Men are called by God, and enabled unto a ſupernatural adminiſtration, which a ſpecial efficacy ſhall accompany; and ſo by vertue of God's Promiſe it is concomitantly a ſupernatural power, though not inherent.

And yet it is not ſo to be underſtood, as if that ſuch a power ſhould always, for the effect, have that Efficacy that it is aſſigned to, for that is as God pleaſeth. He works not as natural Agents do, becauſe God's promiſe to accompany his Ordinances is in a free way; as in Preaching the Word, though it is an Ordinance, yet it had not always the effect, though Chriſt himſelf, and the Apoſtles Preached it: It might always have an iſſue indeed one way or other, and be a means to condemn Men, becauſe they receive it not; but it had not always that effect, for which it was more principally and directly appointed, as natural Agents have.

And ſo on the other ſide, we deny not but that Admonitions and other means which run according to the Law of the New Creature and Chriſtianity, which one Saint is to perform to another, may have the like effects, through Gods Diſpenſation, that Excommunication hath, to bind ſin upon a Mans conſcience, give him up to Satan to terrifie him, and the like; even as God alſo may bleſs private inſtructions, yea, the private Example of a private Chriſtian to Convert an Heathen, yea, and that alſo when his own Ordinance will not do it, 1 Pet. 2. 12. But yet ſtill Church Admonition, and Excommunication, is an Ordinance in a ſpecial manner, which the other is not. So as becauſe that Gods Power Supernaturally muſt concur for the effecting of what it is Ordained for, hence therefore it muſt be ſeated, where God would have it be, by a ſpecial Inſtitution, and not miſplaced, or elſe he will not work in it, and with it. If a Man had ſtirred the Waters, God would not have wrought; or if Satan had done it, he would not have wrought; but when the Angel did it, he did, John 5. 4. All ſuch Supernatural Adminiſtrations they are limited; as the power is from God, ſo in whom this power ſhould be, is alſo from him, and by his Appointment. Though Magiſtrates are the Ordinance of God in this General Reſpect, that it is his Will and Command, that there ſhould be Magiſtrates; yet the power that God accompanieth Magiſtrates withal in their Adminiſtration, is not Supernatural to thoſe ends for which they are appointed, farther than in this proportion, as in general he hath appointed Magiſtrates to be his Vicegerents. And hence therefore, what ſort of Magiſtrates to have, whether Monarchical, or Ariſtocratical, of what extenr their Dominions ſhall be, and the like, is ſtill left to Men; becauſe the power that the Magiſtrate hath of any kind, it is indeed executively but the power of the People committed to him, and betruſted to him, whoſe power he acts, ſo as what he pardons the People pardon, what he puniſheth the People puniſh; the Peoples power is engaged in it; and hence as Solomon ſaith, in the Word of a King there is power, Eccleſ. 8. 4. Hence they are called Humane Creations, though an Ordinance of God, 1 Pet. 2. 13. Rom. 13. 1. But that Supernatural Eccleſiaſtical power, that Jeſus Chriſt doth appoint, is not ſimply an Ordinance, that there ſhould be Miniſters in the general, that ſhall have this or that power, leaving it unto Men to appoint what ſort of Miniſters, whether in a way of Monarchy, or in a way of Ariſtocracy, whether Popes, or Biſhops, &c. And ſo likewiſe as to the Seat or Relation over which theſe Officers ſhall have power, and the extent of it. But theſe muſt be all Divine Creations and Inſtitutions, as the ſort of Magiſtrates and extent of Commonwealths is a Humane Creation. If the power that theſe did manage, were immediately the power of Men, or given to them by the Church, as that of Magiſtrates is by the Common-wealth, then indeed the ſeveral Adminiſtrations might be appointed by Men, and the bounds thereof ſet forth; for the power they have, would be proportioned to the cauſe or riſe of it. Magiſtrates as they have their power thus from Men by Humane Creation, ſo the puniſhments that they inflict are but corporal puniſhments, which the People that ſet them up can inflict. Indeed Rebellion againſt the lawful Magiſtrate, works Damnation in the Iſſue, by conſequence, becauſe it is a ſin againſt the general Ordinance of God; but yet it is, but as any other ſin brings Damnation. But now in Church power, there is a ſpecial Supernatural Efficacy of God, immediately accompanying it; and therefore this power, as it can no way be delegated by the Perſon or Perſons that have it, ſo as they ſhould make any one Vicars or Subſtitutes to execute it for them, as the Biſhops do the Chancellors; ſo alſo by the ſame ground, it cannot be placed or ſeated, but where Chriſt would have it by his Commiſſion. For if the perſons that already have it from Chriſt, cannot give it unto another, than to whom Chriſt hath appointed, or to any other body or ſociety, than Chriſt hath appointed, and hath by Inſtitution placed it, then aſſuredly neither Magiſtrates, nor any company of Men whatſoever, can place it but where he would have it.

Chap. I

And ſurely for Excommunication of all other (if for any other Ordinance) there muſt be an Inſtitution, and by whom it ſhall be Adminiſtred in a certain way defined because of all Ordinances, it is the greateſt. If therefore for Preaching, who ſhall Adminiſter it, and where, there is an Inſtitution; then certainly for this, for this is an Act of meer Authority. To Preach is an Act of gift alſo, and he that hath gifts may for the materiality of Preaching, perform all that a Miniſter doth out of gifts; but the Act of delivering to Satan, and the Act of throwing a Man out, are Acts of meer power; do caſt him out of all Ordinances, and therefore of all Ordinances they are the greateſt. And beſides that, it is delivering to Satan with the power of Chriſt, which who can aſſume, but thoſe to whom Chriſt hath committed it? It is to a ſpiritual end; and it is not therefore enough to ſay, that if there be nothing in the Word againſt it, but that theſe and theſe may Excommunicate, that then they may do it; no, there muſt be ſomething in the Word poſitive for it, and that limiteth it, and here placeth it. It will otherwiſe be a nullity, for want of commiſſion in the perſons that do it.

And if that Excommunication were not ſo an Inſtitution, as that alſo the ſort of Perſons to whom it is to be performed, ſhould be by Inſtitution, and were not a delivering up to Satan alſo; then the Magiſtrate could inflict it, as well as the Miniſters of the Church, for he can caſt Men out of ſuch and ſuch a Society, and keep Men from Ordinances, as well as they.

Hence Excommunication being an Ordinance, depending wholly upon Inſtitution, and that which makes Eccleſiaſtical Authority to be properly Government and Juriſdiction, lying in a power ſo to Excommunicate; none may therefore take upon them to Adminiſter this Ordinance, without a ſpecial Commiſſion and Inſtitution; And in this lies the knot of the difference in the controverſie.

Prop. IV. Gods Inſtitution muſt put an Efficacy into all Cenſures.

Nothing in Nature hath further perfection in it, than God hath put into it; therefore much more this holds in power Eccleſiaſtical. Man cannot limit that power of Miniſtry, which he cannot give. All Church cenſures they are accompanied with a Supernatural power, as the word of God is, which hath not in it ſelf a power inherent, to work without the Spirit accompany it. There is this difference between Civil power and Eccleſiaſtical; that though Gods power doth accompany the civil power of the Magiſtrate, becauſe it is his Ordinance, yet he doth not accompany the Acts thereof Supernaturally; but the power that accompanieth the Magiſtrate's Acts, is the power of the People in whoſe Name Magiſtrates execute it; and therefore if the Magiſtrates be reſiſted, the whole People are obliged to back and ſtrengthen him. But here now the Miniſterial power is ordained to convey a ſpecial Supernatural Efficacy from God, and Miniſters do work wholly in his power: The Weapons of our Warfare, are mighty through God, having in us a readineſs to revenge all Diſobedience, 2 Cor. 10.4,5,6. As therefore if the powers of a Kingdom are ingaged in the ſentence of any Court, it muſt be becauſe they have ſet it up and confined it, and given commiſſion, and appointed who ſhould execute it, ſo as if any ſhould exerciſe a power further then they have appointed, they were not ingaged to back it; ſo, nor will God alſo aſſiſt with his power further than as he hath placed it, and where he hath placed it.

Prop. V. That the Conſtitution of Churches is Uniform, and of one kind and ſort.

All Churches are of a like ſort, and, for their Conſtitution and Government, are uniform:

Or elſe, 1. There ſhould be a double conſtitution, one for the one ſort, and the other for the other. And therefore a Claſſicall, and Congregational Church, being two ſeveral ſorts of Churches, in reſpect of their end, the one being for Worſhip, the other for Government; the one a Repreſentative Church (for ſo the Elders in a Claſſis are) the other of the People, or conſiſting of People and Elders both; and being all ſo truly ſeveral Forms of Churches in reſpect of Government, as Oeconomical Government differs from Political, and the like, they cannot both of them be by Divine Inſtitution.

Object. In the Jewiſh Government, both ſmall Towns, and great had entire power.

Anſ. Therefore therein lay their Uniformity; and whilſt power was lodged only in the Elders, and they kept Court in the Gate, it might be ſo, and the ſame Order be preſerved; but it cannot be ſo here, when the People alſo are by Inſtitution taken in, and are to be preſent.

2. When the Apoſtle ſaith, So I Ordain in all the Churches, 1 Cor. 7. 17. there could not be the ſame Ordination of Government and Conſtitution, unleſs there were a uniformity in theſe Churches.

3. Again; Chriſt writing to the Churches of Aſia, in 2 & 3 chap. Rev. He not only calls them ſeven Candleſticks, as being all of the ſame make, uniform, of the ſame parts and the like; but what he writes to one, he writes to all that were Churches, concluding all his Epiſtles thus, Hear what the Spirit ſaith to the Churches, which is all one with what is in, Revel. 22. 16. I ſent mine Angel to teſtifie theſe things in the Churches.

4. And it is argued from that common Type of the viſible Churches, which is ſhewn unto John, Revel. 4. As the Form of the Tabernacle was ſhewn unto Moſes in the Mount; where there are 24. Elders, and 4. Beaſts; and the Acts they do perform, are principally Worſhip, and therefore it is the Form of Congregational Churches.

Parkerus De polit. Eccleſ. lib. 3.

5. Of Theſſalonica he ſaith, 1 Theſſ. 2. 14. That they became followers of the Churches of God, which in Judea are in Chriſt Jeſus; if it had been meant only of following of them in matters of Faith, in receiving of the Goſpel in the Doctrine of it, as every particular Chriſtian doth, he needed not have uſed the Phraſe, Followers of the Churches, but of the Church in Judea, if it had been ſpoken in reſpect, as they were Members of the viſible Church, viſible profeſſors of Chriſtianity. He ſpeaks it therefore alſo, in reference to having received the Goſpel, and caſting themſelves, as a Church, into the ſame form and conſtitution with thoſe Churches; for by reaſon of their form and conſtitution, they are called Churches, as they are Bodies gathered up for Worſhip and Government.

6. For the confirmation of this, add, that the Inſtitution cannot fall both upon congregational and claſſical, but one would deſtroy the other, if it were left arbitrary, to take one or the other.

7. As one Baptiſm, one Body, one Faith, are in the Church Myſtical; ſo one ſort of Body, as well as one Baptiſm, for kind, is Inſtituted in the conſtitution of the Churches of Chriſt.

CHAP. III.

That Chriſt hath by his own Inſtitution, Eſtabliſhed the Order, Diſcipline, and Government of his Churches; proved by ſeveral Arguments.

As there is a Diſtinction commonly made between Diſcipline, and Worſhip, and Doctrine of the Church, ſo ſuch a Diſtinction hath an Apoſtolical ſtamp upon it for its warrant; for materially we find it, though in other Terms, Coloſ. 2. 5. Where by Order among them, he means that which we call Diſcipline, or ordering the Adminiſtration or Government of the Church and Worſhip: And by Faith, that which we call Doctrine, or the Syſteme of Truths to be believed and practiſed, for ſo every where the word is uſed. And ſo in 1 Cor. 11. 34. Having Treated of matters pertaining to Worſhip and Diſcipline, the Adminiſtration of the Lords Supper, &c. he concludes, the reſt will I ſet in order when I come. So 1 Cor. 14. 40. Let all be done Decently, which reſpects the outward circumſtances; and according to Order, which reſpects thoſe Apoſtolical commands about matters of Diſcipline, and ordering, as he calls them, ver. 37. ſuch as he had given in that Chapter, and at other times. Therefore, Tit. 1. 5. when writing to an Evangeliſt about Rectifying matters in Crete, and ordaining Elders in every City, matters that concern Diſcipline, he adds, as I had Ordered thee, or given Order to thee. The word is the ſame in all theſe places. And by Order, he means not ſimply their having all thoſe principally inſtituted Ordinances as are Eſſential, as Preaching the Word, Sacrament, and Cenſure, and Officers to Adminiſter theſe; but all ſuch Rules as the Apoſtles gave for the ordering and adminiſtring thoſe Ordinances right; many of which Rules are; more than meer external circumſtances; and yet not principal Ordinances, but Directions to manage Ordinances, as even thoſe Directions given about prophecying in that, 1 Cor. 14. That they ſhould ſpeak by courſe, and one at once, that the Women ſhould keep ſilence, &c. which yet are points of that Order, he would have them obſerve in their Aſſemblies, ver. 40. And ſo in the Old Teſtament, there was the like uſage. As they had the Ark, ſo they had direction how to carry it, 1 Chron. 15. 2. None ought to carry the Ark but the Levites, for them hath the Lord choſen; and becauſe they carryed it in a Cart, he tells them they ſought not the Lord after the due Order, *v.*13. Now for the Demonſtration of this, that the Order of the Churches of Chriſt is to be diſtinguiſhed from their Doctrine and Worſhip.

1. Conſider, that very place it ſelf, even now cited for this Diſtinction, doth, if viewed, in the context of it, afford Argument for this, the Apoſtle delighting himſelf with a rare and worthy ſight, worthy an Apoſtle's Joy, Col. 2. 5. Though I be abſent in the Fleſh, yet am I preſent with you in the Spirit, joying and beholding your Order, and the ſtedfaſtneſs of your Faith in Chriſt. Where by Spirit, if his own mind and heart be meant, then the meaning is, that both thoſe were Eſtabliſhed according to his own Heart, as he an Apoſtle led by the Holy Ghoſt would have them; therefore he ſays, he was preſent with them in his Spirit. Or if the Holy Ghoſt be meant more immediately, then the meaning is, that in reſpect of thoſe, the ſame Spirit of Chriſt that dwelt in the Apoſtle, and guided him in ſetling the Church in both theſe, was preſent alſo with them in both Faith and Order, both being Eſtabliſhed and Setled among them according to the Dictates of the Holy Ghoſt in the Apoſtle; and therefore he ſays, he was preſent with them in the Spirit, joying in a Spiritual manner to behold both. So that the Coloſſians had all Ordinances and Officers, and all thoſe Ordinances managed by thoſe Officers amongſt them, according to the Directions the Holy Ghoſt had given. This was their Order he rejoyceth in, as well as in their Faith, and is in reſpect of both theſe preſent with them in Spirit. And this being their preſent State in both, he exhorts them to continue herein, in thoſe words, As ye therefore have received Chriſt the Lord, ſo walk ye in him, ver. 6. He ſpeaks in Relation to both theſe, for his Scope is to exhort them to perſevere in what he had before commended them for, which hitherto they had held on in; which was for their Order, as well as Faith, which the Particle therefore implies, as ye have therefore received, ſo walk. And as in their Faith they had received Chriſt Jeſus for their Saviour, ſo in ſubmitting to his Orders and Rules for their Church Government, they had received him for their Lord; and to walk on in both as they had begun, he exhorts them. So that all Churches then, as they had received from the Apoſtles the Doctrine of Faith, ſo directions for Order too, and it was not left to their power, to their Arbitrement, to innovate or alter in either, but to continue to walk as they had begun.

And this further appears to have been his Scope, becauſe he prefaceth this commendation of their Faith and Order, that he might preſerve them from the Errours of ſome who went about to pervert them in both. Into the Order of their Worſhip, there were thoſe that would have obtruded Jewiſh Rites and Ceremonies, of abſtinence from meats, and of Holy Days, and the Jewiſh Sabbath, ver. 16. and ſo a ſeeking God after the old Order of the Jewiſh Church. And into the Doctrine of their Faith, there were ſome that would have introduced things they had not ſeen, *v.*18. by which Doctrines they deſtroyed the foundation of their Faith, not holding the head, ver. 19. Now to ſettle them againſt theſe Innovations both in Doctrine and Rites, and againſt all whatſoever that might ariſe of the like kind, to the end of the World, he tells them that they were in reſpect of that Order and Faith they had received Chriſt in, in him compleat, ver. 10. He and his word was a ſufficient director to to them in both; and they needed neither to be beholden to Humane Philoſophy or Policy, or any Traditions of Men, either to order their Churches for them, otherwiſe than as Chriſt by his Apoſtles had Taught, or to coin new Doctrines. ver. 8. And becauſe that take them, quà Colentes, as Worſhippers in a Church, they were dead with Chriſt from all Rudiments of the World whatever, ver. 20. he wonders that any among them ſhould be ſo ſeduced, and why as though living in the World they would be ſubject to Ordinances, humane of what kind ſoever. Where he takes away the faireſt pretence for ſuch Innovations as could be ; that they, becauſe Men as well as others, lived in the World (the example of which is apt to mould Men much to conform to their practices) and therefore they ſhould take liberty to looſe their Orders in their Church affairs, to come the nearer to the Model of Wordly Governments. Ay, but the Apoſtle tells them that they were Worſhippers in a Church that held of Chriſt as their only Lord, they were of another World, and ſo ought not to ſubject themſelves to any matters of Order, as well as matters of Faith in their Church Adminiſtrations, but what were purely from Chriſt. And in relation to both theſe (which he ſtill carries in his Eye) he uſeth two words, ver. 22. Not to go after the Commandments of Men, in matters of Order ; nor the Doctrines of Men, in matters of Faith, (for ſtill ſuch new invented ways profit not the Soul but periſh in the uſing) nor be deceived by the vain ſhew of what Wiſdom ſoever appeared in either. And although the ſwervings and aberrations there mentioned from right Order and Faith, were more groſs than many of thoſe amongſt us, yet the arguments and exhortations the Apoſtle uſeth (to prevent any of what ſort ſoever for ever) are ſuch as reach ours and all other digreſſions from the right Order and Faith, at firſt delivered by the Apoſtle, and received by the Apoſtolick Churches, and we are to reduce all to the Word, we being compleat in Chriſt for either. The like Exhortation unto this (which further ſtrengtheneth this) we have alſo Rom. 12. 1.

2. I add to this, that there are in the Books of the New Teſtament written by the Apoſtles, manifold particular directions and notes, purpoſely and profeſſedly written to direct in the Government of Churches, and ordering the Worſhip of them. Thus in the Book of the Acts, which is an Hiſtorical Narration, and in the Epiſtles, there are divers and ſeveral paſſages ſcattered, which put together will riſe up to a Platform, whereas for ordering of Commonwealths there are only general Rules, as to be ſubject to the higher Powers, &c. but neither directions nor examples left or intimated how they are to be governed. Thus in 1 Tim. 2. he gives many directions about the publick Prayers of the Church, as for their Order, that they ſhould be firſt made afore any other, That firſt of all, Prayers be made, ver. 1. So for their kind, all ſorts of Prayers, Supplications, Prayers, Interceſſions, &c. For their ſubject, for all Men, Kings, all in Authority ; for the place of Worſhip, not in places dedicated as Holy with difference from others as the Temple was, but I will that Prayers be made every where, &c. ver. 8. For the carriage of Women, that in the Publick Aſſemblies they wear Modeſt Apparel, and not affect that ſplendour, and coſtlineſs as elſewhere, ver. 9. and that they keep ſilence in all adminiſtrations whatever, v. 10. and that they be not Rulers nor Teachers of the Church, v. 11. Then in chap. 3. he gives directions about Officers ; their Diſtinction, Biſhops and Deacons ; their qualifications when to be choſen. And chap. 5. he adds many more of the like nature, both about Officers and Church Cenſures. And what was the ſcope of all this ? Even to ſhew that the ordering and diſpoſing of all ſuch things, are fixed ſome where or other in the writings of the Apoſtles, and left as Rules for us by Apoſtolick Authority. He accordingly in the concluſion of all this, doth more ſtrongly enforce his former directions, 1 Tim. 3. 14, 15. Theſe things write I unto thee (hoping to come unto thee ſhortly (and ſo not writing all that might be written now) but if I tarry long that thou mayeſt know how thou oughteſt to behave thy ſelf in the Houſe of God, which is the Church of the Living God. He puts an Emphaſis upon the Subject he was to converſe in, The Houſe of God, and the Church of the Living God, as if he had ſaid, the Houſe or Family of God, and the ordering of it, requires another manner of skill than the Societies of Men. Timothy was an Evangeliſt, whoſe Office it was to perfect Diſcipline and Doctrine in the Churches, which the Apoſtles firſt planted, and the Evangeliſts received extraordinary gifts to that end, and ſuch gifts as made them to exceed, in Spiritual Wiſdom and Spirit, all the Biſhops, yea all the States in the World, and yet it was not left unto their Wiſdom or Arbitrement, to diſpoſe or give ſuch directions as theſe in Church Affairs and Adminiſtrations ; but they were tyed to the directions of the Apoſtles under whom they were Evangeliſts, and who were guided infallibly by the Spirit, that theſe Evangeliſts might be guided by them to mould Churches accordingly. Timothy's Wiſdom could not direct him herein, but he was to learn and know from Paul, that thou may'ſt know how to behave thy ſelf, &c. 1 Tim. 3. 15. This is a skill then, which depends upon Apoſtolical Revelation. And the directions were not ſo looſly given as they might vary from them, for Paul ſays even to Timothy, How thou oughteſt to behave thy ſelf, as a matter of duty. Neither doth Paul only give general Rules, which might help humane Wiſdom in the ordering of things, for many of the Rules in that Epiſtle are particular, and as expreſs as may be, not only directing to the ſubſtantial parts of Worſhip, but giving directions for the manner, as the word πῶς, How, implies. Yea and he makes theſe things part of that myſtery of Godlineſs, ver. 16. for which Chriſt was made manifeſt in the Fleſh and Aſcended, as well as matters of Doctrine; and ſo they needed a revelation as well as the greateſt truths of Faith. And further he inſinuates the reaſon why he left theſe things in Writing, becauſe the Spirit foretold that there ſhould be an Apoſtacy of the Churches to Popery in the latter times, when there ſhould be a perverſion, as of the Doctrine, ſo of the Apoſtolical Order and Worſhip ſet up in the firſt Churches, he inſtancing in ſome particulars for the reſt, 1 Tim. 4. 1. which Daniel (whence he quotes it) inſtanceth in; Dan. 11. 36, 39. And ſo he writ theſe things that the Church might in after Ages have a Rule to reſtore all things to the Primitive condition again.

The like we have delivered by Paul to Titus another Evangeliſt, Tit. 1. 5. For this cauſe (ſays he) left I thee in Crete, that thou ſhouldeſt ſet in order the things that are wanting, or as the word in the Original is, ἐπιδιορθώσῃ throughly ſet ſtraight or reduce to the right, things that were left unſet right. And he inſtanceth in one matter of Diſcipline for all the reſt, and ordain Elders in every City: And how was he to order all things? And by what rule? ὡς ἐγώ σοι διεταξάμην, as I ordered them to thee, or gave order. Evangeliſts were appointed for Church Diſcipline as well as Doctrine; ſo Timothy you ſee was by the directions given him, and ſo Titus was as appears by the following directions, and as the word διατάττω implies, for that ſignifies the ordering of matters aright. And he was to make an exact or thorough Reformation, and to conſtitute things fully aright: And all this not according to rules of general Wiſdom and Diſcretion, but according to particular and expreſs order from the Apoſtle, as I gave order to thee. Now if the Apoſtle gave particular orders for all theſe things then, and that to abler and wiſer Men than ever were to ſucceed in the Church, and they needed them; then if they have not left in their Writings ſome where or other all the directions they gave to them by Word of Mouth, there had not been ſufficient proviſion made for us in theſe days, nor the ſucceeding Churches in all Ages, who know leſs how to behave our ſelves in the Church of God than they did.

3. Add to this that ſo uſually cited place, Heb. 3. 1, 2, 3. which comes fitly in to ſecond this reaſon, and confirms it; As Moſes is ſaid to be faithful in all God's houſe, ſo Chriſt alſo both in God's and his own Houſe; as Moſes was under the Old Teſtament, ſo Chriſt is under the New; Moſes was concerned in that old viſible conſtituted Church of the Jews (for ſo alſo, Acts 7. 38. it is called, The Church in the Wilderneſs.) And Chriſt in the new conſtituted, Aſſemblies of the Goſpel. Even in the Language of that Epiſtle to the Hebrews as well as in this to Timothy, theſe particular Aſſemblies are called, with reſpect to Chriſt, his Houſe, For Heb. 10. 21. The Apoſtle there ſhewing that as we have an High Prieſt now as they had then, ſo an Houſe of God now as then, We having an High Prieſt over the Houſe of God, he infers from thence, that as we ſhould draw near in Worſhip as the Prieſts did, having our Conſciences ſprinkled, and our Bodies waſhed with pure Water (following the alluſion of the Worſhip in that old Houſe) ſo we ſhould go on with other duties of Church Fellowſhip, as inferences from thence, and among others, he brings in this laſt, Not forſaking the Aſſembling of our ſelves together. And his Argument lies thus, As there was an High Prieſt then, ſo now; as a Publick Worſhip then, ſo now; and as an Houſe of God, and Aſſemblies then to exerciſe Publick Worſhip in, over which the High Prieſt was placed, ſo there muſt be ſuch an Houſe now; which becauſe they are not National but Parochial, therefore he expreſſeth them by the Synagogues of the Jews. Now if ſuch Congregations be God's Houſe appointed for his Publick Worſhip under the New Teſtament, we needed particular directions how to behave our ſelves in this Houſe of God, as much as the Jews of old did in that Houſe which God built then for Publick Worſhip, as that place in Timothy ſhews, That thou mayeſt know how to behave thy ſelf in the Houſe of God, 1 Tim. 3. 15. Yea and Chriſt alſo hath been as faithful to God in directing us now, as Moſes was in ordering all things then, as this place in the Epiſtle to the Hebrews ſhews. Moſes was faithful, as in giving a right Platform of Doctrine to that Church, both of the Law and Goſpel; ſo in giving a perfect Platform of Diſcipline of the Government of that Church, and ordaining all things in the worſhip of it (He made all things according to the Pattern in the Mount, Exod. 25. 40. Heb. 8. 5.) therefore, ſo hath Chriſt done alſo. Faithfullneſs implies going exactly according to Directions given, and Chriſt, his Faithfullneſs lay in giving out thoſe Directions to us his Church. Neither is it only in matters of Faith and manners; for it is ſpoken of Building God's Houſe, under the New Teſtament, which is done by Miniſtry, and the Government of the Church alſo, as well as by Faith and Manners; for the Building and Edification of the Church, is as well by the Miniſtry and Officers of the Church, Eph. 4. *v.*12. and all the Ordinances of it, 2 *Cor.*10.26. as by the Doctrine of Faith and good Manners. Neither is the compariſon of Chriſt with Moſes, as to giving Rules for a Common-wealth,(and ſo this needs not be brought in for a Diſproportion) but as to the Houſe of God only, in which Chriſt only did meddle, and refuſed to be a Judge in other things: And herein as Moſes is ſaid to be faithfull Ἐν ὅλω τῶ ὄικω in the whole Houſe; that is, in every particular about it, a compleat director of all things, in every Room of it; ſo muſt Chriſt be alſo in all ſorts of things, that concerned it any way, as an Houſe to God, whether as Myſtical, in giving Doctrines to Build it; or viſible and conſtituted, in giving Diſcipline. He was faithfull to God in the whole Houſe; that is, in every thing therein, we are an Houſe to God. Neither do we fetch an Argument from the particulars of Chriſt and Moſes; but further from the very Reaſons that the Apoſtles here ſuggeſts. For,

Μὴ ἐγκαταλείποντες τὴν ἐπισυναγωγὴν ἑαυτῶν, Heb. 10. 25.

1. In Reaſon ſays the Apoſtle, *Every Houſe is built by ſome Man, Heb.*3.4. And for the building of it, there muſt be a Platform, and direction in ſome Man's Head; a Pattern there was for the Tabernacle, and for Solomon's Temple given by David, and that by the Spirit, as is warily put in, 1 Chron. 28. 12, 13, 14. and the faithfullneſs of him, that is to build this Houſe, muſt lye in building it, according to that Pattern. Now this Houſe of God, neither under the Old, or New Teſtament, could have Man for its builder; for no Man hath either power to do it, nor skill to give the Pattern; therefore, ver. 3. he ſays, That Moſes, and all the Saints of the Old and New Teſtament, Apoſtles and others, were, and are but a part of the Houſe; and ſo could not give of themſelves directions to build it. Therefore as it is the Houſe of God (both now and then) ſo God muſt be the Maſter-builder, as then ſo now; therefore, ver. 3. he both calleth Chriſt the builder of his Houſe, in thoſe words, he that built the Houſe; and adds, ver. 4. That whereas Men build every other Houſe, he that built this Houſe, is God; but he that built all things, is God: Men love to have the contrivance of their Houſes, to be drawn by themſelves; and are as curious in it, to pleaſe themſelves, as in any other thing; and ſo Chriſt likewiſe.

2. To build, and give directions for the Building of God's Church, as unto Moſes was given, he makes a matter of Honour and Prerogative due only to God and Chriſt, and ſhall Man Arrogate it? ver. 3. This Man, (naming Chriſt) was counted worthy of more Glory than Moſes was, in as much as he who hath Builded the Houſe, hath more Honour than the Houſe, ver. 3. under the word Building, he includes giving the Pattern, for Moſes was but Faithful in doing then according to the Maſter Builder's Direction. Therefore to give but ſuch kind of Directions for the Building and Ordering God's Houſe under the New Teſtament, as Moſes by Direction gave under the Old, about Church Officers, &c. if Men ſhould undertake it, would be to aſſume the glory of that Wiſdom, that is due only to Chriſt. It was the Maſterpiece wherein Solomon's Wiſdom, (Chriſt's Type) is ſaid to have been ſhewn, 2 Chron. 9. 3,4,5. When the Queen of Sheba had ſeen the Wiſdom of Solomon, and the Houſe that he had Built, the Meat of his Table, Attendence of his Servants, and ſo the reſt of the ordering of his Houſe, ſhe profeſſeth ſhe had not heard the one half of the greatneſs of his Wiſdom. And certainly in Chriſt's Houſe which he hath built for his Glory, much more of his Wiſdom is expected. And if God who built that old Houſe of the Jewiſh Church, ſhewed his own Wiſdom in the exact particular directions about it; ſurely in this New Houſe of the New Teſtament, which in True Glory is to exceed that other, and which is built for the glory of his Wiſdom, as well as the former; he hath diſplayed the like, or elſe he hath imparted the Honour to Men under the Goſpel in the framing this better Houſe, which he accounted part of his glory, and ſo reſerved it to himſelf under the Old.

Ch. IV. So that to Sum up this. The Apoſtle doth here at once, exclude both Men's hands and ſkill from the building of any of God's Houſe; both becauſe it is God's Houſe, and themſelves but part of this Houſe. And is it not as abſurd for all Men and Angels, to take on them to direct, (otherwiſe than by direction firſt given) how any of God's Houſe ſhould be made and built, as it were for any part of the Houſe to give order for the reſt? It is as much as for the Clay to ſay to the Potter, why haſt thou made me thus? Is it fit for the whole Houſe, or any part of it, to ſay, make me this Houſe thus? Who ſhall give Chriſt a pattern of any Houſe he hath promiſed to dwell in? Who hath been his Counſellor? Men love to have the contriving their Houſes themſelves, and are as curious in it to pleaſe themſelves, as in any other thing, ſo is Chriſt. And the Apoſtle withal, expreſly affirmeth on the contrary, that all things in this Houſe, are to be built by God, for ſo I underſtand, τὰ πάντα, he that built [all theſe things] is God, all thoſe things that belong to this Houſe, which was the thing he was ſpeaking of: So as Chriſt, not as a Servant as Moſes was, but as being God, built this Houſe, and all things in it, and yet according to a pattern in reſpect of which he is ſaid to be faithful.

We ſhall annex to theſe Scriptures, but one reaſon, for the confirmation hereof, which is this; that if the Scripture hath condeſcended to ſet down a multitude of particular directions, either in examples, or in more expreſs Rules about the ordering of Government and Worſhip, whereof ſome are in appearance of but ſmall importance, and might ſeem to be left to diſcretion, (as that every Man ſhould lay aſide, as God had bleſſed him on the firſt day of the week, rather than on another day, &c. 1 Cor. 16. 2.) That then the word hath left a full and compleat direction, as to matters of greater importance. The ſtrength of the Conſequence, viz. that if the New Teſtament hath given particular directions for many things, then for all of like nature, appears by this.

1. Becauſe the word of God is perfect in what ever it meddles with. If it had not medled at all with Church matters, but only given in general Rules, then indeed no compleat Pattern could have been pleaded for; but having, to our view, ſet out ſo many pieces of this Building; for any Man to ſay, Chriſt hath left other things of like nature and uſe unto general Rule, is to argue the Scriptures to be guilty of Imperfection, whereas Paul writing to Timothy an Evangeliſt, about matters of Church Government, (which was one main part of an Evangeliſt's Office, and one main Argument of his Epiſtles to him before) ſays, the word of God was given to make the Man of God perfect, 2 Tim. 3. 17.

2. A Divine Wiſdom of God being manifeſt in theſe Directions, in view thus given, which Man's Wiſdom in the like muſt not preſume to imitate or come neer, if God ſhould have given ſome directions, and left to Man's Wiſdom other of the ſame kind and uſe, in this, man's Wiſdom had been made equal to God's, in matters of this nature.

3. Thoſe many Directions and Appointments God hath given, have a Supernatural Efficacy, and bleſſing in them; becauſe they are his Inſtitutions over and above what is in the Dictates of nature, or what reaſon can invent. Now if it were left to Man to add the like out of his own Wiſdom, to the like uſes in the Government of the Church; then Man muſt be ſuppoſed to have the power or promiſe from God, to have his Ordinances accompanied with the like Supernatural Efficacy. All God's Inſtitutions have for their object, Mens Souls and Conſciences, ſo the diſpenſers of Ordinances, the Miniſters; and therefore likewiſe the things diſpenſed; Obey them that rule over you, for they watch for your Souls, Heb. 13. 17. And then for their end, they are to be for the Edification of Mens Souls, and to convey the Spirit, 1 Cor. 2. v. 5, 7. And therefore are wholly Supernatural and Spiritual. And the Miniſters, which are to be the means to effect thoſe ends, ſhould therefore not be left to the Arbitrament of Natural Reaſon, or Humane Wiſdom, though never ſo much Elevated, as the ordering of a Family or Common-wealth is, which have for their immediate object, but Mens Bodies and Eſtates; and for their immediate end, but Mens natural and civil good. But if the end of Church Ordinances be Supernatural in an immediate way, then all the means ſhould be Supernatural alſo in their Appointment and Inſtitution; for between the end and the means, there muſt be a proportion, nothing being inabled to a ſpiritual effect, that hath not a Supernatural and Spiritual Original. We could not tell how to imagine or expect that God would accompany ſuch Media or Means of what kind or rank ſo ever, as the wiſdom of Man invents; with ſuch a power. And therefore the Apoſtle ſpeaking of all means Spiritual, (and by a Metaphor calling thoſe things Weapons, which Logicians call Inſtruments or means) oppoſeth theſe two, 1 Cor: 10. 4. The Weapons of our Warfare are not Carnal,) or Humane) but mighty through God; and by that Negation inſinuates, that they muſt be ſpiritual in their riſe, if mighty in their working. It is as proper to the Holy Ghoſt to Sanctifie any thing to a ſpiritual end, as it is for God the Father to Create, or the Son to Redeem; and therefore for Man to appoint any thing to a ſpiritual end, is as Derogatory to the Holy Ghoſt in his work, as the like would be to the other perſons in theirs.

4. It was expreſly forbidden, for Man to go about to make any thing of his Invention like unto God's, not Like-Oyl, not Like-Days, not Like-Poſts to Gods; and therefore much more it is prohibited, that Man ſhould frame like Inſtitutions for the Order and Government of the Churches under the Goſpel.

CHAP. IV.

What power Spiritual or Eccleſiaſtical is, of the Nature of a Divine Inſtitution; How the Knowledge of Divine Inſtitutions is derived to us, that we may be aſſured what are truly, and really ſuch.

Power Spiritual is an impreſs of, or an inveſtiture with the Authority of Chriſt, meerly out of his Will, whereby Men are Authorized and Enabled by Commiſſion from Chriſt, and in his Name to do that which others cannot do; and by virtue of which, what they ſo do, hath a ſpecial Efficacy in it from the power of Chriſt, ſeconding and accompanying of it; which alſo the Conſcience acknowledging Subjects it ſelf to, as unto the power of Chriſt, for the ſake of his Will and Inſtitution.

An Inſtitution is that which is meerly founded upon Gods Will, raiſing up a thing beyond its own Natural or Moral Efficacy, with an Efficacy beyond it. As for Men to humble themſelves, is a Moral Duty; but that God ſhould appoint, and ſet apart a whole day for them, to do it with Faſting, and ſo have a Bleſſing therefrom, this is beyond the nature of the thing, and is therefore an Inſtitution. The Trumpets in the Wars, they had a natural Efficacy to Incourage; but that the Prieſts ſhould blow Trumpets when the People of Iſrael went to War, had a Bleſſing beyond the natural Efficacy of the thing; therefore thoſe perſons were appointed to do it. To hear the Word, it is a Duty we owe to God, as we are Men, whomſoever he ſhall appoint to Preach it to us, whether he ſhould ſpeak it himſelf, or by others; but that he ſhould appoint men rather than Angels, or rather than ſpeak himſelf, that he ſhould ſingle out ſome men for that Office, and put a ſpecial Efficacy upon them, as ſent by him; this is to raiſe up what hath a natural and common Efficacy in it, beyond the nature of the thing; and as it dependeth meerly upon his Will, ſo it hath a ſpecial Inſtitution in it, becauſe of a ſpecial Efficacy accompanying it.

Inſtitutions are not only expreſs Commands in the letter of them; for Examples and Promiſes, Hints, and Implicite intimations, may hold forth the Will of Chriſt. Neither is every thing that is the Will and Command of Chriſt an Inſtitution; but it muſt be judged to be diſtinguiſhed from other Commands by the matter of it. If any thing be taken out from the courſe of Nature, from the courſe of Gods Providence, or from the common Law of Nature; and be peculiarly raiſed up above other things of its rank, to have a ſpecial Force and Efficacy in it; then if the Will of Chriſt be declared concerning ſuch a thing, it is peculiarly an Inſtitution, although other things be commanded, as well as it. That Bread and Wine ſhould ſignifie and convey to us the Body and Blood of Chriſt, this is by ſpecial Inſtitution, becauſe it is beyond the Nature of the thing, it depends only upon God's Will; to have choſen theſe Elements to do it, rather than others; and ſo they have a ſpecial Efficacy in them. But to have the Death of Chriſt ſet forth by way of Preaching, that's not an Inſtitution ſimply as ſuch: But that there ſhould a peculiar bleſſing go along with the Apoſtles in Preaching, or with Evangeliſts, or with the Miniſters, this depends upon Gods Will; for he might have choſen others. A Butcher or any

Ch. IV.

Man could have killed the Sacrifices, as well as the Prieſts, or any of the Tribes of Iſrael could have done it; but God ſingles out the Tribe of Levi, ſeparates them to this work. To give Alms to Men as Men, is the command of God, Do good unto all, Gal. 6. 10. But this is not an Inſtitution, becauſe founded alſo upon a common ground. To give Alms to Saints, is founded alſo upon the like ground, analogous to the other, if to Men, as Men, then eſpecially to Saints as Saints; but to make Collections in the Church where God is Worſhipped, here it becometh a Sacrifice; and then to make this Collection upon the firſt day of the Week, rather than upon another; this muſt needs be an Inſtitution. So that oftentimes God doth take ſuch things as are preſcribed by the Law of Nature, and ſuch things as are commanded upon other common grounds, and yet annexeth ſome ſpecial and peculiar Stamp of his own Will upon them, as they are done thus and thus, or by ſuch and ſuch. Hence is the diſtinction that our Divines give upon the firſt and ſecond Commandment; that as there is Cultus Naturalis in them, as to fear God, and to love Him, obey Him, to hear His Word, &c. So alſo there is Cultus inſtitutus, which is the ſubſtance of the ſecond Commandment. So alſo there are means of Edification which are providential, and ſo occaſionally will ſerve; if a Man ſhould walk in a Churchyard, and ſee a death's Head, it might put him in mind of Death; but for a Man to ſet up a Death's Head in his Study, continually to do it; this were the imitation of an Inſtitution. If a Man went forth and heard a Lark ſing, in this Providential way, it might ſtir up his mind to think of God or Heaven; or if a Man hears muſick, it may do the like; but to keep a Lark in Cage on purpoſe, that when it ſings, my mind ſhould be ſtirred up, or to have muſick on purpoſe to ſtir up the mind in a conſtant ſetled way; this were to make it as an Inſtitution, as in the Temple it was, when muſick was there uſed. So as the conſtant ſetting apart of ſuch a thing, for ſuch an end, (though providentially and occaſionally, it may ſerve for ſuch an end) riſeth up to an Inſtitution alſo.

We come now to conſider the ways, whereby Inſtitutions are delivered unto us by Chriſt, or made known to us. Inſtitutions are but the Will of Chriſt, declared concerning ſuch things as are exerciſed above the common nature of them, to a further Spiritual end. Therefore the declaring the Will of God about them, holds in common with the Declaration of Gods Will in other Commands. It doth differ only in the matter; that the matter of inſtitutions are ſuch things as are exerciſed above the common Nature, to ſome Spiritual end and Efficacy. In the delivery of theſe, Jeſus Chriſt is as Faithfull as Moſes was; though he hath not delivered them in the New Teſtament, in written Scripture, as in a Body of Laws formed up by themſelves, as Moſes did; with expreſs poſitive Directions, by way of Command, as the Law of Moſes is given. There is a double reaſon of it.

1. Becauſe the Jews they needed much more expreſs holdings forth of all their Laws; becauſe they were in the infancy of the Church; Therefore God dealt with them accordingly, in giving here a line, and there a line, and it was neceſſary to that State. And yet even their Syſteme of Laws, is in many things obſcure. There are many caſes, which the Rabbins make in the Interpretation of the Ceremonial Law, which have a great deal of Difficulty in them.

2. But the chief Reaſon is this; becauſe (as was hinted afore) Moſes his Law, was given to a Church and Nation formed up, and that by writing from the firſt. But the Apoſtles did not ſo; they delivered theſe Rules to the Churches, by way of Tradition, 1 Cor. 11. 1. They Converted Men by Preaching, and formed up Churches, and ſetled Government, and Order amongſt them, as well as Faith. And it was the pleaſure and mind of the Holy Ghoſt, to leave to Poſterity, thoſe Rules which the Apoſtles expreſly gave out to Churches, then by word of Mouth, to leave them I ſay to Poſterity in writing, by hinting what practiſes were in Churches, Recorded in the Epiſtles, and in the Acts. * So as what was delivered to them in a way of command poſitively, is traduced to us by way of Example, how Churches were then governed. Therefore ſuitably the Apoſtle ſaith, we have no ſuch Cuſtom, nor the Churches of God, 1 Cor. 11. 16. And thoſe cuſtoms of the Churches, were Traduced and Derived down to us; and unto this Day, the Veſtigia of them all hath (though with Superadditions, and Perverſions) remained in the Church of Rome. So as we have both the hints and practices of the primitive times, and alſo thoſe footſteps remaining in the Churches to this Day.

1. Now

It were a good project to add in every particular, how that there is no particular that we ſtand for, but there is a Veſtigiam of it left in ſome of thoſe Churches, and to give Inſtances ſtill all along of all the particulars, and ſo, as to prove every one firſt by Scripture, 2. By conſonancy to Spiritual Reaſon, and 3. By the Opinion of the Reformed Churches, &c. ſo 4. By the Footſteps of them in all Churches.

1. Now ſuch Inſtitutions as thoſe, they are ſometimes delivered to us in promiſes; and we may gather them by the promiſes that are made to things above their Natural Efficacy. And when we find ſuch promiſes, although we have it not in expreſs Letter, you ſhall do thus or thus; yet to ſuch things as we find promiſes made, which are above the Natural Efficacy of them, we may warrantably argue their Inſtitution: As for the Sentence the Church ſhall give, the promiſe being, whoſe ſins you bind on Earth, ſhall be bound in Heaven, Mat. 18. 18. John 20. 23. which is beyond the Efficacy of the Sentence of Men upon Earth; this evidently argueth a Church, and their Sentence to be by Inſtitution. And ſo alſo when Chriſt ſaith, where two or three are gathered together in my Name, I will be in the midſt of them, Mat. 18. 20. This implies, that the gathering together in his Name, is an Inſtitution; for there is a ſpecial promiſe of his being in the midſt of them: And this being ſpoken upon occaſion of his mentioning a Church, is evidently therefore the Inſtitution of a Church.

Object. If you will make every thing a promiſe is made to, to be an Inſtitution, we ſhall then have too many Inſtitutions.

Anſw. We do not make every thing a promiſe is made to, an Inſtitution. Promiſes are made to the People of God; but Inſtitutions are in this caſe to be diſtinguiſhed from all things elſe by the matter. However, promiſes are the Declaration of Gods Will, be they made to what things ſoever; and if they fall upon ſuch things as are raiſed up above natural and common Efficacy, with promiſe of a Supernatural power to accompany them; then they are Inſtitutions. If that promiſes be made to any Action, As to Honour thy Father and Mother, that thy Days may be long, &c. then that Action is a Duty, although there were no Commandment for it; only it is not an Inſtitution, becauſe there is not a Supernatural Spiritual Efficacy put upon it. So if promiſes be made to the People of God, the People of God be not an Inſtitution indeed, but it argues that they are the People of God; it doth ſeparate them from the reſt of the World. But if it falleth upon actions or things, or Perſons raiſing them up to have a Spiritual Efficacy unto others above their Natures, then it is an Inſtitution.

2. Theſe Inſtitutions are ſometimes declared by Implicite Directions; as when the Apoſtle ſaith, do not ye Judge them that are within? 1 Cor. 5. 12. that is, Have not you power amongſt you? It is but an Implicite Inſtitution; but it holds forth, that there had been an Inſtitution and Commiſſion of power given them, he takes it for granted; and ſo the like ſhould be amongſt us. So when he ſaith to the Corinthians alſo; when ye are gathered together, deliver ſuch an one to Satan, 1 Cor. 5. 3, 4, 5. making it their ſin, that they did not; it implies, there was therefore a Law that had been given them, or elſe there had been no Tranſgreſſion. Thus by the ſame kind of Arguing, we find a promiſe in Scripture, to be argued even out of a threatning. So Heb. 4. 5. If they ſhall enter into my Reſt. Hence the Apoſtle Argues, ſome ſhall enter in.

3. When there is a Commiſſion of power given; there is a declared Inſtitution. As in thoſe words; What you bind, ſhall be bound, go and Teach all Nations. Therefore there is an Inſtitution of a Church, in Matth. 18. 18, 19, 20. For there is a Commiſſion given to bind. And if Apoſtolical power be an Inſtitution by virtue of that in John 20. 23. Whoſe ſins ye remit, are remitted, &c. then here alſo by virtue of theſe words; If thy Brother offend, tell the Church: If thou wilt Circumciſe thy ſelf and thy Seed, I will bleſs thee; obey them that watch over your Souls, there is an Inſtitution; for it doth not only hold, that every Chriſtian ſhould obey the Miniſter he is under; but that he ſhould be under his Miniſtry, and that the Miniſter ſhould watch over him.

4. There are virtual Inſtitutions, as well as formal; for the conſequence which argues Gods Will, be it in one thing, as well as in another, is as truly the Word, as in the expreſs Letter of it. So many points of Doctrine are Demonſtrated, as the Caſe of the Reſurrection of Chriſt the third Day; and Jeſus Chriſt's proof of the Reſurrection, by the inſtance of God's being the God of Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob. And as one Truth may be gathered out of another, ſo one Inſtitution may be gathered out of another; for they are both but the Declarations of Gods Will. And if there be a neceſſary conſequence, that if there be ſuch an Inſtitution, there muſt be likewiſe this, that it is Gods Will that ſuch a thing muſt be, then that is to be taken for an Inſtitution alſo.

Ch. IV. When therefore many things that God hath Inſtituted, being put altogether, do neceſſarily infer ſomething elſe, then that alſo is an Inſtitution. As if that God hath appointed Officers and Overſeers, limited to a Flock by a ſpecial relation, over whom God hath made them Overſeers, then that there ſhould be a Flock, and that that Flock ſhould have its bounds, which they have relation to, muſt be by Inſtitution alſo. If when they are gathered together they muſt deliver to Satan, and they muſt gather together to excommunicate and deliver to Satan, and this delivering to Satan be by Inſtitution, then their meeting alſo. As the concluſion is rightly fetched out of a Major and Minor, ſo if there be ſeveral particulars which put together ſuppoſeth ſome 4th or 5th thing, then God hath inſtituted that thing; if it be ſuch as is not neceſſarily in nature, but dependeth upon the Inſtitution of his Will. As if he hath commanded Men to aſſemble and meet, to tarry one for another till they meet, and that if any of them ſin they ſhould caſt them out, and that their power reacheth to them that are within, this neceſſarily implies that this company thus meeting are a Church by Inſtitution in relation unto ſuch meetings. If a King did write to a Town to do all ſuch things as an incorporate Town uſeth to do, if ſuch and ſuch offences fall out amongſt them to judge them that are within; would not this be evidently a charter to them, to make them an incorporate Town? As Lords are made Lords being called up by a Writ, ſo here. Therefore all ſuch directions as we find in the Epiſtles, as in 1 Cor. 5. to do thus and thus, implies them to be incorporate bodies, which Incorporation depends as much upon God's Will as the acts themſelves, which they are to do being ſo incorporated, do.

And perhaps the Synagogues under the Old Teſtament, though we do not read when they were inſtituted by expreſs Command or Law, as for making of the Temple and the like there is, yet was derived out of the general Charter, for their meetings in the Temple, and every ſeventh year to read the Word, as leſs Leaſes are by parcels made out of a greater Leaſe. And ſo they were by Inſtitution conſequentially.

5. Inſtitutions are made known by Prophecies in the Old Teſtament, concerning the times of the Goſpel. As, that upon every Aſſembly there ſhould be a Cloud; that the day of Chriſt's Reſurrection ſhould be the Chriſtian Sabbath, This is the day that the Lord hath made, Pſal. 118. 24. or appointed, by Propheſie, he had ſaid to day if you will hear his Voice, in another Pſalm, and if not, that they ſhould not enter into his reſt, and this in Heb. 6. 4. is by the Apoſtle made an Inſtitution of; He hath appointed, ſaith the Apoſtle, another day, in oppoſition to the ſeventh day which he had ſpoken of in the 5th and 6th verſes. So Clement anſwerably in his Epiſtle ſpeaking of the Inſtitution of the Offices of Biſhops and Deacons, quoteth the Propheſie in Iſa. 60. 17. out of the Septuagint, as then it was, neither ſaith he, is this a new inſtitution, but many years afore it was thus written of Biſhops and Deacons. * So alſo in the applying of Types, we may diſcover what is an Inſtitution of God, but then we muſt find them ſo applied, if we find them warrantably applied by the Holy Ghoſt in the New Teſtament, or by Prophecy in the Old (for the ſignification of a Type it is by the Holy Ghoſt as in Heb. 9. 8. the Holy Ghoſt thus ſignifying) we may infer an Inſtitution from them. So when it is ſaid in Iſa. 66. 21. I will take of them for Prieſts and for Levites, it implies that there ſhould be theſe two ranks and ſorts of Officers in the New Teſtament, anſwerable to thoſe two in the Old, for ordinary Officers, as indeed there are, viz. Biſhops and Deacons.

6. We may be aſſured what is of Divine Inſtitution by parallel reaſon, between things of a kind, and of a like nature; as for example, God having appointed Baptiſm a Sacrament, and the Lord's Supper a Sacrament, theſe being things of a kind, if he hath bidden and appointed Miniſters by Inſtitution to Baptiſe, the reaſon is good that therefore they ſhould have power to adminiſter the Lord's Supper, although there is no inſtance in Scripture for it. So if he have given them power to be the Mouth of God in Preaching to the People, then alſo that they ſhould be the Mouth of the People to God in Prayer, we finding that publick Prayer is appointed as well as Preaching, although we have not one inſtance in the New Teſtament that the Officers of the Church did perform publick Prayer. So alſo God hath appointed Deacons, and he hath appointed Elders, he hath appointed Deacons to be ſet up by choice, and the Elders to be ſet up by choice; we find that the People did chuſe their Deacons, we warrantably argue therefore they may chuſe their Elders. In things that are thus of a like reaſon, we argue from one to the other in other caſes, as for inſtance ſtance, (ſince to us Chriſtians 'tis not the Judicial, and Ceremonial, but the Moral Law which is obligatory) how do we know, and why do we take the Levitical Law for degrees prohibited in Marriage, Lev. 18. Becauſe we find in 1 Cor. 5. 1. one of thoſe degrees forbidden in the New Teſtament, viz. for one to have his Father's Wife, and therefore all the reſt, although we have no warrant in Scripture for every particular degree. Alſo in that Law the Letter of it only forbiddeth the Aunt to Marry the Nephew, the Popiſh Divines have argued, that, yet it is lawful for the Uncle to Marry the Neece; whereas on the contrary, by a parity of reaſon it is unlawful, for it is all of a like kind, as the ſame way from Thebes to Athens, that is from Athens to Thebes, the one therefore being forbidden to Marry, becauſe they are nigh a kin, ſince the other is of as nigh a kin, therefore the Law holds in the one as well as in the other. So under the New Teſtament, we have days of faſting ſet apart as well as in the Old, for the ſame Moral grounds, but we have no one inſtance of a Day of Thankſgiving in the New Teſtament; but theſe being parallel Ordinances (for as Thankſgiving and Humbling of a Man's ſelf before God for Sin are parallel duties; ſo to have a Day of Thankſgiving, and a Day of Faſting are parallel Ordinances; therefore ſince we find the one in the New Teſtament, and find both in the Old; we may argue the other from this one. But then that we may argue rightly, the things muſt be collateral, and of a kind, as the the Lord's Supper and Baptiſm are both Sacraments; Elders and Deacons are, both Officers of the Church, they are things Co-ordinate, Ejuſdem ordinis, and ſo we may argue from one to the other, in things that may be ſuppoſed common to both, and is not upon a peculiar reaſon reſtrained to one. But otherwiſe for things that are ſubordinate as we may call them, and of another kind, there Par ratio will not make an Inſtitution, for then it is not Par ratio, becauſe it is not Inter paria or things co-ordinate. As we can by no means infer that, becauſe God hath ſet up an office of Elders ſuperiour to that of Deacons, becauſe he hath ſet up the Office of Paſtors and Teachers ſuperiour to that of Ruling Elders, that therefore upon a pretended neceſſity, we may ſet up an office over all theſe Elders, as the Antient Times did a Biſhop. And ſo neither will it follow, that becauſe God hath ſet up a Court in a particular Church to correct offending Brethren, by delivering up to Satan, that therefore they may ſet up an higher Court in like manner to correct Churches by Excommunicating them. Theſe are not things of the ſame order, but they are things of Superiority and Inferiority. Though we may argue in the Judicial Law, that if the Aunt may not Marry the Nephew, likewiſe the Uncle may not Marry the Neece, becauſe they are things of the ſame Order, yet we muſt not now go and make a new Degree forbidden; as is the caſe betwixt our Brethren and us in the Presbyterian controverſie. Reaſon will help us to apply the ſame things, in things collateral, but not to inſtitute, and ſet up things anew.

* Καὶ τοῦτο οὐ καινῶς ἐκ γὰρ δὴ πολλῶν χρόνων ἐγέγραπτο περὶ ἐπισκόπων, καὶ διακόνων. οὕτως γάρ που λέγει ἡ γραφὴ καταστήσω τοὺς ἐπισκόπους αὐτῶν, ἐν δικαιοσύνη καὶ τοὺς διακόνους αὐτῶν ἐν πίστει. Clem. Epiſt. ad Corinth. p. 55. Edit. Patr. Junii. Oxon. 1633.

Concerning the uſe of Man's Reaſon in this point about Inſtitutions, we only ſay this, that Man's Reaſon may by way of Interpretation find out what God hath ſet up, but it cannot proceed further. Men miſtake in thinking that if God hath ſet up this, that therefore they may by like reaſon ſet up another thing: As becauſe that God hath made Set Forms of Prayer, that therefore Men may; or as becauſe that God did deliver the Scriptures to be read, therefore Men may appoint Sermons to be read. For in ſo doing Man's Reaſon becometh a Judge, and takes on him God's Authority, in Inventing and Authorizing this, as God hath done another thing, whereas we ſhould be content with God's means that he hath appointed; but in the other, Man's Reaſon is only but as a Witneſs, that applies a thing according to what by reaſon he gathers God's Mind to be. And there is this difference between Doctrinal Truths and Inſtitutions, that one Truth may be by reaſon better fetched out of another, and more ſafely and eaſily than Inſtitutions. For one Truth begets another, and Truth is infinite in the conſequences of it, but ſo Inſtitutions are not. And the reaſon of the difference is this, becauſe they depend upon a Promiſe, and upon the Power, and Will of God, immediately to concur with them, and ſet them up: They are things that are ſingled out by the Will of God, to a Spiritual End, with a Spiritual Efficacy.

7. We may be aſſured what is an Inſtitution of God, by Examples which we meet with in the Scriptures. For one way by which Chriſt was pleaſed to convey his Inſtitutions to us, is by way of Examples in the New Teſtament, without the which, being intended as a rule for us, we acknowledge, that a compleat Rule for all things could not be made forth. We ſhall therefore endeavour to give reaſon and demonſtration, that the example of the practices of the Primitive Churches are to be taken as Rules to us. 'Tis true indeed, Examples then bind not, when the Story is ſo Written as there may be a ſuppoſition of errour in the example, as the Story of the Lives of the Patriarch's is; And alſo thoſe examples bind not which we find expreſly contradicted by a Law, or which we find blamed, as that of Peter's diſſembling, Gal. 2. 11: and that of John's Worſhipping the Angel, Rev. 19. 10. Theſe are not rules. But if an example be written as a Rule, then it will bind, becauſe there is no ſuppoſition of errour. But the Apoſtle's ways in Churches and ordering of them, yea and of the Churches erected by them, are propounded and profeſſed to be recorded as patterns and rules to us. Neither needs there a particular warrant to make every one a rule whilſt the general one that propounds all to be ſuch will ſanctifie all. I ſhall firſt prove my aſſertion, and then ſhew the reaſonableneſs of it, that it ſhould be ſo.

1. My firſt proof is from comparing the Commiſſion Chriſt gave his Apoſtles at his aſcending, Mat. 28. 20. with the Book of the Acts, the Title and Preface to it, and Matter in it. In Mat. 28. 20. This is the Commiſſion he gave to his Apoſtles conſidered as common perſons, as the laſt clauſe argues, Lo I am with you to the end of the World. His Commiſſion is, that they ſhould teach thoſe that were Converted to obſerve whatever he had commanded them. For the matter of the Doctrine of the Goſpel, what they ſhould Preach, he had given Commiſſion for that, in the verſe afore, ver. 19. Go teach all Nations, which Mark Interprets, Mark 16. 15. Go Preach the Goſpel to every Creature. that is, as to matters of Faith what they are to Believe, for it follows, ver. 16. He that believes ſhall be ſaved, But for matter of Evangelical practices what Christians are to do, and to obſerve by ſpecial command from Chriſt, that injunction he gives in a diſtinction from the other, ver. 20. he ſpeaks of matters of practice as the word τηρεῖν obſerve implies. And their Commiſſion is preciſely limited unto what Chriſt had commanded; he gives them no authority to impoſe and cauſe them to obſerve any other thing in practice but what he commanded; they went beyond their Commiſſion if they did. For matters of practice and obſervancy, Apoſtles are to meddle with nothing elſe but Chriſt's Commands; And they are enjoyned to teach Men, to obſerve all that Chriſt commanded. Now the ſtory of the Acts relating what was obſerved and practiſed by the Churches founded by the Apoſtles, and ſo in the Epiſtles, they giving many hints what were the Obſervations and Orders of Churches: We finding theſe and gathering them into a Body together, cannot look otherwiſe upon them, than as practices taught them by the Apoſtles, and if ſo, then no other than what Chriſt commanded. Obſervations of Churches recorded, not blamed, we take to be directions from the Apoſtles and to that end Written; and directions of the Apoſtles, we may ſafely take to be Commands of Chriſt, as well in matters to be done, as to be believed. This gives us a general ground to argue from examples of the Apoſtolical Churches.

2. But ſecondly when we find the Book of the Acts to contain many practices in and about Churches, and the Officers of them recorded but by way of ſtory, and hints of examples to ſhew us what was the order of Churches in the Apoſtle's times: We may be well aſſured that theſe were written on purpoſe to ſhew what the Apoſtle's taught them from Chriſt to obſerve; which we gather from all theſe things laid together.

1. From the profeſſed Title of the Book of the Acts, which, as thoſe Titles to the Pſalms, hath ever been acknowledged part of Canonical Scripture. It is entitled The Acts, or πράξεις Practices of the Apoſtles. That Book contains much of their Doctrine, and yet it is not entitled The Doctrine of the Apoſtles, but their Practices. And it contains moſtly the ſtory of one Apoſtle, Paul, and yet becauſe his ordering and ſetling Churches (as we ſhall anon obſerve) was by the ſame rule that the other Apoſtles all went by, it is called The Acts of the Apoſtles, on purpoſe to conſign and give warrant unto thoſe Practices as Apoſtolical. Yea alſo though many things are the practices in Churches themſelves, and of the Elders and Brethren of them, yet they are called The Acts of the Apoſtles, becauſe even thoſe practices of Churches were guided by the Apoſtles, and ſo they are called their Acts; and they taught them but to obſerve what Chriſt commanded.

2. Then ſecondly, after Luke had given it this Title, ſee further what his Preface is, which further declares this to have been the ſcope and drift of it. He connects it with the Story of Chriſt in the Goſpel, as paſſing from all that Jeſus began both to do and teach, ver. 1. from his Example and Doctrine, unto what the Apoſtles did do, and what they did teach Churches to obſerve by commandment from Chriſt; therefore he makes mention of the Commands that Chriſt by the Spirit had given them unto the day he was taken up, ver. 2. All which Commandments, and thoſe eſpecially which pertained to his Kingdom and Government of his Church on Earth, he renewed after his Reſurrection, ſpeaking, ſays he, by the ſpace of forty days of the things of the Kingdom of God, ver. 3. The meaning of which both Title and Preface, and connecting it with the ſtory of the Evangeliſts is evidently this, that theſe Apoſtles being thus thoroughly furniſhed with Commands from Chriſt, and eſpecially about the things of his Kingdom, in governing his Saints (all which when as he was about to aſcend he gave in charge, as the Evangeliſt Matthew tells us) that therefore they ſhould teach thoſe whom they converted to obſerve them, and that done you have the ſtory, declaring the practiſes of the Churches they reared, and the ways of the Apoſtles in them, and both as ſuch as were according to theſe Commands of Chriſt given them, which he therefore mentions in the Preface to give a countenance to them as rules. And the Language of it is as if he had ſaid, you ſhall know what thoſe ſpecial Commands pertaining to the Kingdom of God, and which they taught the Churches to obſerve, were by their ways and practices here recorded, and mentioned as practiſed in the firſt Churches. What Reader obſerving that charge in Matthew, given by Chriſt at his Aſcenſion, with the Title of, and the Preface to this Book, of the Acts, but will acknowledge all the ſtory of all the practices here recorded to be Scripture, written for our admonition, and think this to be the ſcope and intent of them? So that although we have not a particular warrant annexed to every example here to make it a rule, yet we have this general, which if it make out this, that they are written to let us ſee the Commandments of Chriſt in the Apoſtle's practices, it is enough.

3. Then add to this thirdly, That the practices here recorded of the Apoſtles in the firſt Churches of Judea, were ſetled generally in other Churches of the Gentiles alſo, who yet varied in Language, in Faſhion, and Manners, and Government Civil. They ordain Deacons in the Church of Hieruſalem, Acts 6. and Elders we read mentioned, chap. 11. 30. which are mentioned but hiſtorically, and yet we read of the ſame kind of Officers, Deacons and Elders, in other Churches of the Gentiles, at Philippi, Phil. 1. 1. and in many other Churches mentioned in the Acts. Yea and we find the ſame Practices and Officers, &c. in the Churches of the Gentiles ſetled by Paul, that was Converted and made an Apoſtle many years after the other, and who learned not the Goſpel, nor any part of it from the Apoſtles or the Churches of Judea, but had it by revelation of Jeſus Chriſt, as himſelf ſays, Gal. 1: 17. he immediately conferred not with fleſh and blood, that is, with no man, yea I came not to Hieruſalem (ſays he) to them which were Apoſtles afore me, ver. 17. but I went into Arabia, ond returned again into Damaſcus; and then after three years I came again unto Hieruſalem to viſit Peter, ver. 18. and none Apoſtles ſaw I ſave James, ver. 19. And yet he ſet up the ſame practices in Churches that the other Apoſtles did, Ordained Elders in every City, and Deacons, &c. Now that they ſhould ſo agree in the ſame practices; that theſe all here recorded ſhould be intitled the practices of the Apoſtles; that they ſhould be the ſame in ſeveral Churches, in that firſt of Judea, and the ſame from ſeveral Apoſtles in thoſe ſeveral Churches, and ſome of theſe Apoſtles not conſulting each with other; how could this be but as guided by the ſame Spirit, and as going by the ſame rule common to all, which was the Commands of Chriſt?

4 Yea fourthly, As they have thus Chriſt's Commands (afore the recording theſe practices) for their warrant, ſo ſome of them that are recorded in the Acts but as hiſtorically done at the firſt as Acts of the Apoſtles, yet are in after-times in other Scriptures, given by way of command. Now this further confirms this ſame, being thus warranted and conſigned, for the reſt to ſhew the like reaſon of all the other. Thus the firſt mention of the Office of Deacons in the Church, is but hiſtorically and by way of example ſet down with the occaſion of it, Acts 6. As alſo of Biſhops and Elders in the Acts often, and not at all as recorded therein with any commands from the Apoſtles, and yet to ſhew that theſe examples are recorded for Commands and Rules, Paul in his Epiſtle to Timothy writing to him how to behave himſelf in the houſe of God, mentions theſe Offices of Deacons and Elders as the Commands of Chriſt, 1 Tim. 3. and on the contrary, that which Chriſt gave a Precept and an Inſtitution about, Mat. 18. namely Church Cenſure and Excommunication, you have it in a directive example given to the Church of Corinth, 1 Cor. 5.

5. And for a Fifth Argument yet further to confirm this, the Apoſtles do in their Epiſtles refer Churches and Others to their Example in the Churches, as Rules for their Imitation, and this in matters of Church Order. Thus in 1 Cor. 11. Paul when he was to Write to the Church of Corinth, about ordering matters of Order, as ver. 34. ſhews, and alſo all the particulars in that chapter do ſhew it (for they are matters of that nature, as about covering and uncovering, in token of Subjection, and about their Love Feaſts breeding Diviſions, and Eating in the Aſſemblies, and the abuſe in the Lord's Supper, &c.) he makes this the Preface to all theſe, Be ye followers of me even as I am of Chriſt, ver. 1. commending them in other things of their Church Order (ſuch as theſe) they had remembred all theſe things, and kept the Ordinances as he had delivered them, ſo ver. 2. But in theſe abuſes and diſorders, he ſaith he could not but diſpraiſe them, ver. 17: Now in all matters of this Nature, as well as matters of Doctrine, he exhorts them to be Followers of his example, and practice in the Churches as he was in Chriſt: So as about all, for ſuch things Chriſt gave a command and the Apoſtles gave order, and by their Doctrine and Practices delivered them. We have no ſuch cuſtom ſays he, that is, no ſuch practice, and ſo condemns their diſorder, by bringing them to that as the Rule. So alſo in his Preface to that Diſcourſe of his about Church Cenſures to be executed upon that Inceſtuous Member in the Church, which you read of, chap. 5. and other particular directions that follow in that Epiſtle, he tells them chap. 4, that though they may have many thouſand Inſtructers, yet he was their Father, ver. 15. Telling them, ver. 17. that he had ſent Timothy an Evangeliſt unto them, which ſhould put them in remembrance of his Ways in Chriſt, as I Teach every where in every Church, the meaning whereof is plainly this, that he did bind them to no other Rule than what he bound all other Churches to; and that his example or way, whereof Timothy could put them in mind, was that Rule he would have them and other Churches follow, he teaching all Churches to follow thoſe his ways, for otherwiſe Timothy could not know what he taught every where in every Church, ſo as he means not his Doctrine materially, but his ways which he taught every Church to follow as alſo he requireth them. So in his Writing to the Church of the Philippians, his general concluſion in matters of Practice is, chap. 4. 9. Thoſe things which you have both learned and received, and heard, and ſeen in me, do, what you have received by hearing and learned by ſeeing:

1: I obſerve, his ways and practices in all the Churches were regular and alike in, and all tyed to the ſame rule, and given by Doctrine and by Example alſo. Look what his ways were, the ſame he taught, and this univerſally in all Churches, teaching them to obſerve it as Chriſt charged them.

2. He means his Ways in matters of Diſcipline and Government of the Church as well as Doctrine, and indeed thoſe matters of Diſcipline were delivered alſo by Doctrine to thoſe Churches. For 1. This is a Preface to his Diſcourſe about matters of Diſcipline, which he enters into, in the following verſes and following chapters. 2. Therefore he calleth them Ways not Way, as being acts and practices of him as an Apoſtle, things to be done, which matters of Faith are not called. And 3. They were not moral ways of the moral law, for theſe the Old Teſtament directed to, and he might refer them unto the Rules there, but Evangelical ways he means, which the Goſpel brought in, Ways in Chriſt, given as directions in all Churches. And 4. To that end he ſent Timothy an Evangeliſt, whoſe Office it was to order things in Church Government, as appears by the matter of the Epiſtle to Timothy and Titus. Add but this, that if any where he calls on them to imitate him in Diſcipline, then in theſe places, matters of Diſcipline are meant and included, but he doth this in many places, as in 1 Cor. 11. and the matters of this firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians are much about order, The reſt will I order when I come, 1 Cor. 11. 34. and ſo Timothy was ſent to eſtabliſh them therein.

Again 3. Writing to Timothy an Evangeliſt on purpoſe to direct him how to behave himſelf in the Houſe of God (this being the chief ſcope of thoſe Epiſtles as was noted) he calls him to his example as his rule, as one that had known his Doctrine, Manners, Life, &c. 2 Tit. 3. 10. But thou haſt fully known my Doctrine, manner of Life, Purpoſe, Faith, Long-ſuffering, Charity, Patience. The word is, παρηκολȣ́θηκας Juxta ſequi, veſtigiis inſiſtere, haſt followed it ſtep by ſtep. 1. In Doctrine, 2. ἐν τῇ ἀγωγῇ, in Converſe or ways in the Churches, as that place, 1 Cor. 4. 17. ſhews in my Platform, or Form, or Leading, or Method, which may very well mean his Inſtitution of Churches, his leading or framing them, and training them up.

4. Yea, 4. Yet further, to ſhew that the practices of Churches ſetled by the Apoſtles, are Rules unto us; we find him calling upon Churches, then to imitate the Orders of other Churches in thoſe times planted by the Apoſtles, therefore the practices of Churches Recorded and not blamed, are intended as Rules. The Cuſtoms of Churches is now much urged in the World, to bind others to them, becauſe the Apoſtles refer'd to them; but the Argument fails and differs in this, which is not conſidered, that the Cuſtom of Churches then were Apoſtolical; and ſuch Cuſtoms in ſuch Churches, ſo directed infallibly, and Recorded then when the Apoſtles were preſent, we may ſafely account Obligatory, but not Cuſtoms meerly Humane. Thus Paul Argues from the Cuſtom of all Churches, in that 1 Cor. 10. 16. We have no ſuch Cuſtom, nor the Churches of the Saints, that is, thus founded by Apoſtles. Thus, 1 Theſ. 2. 14. he commends them for having become Followers of the Churches of God in Judea, becauſe they being the firſt Churches planted by the Apoſtles, were almoſt exact according to the pattern. Of other Churches he ſays, Came the Word of God out from you? 1 Cor. 14. 36. Now from the Churches of Judea it did. And he ſpeaks it generally of all their imitations of them; and that both in matters of Order as well as Faith, they being Conſtituted and ſetled in both; for if not in all things, why puts he not the difference?

And to ſhew that all Churches in ſuch matters, were ordered by the ſame Rule, one as well as another; and that therefore what we find Recorded of one Church, was in like manner in all, the Apoſtle ſometimes in giving Cirections to one Church, adds, As I Ordain in other Churches of Chriſt alſo. Thus 1 Cor. 16. 1. in the ordering of Collections on the firſt Day of the Week, which is in view but an inferiour Matter, and might have been done any day, yet when he gives inſtruction about it to the Corinthians, though it had been enough, that he an Apoſtle gave it, yet he puts this in, as I Ordain in the Churches of Galatia, ſo do ye alſo. So in giving thoſe Rules about Prophecying, to ſpeak one by one, and the leſſer number of Prophets, to ſubmit to the greater, he inforceth it by this, in 1 Cor. 14. 33. as we ſee in all the Churches of the Saints; and ver. 37. let him that is Spiritual, acknowledge that theſe are the Commands of God. To this doth that old ſaying agree, Conſtabit id eſſe ab Apoſtolis traditum quod Eccleſiis, Apoſtorum ſuit ſacro ſanctum. That is evident to have been delivered by the Apoſtles, which hath been Sacredly obſerv'd by the Churches of the Apoſtles.

5. Chriſt calls upon the ſame Churches, to imitate the firſt Pattern given them, and wherein they or any ſwerved, he Reduceth them to what they had at firſt received and learned from the Apoſtles, as containing an immutable Rule, not to be ſwerved from. Now if they had not liberty to ſwerve from them, then not we, Rev. 3. 3. Remember how thou haſt received and heard, and hold faſt and Repent. Thoſe Epiſtles to the Seven Churches, do as much concern Diſcipline, as matters of Doctrine; for the chief fault he doth find with them, ſtill is ſlackneſs of Diſcipline, whereby they ſuffered Men to Teach or Practice amiſs.

Now the general Reaſon of this, why the Apoſtle left theſe things in Example, is firſt; becauſe this agrees with the Nature of the thing, for matters of Practice and Order, are as well, if not better Repreſented in Examples than Rules, Men are moved more by Examples, than by Precepts, (as Seneca ſaid) as Buildings and their Platform are beſt ſet out in Pictures. And 2. Conſider the manner of writing Scriptures, the occaſion of writing theſe of the New Teſtament, both Acts and Epiſtles, and it will appear that this way of Example was moſt ſuitable. 1. The manner of the Scriptures, even as to matters of Doctrine, is not to write Methods or Harmonies, Truths ordered, but ſcattered; and often left to us to pick them out, by Intimations and Coherences, and this as to many great Truths. And 2. Let us conſider when it was they were written? The Work was not firſt to write Scriptures, as having Churches Conſtituted to their Hands. Though Moſes's caſe was otherwiſe, who

Ch. IV. had a People already gathered, the Nation of the Jews, which were in one place, whom he could therefore deliver a Law unto, in Precepts, yet the Apoſtles Diſperſt themſelves to ſeveral places; and their firſt Work was to Convert Men in all Nations, and ſo to build them up into Churches, and ſo carry their Directions with them in their Breaſts. Thus they did firſt in Judea, then among the Gentiles; and every one of them, (when apart) was led with an infallible Spirit in ſo doing, and all with one Spirit, agreeing and conſpiring in the ſame, as by the Churches ſet up by them doth appear. And many years after this, were the Scriptures written to thoſe Churches, (as occaſion was) whom they had firſt Ordered and Diſciplined; and this for the direction of times to come: And ſo in writing to them, they hint Relations of what was done and conſtituted among them Hiſtiorcally, (for the Rule was already put in practice, and they were framed and reared:) And ſo Luke writes an Hiſtorical Relation, (after the Apoſtles had ſet many Churches) of their Acts and Practices; and it was not comely to write a Law to ſuch Churches, to have ſuch and ſuch Officers, &c. when already they had them; but rather they maintain their Officers, as exiſting among them already, and ſhew their Diverſity, by Exhorting them to their ſeveral Duties, as Rom. 12. and elſewhere; which yet becauſe they were erected by Apoſtolical direction, is hint enough to us to have the like. If they had written to any company in a place that had not been gathered into Church Fellowſhip, to, Eccleſia conſtituenda, A Church that was to be Conſtituted, then it had been meet to have written the Laws and Rules of it, how to order themſelves. But the Apoſtles had already afore, writing the Scripture, caſt all Churches into that Order which Chriſt had appointed, and by Example and Precept, in word of Mouth delivered them, the Traditions as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 1 Cor. 11. 2. And after upon occaſion, writing to ſome of them as Churches already Conſtituted, he mentioneth matters of Diſcipline, but either Hiſtorically, as already ſetled among them, or by way of Precept in ſuch particulars as they were amiſs in; yet ſo as Divine Providence, that took care for after times, hath given a Compleat Direction, either in Hints and Records of thoſe Examples, of what was already Conſtituted in ſome Churches, or in ſuch thoſe Occaſional Precepts.

And further in general, that Examples, Recorded in Scripture,, are intended as Rules, and ſo are underſtood by Divines, appears by theſe Inſtances.

1. It is evident in the matter of the Sabbath; for which, ſuppoſe that we have no poſitive command given in the New Teſtament (and the command in the Old, was evidently pitcht on the ſeventh Day from the Creation, in the Letter of the command) yet becauſe we have mention of it by way of practice, and Adminiſtration of Holy meetings on that day; as in that of Collection of Saints, upon the firſt day of the Week; and Acts 20. 7. of breaking Bread on the firſt day of the Week, &c. our Divines have warrantably concluded the alteration of it. And therefore we do alike wonder at thoſe that are for Church ways, that they ſhould be againſt the Lord's day; and that thoſe that are for the Sabbath, ſhould be againſt the form of Examples in the New Teſtament.

2. This is evident alſo, in matters of contract afore Marriage; but a hint by the by, in a Rule given concerning Adultery, and in the Example of Joſeph and Mary, confirms the obligation of it.

3. The ſame appears in many particular explications of the Moral Law. All that write upon the Commandments, though for greater things of the Law, theſe follow the expreſs Rules; yet the leſſer explications are but from examples of Holy Men. Now allow but the ſame liberty in theſe Evangelical Precepts; that for the great things, there are expreſs Precepts for; as for the Sacraments, for Inſtitution of Churches, Matth. 18. for Officers in Timothy, and Rom. 12. for Cenſures, Matth. 18. but for many Branches; for matter of carriage in theſe, we muſt have them out of the examples and hints in the New Teſtament, and it is all that we ask.

4. We find our Saviour Chriſt and the Apoſtles, arguing from examples of firſt Patterns. Thus, 1. To prove what is lawful, Mat. 12. 3. Chriſt argues from David's example, in breaking a Law, in eating when he was Hungry the ſhew-bread (which was not otherwiſe lawful for him to eat, Exod. 29. 33.) To prove it lawfull to pull Ears of Corn on the Sabbath Day, and eat them. And ſo from the example of the Prieſts profaning the Sabbath, and being blameleſs, Matth. 12. 5. that is, not found fault with: And though Chriſt annexeth a ground out of one of the Prophets, I will have Mercy, and not Sacrifice; yet conſider that that Law came long after, and theſe examples were in force long before this Law; for Hoſea wrote long after. 2. Examples are urged, not only to prove what is lawful, but alſo what is a Duty. Thus the Apoſtle Peter, 1 Pet. 3. 3, 4. Exhorts Wives, that their Adorning ſhould not be that of putting on Apparell, but the Ornament of a meek Spirit,; for v. 5. after this manner in the Old Time, the Holy Women who Truſted in God, Adorned themſelves. Thus alſo in the matter of Praying twice a Day, Morning and Evening, ſays Paul, 2 Tim. 1. 3. Whom I ſerve from my Forefathers without ceaſing, having them in remembrance in my Prayers, Day and Night. This cuſtom to pray ſo often, was from the Fore-fathers, who in the Temple did ſo, and in their Houſes; and this is argued not ſo much from an expreſs command, as from their examples. 3. Eſpecially when the firſt Inſtitution is founded upon an example, then the example is the Great Argument for it; As Primum in quolibet genere eſt menſura reliquorum, the firſt in every kind is the meaſure of the reſt, ſo in this caſe too. Thus the Law of Marriage is founded upon the example of Adam's Marriage, and ſo argued from both, by the Prophet Malachi, and by Chriſt alſo; both that a Man ſhould have but one Wife, and not put her away. Thus Malachi argues from the very Creation, of but one Woman for Adam, as a rule for us, Mal. 2. 15. and did he not make one? And wherefore one? Yet had he a Reſidue of Spirit, (namely to have made more) that he might have a lawfull and godly Seed; for which cauſe, Adultery and unlawful Marriages, is not Sanctified from the firſt Inſtitution. And ſo our Saviour Chriſt, Matth. 19. 4, 8. In the beginning it was not ſo, argues from the practice then.

If it be ſaid that there was a Law; Therefore ſhall a Man leave his Father and his Mother, &c. Yet ſtill the Law is founded upon the example of Adam, and Eve, the firſt Pattern; that becauſe God made but two at firſt, therefore no more ſhould be joyned together, as Chriſt reaſoneth, Matth. 19. 4. Have ye not read, that he that made them one at the firſt, made them Male and Female? He argues from that very inſtance. Yea, and he made the firſt Woman of Adam's Fleſh, ſo as Adam ſaid, ſhe is Bone of my Bone, and Fleſh of my Fleſh; and therefore, or for this cauſe (as Chriſt and the Apoſtle Interprets it) was the Law given; yet ſo as Adam's example is made the Foundation of it; becauſe Primum in iſto genere, what Adam did then by God's appointment, is a Rule for ever.

Only to prevent a miſtake, we will add theſe Cautions as Limitations.

1. That for the great and more Eſſential parts of Church Order and Worſhip, we have expreſs and direct Rules. As for the Inſtitution and Conſtitution of a Church, Mat. 18. For the Adminiſtration of Cenſures by Admonition, Excommunication, for the chief Officers thereof; Biſhops and Deacons, for the Sacraments, publick Prayers, Preaching, &c. The Examples do only moſtly concern the Limits, Order, and Adminiſtration of all theſe. And in ſuch things, Scripture Examples ſhould be admitted for Rules; for ſo it is in Interpreting the Moral Law. The great things of each Commandment, concern the groſſer ſins, and maineſt general Duties for which you have expreſs Rules and Commands; but for all the particular Branches and Caſes about particular Sins and Duties, it will be hard to fetch expreſs Rules to direct Men's Conſciences; but Men take the help and benefit of examples unblamed in Scripture, for a Deciſion of them. Look all Interpreters of the Ten Commandments, and their Quotations, and you will find it ſo. Now why ſhould not as great a liberty be left us to find out God's politicks, as God's Ethicks, it being as neceſſary, if not more, that Men ſhould have directions to guide their converſe in the Houſe of, God, as in their own Houſes and private Affairs.

2. We muſt be carefull that we take ſuch Examples, as are written and not blamed, ſuppoſing this to be the Rule, that what is not blamed or contradicted by a Rule doth bind us. Chriſt arguing from an Example of the Prieſts, alledgeth that for a Warrant, you read (ſaith he) how that the Prieſts profaned the Sabbath, and are blameleſs, Matth. 12. 5. Hence becauſe Apoſtolical Examples in the converſe in Churches are Recorded as Rules; therefore ſuch Examples of theirs as were faulty are blamed, and took notice of, as Peter's Example in a Church matter at Antioch, Gal. 2. Paul reproved him to his Face, and that upon this ground, becauſe his Example being an Apoſtle, Compelled Men, Gal. 2. 14. it had the force of an Argument in it.

3. We muſt get Characters to diſtinguiſh between Extraordinary, and Ordinary Examples, Recorded of Churches and the Apoſtles. As we do make a Diſtinction of Chriſt's own Example; and of Philip's Baptizing out of a Church, (he being an Evangeliſt, and carrying Church power about with him, and the Perſon's Caſe requiring preſent departure into a far Country) and of Chriſtians ſelling their Eſtates in the firſt Churches of the Jews, when there were many poor; and of the Apoſtles being maintained, and ſent into all the World.

If you ask how we ſhall Diſtinguiſh them? We Anſwer, even as you do other things that are Extraordinary, promiſcuouſly Recorded with Ordinary, for the things Diſtinguiſh themſelves; as 1 Cor. 12. ſpeaking of Gifts, he promiſcuouſly reckons up Ordinary and Extraordinary, ver. 8, 9, 10. To one is given a word of Wiſdom, to another a word of Knowledge, to another the gifts of Healing, and to another working of Miracles, to another divers Tongues, here is no greater matter of Diſtinction put for the things, than what themſelves afford. The Gifts that remain ſtill in the Church, are Ordinary, they that do not are Extraordinary. So for Officers, ver. 28. God hath ſet in the Church, Firſt, Apoſtles, Secondarily, Prophets, Thirdly, Teachers, after that Miracles, then helps in Government. How can we diſtinguiſh here, and know that we have Teachers and Government, and not Apoſtles, &c. but by this, that the neceſſity of Gifts for Teaching and Government ſtill remains, not the other? And ſo do we as eaſily diſtinguiſh of Examples, ſuch as were things common, founded upon common and general Reſpects, theſe we account Ordinary, and to bind, becauſe they may continue, and the reaſon of them continue, where it is not ſo in Extraordinary.

4. The like we ſay of Examples meerly occaſional. The occaſion ceaſing the thing ceaſeth: And therein we judge but as we do of other things under the Law, when yet Moſes gave direct Rules; as in eating the Paſſover, that they were commanded to do it with ſtaves in their Hands, and in haſt was meerly ſuited to the occaſion of the firſt Paſſover, becauſe that Night they were to Travell, and ſo it did not bind afterward.

If you ſay, ſhew me a compleat Syſteme of Directions out of the Examples or Rules given, and we will believe you.

To this we Anſwer. 1. That in the main and ſubſtantial matters, we can ſhew enough to guide the preſent practices of Churches, in managing the great and neceſſary Ordinances of Chriſt. We gave one Inſtance afore for all the reſt, about diſpenſing the Cenſures of the Church. And 2. By finding expreſs order taken about ſmall things, (as to Carnal Eyes they may ſeem to be) we may be directed in greater as how and when to order the Collection for the Saints, on the firſt day of the week, and to Treaſure up by a Man's ſelf weekly, as God hath bleſſed him, whereas another Set Day in the Week might have ſerved, according to Humane Prudence as well, and to lay up as God hath bleſt a Man, at the Months end, might ſeem to have been as well in a way of Humane Arbitrary Prudence, and have been left to Men's Directions) and yet the Apoſtle makes this an Order in Corinth, and in the Churches of Galatia. Now think we, if God took care and bound up Humane Wiſdom, and Interpoſed his own in matters of ſuch ſmall Moment, as theſe Circumſtances ſeem to be; we cannot but believe he hath done the like in all things elſe of a like Nature; and either he would have given Rules about ſuch things, or have left a compleat Rule, if we could find it out. That in Digging, we find ſuch ſmall Medals as theſe, here and there, ſtamped by God's Authority, and bearing the Image of his Wiſdom and Soverainty, doth encourage us to Dig, hoping to find that whole Treaſure that is hid in Chriſt, in whom we are compleat, for all Treaſures of Knowledge and Wiſdom. And this binds up our underſtandings from daring to Coyn by Humane Wiſdom and Authority, and the like Inſtitutions, leſt we ſhould ſet up our poſts by God's, and eat out by Humane Prudence, thoſe things which we ſee God hath uſed his Wiſdom to deliver to us, (as by ſuch Inſtances evidently appears) wherein we ought to ſuſpect our Ignorance of his Will, rather than his Faithfulneſs to deliver all of the like Nature. And 3*ly* We are to be careſull in doing what we find a Rule and Examples for, and ſo whereunto we have Attained, walking. We find that True of Chriſt, and made good by him unto us, that in doing the Will of God, we know it; and in matters of practice Experience, with Faith waiting for Light, helps to the Knowledge, more than all the Study in the Abſtract in the World can do. And therefore though we profeſs, we know not Rules for every Caſe, or Query that may be put, yet ſo far as we have Attained, we walk; ſuſpending where we want light till God reveal it, knowing that God will accept this: We finding that in all ſorts of humane actions, in all callings and relations there are a thouſand caſes, wherein men are to ſeek for direction out of the Word, and yet they do not forbear to walk in all thoſe relations, till they are reſolved of every particular caſe and duty that may fall out. And ſo in matters of Doctrine, if we ſhould forbear to believe the truths we know and have received, until we have a compleat Syſtem of undoubted verity, and Paul's form of wholeſome words in all particulars we ſhould be ever learning, and never come to the knowledge of, and aſſent to any truth.

And therefore our deſires is, that the Churches of Chriſt would in this Age (wherein theſe things are enquired into, and the Reformation of Diſcipline yet imperfect) walk by this rule, that ſo far as they agree, and in common have found out the rule, to walk by it, and be obliged ſo to do, and wherein they differ or want that light that others have, they might be left to that rule which God hath ſet up, as the great Peace-maker and Arbiter in his Churches, not to judge one another for theſe things, but to ſay with the Apoſtle, Theſe that are otherwiſe minded God ſhall reveal it to them in his due time, and in ſo doing know God will accept us, and we hope men will.

CHAP. V.

That there are Ordinances of Publick Worſhip eſtabliſhed in Churches under the New Teſtament, which are to continue to the End of the World.

I Deſign not to diſcourſe here of the Doctrine of Ordinances, as it is ſtated againſt the Seekers, who yield the Being of ſuch Ordinances to be of Divine Right, and no deficiency to be in Chriſt's Inſtitution; and yet aſſert that as a roſe in Winter hath a Being in the World, of right, as well as any other Fruit of the Earth then extant; only there is not a way of means of its actual exiſtence by reaſon of the Seaſon, ſo Ordinances have a Right of being in the Church, but Anti-Chriſt, hath Withered all things, and made an interruption in Ordinances, Miniſtry, &c. An unhappy Generation of men have riſen up, who cry down all Ordinances as Forms, yea and would rank them as Forms equally, with all the Idolatries in Popery, or any other Superſtitions, in all which (ſay they) God was in thoſe appearances ſerved, as well as in thoſe that were once of his own Inſtitution; ſo making them all one and all forms alike, they pretend to live in the Spirit, and not only without all theſe, but above them. But beſides what the Prophecy of Jude and other holy Apoſtles Paul and Peter have given in caution concerning theſe, Jude 18, 19, 20, 21, ver. How that they told you, there ſhould be mockers in the laſt time, who ſhould walk after their own ungodly luſts. There be they which ſeparate themſelves, ſenſual, having not the ſpirit. But ye beloved, building up your ſelves on your more holy faith, praying in the Holy Ghoſt, keep your ſelves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt unto eternal life. The ſeparation there is to be interpreted by what as the oppoſite thereto the Apoſtle exhorts true Believers unto. But you beloved building up your ſelves, &c. ver. 20. What he mentioneth as means of Grace to preſerve them to eternal life; from theſe it was theſe men ſeparated, pretending to live in Spirit, and therefore with Indignation the holy Apoſtle ſaith of them, that they were Senſual not having the Spirit. They ſeparated not from other Chriſtians, but from theſe things, that were means of Grace when influenced by the Spirit. I will not meddle with any of their Evaſions, but only poſitively ſpeak that which concerns the truth of my poſition, and prove the exiſtency, and continuance of Goſpel Ordinances, as Baptiſm, the Lord's Supper, &c. I will begin with that Scripture upon which I have diſcourſed on another occaſion, namely, to ſhew the danger of living in the practice of prevailing Luſts, under Ordinances. That which now I ſhall make uſe of that Scripture for, is to ſhew both the exiſtence and continuance of Ordinances, of Baptiſm, and the Lord's Supper, under the New Teſtament.

1 Cor. 10. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. Moreover Brethren, I would nor that ye ſhould be ignorant, how that all our Fathers were under the Cloud, and all paſſed through the Sea, and did all Eat the ſame Spiritual Meat, and did all Drink the ſame Spiritual Drink, (for they Drank of that Spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Chriſt) But with many of them God was not well pleaſed: For they were overthrown in the Wilderneſs. Now theſe things were our Examples, to the intent we ſhould not luſt after evil things, as they alſo luſted. Compare it with ver. 11. Now all theſe things happened unto them for enſamples: and they were written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the World are come.

The general ſcope is, to ſhew how for the ſubſtance of them, the Fathers enjoyed the ſame Spiritual Ordinances, which now our Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper anſwers to, and which theſe Corinthians, and all Chriſtians generally lived under, only with that difference which that diſpenſation of the Old had in it from this of the New. As that thoſe were more Shadowy, and in their immediate Ordination but Types, as their Baptiſm then pointed forth immediately, their total deliverance from Egypt, as then Baptized unto Moſes in the Cloud, and the Sea (but yet under that to us Believers is held forth our Baptiſm as union into Chriſt (of whom Moſes was a Type) and the deliverance of our Souls from Hell and Satan.) Whereas our Ordinances now have that outward Rind ſhaled off, and Chriſt only and Baptiſm unto him, are barely and nakedly held forth, &c. Now I ſhall but proſecute two obſervations, which to me ſeem natural as to this aſſertion out of the Scripture, concerning theſe two Ordinances of Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper here particularly ſpecified, and ſo conſequently concerning all other parts of Inſtituted Worſhip under the Goſpel.

Obſer. I. Obſerve firſt, That theſe Ordinances were generally received, and practiſed by the Chriſtians of thoſe times.

Obſer. II. Obſerve ſecondly, That theſe Ordinances are to continue to the end of the World.

To prove the firſt Obſervation, I remark the Note of Univerſallity which the Apoſtle uſeth. As he ſays that thoſe Iſraelites were Types of us; and their Ordinances Types of ours, ſo in making the parallel between us and them, he carefully inſerts this, that as all of them were partakers, and lived under thoſe Ordinances then; ſo all of us Chriſtians do partake, or ought to do, of theſe Sacraments that anſwer unto thoſe Types of theirs now. Of the Fathers (as he calls them) in the Wilderneſs, he ſays it no leſs than five times. All our Fathers were in the Cloud, and all paſſed through the Sea, and were all baptized unto Moſes in the Cloud, and in the Sea, and did all eat the ſame ſpiritual meat, and did all drink the ſame ſpiritual drink. And anſwerably concerning the Chriſtians of thoſe times, he utters it in all their names, and involves himſelf, ver. 17. We are all Partakers of that one Bread. And ſays the ſame of Baptiſm, 1 Cor. 12.13. We are all baptiſed by one Spirit, into one body, and do all drink, &c. And Rom. 6. 3, 4. Know ye not, that ſo many of us as were baptiſed into Jeſus Chriſt, were baptized into his death? Therefore are we buried with him by baptiſm into death. He argues from the known and generally received Profeſſion and Practice of all Chriſtians: Know ye not that ſo many of us as were baptiſed, that is, that whoever of us that profeſs Baptiſm into Chriſt, profeſs Baptiſm into his Death, as the thing intended by it. The Us there, is the generality of Chriſtians, diſtinguiſhed uſually by that word from Heathens, as Rom. 14.7, 1 Cor. 8. 6. To Us there is but one God, &c. that is, we Chriſtians profeſs all, and generally ſo. And his ſcope being to ſhew how Sanctification flows from being in Chriſt; His argument is drawn from a general principle of the [Us] of Chriſtians. As many of us (to a man as we uſe to ſay) as have been baptiſed into Chriſt, and do profeſs that part of Religion are all taught, that the import thereof is, to be therewith baptized into his death. So that his expreſſion, as many of us, imports not, as if ſome were, and ſome were not baptiſed (for then his Argument of Sanctification had not been binding to the generality of Chriſtians, which it is evident, it was in his intention) but it imports the contrary, that as many as were Chriſtians, were all Baptized, and were taught this to be the meaning of that great point and principle of Religion, That as they were Baptized into Chriſt thereby; ſo alſo into into his death.

I obſerve alſo out of this, 1 Cor. 10. That it was in Eſteem, yea, and taken for granted, a point of the then Religion, to receive the Lords Supper. For obſerve how he Reaſons againſt their Eating in the Idol's Temple, things Sacrifiſed to Idols, ver. 21. Te cannot Drink the Cup of the Lord, and the Cup of Devils: Te cannot be partakers of the Lord's Table, and of the Table of Devils. He ſet theſe two, one againſt the other; To Eat in the Idol's Temple, as a point of Heatheniſh Religion, and to partake of the Lord's Supper, as a point of our Chriſtian Profeſſion. Now that he might be ſure at once, for ever to knock down that Idolatrous practice, he uſeth this Argument drawn from that, which according to all the then received Principles, could not be denyed. He Argues with them in this manner, a main practice of your Chriſtian profeſſion, which you all take up, and of which you muſt in effect Renounce your Profeſſion, if you Renounce this Practice, is the Lord's Supper, It is the outward Badge of your Chriſtian Religion; and you muſt utterly renounce that, if you will needs alſo practice this other of Eating in the Idol's Temple; for there is a Contradiction between them, Te cannot Drink the Cup of the Lord, and the Cup of Devils. Chriſt cares not for your coming to his Supper, but had rather you ſhould keep away, if you alſo receive the Devil's Sacraments. Thus he plainly works upon this firm ground, in which they knew he muſt not be at a loſs, that they muſt continue to drink of that Cup, that they muſt partake of that Table, ſo he takes that for granted, as Sacred to them; and then infers that other, of not eating in the Idol's Temple. And it is as if he had ſaid, I know I have you faſt here; That you will never forſake Aſſembling your ſelves for the Lord's Supper, or neglect to do it; this I hope you will all ſay preſently, that you will never do: Now then ſaith he I tell you, you cannot partake of the Lord's Cup, and of the Devil's. Chooſe you whether you will give over the one or the other, upon your peril. He holds them hard to it, as this one, whiſt he argues from thence againſt the other. Now as to the Opinion of ſome Men in our Days, that profeſs they are not bound to the Lord's Snpper, and think it is no point of any Religion, but that they can live without it, or above it; If the Devil had thought of this, yea, and had put it into the Heads of any in theſe Days; unto ſuch the Apoſtle Paul's Argument had no ſtrength or force of Conviction. For if he had ſaid to them, Te cannot drink the Cup of the Lord in the Sacrament, &c. (as ver. 16.) they might readily have ſaid, or any one for them; This is no Argument to us, it reacheth not our principles, for we think not our ſelves obliged to drink the Cup of the Lord, nor to eat his Table. And indeed theſe that profeſs this principle, (I except the dark ſcrupled Seekers) can as well partake of the Maſs, as of the Lord's Supper, they are all to them but Forms, the one as well as the other; and a Chriſtian may uſe all, and is above all. This as to the firſt thing I obſerved, concerning theſe Ordinances.

Obſ. Tne Second Obſervation is; that there is to be a continuance of theſe Ordinances to after Ages, which out of the Scope of the Text, I demonſtrate thus; That twice in the 6th Verſe, and in the 11*th verſe*, in making the Reddition or Application of the Story of the Iſraelites, both for Ordinances and for like Puniſhment due to the abuſe of them, he ſay's, that in theſe they were τύποι ἡμῶν Types of us, ſo ver. 6. (which is their Concluſion as to their Enjoyment of like Ordinances) and ſo ver. 11. as to our incurring the ſame puniſhment, he had from the 6th verſe Diſcourſed of; he Subjoyns, Theſe things were written for our Admonition, upon whom the ends of the World are come. So that all Chriſtians, that do live under, or ought to live under theſe Ordinances, partaking of thoſe ſins, are to partake of theſe puniſhments, as well as theſe Corinthians. Some of the ſeekers interpreting that place in Matth. 28. 20. Go Preach and Baptize, I am with you in all things, to the end of the World. (The words being in the Original, τελείας τοῦ αἰῶνος in the ſingular Number) would have this determine in the firſt Age of the Church. Whereas every-where in Chriſt's Speeches afore, the very ſame Phraſe in the ſingular alſo, is put to expreſs the end of the World, or as Paul ſay's, 1 Cor. 11. 26. until Chriſt come. In Matth. 13. 40, 49. alſo you have the ſame phraſe where is meant the end of this World, when the Day of Judgment comes, as alſo plainly diſtinguiſht from the end of that Age, wherein Jeruſalem was deſtroyed, Matth. 24. 3. And Chriſt alſo adds in this place, of Matthew 28. 20. the word alway, which means All the days or times to the end of the World: And ſo all the Ages between are implyed. Well but further, here you ſee that in 1 Cor. 10, 11. it is affirmed of the Lord's Supper, as well as Baptiſm, that they concern all them, upon whom the ends of the World in the plural are come, that is, all the Ages, that ſucceed each other in this laſt Scene of the World. So as indeed if any were to be excepted, thoſe rather that lived in that firſt Age comparatively ſhould. We have lived 1600 years, ſince Paul wrote this, and upon us, rather than upon them, it might be ſaid, that the ends of the World are come: I will but caſt in this out of this Scripture more, and I think it is not altogether to be ſlighted as to his Head. You ſee he plainly Parallels our Sacraments, and their's as Types, and Anti-Types. Now what ſhould be the Myſtery then, that when he ſpeaks of that Sacramental Rock, which was Chriſt, and ſays that they drunk thereof, he would needs inſert one circumſtance concerning it, that is yet not ſo evident in the ſtory of the Old Teſtament? The Rock (ſays he) which followed them, that is, all along through their Travel in the Wilderneſs. It is to be ſuppoſed the Rock ſtood in its own place, but Moſes ſtriking it, and a River of Water ſpringing forth, ſerved them with Water, not only in that place, but followed them in all their Journey in that Deſert. Which the Pſalmiſt intimates, Pſal. 105. 41. He opened the Rock, and the waters guſhed out, they ran in the dry places like a River. Surely this is (as here) added to no other purpoſe, but to make up the Parallel in our Ordinances the Anti-Type, When God had ſtruck Chriſt the Rock, and opened his ſide, (and 'twas for us Rebels too, (as Moſes then called the Iſraelites) that Water and Blood came forth, which are Communicated to us in Baptiſm, which is a waſhing by Water, as Blood is held forth in the Lord's Supper.) Theſe Ordinances were as Channels cut out by God, through the Means and Conduct of which, this Rock ſhould follow us; and that whilſt the Church is in the Wilderneſs, and this ſide Canaan, as that did, as a Sacrament to the end of their Journey. And ſo in this, was the Type fulfilled to them, in the primitive Ages of the Church, and is yet to be fullfilled unto us, upon whom the ends of the World are come.

Ch. V.

I ſhall now by other Arguments farther prove, that there are Ordinances, or Inſtituted Worſhip, under the New Teſtament, to continue unto the end of the World.

1. The New Covenant hath Ordinances of Divine Worſhip annexed unto it, as well as the Old Covenant had; for which the Coherence of the Eighth, or Ninth Chapters to the Hebiews, the latter part of the Ninth, and the beginning of the Tenth, are a clear Evidence. The Scope of that Epiſtle, is indeed to ſhew how the Worſhip, and Ordinances of the Old Teſtament, were Tranſlated into a Worſhip under the New, in ſubſtance anſwering to it; and how Chriſt as an High Prieſt, was as Faithfull to God in his Houſe, as Moſes was, Hebr. 3. In the eighth Chapter, having Treated of the two Covenants, the Old and New, and by the new underſtanding that, wherein the promiſe was, That they ſhould not need to be Taught, &c. ver. 10. than preſently upon it, chap. 9. 1. he goes on thus. Then verily the firſt Covenant had alſo Ordinances of Divine Service, which was the Tabernacle, and the Worſhip performed there, ſo, ver. 2. to ver. 7. For there was a Tabernacle made, the firſt wherein was the Candleſtick and the Table, and the ſhew Bread; which is called the Sanctuary. And after the ſecond Vail, the Tabernacle which is called the Holieſt of all: Which had the Golden Cenſer, and the Ark of the Covenant, overlaid round about with Gold, wherein was the Golden pot that had Manna, and Aaron's Rod that budded, and the Tables of the Covenant; and over it, the Cherubims of glory, ſhadowing the Mercy-Seat, of which we cannot now ſpeak particularly. Now when theſe things were thus ordained, the Prieſts went always into the firſt Tabernacle, accompliſhing the Service of God. I lay hold of the word alſo, as implying, that therefore the New Covenan hath the like Ordinances, and not only ſo, but obſerve that in God's intention, ou Ordinances were the firſt of the two, and the chief, though their's firſt in tim For he ſay's not, the New Covenant hath alſo; but the Old had alſo; for ours wer more the Subſtance, their's more the Type and Shadow; yet ſo as both muſt hav Ordinances of Divine Worſhip, the New as well as the Old, whilſt it continue And ver. 10. They were appointed, but untill the time of the Reformation, or chang of Worſhip, to be made, not of the Abolition of it; and what thoſe Ordinances ar you know.

2. If there be no Inſtituted Ordinances to continue, then the ſecond Commandme is utterly Obliterated under the Goſpel, or under the times of the Goſpel, in whic theſe Ordinances are ſuppoſed to ceaſe. What is the difference between the firſt Commandment, and the ſecond? The firſt Commands ſuch Worſhip to God as is always, and for ever due to him, as he is God, and we Creatures, which is Termed Cultus Naturalis, Natural Worſhip; becauſe due upon the account of our being Creatures, and ſo Indiſpenſible and Eternal, and continuing in Heaven, as to fear God, love him, &c. The ſecond Commands Inſtituted Worſhip, or ſuch means and helps of Worſhip, as God Sanctifies by his Inſtitution, as helps and means to Worſhip him by, and convey himſelf to us, which continues whilſt we are on Earth. Now this Commandment hath been, and hath continued in all the States which Men have gone through, or ſhall go thorough whilſt on Earth. And though the Duties have been changed as the Prieſthood hath varied, or as God was pleaſed to ſignifie his good pleaſure, how he meant to be Worſhip't; yet ſo as in all States on Earth, there have been ſome or other ſuch Duties belonging to the Commandment in force; which ſufficiently argues, that Command to have been, and to be ſtill in force in all States.

1. In Innocency thoſe two Trees, the Tree of Life, and of the Knowledge of good evil, were two Sacraments Admoniſhing Adam, the one of his mutable condition, the other Sealing up the promiſe of Life. Under the Law, 'tis evident that a commanded Worſhip was in force, under the Goſpel which began to be Preached by John, together therewith was Baptiſm Inſtituted, of which Chriſt, (who repreſented us) did in the Name of us all, as Head; ſay, Thus it becomes (us) to fulfill all Righteouſneſs, and he began an Example unto us therein. And indeed if there were no ſecond Command in force under the Goſpel, then there were no ſuch ſin as Idolatry, or falſe Worſhip of the True God, as far as concerns the means of Worſhip. There will be no Idolatry but what is Heatheniſh, or the Worſhip of a falſe God. Now the Conſequence is good, for the Negative part of the Command; Thou ſhalt not make to thy ſelf an Image, or uſe falſe means to Worſhip the True God, is founded on the exiſtence of a poſitive part, that there are Means or Inſtitutions of True Worſhip, appointed by God. But now there is ſuch an Idolatry and Superſtition, of Worſhipping God by falſe means, forbidden, under the New Teſtament. For Col. 2. Paul bids them to take heed of Will-worſhip, and voluntary Humility not commanded, ver. 21, 22, 23: Touch not, Taſt not, Handle not: Which all are to periſh with the uſing after the Commandments and Doctrines of Men. Which things have indeed a ſhew of Wiſdom, in Will-worſhip and Humility, and neglecting of the Body, not in any Honour to the ſatisfying of the Fleſh. And John that lived to the end of that Age, at laſt ſtill chargeth them to keep themſelves from Idols, 1 Joh. 5.21. 'Twas an Admonition not ſo much againſt Heatheniſh Idolatry, which is to Worſhip outwardly another God, as againſt Popiſh, which was coming upon the World, (as Paul alſo foretold both to Timothy, and in his other Epiſtles) and for which God brought upon the Chriſtian World, thoſe plagues which have befaln the Grecian Churches, Rev. 9. 20. and for which Rome alſo is Threatned, Revel. chap. 17, & 18.

3. If there were no Ordinances, God ſhould have no proviſion for his publick worſhip, and Chriſt ſhould have no Court on Earth. Two things are the glory of a King, the Laws and Juriſdiction by which he Rules abroad, and the State and Reverence done him in his own Houſe at Home. Chriſt is the King of Nations, Rev. 15.3. and therefore all are Exhorted to Worſhip him, ver. 4. In Heb. 3. 1. Chriſt is as well Termed our High-Prieſt, as our Apoſtle. As our Apoſtle he hath given forth our Faith in the Doctrine, and we believe it: As our High-Prieſt, he is the Leader of all the Worſhip of the New Teſtament, as the High-Prieſt was of the Old. The Apoſtle makes an Inference from this, Heb. 10. ver. 21, 22, 23, 24, 25. By a new and living way which he had Conſecrated for us, through the Vail, that is to ſay, his Fleſh: And having an High-Prieſt over the Houſe of God: Let us draw near with a True Heart, in full aſſurance of Faith, having our Hearts ſprinkled from an Evil Conſcience, and our Bodies waſhed with pure water. Let us hold faſt the profeſſion of our Faith without wavering: (for he is Faithfull that promiſed) and let us conſider one another, to provoke unto love and to good Works. Not forſaking the Aſſembling of our ſelves together, as the manner of ſome is, but Exhorting one another; and ſo much the more, as ye ſee the Day approaching. Chriſt is an High-Prieſt, therefore he hath an Houſe, a Court on Earth, and therefore Worſhip, in which you muſt draw near with inward Waſhings and Sprinklings, (as the Prieſts of Old in the Type did with Water, &c.) And therefore he muſt alſo have Aſſemblies to be Worſhipt in : So ver. 25. it follows, Not forſaking the Aſſembling of your ſelves together. He exhorteth them to meet in Churches, as the Jews did in Synagogues, ſo the word τὴν ἐπισυναγωγὴν ſignifies. And now ſuch Aſſemblies muſt have Ordinances to converſe with God in, as they accordingly had Preaching and ſinging of Pſalms, 1 Cor. 14. 23, 26. and Sacraments of the Lord's Supper, 1 Cor. 11. to which all were bound; for they were to tarry one for another, ver. 33. And they being the Top Ordinance of the Goſpel, their whole Aſſembling or Meeting was Denominated from it, Acts 20. v. 6. When the Diſciples met to break Bread, and 1 Cor. 11. 20. When ye come together into one place, this is not to eat the Lord's Supper. Thus their Aſſembling to Worſhip, and their eating the Lord, are promiſcuouſly put one for the other. So among the Antients, this did bear the Denomination, being Termed Sacra σύναξις, and is put for the whole of Goſpel Worſhip in the Propheſy, from the Riſing of the Sun, even unto the going down of the ſame, my Name ſhall be great among the Gentiles, and in every place Incenſe ſhall be offered unto my Name, and a pure offering : For my Name ſhall be great among the Heathen, ſaith the Lord of Hoſts, Mal. 1. 11.

See Mr. Joſeph Mede, pag. 359. of his works, Edit. Lond. 1677.

But to prove the continuance of theſe two Ordinances, both of Preaching, and of the Lord's Supper, we need only conſider, that Chriſt hath Adjoyned his promiſe to them both. Chriſt's promiſe is annexed, to that of Preaching, Matth. 28. 20. Teaching them to do what ever I have Commanded you, and Lo I am with you to the end of the World; and as for the Lord's Supper, Paul expreſly ſays, As I received of the Lord, ſo I deliver to you, 1 Cor. 11. 23. It is therefore one of theſe Commands of Chriſt ; And do this (ſaid Chriſt, Luke 22. 19.) in Remembrance of me, which is there expreſſed as a Command, and implyed by the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 11. 2. I praiſe you, that you keep the Ordinances, as I delivered them to you; whereof this of the Lord's Supper was one, and a great one inſiſted on throughout that Chapter. And writing to the Theſſalonians, and giving a warning to them, and to thoſe that ſhould live in the times when Popery ſhould over-ſpread the World, (of which ſpeaks, 2 Theſſ. 2. 3. to 13.) He Admoniſheth a Remedy againſt theſe Seducements, ver. 15. To hold faſt the Traditions which you have been taught, whether by Word or by Epiſtle. This, though given to the Theſſalonians, yet muſt needs more properly concern thoſe that ſhould live in the times, when the perverting of Ordinances ſhould come into the World : For then is the moſt need of that Exhortation, when there is an Advance of Popiſh Innovations, then is the proper ſeaſon for it. And therefore though it concerned thoſe Theſſalonians in theſe times, when the Myſtery of Iniquity began to work ; yet upon the ſame ground more fully it concerns us in theſe times when this Myſtery of Iniquity hath prevailed. For their ſakes therefore, this was written upon whom theſe latter ends of the World are come ; and ſo concerns us and our Foreſathers, who Reformed from Popery, to hold firmly to Scriptures and Ordinances, as a preſervative againſt Popery. Yea, Paul goes further, 1 Cor. 11. 26. For (ſays he) as often as ye eat this Bread, and drink this Cup, ye do ſhew the Lord's Death till he come, and again, do this in Remembrance of me. It is as if he had ſaid, Chriſt muſt be abſent till the day of Judgment, and the Heaven of Heavens muſt contain him till then; and to keep up the Remembrance of that great love of his, in dying, he hath appointed this as the Memorial of him whilſt abſent, till he come. And what manner of coming that is, which puts the Period to this his abſence, the Angels hath reſolved us, and alſo how he will come, Acts 1. 10, 11. And while they looked ſtedfaſtly towards Heaven, as he went up, behold two Men ſtood by them in white Apparel, which alſo ſaid, ye Men of Galilee, why ſtand ye gazing up into Heaven ? This ſame Jeſus which is taken up from you into Heaven, ſhall ſo come in like manner, as ye have ſeen him go into Heaven. If ye ſay, he is already come in Spirit ; do but conſider who was more fill'd with the Spirit, than Chriſt himſelf ? and yet he was not only Baptized, but in being Baptized, profeſſeth his obſervance of it to be this end, to fulfill all Righteouſneſs, and he ſeems alſo to ſpeak in the Name of us, i. e. of all Believers, and ſo it becomes us to fulfill, &c. Matth. 3. 15. becauſe he, as the Head, gave example to all his ſucceeding Members. And not only ſo, but though he thereupon received the Spirit, and was in Spirit in the Wilderneſs, and that above meaſure, as John Teſtifies of him, John 3. 34. yet he lived under the Obſervation of all the Jewiſh Ordinances of Worſhip, as going to the Feaſts, eating the Paſſover, &c.

CHAP. VI.

That by Excommunication more is meant than bare caſting out of the Church. That it is an Ordinance of Chriſt, to deliver the Excommunicate Perſon to Satan in his Name and Power. The Rules which Chriſt hath given for Church Admonitions and Cenſures.

THO' this Ordinance of Excommunication be deſcribed many ways, As 1. Let him be to the as an Heathen and a Publican, Mat. 18. 17. And 2. With ſuch an one no not to eat, 1 Cor. 5. 11. And 3. It is expreſſed as a Caſting out of the Church, John Epiſt. 3. ver. 10. yet over and above all this, it is called a delivering unto Satan, 1 Cor. 5. 5. And now that by this phraſe more is intended than ſimply an ejection out of the Church, theſe following Arguments evince.

1. That word of delivering to Satan, imports ſomething poſitive, diſtinct from, and including more in it than Ejection out of the Church. It imports a giving up a Perſon to receive a poſitive puniſhment from Satan; therefore is more than a caſting out of the Church. This is apparent, for as the Sentence of a Judge (tho' it doth not pitch upon the conſequent of the puniſhment of Death, viz. the ſending a Man to Hell, nor doth he expreſs the Sentence he judgeth him to by that) imports more than a mere caſting the condemned Man out of the World, for the Sentence directly expreſſeth that puniſhment which the Judge hath power to inflict, viz. The carrying of the Man back to the Gaol from whence he came, and from thence to the place of Execution, and that there he ſhould be hang'd (tho' he doth not put it into the Sentence, in the Name of the King to deliver this Man to the Devil to be Damn'd) ſo in the Sentence of Excommunication, there is more implied than a caſting of the Perſon out of the Society of Chriſtians; for the Judgment, the Sentence, and that in the Name and Power of Chriſt is to deliver unto Satan. It is not to leave the Man unto Satan only, but it is to deliver unto Satan, which is an Act of Authority, to give him up unto him, as to give a Man up to the Jaylor or to the Tormentor. Thus when God ſpeaks to Satan of Job, he is in thine hand (ſaith he) I have given him up unto thee, Job 1. 12. and ch. 2. 6.

But you will ſay, the bare caſting of a Perſon out of the Church ſtill imports but the conſequent of it, viz. A delivering him up to Satan, as to deprive of Light is to give up to Darkneſs. But unto that it's anſwered, that what the formal Sentence of Excommunication pitches upon, is more than a mere conſequent of the Perſon's being caſt out, or is more than accidental: For what the very formal Sentence of Excommunication pitches upon, and which is in the power of Chriſt, is not barely leaving the Man unto Satan, but a delivering of him unto Satan. Yea this is in the very definition of Excommunication, and therefore is not to be omitted. For that which is the poſitive form of the Sentence, and by which Excommunication is expreſſed, containeth the eſſential terminative object or matter of it; that a Man is ſo delivered up to the Devil, as in the Name, ſo in the Power of the Lord Jeſus; now this, viz. The delivering of a Perſon to Satan in the Name of Chriſt, is a diſtinct character of Excommunication, as that is of Baptiſm, I Baptize thee in the Name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt. As in the act of Ordination, when you ſay, I Ordain thee a Miniſter or a Paſtor, it imports truly what is ſaid, and not only in a Metaphor, but a reality; ſo in this Act of Excommunication, it is with the Power of the Lord Jeſus to deliver ſuch an one unto Satan, therefore when Chriſt doth give Commiſſion to the Church to do it, in his Name and Power, this being the formal Sentence, his Power concurreth to it. Now this is more than to throw out of the Church, for if there was only a Power to throw the Man out of the Church in the Name of Chriſt, without a Power to deliver unto Satan, the Church would have no more Prerogative than what is a common thing to all Societies. But now when the Church can give Satan Power over a Man, this is an act of the Power of Jeſus Chriſt indeed, peculiar to a Church of his.

2. Again, If Excommunication puts a Man into a different ſtate than merely that of being again thrown into the World under Satan, as the World is, that never profeſt Chriſt, then it imports ſome diſtinct thing from caſting out of the Church. But a Perſon's being Excommunicated, is a differing thing from being in the World or under Satan, as the World is: And it is ſo not only in this reſpect, that they that are in the World, and never were of any Church, are ſo in the World as withal they never were of any Church, as this Man hath been, but it is alſo different in reſpect of ſome ſpecial Power that Satan ſhould have over this Excommunicated Perſon. Which is evident by this, becauſe that Power which Satan hath over a Man Unregenerate in the World, is to carry him on to Sin, to work effectually in the Children of Diſobedience, Eph. 2. 2. therefore we are ſaid, Col. 1. 13. to be Tranſlated out of the Kingdom of Darkneſs, that is, of Satan, who, as the Strong Man, keepeth all in Peace. But ſo to be delivered to Satan cannot be the meaning of Excommunicating a Man, for the intent of this is to deſtroy the fleſh, and to ſave his Spirit, therefore it is not to deliver a Man unto Satan, ſo as to be a Man of the World out of the Church. Again the difference is evident by this, that this Man's puniſhment is in other reſpects, greater than that of a Man Unregenerate in the World, for as the Apoſtle ſaith, the Saints may eat with them of the World, but with ſuch a one as is Excommunicate, are not to eat, 1 Cor. 5. 11.

3. Excommunication imports a poſitive puniſhment, for it is a ſpiritual Revenge. The Negative throwing out of the Church is but that which is common to all Societies; But the Weapons of our Warfare (ſays the Apoſtle) are mighty through God, having in a readineſs to revenge all Diſobedience, 2 Cor. 10. 4, 5, 6. As will be evident, if we do but lay all theſe following things together. 1. That Satan is ready to puniſh the Man in his Spirit by Terrors, , and to ſet on his ſins with horrors, if he have leave from Chriſt. 2. This Man is by the Power of Chriſt given up and not left only to him. 3. He is given up to Satan to puniſh and correct him, 1 Tim. 1. 20. Whom I have delivered to Satan that they may learn not to blaſpheme, that is, that they may learn how horrid a ſin it is to blaſpheme, by what Satan inflicts, the word tranſlated to Learn is in the Greek παιδευθῶσι which is, to be diſciplined as a Child is, to learn by Rods, ſo that being delivered unto Satan to learn how dreadful it is to blaſpheme, implies that Satan is to whip them, that they may learn by a ſuitable puniſhment what it is to blaſpheme, by Satan's caſting Helliſh Terrors into their Mind.

4. And the Analogy of a Man's ſin when he deſerveth Excommunication, and the puniſhment it ſelf ſeem to be ſuitable, and that the ſin deſerves it in a way of proportion. For when a man is obſtinate, the frame of his Spirit is ſuch, that he doth not regard the Ordinances, therefore to be caſt out of the Communion of Saints would not be a ſore puniſhment to him, neither would that be enough to bring him in, and therefore the only way to bring this man in is, to have Satan ſet on his back with terrors, as in the work of humiliation at firſt.

5. Then again, ſuch a man hath grieved the Holy Ghoſt the Comforter, and therefore he is ſuitably given up unto Satan as an Accuſer and Tormentor: And ſo the phraſe of delivering unto Satan ſeems to mean a Spiritual puniſhment oppoſite unto joy in the Holy Ghoſt, which is the fruit of obedience; that as the Kingdom of God is Joy and Righteouſneſs, and Peace, Rom. 14. 17. The Peace of God ſhall guard your hearts through the working of the Holy Ghoſt, Phil. 4. 7. So that eſtate this Man is given up to, is an eſtate of terror and darkneſs; it is not to be an Unregenerate Man; but it is to be under the bondage of Satan.

6. And then again, Excommunication is called the retaining of Sin, and binding of Sin, a binding of Sin upon the Conſcience: Now the queſtion is, Quo efficiente, by whom this ſhould be done? This ſentence of delivering him unto Satan, implies, that Satan hath power given him to ſet his Sin on upon his Conſcience, and that he is able to ſet Sin on upon the Conſcience is evident from other Scriptures.

7. Again we do find by experience, that where Excommunication is not Adminiſtred rightly, there the Saints oftentimes are given up to very great terrors of Conſcience, and that from Satan, and left to great Temptations; the Lord ſometime working without the Ordinance, that which he doth work by the Ordinance of Excommunication, when it is rightly adminiſtred.

8. This fruit doth ſeem to have been in that Corinthian, 2 Cor. 2. for the Apoſtle deſires them to forgive him, leſt he ſhould be ſwallowed up with over much ſorrow, ver. 7. It ſeems to be more than an humane ſorrow, or more than a ſorrow which would have been from the Holy Ghoſt's working, for that would not have ſwallowed a Man up, It implies therefore that he was in Satan's Power, We art not ignorant (ſaith he) of his devices, ver. 11. and that his devices were to keep this poor man in his clutches. And the phraſe there, ſwallowed up, anſwereth to what is ſaid of Satan in other caſes, He goeth up and down ſeeking whom he may devour, 1 Pet. 5. 8. Whom he may drink up, ſo the word ſignifieth, καταπιεῖν.

9. And again, Excommunication may ſeem to be more than meerly a throwing out of the Church, by that parallel of a greater Excommunication than what is ordinary, that Anathema Maranatha, 1 Cor. 16. 22. Which was not only to give a Man up to Satan for a time, but to give him up into an eternal curſe, when they ſaw that a Man which had been a Profeſſor, loved not the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that is, hated him, as ſinning againſt the Holy Ghoſt. Now if the Church in that caſe hath power more than to eject, viz. To eject with an eternal curſe, never to receive a Man more, which God ratifieth in Heaven, then in the ordinary caſting a Man out of the Church, tho' there be hope that he may be recalled again, the way of doing it, is not merely a private puniſhment, or a throwing him out of the Church, which ſhould work upon him, in a moral way of a ſorrowful thought, and ſenſe, that he is caſt out from among the People of God, but it is a giving him up to Satan to terrifie him, God ſanctifying that, as he doth other Afflictions to bring him in.

10. If Excommunication were nothing elſe, but a ſecluſion from the Church, then for the ſubſtance of the Act it would be no more than a continued ſuſpenſion; for if the ſubſtance of the act be the ſame, they do not differ, tho' the one be done out of an Act of Authority, the other not. They will admit him again upon Repentance, if he be Excommunicated, as well as when Suſpended, and if he do not Repent, they will not admit him, no more than when he is Excommunicated. And when he is Excommunicated he needs not a new admiſſion, as when he is Suſpended and Repents he doth not. So that for the extrinſecal act, they are all one. But Excommunication hath a Spiritual puniſhment attending it; and therefore anſwerably when that Corinthian was to be received again, 2 Cor. 2. They are not ſimply to paſs an Act of Forgiveneſs, and to Receive him again, but to comfort him alſo.

If it be Objected, that we do not always ſee this effect, of a Spiritual puniſhment following Excommunication.

1. We Reply Firſt; That there have been very few Excommunications in the World, that have been from thoſe that have had the right power of doing of it, And thoſe Excommunications which have been Adminiſtred by the Rightful Perſons, yet have not been due, becauſe proceeding on too ſlight Occaſions, and ſuch as have not deſerved Excommunication.

2. They have, in their Excommunication, truſted more to the power of the Magiſtrate, when it ſhould have come to a Writ, de Excommunicato capiendo, or to horning of a Man as in Scotland, Baniſhing him, or depriving him of his Eſtate, &c. they have confided, I ſay, in the Magiſtrate's power, and in his puniſhment, more than in Excommunication, or elſe why have they Recourſe to it, to make a Man Repent? Whereas if they would wholy leave it unto God, to inflict that which he hath ordained to be the puniſhment, and that ſufficient too, (for all his means are ſufficient, as the Apoſtle ſay's, the Weapons of our Warfare, are mighty through God to Revenge all Diſobedience,) 2 Cor. 10. 4. It would prove Efficacious enough to all ends and purpoſes, and ſufficient, for ſuch a Man, would that puniſhment be. But becauſe they put confidence in an Arm of Fleſh to bring him in, as if that were more an effectual means, than the power of God; therefore God makes his Ordinance to be but as an Arm of Fleſh, and to have no other effect or fruit, than what the Magiſtrates puniſhment hath.

3. It is with this, as with all other Ordinances, which do not alway's attain their end, which they are principally ordained for, becauſe that God works freely by them. Preaching is ordained to Convert, yet there are Millions of Men, to whom the word is preached, upon whom it hath not this effect; for although they have all heard, yet they have not all believed, Rom. 10. 18. It is enough, that God hath ordained it to ſuch an end, and it takes place in ſome, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks; and ſo alſo hath this very Ordinance wrought in that very way, as divers Inſtances might be ſhewn.

4. Jeſus Chriſt always fulfils what he hath promiſed, Mat. 18. 20. I will be with you, and in the midſt of you, either to bleſs this my Ordinance, by giving Repentance, or giving up to a Reprobate Senſe. So as Excommunication hath uſually its effect one way or other, the Man is given up unto Satan, and if it have not that direct effect of Terrifying of him, ſo as to bring him to Repentance, he is given up to a Reprobate Senſe, Satan entring into him, as into Judas, ſo that he turneth a Perſecutor, as was frequent in the primitive times, that Men once Excommunicated turned Perſecutors. They forſook the Aſſemblies of the Saints, which was a ſtep to the ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, Heb. 10. 25, 26, 27. When they were thrown out, they could come at them no more, and ſo were given up unto Satan for ever.

Parkerus De polit. Eccleſ. lib. cap. 5.

Object. In Matth. 18. 17. all that is ſaid is only, let him be to thee, as an Heathen and a Publican.

Anſw. 1. There he ſpeaks in the Language of the Jews, and ſo expreſſeth Excommunication only, by what caſting out of the Synagogues was amongſt them as elſewhere, Chriſt expreſſeth the Ordinances of the Goſpel, under the Jewiſh Phraſe, leave thy Gift at the Altar, Matt. 5. 24. Now the Jews did not know what it was to be delivered unto Satan, and therefore no wonder if Chriſt did not expreſly ſpeak of it in that place of Matth. 18. 17.

But 2. One place expounds another, and that which he calleth there, Matth. 18. 17. Let him be to thee an Heathen and a Publican, is in 1 Cor. 5. called a delivering unto Satan.

Then 3. This delivering unto Satan, was exemplified in the puniſhment of Judas, for after he was gone out, (as it is judged by Piſcator and others, he did not receive the Lords Supper, but was ſent out) preſently the Devil entred into him; he was a Branch caſt out, John 15. 6.

4. Though our Saviour Chriſt expreſſeth it to them in the Jewiſh Language, in Mat. 18. 17. Yet to the ſame Apoſtles, when this Ordinance of Excommunication came to be exerciſed in a Church, his Spirit expreſſeth more fully what was the intent of that Ordinance, not ſimply to throw a Man out, to avoid outward couverſe with him, and in that Senſe to be as an Heathen and a Publican, but to be a delivering unto Satan. So that as the Church of the Goſpel in the priviledges of it, exceedeth that of the Law, and that priviledge they had in the Synagogues, ſo the diſpriviledging of a Man from the Communion of the Saints under the Goſpel, hath an higher puniſhment, than the Synagogues knew.

5. When Chriſt ſaid, let him be to thee as an Heathen and a Publican, he expreſſeth there not ſo much what the Churche's Cenſure pitcheth upon, but what the conſequent is, viz. the manner of their converſe afterwards towards, him, therefore he ſaith, Let him be to thee, he ſaith, not only let him be to the Church, but to thee. He expreſſeth it by what is the conſequent, but in 1 Cor. 5. 5. He expreſſeth the formal Sentence, when the Apoſtle ſaith, no not with ſuch an one to eat, he expreſſeth there indeed the conſequent of the Sentence, but delivering unto Satan, is put into the Sentence it ſelf.

I ſhall urge one Argument more, to prove that Excommunication is not meerly an Humane Ejection out of a Society, but an Ordinance in the Church Eſtabliſhed by Chriſt's Inſtitution, becauſe Chriſt hath given us expreſs Rules by Church Admonitions, and cenſures; we find as direct Rules chalked out, for the Series and Order of proceedings therein, as any State can take for ordering proceedings in Civil Cauſes.

1. For the matter of Chriſt's Cenſures, what we are to convert in Men, and how we muſt apply thoſe Cenſures, we have our Limits and Rules in the word, ſo as we need no Orders or Canons to be made to make new matter, or the chief matter of Church Cenſures. For plainly it is told us, that Sin only is the Subject of Church-Cogniſance, that it is a Tranſgreſſion of ſome Law of God, Them that ſin, (ſay's Paul to Timothy, 1 Tim. 5. 20.) Rebuke; Now what is ſin, and not ſin, the word is the ſole Judge of, and a perfect Rule of.

And 2. It is Scandalous ſin that is the matter of Cenſure, ſin judged ſo by common non light, and received Principles ; ſin that goes afore to Judgment, that you may ead afar off, 1 Tim. 24. Doubtleſs Diſpenſations and ſins controverted, are not to be nade the Subject of Church Cenſures ; for if the weak are not to be received to uch, then neither are they to be caſt out for ſuch. Inſtruction may be uſed to conciences ignorant, as the phraſe is, 1 Tim. 25. but Admonition only for ſins taken or granted, and profeſſed to be ſins by the light of Nature, and the common light f Saints, 1 Cor. 5. 1, 8, 3. For how alſo ſhall all fear ? 1 Tim. 5.20.

2. For the ways of dealing with ſuch ſinners, we have Admonition, Excommuication, and Rejection preſcribed.

1. Admonition, Them that ſin Rebuke, 1 Tim. 5. 20. and that not privately, (if he ſin be open) but publickly afar off ; to the end others may fear.

2. For Excommunication, we have Warrant after Admonition, Tit. 3. 10. After the firſt and ſecond Admonition Reject, which in 1 Cor. 5. 5. called delivering nto Satan, &c.

3. We have Order given, for the Degrees of proceedings in theſe, as orderly as ny Law can make proviſion for the Indemnity of Men Innocent and Juſt, proceedng in any Civil Court in order to amend Men.

1. If the ſin be private, ſo as thou alone knoweſt it, that thy Brother ſin againſt hee, Mat. 11. 15. Go and tell him his fault, between him and thee alone, if he hear nd Repent, (as 'tis, Luke 17. 3.) thou ſhalt forgive him, and it ſhall go no further. This proviſion hath Chriſt took, to prevent the Reputation of Perſons, ſo to mend them, as not to blaze their faults ; and this not for one ſo ſining, but if ſeven imes, that is, never ſo oft, Luke 17. 4.

If 2. He neglect to hear thee, that is, Repents not, then take two or three and ell him of it afore them, and if he denies not the Fact, and yet Repents not, then thou haſt two or three Witneſſes of his not denying the Fact, and yet of his Obſtinacy and Hardneſs in not Relenting, and of his Impenitency ſo it follows ; That in he Mouth of two or three Witneſſes, every word may be eſtabliſhed, that is brought nto publick.

Therefore 3. Now the matter though but private at firſt, is ripened for Churchcogniſance, If he neglect to hear them, tell it to the Church. But if it were a ſin that is publick, that it is though, privately committed, yet made known, commonly Reproved, and ſo commonly known, as it is, 1 Cor. 5. 1. Then the Church is to take immediate notice of it publickly, without telling it in private ; and thoſe that can accuſe, ſhould impeach, as 1 Cor. 5. he ſhews, and alſo 1 Tim. 5. 20.

But 4. If it be a ſin that is ſuſpected, and cannot be proved, (whether commonly reported or private) and that by two or three Witneſſes, the Officers are to caſt it out of the Church proceeding, and not to receive it, Receive not an Accuſation, ſo as to proceed in it, unleſs it appears evident by two or three Witneſſes, This Rule is given about Admoniſhing Officers, 2 Tim. 5. 19: But it regards alſo every Man elſe, Matth. 18. 16. Then, when any ſin is thus made of publick Cogniſance, 1. They are to Admoniſh. 2. To Excommunicate in caſe of Obſtinacy and Impenitence.

To conclude all in a word, if Chriſt had not ſetled by his Inſtitution the Order, Diſcipline and Government of his Churches, if he had not given Eſtabliſhed Rules for Church Cenſures, Admonitions and Excommunication : If a certain Platform of Church-Government, had not been fixed by him, we ſhould have no Warrant to endeavour a Reformation, when the Order and Diſcipline of the Churches of Chriſt is impaired, and almoſt loſt. For there would be no Rule to go by in, ſuch a Reformation. And without a Rule of Divine Inſtitution, there could be no ſetting things right, when amiſs, no διόρθωσις, as the Apoſtle calls it, Heb. 9. 10. Nor could we produce any Warrant to Advance the Spiritual Scepter and Kingdom of our Lord Chriſt, if we did not know, by the Rules and Laws of his own Inſtitution, what it is.

The Government OF THE Churches of Chriſt.

BOOK. II.

Of the Divine Inſtitution of a Congregational Church. That it is not Secondary, or Conſequent upon a Charter given to the Church Univerſal, as virtually included therein, but is immediate and proper to it. That Chriſt Inſtituted ſuch a Church, in Mat. 18. and gave the Power of the Key's to it. That ſuch Congregational Churches were Primitive and Apoſtolical, proved from the Inſtances of Churches planted by the Apoſtles. That the Conſtitution and Order of ſuch Churches, is moſt fitly ſuited to the Edification of the Saints, and moſt exactly accommodated to their various Conditions. That Chriſt hath not only Inſtituted a Congregational Church, but hath appointed what the Extent and Limits of it ſhould be.

CHAP. I.

That the Inſtitution of Particular Churches is not virtual only, or Secondary, and Dependent on the Charter given to the Church Univerſal, but immediate and proper to them, as Particular Churches.

THEY, who aſſert the General Church to be a Political Body, ſeem to be divided into thoſe two ſeveral ways of explaining it. 1. That it cometh to be a Political Body Aſcendendo, ſo making a Congregation to be Eccleſia prima, a Church firſt deſigned in the Inſtitution, and which the Inſtitution falleth upon; but yet, that by the vertue of the ſame Commiſſion, that Saints make up a particular Church, many Churches may make up one Church, and more of thoſe Churches may make up a greater Church, for Appeals, &c. And ſo by the like reaſon, the Univerſal Church cometh to be a Political Body, the National, or Provincial Churches, being but Eccleſiæ ortæ, removes from, and repreſentations of thoſe that are Eccleſiæ primæ, the firſt Churches which are Congregations. This opinion, I ſhall conſider, when I come to diſcourſe of the Nature of Synods, and thei Subordination.

2. Others form the Inſtitution to be deſcendendo, as aſſerting the firſt principa Charter, to be given to the Church Univerſal, ſo as that is by Inſtitution firſt Church, and particular Congregations have it but by a derived right, as leſſer Leaſe have their's out of a greater Charter. And the reaſon that is given, is this, tha when the Church Univerſal was but ſo many (or if it were again reduced to ſo ſmall number) as might meet in one place, they met by vertue of being the Church Univerſal; but that it afterwards was multiplied to ſo many, as that they muſt meet i ſeveral places, which is the occaſion of forming particular Churches, this is accidental and occaſional, and ſo they are to be regarded as one Church ſtill, and ſo tha firſt fundamental Inſtitution goes on. For number or multiplication of Churches, i not the object of God's Inſtitution; for God ordained not firſt that Churches ſhoul be many. If theſe many particular Churches are fram'd, it is with Proviſo, and Sub conditione; namely, only when they are ſo far multiplied. Nor did Chriſt give ſuch command, that when they did ariſe to ſuch a number, they ſhould make ſeveral Churches, only neceſſity doth that, which yet ſtill proceeds by vertue of the general grant.

But to refute this, conſider, 1. That if there had been a time in which the Univerſal Church was ſo ſmall under the New Teſtament, living alſo together as they might have met in one place, they had not met by vertue of their being the Univerſal Church, or being a Myſtical body to Chriſt, as the Church Univerſal is: For they had been a Church Myſtical unto Chriſt, tho' they had not ſo met, even as the Church Myſtical now is a Body to Chriſt, though it never doth thus meet. Yea, thoſe Saints who then made this Church Univerſal, might have Worſhipped apart, and ſingly, and God might have ordered it ſo; therefore that they ſhould meet, and meet together fixedly for ſupernatural Ends, and Ordinances, this dependeth over and above, upon a ſpecial Will of God ſuperadded to this Univerſal Church as ſuch. If therefore when the Univerſal Church was no more than could meet in one place, it muſt have had for thoſe fixed Meetings, and the priviledges of them, a Divine appointment, and if it met then, it muſt be by vertue of a ſpecial Inſtitution: Then afterward, when it was divided into many Congregations, they muſt meet by a ſpecial Divine Inſtitution too. If the Univerſal Church was no more than could meet in one, yet they muſt then have, for thoſe fixed meetings, met by a ſpecial Inſtitution and Priviledges, and afterward when they are many, they met by the ſame ſpecial Inſtitution alſo; and ſo what at firſt ſuited their condition, when they were no more than could meet in one place, ſuiteth their condition afterward, when they are multiplied.

2. They could not then meet Qua Univerſal Catholick Church, for the Univerſal Catholick Church, is called ſuch in reſpect of it's being in all Nations, both Jews and Gentiles. Whereas the Inſtitution of a particular Church is the ſame, whether there be no more Saints, than can meet in one place at once, or whether there be more. When they are many, thoſe many do ſet up ſeveral Congregations upon the ſame ſpecial ground that the Univerſal Church did ſet up a Meeting. And the Univerſal Church did ſo meet in a Congregation, by a ſpecial ſuperadded ground over and above their being a Church Univerſal, for it further depended upon God's Will, that they ſhould all meet thus together fixedly, for they might have met but occaſionally ſome times, and they might have met in ſeveral companies, or they might have Worſhipped privately, and God's Ordinance might only have been ſo adminiſtred; for if they meet for theſe Ordinances qua Church Univerſal, then in Heaven they ſhould meet for them too. So then that they ſhould meet in one fixed Society for publick Worſhip, is by Inſtitution. And

2. This Inſtitution of meeting together, was rather made, and ſuited for the Saints when multiplied, than in reſpect of their being one body, as an Univerſal Church.

For 1. Under the New Teſtament there was never a time (that we know of) after the Jewiſh Law came to be diſſolved, that this Univerſal Church could meet in one, for although not at Hieruſalem, yet ſurely in whole Judea there were more ſcatter'd up and down, than could have met in one place.

2. Under the New Teſtament, when the Church Univerſal is multiplied to all Nations, (in reſpect of which it is called the Church Catholick, by way of diſtincti-on from the Jews) then it is ſo ſcattered, as that they cannot meet together, no not by way of Repreſentation. So as indeed this pretended principle, that Inſtitutions ſhould mainly fall upon the Church Univerſal, is ſuch as was never practiſed, nor extant de facto, neither at firſt nor at laſt.

Then 3. We may obſerve that God did frame the Inſtitution of his Churches, according to what, in the Wiſdom of his Counſel, he hath determined, and foreſaw would fall out. His Inſtitutions are ſuch, as he in Wiſdom knew would beſt ſuit the condition of Saints in all Ages to come, under the Goſpel. He therefore ordered particular Congregations, as the moſt commodious Seat of publick Worſhip, Government, and Order, and as the beſt, and fitteſt ſecurity to preſerve the Saints from Scandal, and alſo the means of maintaining among them, the moſt intire kind of Communion, which could be attained.

That particular Congregations do not meet as Aſſemblies for publick Worſhip and Ordinances, by vertue of a Charter given firſt to the Church Univerſal, is evident from theſe Reaſons.

1. If they do meet by vertue of the general Charter of the Church Univerſal, and they needed no other Warrant than that: Then if they meet occaſionally only, ſome Saints together at one time, and others at another, and not fixedly, whether for Government or Worſhip, they do thereby ſatisfie the Obligation they have, by vertue of the general Warrant. And indeed, to make running Churches, and Societies of Saints, up and down in the World, would more ſatisfie the obligation of the general Charter, and come up more nearly to it: Therefore for them to have a fixed ſpecial Tye to particular Churches in a conſtant way, when the Churches are many, muſt needs be by a further ſpecial Inſtitution.

2. If they thus meet by vertue of their being the Church Univerſal, then they met by vertue of it only in all times, and then afore the Law was given; and ſo the ſame Government, that is now pleaded for, from the Notion of the Church Univerſal, ſhould have been then. And then likewiſe after the Law, the Jews ſhould have met by the Law of the Church-Catholick; And if ſo, there ſhould be now the like meeting for publick Worſhip of the whole Church, as was then, viz. three times a year. Was their meeting by vertue of their Catholick Communion, or as they were a Nation? As they were a Nation ſurely: For if multitudes out of other Nations had been converted, they had not been, (as the Ninevites, and the like, where they had not been bound to the Ceremonial Law, neither were the Jews themſelves, that lived out of the Land diſperſed) bound to come up to the Synedrim. And ſuppoſe that they had been the Church Univerſal, yet that they were caſt into a National way, was by Inſtitution, over and above that univerſal conſideration, as they were the Seed of Abraham.

3. If the Inſtitution of a particular Church, depend on the Charter firſt given to the Church Univerſal, then where there are more of Believers, and more of Elders, there would be more of the keys, if they had them by vertue of the Univerſal Church; for why? there would be more of the Univerſal Church in ſuch a Body. The Inſtitution therefore muſt fall primarily upon their being a particular Body to Chriſt, meeting in his Name, by his ſpecial Commiſſion, though the Perſons be but two or three, that is a few in number, which argues, that he doth not put his Inſtitution barely upon their Memberſhip, or Station in the Church Univerſal, but upon the Formality of their being his Body thus united; his Bleſſing is given to them, as formed up by Inſtitution, whether they be Saints more or fewer, as among the Jews alſo it was in their Cities and Towns, as well as they were a Commonwealth in their Nation.

According to this Aſſerted Charter of the Church Univerſal, when as he ſaith, tell the Church, Matth. 18. 19. it ſhould be meant primarily, of the Church Univerſal, for the Inſtitution and Rule for Church proceedings, would fall firſt upon it. But he ſpeaks plainly of a particular Church, (and the Chriſtian Church, being as then to be gathered, when he uttered it; if he would have made a Charter to the Univerſal, then had been the fitteſt time to have expreſt it) for he declareth his Inſtitution there, when he had but a few Diſciples about him, and thoſe with him, and yet declareth his Inſtitution for all Ages, to tell it to that next Church, whereof a Man is a Brother. And if the Church Univerſal had been intended here, then the Church

Ch. II.

Church of the Jews had not been intended as the pattern, which would overthrow the main Aſſertion of our Presbyterian Brethren.

5. The truth is, that the meeting of the Univerſal, is but occaſional, for in all the Ages, that the Church was to run through, it hath ſeldom been, yea, could never be: And when that which we call General Councils have been, they were rather for matter of Doctrine, than for Government, or for Appeals about perſons, and that the Inſtitution could not fall upon. It's true in Matth. 16. 18. the word Church is taken indefinitely, and for the Church Univerſal; but yet not as an Inſtitution Political, therefore he doth not ſay, he will give the keys to it, but unto Peter, as Repreſenting both Saints and Miniſters, to be divided into ſeveral Bodies, as afterwards Chriſt ſhould appoint it.

CHAP. II.

That the Grand Charter of Church-Government, or the power of the Keys, is granted not to Miniſters in particular only, excluding the People, but to the whole Body of Believers.

IF any were to ſet down the Model of any Government whatſoever, the firſt and moſt neceſſary thing is, to ſet out firſt what Common-wealth, Corporation, or Body Politick, ſhould be the Subſtratum, the Seat of that Government, (in and among whom it is exerciſed;) and to ſet out the Bounds and Extent thereof by which the Juriſdiction of that Government is limited, and unto which, as the Subject matter thereof, all the particulars of that Government are ſuited and proportioned, (as the Building is to it's Foundation) and alſo the Scituation and Meaſure of the Ground, which they make the Seat thereof. Therefore in the Inquiſition after that Order and Frame of Government, which (we conceive) Chriſt hath inſtituted for his Church, it is moſt proper to begin in ſeeking out what kind of Body or Society it is, which ſhould be that proper Adequate, intire Seat and Subject of this Government, what the Bounds and Extent thereof are, wherein Chriſt would have his Government exerciſed, and within which confined. I call the Church Sedes or Seat, not in Alluſion to that Ancient Phraſe uſed, for the Subject of Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, (which Phraſe yet ſtrengthens this uſe of it) but in Alluſion to that Scripture Phraſe, 1 Tim. 3. 15. where he calls the Church ἐδραίωμα that is, the Seat or Ground of Truth, and as of Truth there, ſo (ſay I) of Worſhip and Government. This therefore as the Foundation, ſhall be the Subject of my Diſcourſe, and, upon the finding the true Abuttments hereof, doth the ending and determining of moſt of thoſe Suits and Quarrels of this Age, about Church-Government depend. The firſt Charter granted by the Founder, and the Patterns of thoſe Maſter Builders the Apoſtles, and the proportions of thoſe Primitive Churches, muſt be our guide herein.

Begin we therefore to enquire what is the true purport of the firſt grand Charter of all the reſt, and what help that will contribute hereunto; as we find in Mat. 16. 19. And I will give unto thee the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven: And whatſoever thou ſhalt bind on Earth, ſhall be bound in Heaven; whatſoever thou ſhalt looſe on Earth, ſhall be looſed in Heaven.

1. Where firſt, he no ſooner mentions, (and it is the firſt mention) a New Church to be Builded by him under the New Teſtament, but he, together therewith, makes mention of Keys, both as means of Building it, and of governing it, following the Metaphor of an Houſe therein. And Peter having newly made a Confeſſion, that Jeſus was the Son of God, he being declared and owned by him as ſuch, Chriſt utters himſelf again to him, as the Son of God indeed, ſpeaks of Building, and Contriving anew of his Houſe, as a Prerogative proper to him, as the Son; which, to the ſame purpoſe, the Apoſtle in like manner alledgeth, Heb. 3. 3, 4, 5. Chriſt, as the Son over his own Houſe, is the Builder thereof, which Prerogative he here holds forth, ſaying, I will Build my Church, and I will give Keys. The Church he intends, is the Church of the New Teſtament, which (the Son being himſelf come) was to be moulded and built anew by him, eſpecially after his Aſcenſion. And the Keys he means, are the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven, (as the State of the Church under the Goſpel is called ;) which, to ſhew he is the Son, and hath all power committed to him, he profeſſeth to diſpoſe of anew, (as the Keys themſelves were new) to another ſort of Perſons than before ; The Keys of Knowledge and Government having been before in the Hands of High Prieſts and Levites, &c. Now as the Church was to be of a new frame, and the keys were new, ſo he declares a new diſpoſement of them to other Perſons than the former. So that this place ſtrengthens the Aſſertion, That Chriſt as the Son, is the Builder of his Church, Heb. 3. 3, 6. and the Inſtitutor of all power and means of Building in it ; and alſo it proves that the Frame and Government of the Church under the Old Teſtament, delivered by Moſes to thoſe that ſat in his Chair, cannot be a ſet Rule of the Frame and Form of Government, of the Church under the New. For Chriſt the Son, being come, ſhews his Prerogative by declaring the Old to be done away, ſaying, I will Build, I wil give the keys, &c. whilſt he ſpeaks of a New, the Old is done away, yea, the Perſons to whom, and the Extent and Limits of the power are to be ſet out by him, as well as what thoſe keys ſhall be, by which he will Build and have his Church governed ; and he therefore ſays to Peter, I do give to thee. In that he ſingles him out electively, it argues his ſpecial Deſignation of the Subject or Perſons, (who ever they be) to whom he will bequeath them.

2. That Peter here in this promiſe of the keys for the future to be given, ſhould ſtand in a Repreſentative Reſpect, and not meerly Perſonal, all Writers in all Ages, and all ſides, though in Peter's Name, laying ſeveral claims unto theſe keys, do univerſally acknowledge and obſerve. Some ſay, the grant is to Peter only, conſidered as a Believer, having made Confeſſion of his Faith, that Chriſt was the Son of God; and therefore Repreſenting the Church of Believers, as unto whom all Church power ſhould be firſt given. Others aſſert, this grant to be made to Peter as an Apoſtle, and ſo Repreſenting the Apoſtles and Miniſters only. Thirdly, others as the Papiſts, vindicate a perſonal priviledge of Peter's, above all the other Apoſtles, yet therein Repreſenting his ſuppoſed Succeſſor, the Biſhops of Rome. Learned Cameron almoſt alone, would have it, that this was a perſonal priviledge to Peter, wherein none others did ſucceed him. Thus much ſeems evident to us, that our Saviour Chriſt ſpeaks unto Peter, under a double conſideration in theſe words, ver. 19. and the words before. The one was meerly Perſonal, and therein he ſpeaks to him, under his own proper Name, Simon Son of Bar-Jonas, and ſo pronounceth him Bleſſed, for that his Confeſſion, which accordingly expreſſed his perſonal priviledge, (which under that Name he had even from Circumciſion) of his being Saved, without any mention of the gift of the keys. But then ſecondly he gives him withal a new Name, and I alſo ſay unto thee, Thou art Peter, or Rock, which was a New and Myſtical Name, as the word following ſhew, upon this Rock. Πέτρος and πέτρη, anſwering each to other, as fides and fidelis. And under this new Name now put upon him, he gives him a further priviledge, I will give to thee the Keys, namely as thou art Peter. This was not ſo much in a Perſonal, as a Myſtical conſideration, upon which this New Name was given him. And to ſtrengthen this, it may be obſerved that God in firſt delivering his promiſes and grand Charters unto all ſorts, ſingled out ſome one Man, in whoſe Name the grand Charter ſhould eminently run. So Adam was fixed upon, when God, in his Name, gave the Earth unto the reſt of the Sons of Men : So Abraham was ſingled out to Repreſent the Church, both of the Jews and Gentiles, but eſpecially to repreſent the Jews who were his Children, to whom God gave the promiſes of the Land of Canaan, as repreſenting all his Seed, and of the whole World, as repreſenting all the Saints, Rom. 4. 13. And accordingly he did upon it change his Name from Abram, to Abraham, Thus in like manner here doth Chriſt deal with Peter. He firſt bleſſeth him perſonally as Simon, then changeth his Name to Peter, and ſo bequeaths this Charter of the keys, in his like repreſentation of others, to whom in him the grant is made, as well as to himſelf. For Peter was ſtill more forward than all the reſt, to utter his Faith that Chriſt was the Son of God. Elſewhere indeed, (as in John 6. 69.) he ſpeaks in the perſon of all the Apoſtles ; but here where this grant is firſt uttered, ſingly in his own ; And on this occaſion, Chriſt Honoreth this Great and Eminent Confeſſor of him, as that Man in whoſe Name this great Charter ſhould run, he bearing therein the perſons of all ſorts, that were to have any portion of power, whether of his Apoſtles,

Ch. II.

Apoſtles, Extraordinary Officers; or of ordinary Officers, as alſo of the Church of Believers, and even of all to whom ever any portion of the keys was for the future to be given; yet ſo as this Honour was peculiarly his, and he is ſingled out to be this common Repreſenter of all others under the New Teſtament, which Honour he doth bear to this Day in his Name, even as Abraham had the like Honour under the Old Teſtament. And to evidence this the more by the event, Chriſt did, in an eſpecial manner, honour Peter to be the Founder as it were, and beginner of the New Chriſtian Church, (as Cameron hath obſerved out of Tertullian) when he converted that Multitude at one Sermon, Acts 2.

Neither yet is this to be underſtood, as if thoſe keys were given unto Peter to convey the keys unto others Derivatively, but he takes them Repreſentatively, (and therefore it was not neceſſary that all power ſhould be in Peter's perſon as an Apoſtle, otherwiſe than Repreſentatively) and that not Repræſentatione Reali, as if he received all power for the Church, over her, as a King or a Parliament doth, who Repreſents a Common-wealth, (as the Papiſts and Epiſcopal Divines, and others ſay of the Officers, that they Repreſent the Church) but only Repræſentatione Typicali, a Typical Repreſentation, (as Baynes Diſtinguiſheth) that is, that power which the Church or others that were Officers unto her, ſhould receive in themſelves afterwards, he now received in a Repreſentation both of her and them, as a common Perſon ſtanding for, and ſpoken to for all the reſt. And Chriſt therefore doth not ſay, I give, which if he had ſpoken to him only as an Apoſtle, conſtituting him ſuch thereby at preſent, he would have done; but I will give for the future, becauſe many of thoſe whom Peter Repreſented here, the power was afterwards to be given to, when the Lord ſhould be pleaſed to declare it by himſelf or his Apoſtles.

3. Further as all this is ſpoken of Peter here as a Repreſentative Perſon, ſo in an indefinite and general way. And as it is the firſt Great promiſe and Charter, in which all particular portions of power, to whomſoever afterwards diſtributed, are included, ſo likewiſe as the other firſt and great promiſes of God uſe to be, this is as comprehenſive, ſo indefinite alſo, not deſigning at particulars; ſuch was that grant of the Earth to the Sons of Men, whom afterward God divided into ſeveral Nations, to whom by his Providence, ſuited to his Decrees, he ſet out the bounds of their ſeveral Habitations, Acts 17. 26. and in Deut. 23. 8. The like was, that firſt Charter made of Canaan to Abraham, which was afterwards particularly deſigned out by Lot, to the ſeveral Tribes, &c. whoſe Right was yet all indefinitely comprehended, and intended in that firſt grant to Abraham. So accordingly all the expreſſions in this promiſe are general, and indiſtinct; and to be taken in an indefinite and comprehenſive way.

1. As firſt, where he ſaith, He will Build his Church, it is hard to know how to limit it, for he means all ſorts of Churches: he means the Myſtical Church, for he ſaith, The Gates of Hell ſhall not prevail againſt it, wwhich is only true thereof; for they have prevailed againſt particular Churches, and may: And yet again he muſt include particular Churches too, for it is certain that the Myſtical general Church, hath not the power and exerciſe of all the keys; but only as divided into particular Churches, or if it might be ſuppoſed to have the keys of Rule in General Councils, yet not of the Sacraments, not of Preaching the word; for, as for ſuch Ordinances, that Church cannot meet, and therefore exerciſeth them only in ſeveral parts, and diviſions of it ſelf.

2. Thoſe words the keys, are a general comprehenſive expreſſion, anſwerable to that of the word Church, taking in keys of all ſorts; viz. the keys whereby the Univerſal Church, as ſuch, is Built and Reared, that is, thoſe means whereby Men are Converted, and made Members thereof; which God oftentimes bleſſeth in the Hands of others than Miniſters. And they are therefore called the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven at large, not the keys of the Church, as reſtraining it to a political Church; and therefore (as Bellarmine, though to a wrong purpoſe, urged, namely for the Tranſcendency of the Pope's power above the Church, yet for the thing it ſelf rightly) is larger than that in Matth. 18. It is there meant of a Church political, but the keys here in Matth. 16. 19. have relation to the opening the Door of Faith, as in Acts 14. 27. it is called, and therefore implies all means of converſion. And accordingly the oppoſite thereunto is the Gates of Hell, which ſhall not prevail: And yet again on the other ſide, the keys or the power that is given to particular Churches are intended, for this is the general grant, afterwards ſetled in Matth. 18. where, go tell the Church is mentioned. And the binding and looſing ſpoken of there, is comprehended under the binding and looſing, which is ſpoken of here. So as Churches of all ſorts, and keys of all ſorts, keys given to Churches in a way of Diſcipline, and to private Perſons to build up one another, keys given to Officers of all ſorts, Apoſtles and others, are all here intended. And therefore Melancton well ſaith, Claves Eccleſiæ datæ ſunt, ſed juxta electionem a chriſto inſtitutam. And it is certain that in Matth. 18. He inſtituteth a Church-power, as touching the Perſons to whom it belongs, diſtinct from Peter's, and that of the Apoſtles as ſuch; and yet whatſoever Church-power there mentioned was to be in any, Peter receiveth it here. And as when we ſay all Civil power is in a Kingdom, it is meant, ſenſu diviſo, the King hath one part, the Nobles another, the People another; and the ſeveral Officers of a Kingdom, they have their part; and ſo it is here, and all at the firſt was now given unto Peter, as bearing the Perſon of all theſe.

4. Whereas the Controverſie hath been, whether Peter Repreſented the Apoſtles and the Miniſters only; or whether he Repreſented the Church alſo, or whether Peter is here perſonally to be taken, as the ſole and ſingle Subject of a perſonal priviledge? We ſay all theſe are here intended by Chriſt, in this his firſt promiſe, uttering it himſelf in this indefinite way, which was afterwards to be further and more diſtinctly divided, and ſet out by himſelf and his Apoſtles: So that whether Peter had it granted to him as an Apoſtle, and as an Apoſtle repreſenting Apoſtles and other Miniſters, we will not contend; but yet that Peter had it alſo Repreſenting the Church it ſelf, and Saints built upon the Rock, the Arguments are as convincing and concluding to prove it, if not more than thoſe that on the other ſide are framed to prove, the words ſhould be ſpoken of him as an Apoſtle, Repreſenting the other Apoſtles and Elders, and therefore we ſafely take in all. The main Argument urged to prove that it is ſpoken to him as an Apoſtle, is drawn from this, that the Perſon ſpoken unto, viz. Peter, was an Apoſtle, and the other Apoſtles were preſent, and ſo intended; and therefore this Grant here, ſhould be Reſtrained to Peter, and them as ſuch. And the Arguments for the other, Namely, that ordinary Believers alſo ſhould be intended, is taken from the occaſion and ground of Chriſt's Speech, which was a confeſſion of Faith made by Peter, and therefore that Chriſt ſhould take in, and intend other ordinary Believers and Confeſſors, to have an intereſt in the keys, as well as Elders and Apoſtles, and accordingly to have been by Peter Repreſented. So as the pleas of this Suit, (ſo far as concerns this place) do lie between the ſort of Perſons ſpoken to, and that were preſent; and the qualification of that Perſon, as a Believer, namely, and the ground of Chriſt's Speech. And all the Arguments that are brought to prove, they were given him as an Apoſtle, are not excluſive, that they are not given him alſo as a Believer. Auſtin's Expreſſion, non tantum Petro, ſed Eccleſiæ, not to Peter, (that is, as an Apoſtle) only, but alſo to the Church, doth rightly divide the ſhare between both.

The occaſion of the promiſe, was Peter's confeſſing that Chriſt was the Son of God, which holds forth nothing proper unto Miniſters only, or himſelf as an Apoſtle only; and therefore the priviledge here, muſt be common unto that ſort, that make confeſſion of Faith, as well as to Miniſters. It was a common Faith confeſt, not of what belonged unto Apoſtles only, but unto Believers; The promiſe is therefore ſuited unto the occaſion. And this is a ſtronger inference, than that other, which is brought, that he Repreſented the other Apoſtles only, namely, becauſe that they were preſent, when as Peter here did not intend to ſpeak it in their Names, as in John 6. 69. he did; but rather he ſteps out and prevented them, and therefore alſo Chriſt ſpeaks firſt unto him, in his perſonal condition, Bleſſed art thou Simon, Bar-Jonas; and then in his Repreſentative condition, as repreſenting thoſe whoſe Faith he had confeſſed, as well as the Apoſtles, whom if only or ſimply, Chriſt had intended that he ſhould repreſent, he might have ſpoken to them all, as well as to Peter, they being then preſent.

And then again, his Name Petros, Peter, which Chriſt here anew gives him with the Reaſon of it, viz. upon the Rock, &c. in an Alluſion to Petra, ſignifying one built on the Rock, and ſo of the ſame nature with the Rock, argues this to have been Chriſt's Scope, in promiſing to him the keys. This change of his Name thus into Peter, Elegantly ſerved to ſuit and anſwer the thing which Chriſt was ſpeaking, Namely, the Building his Church on the Rock, whereon Peter (thus confeſſing himſelf) was built. Thou art Peter, that is, Thou art built on this Rock, thou art a ſtone in this Rock, and unto thee as ſuch I ſpeak. And further, he doth not ſay, Thou ſhalt be called Peter, but Thou art Peter, that is, Thou art a ſtone, thou art built on a Rock; and thus it anſwereth to his being a Believer, which is all one as to be a Member of the Church ſo built, and therefore it is ſpoken of Peter, conſidered in the Perſon of Believers built with the reſt of the Church upon the Rock, as well as the Apoſtles, whoſe priviledge alone this was not, and it is farther obſervable, that of all the Apoſtles, this Peter, here ſpoken to, ſhould, as if only intended alone, uſe this very ſimilitude, to this particular purpoſe, and in effect, apply what is ſaid here of himſelf, [Thou art Peter] to all Believers in 1 Pet. 2. 5. Te alſo as lively ſtones, are built up a Spiritual Houſe, &c. As if he had ſaid, It is not I only that am the Peter, that Chriſt intended, it was not ſpoken to me, but unto you all. And his expreſſion in 2 Pet. 2. 1. is all one with this in his firſt, To all that have received like precious Faith with us, i.e. with me; as in 1 John 9. John ſaith, that receiveth not us, that is, that receiveth not me: And almoſt all Divines of all ſides do thus far yield this, they ſay the keys are given primarily to the Faithful, only they explain it, and ſay, they are given in bonum Eccleſiæ, for the good of the Church, but unto the Officers of it.

Obj. 1, If it be ſaid, that if they be given to Peter as a Believer, then unto all Believers, to Women and Children, and the like.

Anſw. The Anſwer is, Firſt, when it is ſaid the keys are given to a Believer, it is to be underſtood not Reduplicativè, as if only, and to all ſuch, all ſorts of the keys are given but Extenſivè, that is, to Peter, as Repreſenting Believers alſo, and not barely as an Apoſtle; but yet ſuch Believers as after ſhould be more ſpecially determined to have their ſhare in them. For they are given unto Believers, in Peter, Repreſenting ſuch, according to Chriſt's Diſpoſement, after to be declared; it is an indefinite Charter to be formed up by him afterwards, only now declaring that thoſe, of that ſort, ſhould have them. And Chriſt hath afterwards made a peculiar exception of Women not to ſpeak, nor to uſurp Authority in the Church, 1 Cor. 14. 34. which being an Exception, it muſt be from a Rule, and ſo firmat regulam, argues and confirms that the Rule is, that Males have liberty and power to ſpeak and judge in ſome Caſes. And yet Secondly, even they have a ſprinkling of the keys in their proportion, if you take keys in that large Senſe before explained, for the keys of Converſion and Edification, may be through God's bleſſing in their Hands: Their Speeches and Inſtructions in private may, and often do Convert and Edifie the Souls of others. Thus Tit. 2. 4. That the Aged Women may Teach, (namely, by private inſtructions, and the like) the younger Women to be Sober, to love their Huſbands: And other of them may be Inſtruments to Convert or Build up, Servants and Children, Friends, &c. in their Families; yea, their Huſbands may be won without the word, by their chaſt Converſion, 1 Pet. 3. 2. Yea, and as Members of a Church, they have power to bind ſin upon a Man, in private perſonal Admonition; firſt, which is a Degree, and in order to that publick, if a Man Repents not; which yet perſonal Admonitions of others to thoſe, not in Church-fellowſhip, (as in England formerly) are not in order unto. For when a Woman doth tell a Man of his ſin, if ſhe makes it out and prove it, ſhe tells it him with this bond upon him, that if he repent not, ſhe bringeth it to the Church; and ſo ſhe binds him before, and in the Church, which ſhe doth as a fellow Member, though not as a Judge: And the ſame Sentence that a Woman hath thus pronounced in private againſt him, the ſame the Chuach afterward Ratifies, even as what the Church Ratifies, is bound in Heaven. The miſtake of the Objection lies in this, to infer that, becauſe Women have not the Authority, the publick power of the keys; that therefore they have no pow- of the keys committed to them, whereas none hath all that others have, not the Apoſtles themſelves.

Obj. 2. If further it be Objected, that the keys are given to others than Believers, as to Miniſters, though not true Believers.

Anſw. The Anſwer is; yet ſo as that they are viſibly Believers, or they ought not to be Miniſters; ſo Judas was. And ſo if it be given to Miniſters only, and Apoſtles, it is ſuppoſed that they are Faithful, The things that thou haſt heard, commit to Faithful Men, that they may teach others, 2 Tim. 2. 2. Juſt, Sober, Holy, Tit. 1. 18.

Obj. 3. And if it be ſaid further, That then they are given to Believers ſingly, and out of Church-fellowſhip.

Anſw. The Anſwer is; Although they are here given to Believers materially, yet formally but as built up in a Church, according as Chriſt ſhould after order it. And if we ſpeak of the Judiciary Power, Elders themſelves muſt needs be ſuppoſed to be ſet over a Church, ere thoſe keys are given unto them; and ſo alſo what is granted to Saints hereof, thoſe keys muſt needs fall under the ſame ſuppoſition. But if we ſpeak of the keys in a larger Senſe, ſo they are given to all, and every one ſingly, whether they be in Church-fellowſhip or no. Now Chriſt's grant here being general and indefinite, though it takes in all, yet each according to Chriſts order; and ſo if the Judiciary keys are ſaid to be intended, they muſt be underſtood to be here given, as Chriſt afterwards ſhould particularly deſign, how they ſhould be exerciſed, and that is, and can be only in Church Society; and whether by Saints or Elders only, as they are rightly form'd up into fixed Bodies.

But for a concluſion, that which from this place we take along with us, towards the finding out the Seat or Subject of Church-power, is this; That the keys were indefinitely and materially here given, as well to Saints, as Elders, in the Perſon of Peter, in their ſeveral proportion, and afterwards were particularly determined, and held forth in the Rules and Examples ſet by the Apoſtles.

CHAP. III.

That before a company of Believers or Saints, can become the Formal Seat of Government, they muſt be united into the ſtate, and order of a Church. Reaſons given why this is neceſſary. A Demonſtration of it alſo from the Example of the Primitive Churches, planted by the Apoſtles.

THis firſt Charter or Grant of the keys both to the Saints and Officers, being but indefinite, and given unto them but as materially conſidered, as the command and bleſſing to multiply, is to Men, Gen. 1. Ere theſe can become the Formel Seat of Government, or Publick Worſhip, there muſt be an orderly moulding and caſting of this matter, both Saints and Officers, into ſeveral Bodies or Societies, for the exerciſe of theſe keys; which both the neceſſity of the thing requires, and alſo the examples in the New Teſtament do warrant and confirm unto us.

1. The neceſſity of the thing requires it.

For firſt, otherwiſe there would be no Order, which in the Church of the Coloſſians, the Apoſtle doth ſo praiſe in them. He might have commended the Saints in that City, for their Perſonal Holineſs, the Teachers among them for their Gifts; but he further rejoyceth in their Order. And as Order in any Multitude or Company of Men, primarily reſpects their Union into a Body, for ſuch ends and purpoſes among themſelves, as thereby they ſeek to attain; So here in this caſe, Quod non eſt formatum, non eſt vere unum, what is not formed, is not truly one: This outward Order is as the Form that gives the Unity. An heap of Stones is not one Body, ſo properly as an Houſe, although the parts in ſuch a heap be Homogenial, and of one and, the ſame kind; and the other conſiſts of ſeveral materials, Hetrogenial, and of ſeveral kinds, as Wood, Stone, Iron, Clay, &c. Yea, and the indefinite Collection of all ſuch Materials into one heap, are not a Building, although they be Squared, and fitted to be joyned each to other; the Beams and Rafters by their Tenants and Morteſſes, and the like: But that all theſe ſhould be Reared, and Artificially erected into one Building; it is that, which makes them one Body, in ſuch a reſpect as the other are not.

Ch. III. 2. Secondly, There would otherwiſe be no Government at all. When God gave forth that Law, Gen.9.6. he that ſheddeth Man's Blood, by Man ſhall his Blood be ſhed; over and above this indefinite Commiſſion given, it was neceſſary for the due and orderly execution hereof; that there ſhould be Orderly Societies of Men, which ſhould be the Seat of a Government, by which this puniſhment ſhould be exerciſed. God's way in this Law, and ſo Chriſt's meaning in that Gift of the keys, Mat. 16.19. cannot be like to that which Cain, through the Horrour of his Conſcience feared, that any Man, or every Man that met him next, might kill him. So neither is it indefinitely and promiſcuouſly in the power of any, the next company of Saints and Elders to judge an offending Brother. And Reaſon confirms this. For 1. It is this Form and orderly Union of them into a Body, that makes any company the Seat of Government, and to have a power among them; and how can there be true Government, without a Seat of Juriſdiction, in which it muſt be exerciſed? And that muſt be a Body, politick, according to the nature or kind of the Government, or politick exerciſed in it; if Civil, then 'tis a Common-wealth or Corporation, &c. if Eccleſiaſtical, it is a Church. A politick Body is not made up by a Multitude; for then a company of Men at a Horſe-Race were ſuch. Nor is it Local Union in the ſame place, for ſo at a Stage-play, a throng or a croud meeting, would be ſuch.

As Forms in Natural Bodies, are neceſſary to conſtitute them ſuch, as well as matter; ſo an Union and Moulding into one, is needful to conſtitute a Body politick. Yea, a judicial power doth as much depend upon a Formality of Order, as it doth upon a Material qualification of Perſons. Take a company of Miniſters, or what ſort of Perſons elſe, however qualified or denominated, they have not that power (which yet doth belong to Miniſters) indefinitely, or as any way met; but as Formed up into Bodies, as a power in a Kingdom is not given to Juſtices of Peace indefinitely, or promiſcuouſly met; but as met according to Commiſſion in ſeveral Circuits, and diſtinct Bodies from them. Burgeſſes of Parliament, although lawfully choſen to be ſuch, yet they have not Parliamentary power, but as met in Parliament, according to the Law of the Kingdom; and the Legality of the meeting, doth give us as much Power and Authority, as the qualification of the Perſons. The Authority is the Reſult of Union, and that legally and lawfully made, as well as it is founded in Perſons fitly qualified. Power in Civil things, is not ſo much given to Mayors and Aldermen, as to the Corporation, though the whole Corporation exerciſeth it not; yet it is this priviledge, and they have ſuch and ſuch a power amongſt them, it is not alone the priviledge of the Magiſtrates ſo much: That Heatheniſh Town-Clark of Epheſus, when the Men of that City met in in a promiſcuous way: (And perhaps the very ſame Men of that City, had panegyrical meetings for ſome Acts of Government, as Election of Magiſtrates, and the like; yet) becauſe then they met not according to the Order of that City, he ſays of it, that it was an illegal ἐκλησία Aſſembly.

2. Without this Union, and Order of Society, Perſons offended, that ought to complain, ſhould not have whither to go to accuſe; nor the party offended be obliged to come. Nor would it be known, whoſe the Care and Duty were, to take on them the cognizance, and judging of it; and whoſe the ſin was, if it were neglected. If theſe companies of Elders and Saints in a great City, were fluid and promiſcuous; and but like ſuch companies as met at ſights, or ſhews, or Ordinances without any Incorporation or Imbodying, ſo as, all being in an equal liberty, to go one day to this, another to that company, &c. the ſame Perſons never met in one place, unleſs caſually, and providentially; if twelve ſuch Meetings were in one ſuch City, what ſhall oblige me to any one, more than the reſt? If I come to receive in any one; and they upon occaſion would proceed judicially to deal with me, I might plead and ſay, I am no more accountable to you, than the reſt; I receive as often with them, as with you, I belong as much to other Aſſemblies, as to you; and what have you to do to judge me, more than they? And beſides it being (in this way) but providential, that the ſame Perſons, the offender is accuſed unto to day, ſhould meet in one place another day, when all have an indifferent liberty, without any ſet or fixed Incorporation; at the utmoſt it is but his forbearing, to Aſſemble with the company for that time, or in that place any more, and retire unto thoſe other; for he is at his freedom ſo to do.

Again in this caſe; all, that any of thoſe companies can inflict upon him, is but for that time to ſuſpend him from Communion with them; but to proceed to Excommunication they cannot, not only becauſe that imports a fixed company, he is caſt out of; but alſo becauſe there is nothing to oblige him to attend that company, to be ſo often Admoniſhed, as his ſin ſhall become an obſtinacy, and fit matter for Excommunication. Or what ſhall oblige thoſe of this individual company, to whom the complaint firſt came, that they in relation to, and for his Cenſure's ſake, ſhould meet ſo often together, as that he may be publickly Admoniſhed by them, ſo many times as in the end deſervedly to be thrown out?

Yea, 3. This Union and Order, muſt needs hold in ſuch Societies, where the very puniſhment is to caſt out of that Body, they were firſt within; for to caſt out, and to be within, are Correſpondent, and anſwer each to other. Now the puniſhment to be exerciſed, is not only a perſonal withdrawing by every Man apart, (as occaſionally they ſhould meet him) by a Sentence publickly agreed on; but the Sentence, then in uſe in the Primitive Churches, was to caſt out of the Church, ver. 3. John 10. (as to Expel, and caſt out of a City or Town, or Family) which unleſs they were a Body formed up among themſelves, and he one within to them, they could not do.

II. As the neceſſity of the thing, ſo the Examples of thoſe Primitive Churches, argues them to have been formed and fixed Bodies, that were the Seat of Worſhip and Government, and do agree with theſe forementioned principles.

Firſt, The very Denomination of Churches, (as of Churches in Judea, Galatia, &c.) doth fall in with, and confirm that firſt Reaſon, that the Saints and Elders in thoſe Countries were caſt into diſtinct and ſeveral Bodies; and diverſifyed by ſeveral Corporations and Relations. It imports not a Diſtinction of them, only as Saints materially from the World, (as the Univerſal Church, whereof they are parts, doth) but a Diſtinction of them into ſeveral companies among themſelves; Namely, the Univerſal and Great Church, parted into ſeveral leſſer companies and Churches. Nor can thoſe ſet and fixed Titles, ariſe from ſeveral Promiſcuous Acts of meeting of theſe Saints and Elders providentially; but it inclines, in the Holy Ghoſt's Language, a ſetled State, and Incorporation, in order to ſetled Meetings; as the word Presbytery notes out, not ſimply a company of Elders, but united into a Body for Government; ſo the Phraſe Churches imports, not ſimply a company of Saints and Elders met, but a ſtated Society: So as when the Union of their actual meeting is diſſolved, they ſtill continue the ſame; as the Companies in London are ſtill ſo many Companies in State, though not in Act, when every Man is gone to his own Houſe, as well as when met in their Common Hall. They are not only a Body becauſe, or when they actually meet, but they are a Body in order to meeting; and there is a power in their Governours, to call them together again. And this alſo all the Compariſons of an Houſe to God, &c. (ſpeaking of particular Churches) implies, not ſimply acts of meeting, but a compacted State.

And that the Churches then in the Primitive Times of Chriſtianity, were ſuch Bodies is evident: For 1 Cor. 14. the Apoſtle calls not only a particular Church, an whole Church, (as likewiſe elſewhere, Acts 20.28. the Church of Epheſus, is called the whole Flock; and that at Corinth, a whole lump; 1 Cor. 5.6. each therefore making a Diſtinct Body, an whole and entire Body, bounded within it ſelf, as any other Corporation is) but further, he ſpeaks of that Church, as importing a ſtated Union, in relation to meeting actually, if the whole Church, (ſays he, ver. 23.) come together. They were therefore a Church in order to meeting, even when they met not, and are at home, in reſpect that the Union and Bond to the ſame Laws and Ordinances, ſtill remained. They were not a Church ſimply, becauſe they met, or when they met; but they, the ſame Perſons were to meet, becauſe they were a Church in a ſtated and conſtant Relation. Aud ſuitably to this, he elſewhere ſays of them; when you are gathered together, to caſt out ſuch an one, 1 Cor. 5.4, 5. becauſe they were to meet as a Body, in a conſtant way. And upon this fixed Relation of each, unto the whole, the Apoſtle lays, upon this ſame Church, this as a Duty, as to meet for Worſhip, ſo to ſtay each for other, in 1 Cor. 11.33. and ſo not to meet in promiſcuous ſeveral companies, (as Men at Ordinaries) for the Sacrament:

Though it be not ὅλος in Acts 20. yet 'tis ſo elſewhere in other places.

There was therefore a Set Company, known to each other, obliged to meet in one, in a conſtant way, and ſo was an whole Church, in a fixed Relation.

And ſuch were all the Churches the Apoſtles wrote unto, and gave Ordinances forth unto; So I ordain in all the Churches, 1 Cor. 7. 17. we have no ſuch Cuſtom, (ſaith he, 1 Cor. 11. 16.) nor the Churches of Chriſt: Whom he praiſeth for, keeping the Traditions he gave them, as 1 Cor, 11. 2. and rejoyceth in their Order, and whom he blameth for occaſion of Diviſions, in reſpect of their publick MEETINGS, as ver. 18. 17. 21, 22. Now all this argues, that as Churches, theſe were Bodies and Societies, in a fixt and ſetled Relation; For his manner of writing is parallel with that; as if a King or his Superior Officers, ſhould write in his Name to all Corporations, Shires, and Bodies politick, giving out Laws and Proclamations, and edicts to be obſerved by them in their Aſſemblies; which if they were not fixed and ſetled Bodies, but only unfixt and uncertain fluid Aſſemblies, they were not meet Subjects, capable thereof, nor of Orders to Regulate them. This alſo the State of the Seven Churches of Aſia, whom Chriſt directeth thoſe ſeven Epiſtles unto, with ſeveral Inſcriptions to the ſeveral Angels of thoſe Churches, it evidently argues, they were fixed Bodies, having each their Elders an Angel, Collectively taken as the uſe of that Phraſe in that Book is) in a ſpecial relation; to whom therefore, as to the Mayor or Aldermen in a ſetled Corporation, the Letters are directed. And he blames them, as Bodies or Societies of Men fixedly incorporate, for ſins paſſed in their publick Tranſactions, as they were a Body; as ſuffering Jezabel to Teach, &c. And further, he threatneth to remove the Candleſtick, Rev. 2. 5. that is, their Church-State, as they were a ſtanding Seat and Subject, of the Ordinances of the Goſpel; as the Jewiſh Condleſtick was. For the ſeven Candleſticks, are the ſeven Churches, Rev. 1. 20. As theſe Candleſticks were theſe Churches, diſtinguiſhed each from other, ſo theſe Churches were the Saints and Elders, as Candleſticks caſt, and moulded into a ſet and ſtanding Form; and ſo thereby made diſtinct each from other, though all made out of the ſame lump of the Church Univerſal; therefore choſen out as ſtanding patterns of the Frame, and Fabrick of other Churches then extant, or to come. And as that and the like threatning, concerns Succeſſion, ſo it further argues a fixed Combination, that is the Subject of Guilt; for that Combination continuing, though the Perſons then alive, ſhould all die: Yet if the ſame ſins continued in Perſons that ſucceed Members of that Combination, that Church or Body, in reſpect of the fixed State of it continuing, would inherit it. For by reaſon of ſuch a fixed Union, or ſtated Society or Corporation, it comes to paſs, that not only a company of Men are one Body, when their Aſſemblings or Meetings are not, though in order to ſuch Meetings, as well as when they are; but farther, that they continue the ſame Body to Succeſſion, and ſo each of theſe the ſame Church or Candleſtick, notwithſtanding it may ſuffer alteration in encreaſe or leſſening, in reſpect of particular Perſons. Yea, though the Matter, the Gold, the Perſons that now make up one of theſe Candleſticks, ſhould all be removed by Death, or otherwiſe yet the Candleſtick continued the ſame, becauſe the ſame ſetled Church-State continued; as in this reſpect, the Company of Mercers, or any Corporation, is the ſame it was an Hundred years ago, becauſe of this ſetled Order and Union; and is capable of being threatned to have their Charter taken away, their Corporation removed, or the main priviledges of it ſome way nullified, though the Original Perſons do not ſtill dwell in the ſame City.

2. And as in reſpect of publick Worſhip, ſo in reſpect of Judicature; the Churches then were Bodies caſt into fixed Relations. This made the Church of Corinth, (as 1 Cor. 1. 2. 'tis called) a Seat and Subject of Judicature and Government, 1 Cor. 5. 12. Do not ye Judge them that are within? And what have I to do to Judge them that are without? Here was firſt a Set and certain Judicature among themſelves, as the word Judging imports: Secondly, a Body within which who ever was, he came under this Judicature. For they Judged them within, as Corporations or Bodies politick, uſe to do them within themſelves. There was ſomething then that made a ſpecial Relation, which was the ground of their power to Judge this Perſon; and brought him within the compaſs of their Juriſdiction. And it is further expreſſed with a denial of power, over others that are without; What have I to do to Judge them that are without? I that am an Apoſtle, that have the largeſt Juriſdiction and Commiſſion, what have I to do in it? And his power and theirs did differ; for though he might Judge as occaſion was, in any Church where he came; yet he lays it as a ſpecial peculiar Duty upon them, to have power over them that were within themſelves; and that power belonged unto them, as the other belonged unto him. And the Perſons that are ſaid to be within, to that Church of Corinth, to whom he writes, could not be the Church Univerſal; for then the Church of Corinth, ſhould have had power to have judged all or any other Churches of Saints in the World, as well as it ſelf, and ſo a part had power over the whole. There was thirdly a duty lay upon ſome Perſons among them, to whom this belonged, Do not ye judge and a ſin that lay upon them for their neglect, which lay not upon another company Do not ye judge them within? And have you hitherto neglected it?

3. Thirdly, The ſpecial relation of Elders to their Churches, and the Members in particular Churches among themſelves, doth evidence, that not any company of Chriſtians, but ſuch as embodied together into, and ſetled in the Order of a Church, are the Subject and Seat of this Grand Charter of the keys, or the Eccleſiaſtical power.

1. The Relation of the Members among themſelves, doth evidence it, 1 Cor. 12. 27. where he deſcends from the Diſcourſe of Union of the Members, in the Univerſal Body of Chriſt, which he calls Chriſt, ver. 12. to a more particular enforcement of the Duties of that ſpecial Relation, that was amongſt the Members of that Church, as a particular Body to Chriſt; and ſo to oblige each to other, not only by that general Law of the Univerſal Relation; but further by vertue of a more ſpecial one, contracted among themſelves, being made a diſtinct and entire Body to Chriſt in particular, by being one Church. And ſo the Obligation was not only doubled upon them, but further the proportion of the general Tye, (which was more diffuſed) was contracted into a narrow and leſſer compaſs; and as holding analogy with it, was ſo made ſtronger and more vigorous. Thus we underſtand thoſe words to be a ſpecial Application of that general Doctrine promiſed in the former part of the Chapter, which Treats of Chriſt's Body, the Church Univerſal: Now ye, the Church of Corinth, are the Body of Chriſt, and Members in particular, in a more ſpecial Relation; and ſo owe all thoſe Duties in a ſpecial manner, one to another. In this reſpect alſo, ſometimes when the Apoſtle hath occaſion to mention a Member of a particular Church, he ſpecifies it with a ſpecial diſtinctive Relation, Epaphras, who is one of you, Coloſ. 4. 12. And Rom. 16. 1. Phebe our Siſter, who is a Servant of the Church, which is at Cenchrea, is commended to Communion with them, as ſtanding in ſpecial relation to that Church. So when he ſpeaks of Elders, a ſpecial relation to a particular Church is intimated, which could not be, unleſs thoſe Churches had been fixed Bodies for State; and not Promiſcuous Aſſemblies, in reſpect of acts of meeting. Thus the ſame Epaphras, as to his common relation of Memberſhip, in that Church of Coloſſians is mentioned, who is one of you, as afore, chap. 4 12. and alſo as to his more ſpecial relation, as an Officer of that Church, who is for you a Faithful Miniſter, of whom they had been taught the Goſpel, as ye alſo learned of Epaphras, who is for you a Faithful Miniſter; and in a ſpecial relation your Miniſter. He ſtill held his relation of a Miniſter for them, though for the preſent occaſionally imployed with Paul. Thus the Ordinary Elders were ſet over particular Churches, and ſo had a ſpecial relation to thoſe Churches, as Elders of them; and the Relation was the Riſe and Foundation of their call to be Elders: As Acts 14 23. The Apoſtles who were general Elders in all Churches, by vertue of Apoſtolical Commiſſion, Ordained ordinary Elders in every Church; and theſe Elders were ſpecially appropriated εἰς τοὺς to them, and were to take care of that whole Flock, which appertained to them, Acts 20. 28. and ſo they were intruſted with the care of them, and to watch over them, as thoſe that were to give an account to God for their Souls; and therefore they were their peculiar charge, Heb. 13. 17. And in reſpect of this Relation, the Holy Ghoſt directs thoſe Epiſtles mentioned, Rev. ch. 2. 2, 3. to the ſeveral particular Angels of thoſe Churches in Aſia, who therefore had their Churches aſſigned to them; for which they were to give an account, and more accountable for their ſins in which they are accordingly blamed.

And theſe Elders could not have a ſpecial ſetled relation, if theſe Churches were not caſt into a fixt ſetled State, as Churches under them; for the one, are relations to the other ; and therefore the Holy Ghoſt directs his Epiſtles to the Churches alſo, chap. 1. as well as to the Angels of theſe Churches, for in their relations, theſe two were Commenſurable.

4. And Laſtly, Theſe Elders and theſe Churches, were formed up into fixt and ſetled Presbyteries, ſo 1 Tim. 3. And the Acts of Ordination, were not Attributed ſimply to an indefinite company of Elders, (as promiſcuouſly, or any way met) but to a Presbytery, which imports not ſimply an Act of meeting, by a company of Elders ; but (as the word is Paraphraſed by our Tranſlators, with reſpect to the Jewiſh Synedrim) the Eſtate of Elders, Act. 19. 5. As if we ſhould ſay, the Common-Council did ordain ſo and ſo, it notes not out ſimply, a meeting of a company of Wiſe Men in ſuch a City, but as met in an united Body. And if theſe Presbyteries were a fixed and united company of Elders, then the Churches muſt needs be alſo, to whom they were a Presbytery. And ſo this is a further Argument than that former, which was drawn from the ſpecial relation of Elders, ſingly or perſonally, or looſly taken ; which was ordinarily fixed, to be a ſetled Church. But if further, we conſider theſe Elders, as united into a Presbytery, it yet more importeth this. For though it ſhould be granted to be a Truth, which ſome affirm, that every Elder, were an Elder indefinitely of the Church Univerſal ; yet every Presbytery, is not a Presbytery to the whole Univerſal, (no more than every Common-Council in each Corporation, is a Common-Council for the Kingdom ; though each Burgeſs met therein muſt be capable of being a Burgeſs in Parliament for the whole Kingdom ;) but as ſpecificated, ſuch muſt relate only to ſome particular Church. If therefore the Government were ſeated, as our Brethren would have it) in Presbyteries, yet theſe Bodies muſt be fixed and incorporated : Or if in Churches with their Elders, (or elſe no where) yet if their Elders were Presbyteries to their ſeveral Churches, (as is evident they muſt be) then thoſe Churches alſo were fixed Bodies, over which they were placed. Yea, and the Scripture doth in Terminis, in plain Terms, Attribute the Act of Ordination to a Presbytery ; that is, a company of Elders united in their Relation, and in that Action ; and as much to this their united relation, as to their being Elders. And ſo the validity and legality of the Act, depends as much upon this, as upon their being Elders met ; as if a Man ſhould ſay, ſuch a thing was done by the Common-Council, certainly he means thereby, that it was done not only by Men that are Councellors promiſcuouſly in that ſenſe, as Lawyers are called to give counſel, as occaſion is ſingly or apart ; but it imports, they met as a Common-Council ſo imbodyed, that the Act hath a Legality, an Authority therefrom. And the Validity as much depends upon that incorporation of theirs, according to a Law, as upon their being Men, and ſo qualified.

CHAP. IV.

That Chriſt in his Inſtitution of Eccleſiaſtical power, Matth. 18. hath granted this power of the Keys, only to Saints embodied; and united in the State and Order of a Congregational Church. That though it ſhauld be granted, That Chriſt in this Inſtitution, had a regard to the conſtitution of the Church of the Jews, yet it would be evident, that he intended a Congregational Church.

Matth. 18. 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20.

Moreover, if thy Brother ſhall Treſpaſs against thee, go and tell him his fault, between thee and him alone: If he ſhall hear thee, thou haſt gained thy Brother. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the Mouth of two or three Witneſſes, every word may be Eſtabliſhed. And if he ſhall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the Church: But if he neglect to hear the Church, let him be unto thee, as an Heathen Man, and a Publican. Verily I ſay unto you, Whatſoever ye ſhall bind on Earth, ſhall be bound in Heaven: And whatſoever ye ſhall looſe on Earth, ſhall be looſed in Heaven. Again, I ſay unto you, that if two of you ſhall agree on Earth, as touching any thing that they ſhall ask, it ſhall be done for them of my Father, which is in Heaven. For where two or three are gathered together in my Name, there am I in the midſt of them.

THere are three things may be proved out of this place. The firſt is that Church-power, is by Chriſt's Inſtitution. Secondly, That a particular Congregation is there meant, and ſo we have an Inſtitution for it. Then Thirdly, That ſuppoſe there were a Subordination of Churches, above particular Churches, that yet the particular Church ſhould finally Excommunicate; and that the ſuppoſed Superior Orders of Presbyteries, ſhould not take it out of their Hands.

1. The firſt is plain, that here is an Inſtitution of Church-power, as is evident by comparing it with, Matth. 16. 18, 19. where it is ſaid, I will Build my Church, and I will give thee the Keys. He ſpeaks indefinitely. That place affordeth this Evidence, that Chriſt is the only Builder of his Church, (Every Houſe is Built by ſome one, Heb. 3.4.) and of all things about the Houſe; The Builder of all things is God, (ſaith he) Namely Chriſt, who is God, as he had proved in chap. 2. having ſpoken this indefinitely in, Matth. 16. 18, 19. here in Matth. 18. 15, 16. he particularly determines the Seat, and Subject of this Eccleſiaſtical power. Here in Matth. 18. 17. Chriſt uttereth himſelf definitely, Tell the Church. The Jus proprietatis, is in Matth. 16 19. the Right of propriety is ſtated in the Right of Adminiſtration. The Jus Executionis, in Matth. 18. 16. He doth not give it to Saints and Officers ſimply, but as formed up into Bodies. Matth. 16. Holdeth forth, that they are to be Saints, making Confeſſion as Peter did; there is the matter of a Church, to whom the keys is given, but Matth. 18. holdeth forth, how that theſe Saints are to be formed up into ſeveral Bodies or Churches, and ſo to execute this power. Therefore he ſpeaks of them, as being gathered together in his Name, Mat. 18. 20. Their being Saints, or Faithful, is not enough; but Order is to be added to Faith, (as in Coloſ. 2. 5: which Order is held forth here, in Matth. 18. ver. 15. to 20.

2. The words of Chriſt here in Matth. 18. 18. Verily I ſay unto you, which are inſtitutive; and again I ſay unto you.

1. That word Amen, or verily, Eſt idem quod firmum & ratum, ſhews the thing to be firm and ratified, as Amen doth alſo; but ſet to our Prayers. And here ſo it is taken, for it is with a promiſe of power from him, confirming and ratifying of ſuch meetings as he ſpeaks of. And a promiſe to any thing that is beyond the Law of Nature, implies an Inſtitution: For what is an Inſtitution? But a ſetting up ſomething with promiſe, to have a Bleſſing in it beyond the Efficacy of the thing.

2. Again I ſay unto you, ſaith he, ver. 19. The word again is Additionis, moreover, a Superadded Expreſſion, as Matth. 4. 7. again it is written.

3. The words, I ſay, are inſtitutive; or commanding with an Efficacy. As they are uſed in Luke 5.24. I ſay unto thee ariſe. And if they be only Aſſertory, (as ſome ſay, they are) yet being ſpoken by the Son, of his own Houſe, in his Mouth, they are Edificatory, or Inſtitutive of it.

4. Jeſus Chriſt giveth power to a Brother to Admoniſh; and that in an orderly way, in order to Excommunication. Then bids him take two or three, and then tell the Church. And it is not a matter of indulgency or liberty, or priviledge, (as Cameron obſerveth) that his Speech importeth, for that is, when as there is a benefit to ones ſelf by it, which if I will forego, I may; but what is ſpoken here is, per modum Imperij, by way of command, for it is for the gaining of a Brother. And it is in order alſo to a Court-Sentence, when it is brought to the Church, And the word, Eſtabliſhed, Matth. 18. 16. that is, the Sentence ſhall be firm, and fixed, or ratified, confirms this to be his deſign and meaning.

5. To reckon a Brother as an Heathen, if obſtinate after this courſe is taken with him, is an Act of power; which if Chriſt had not given, ſhould not have abſolutely neceſſitated it.

6. He ſaith, where two or three are gathered in my Name, therefore it is an Ordinance. What makes other things an Ordinance; but that they are done in the Name and Power of Chriſt? Is Baptizing in his Name, an Ordinance; and ſo gathering together in his Name alſo? And in his Name is all one, as in his Power and Authority, by Commiſſion from him; and to ſuch ends and purpoſes, as he hath appointed, whereof one is to throw out an offending Brother. He ſpeaks as the Meſſiah, that did anew form his Church, and put a new Title upon their gathering together; calls it Aſſembled in my Name, as the Meſſiah is come in the Fleſh; And whereas before he did Authorize the whole Nation, and made the Truſt unto them, he Reduceth it now to a fewer company, to two or three gathered together in his Name. All Aſſemblies, if they be not Eſtabliſhed by Authority, are unlawful, Acts 19.39. Therefore theſe Aſſemblies that Chriſt here ſpeaks of, muſt be Eſtabliſhed by the Law of Chriſt.

And thus much may ſuffice to ſhew in general, that let it be meant in Church-power, what ever it is, it is by Inſtitution.

And when he ſaith, Go tell the Church, he imports Authority and Power, placed in that company he calls a Church, with which he inveſts them. The word Church in this, is an Authoritative Word; and the Authority, the Church hath, is his, and whom ſhould ſhe have it from, but from him? And therefore in 1 Cor. 5. 4. They are ſaid to be gathered together in his Name, and in his Power. And by comparing this place and that together, it appears, that his intent is both inſtitutive and directive, only with this difference, that in Matth. 18. Jeſus Chriſt ſpeaks by way of directing a Brother what to do, when he is offended; and upon that occaſion, mentions what Authority he would give unto his Church, and Aſſemblies of his Saints gathered together in his Name; But in the other Text, 1 Cor. 5. Paul gives forth the direction to the Church it ſelf, calling upon them to perform their Duty, according to the Power and Authority given them by Chriſt. As an Apoſtle, he commands them when gathered together, to deliver ſuch an one unto Satan, and (ſaith he) do ye not judge them that are within? That is, have ye not power to do it from Chriſt, is it not a Duty lies upon you? And he Parallels it with that power himſelf, had according to proportion. Now the power he had all, I grant to be Inſtitutive, for otherwiſe, what power could one Man aſſume over the Churches of Chriſt? And ſo likewiſe without the like Inſtitution, what power could a Church aſſume to deliver a Man to Satan, which is out of their Natural and Moral power to do?

I ſhall now Demonſtrate, that a particular Congregation is meant in this, Matth. 18. and that a particular Congregation is there Inſtituted, and Inſtituted too, as having that power of Excommunication.

Now that a particular Congregation is here meant, is proved firſt out of the place. The Church intended here, is a Church appointed for Worſhip, as well as for Diſcipline. Not only becauſe that meeting to Pray, is mentioned as well as to correct Offences; but becauſe if that be a Church which is appointed for Worſhip, it were ſtrange if Chriſt ſhould in his firſt Inſtitution, mention that Church which is only for Diſcipline, and not that which is for Worſhip alſo. 2. Out of Presbyterian Principles.

And 1. Out of the place it is apparent, that a particular Congregation is meant, take Church to be interpreted by whatſoever you will, that Chriſt alluded to them in uſe.

There were many unformed Sects, that had ſeveral companies belonging to them, that were of the ſame Principles and Regular Order; who although they held a general Communion with the Church of the Jews, yet the manner of theſe Sects, was to have their Synagogues and Schools, (as Paul was brought up at the feet of Gamaliel; and we read of the School of Tyrannus.) And if any of them Tranſgreſſed the Principles of their Order and Sect, they were brought (as Grotius ſaith) before the whole; and ſo they were reproved, ἐνώπιον πάντων, that is. before all. And now if this Alluſion be to ſuch a Church or Company, then the People are taken in, ſuch as ſhould meet and hear; and ſo then, Jeſus Chriſt ſo fixed his Inſtitution, as the People as well as the Officers met, for even thoſe Sects, ſuppoſed Guides, who did bring it to the whole company of that Sect, whereto a Man belonged. Secondly, if the Alluſion were to this, then according to the liberty that was then given, of having Diſciples, our Saviour Chriſt had then a Church upon Earth, which he ſpoke actually unto. For he had by him twelve Apoſtles, and Diſciples, who after grew unto one Hundred and twenty. And therefore according to the Law of thoſe times, he directs them, that if any offences were among them, after two or three Witneſſes taken, they ſhould tell it to this Church. Although Judas had ſinned, yet he had not ſo ſinned, as to have Witneſſes againſt him, until his betraying of Chriſt, and then (as our Saviour Chriſt Propheſied of him, John 15. 6.) he was caſt out as a withered Branch. And then, 3. That Phraſe of gathering together in my Name, is an Alluſion to that cuſtom in thoſe times; for the manner was then, to call Diſciples by the Names of thoſe they followed, and their meetings by their Names, as Herodians were ſo ſtiled, from the Name of Herod. In my Name (ſaith Chriſt) that is, ſuch as profeſs me, and ſet up ſuch Schools in [illegible] Name, are to obſerve the Rules which I ſet them, for their Order, and Government. Chriſt here expreſſed how his Churches ſhould, after his Death and Aſcenſion into Heaven, be ordered under the New Teſtament. As it is ſaid, the Scripture foreſeeing that God would juſtifie the Gentiles through Faith, (Gal. 3. 8.) made the promiſe unto Abraham: And as God foreſeeing, that when the Iſraelites came into Canaan, they ſhould live in Cities, and be a Kingdom or a Nation, accordingly Ordered beforehand their Government, and gave Laws aforehand, for that Nation of the Jews as ſuch, when they ſhould be in their own Land: So here (the Church of the New Teſtament, being to be multiplied and ſcattered, that they could not aſſemble in one, as that National Church of the Jews did) Chriſt aforehand ſpeaks, what he would, have his Churches under the New Teſtament to be; and his Inſtitutions are ſuited to what in his Counſels, and Providence he had Determined, ſhould be; and he knew aforehand would fall out.

2. If Secondly, The Alluſion be to the Jewiſh way, that was appointed by God, and had been of Old; then either the Synedrim is meant, or the Synagogues with the Officers there. But in the firſt place, the Synedrim is not meant; for (as Cameron ſaith) that is never called Eccleſia, a Church, no not by the Septuagint. But be it, that this word had been uſed of it, yet private offences, (of which Chriſt here ſpeaks) were never brought to the Synedrim; but Chriſt ſpeaks this of private offences; for it is, if he offend thee, then take two witneſſes, and then tell it to the Church. Whereas there were but four Caſes which belonged immediately unto the Synedrim, and thoſe were Caſes of Difficulty, when the private Judges in the Cities, could not end the controverſy, who yet had full power to have done it. And then in the third place, Cameron's Reaſon, why the Synedrim is not meant, is good, becauſe the Evangeliſts do ſtill call it πρεσβυτέριον τοῦ λαοῦ and that now only, Chriſt ſhould call Eccleſia, a Church, when it is no where uſed by the Septuagint, under that Name, would be very ſtrange. Secondly, if his Alluſion be to the Government of every Town, this makes for the way of Congregational Churches. For every Village hath their Government entire within themſelves, Deut. 16. 18. in all their Gates. If it were a ſmall Town, there were three Elders, (to which Chriſt here Alludeth) and in the Cities one and twenty. And from the Towns to the Cities, there was not an Appeal, but immediately to the Synedrim.

3. His Alluſion rather is unto the Synagogues in every Town, which were the Eccleſiaſtical State. The Books of Moſes were Read in every City, in the Synagogues, gogues, Acts 5. 21. For every City had their Synagogue, and ſo then in this Senſe, to tell the Church, was to tell that particular Synagogue, (whereof they were Members) both to People and Rulers. Now that Chriſt alludeth to this appears.

Ch. III.

1. Becauſe that Excommunication was exerciſed in their Synagogues, not in the Synedrim. Indeed the Synedrim might make a Law as a Rule, according to which Men ſhould be Excommunicated ; but the Synagogues executed it, thereof it is called, Caſting out of the Synagogues, John 16. 2. And Synagogues were not governed by an Aſſociation, but each Synagogue had it's Rulers, John 9. 22. and in John 16.2.They ſhall caſt you out of the Synagogues. And a Synagogue was a particular Aſſembly, ſuch as Congregations now, Luke 7. 5. He hath Built us a Synagogue, Mar. 1. 21. Chriſt entred into the Synagogue and Taught. And when a Man was caſt out of the Synagogue, and would come into the Temple, they uſed to ſay to him, when he would offer to enter into the Temple, (although they refuſed him not to enter thither, for he held Communion ſtill with the Temple) May he who inhabits this Temple, give thee an Heart to hearken to the words of thy Brethren, that ſo they may receive thee.

2. In every one of theſe Syuagogues, there were two or three Officers. They had Rulers, Acts 13. 14, 15. Acts 18. 7, 17. And therefore Chriſt alluding unto this, ſaith, If two or three agree. They uſed to have three at leaſt, that a Major Vote might caſt it among the Rulers. And they uſed to have two or three Admonitions, afore they caſt out, and thirty days between every Admonition.

3. In a manner, all other Authority was taken from them ; but what they exerciſed in their Synagogues thus, or in the Synedrim, which dealt only in the great matters of Blaſphemy ; whereas this Authority of Synagogues, was for offences of Brethren ; and therefore it is ſtill ſaid, they ſhould bring them into their Synagogues, when they queſtioned them, as Luke 12. 11. The Romans took away all other power from them. But here they could inflict puniſhments, They ſhall Scourge you in their Synagogues, it was the place of their puniſhment, ſo Matth. 23. 34. they whipt in them, for they had no other Courts left, Acts 26. 11. And they had Rulers, for the caſting Men out from thence. And perhaps theſe meetings, in the Synagogues, are thoſe which are called Synedria, in Matth. 10. 17. And in Luke 12. 11. when they bring you into the Synagogues, is mentioned firſt, and then, unto Magiſtrates and Powers, Namely, the Civil Magiſtrate, which in Matth. 10. 17. is rendred thus ; They will deliver you up to the Council, or Synedrim, and they will Scourge you in their Synagogues ; and then follows their being brought to the Civil Magiſtrate in the next verſe, and ſhall bring you before Kings and Govetnours. And ſome Interpreters ſay, that the Alluſion is here in Matth. 18. 17. to that Synagogue Government and Worſhip, Eccleſia and Synagogus, being uſed Promiſcuouſly.

4. Theſe Synagogues were Oratories, places of Prayer and Preaching, therefore Chriſt doth alſo Subjoyn here, if two meet together, to ask or to pray. It is not meant only of praying, when they Adminiſtred Diſcipline; for it is praying about any buſineſs, for they uſed to Worſhip and Pray in the Synagogues, as well as to caſt out of the Synagogues ; their Worſhip and their Diſcipline, there being of equal extent. And the word that is uſed in this Text, of *Mat.*18.19. συμφώνησιν ſhall agree, ſignifies a meeting, as well as a conſent, ſo Gen. 14. 3. And the words alſo that Chriſt uſeth, ver. 19. Again, or moreover I ſay unto you, (having ſpoken of Diſcipline afore, and now of Prayer) do hold forth the Scope of this Church, to be as well for Prayer, as for Diſcipline ; and ſo to be underſtood of ſuch a Synagogue, as was both for Diſcipline, and Worſhip, or Prayer. And then the Addition of the laſt words, ver. 20. For where two or three are gathered together in my Name, I am in the midſt of them ; is the general concluſion to both. So that the meaning is, that whether they meet for Worſhip or Prayer, (of which he had ſpoken, ver. 19.) or for Diſcipline, (of which he had ſpoken, ver. 17, 18.) Chriſt is in the midſt of them. Now as our Saviour Chriſt's alluſion was unto that Synagogue, Government, and Worſhip, then extant, ſo particular Churches and Congregations under the Goſpel, in anſwer thereunto, are expreſt unto us, under the word Synagogue. They have that Name, becauſe unto them did Chriſt allude ; and they ſuited his Inſtitution under the New Teſtament, Jam. 22. If one come into your Aſſembly, it is in the Greek, εἰς τὴν συναγωγὴν into your Synagogue ; He ſpeaks of Synagogues for Worſhip, as in Heb. 10.25. forſake not the aſſembling of your ſelves together. It is there ἐπισυναγωγὴν meeting in a Synagogue, which is a particular meeting for Worſhip, which is therefore called the Houſe, that God hath under the New Teſtament, ver. 20. whereof Chriſt is ſaid to be the High Prieſt.

And indeed the analogy between their Synagogues and our Congregations, holdeth exceeding far. They hold two or three Officers, that were Rulers of the Synagogue; and we profeſs for kind, that there are three ſort of Officers, Paſtors, Teachers, and Elders. And the Jews in a manner for the ſubſtance, uſe the ſame expreſſion concerning their Synagogues, they had two Wiſe Men to Teach, and one to Diſcern; and therefore Chriſt ſaith, where two or three are gathered together. And to be an Heathen and a Publican, and to be caſt out of the Synagogue, was all one; and the word Synagogue and Eccleſia, or Church, are all one in the Septuagint; and ſo conſequently to be caſt out of the Church, correſponds to their Ejection out of the Synagogue.

And to this hath Chriſt framed the conſtitution of his Church, under the New Teſtament, that it ſhould be both for Worſhip and Government, as the Synagogues were within themſelves. And although theſe Aſſemblies are called Synagogues as for their extent; yet they are called Temples, as for their priviledge. And this conſtitution of Chriſt, ſuited with the primitive times of the Goſpel; for the Jews being Diſperſed in ſeveral Nations, they had Synagogues in all Cities, and an entire Government within thoſe Synagogues. Yea, even in Judea, in ſome one great City, there was but one Synagogue, as in Capernaum, Mar. 1.21. Thus at Antioch too, the Jews had a Synagogue, Acts 13. 14, 15. as alſo at Theſſolanica, Acts 17. 1. and at Corinth, Acts 18. 4. where the Greeks and the Jews were met in one. Now the Chriſtians being to be called out of all places; and being Diſperſt, as theſe Jews were in all Nations, Chriſt ſuited a Government to theſe conditions of the Synagogue-Government, and anſwerably fixed his Inſtitution of Churches, in imitation of the Jews Diſperſt, who had Synagogues amongſt all the Gentiles, in their ſeveral Cities. Chriſt choſe not the legal way of a National Church, or of a Synedrim, or of going up to one Temple, for a whole Nation, but he fixed on Synagogues, as fitting his turn beſt; for he choſe Churches out of Nations; and ſo did not hold to one National Church of the Jews; and therefore we read of Churches in Judea it ſelf, and not Church, Gal. 1.22.

And to ſtrengthen this aſſertion, it may be obſerved, that our Saviour Chriſt did not take nor follow the Inſtitution of the Old Teſtament, but the Appendixes of it, as for Example; In the Lord's Supper he Inſtituted the Bread and Wine, anſwerably to the Bread and Wine which were appendixes of the Paſſover, and he refuſeth the Paſchal Lamb, and chooſeth the Bread and Wine. So likewiſe as the Jews uſed to Baptize Proſelites: So he refuſeth Circumciſion, and takes that Baptiſm. Thus alſo as the Synagogues were, as it were Chappels of eaſe to the Great Church, the Temple, where Moral Worſhip only was: he lets the Stately Temple-Worſhip go, and the glory of a National Government, and chooſeth this mean way of a Synagogue, but yet endows it with the priviledge of a Temple; that ſo whereas, before God was Worſhipped in the Mount, and in the Temple, he is now Worſhipped as much, and as truly, and as ſpiritually every where, and in every Synagogue having the ſame priviledge. And indeed Chriſt's way in the Ordinances and Inſtitutions of the Goſpel was to chooſe that which in compariſon, was before to the Jews, and to the World, fooliſhneſs; thus he chooſe the fooliſhneſs of Preaching, and in ſtead of taking the High Prieſts and Rulers, he takes Fiſhermen, &c.

4. But yet though Chriſt might ſpeak in the Language of the Old Teſtament, it is not neceſſary that his meaning ſhould be, that the Churches in the New Teſtament, ſhould be formed according as the Old were; but the contrary. Our Saviour Chriſt had ſaid before in Matth. 16. 18. I will build my Church; and as he ſpeaks of New Keys that are to be given, ſo by that he prepares their minds to a perſwaſion, that he would have a New Church Diſtinct from the former. And then afterward, here in Matth. 18. 17. he tells them more diſtinctly, that they ſhould tell the Church. And if it be ſaid, that they underſtand not what he meant by the word Church, or that they could not apprehend, that he meant by it a particular Congregation; and that they knew not too, what he meant by Keys, for certainly they knew not the particular Ordinances, which he intended under that general expreſſion, The Keys of Heaven; and ſo neither knew they what this New Church, in Matth. 18. (to which they were to tell)might import? The anſwer is plain, that the Holy Ghoſt was to come on them, to tell them afterwards. And indeed our Saviour Chriſt ſpake of many things, which they then underſtood not, as of the Reſurrection, Mat. 16.21. I will deſtroy this Temple, and Build it in three Days; and alſo, that his Kingdom was not of this World, Jer. 18. 26. So when he waſhed his Diſciples Feet, they knew not then the meaning of it; but he ſaith, he would ſend them the Comforter, which ſhould tell them all things, John 14. 16. and chap. 16. 30. But yet it was neceſſary, that Chriſt ſhould deliver the main Foundations of all thoſe Truths, which the Holy Ghoſt afterwards ſhould enlighten them in. Moſes delivered many things in the Wilderneſs, concerning the Government of the Church of the Jews, which they could not ſo well underſtand, till they came into the Land of Canaan, and though they knew not the place that God would chooſe; yet many of the Laws that Moſes gave, depended upon it. But

they

Ch. III.

2. Our Saviour Chriſt had according to the liberty that then was given, unto all ſeveral Sects, (though we call not his ſuch) built a Church, he had a little Flock, as he calls it: And as he began to Inſtitute Baptiſm, and began to Inſtitute the Lord's Supper afore he dyed, ſo to Inſtitute this Church, he began it as other Ordinances afore his Death, and he did caſt Judas out of it. And

3. The manner is oftentimes to ſpeak in the Language of the Old Teſtament, when the ſame thing is not meant. As when Chriſt ſpeaks of the Perſon offending, Matth. 5. 22. He expreſſeth the Degrees of puniſhment to ſeveral ſins, under the Names of three Courts amongſt the Jews, and yet he meaneth Spiritual Degrees of puniſhment. Thus too, in 1 Cor. 9. 13. The whole ſervice of the Sanctuary is called the Altar, (He that ſerveth at the Altar, muſt live of the Altar) yet there is no ſuch Altar erected amongſt us, as was amongſt the Jews. And the Prophets alſo propheſying of the times of the Goſpel, ſpake of our Ordinances, under the notion of the Old Teſtament, yet meant other Ordinances, anew to be Inſtituted; ſo in Iſa. 66. 23. They ſhall go from one new Moon, unto another. Though under the Goſpel, we have not Monthly Feaſts and Meetings, as they had; yet the Meetings that we have, are expreſt thereby. And ſo now here Chriſt ſpeaks of a Church, that as the Jews had a Church ſo likewiſe under the New Teſtament, there ſhould be a Church, to which Offences ſhould be brought; but that Officers alone ſhould be that Church, (ſuppoſing that the Ruling Officers, are called the Church in the Old Teſtament) it followeth not. For the word Presbytery, which was given to the Eldérſhip of the Great Synedrim, of the whole Nation of the Jews; is now given to the Presbytery of every Congregation. So as though he uſeth the ſame word to expreſs the Inſtitution of the New Churches of the Goſpel by, yet it follows not, that it is of the ſame kind with the Old, or that it runneth in the ſame way. But

4. We are rather to Interpret it by what kind of Churches we read afterwards, that the Apoſtles Erected. As Moſes was Interpreted by the Prophets, ſo is Chriſt's mind in this to be known by his Apoſtles; for the Spirit came on them, and did Reveal unto them Chriſt's Mind and Intention. The Tryal therefore will ly upon this, what Bodies, and conſiſting of whom, are called a Church in the Acts of the Apoſtles, and in their Epiſtles.

What that Church is, upon which the Inſtitution of Chriſt falleth, is not to be argued meerly out of the Analogy of the Old Teſtament, for that will not ſet up an Inſtitution in the New. But when we have found out what manner of Church in the New Teſtament, Jeſus Chriſt hath Inſtituted, we are then to conſider the Analogy of that Form thereunto, ſo far forth, as Chriſt hath applied it.

Now both in the Phraſe of the New Teſtament, Aſſemblies conſiſting of Elders and People, and of the Saints, are called Churches, and in the words alſo of, Matt. 18. 20. where two or three are gathered together in my Name, Chriſt tells us his meaning of a Church. And unto this Church ſay we, doth the Analogy of all the Church under the Old Teſtament hold, if you take the due proportion; and as the excellent ſtories and alluſions in the Old Teſtament, are brought into the New, to ſet forth things that come under the New, in the Book of the Revelation, in their ſeveral proportions, (therefore ſpeaking of Rome, he calleth it Spiritual Sodom, and Egypt and Babylon, &c.) ſo we find that all the Types of the Old Teſtament, are applied unto theſe Aſſemblies. Thus as to the Temple, which was the Seat of Worſhip, and the Sacrifices there; Congregational Aſſemblies, hath carryed away the analogy of them by Chriſt's Inſtitution; for they only are the fixed publick Seats of Worſhip, where Spiritual Sacrifices are offered. In Congregations the living Stones are built up together, to offer up living Sacrifices acceptable unto God, as in 2 Pet. 2.5. Eph. 2.22. And unto theſe Aſſemblies, are the ſame promiſes made, that were made to the whole Nation of the Jews, when they were a Church incamped in the Wilderneſs, upon all their Aſſemblies, ſhall be a Cloud, and a Pillar of Fire, Prophecying of the Goſpel, ſaith the Prophet Iſa. Iſa. 4.5. And all the priviledges which that Nation had, as a Church, (take them in a Spiritual Reſpect) hath every Congregation of Saints now. This therefore is called the Houſe of God, over which Chriſt is an High Prieſt, Heb. 10. which in ver. 25. he Interprets to be the aſſembling of themſelves together; In the compaſs of ſuch an Aſſembly, alſo hath Jeſus Chriſt contracted Appeals ſufficient, for firſt (ſays he) tell him of his Fault thy ſelf, then take two or three, and then go tell the Church; and then he is bound in Heaven, as the Supreameſt Judicature, Matth. 18.15, to 19. And God hath ſo advanced the State of the New Teſtament, above that of the Old; that as the Glory of the Second Temple, exceeded the Firſt; ſo doth the Glory of the Saints now in theſe Aſſemblies, excell all former. Every Believer is a Prieſt now; yea, the Alluſion in the company of Saints aſſembled for Worſhip, in Rev. 4. is unto the Twenty four Prieſts that were over the Twenty four Companies of Prieſts. And the Officers now are, as the four Beaſts in Ezekiel, Rev. 4. 8. and are as Angels, rather than Prieſts, called therefore the Angels of the Churches, Rev. 1. 20. The Saints all are a Royal Nation; and the Name of the City of God, is written upon every Aſſembly. The great Preſbytery or Synedrim of the People, is the Preſbytery of every Congregation. Every Church is a City unto God, it is the City of the Living God; it is the Holy City, and hath a Government within it ſelf, of Elders within its own Gates. Yea, here is the Synagogue-Government alſo, unto which the Alluſion alſo is; and theſe Aſſemblies are ſo called, as I proved in the foregoing Chapter. Yea, and as God chooſeth the mean things of the World under the Goſpel, ſo he choſe that Synagogue Frame; becauſe the Worſhip therein was wholy Spiritual and Moral; it was not the Seat of Ceremonial Worſhip, as was the Temple. The Government of the Synagogues was natural, to caſt any Perſon out of themſelves, as all Bodies have by the Law of Nature, with a puniſhment ſuitable annexed, viz. to keep ſuch from the eſteem of Worſhippers; and that they ſhould be accounted as Heathens and Publicans. Thus Chriſt hath choſen a way more Spiritual, more Natural, ſuitablable to the Communion of Saints, that hath leſs Pomp and Glory in it. He hath taken this Bethlehem, that was the leaſt, the loweſt of the Governments amongſt them; and hath made it the greateſt, and endowed it with the priviledges of all the reſt. It hath both National and Temple priviledges, and Synedrim priviledges alſo, it hath the Spirituality of them all. There they have the Lord's Supper, in ſtead of the Paſſover; There they have the Altar, 1 Cor. 10. 16, 17, &c. what glorious things are ſpoken of, in Jer. 3. 14, 15, 16. You ſhall ſay no more, the Ark of the Covenant of the Lord, neither ſhall it come to mind, &c. I will give you Paſtors, according to mine own Heart, which ſhall feed you with Knowledge and Underſtanding; and I will take you, one of a City, and two of a Tribe, call them out, and bring them to Zion. That Zion, is where the Paſtors are Teaching, therefore meant of Congregations. He doth not take Nations, but Select out of Nations, out of Cities and Tribes, Saints here and there; and formeth them up into Congregations, becauſe they have Paſtors that feed them; and in ſuch Congregations, is the feeding of the Paſtors with Knowledge and Underſtanding. And this ſucceedeth the Ark of the Covenant, having the priviledges thereof. It is a Prophecy, of the calling of the Jews under the Goſpel.

And yet if that Judicial Government, (as we may ſo call it) that was in Jury, were the Pattern, of all Church-Government future, although it would indeed then, by the analogy of it, erect a National Aſſembly, over the leſſer Churches; yet even that would conduce to the Eſtabliſhment of more, to the Congregational way we contend for; than our Brethren will yield them, and will militate againſt the Presbyterian Pattern, as it is practiſed, and that in theſe particulars. For

1. Firſt, Each Town, as well as each City, had all Government within their Gates, as much as Cities; and the Elders in the Towns, were not to Appeal to the Elders in the Cities; but immediately to the National Aſſembly. In Ezra 10. 14.

there were the Rulers of all the Congregation, (which was all the whole Nation) mentioned, and the Elders of every City, and Judges thereof; City according to the Hebrews, was every little Town. Thus Moſes is ſaid to be read in every City in the Synagogues, that is, in every Town; for they had Synagogues in Villages, Acts 15. 21. In Deut. 16. 18. (ſaith he) Judges and Officers ſhall thou make thee in all thy Gates, that is, in every Town; and therefore the Rabbins do ſay, that if it were a big City, where there were one Hundred and twenty Families in it, there were twenty three Sat in the Gate, if it were leſs, then but three; for there was no Court conſiſted of leſs.

2. Secondly, Thoſe Towns were not Ruled by a Combination, but had a Government intire within themſelves, unleſs things were too hard for them.

3. Thirdly, The Appeals unto the Sanhedrim, was only for the Deciſion of Law-Cauſes, in a Doctrinal way, (as if that the Judges of Weſtminſter-Hall, ſhould enquire of the Parliament, for the meaning of a Statute; and were bound to pronounce Sentence, according to their Interpretation of the Law) though ſtill the Judgment of the matter of Fact, and to pronounce the Sentence it ſelf, was to be done by Authority and Juriſdiction of each Town, like as we alſo contend, that all Cenſures ſhould be by particular Congregations.

Obj. If ſo, then their Government was not Uniform.

Anſ. Yes, only in leſſer proportions in the ſmaller Towns, they had three Rulers, and in their Cities, and greater Towns twenty three. The Law of God not Determining, how many Elders ſhould make up the Judicature, either in the one, or in the other. As alſo in Congregations, God hath not determined how many, but according to their proportion and neceſſity, hath left a liberty of chooſing a greater, or leſſer number.

CHAP. V.

That though it were granted, that the power of the Keys in Chriſt's Inſtitution, Matth. 18. was given to the Elders, or Officers; and not to the People: That yet in a greater probability of Reaſon, the Officers or Elders of a particular Congregational Church are meant. That in all probability too, the Inſtitution of ſuch Churches, was deſigned by him; becauſe their Conditions and Order, beſt ſuits the ends of the Edification of his Saints.

IF by Church, in Matth. 18. 17. were meant the Officers, yet ſtill the Officers of a particular Church, for there is a Presbytery in every Church. And the mention of two or three, doth rather carry it to that meaning. So that if by Church, ſhould be meant the Elders, yet queſtion will return what Elders, in relation to what Church? To a particular Church ſay we. Thus when it is ſaid, in Jam. 5. 14. Send for the Elders of the Church, it could not be the Elders of a Presbyterian Church. Our Presbyterian Brethren acknowledge, that particular Congregations are Churches; they are the firſt of the Name in this Inſtitution, and are firſt intended, and are therefore called Eccleſiæ primæ, the firſt Churches, even by Presbyterians themſelves. We are ſure alſo, that particular Churches, have the Name of a whole Church, 1 Cor. 14. 23. If the whole Church meet in one. We are ſure too, that the firſt Churches in all places, were but particular Churches, even in Hieruſalem it ſelf. The Apoſtles did not forbear making a particular in any place, they did not ſtay till Chriſtian's Church were multiplied, so as to make many Churches in one place. Now ſuch a particular Church before Churches ever multiplied, had a Government within it ſelf, by virtue of Matth. 18. 17. And if ſo, if here be an Inſtitution, it falleth upon it; and it exerciſes its Government as a Church, by virtue of its Charter.

1. That a particular Church is meant, in Matth. 18. is evident, becauſe it is ſuch a Church that is ſpoke of, whereof a Man is a Brother; and now he is a Brother firſt, and more peculiarly of a particular Congregation; that's the Reaſon, why you Excommunicate him out of the particular Church, when out of none of all the reſt. And when you bring the matter at laſt to an iſſue, you tell that Church of it, more than any of the reſt; for that Congregation being a Church by the Order of Chriſt, it is to be brought unto that Church firſt, which the offending Perſon hath the relation of a Brother unto. Now ſee who are in the right, our Presbyterian Brethren, or we; they think themſelves bound to tell the Church, becauſe he is a Brother of it, but not at firſt; whereas Chriſt ſaith, Tell this Church firſt, and if he will not hear what that Church ſays, let him be an Heathen.

2. The method that Chriſt here preſcribeth, evidently argueth it to be a particular Church; for 1. Saith he, do thy ſelf deal with him. 2. Take two or three Witneſſes; 3. Tell the Church; This muſt needs be that particular Church, that is the next Body, for that particular Church, is a Church, and it is his Church; and it is a Body in aſcent next to the two or three Witneſſes; and if there be any ſuch thing as a Church Claſſical, that is a degree beyond it.

3. All that are for Presbyterial Government, do by virtue of this place, in Matth. 18. tell it to the Congregational Elders, the Presbytery. And ſo then, that the particular Congregation is meant in this, Matth. 18. both their Practices and Principles do import. For they argue from this place, by way of Analogy. They argue from hence, the power of many Churches over any Church; becauſe, look what power the firſt Church hath over a Brother, that many Churches hath over a Church: And therefore according to their own Conceſſions, this firſt Church is firſt meant as the meaſure of the other; and therefore what is ſaid here in Matth. 18. muſt be firſt true of the particular Congregation. For they make a Combination of Churches; for to deal with offending or diſagreeing Churches, upon this ground, that a particular Church is that, which is here appointed to deal with a Brother. If then the Argument doth run by way of Analogy; then the power of their greater Churches, is fetched from the power that this particular Church hath. And they argue, that therefore they have an intire power over many Churches, becauſe that this hath an intire power over its own Members; and that what power is in a particular Church is in the whole Body of Churches joyntly: And therefore by the Presbyterial Conceſſions and Principles, the Inſtitution muſt firſt fall upon this Church Congregational. For if any Man would argue from what power a Corporation hath over its Members, that the like power many Corporations may have over that Corporation, it would imply, that that Corporation hath an intire power over its own Members; and look how much of the intireneſs of the power, you take away from the particular Corporation, over its Members; ſo much you weaken the Argument and Analogy, for the power of many.

In a word, all the Arguments of all ſides, of Papiſts, that would have the Pope to be the Church; of the Epiſcopal party that would have the Biſhops to be the Church, all argue from the word Church. And they ſay, that a Dioceſan hath power in a Dioceſs, becauſe a whole Dioceſs may be one Church; and ſo, many Elders may make up a Presbytery, over many Congregations; becauſe many Congregations make one Church. So as all theſe, and the Presbyterian Government it ſelf, can prove their claim only, as they can make it out, that they are a Church. Now particular Congregations do, and may put firſt in for it, that they are Churches; therefore as a Church, they muſt have a power over their own Members, as the other have over Churches, according to their own Principles.

4. The firſt and primary Inſtitution, muſt fall upon particular Congregations, as the Seats or Bounds of the firſt power, whether the Inſtitution be ſuppoſed to fall upon them as Churches, or as a Presbytery. If it falls on them as Churches, the greater Churches conſiſting of many Congregations are but Ortæ, or ſprung of this: If it falls on them as a Presbytery, they are but Compounds, and Decompounds. The Native and firſt Genuine Church, is the Congregational, the other are but Repreſentative Churches; when as this is more real.

5. As the Inſtitution of a Congregational Church, in Matth. 18. moſt ſuits with Chriſts Aim and Deſign, the Communion of Saints; ſo it moſt agrees too with that promiſe of his Preſence, ver. 20. what kind of Aſſembly is moſt likely to be pitched upon by Chriſt, to be made his Court on Earth, but that wherein he is Worſhipped; and where there is the perſonal Preſence of his Saints, for whoſe ſake he

Ch. V. is preſent with the Officers of a Church; and not as they are Officers abſtracted from the Church or Meeting, without it. And indeed it was for the Honour of the Saints, and was becoming of their State under the Goſpel; that not Elders alone, but that Saints gathered together with the Elders, ſhould be thoſe fixed Bodies to which the power ſhould be given; for ſo the Stile runneth, the Churches of the Saints, 1 Cor. 14. 33. And what is the Church, without the preſence of Chriſt? And what is more of a Church, than that to which more of the promiſe of the preſence of Chriſt is made: Now to the Saints, and alſo to the Elders, as joyned and united in Bodies with Saints, is the promiſe made. Thoſe promiſes, I will walk among you, &c. 1 Cor. 6. 16. Ezek. 37. 26, 37. is made to the Bodies of Saints. So then if we take the State of the Saints under the New Teſtament, (where every one comparatively, is ſaid more to know the Lord comparatively, unto thoſe of the Old) it is anſwerably in a way of compariſon, more ſuitable to Reaſon; that if the Government ſhould be placed upon Bodies formed up, the Inſtitution ſhould fall upon ſuch Bodies, as have both Saints and Elders. And if there were no other reaſon, yet this might be pleaded for it; that the Officers have, though not formal, power from the People as Officers, yet a virtual power, concurrence and aſſiſtance (through the promiſe of Chriſt's preſence with them) as ſuch from the preſence of the Saints, in reſpect of the execution of their Office, and the bleſſing thereof, (which they do not carry about them alone) eſpecially in ſuch Acts, wherein they do things as for the People, and which do concern them, as Acts of Juriſdiction do. Although as Elders Dedicated unto Chriſt, they might have a Bleſſing in Preaching unto them, and that as Elders, or in Prayer, or the like; yet in all Miniſterial Acts of Juriſdiction, that belong to a Church as a Corporation, they have a virtual aſſiſtance from the concurrence of the People with them, doing all this in their preſence. Thus the Elders among the Jews, beſides the Bleſſing of their Calling, as being Elders, and united into a Body over that Nation, in a Synedrim or Council, had alſo a Bleſſing from the place where they ſhould meet, the place that God ſhould chooſe, as alſo their Sacrifices had: And ſhould the ſame Synedrim have met out of that place, they had not had that Aſſiſtance, neither could the Acts have been counted Acts of Juriſdiction. This Principle the Papiſts themſelves ſeem to acknowledge, who make the Aſſiſtance that the Pope hath, when he ſpeaks infallibly as a Pope, to be not alone, but in the Cathedrâ, in the Chair; and ſo in Council with the Cardinals: And ſo in a State or Kingdom, though the ultimate concluding and ratifying of Laws, doth lye in the King; yet he doth not do it alone, but having all other Eſtates of Nobles and Commons preſent, or elſe what he doth, is not legal nor binding. Now ſo under the New Teſtament, though all Church-power ſhould be ſuppoſed to be formally in the Elders; yet not as abſtracted from the preſence of the Saints, which is in ſtead of the place that God then choſe among the Jews, in which they had an eſpecial Bleſſing and Aſſiſtance. Nay, he hath now choſe a better Temple for Elders to exerciſe their Juriſdiction in, Temples made of living Stones, that is, Churches conſiſting of Saints, from the concurrence of whoſe Spirits, Prayers and Applications, the Acts done by the Elders in a Church, do receive their ſtrength. So Jeſus Chriſt is in the midſt of the Elders; becauſe his promiſe is to be in the midſt of the Saints, their Spirits joyn and concur in the Act, and ſo there is an Efficacy runneth along therewith. And this Honour at leaſt, was meet to be given by Chriſt, to his Saints under the New Teſtament. For what tho' the Elders be as the Loadſtone; yet as the Virtue and Efficacy of the Loadſtone, depends upon its being ſet in Steel, ſo the virtual Bleſſing of the Elder's Actions, in matters of Juriſdiction, (which are the higheſt Acts of Church-Government) depends upon their being in the midſt of Saints, that concur with them. And therefore in Matth. 18. 17. it is ſaid, Tell the Church, that is, the Elders joyning with, and in preſence of the People. Although the Eye is that Member that doth ſee for the Body; yet it hath the Virtual Efficacy that inableth it to ſee, from its being placed in the Body; and as the Eye cannot ſee out of the Body, nor can one Body, being in another Bodie's Eye to ſee withal; ſo cannot this power of the Elders, be carryed out of its Seat, nor a Forraign power be brought in. And therefore when the Apoſtle ſays, in 1 Cor. 5. 4. When ye are gathered together with the power of the Lord Jeſus, and ſo in 2 Cor. 6. 16. I will walk among you, and in Mat. 28. 20. when Chriſt promiſed I will be with you, to the end of the World, he ſpeaks not only of Miniſters, and the Succeſſors of the Apoſtles; but of thoſe alſo that believe through

Book II.

through their word, for ſo in John 17. 20. he interprets it; and likewiſe in John 15. 16. your Fruit ſhall remain, and ſo be both with Miniſters and Saints, as Succeſſors of the Apoſtles; this being the Honour of the Apoſtles, not only to have Miniſters to Succeed them, but Churches of Believers alſo, with whom Chriſt is. And therefore in the Revelation, where Jeſus Chriſt's preſence in the Church of the New Teſtament, is preſented with Alluſion to that of the Old, chap. 4. although the viſion is of the Church Univerſal materially conſidered; yet formally the Repreſentation of it is made, as it is the Seat of publick Worſhip; and therefore repreſented under the Idea, of a Congregational Aſſembly, as appeareth, (as Mr. Brightman and Parker, and others have obſerved) in that it is ſet forth in order to Acts of publick Worſhip, performed therein. Thus there is the Laver to waſh in, as in the Temple there was, before they Worſhipped; unto which the Apoſtle makes the Alluſion, for meeting in the Houſe of God for Worſhip, Heb. 10. 21, 22, & 25. verſes compared; Let us draw near with a pure Heart, and Bodies waſhed, which afterward (ver. 25.) he expounds to be Aſſembling themſelves together. And in that, Rev. 4. the four Beaſts, who are the Leaders and the Chorus for Worſhip, when they fall down, and caſt down their Crowns, the Elders do ſo too. Now thoſe Aſſemblies, in which Jeſus Chriſt hath thus ſet his Throne and Temple, they conſiſt of Elders and Beaſts, having Eyes, &c. that is, Saints and Officers; for ſuch is the Advancement of the Saints, now in compariſon of thoſe under the Old Teſtament, that they themſelves are called the Elders; and the four living wights, are thoſe four ſorts of Officers of Congregations. The thing we cite it for, is this; that the Throne and Preſence of Chriſt, is with the Beaſts, as joyned with the twenty four Elders, and in Aſſemblies made up of both. And therefore the Officers are ſaid to be ſet in the Church, 1 Cor. 12. 28. and ſo to work ſtill, as ſet in the Church, but they are no where called the Church it ſelf.

See his Expoſition on the 4th and 5th cha. Revel. in vol. 2. of his Works.

Yea, and though the Apoſtles were made immediately by Chriſt, without a relation to any ſpecial or particular Church; and in order principally unto gathering and rearing up Churches, yet the choice of one Apoſtle was made in a Congregational Church, conſiſting of Angels and People, Acts 1. And Paul and Barnabas, tho' made Apoſtles immediately by Chriſt; yet received their Ordination in ſuch a particular Church, whilſt the Elders were Miniſtring unto the Lord, in the Church of Antioch, Acts 13. Yea, and they themſelves ordinarily, did not exerciſe any Acts of Juriſdiction, either of Ordination, or Excommunication, but as ſtill preſent in a particular Church. They did not ſet up a Court, unto which Churches were to come; but they rather came themſelves, and viſited Churches, ordained Elders in every Church with Faſting and Prayer in the Churches; and ordinarily they Excommunicated not, (tho' they might give general Directions) but in a Church. And however, if there might be Caſes wherein the Apoſtles did Excommunicate alone; yet they were very extraordinary, and no way to be imitated, as their Miracles are not. They did not Excommunicate when abſent, 2 Cor. 13. 10. Shall I come with a Rod? And when I come, I ſhall bewail ſome of you, &c. As therefore the Apoſtles did not ſet up a Court out of particular Presbyteries, ſo Presbyteries are not to ſet up a Court out of particular Churches. Yea, in that only inſtance of a Synod, which we have in Acts 15. the Tranſactions of the Apoſtles and Elders were in, and with that Church of Hieruſalem, where the Brethren alſo were preſent. Thus hath God Honoured the Saints of the New Teſtament, that the promiſe of the preſence of Chriſt, ſhould be made to them, when gathered together with their Officers; and that he will be with the Officers even as ſuch, for the Peoples ſake. You know, (ſaith the Apoſtle to the Theſſalonians) what manner of Men we were among you, for your ſakes, 1 Theſſ. 1. 5. They have not only a Miniſterial power for them as they are in; but they have a Miniſterial power through them, as having it for their ſakes, and by vertue of their Communion, God's promiſe being to be in the midſt of them, by vertue of their preſence. So as although they have not a power derived to them, ab Eccleſiâ, as from the Church; yet they have it derived to them in Eccleſia, in the Church, and alſo inſtrumentally, ab Eccleſiâ. And although they Act not the power that is in the Church in their ſtead, and for their caſe, doing ſuch Acts, as otherwiſe the Church ſhould, (as thoſe of the Separation have held) yet the Aſſiſtance of the Execution of their power, is virtually in the Church, the promiſe being made to them as a Church. Neither are they the Church Repreſentative, having a power

Ch. IV. abſent, and abſtracted from the People, as is the Nature of all Repreſentations, (for nothing is Repreſented, that is preſent) but the Church it ſelf is the Sedes, the Virtual Seat, in which this power is exerciſed, as the Body is of the actions of the principal Members; the Spirit, and Strength, and Vigour of the whole Body, concurring and aſſiſting the Acts of all ſuch Members: And therefore Excommunication is in the Name of Chriſt; that is, as ſome ſay, in vocato nomine, or of Chriſt called upon; and ſo as having the Prayers of the People of God to aſſiſt, to put force and efficacy into it. And ſo Ordination is done with Faſting and Prayer; and the Prayers of the Saints, the leaſt Saints have as much influence unto the virtual aſſiſtance of the Officers in their Acts before them, as the Prayers of the Elders themſelves; and therefore the Presbyterial acts that are abſtracted thus from the People, have not that efficacy in them as when the Body of Saints and Elders are joyn'd together. So as the Inſtitution falleth not only upon Elders, but upon Elders and People as a Body formed up of both, not only becauſe all acts of Worſhip and Juriſdiction, are for the Edification of the Saints as well as of the Elders: But it is becauſe that Jeſus Chriſt will have the aſſiſtance of their Spirits and of their Prayers, &c. which have as much efficacy in them to prevail with him for a Bleſſing, as thoſe of the Elders had.

And in this reſpect the keys (as was ſaid before) are given unto Peter both as a Saint and as a Miniſter, as both reſpects conſidered did meet in him, when the keys were given to him, ſo that the words to their, include both. So that at leaſt the keys are ſo given to the Miniſters, as to be exerciſed before, and in the preſence of the Saints, having an aſſiſtance from the concurrence of their Spirits and Deſires. The Papiſts would have the keys given to Peter alone, ſimply and abſolutely, only they ſay indeed for the Church, but they do not make the Church the ſubject to which the keys are given. Others do make the Church the firſt ſubject to whom the keys are given, and not only for whom, but then they make the Elders the Repreſentative Church, and ſo that they are given to Elders only to be exerciſed inſtead of the Church. But we ſay they are given ſo to the Church, as that if they ſhould not be the formal ſubject of parted power together with the Elders, yet they are the virtual ſubject in which the Elders ſhould exerciſe them. And hence it is that the denomination of Church is from the Saints, and not given to the Officers any where in the New Teſtament. The Officers are ſaid to be ſet in the Church, but they are not called the Church. For a Church of Chriſt muſt needs be a Body to Chriſt, that ſtill is the periphraſis of a Church. Now as in 1 Cor. 12. 12. A Body is not one Member, but many, (and from thence it is rightly argued, that a Biſhop is not the Church for he is but one) ſo nor is a Presbytery of Elders although many the Body for they bear not the immediate relation of a Body to Chriſt himſelf, but are only the repreſentation of his Body. And as Members of all ſorts do make a natural body, not only Members that are the Principal and Rule the Body, but alſo thoſe that are ruled and ordered. So is it here.

And when Chriſt in Mat. 18. ſaith, Tell the Church, having firſt told the party alone himſelf, then brought a Brother or two; as the ſin of the offending party doth by this increaſe, and grow more hainous, ſo the number of thoſe by whom he is now to be rebuked that are called the Church, muſt be ſuppoſed to increaſe alſo, and therefore not two or three Elders of a Congregation alone. This laſt is the laſt and the higheſt remedy, and therefore the publickneſs muſt not lye only in reſpect that they are publick Perſons, Officers, for if it be told privately only in a Conſiſtory, it is as private as if it were told to two or three of the Brethren before, or it may ſo be, that the ſame Elders had been taken to be the Brethren that ſhould admoniſh him. By the word Church therefore, is meant a greater company, and therefore not the Elders alone, but the Elders before the Church, or rather the Elders in the Church, with whom the Church is to joyn in the Admonitions and Rebukes of him.

If it be ſaid that by making the People thus the Church rather than the Elders, it argues that more Authority is given to the People than the Elders in the Church. The anſwer is, That that follows not; it only follows that there is more efficacy and vertue by reaſon of the Church, and the preſence of the Elders in the Church, although the Authority ſhould lye in the Elders themſelves, as the vertue by which the Eye ſeeth, lyeth in the Body ſubjectively and virtually more, though the Eye alone is the Inſtrument of ſeeing.

We argue alſo for this Congregational Inſtitution to have been rather appointed than the other, becauſe that the bounds of this are certain, and are natural. God (as Baines ſaith) did never ſet a Church but he did ſet certain bounds of it; As when he made the Jewiſh Church a Nation, he ſet the bounds of it to be that of the Nation. Bellarmine argueth that therefore Biſhops are not Divino Jure of Divine Right, becauſe God did not make Dioceſes, and did not ſet them out by Lot as he did that of the Tribes. And it was therefore a great contention among Biſhops of old in thoſe times of the fourth and fifth Century, to whoſe juriſdiction ſuch and ſuch Villages or Towns ſhould belong. In a word, the Church is God's Houſe, and God hath not left it unto man to frame his building to what proportion he pleaſeth. Chriſt's Body inſtituted (which is reſembled unto the natural body throughout the Epiſtles) is to have ſet limits of it, a maximum quod ſic. and if it have all the parts, that can have communion natural in the ſame common acts of Nature together, though it be never ſo ſmall, it is a perfect body; ſo as it hath a preſcription, and bounds are ſet it both for parts, and a Maximum quod ſic for degrees of Stature. Now we have natural and ſet bounds for all inſtituted Churches. in this way of Congregational Churches.

1. The ſame Aſſembly that doth meet for Worſhip, is to meet for Diſcipline, ſo that Diſcipline and Worſhip is of equal extent, as touching the Seat of it. Now the publick Worſhip is upheld by no other Society, in a conſtant way, nor can be, but by Congregations, as many as can meet to edifie in one place. And therefore by preſerving of fixed Congregations God hath always preſerved the Eſſentials of a Miniſterial Church, that although it ſuffered additionals of corruption in Power, and of Tyranny in Popiſh Biſhops and Popes and the like over them, yet ſtill becauſe the Inſtitution of a Church fell upon Congregations, there were true Miniſterial Churches, and a true Baptiſm and the like in all Ages.

2. The Congregational Government, hath its bounds natural from a ſufficiency of Elders, for the ſorts and kinds of them; There is no ſort appointed on purpoſe or alone for Presbytrial Government, as for Epiſcopal it was pretended there was, but even all the ſorts that are, the ſeats of them are Congregational, and where all are, there is a ſufficiency of Elderſhip, as we ſhall after ſhew. A Congregational Church had Elders of all ſorts appointed to it, as for what belongeth to Worſhip, Paſtors and Teachers, and as for what belongeth to Mens Lives; ruling Elders, and there is no more Elders but of theſe ſorts in the greateſt Presbyteries over many Congregations. Yea the Presbyteries themſelves of many Congregations, muſt come furniſhed of all theſe ſorts out of their having all theſe ſorts in their particular Congregations: And our Presbyteries cannot ſay, this Church ſhall have a Paſtor, and this Church ſhall have a Teacher, and this Church ſhall have a ruling Elder, and ſo we will make up a Presbytery out of all theſe; but every Church is the ſeat de jure, by Divine Right, of all theſe, and every Church hath need of all theſe, and Chriſt hath appointed theſe to Congregations firſt.

3. We can derive the Limits of Congregational Churches from the time that is Inſtituted for Worſhip, which is the Lord's Day, which God hath fixed, and on which Day no other Churches meet, and ſo there is no ſet time for the exerciſe of a Presbyterial Church. It is Baines his argument againſt the Biſhops that God did appoint for all Church-Meetings under the Law a time. And in Tertullian's time we read that the Cenſures of Excommunication were executed upon the Lord's Day, and Admonition and the like, though things might be prepared upon the Week Days. And the Apoſtle's words in 1 Cor. 5. That they ſhall caſt him out when they are met together, (he doth not bid them meet together on purpoſe) ſeems to incline to it. We know of no time that God hath appointed for all Ordinances (whereof this is one) in a ſet way as the fixed ſeaſon of them, but only this Lord's Day, and upon this Day Presbyterial Churches cannot meet for Government.

4. That the duties which lie upon the relation of Elders to Preach and to Rule, ſhould all be of the ſame extent (for the ſubject of them over which they are exerciſed) all this falleth in naturally with the Inſtitution of Congregations, and Elders over them, and the relation of Elders to them. Men ſhould not govern ordinarily beyond their Preaching. This is evident from what the New Teſtament holds forth concerning Elders in their relations to their Flocks committed to them, the Exhortations and Charges to them of duties towards thoſe Flocks founded upon that relation: As alſo the Duties of their Flocks to them: Which is like to be the trueſt meaſure, to find out the extent of their power, and bounds of their Flocks; whether for the ordinary way it be limited to one Congregation, or many. For thoſe Exhortations muſt needs be ſuppoſed ſuited to the boundaries of Churches, and to that Conſtitution and Extent of Relation, wherein the Elders of theſe Primitive Times, were placed over them. And likeas in the queſtion about Polygamy, what the Scripture hath ſaid, of the Duties of Man and Wife; which were given and ſuited to the Extent of that Relation, as God from the beginning bounded it, manifeſtly evinceth, that one Man cannot have many Wives, but one; ſo it may be argued as to the point in hand.

We have hitherto taken this for an undoubted Maxim, that as a Mutual Relation, is the Fountain of all power, whether Oeconomical, Civil, or Eccleſiaſtical; ſo the extent of all power is commenſurable, with the extent of that Relation. A Maſter, as a Maſter, hath power but over ſuch Servants, of whom he may ſay, I am your Maſter; and they of him, we are your Servants; for what hath any Man to do to judge another Man's Servant? As the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Rom. 14. 4. And ſo correſpondently here, thoſe Elders that aſſume to be over either one, or many Congregations, muſt have as the Office of Elders, ſo the Relation of Elders unto that one, or thoſe many Congregations, that they may be able to ſay, we are your Elders, and you all our Church; which two are in Scripture expreſſion, the Relate and Correlate, as King and Kingdom, Magiſtrates and Common-wealth. All which falls in naturally, for the ſet bounds of a Church, to be thoſe of Congregations. Whereas the bounds, that the Presbyterial way goeth by, in all their Subordinations, are uncertain. You have not a certainty of number of Officers, ſome particular Congregations, have as many Officers, as ſome Claſſes have had. Neither is it eſſential to that Government, that there ſhould be many Congregations; for they acknowledge that it may ſo fall out, that there may be but one Congregation, that may have all the Government in it, in caſes of neceſſity. But it is eſſential to upholding Worſhip in all the parts of it, that there be a fixed Congregational Church.

And to make the Juriſdiction of Cities, to be the pattern of Eccleſiaſtical Government, cannot be a certain Rule. For London, or Greater Cities, (as ſuppoſe Grand Cairo was converted) would vaſtly exceed the leſſer; and ſo the Rule would fall in Diſproportion, if you come in the Country Towns and Villages. And indeed what Reaſon can be given, that God ſhould proportion an Eccleſiaſtical Government to the boundaries of the Civil? What! Becauſe the Cities under the Roman Empire, had a Juriſdiction in them, and they over their Suburbs, muſt their Churches have ſo too? Hath God thus conformed his Church, unto the Government of this World? And beſides all States, have not the like Government, neither was the Government of all Countries, a City-Government; and ſo there could be no certain Rule for Church-Government, if it were to be chalked out by theſe meaſures.

Neither is the Government of Nations, a certain Rule for that of the Church, for the Jews after that rate, when they were two Nations, ſhould have been but one Church. And indeed, to Form the Inſtitution of a Church, to that boundary, had been to do it from what is accidental; for that they ſhould grow up to a Nation, is accidental. God did find the Jews a Nation entire, entred into a Covenant with them, and ſo made them a National Church. And if God had deſigned a National Church under the New Teſtament, he would have given Laws aforehand, as he did for the Jews, when they ſhould come into Cities; ſo that although they were now in the Wilderneſs, and they were not to come into Cities, till they came into Canaan many years after; yet he giveth a Law, for that condition of their being a Nation, and living in Cities.

CHAP. VI.

That Congregational Churches, were deſigned in the Inſtitution of Chriſt, proved from Inſtances of the Primitive Churches, planted by the Apoſtles. The firſt Inſtance Aſſigned from the States, and Order of the Church at Corinth.

NOW for the proof of all, or moſt of the particulars, of which I have Diſcourſed in the preceding Chapters, I ſhall bring as the concluſion of all the Inſtances of the Church of Corinth; which is the greateſt and ſureſt Pattern, and the moſt compleat of all other. It is the greateſt Pattern, becauſe it anſwers to the Inſtitution, in Matth. 18. (as in the Directions given to that Church in the, 1 Cor. 5. and the Phraſes, that about Excommunication, are put into it, being compared with that in Matth. 18. doth appear) As there, Chriſt in the promiſe that he makes to the Church, when it bindeth ſin, uſeth that Phraſe; Where two or three are joyned together, I am in the midſt of them; Mat. 18. 20. So here likewiſe, in 1 Cor. 5. 4. the Apoſtles Direction runs in the ſame Phraſe, when you are gathered together: As there Chriſt ſaith, gather together in my Name, ſo here the Apoſtle ſaith, when ye are gathered together in my Name, and with the power of the Lord Jeſus. As Chriſt there in his promiſe, he ſaith, I will be in the midſt of you, when ye are ſo gathered; ſo here ſpeaking of their gathering together, and throwing him out of the Congregation, the Apoſtle uſeth the ſame Phraſe, Take him from the midſt of you: As thereupon his being caſt out, he is to be reckoned as an Heathen and a Publican, with whom the Jews would not eat; ſo here, if a Brother be thus, they are not to accompany with him, no, not to eat with him. It is the ſureſt Inſtance of the ordinary power left in a Church, becauſe it was a Church that was formed up, in which there was that ordinary Government, which was to continue to the end of the World. The Inſtance of the Church of Jeruſalem, is an Inſtance, though of the firſt Church, yet for the Government of it, hath this extraordinary in it, that it was then Governed by the Apoſtles; and therefore cannot make a Pattern of the Government of Churches, and the power of Elders therein, which ſhould ordinarily, and for continuance be exerciſed. But this is an Inſtance of a Church, whom the Apoſtle Paul leaves to their own power, that is within them, (Do not ye judge, &c. 1 Cor. 5. 12.) which they had exerciſed and practiſed. The Church of Jeruſalem alſo had many other things Extraordinary, as that about having their Goods common, &c. But the Rules, that he gives to this Church, are ſuch as he gave to all Churches; ſo when he ſpeaks about laying up, not making their Goods common, as at Jeruſalem, but the ordinary way that was to be obſerved concerning Alms, Let every Man lay up, (ſaith he, 1 Cor. 16. 3. 2, 3, 4. 1 Cor. 7. 17.) as God hath Bleſſed him; and ſo I ordain in all the Churches: So as the Pattern hereof is held forth, as that which held correſpondency with the Ordinances in all Churches in the Primitive Times. And therefore is an Argument againſt the Biſhops, when they urged the Inſtances of Timothy and Titus, Presbyterian Divines uſed to anſwer, that the Inſtance of their Government, will not hold as a Pattern for Epiſcopal Government; becauſe that their Government was Extraordinary, and for the preſent, but that we muſt take that which was the ordinary Government, that was left in the Church, and make that the Pattern. So we may ſay of the Church of Jeruſalem, and the Government thereof at firſt by the Apoſtles, whilſt they were there, comparatively to this of the Church of Corinth, that it is not ſo great a ſtanding pattern to us. And this of the Church of Corinth is the moſt compleat pattern of all other Churches, for he doth give direction almoſt about all ſort of things concerning Worſhip and Government, and he utters more rules in his Epiſtles to this Church than any other. Thus he gives inſtructions concerning the Sacrament, 1 Cor. 11. about Miniſter's Maintenance, chap. 9. about matter of ſcandal and offence, chap. 8. about Collection for the Poor, chap. 16. How to order their Meetings, chap. 14. About covering and uncovering in their Aſſemblies, he ſaith he had left Traditions with them, and wherein they practiſed according to his Traditions he commendeth them, 1 Cor. 11. 2. He ſpeaks alſo of the power amongſt them to judge of Doctrine, Chap. 14. And that they were a Church that had power

Ch. VI. amongſt them to order things for matter of Worſhip in a decency, Let all be done decently and according to order, 1 Cor. 14. 40. and many things of the like nature. And laſt of all it is the only inſtance and example of Excommunication, the higheſt cenſure, which the Apoſtle gives direction about, and tells them they had power to do it, 1 Cor. 5.

Now concerning this Church, there are all theſe things appertaining to a Church, and the Inſtitution, and Power, and Government thereof held forth here; As,

1. Here is a Church. So it is called.

2. Here is the qualifications of the Members, a Church of Saints, 1 Cor. 1. 2. conformable to which all other Churches were to be, as to the conſtitution of their Members alſo, chap. 14. 33. As in all the Churches of the Saints; All the Churches conſiſted of Saints then, that were viſibly ſuch, as this of Corinth alſo did.

3. It was a Church formed up into a Body, as all thoſe phraſes imply, that they are called a whole lump, chap. 5, 6. and a whole Church, chap. 14. 23. intire, compleat within it ſelf, which whole lump would be leavened, not only by the way of infection by the Inceſtuous perſon, but by way of guilt if he were not caſt out.

4. It was a Body which had power to judge them that are within; Do not ye judge them that are within? chap. 5. 13. that is, within your own Body and Society and Fellowſhip, therefore alſo he ſaith, Put away from among your ſelves, chap. 5. 13. therefore he uſeth thoſe phraſes, Fornication is committed among you; that he that did this deed may be taken from among you, chap. 1. 1, 2. It was a Church formed up that had a juriſdiction over them within, (and to them without it could not reach) and if they had power to caſt out they had alſo power to take in, it was therefore a formed body.

5. It was a fixed Body in reſpect of the relation of the Members one unto another; why elſe doth he bid them to tarry one for another when they were to Eat the Lord's Supper? chap. 11. 33. And that they ſhould not take the Sacrament alone, one Company by themſelves, and another company by themſelves, which, if ſuch a promiſcuous unfixt way was lawful, they might have done, but they were to tarry one for another, that all the Church might as one Body at once receive: Now if they had not been a fixed company, why ſhould they have been obliged thus to have tarried, or who could have known who was abſent and who preſent?

6. It was a Church alſo that had Elders over them, and thoſe more than one, for ſpeaking of the ordinary Teachers that were Miniſters amongſt them, ſome ſay (ſaith he) I am of Paul, and I am of Apollos, and I am of Chriſt, 1 Cor. 1. 12. which he in a figure transferred to himſelf and to Apollos, herein ſpeaking in his own perſon, but it tendeth to repreſent the Perſons of their Teachers, the Miniſters to whom they did give Maintenance, and were therefore Officers, 1 Cor. 9. 12. If others be partakers of this power over you, are not we rather?

7. It was a Church having ſet bounds, by which they might know who were within, and who not, for when he ſaith, Do not ye judge them that are within? 1 Cor. 5. 13. he doth not mean all Saints in all Churches, but it muſt be thoſe within themſelves. The bounds ſet by this, that they might be as many as could meet in one Aſſembly, 1 Cor. 14. 23. If the whole Church be come together in one place, &c.

8. It was a particular Congregation. 1. This is evident from their diviſions and contentions which he findeth fault withal, as in a whole Church, a whole Body, That there be no Schiſm in the Body, as he himſelf expreſſeth, 1 Cor. 12. 25. applying it to them, now ye are the Body of Chriſt and Members in particular; he ſpeaks of theſe diviſions as being among thoſe that did meet in one for Worſhip, 1 Cor. 11. 18. For firſt when ye come together in the Church, I hear there be diviſions among you, and I partly believe it. And this Diviſion was in their Meetings in the Church for Worſhip, 1 Cor. 11. 22. And have ye not Houſes to Eat and Drink in, but deſpiſe ye the Church of God, the Aſſembly of the Saints, as he reproves their diviſions and diſorders in reſpect of the Sacrament? To remedy theſe diviſions, he bids them tarry one for another, ver. 33. Thus theſe directions concern them that are one Congregation for Worſhip, that uſe to meet in one place; And chap. 12. 21. he ſaith they were Members of one another in particular, in a more ſpecial relation: Now that ſpecial particular near relation is that between thoſe of the ſame Congregation, where they meet fixedly for Worſhip, by the conſent, and before the People, of which a Man is therefore caſt out, which he is not out of any other Church in the World. 2. In this reſpect he calleth them a Temple to God, ſpeaking againſt them that cauſed Diviſions in the Church, 1 Cor. 3. 16. The Temple of God are ye, and that he that went about to deſtroy it by Diviſions, God would deſtroy him: He ſpeaks not perſonally of each Member, as in chap. 6. but in reſpeſt of their Church ſtate, as they were a Body, in oppoſition to Diviſions: Now the Temple is for all the Ordinances of Worſhip, therefore called the Houſe of God. 3. He gives directions to them as to a whole Church, chap. 14. 23. If the whole Church be come together in ſome place. 4. He ſpeaks of it alſo as a Church, which was to receive edifying together by the Ordinances Adminiſtred, ſo chap. 14. ver. 5. I would that ye all ſpake with Tongues, but rather that ye Propheſied, for greater is he that Propheſieth than he that ſpeaks with Tongues, that the Church may be Edified, ſo ver. 12. See that ye excell to the Edifying of the Church. And if the whole Congregation, &c. And v. 26. He ſpeaks this in application to them all in reſpect of their meeting, How is it then Brethren when ye come together, &c.

As their Aſſembly for Worſhip proves them to have been a particular Congregation for Worſhip. So alſo the directions given concerning Excommunication evince it, chap. 5. For if they had been many Congregations in reſpect of their Members, 1. He would have Written to that particular Congregation whereof the Man was, as that Congregation (at leaſt the Elders thereof) which ſhould (according to Preſbyterial principles) be told firſt of an offending Member before he is brought to the claſſical. He would have named that Church he was thus a Member of, and written to it in a peculiar manner, whereas now he names none, but writes to the whole Church. 2. When his directions come to fall upon the execution of the act, he doth not mention the Sentence ſo much that was to be paſt (according to our Brethren) in the Presbytery, but the act of execution, the act of delivery to Satan was to be done when they were met together, which being to be done in that particular Church whereof he was a Member, if there had been many Congregations there, he would have named that Church as that in which it ſhould have been done. Eſpecially conſidering that the Apoſtle in his Writing pitcheth upon that ſolemn act of Excommunication, which compleateth the throwing of a Man out, which as all grant is done and performed in the gathering together of that particular Congregation, whereof a Man is a Member. 3. If there had been a claſſical Church over many Congregations where the Elders meet, and a Congregational Church too, where this perſon did meet with the Elders of his own Church and the Congregation, if there had been theſe two ſeveral ſorts of Church Meetings, it would have been obſcure and dark. unto which the Apoſtle's directions ſhould refer him. So as there would have been need of new diſtinctions of Meetings as well as of Elders and Churcches, when the Apoſtle ſpeaks but of one. Yea the Apoſtle ſaith, When met together, 1 Cor. 5. 4 namely for other Ordinances, upon the Lord's Day, that then they ſhould give this Sentence of Excommunication. He doth not give directions that they ſhould meet together on purpoſe for that, but as Diſcipline is to keep Worſhip pure and ſubſerveth it, ſo alſo is it to be performed when the whole meet together for Worſhip, that the Perſon alſo may ſee out of what a Communion he is caſt. 5. Saith he, Do not ye judge them that are within? If there had been Congregational Churches, one whereof he had been a Member of (for he could be but a Member of one) and another claſſical Church, here had been two Within, and which of theſe ſhould the Apoſtle intend? Our Presbyterian Brethren ſay, That the Congregations have power to judge things within themſelves, ſo that they muſt needs have one Within, and why ſhould not their Within be the Within here intended for the ultimate throwing out of this Man?

9. This Church of Corinth alſo had an intire Judicature within it ſelf, not depending upon the advice of any for Sentence, and the like; for he ſpeaks of the whole act, Do not ye judge them that are within? He uſeth the ſame word that he uſeth of himſelf and his power, Do not ye judge (ſaith he) ſpeaking of them, what have I to do to judge, ſpeaking of himſelf. And (ſaith he) when ye are gathered together with my Spirit, and the Power of the Lord Jeſus to deliver ſuch an one to Satan; So that they were not dependent upon the Apoſtle, to come to him for the Sentence, only in their neglect the Apoſtle Writes to them as an Apoſtle, with this rule, to Excommunicate ſuch an one if the be party found guilty, which the Apoſtle did never know but by hearſay, therefore could never paſs a judicial ſentence, but he finds fault with them, becauſe they had not done it, for do not ye uſe to do it ſaith he? Have not ye power to do it? Do not ye judge them that are within? He doth not ſay, whom I have delivered unto Satan; but directs them as a Church of Chriſt having ſuch power, to do it.

Object. But it is objected by ſome, that he did it for a trial of their obedience, and thereſore their act was but an act of obedience in them, but the power was in him.

Anſw. The anſwer is this, that the power might compleatly reſt in them, and yet they obey the Apoſtle in the act, as an Apoſtle directing them, when they neglected it: As when a Prophet in the name of God bad the Magiſtrate to do his duty, though it is an act of Obedience in him to do it thus commanded, yet he hath power as a Magiſtrate in himſelf: And as in caſe a Miniſter had neglected to Baptize, and the Apoſtle had ſent to him or commanded him to have done it, the power of Baptizing muſt be ſaid to be in him that Baptizeth.

10. If this Church of Corinth had been a Church that might have aſſociated, it would have done it, for it had a neighbour Church near it, the Church of Cenchrea, which was a Port Town to Corinth as Leeth is to Edenburgh; and Cenchrea was but a ſmall Town, not a City; but he writeth to the Church of Corinth as an intire Church diſtinct of it ſelf.

That the People have an intereſt in judging, we refer that to the proofs out of this place; only we name it here to ſhew the compleatneſs of this pattern, for the forming of Congregational Churches anſwerable to it.

CHAP. VII.

That the Name of a Church given in the New Teſtament to Congregational Churches rather than any other (as is proved from ſeveral Texts, 1 Cor. 11. 18. Rom. 16. 1, & 5. 1 Cor. 4. 17, &c.) proves Congregational Churches to have been intended by Chriſt in his Inſtitution of a Church, they moſt properly being both in name, and nature ſuch. That a Presbyterian Aſſembly of Elders cannot properly be called a Church: Evinced by ſeveral Arguments.

TO decide the controverſie about the Divine Inſtitution of a Congregational Church, we may put it to the trial, whether ſingle Congregations with their Elders have more the ſtyle of Churches in the New Teſtament, than the Elders of many Congregations as aſſembled in a Conſiſtory; and let that determine it. Now that thoſe Congregations where God is publickly Worſhipped, and the Preaching of the Word, and the Sacraments Adminiſtred, are called each of them a Church, is evident.

1. In 1 Cor. 11. 18. When you come together in the Church: He ſpeaks of their Meeting for the Lord's Supper, ver. 20. And in ver. 22. he calls it ſo again. So their meeting for Preaching, and for ſinging of Pſalms, he calls it a Church, chap. 14. ver. 2, & 19, & ver. 23. he calls it a whole Church, meeting for thoſe ends. And there he gives not the name to the Meeting or Aſſembly but to the ſtate and company, ver. 28. for the Rules, he giveth there, are for ordering of Worſhip. So too in Rom. 16. 4. ſaluting Aquila and Priſcilla (who for his Life would lay down their own necks) he giveth theſe Congregations the name of Churches, unto whom (ſaith he) not only I give thanks, but alſo all the Churches of the Gentiles, and ver. 16. The Churches of Chriſt ſalute you. Were thoſe a company of Elders over many Congregations met? Presbyterial Churches, that did teſtifie their thanks unto Aquila and Priſcilla? Or were they Congregations of Saints and Strangers alſo where Paul had been? He had related unto them his own danger, and Aquila's, and Priſcilla's, expoſing their lives for his, and can it be ſuppoſed that the Saints as making ſeveral Presbyterial Churches (who are ſo vaſt, like unto ours, as the People never meet to do it) did ſalute the Romans, and Aquila and Priſcilla? No rather the ſeveral Congregational Churches, might well have opportunity to expreſs the remembrance of them at their Meetings. And the 1. ver. and the 5. ver. of Rom. 16. will eaſily prompt us what manner of Churches he meaneth, when he ſpeaks of all theſe Churches, that they were ſuch as was at Cenchrea, the Church which is at Cenchrea (ſaith he) which was a ſmall Port ſeven miles off Corinth; and ver. 5. (ſaith he) Greet ye the Church that is (i. e. that met) in Priſcilla's Houſe. Such Churches as theſe were the Churches of the Gentiles, who ſaluted them. If we come to the Epiſtle of the Corinths, ſaith the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 4. 17. As I teach every where in every Church. Doth he mean theſe Presbyterial Churches or Conſiſtories? Or Congregational? Surely the Churches where Paul ſtill Preached and Taught muſt be Congregational; For thoſe Aſſemblies are the Subjects and Seats of Teaching. Take alſo the 17*th verſe* of the 7*th chapter*, and bring it along unto the 11*th chapter*; So I ordain in all the Churches; and, We have no ſuch cuſtom nor the Churches of God; What! Presbyterial? Or Congregational? Let but this one conſideration decide it. The cuſtom of which he ſpeaks that the contentions were about, was whether Men ſhould be uncovered or covered praying or propheſying. Now all the Meetings for Worſhip where Men and Women, and where the Angels (whether Celeſtial or Elders) were preſent, theſe Aſſemblies where theſe Ordinances were uſed, he calleth Churches, and he ſaith they had no ſuch cuſtom. And in theſe reſpects of Meeting thus for Worſhip they are diſtinguiſhed, Churches, and are made ſeveral, Churches in the Plural; and the general uſages of all theſe Churches as conſtituted and ordered by the Apoſtles every where, he here preſſeth. If we come to chap. 14. He there gives order about Prophecying in their Meetings, into which Strangers came and were converted, ver. 25. In which they had Pſalms and Doctrines, ver. 26. Where Men and Women were preſent, ver. 34, and 35. and therefore Congregational Meetings are meant. And he inforceth theſe directions he gives, with the examples of all the like Churches in all their Meetings, God is not the Author of Confuſion but of Peace, as in all the Churches of the Saints, ver 33. Theſe muſt needs be Congregational Aſſemblies and Churches that met, for he ſpeaks of the Churches of the Saints in common. Yet ſtill you ſee when he ſpeaks of Churches, yea and of all Churches, he ſpeaks of them as ſuch. And ch. 16. 1. When he Writeth about laying up Contribution for the Saints (the gathering and diſpoſing of which belongeth unto particular Congregations, for the Money to be ſure is had from thence) As I have given order (ſays he) to the Churches of Galatia, ſo do ye, he meaneth thoſe Churches of Galatia he wrote to, Gal. 2. And theſe muſt be all Congregational, for to order that collection belongeth to the ſeveral Congregations. And ver. 19. The Churches of Aſia (ſaith he) ſalute you. Now the many Congregations under a Presbytery, they do not meet to give ſalutes, they were therefore Congregational, for with a Congregational Church in this ſalute he doth joyn them all, for he addeth, Aquila and Priſcilla ſaluteth you with the Church that is in their Houſe, and why ſhould we not think that he ſpeaks uniformly in the ſame verſe. This we ſee is the uniform ſtyle of the Apoſtle when he ſpeaks of Churches and of all Churches.

2. As for the very name Church in the New Teſtament, the place of Congregational Meetings almoſt in all Languages hath the Name of Church, which name, no places, for General Councils or Presbyterial Meetings over many Congregations, at any time, have had. Not that we think the Place of Meeting to be properly called the Church, but only καταχρηϛικῶς, but yet it had originally its name from the Meeting, and the Perſons, which were properly called the Church, and from their ſtated condition to meet in one place, the place was ſo named. The Clergy indeed hath been called the Church, but not as met, or aſſembled in any Synod, but in the Indefinite Univerſal Notion. But the place for the Congregation is called the Church, and the Meeting of the Saints hath the ſame name, 1 Cor. 14. 34. Let your Women keep ſilence in the Churches. And their conſtant Meeting in a fixed manner, and their ſtate in order thereto is called the Church, Acts 11. 26. The Sacrament alſo was Antiently called σύναξις, i. e. the Meeting, their Meetings being ſaid to be to break bread, Acts 20. 7. And in the great Bible the word Church is always tranſlated by Congregation. And among the Grecians, Ἐκκλήσια was never uſed for a repreſentative Meeting only of Officers, but of the People alſo, and ſo it is in Acts 19. 39, 41. where the People making a tumult, it is called Ἐκκλήσια, although an unlawful one. And although that Chriſt, Mat. 18. uſed the Hebrew phraſe, yet Churches being to be ſet up among the Gentiles under the New Teſtament, that phraſe was uſed alſo which was conformed unto what theirs ſignified.

Alſo under the New Teſtament the Name Church imports the Saints the People, in a more peculiar manner; and therefore the Meetings where Elders are ſevered from the People, are not called the Church. Grotius in Mat. 16. 18. And this to the expreſſions which are uſed in 2 Cor. 6. 16. Shew ye are the Temples of the Living God, I will dwell in them and walk in them, and I will be their God, and they ſhall be my People. And in Acts 12. 5. Prayer was made of the Church, i. e. of the Saints, unto God for Peter. Yea this word Church is taken for the People of Iſrael under the Old Teſtament, as Acts 7. 38.

3. We deſire one place to be given, where the Name Church in all the New Teſtament is given, to the meeting of the Elders alone. When the Apoſtle ſpeaks of all the Churches, he gives them this appellation, all the Churches of the Saints, 1 Cor. 14. 33. but he no where expreſſeth the Churches of the Miniſters, or Elders, no nor of the Apoſtles neither. Now can we think that Chriſt in his firſt Inſtitution (Mat. 16. & Mat. 18.) which the Apoſtles were to Interpret afterward, and to give directions to us about it, meaned the word Church in a ſignification different from what [the Apoſtles uſed? This would be a ſtrange procedure indeed. How then can the Elders ſay a claim to the things, when they have not a ſufficient ground to challenge the name of a Church. As Parker replying to Dr. Billſon's Aſſertion of the Keys being given in Peter's Perſon to the Church of Miniſters very well ſays, That it may be denied, that the name Church is ever in the Scriptures reſtrained only to the Prieſts. Clemens Romanus when he Writes to the Church of Corinth, Writes to the Church, and not to the Presbyters (ſo the Apoſtles too in their Epiſtles) and Writes alſo from the Church at Rome. And when all the Apoſtles were met at Jeruſalem, yet they alone are not called the Church, being but (as Moſes is ſaid to be, Heb. 3. 2, 5. a part of the Houſe, but no where called the Houſe) a part of it, Acts 8. 1. The Church was ſcattered except the Apoſtles. And indeed if the Elders were the intire Church, then they were the Houſe of God, whereas they are but ſtewards in it, 1 Cor. 4. 1. The Apoſtles tho' they had the care of all the Churches, and that power in their hands which the Generality of Elders would never claim, yet they were but Officers in the Church, not the Church. Many Churches become one Church to no Officer in the World but Chriſt, but this pretence of the Elders being the Church, would make many Churches one Church to a company of Elders, that they may Govern them; and in relation to them as repreſenters of the Church, they muſt be called one Church. What tho' the Old Teſtament frame, or Language be urged, we grant there was then a Church repreſentative, but the Goſpel knows no ſuch now.

Parkerus de Polit. Eccleſ. Lib. 3. c. 1.
Clemens Epiſt. ad Corinth. pag. 1.

4. Surely a ſetled Congregation of Saints deſerveth the name of Church more, and ſuppoſe places could be found in Scripture, where it is taken both for Elders and the People apart, yet thoſe meetings that have both Elders and People of both ſorts, muſt needs have more of Church in them. We can give inſtances that the Diſciples apart are called the Church in diſtinction from the Officers. You cannot give one inſtance where the Officers are called the Church in diſtinction from the Diſciples. Certainly thoſe that have the Power have the Name, and not thoſe only that have the name Equivocally or Metaphorically.

5. A Presbyterial Church is called a Church in relation to the People of thoſe Congregations, by their own confeſſions when they interpret the Church of Hieruſalem, the Church of Epheſus, to be many Congregations (and the Presbyterial's Argument is built thereon) and that the People of all thoſe Congregations make one Church under that one Eldership. Now it is ſtrange that they ſhould have a Name of Church only as they are the ſubject or object of Diſcipline, and yet not ſo much as meet for that diſcipline actually neither, for ſo they cannot in a Presbyterial Church. The poor people of thoſe Churches have no communion of Saints together herein, but ſuch as they hold with all other Churches that are not under the ſame Presbytery; and yet they are according to Presbyterial principles in their Officers (as repreſenting them) a diſtinct Church claſſical from all Churches elſe. So they make uſe of the name from the People, when the People enjoy not the thing. The poor Church of Hieruſalem, Acts 8. 1. (when it is ſaid that the Church was ſcattered) affords you an argument that therefore there was but one Church for Diſcipline in Hieruſalem, and in that reſpect it is called one Church; when yet the ſcattering was not upon the Presbyterial Church that exerciſed Diſcipline, but upon the People. They were not in the repreſentative body perſecuted, and yet tho' they were ſcattered as a Church perſonally, and not repreſentatively, and perſecuted as a Church perſonally, not repreſentatively only, yet according unto the Presbyterian Principles they never met as a Church perſonally, but only repreſentatively.

If it be ſaid that the People in Claſſical Aſſemblies may meet. Yet it is no otherwiſe than the People in the next Claſſes, which if they will may come thither, neither can they all poſſibly. You lay no more obligation on them to be preſent than you do upon the People of the next Claſſes. And therefore in that reſpect the People of that particular Claſſes, are no more of that Church than thoſe of other Neighbouring Presbyters.

6. Thoſe Aſſemblies muſt have more of Church in them, not only that have both Elders and People, as Congregations have: but that have conſtant Worſhip in them as well as government, And our Presbyterians allow ſome Government to Congregations, i. e. to the Elders of Congregations. Worſhip is the chief end of a Church. The formal notion of a Church is to meet and communicate in worſhip, and where there can be no Church-fellowſhip and Communion to the edification of the whole, there cannot be a Church. Which may be illuſtrated by the natural body, to which ſtill Inſtituted Churches in Scripture are compared. The Eye, the Hand, the Head, they ſerve to ſeveral uſes in the body, yet they are ſo united as they are all nouriſhed with the ſame individual nouriſhment, and from the ſame ſtomach, and therefore this is a ſeveral body having all theſe parts, from another body. So is it here in the Churches inſtituted, they are ſuch as have a communion in all the common Ordinances, not only in the ſame kind, but in the ſame ordinances individually in a conſtant way. And the Analogy of the Church univerſal, and the Churches particular will help to illuſtrate this further, for the Church Univerſal being one body, is therefore fed by one kind of Ordinances, as there is one Body, ſo there is one Baptiſm for kind. But the particular Churches which are Inſtituted, are ſuch bodies as are fed with one and the ſame individual Baptiſm, and one and the ſame individual Lord's Supper, and ſo are one Bread. In a word, then all can come to thoſe Claſſical Churches, or they cannot come; if they come then they are to make one Church for Worſhip too: If they cannot come, then there cannot be a fellowſhip for the edification of the whole, and when the Communion of Saints cannot be exerciſed, how can that be a Church? Every Church is a Temple, Eph. 2. 22. 1 Cor. 4. 16. The Temple of God are ye; Now the Temple did chiefly relate to Worſhip, and was the ſubject of all Ordinances, and the place where the Synedrim ſat too. Anſwerably under the New Teſtament, the Preaching of the Goſpel is called ſerving at the Altar, 1 Cor. 9. 14. So 1 Pet. 2. 5. The Saints are built up to offer Sacrifices. God's Houſe is called an Houſe of Prayer. The Church is called a body to Chriſt, one Body and one Bread (as was ſaid afore) 2 Cor. 10. 17. becauſe they partake of one Bread. But none of theſe do belong to a Presbyterial Church, they may pray occaſionally, but the Ordinance of Prayer, and conſtant Worſhip is not there. Publick Worſhip lies in a Communion, therefore it is to be only with thoſe that can enjoy Communion together. Yea it is made the very definition of a Church in the Article of the Church of England, which Article we hope will never be changed, Eccleſia eſt numerus fidelium (ſo others alſo define it) in cultu Divino & Diſciplina Communicantium. The Church is a number of Believers communicating in Divine Worſhip and Diſcipline. which a Presbyterial Church is not. The end of a Church is that God may be publickly Worſhipped, he would not have Inſtituted Churches elſe, but principally for that, therefore he had Congregations to do it, in which only it is done; and of Diſcipline ſuperadded, is but to keep that kind of Worſhip pure, for Government is but caſting out of the Body impure Members: And therefore the great Ordinance of Diſcipline, of Excommunication, is when they are met together, then they are to caſt out from amongſt them. As the intent of it is but to keep the Worſhip pure, ſo anſwerably it is to be exerciſed then when they meet to Worſhip, but Presbyterial Churches meet not for Worſhip, but Diſcipline only. Now as the Body is ordained for Meat Principally and Nouriſhment, and is not ordained for Phyſick but occaſionally, ſo it is as to the ſtate of the Church, and therefore our Divines make the Eſſential notes of a Church to be the Word, Sacraments, and Diſcipline; but in theſe Presbyterial Churches, the Word, and Sacraments are Wanting, and there is only Government. The General Aſſembly of the Saints in Heaven, is a Church in relation unto Worſhip, and tho' there is no Diſcipline there, yet they are never more a Church than when they are there. And the Apoſtle alſo ſpeaking of the Church in the New Teſtament, in Heb. 10. ſaith, that Now there is an Houſe of God, becauſe there is an High Prieſt as well as before, ver. 21: and therefore (ſaith he) let us draw near (he ſpeaks of publick Worſhip) not forſaking the aſſembling of our ſelves together, ver. 25. and that in Synagogues, for ſo the Word ſignifies. And therefore in Mat. 18. as Diſcipline ſo prayer is meant, and unto that is the Promiſe of Chriſt to be in the midſt of them more peculiarly made, and upon occaſion of that. And indeed it were exceeding ſtrange that ſeeing the chief end of Churches, (which are Congregations) is for Worſhip, and that's the great buſineſs for which they are appointed, that if there were many Congregations in thoſe of Hieruſalem, and thoſe of Antioch, and the like, as is pretended, that there ſhould not be mention of thoſe many Congregations, under the names of Churches, but that Diſcipline only muſt carry away the denomination of their being one Church, though many in relation unto it. If there were one word in any of thoſe inſtances, that there were many Churches among them making one Church, it were ſomething, but there is not.

7 If ſuch a Presbyterial company of Elders were a Church, then Diſcipline muſt merely conſtitute a Church as a Church. And ſo the objection againſt the Epiſcopal Government, viz. That for Government alone there was an Order of Prieſthood, namely a Biſhop; will come with greater force here, as being very ſtrange that for Government alone, there ſhould be a Church Inſtituted. And that Diſcipline doth never conſtitute any kind of Church is clear, becauſe that which can abeſſe be or not, and adeſſe be, without the deſtruction of the ſubject, will never conſtitute it. But ſo all Divines do ſay of Diſcipline, that a Church may be a Church though it be defective in Diſcipline, therefore it is not that which doth conſtitute a Church. And this principle the Church of England is concerned to hold up, or elſe they will juſtifie ſeparation from them, as having been hitherto no true Churches. But lo here is a Church, a Presbyterial Church, that is a Church upon no other conſideration but for Diſcipline.

8. And add to this, that ſince Presbyterial Government makes Congregations (which are Churches, having each their Elders over them) to be united for Government unto one Presbyterial Church: Let us but conſider how many ſeveral Churches it makes.

1. For firſt, There is the particular Congregations conſiſting of People and their Elders for Worſhip, they are one ſort of Churches.

2. There is ſecondly the Eldership in every one of thoſe Congregations, which according to their principles is the Church, for they interpret Mat. 18. to be, Tell that Elderſhip, that is, Tell the Church; there's a ſecond ſort.

3. Then thirdly, There is all theſe Elders met in one for the Government of any of theſe Congregations; There's a third ſort of Churches; for theſe Elders muſt be a Church in a true ſenſe for the People, or they cannot meet: And if they will challenge Government by virtue of Mat. 18. they muſt needs challenge to be a Church. Now let it be conſidered, that thoſe are not ſo much ſubordinations, as National and Provincial (which are but ſubordinations of the ſame kind, for the ſame ends) which conſiſts of greater or leſſer number of Elders; but theſe are diverſifications, ſeveral ſorts of bodies going to make up one Church that it might be a compleat both for Worſhip and Government. And that it is a diverſification is clear by this.

1. Becauſe they are Churches for differing purpoſes. The Congregations are Churches for Worſhip, but the particular Elderſhips and Presbyterial Elderſhips, are only for Diſcipline; now ends do diverſifie ſuch bodies.

2. They are not the ſame Churches by way of Accumulation, as many things of the ſame ſort laid together: which is clear by this, becauſe the particular Churches conſiſt of People and Elders, but theſe have Elders of Churches only. And as we urge in our Argument that is drawn from Elders, that this Presbyterial Government would make one Man to be a double ſort of Elders, both a Ruling Elder and a Teaching Elder, a Ruling Elder to ſome Churches, and a Teaching Elder to others, ſo alſo this makes them ſeveral ſorts of Churches.

3. It muſt needs make a diverſification of Churches. For as when many Families unite into a City for Government, there is a new relation and notion; ſo now here, there is the notion of a new Church. And then,

4. Add to this (which heighteneth the abſurdity of it) that whereas the Presbyterial Church is made the compleat Church, they yet do want thoſe great and main Ordinances, for which principally a Church is ſaid to be a Church, as the Sacraments and the like. So of the two, this greater Church is the leſs compleat, and therefore is leſs the Church than a particular Congregation.

And if you ſay, they are made compleat Churches by being both, yet you make at leaſt wiſe two ſorts of Churches, as we ſaid before: And you make a whole Church more uncompleat, as it is the whole, than it is in the parts.

If it be ſaid that the Church Univerſal is one, and yet hath no Ordinances as Church, as Preaching the Word and Sacraments, and yet it is truly a Church. We anſwer, it is not a Church Inſtituted in relation unto Ordinances; but a Church Myſtical in relation unto Perſons and Perſonal Graces.

This alſo farther addeth confirmation to us, that the ſuppoſition of there being many Congregations, in all, or many of thoſe Cities, under a common Presbyterian Government of many Elders, thus in the general only held forth, leaveth room for, yea is the occaſion of a variety of ſuppoſitions of ſeveral frames and forms of Government, which thoſe Congregations might be caſt into, both in relation to their Officers, and to the Members mutually among themſelves. 1. As that either they were Conventus promiſcui (as Didoclavius calls them) promiſcuous unfixt Aſſemblies, ſome meeting together at one place or time, ſome at another time with others, having no fixed relation; Or elſe that they were fixed meetings in reſpect of the Members divided into ſet determinate companies meeting conſtantly together. 2. Or elſe otherwiſe, ſuppoſing them ſet and fixed Congregations in reſpect of the Members, yet there are other as various and more difficult ſuppoſitions may ſtill be made concerning the relation of theſe Officers and Elders, how they were diſpoſed of to the right performance of their duties, which the command of the Word lays on them toward their Flock. As, whether they were either fixed and appropriated to theſe ſeveral Congregations reſpectively, ſome to one, ſome to another (as it is in moſt of the Reformed Churches, and is with us, and we ſuppoſe will not be altered amongſt us) or elſe unfixt in reſpect of all the Congregations, ſo as equally and mutually in their courſe, theſe Miniſters might Preach and Officiate to them all by turns (as in ſome Cities in Holland.) And then 3. If you ſuppoſe them fixedly divided into ſeveral Congregations, then another queſtion cometh, what power thoſe Elders that are appropriated to each Congregation ſhould have over the Flock? Whether over all, or none, or ſome part? Now it is the ſuppoſition of their being many Congregations under one Presbytery, that only is the ground of this uncertainty, and bringeth in this variety of ſuppoſitions of theſe ſeveral ways, how theſe things ſhould be caſt, whereas the ſuppoſing of them to be but ſeveral diſtinct Churches tho' great ones, will make all things fall in naturally. For then there could be but one way of caſting and moulding Members, nor could there be but one common relation of Elders, and ſo all thoſe duties and things that are ſpoken about the Power and Duties of Elders, and of the Members amongſt themſelves, and whatſoever is ſpoken of Churches and Elders, their Dues, and Duties run all but in one Channel. And then conſider too (ſuppoſing them many Congregations) that the deſigning out, which of thoſe ſuppoſitions was the pattern left by the Apoſtles, was a matter of as much moment (as touching the point of the right ordering of Congregations) as this common Presbyterial Government can be ſuppoſed to be of, in as much as the execution of all mutual duties between People and Paſtors, and the adminiſtration of all holy things amongſt them, appertaining to this particular Government of the ſeveral Congregations, and upon the right ordering and ſettlement of them, and of theſe Elders relation to them, doth the right Government and Adminiſtration of all holy things depend. And yet conſider too at the ſame time, that we do not find the Holy Ghoſt making ſo much as a mention of any ſuch diſtinct ſubordinated Congregations to a Claſſis (only the multitudes of Believers are looked upon through multiplying Glaſſes to argue it) much leſs giving any hints to diſcern by, in the Hiſtory of the Apoſtles, or in the Epiſtles, what the frame was of theſe ſuppoſed Churches, and what their particular ſpecial relation to Elders in this ſuppoſed variety was. There is not any thing to any ſuch purpoſe extant, in either that inſtance of Jeruſalem or any other of thoſe examples of Cities, that are pretended to hold forth this multitude of Congregations making one Church under one Common Presbyterial Government.

Ch. VII.

vernment. This hath long and doth ſtill ſtick in our Conſciences becauſe the Holy Ghoſt is ſilent, and hath not left us the leaſt footſteps in the Sacred Hiſtory, to diſcern in which of theſe ways (ſuppoſing many Congregations thus making a Church for Government) the Apoſtles did ſettle the conſtitution of this Church, and how they did diſpoſe the relation of theſe Elders and Officers to thoſe ſeveral Congregations.

CHAP. VIII.

The Inſtances of the Churches ſetled by the Apoſtles in the Leſſer Cities, and Villages, prove a Congregational Church to be according to the Apoſtolical and Primitive Form.

LET us now go over all the Examples of the Churches in the New Teſtament (which muſt Interpret Chriſt's Speech in Mat. 18.) and let us ſee whether they were Claſſical or Congregational. For the inſtance of the Church of Hierusalem and the like, we will ſpeak to them under the conſideration of the Churches in greater Cities: But let us now go over all the other.

The firſt Churches we read of in the beginning of the Goſpel, are in Acts 9. 31. Then had the Churches reſt thoroughout all Judea, and Galilee, and Samaria, and were edified, &c. Theſe are called Churches in that common notion, whereby Churches conſtituted by the Apoſtles were diſtinguiſhed one from the other. And is this their diverſification and title of Churches. like to have been in a Claſſical reſpect or Congregational, as here he ſpeaks of them generally? Let the words and circumſtances of the ſtory be conſidered.

1. It was in the beginning of the Goſpel, that theſe Churches had been raiſed, and the ſpecial means we read of whereby they were erected, was Peter and John's Miniſtry, of whom we read, chap. 8. 25. that returning to Hieruſalem, they preached the Goſpel in many Villages of the Samaritans, as alſo ſome of the diſperſed from Hieruſalem had done, ver. 4. They went every where διῆλθον, they went thorough or all about, namely Judea and Samaria, as Philip in Samaria, ver. 5. And as their Preaching had been every where, and in Villages, which is chiefly noted, ver. 25. ſo accordingly the Churches that were conſtituted out of thoſe converted, are ſaid to have been in all Judea and Samaria, &c. and therefore in Villages. For that the Holy Ghoſt ſhould aforehand in the Acts, ſo remarkably relate their Preaching in many Villages of Samaria, and then make mention of Churches throughout Samaria, argues his intent to have been to ſhew that theſe Churches were thoſe in theſe Villages: And theſe not as gathered into Cities, but remaining thoroughout Samaria, as the Goſpel had been Preached in the Villages. Nor needed they now (for they had reſt) forbear to hold up their Church-fellowſhip in the ſeveral places of their abode. And therefore when upon this reſt, Peter took the opportunity to viſit them (as in the next verſe of that 9th chapter, it is ſaid Peter paſſed thorough all, namely as 'tis tranſlated, all quarters where theſe Churches were ſcattered, ſome here, ſome there, up and down) all of them whether in Cities or in Villages, are in one uniform reſpect called Churches, for his Speech wherein he involves them all promiſcuouſly is ſimular, and ſo meant of the ſame kind of Churches. Now is it imaginable that throughout theſe Regions or Countreys, the Churches whereof he ſpeaks ſhould all be ſuch Claſſical Churches as are now amongſt us, when at the beginning of the Goſpel, but a few Saints and Profeſſours of Chriſtianity can be ſuppoſed to be ſcattered every where up and down. It was well if by reaſon of their being ſo thin ſown up and down in thoſe Regions they could make up Congregational Churches with Elders to them.

2. When it is ſaid that theſe Churches had reſt and were edified, is it likely he ſhould ſpeak this of theſe Churches as Claſſical, as ſuch which meet but in their Elders for exerciſe of Diſcipline; Or rather of theſe Churches as enjoying reſt in the Ordinances of Worſhip on the Lord's Day, publick Prayers, the Word, Sacraments, and all other means of edification and comfort? For the preſervation of the purity of which, Diſcipline doth but ſubſerve. They are the Congregational Churches, and the Communion the Saints have therein, that are the great means of Comfort, Edification, and Multiplication of Churches; and the enjoyment of theſe, in reſt, is that which is the greateſt outward Mercy and Priviledge. And therefore when he ſets out the condition of thoſe times; Then had the Churches Reſt, and were Edified, he means, Congregational Churches. And when he ſays the Churches were multiplied, which if underſtood, of more and New Churches Erected: Doth he reckon their Multiplication by Presbyterian Churches, that do conſiſt of many Congregations each of them? It is likely a Multitude of many more ſuch Churches were erected? No, rather they were ſo many fixed Congregations of Believers.

2. Let us come to the next mention of Churches in that Story, Acts 14.23. (ſlipping over that Church of Antioch, chap. 13. The Demonſtration of which, to have been a Congregational Church, we refer to another place, when we examine the State of Churches in Cities.) And when they had Ordained them Elders in every Church, and had Prayed with Faſting, they commended them to the Lord, on whom they believed. That theſe were Congregational Churches, will appear in like manner by the like circumſtances of the Story. In Acts 13. 14. We Read that Paul and his Company came to Antioch in Piſidia, where the Jews refuſing the Goſpel, Lo we turn to the Gentiles, ſaid Paul and Barnabas, ver. 46. For ſo the Lord hath commanded us, I have ſet thee to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou ſhouldeſt be for Salvation, to the ends of the Earth, and many believed; and accordingly, ver. 48. and ver. 49. The word of the Lord was publiſhed throughout the Regions. Then chap. 14. Paul and Barnabas fled to Derbe and Lyſtra, Cities of Lycaonia; and unto the Region that lieth round about, and there they Preached the Goſpel. Here again as afore in Piſidia, ſo now in Lycaonia, not in Cities only, but in the Regions they Preached. And this is noted, to ſhew the ſpreading of the Goſpel, (for to what end elſe, ſhould the Preaching of it be Recorded?) And ver. 21. 'tis ſaid, that when at Derbe they had Taught ἱκανοὺς a ſufficient competent number in that City; they went again to Lyſtra, Iconium, and Antioch, the chief Cities of thoſe Countries, Lycaonia and Piſidia, in the Regions of which they had preached the Goſpel, as well as in thoſe Cities. And the Story Relates, that the end and purpoſe of this ſecond viſit of theſe places, was to confirm the Diſciples, ver. 22. and to gather them into Churches, and ordain Elders over them, ver. 23. whom they had afore Preached unto, and made Diſciples. Thus they made fit matter for Churches, by making Diſciples, ver. 24. and then moulded and formed them up, into a way of order for Worſhip and Government, by Elders Eſtabliſhed, in the ſeveral Congregations. For theſe Churches, they thus Formed and Ordained Elders unto, were ſurely Congregational. For,

1. If we ſuppoſe them to have been only the Diſciples in theſe Cities of Lyſtra and Derbe, Iconium, and Antioch; yet it is not ſuppoſable, that in each the number of Diſciples ſhould ariſe to more than one Congregation in a City; now in this beginning of the Goſpel, and in ſo ſhort a time; and yet they were formed up into Churches, and had Elders in every Church. Or

2. Can we ſuppoſe, that the Apoſtles ſtaid gathering them into thoſe Churches with Elders, till their number would ariſe to many Congregations in each City, ſufficient to make Claſſical Churches; and that they did not till then, conſtitute them Churches, nor placed Elders over them? Can it be imagined, they would keep Men out of Ordinances ſo long? Or that themſelves, being Apoſtles, and to ſow the Goſpel in the World, would ſtill ſtay ſo long, till every where ſuch Members did ariſe? Yea,

3. The 21. verſe intimates, (in the inſtance of Derbe) their manner to have been, (and as there, ſo in other places) that when they had Preached the Goſpel to that City, and had Taught many, (or as the word is ἱκανοὺς, made a ſufficient and competent number of Diſciples, and ſufficient for what? ver. 23. to make up a Church, and whereof ſome might be fit Perſons for Elders therein;) then they uſed to leave that City, and went to other places, as there 'tis ſaid they did; and ſo long to ſtay there, till there were a ſufficiency for a Church and Elders, or if before they could accompliſh this, they were driven out, then they either returned to Form them into Churches with Elders, (which was their end of coming this ſecond time to Lyſtra, and thoſe Cities, to confirm the Diſciples, and ordain them Elders, as now to become a Church) or elſe afterwards ſent Evangeliſts to them.

Ch.VIII.

And 4. As thoſe Diſciples were in the Regions about, as well as in the Cities; for (afore it was noted in the Story, that in the Regions about both of Piſidia and Lycaonia, the Goſpel was Preached) ſo it muſt be ſuppoſed, that theſe Churches were ſet up in the Countries about, as well as in the Cities. And 'tis hard to think, that all the Chriſtians ſhould leave their Callings and Dwellings they were bred and born in, to come up to the Cities to make Claſſical Churches, or that they were ſo many converted in the Villages, as to make Claſſical Churches there. Paul ſaith, 1 Cor. 7. 10. that he ordained in all Churches, that Men ſhould abide in the callings wherein God called or converted them in; and to ſuppoſe that Husbandmen in the Countries, ſhould leave their callings of Husbandry, &c. and come up to the Cities, where they could not exerciſe that calling, to leave their Livelihood; and Wives converted to leave their Husbands, Children their Parents, Servants their Maſters; and come to dwell in the Cities only, and not rather have Churches made up in the Countries alſo, is hard to think. But,

5. And Laſtly. Theſe could not be Claſſical Churches here; but Congregational, for it is the firſt Ordaining of theſe Elders, to theſe Churches that is here mentioned, and not an Aſſociating of many Congregations into one Elderſhip; and therefore here is a gathering Congregational Churches, and ordaining Elders thereunto apart, κατ ἐκκλησίαν And as there muſt be a ſufficient company of Chriſtians, ere a Congregational Church is made up, as a number of Congregations with Elders muſt be ſuppoſed, ere a Claſſical Church can be framed. This being therefore the firſt framing them into Churches, and ordaining them Elders, (or elſe you muſt ſuppoſe Churches, long afore they had Elders) it muſt be in a Congregational way. And further alſo, there is this Reaſon; That theſe Congregations being then fixt for Officers and Elders, if theſe Elders were ordained to theſe Churches, their ordination, as Elders, muſt be to their ſeveral Churches Reſpectively; and not as the common Elderſhip made up of them. And ſuch were called Churches, endowed with Elders proper unto them; and ſo much the word (that is added in that, Acts 14.13.) doth import, they ordained or choſe αὐτοῖς to them Elders in every Church, that is, to every Church they choſe their own proper and peculiar Elders, fixed and appointed unto them.

That this was the primitive way of planting the Goſpel, may further be confirmed by that Parallel place to this, Tit. 1. 5. where there being many Believers already converted, (as many paſſages in that Epiſtle do argue) and yet not in moſt places, formed up into Churches with Elders; the Apoſtle left Titus an Evangeliſt, (whoſe proper Office it was, as appears by the Epiſtle; and that to Timothy to ſettle Believers and Churches in their right frame and order, according to the Apoſtle's directions given) to ordain Elders in every City or Town, (as ſhall be ſhewn by and by) where any number of Believers were to make a Church; and where fit and meet Men for Elders might be found, to ſet over thoſe Churches. And that which Luke, in the forecited, Acts 14. 23. calleth Ordaining Elders in every Church, Paul here calleth, Ordaining Elders in every City; and the one interprets the other: And the Apoſtle's, practice there, is here turned into a command or direction, as given to Titus, which therefore as it bound him, binds us to the end of the World; And he adds, as I appointed thee. Now his meaning is, not that Elders ſhould be ordained in every City ſimply, as it was a City or Body of Men; for Elders and Church, were Relatives, as Shepherd and Flock, and therefore Elders were not ordained, but to a Church; and therefore to ſay, he ordained Elders in the City, neceſſarily ſuppoſeth, a Church extant in that City, unto which theſe Elders were ordained; and therefore the ordination was only in ſuch Cities or Towns, where a Church was, and a competent ſufficient number of Believers to make a Church. For that muſt needs be the reaſon, why Paul himſelf did not caſt and mould theſe People in Crete, converted by him preſently into Churches with Elders, as faſt as they were converted; becauſe a Church ſhould have a convenient competent number, and fit Men to be Elders unto them, before they be form'd into ſuch a Body. And therefore, he being called away too ſoon, he left Titus behind him, to finiſh that Work.

The Writers for Epiſcopacy, have made uſe of this place, to ſhew, that in the Apoſtle's times, they planted Churches only in Cities; (and 'tis certain, that they beſtowed their pains chiefly therein) So that they make the Apoſtolical Inſtitution to be, that look how many Believers ſoever were in a City, and the Villages about it, ſo many were to make one Church-Dioceſan for Government; and therefore to ordain Elders, κάτ ἐκκλησίαν in every Church, Acts 14. 23. is all one, and to ordain Elders κατα πόλιν in every City as here, Tit.1.5. and this by the Apoſtle's own Ordination, as I appointed thee. i. e. over theſe Cities, and ſo the Churches therein, and the vicinity thereof, he as one Man, was as a Biſhop ſet. And ſome of thoſe for the Claſſical Government, do make uſe of of the ſame Notion, that all Churches in a City, when multiplied, were by Apoſtolical Inſtitution, to be but one Church for Government, as well as at firſt, when they were but one Congregation; and the Elders, at firſt planted in that firſt Church, were ſtill to continue, together with all the Elders, that ſhould anew be ſet over thoſe Churches) as one Eldership, a Presbytery, unto them in that City as one Church. The appearances for this opinion we ſhall ſpeak to, when Arguments for the Presbyterial Government, come to be diſcuſſed. In the mean time as to this place, if we Interpret it by that former, and conſider all circumſtances, it makes for Congregational Churches and Elderſhips over them. For,

1. This Direction was given to Titus, now in the firſt beginning of the Goſpel in Crete; For Paul having newly been there with him, and having converted many up and down in the Iſland, he left Titus behind, to ordain them Elders: So as here was the firſt Erection of Churches and Elders; and therefore 'twas in the beginning of the Goſpel, at which time all the Saints,in each great City converted, were but as many as might make but one Church. And it was the Duty of Saints, that all the Saints, in a place cohabiting, ſhould joyn in one, rather than in divers companies for Worſhip, and all Ordinances; and not divide, both becauſe of Unity, and more preſence of the Spirit, and the Solemnity of the Worſhip; and for all theſe ever to continue one Church, till abſolute neceſſity, would cauſe a diviſion into many: Hence in this beginning of the Goſpel,he writes to him to ordain Elders in every City, becauſe his ordination was, that Saints cohabiting, ſhould make one Church,and not divide for all ordinances; and that they ſhould have Elders, more than one, ſet over them, both for Worſhip and Government; becauſe de facto, there were but ſo many in the greateſt Cities, as would make but one Church. And,

2. This being Interpreted by the form, κατ ἐκκλησίαν by κατα πόλιν City, here therefore is not meant literally, the extent of a City; but Metonimically it is put for the Church, then extant in any City; and ſo doth not neceſſarily import, that the extent of the Church-Government, ſhould be by God's Ordidination, equal to the extent of the City; as if becauſe there were in a City, ſo many as would make more Churches, he was to ordain them Elders, κατ ἐκκλησίαν in every Church in thoſe Cities, as the Apoſtle had done; for they were not to be Elders to that City, as a City, but to the Churches in that City; and as Congregational Churches are meant, in Acts 14. ſo alſo they here intended.. But,

III. And chiefly, as Church by Church, in Acts 14. was not in Cities only, but in Villages, or Market Country Towns, ſo here alſo, κατα πόλιν is to be underſtood: For the word πόλις when indefinitely uſed, (as here) is taken not for great Cities only, but Country Towns. And accordingly in the New Teſtament,when the Planting and Propagating the Goſpel is mentioned, the buſineſs here ſpoken of, and concerned) we find that when the Commiſſion to Preach the Goſpel, is given to the Apoſtles and Diſciples, that the word πόλις is taken for Villages, as well as great Cities,as being thoſe they were ſent to preach unto, as indifferently and promiſcuouſly, as to Cities; and therefore when like directions are given to frame Churches,and ſet up Elderſhips over them, (as here) it is anſwerably to be taken. Thus in the Commiſſion given, Mat. 10.11. whereas Chriſt ſays, Into what City or Town ye enter; the Evangeliſt Luke ſays, chap. 10.ver.8. (uttering the ſame Commiſſion) Into what City ye enter; that word therefore is put for all and both; and therefore he uſeth a general indefinite word, εἰς ἣν δ' ἂν πόλιν Into what ever City ye enter; that is, City of any ſort or kind, ſmall or great, as intending Towns, as well as Cities ſtrictly ſo called. And further, he, in his Speech, uſeth it as the Contra-diſtinct Term to Houſe or Family, of which he had ſaid before, into what Houſe ye enter; ſo now into what City, and therefore intended to take in all ſorts of Towns, conſiſting of more Families than one. And the practice of the Twelve Apoſtles, who had received Commiſſion, in Matth. 9. interprets it, ver. 6. 'tis ſaid, they went through Towns, Preaching the Goſpel, where the word Towns is only uſed, as including Cities, as in Luke the word Cities only is uſed, as including Towns; and ſo the one promiſcuouſly is put for the other: For in the preceding verſe, ver. 5. Chriſt in his Commiſſion given, calls them Cities, when ye go out of a City (ſays he) where you have Preached, ſhake off the duſt; and then in the execution of this Commiſſion, they are called Towns, they went through the Towns Preaching, ver. 6. And further in Mat. 10.23. when Chriſt teaching them if, they were perſecuted where they Preached, to fly; if they perſecute you in one City, fly into another; that is, if perſecuted in one Town, fly into another: What, were they perſecuted only in great Cities? Yes in Towns, for they were whipt in Synagogues, and Synagogues were in Villages, Mat. 10. 33. And is the direction given to them, to fly into ſmaller Towns, if they might be ſafe there as well as into Cities, or there only were they to have the promiſe of protection? ſo Acts 14. 6. Paul and Barnabas, fled to Derbe and Lyſtra, and the Regions about, as well as to the Cities; and there had ſafety, and Preached the Goſpel. And Chriſt further adds in that place, you ſhall not have gone over all the Cities of Iſrael, &c, that is, the Towns, for in Towns they Preached. And ſo Chriſt himſelf Preached in all Cities and Towns, and ſo did the Apoſtles, and it was their Commiſſion ſo to do,

Ch.VIII.

And it ſeems there was ſomething ſpecial in the ſtate and condition of Crete, why the word πόλις ſhould be there uſed, Crete is but a ſmall Iſland, and there are at this day, but three Cities in it. In the Apoſtle's times, there were four Hundred Cities, for ſo Pliny, (who lived not long after them relates) ſaid to have been in it, which were but ſmall Towns. And therefore Beza hath Tranſlated it, Oppidatim, Town by Town; as alſo ſo underſtanding it.

Now therefore if the word πόλις, be indefinitely taken for Country Towns, as well as great Cities, when Commiſſion was given to Preach the Goſpel; why ſhould it not be taken alſo in that Senſe, when Direction is given to make up Churches, and Ordain Elders to them, in the ſame place where it hath been Preached? And therefore to ordain Elders, Κατὰ πόλιν is not to be confined to Cities only, (where many Congregations, as is ſuppoſed, have been) but in Country Towns, or very ſmall Cities, (when in Crete there were ſo many) where Churches may be ſuppoſed to have been; and thoſe to be ſure but Congregational, and in both ſuch Cities and Towns only, where Churches and Saints Ἱκανοι ſufficient to make Churches were found. So there Κατὰ πόλιν and Church, City by City, Tit. 1. 5. and Κατα Ἐκκλησίαν Church by Church, Acts 14. 23. are all one. And if in greater Churches, there were more than one Elder, then their Elders were ordained Κατ' Ἐκκλησίαν, Church by Church.

And ſurely it is a hard Suppoſition, to ſuppoſe that in Crete the Apoſtle Paul and Titus the Evangeliſt, had Preacht only in the Cities, when the Commiſſion was to Teach all Nations; and therein Towns as well as Cities, as they had occaſion. Was God's Elect in Cities only? And were not Country Souls as pretious? And if they be converted unto God, were not they to be Taught to do what Chriſt commanded, as well as thoſe in Cities? And to become Churches, and to have the priviledge of all Ordinances? Or were they to come up to the Cities for them, and to the Elders there, as the Tribes did for Judgment to Jeruſalem? Theſe are harder Suppoſitions, than what the Presbyterians put upon us, as an Abſurdity, that the fruit of the Apoſtle's Preaching, ſhould in great Cities ariſe to the converſion but of ſo many, as to make but one Congregation.

And beſides, if City ſhould here Tit. 1. 5. be taken ſtrictly for greater Cities, then here is no Commiſſion to Titus to ordain Elders to Churches elſewhere. And ſo then the Inſtitution of the bounds of a Church, and the extent of the Juriſdiction of Elders, ſhould be caſt rather to the mould and extent of great Cities; that if one City, then one Church, one Elderſhip, though there were never ſo many Congregations in it; and thus Elders in every City, is to be underſtood of greater Cities, then not of the Churches in Towns and Villages, where there could rationally be but one Church in a Town. But why the pattern of Church Government ſhould fall upon, and be framed rather to the example of a City, and ſo conformed to the mould of the Civil Government in Cities eſpecially, and not as well upon the way of Country Towns, when Κατὰ πόλιν will import the one, as well as the other; (and the pattern ſurely was uniform in both) we ſee no ground of Reaſon for difference. Why ſhould we imagine that the Apoſtle ſhould ſtill ſo have in his Eye in theſe Directions to Titus, Claſſical Presbyteries, (which are but the external Government of the Church) as to take care of the ordaining Elders, as in Relation hereunto, and not much rather for the ordaining Elders in order to the Worſhip of God in Churches, and for the Eſtabliſhment of their Relation of Elders to Congregations or Churches.

Let us go on from theſe forementioned, to all other that are either called Churches, or where the Saints, written to by the Apoſtles, may by circumſtances be ſuppoſed to have been gathered into Churches, under Elders and Officers.

In the Epiſtles of James and Peter, written to the ſcattered Jews, we find mention of Elders; and therefore there muſt be ſuppoſed Churches, whereof they were Elders and we find indeed mention of Elders of the Church; and let the circumſtances be conſidered, whether thoſe may be more rationally ſuppoſed Congregational or Claſſical. Let us conſider their condition.

1. They were Jews ſcattered, and as ſome probably conceive, were many of them of thoſe ſcattered, Acts 8. And as ſuch, both of theſe Apoſtles did write to them; and as ſcattered up and down throughout vaſt Regions, whole Countries, Aſia, Bythinia, Cappadocia, and therefore not thick ſown, (being Strangers) nor in Multitudes, living ſo near, that they can be ſuppoſed to have made Aſſociated Churches.

2. Thoſe ſcattered Perſons, therefore muſt rationally be ſuppoſed to have made up Churches of themſelves, as thoſe of the Dutch Strangers do in London, and the Engliſh in Holland; and not to have promiſcuouſly mingled themſelves with thoſe Natives of the Countries, they were ſcattered into; for they had a differing Language from the Gentiles, though turned Chriſtians. And this we find in Aquila & Priſcilla, who being Jews, and having had a Church in their Houſe, (namely of Jews) in Rome, as chap. 16. of that Epiſtle. And afterward the Jews being Baniſhed from Rome Acts 18. 2. Aquila and Priſcilla removed, but kept their Church together ſtill diſtinct, from the Native Aſiatique Chriſtians; therefore in 1 Cor. 16. we read of the Church at their Houſe in Aſia, and as ſome think at Epheſus, and there joyned or mentioned with the reſt of the Churches of Aſia, in Paul's Salute unto the Corinthians, and is mentioned apart from them; becauſe it was a Church of Jews, Strangers ſcattered among them, and kept diſtinct from them. And yet it was ſuch a kind of Church (though leſs) that all thoſe Churches in Aſia, made mention of together with it, were of (both that particular Church, and all the reſt, being alike ſpoken of promiſcuouſly under the name of Church and Churches, as being all like Churches) and it will eaſily be granted, that that Church in Aquila and priſcilla's Houſe was Congregational, for it is an inſtance alledged by the Aſſembly at Weſtminſter of many Congregational Churches in Epheſus, whereof that was one particular. Now look as Aquila and Priſcilla, and their fellow Strangers, kept a diſtinct Church of their Countrymen, (which is the reaſon that Chur ch is in two Epiſtles ſo apart ſingly mentioned) ſo in like manner, did theſe ſcattered Strangers caſt themſelves into Churches of themſelves, and their own Nation, diſtinct from the other Gentile Believers in the places where they came. And it was uſual then for the Jews to have Synagogues for them of their Nation, in ſeveral Cities. And therefore both James and Peter writeth unto them apart as Strangers; and they involve not the mention of any Gentile Chriſtians with them, becauſe they themſelves were apart from them. And yet they writ to theſe thus ſcattered and kept diſtinct, as to Churches that had Elders, The Elders that are among you, (ſays Peter) 1 Pet. 5. ver. 1, 2. ἐν ὑμῖν. The phraſe is of diſtinction, that as they writ to theſe Jews apart from the Chriſtian Gentiles, ſo the Elders that are ἐν ὑμῖν, Elders of you Jews, peculiar to you, that is, that belong to any of you. And therefore James, James 5. 14. alſo exhorts them that were ſick among them, or of them to ſend for the Elders of the Church, not as if theſe had but one Church, for that was impoſſible, being ſcattered over ſo many Countries; therefore he ſpeaks indefinitely, as giving a direction that they ſhould ſend for the Elders of thoſe Churches where they were; ſo as they had Churches and Elders. And theſe Elders muſt be conſidered (in that Speech) as Elders of Congregational Churches (as was afore obſerved) for how can it be imagined, that Men ſcattered ſo far off from one another, ſhould be commanded to ſend (when ſick) for the Elders of a Church Claſſical, and ſuch a Church and Elders, is common to ſuch Churches to be intended? The ſick Perſons could not ſend, but for Elders that were ready at hand; and therefore a Congregational Church is meant and intended, and the Elders of it. And therefore farther in the ſecond Chapter, the ſame Apoſtle James ſpeaking in the like indefinite manner, if a Man come into your Synagogue, εἰς τὴν συναγωγὴν (ſays he, ver. 2.) that is, into any of your Synagogues where you Worſhip; a Phraſe proper to expreſs their Church meetings by unto Jews, (ſeeing as was ſaid, they had Synagogues in ſeveral places.) And what, in the 5*th* chapter, he calls the Elders of the Church, here in the ſecond he calls a Synagogue, calling their Aſſembly, (as 'tis well Tranſlated) ſuch. And theſe Elders of the Church, (which was a Phraſe ſuited to the Greek Idiom) is in Analogical Phraſe of Speech, or by way of Similitude, all one as to ſay, Rulers of the Synagogues among the Jews, their Churches being Congregational, of as many as could meet to Worſhip, like as the Jews Synagogues were; and their Elders as their Rulers, and the Government of theſe Chriſtian Synagogues of Chriſtian Jews, like to the Government of thoſe Jewiſh Synagogues, that were ſcattered up and down out of Judea in Gentile Cities (whereof we ſo often read) which was an entire Government within themſelves, for they were therefore called Rulers of their proper Synagogues. And according unto the Analogy of theſe Aſſemblies of Churches of theirs, with their Elders over them Synagogue-wiſe, is that in Peter, (who Writes to the ſame Perſons) to be underſtood, 1 Pet. 5. 1, 2. Let the Elders among you feed, (by Preaching and Ruling) the Flock, (indefinitely taken as Synagogue in James, and for the ſeveral Flocks Reſpectively) And in that he Writes to them to feed by Preaching as by Ruling; and the ſame to do the one, that did the other, it falls in with the former Notion, that he means Congregational Elders, who as they are fixed for feeding by Preaching to one Flock, ſo they muſt be for Ruling alſo, or elſe theſe are divided in their extent, when yet the Precept both is alike given, and made of like extent. But of this hereafter.

Ch. VIII.

CHAP. IX.

That the Account which the Scripture gives us of many Churches Eſtabliſhed by the Apoſtles in one City, Demonſtrates Congregational Churches to have been by the primitive Inſtitution of Chriſt.

WE now will go over all other Inſtances of Congregational Churches, as they appear ſetled by the Apoſtles in Cities.

1. The Church of Coloſſians was but one, which is argued by this, 1. That the Apoſtle Writing to that Church, Writes to them as a whole Church; and alſo that their Miniſters that were over this whole Church, were fixed Miniſters unto them; And if ſo, then that whole Church could be but one Congregation, for he that is a fixed Miniſter, hath a Relation, for his Teaching, but to one Congregation. Now their chief Miniſter Epaphras was a fixed Miniſter to that Church, Col. 1. 7. who is for you a Faithful Miniſter of Chriſt, Col. 4. 12. Epaphras who is one of you. If there had been many Congregations, to one of which he had been fixed, he had been more that Congregations Miniſter, than all the reſt; and his ſpecial relation had been to them, and therefore his Salutation would have been mentioned, as eſpecially to his own Church, more than to all the reſt of the Congregations, as his Labour and Pains, (when conſtant among them) was more to that particular Congregation, than any other. Since therefore his Salutation is to all the Coloſſian Chriſtians, its evident that they were but one Congregational Church, whoſe Paſtor he was. And again, the Apoſtle Writes to the whole Church, as thoſe that had learned the Goſpel of Epaphras, who was for them a Faithful Miniſter: Now if Epaphras had been a fixt Elder to one Congregation, and there had been many more there beſide, that one Congregation had been the Congregation, who had comparatively learned the Goſpel of him, more than all the Congregations beſides; and Paul would not have Written thus indefinitely, and alike of all, if there had been many. For he had been a full Miniſter only to that Congregation he was fixt to, and properly theirs as concerning Communion, by way of Learning and Teaching, wherefore the Apoſtle would have ſingled out that Congregation in his Speech from all the reſt, if there had been more than one. And then as to their other Miniſters, Archippas, Col. 4. 17. The Apoſtle enjoyns them to ſay to him, Take heed to the Miniſtry that thou haſt received of the Lord, that thou fulfill it. Had he been a fixt Miniſter to one Congregation; and there had been many Congregations there, beſides the main of his Miniſty lying in his Preaching and perſonal watching over that one Congregation he was fixt to, (for that which a Miniſter doth in ruling in common over all the Congregations, according to the Claſſical Suppoſitions, is the leaſt part of his Miniſtry) the Apoſtle would have ſingled out that Congregation, with whom he walked continually, as thoſe that ſhould have ſaid to him, fulfill thy Miniſtry; becauſe that they who were his conſtant Hearers, muſt needs be beſt, if not only acquainted with what the fulfilling of the main and conſtant part of his Miniſtry was, and with what were any neglects or defects therein. Seeing therefore he Writes to them thus indefinitely, in relation to their own Miniſters, without any Diſtinction, it argues that they were but one Church, having theſe Elders fixt to them for Preaching and Government. And of this Church he ſaith, that for their Faith and Order, for their Doctrine and Worſhip and Government, they were compleat, and his Heart was comforted as well in the one, as in the other, Col. 2. 2, 5. and he incourageth them to walk in both, according as they had received of Jeſus Chriſt the Lord; and if ſo, then to keep that Order too, (which already they had) without any alteration, to which he would never have exhorted them, it had been their duty (when multiplied to more Churches) to enter into another different Order and Form of Government. κατ ἐκκλησίαν

2. There is the Church of Philippi. The Apoſtle ſpeaks of them in the beginning of the Goſpel as a Church ſaying (Phil. 4. 15.) that in the beginning of the Goſpel, no Church communicated to him by way of giving and receiving, but only them; and in the beginning of the Goſpel, even in the greateſt Cities, a Church was no more than could meet together in one. Now look what manner of Church they were at the firſt, he ſpeaks of them as ſuch ſtill; and uſeth the ſame Stile, No other Church but you, ſaith he.

3. The Church of Antioch, is another that is to be conſidered. It was an intire Church, having Government within it ſelf. For if it could have diſcern'd that controverſie in Acts 15. and ſo had been capable of deciding it, it had power to have done it; and need never have ſent to Jeruſalem: They did not therefore as wanting power, appeal thither as to a Court of Judicature, but only ſent for Advice and Counſel in a difficult Caſe, wherein their Opinions diſagreed. And the Church at Antioch Ordained, that Paul and Barnabas ſhould go to the Apoſtles at Jeruſalem, to conſult them about this queſtion; and it was as one Church that they did thus Determine alſo of Barnabas and others, that for a whole year they Aſſembled themſelves with the Church, or in the Church ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησία, and Taught much People. And the word ἐκκλησία relateth to Aſſembling together; ſo the kind of the Church, muſt be anſwerable to the kind of the Aſſembling; and if the Aſſembling was for Worſhip, then the Church in which they met, was a Congregational Church, which is the Seat for Worſhip; and we believe that none will ſay that many Churches are ever called one Church in reſpect of Aſſembling for Worſhip. But here that they Aſſembled of Worſhip is plain; for they Aſſembled themſelves in the Church, and Taught much People, now the Church in which there is Teaching, is a Congregational Church. And beſides that, he ſaith it was in the Church (as the Greek hath it) not only with the Church. If there had been ſeveral Congregations in this City, where the word had been Taught, ſpeaking of Aſſembling for Teaching, if ever, or at any time he would have mentioned thoſe many Congregations, ſurely he would have done it upon this occaſion, eſpecially relating to matter of Fact, he would have ſpoken diſtributively. For why ſhould he call Congregations Churches upon other occaſions (as often he doth) or in any other Relation, and not upon this; whereas the Relation here is purely Congregational, for it is for Teaching the Word and Worſhip? Again. 2. We read twice of the meetings of that Church together, Acts 14. 27. When Paul and Barnabas came back to give an account to thoſe of Antioch, from whom they had been commended to the Grace of God, it is ſaid, when they were come and had gathered the Church together, they rehearſed all that God had done by them; did they make the Relation to the Claſſical Elders only? Did not the Rehearſal concern all the People, as well as every Soul amongſt them as any Sermon, it being to ſhew how God had opened the Door of Faith to the Gentiles, that they might glorifie God. And in Acts 15. 30. it is ſaid when they came to Antioch to deliver the Epiſtle from the Church at Jeruſalem, they gathered the multitude together, and at that time made a Sermon, an Exhortation to them; and he calleth this Multitude Brethren, ver. 32. They Exhorted the Brethren with many words, and confirmed them. Thus as the meetings in the Church of Hieruſalem are, ſix or ſeven times mentioned to be in one; and the Church of Antioch is here twice ſo mentioned.

4. We have an account of the Church of Troas. A Church they were, for they had Elders, and Elders they had, for they had the Sacrament; and it was at a meeting but in one place, Acts 20. 70. And Paul ſtaid there ſeven Days, till they met, They all met to break Bread, and all in one; for it was in an upper Room, where Paul Preached to them; and if there had been more Congregations than one, he would have Preached to one at one time, and to another at another time.

5. By the Churches of Galatia (as they are Stiled 1 Cor. 16. 1.) doth he mean Congregational Churches or Claſſical? Congregational only; for firſt, when he ſpeaks of them, it is concerning Collection for the Saints, Even as I have given Order to the Churches of Galatia, ſo do ye; Now the Order for Collection, for the Saints, concerns Congregational Churches, not Claſſical; Let every one of you upon the firſt day of the Week, lay up in ſtore as God hath proſpered him (i. e. lay up in the common Treaſury of the Congregation) that there be no gathering when I come. And then, 2. If they had a provincial Church, he would certainly have called them ſo in his Epiſtle to the Galatians, but when (as we ſee there) thoſe Churches were corrupted with corrupt Doctrine; and he exhorts them to purge out the Old Leaven, Gal. 5. 9. he then Writes to them as to Churches that were apart, to purge out the Old Leaven, as the Church of Corinth did; and each to become a new lump. If they be conſidered as one lump, yet it was as being leavened by way of infection; but that in 1 Cor. 5. is by way of guilt

6. The Church of Laodicea, mentioned in the Epiſtle to the Coloſſians, was alſo but a Congregational Church, Coloſ. 4. 16. when this Epiſtle is read amongſt you, cauſe it to be read alſo in the Church of the Laodiceans. That Church, wherein reading of the Word is, is a Congregational Church, for reading is a Work of Worſhip. And if in other places he had ever called a Church, in relation to Government conſiſting of many Churches; yet here if there had been many Churches, and many Churches for Worſhip, he would have ſaid ſo, and have thus expreſſed himſelf, Let it be read in the Churches of Laodicea. He would have ſpoke of the Duty, and of the Subject of the Duty in a ſuitable way. When he ſpeaks of the reading of the Word among the Jews, he ſaith it is read in every Synagogue every Sabbath Day, he ſpeaks diſtributively, and ſo he would have done here.

7. I ſhall now proceed to prove that the Churches of Aſia, were Congregational Churches.

1. That the Church of Laodicea, was a Congregational Church, we refer to what hath been ſaid.

2. Five of theſe Aſiatick Churches even Downam acknowledgeth, not to have been in great Cities; and ſuch are to be ſuppoſed probably to have but one Congregation, thoſe ſmaller Cities containing but Chriſtians, as made one Church in each of them.

3. The conſtitution of all thoſe Churches for Worſhip and Government, was one and the ſame; and therefore if Laodicea and ſome of the reſt, were but Congregational Churches, then all the reſt were ſo too. For they are intended all as Types of all Churches to the end of the World, now if ſome of them had been Congregational Churches, and others had been Claſſical, they could not have ſuited the State and condition of all Churches, both Congregational and Claſſical, which have a Government and a conſtitution different. And the Apoſtle Rev. chap. 2, & 3. Writes to the Angels of thoſe Churches, as having an intire Government among themſelves; and he Writes to them about matters of Diſcipline, and therefore regards them as Uniform, for the Matter and Seat of Government. And if that be true, which ſome Hiſtorians have reported, that Laodicea was deſtroyed by an Earthquake in Nero's Reign, long afore the time of John's Writing the Revelation, then it muſt needs have been intended only as a Type. And that all theſe Churches were uniform, appears by this alſo; that in the cloſure of this Epiſtle, what he Writes to one Church, he Writes

Tacit. Annal. lib. 14.

Writes to all, Hear what the Spirit ſaith unto the Churches, which is all one with the concluſion of the whole Book, in Revel. 22. 16. He ſent his Angel to Teſtifie theſe things in the Churches. And if Congregational Churches be acknowledged Churches in the Scripture Phraſe, they muſt be intended in that Speech; and that thoſe ſhould be mainly intended appears by this, becauſe that the Book of the Revelation, was only to be read in ſuch Churches. And likewiſe that they were Congregational Churches appears by this, that he Writes to them,as to the ſeven Candleſticks, which Chriſt walked in the midſt of; and he threatneth them that he would remove the Candleſtick. Now by Candleſtick he interprets the Churches, chap. 1. 1. And they are Candleſticks eſpecially in relation to Worſhip. It was an Ordinance of Worſhip in the Temple: And it is therefore in Zech. 4. 2. put for the compleating of all the Temple for Worſhip, and all the utenſils of it; for, though their Synedrim for Government might be compleat before, yet the Temple was not then built, in which God was to be Worſhipped. And indeed the promiſe of the preſence of Chriſt is moſt in reſpect of Worſhip, which the Saints are moſt conſtant in. And when he threatneth to remove the Candleſtick, certainly the chief threatning falls upon their Church-State, and the enjoyment of the Ordinances of Worſhip, ſuch as Preaching, the Sacraments, &c. And whereas ſome would argue many Congregations to have been in every one of theſe Churches; Biſhops have done ſo, becauſe in the end of each Epiſtle he concludeth, Let them hear what the Spirit ſaith to the Churckes, as having many Churches in each Church of them: We Anſwer.

1. That it is a Speech all one with that in Rev. 22. 16. I have ſent mine Angel to Teſtifie theſe things in the Churches; for as that is the cloſure of all, and is meant of all Churches, ſo this is the cloſure of each Epiſtle, and is meant by way of example of all Churches in the World, he ſingling out ſeven for all the reſt.

And 2. It is but ſuch an indefinite Speech, as that in Rev. 13. 29. If any have an Ear, let him hear, ſo here the meaning is, let every Church hear.

And 3. If that Notion be true of Mr. Brightman's, that they are Types of all Churches to come, to ſeveral Nations (as, it is moſt probable, they are) then it hath a clear other meaning, than that of their being many particular Churches, in each of thoſe Cities.

To conclude, we find that in all thoſe Epiſtles of Paul, when he Writeth to the ſeveral Churches of Philippi, Coloſſus, Theſſalonica, &c. he Writeth to them moſt and chiefly, concerning the Duties, which lay upon them, in reſpect of their particular relation, to that particular Congregation, whereof they are Members, and with whom they have a fixt communion, and do ordinarily converſe with, both Officers and People. Now if there had been more Congregational Churches, than one, in each of theſe Cities, (as is ſuppoſed) there is far more reaſon why he would rather have Written to them under the Stile of ſeveral Churches, in ſuch a place (as he doth when he Writes to the Galatians) when he urgeth ſuch Duties upon them, rather than to have given them the Title of one Church, in reſpect of an Aſſociation for Government only: If he had Written of matters of Government only, or chiefly to them, then the expreſſion of calling them one Church, had been ſuitable to the Duties he exhorts them to; but the Duties principally concerning them, as they were Members of diſtinct Congregations, having a nearer communion both toward their Officers fixed to them, and the People fixt in a near communion with them, he would rather have uſed the Stile of Churches, than of one Church, if there had been many Churches in thoſe Cities. And farther, ſince according to this Suppoſition, the primary relation of Paſtors to Churches, being in the ſeveral diſtinct Congregations; but the Relation of theſe Members one to another, as they are a Claſſical Church, being but a ſecondary relation, it were ſtrange, that when the Holy Ghoſt Writes and ſpeaks to ſuch and ſuch Churches, in ſuch or ſuch a City (ſuppoſing many) he ſhould Write to them only under the Notion of a Claſſical Church, and mention that only, and not mention their other Church-State, as being ſeveral Churches, making one Church, nay, not ſo much as ſpeak, that they were ſeveral Congregations. Since they are Churches Congregational in the Language of the Holy Ghoſt, and that the main of what is a Church (as hath been ſhewed) falls upon them as ſuch; how can we think, that this Aſſociation, into one Church, which is a ſecondary thing, ſhould wholly carry away and ſwallow up the Name, Stile and Title of the other. And that, which further ſtrengthens this conſideration, is, that when they Write to Churches, in a Nation or in a Province (as in Galatia, and in Aſia, and in Judea and the like) if that a politick Aſſociation, (ſuch or the like Aſſociation to this, whereby it is affirmed, that in one City, many particular Congregations are made one Claſſical Church for Government) If ſuch a one were intended, then they would as well, and by the ſame reaſon (in Writing to ſuch Churches in a Nation or Province) have Written to them under the notion of one Church, as well as when they did Write thus to them in a City. But the Apoſtle when he Writeth to a whole Province, then he ſaith Churches (although, according to Presbyterian principles, they are as truly one Church, in the ſame political reſpect, that a Claſſical Church is one, in reſpect of many Congregations of a City) But on the contrary, when he Writeth to a City, he doth give them the Name of Church, Without the leaſt mention of Churches therein, as making that one Church. And the Reaſon is ſtrong, that he ſhould have done the one, as well as the other; For if many Churches were called one Church in a City, becauſe that's the greater Aſſociation, whereby the leſſer Churches were governed; by the ſame reaſon he would much rather have called the Churches of Judea one Church, becauſe the Aſſociation, in a Province and a Nation, is larger and greater than that of many Congregations, in a Claſſical Church in a City.

And whereas ſome argue from the Multitude of Believers in a City, as too great to make but one Congregational Church. If the caſe had been ſo, it had been then more conducible for the Apoſtle to have expreſt the Multitude in ſuch Cities, by the Name of Churches in a City, than by calling them one Church. And it is ſtrange, that when the Story is told of the Apoſtles coming to ſuch or ſuch a City (as in the Acts it is) it is ſtill ſaid they called the Church together, as when the People were called together in Antioch, Acts 14. 27. For, if they had been many Congregations, and had met in parts by way of Diſtribution, it had been a much more proper Phraſe, to ſay they called the Churches, if there had been more in ſuch a City.

Object. The Apoſtles ſtill, in Writing unto the Saints in great Cities, calleth them one Church; and it were ſtrange, if that, in the Apoſtle's times, they ſhould not have multiplied in ſuch great Cities, to more than one Congregation.

Anſw. 1. As you ſay, it is hard to think that there were no Cities, that had but one Congregation; ſo it is as hard to think, that all the Churches, in other places, Villages and Cities, ſhould not be uniform.

2. There might be ſome Cities, where there might be more Churches than one, to whom they Wrote, as the City of Rome to whom Paul Wrote, might have more Churches than one; for he doth not, in all his Epiſtle, call the Saints there one Church; and though he ſpeaks of a Church in Aquila and Priſcilla's Houſe, yet his Phraſe of Writing otherwiſe, is only to the Saints at Rome.

3. All thoſe, that Write againſt Epiſcopacy, both of the Scottiſh Nation and of our own, have with one Mouth affirmed, that it cannot by manifeſt Argument be made out, that the Churches, mentioned in the New Teſtament, were more than could meet in one Congregation.

4. The meaning is, that when the Story of the Acts, and thoſe Epiſtles were written, that then there were no more, but not that afterwards there were no more.

5. Although the Apoſtles did ſpecially Preach to Cities; yet let it be conſidered, how little time they were forced to ſtay in Cities, becauſe they were to lay the Foundation of the Goſpel in all the World. And though Paul ſtaid three years in or about Epheſus, yet it doth not appear that he ſtaid ſo long time in Epheſu it ſelf, but as in the 13*th* and 14*th chapter* of the Acts, it is ſaid they went into the Countries, ſo likewiſe he did.

6. The Apoſtles did teach the Saints in every City to become one Church, and to hold together ſo long as poſſibly they could continue in one Congregation with edification. And how great and large a Synagogue in a City was, we may ſee by that Inſtance of Capernaum. And the Chriſtians met in the Cities, and built Synagogues for Meeting places, as well as the Jews were allowed to do in the Cities of the Gentiles.

CHAP. X.

The Conſtitution of a Congregational Church, Evidenced to be by the Wiſe Appointment of Chriſt, becauſe it is ſo exactly accommodated to the various conditions of Saints.

LET us now ſee, whether of theſe two ſhould in reaſon be the Inſtitution of Chriſt, and which, a Claſſical or Congregational Church would ſuit moſt with the condition of the Saints under the New Teſtament. God hath ſtill moulded his Inſtitution, and varied it himſelf according to what was the future condition of his Church. Whilſt the Church was continued in Families, as under the Old Law, he ſorted his Government and Ordinances accordingly. When they grew up to a Nation, he fitted a New Government on purpoſe for them. When in the Wilderneſs, a Tabernacle only; when fully ſetled under a Kingly power, a Temple. Now under the Goſpel, the condition of Saints in Nations varying in ſeveral Ages, he hath framed his Ordinance of Church-State ſuitably.

If it be ſaid that therefore when Churches ſhould multiply to a Nation, then the Government is to be ſuited unto that Nation as ſuch.

We reply, 1. When we ſee whole Nations truly turn Chriſtian, an anſwer is to be given.

2. God ſaw it would fall out otherwiſe with his Saints in the New Teſtament, that they would ſtill be Redeemed out of Nations, therefore ſtill ſuited his Government to his own deſign.

3. If in his Providence he foreſaw that Nations, being turned to him, ſhould have an anſwerable Government as the Jews had, he would have given Rules anſwerable. As although the Church in the Wilderneſs was not given up to a Kingdom, and had not a ſet place for Worſhip; and was not come to be diſpoſed of in ſeveral Cities, (as when they ſhould inherit the Land of Canaan they ſhould) yet God, foreſeeing what he would bring them to, did not give Laws only that ſuited their Church-State in the Wilderneſs for the preſent, but he told them, that when they ſhould come into Canaan, he would chooſe a place to which they ſhould bring their Offering, that this ſhould be the Law of their King, and alſo appointed what their Government ſhould be, when diſperſed into ſeveral Cities and Towns. And ſo anſwerably if he had intended a National Form of Government, for his Saints under the New Teſtament, and all things ſuitable thereunto, (when as yet they were not grown up to National Churches) he would aforehand have preſcribed Laws accordingly.

Now 1. This Inſtitution of Congregational Churches, was ſuch as would ſuit all times of the beginning of the Goſpel, and of the continuance of the Goſpel. The firſt Churches were ſuch neceſſarily as was ſaid afore, and when multiplied, did ſtill continue ſo, and might govern themſelves without Foreign Oppreſſion.

2. It ſuits all places, Villages as well as Cities; and we muſt ſuppoſe Saints to be as well in Villages, as in Cities. And thoſe Villages had Elders for Worſhip and Government, and the rights of a Church. And if God were to make one uniform Law, why ſhould the Inſtitution be conformed to Cities, as is pretended, and that made the pattern, and the Juriſdiction of all the reſt, rather than that of Villages; for God is the God of the Valleys, as well as the Hills; and there muſt be the ſame uniform Rule of both. But now, though the Inſtitution, to have the Saints with their Elders make one Claſſical Church, might be ſuppoſed to ſuit Cities well enough (for it was but having many Churches in them) yet the leſſer Towns it would not ſuit thus to form them up, under the Government of a Presbytery of many Congregations, eſpecially in thoſe times when they were ſcattered.

3. This Inſtitution of Congregational Churches, ſuits alſo with all conditions of the Church of Chriſt.

1. With the times of Perſecution, as well as the times of Peace. I may ſay of this Congregational Government as of Faith; it is ſaid of Faith, that it is a ſtanding grace; it is the Materia prima, the firſt matter, out of which all riſeth, and into which all reſolveth. A Man liveth by it in Proſperity, and if he be in Deſertion, all is reſolved into it. And ſo it is of Congregations, it agrees with all Eſtates, with all times:

And

And though you ſuppoſe other Governments, yet that always exiſteth, and all begin from thence; therefore theſe are called Eccleſiæ primæ, and the other Eccleſiæ ortæ.

2. It ſuiteth the condition of the Saints, being ſcattered all the World over. Whole Nations are not Saints fit for Churches, for the Saints are but a company redeemed out of Nations. As therefore among the Jews, when they were ſcattered, their Government was a Synagogue-Government, (therefore ſome think they began that of Synagogues, when they firſt went into Babylon, which we will not diſpute) therefore, as Synagogue-Government, ſuited with the ſcattered, the diſperſt condition of the Jews; ſo this ſuits beſt with the ſcattered condition of the Saints under the Goſpel.

3. The conſtitution alſo of Churches was certainly uniform in Cities, and in Villages, or whereſoever, or in what time ſoever, the Government of them was uniform. When Chriſt bad them Teach every Nation, to do what he commanded them, he intended that the Rule ſhould be uniform, whatever Government the Nations had, and therefore alſo the Apoſtle's Phraſe and Stile is ſtill, 1 Cor. 17. 17. So I ordain in all the Churches; and that which will ſuit all Churches, all States, all Times, is certainly rather the Pattern than any other. Chriſt did not make one Form for Cities, and another for Villages; one Form for times of Perſecution and another Form for times of Peace; for what ſuited times of Perſecution, would ſuit times of Peace alſo: And as the Laws of Men, conſider what is beſt for the generality of Men, ſo the Inſtitutions of Chriſt conſidered, what was beſt for his Church of the New Teſtament, throughout all Ages, and all conditions and places whatſoever.

4 It ſuits beſt for the condition of Churches in times, whether pure or corrupt, reformed, or to be reformed, when the Churches are generally overgrown with corruptions.

5. By reaſon of this, that the Inſtitution of Chriſt doth thus fall upon Congregational Churches, to be thoſe Churches which ſhould be the compleat Seat of Worſhip and Government; there was a proviſion made (and in the event hath fallen it out proſperouſly) that the Truth and the Subſtance of his Ordinances, and of Church-State, (taking it as it is it ſelf a Miniſterial Ordinance) and of the Miniſtry, might and hath continued in all Ages. For there being a neceſſity (if there ſhould be any Worſhip at all) to have Congregations for to continue, and uphold the publick Worſhip of God; and to that end, to have Miniſters over them to perform the Worſhip, in this Fundamental Inſtitution of his, all that profeſs the Chriſtian Name throughout the World in all Ages have agreed; and by this means, Jeſus Chriſt hath preſerved the Truth of a Church and Miniſtry, and Subſtance of Worſhip in the midſt of all thoſe varieties of Government of ſeveral ſorts of Patriarchs, Archbiſhops and Biſhops, in that Hierachical way, as alſo of General Councils, and other Aſſemblies Subordinate to them; and ſo whatſoever falſe Superſtructions have been made, or whatever Interruptions; yet ſtill this Fundamental conſtitution of his hath remained, and could not have been ſecured to continue in all Ages, (fall out what would) in any other way.

But the great thing, upon which all depends, is to find out what eſſential thing it is, that Church Inſtitution ſhould fall upon. We ſay, that the end of Churches is a fixed and immediate Communion of Saints, in all Ordinances; and that the Formal and External part of the Inſtitution, is but ſuited ſo as to attain this end; which is, that Saints ſhould be knit together, to meet in one for Ordinances, having their Officers that have relation to them, by whom the Ordinances are externally diſpenſed. So as it is not an accidental thing, or meer external thing (as that they ſhould meet in one place,) that the Inſtitution falleth upon, but it is the moſt ſolid and ſubſtantial and eſſential thing, that can be ſuppoſed to be the ground of ſo great an Inſtitution. We ſhall gradually make out the meaning of this aſſertion, by theſe following conſiderations; which will make the glory of Chriſt in this Inſtitution, and the conſentaneouſneſs of it to Spiritual Reaſon, and the higheſt ends that may be ſuppoſed to be aimed at, to appear.

1. Communion of Saints is the adequate end of a Church as ſuch, be it what kind of Church ſoever; and therefore in the Creed, the Church Catholick, and communion of Saints are joyned together, and do follow one another; for the one is the end of the other; and all particular Churches, are therefore alſo called the Churches of the Saints. And as the Church is framed and formed anſwerably, ſuch is the communion; and ſuch as the communion is to be, ſuch is the Church to be rckoned, the one being ſuited to the other.

The Church Catholick, (as now it is called, in reſpect it is in all Nations) although it is one Body to Chriſt; yet the Saints therein cannot have, as Saints, a fixed ſtanding ſet communion, but occaſional; either occaſional if outward, or ſecret and inviſible if inward, ſuch as the Church, in one Age, hath with the Church of a nother Age that went afore, ſuch as the Church now in Heaven, and in Earth may have together: And in that reſpect, an Ordinance or an Inſtitution, could not ſo well fall upon it. But meet it was, that beſides this kind of communion, there ſhould be on Earth a communion of Saints, ſuited to the State of the Church whilſt on Earth, that ſhould be moſt entire, and the neareſt that can be, and moſt reſembling Heaven, for the publick Worſhip and Glorifying of God in a common enjoyment of Ordinances.

2. Under the Goſpel, the communion of Saints is nearer and more intimate, than was under the Law, as the Church exceeded it, ſo the communion is to exceed it; and as their Ordinances are more Spiritual, ſo their communion. There is a greater diſtance of the Saints of the Church Catholick, in their Habitations under the Goſpel, than of the Jews under the Law. The Jews were nearer as People dwelling in one Land; and ſo were capable of a nearer communion all together, than the Church Catholick now is capable of; yet becauſe it was a Nation, therefore their communion was ordered in the way of a National polity, as a Government by Repreſentation, and a Repreſentative Worſhip, wherein the Females, were Repreſented in the Males; and yet not frequent and often neither, for it was but three times a year. The communion therefore of Saints then was carryed on in a Worldly way, (as the State of Men in Kingdoms, and Common-wealths, and in Civil things is) and therefore it was a Worldly external Frame, and the communion anſwerable. And that of the Synagogues, was but for the reading the Word and Prayer only, and not for all ſorts of Ordinances of Worſhip. The Catholick Univerſal Church, cannot attain to ſo general a communion under the Goſpel, as the National Church of the Jews did, by reaſon of the difference of Language, and diſtance of places, and diſperſions into all Nations; and yet they were to attain to a nearer communion, and more intimate, and the entireſt that the Saints on Earth are capable of; and ſo to have Churches framed, as to attain to this.

3. The greateſt and intireſt communion that Saints are capable of, muſt therefore be by parts on Earth, to have communion in publick Worſhip and Ordinances. It is therefore neceſſary, that the Saints ſhould be caſt into ſuch Aſſemblies, wherein they might partake of one Spirit by one Bread, whereby they might partake of one and the ſame Bread individually; which is therefore called the communion of the Body of Chriſt, and whereby they are made one Bread, as in the 1 Cor. 10. 17. And therefore it is, that the Scripture doth expreſs that communion by that word Meeting, or being together in Ordinances, Acts 2. 46. ὁμοθυμαδὸν, with one Mind or Spirit, importing that which is the Spirit and Life of publick Worſhip, which (above all other Actions done by a Multitude) is to have the neareſt Union of Spirits, wherein the intire communion of Saints lieth, and whereby God is glorified. And for ſeveral Churches to meet in the ſame manner, or at the ſame time, for the ſame kind of Ordinances, herein doth not lie ſo much communion, as an uniformity between them. But this is the moſt internal lively communion, to joyn in the ſame Act, at the ſame Inſtant, altogether to God; and is the greateſt imitation of Heaven, where one Spirit will run through all, and God will be all in all at once.

4. And to make yet the communion nearer, (for it is to be the neareſt) it muſt be of perſons fixed and conſtant in ſuch a communion; for that is ſtill a more entire nearneſs, that the ſame Perſons ſhould ſtill in an ordinary way, meet to joyn in their Spirits in the ſame Ordinances, and ſo inwardly and joyntly thus to glorifie God, as well as externally. The continuance and the fixedneſs of the ſame perſons, makes ſtill the union the intirer. And therefore if, for to enjoy the intireſt communion of Saints on Earth, it was neceſſary to part the Saints for publick Worſhip; then alſo it is needful to part them into fixed Bodies, which ſtill alſo is the neareſt reſemblance to Heaven, which is the perfection of communion.

5. To make this communion yet more intire,it is neceſſary that as they ſhould fixedly join in Ordinances of Worſhip,ſo in all other;and that the ſame perſons ſhould enjoy the ſame Ordinances, and one kind of Ordinances as well as another ; that as they are Preached to by the ſame Elders,ſo they ſhould join in the ſame Prayers, have the ſame breathings of the Spirit from thoſe Prayers,partake of the ſame Bread,feed at the ſame Table ; As in a Family, the intireneſs of it lies in this, that they have the ſame Father and Mother, the ſame Maſter and Miſtreſs, partake of the ſame Bread every way,and of the ſame Family Duties and Family Comforts, and ſo now this communion, in a particular Church, both as to Worſhip and Government, is uniform. Yea and Acts of Government being Worſhip (which the Souls of Men are edified by, as well as they are by Sermons) are wholly Spiritual.It is not here as in Iſrael whoſe Government was more carnal; for it was the judging of civil cauſes (Civil and Eccleſiaſtical Government,being all one, mixed together, as the Church it ſelf was) it was in ſuch controverſies and caſes, as now men plead in Civil Bars about Eſtates; only God was pleaſed to give Laws himſelf for ordering of ſuch things. But the Apoſtle in 1 Cor. 5. and 1 *Cor.*6. ſevereth the judging of matters in the Church, as a Church by way of Excommunication, &c. from their judging of things about this Life. A Church as a Church medleth not now with them, for theſe affairs of it are wholly Spiritual.

So that for a concluſion, if all the Wits of World ſhould have ſtudied a way to contrive what kind of Church to Erect for the intireſt communion of Saints, to attain to that end which is the end of a Church Inſtituted,they could have pitched upon no other but this ; neither could there have been ſuch a way found out of all other as this is. If that the Church Univerſal, the communion of it had been only occaſional, the Saints meeting only by vertue of being Members of the Catholick Church promiſcuouſly and indefinitely, ſometimes in one company, ſometimes in another, though by this promiſcuous and indefinite way, there had been a more extenſive communion of Saints indeed, (that is, each Saint might have come to have joined in publick Worſhip with more numbers of Saints, at ſeveral times, with more variety) yet it had not been ſo intenſive, ſo near and high a communion, as for the ſame Saints under the ſame Officers fixedly to meet. And beſides, they could not have had an Excommunication out of this communion, unleſs firſt knit into fixed bodies, neither could they have choſen Officers, unleſs ſuch whoſe Office ſhould ceaſe with the Act, and performance, which indeed is not an Office; for that is a ſeparation of a Man to a continued performance of a Duty. Nor would it have brought that bleſſing,that a conſtant dedication of Men to an Office for perpetuity would do, which could not be done in that occaſional fluid way.

If that ſuch Congregations and Officers, though bounded within ſuch a compaſs of a City or ſo, ſhould have remained unfixed, tho' aſſociated together within ſuch a circuite or compaſs; yet this would not have made this intireneſs of Communion of Saints ; as by this way of fixed Congregations there is. And alſo, in this caſe, the Inſtitution of a Church would have been pitched upon ſome one part, or particular kind of Communion, and upon ſomething leſs principal in it, and not upon the adequate and full foundation of it.

For Firſt, In this unfixt way of People and Officers, though bounded in a compaſs, this number of Saints ſhould have heard this Miniſter to day, and with other Saints have heard another to Morrow, none meeting one day together, that do another day, in which alſo all might run to one Officer ſtill where he Preached and leave the other, which would not breed an orderly communion,but rather a confuſion. But to have the ſame Officers to be fixed, and the ſame perſons to enjoy the diſpenſation of the ſame Officers, as in a Family, Children and Servants are under the ſame Governours, this is a nearer and intirer communion.

Secondly, In this claſſical way, there would indeed be a conſtant and a fixed communion in Government, of the Elders (namely of ſuch a circuit) who, when matter of Government was to be exerciſed, ſhould all meet ; but they would not permit (in ſuch a way) or let in the Elders of the ſame Province,to meddle, as often as they would come, no not though occaſionally they were preſent there, or came thither to that end. But now to have the ſame Elders and People fixed for all acts of Government, and yet to have them unfixed in reſpect of performing of Worſhip (when that is the main end both the of communion,and for which Elders are appointed) and not to have the ſame fixed companies of People that communicate in this company with thoſe

Elders, as in this unfixed way they have not, this would put too great an inequality, between communion in Government and communion in Worſhip, and make the unequality on the part of Worſhip rather, becauſe Government is fixed of the ſame Perſons, People and Elders, and yet Worſhip, wherein is the neareſt communion, is left unfixed. And ſurely, if communion, and intireneſs of publick communion, be the end of a Church, the frame, and mould of the Church ſhould rather be caſt, and ſhap'd to that which is the intireſt communion, than unto that which is more looſe. Now in Worſhip (as to the Acts, and Duties of it perform'd) there is a capacity of an entirer communion, than in Government, becauſe the Duties thereof are more conſtant.

If, Thirdly, The People be fixed for Worſhip in ſeveral Bodies, but the Elders Fluid in a circulatory Preaching, (as it is pleaded) and ſo they are made one Church, becauſe the ſame Elders that teach, do alſo Govern them too and ſo they have a near communion in Worſhip too, becauſe they are at times taught by the ſame Elders: If this (I ſay) be made a ground of moulding theſe ſeveral Congregations into one Church, yet it is defective. For it makes the Peoples communion, in enjoying the ſame Elders at times ſucceſſively, to be the foundation of Church Inſtitution (yea, and in this caſe of, the firſt Church proprie dicta, or properly ſo called) rather than the communion of Saints, and of the ſame perſons of the Saints, meeting fixedly for Worſhip. But it is hard to conceive, how the oneneſs of a Church ſhould be ſetled, rather on ſuch a temporary communion in Elders, than on a conſtant communion in Ordinances, whenas the ſame Elders are enjoy'd by theſe perſons but at times; (which is an interrupted communion alſo) yea and there are no times neither, wherein as to Acts of Worſhip they enjoy the ſame Elders all together. Now that ſuch a relation of Elders, and communion in them, in ſuch a broken way, ſhould carry away the great priviledge of a thing (becoming the ground of the Inſtitution of it) from conſtant communion, both of the ſame Saints and Elders, and be preferred thereto in this reſpect, ſeems ſtrange. And if it be ſaid, that yet the Saints themſelves in this way meet, and have all communion in thoſe Acts of Government, though not in Worſhip. Yet Firſt; However it cannot be thought, that an occaſional communion (as acts of Government comparatively are) ſhould carry away the formation, the ſhaping and the inſtitution of the firſt Church. Secondly; The Women (who though they have not the intereſt of Juriſdiction, yet of communion, and of deprivation, and of Virtual Aſſiſtance by their Prayers, &c. they have) are excluded; Unleſs ſuch Churches be ſo framed that they alſo be preſent.

Fourthly; If we take that other Presbyterial way that is practiſed, wherein they are fixed for communion in Worſhip, both Elders and People, but not for Government; yet, even here that fore-mentioned intireneſs of Government is parted, and the communion of Saints in that one reſpect divided. And being divided, the ground and foundation of all and either, being (as was ſaid) the communion of Saints, is thereby weakened many ways. For 1. Still this communion is partial, and by that means each ſtands but upon one ſingle Baſis, whereas both joyn'd it might ſtand on two. For now in this caſe, the communion in Worſhip (the bleſſing of which ſhould ſtrengthen that of Cenſures, which is a caſting out of the communion) is the ground of the meetings of each Congregation: But communion in Government in common, is the foundation of another Church over all Congregations. 2. A communion of Elders, rather than of the Saints, is the foundation of this ſuppoſed inſtitution of a Church; and the communion of Saints therein is but repreſentative, and at ſecond hand, themſelves being abſent. It is a communion for them, but not a communion of them. Yea, they have no communion, not of preſence in the Sentence and in the Execution, but are only Congregations of thoſe Elders, that did make a Church concerned therein. But on the contrary, a communion of Saints, even in Government, is the ground and end of erecting of a Church, and therefore it is called one Church in relation principally unto them.

Now then to wind up all; If there may be ſuch a communion of Saints under the Goſpel, ſo adequate and intire, and Churches ſo formed, as that the ſame Saints ſhould join in the ſame Worſhip, with a joynt, conſtant, inward, individual communion therein, and theſe Saints may have, and do enjoy (as our Brethren grant) fixt Elders, by whoſe Miniſtry and Diſpenſation, they partake with them in the ſame Worſhip which makes their communion, yet comparatively more intire, (for in the Presbyterial way, there communion is principally by Elders, and therefore in this alſo, a due conſideration is to be had, as adding a farther intireneſs) and theſe Elders being a Presbytery, yea and enough to make a Presbytery for all Acts of Government (as we ſhall after ſhew a company of Elders in Congregations to be) at all which Acts of Government, which are for the edification of the Saints, they can be preſent, and have a perſonal communion, as well as in thoſe of Worſhip; if alſo the communion of Saints be the end of Erection of particular Churches, and is the meaſure fitted; for finis dat Menſuram Mediis, the end gives Meaſure to the Means, and if this end may be adequately and intirely attained this way, why ſhould partial ends be preferred to total and compleat, all ends meeting in one? Yea if communion of Saints in Worſhip be the chief communion, yea and the communion of Saints be the principal fundamental cauſe of all Church Inſtitution, Why ſhould not it draw to it ſelf communion in Government alſo, when there is a ſufficiency for the performing the Acts thereof? Why ſhould the communion of Elders be taken off from the communion of the Saints? Why ſhould a Presbytery be erected, that is taken off from a Church and Aſſembly of Saints; When yet there is a ſufficient Presbytery over a Church of Saints, that meet for all acts both of Worſhip and Government, and when yet theſe greater Presbyteries would challenge their power from this leſſer Presbytery of Churches, rather than from the name Church, and yet take it off from theſe Churches, they pretend to be a Presbytery unto? Yea, why ſhould any affirm, that, although a particular Congregation had a ſufficiency of Elders, yet it is God's Ordinance that they ſhould aſſociate, for whereas the avoiding of Diviſion is pretended, it makes a worſe diviſion, dividing Worſhip from Government, and Elders from the particular Churches of Saints, and ſo parting from them, that wherein they ought to have the intireſt communion. So, as all things conſidered, the inſtitution of a particular Church, falls moſt haply, uniformly, and adequately upon a Congregation intirely and alone, and upon no other manner of Aſſemblies at all.

CHAP. XI.

That the Forming of Saints into Churches, under the Government of Elders, is a matter of that needful order, as requires a Divine Inſtitution for it. That it was alſo requiſite, that the extent of thoſe Churches, and the Limits of the Elders Juriſdiction ſhould be ſet and determined by Chriſt.

BUT this being granted, that Churches in the New Teſtament are formed and fixed Bodies, which are either the Seat of Worſhip, or of Eccleſiaſtical Government, and likewiſe that there is a neceſſity it ſhould be ſo, yet the next queſtion will be, whether the ſetled Form and Order of theſe Bodies, the extent, bounds and compaſs thereof, into which the Church Univerſal ſhould be parted and divided, and which ſhould be the Seat of Government, be ſet out by Chriſt's ſpecial appointment and inſtitution, or hath been left by him to Men to frame and order, according to the common rules of edification, as matters of circumſtantial order uſe to be. But we humbly conceive this to be a point of ſuch order, and of ſo much weight and moment, and belonging to the ſubſtance of Government, as that, if there were any ſpecial inſtitution and deſignment of other things, belonging to the order of Church Government, then alſo of this: As appears to us whilſt we take eſtimate and compariſon, with any other particular, acknowledged to be the ſubject of inſtitution, as alſo eſtabliſhed by more direct warrant. For the ſatisfaction of this Query, we ſhall give the general demonſtration of the ὅτι of it, That it is and muſt needs be ſo: whatever the form and extent of theſe Churches and Bodies, that are the Seat of Government ſhall prove to be, which whether Congregational, Claſſical, Provincial, or National, we yet diſpute not. What at the preſent we endeavour to make forth is only this in the general, that whatſoever kind of form or extent they are moulded into, this form and extent muſt be ſet out and taken from ſome inſtitution. The Quale, or what ſort of Bodies, and what meaſure thereof Chriſt hath inſtituted, is to be afterward diſcuſſed.

And although the proof hereof will not be full and compleat until the demonſtration of the Quale, or of what is the particular form or boundary and extent, both of Church and the Elders juriſdiction, and this be ſhewn to have been inſtituted, yet we ſhall for the preſent endeavour ſuch a demonſtration as ſhall be ſufficient for a general foundation to that which follows, and enough to confirm the point as in the General.

Now for the more diſtinct proceeding in this, there is a double Seat of Government conceived to be in theſe Bodies of Saints and Elders, whether according to our Brethren's Principles or our own. According to our Brethrens, all Government is put into a Body of Elders, and ſo they make the Elders the ſubjectum inhæſionis, the inherent ſubject of all the Power; and the Church or the company of the Faithful to be ſubjectum occupationis, that is, the ſubject committed to them to be governed. Even as in a Corporation, where tho' the Power and Government is in the Magiſtrates alone, and ſo they are the ſubject of inherency, in whom the power reſides; yet a limited extent of Juriſdiction, namely, a Corporation of People, in ſuch a compaſs or precinct, is the ſubjectum occupationis, the ſeat, the circuit over whom, and among whom their Government is extended, and within confined. But if according to our principles, the Government is inſtituted by Chriſt to be mixt of an Ariſtocracy of Elders, and a Democracy of the People, yet ſtill the like ſuppoſition neceſſarily ariſeth, that there is, and muſt be, a limited ſeat or precinct, in which this Eccleſiaſtical Government is exerciſed, which we call the Seat of Government; And look, what Authority is in the Body of Elders, as Elders, it is within that ſeat or compaſs. That which therefore theſe following General Arguments and Demonſtration did aim at, is, to prove that the extenſive Limits, and Bounds of ſuch Eccleſiaſtical Authority; and accordingly the proportion and meaſure of thoſe Bodies, or Churches, the Seat thereof, and in which it is exerciſed, is a matter of that nature, weight, and moment, as to have a ſpecial Line of inſtitution, by which it may be meaſured forth. And to that end the demonſtration hereof ſhall be framed, and fitted to prove theſe two things.

1. That the forming up of Elders into Bodies, or Presbyteries, and the Limits and Boundaries of the extent of their Power, is a matter of that nature, as muſt be ſet out by Inſtitution.

2. That anſwerably thereunto, the ſetting out the compaſs, meaſure, limits and extent of thoſe Bodies of Saints and Elders making Churches (which are the ſeat or ſubject, in which a company of Elders ſhall have a Juriſdiction, and that company of Saints the priviledge of Government, and unto which the extent of their Juriſdiction is to be limited) muſt alſo be ſet out by a ſpecial Inſtitution, and that their priviledge, to become ſuch, depends upon a ſpecial Charter alſo.

We might ſpeak to each, and either of theſe ſeverally and apart, but that indeed theſe two, the ſetting the limits to the extenſive power of Elders; and alſo the ſetting out the meaſure of thoſe Bodies unto which their Government (whether joyned with the People, or alone, we yet argue not) ſhall extend and be confined, are both commenſurable each to other, and do mutually argue each other. For all Power and Government in what Company or Body of Rulers ſoever, that are the ſubject in whom it reſides, muſt have a ſeat, compaſs or precinct of men united in one, in which to exerciſe their power. And the true meaſure of their extenſive power is from the meaſure of the extent of that ſeat, ſo as the proving of either of them to be neceſſarily done by Inſtitution, is to prove both, for they mutually argue each other, and the extent of the one is reſolved into the other. And therefore if the extent of any one be of Divine Inſtitution, the other muſt be of Divine Appointment alſo, as we ſhall after ſhew.

Seeing therefore that theſe two are ſo conjunct in the nature of the thing, and mutually the demonſtrations each of other; we will in diſcourſing of them, put them together, ſometimes giving demonſtrations that joyntly concern both, and are common unto both; ſometimes ſuch as concern either of them ſingly, in ſuch a method as may beſt ſerve to clear the truth of this Aſſertion, which to us lays the foundation of deciding this great controverſie, as in the ſequel will appear.

We ſhall rank our Arguments under theſe four heads.

1. That theſe two forementioned, are ſubſtantial points of Order, and therefore are to be fetched from Inſtitution.

2. That they are matters of ſuch Order, as other things are of, which we do find (and all do ſo acknowledge) to have been matter of Inſtitution.

3. That the Wiſdom, and Prerogative of Chriſt (who is the Supream Inſtitutor, and Law-giver to his Church) is as much concerned and intereſted, in the Inſtitution of theſe, as in any other things he hath Inſtituted about Officers, and Church-Government.

4. That Spiritual Reaſon, ſuited to the Nature of the things themſelves, fall in to confirm this.

The touch of the conſequence of theſe three firſt, is juſtly founded upon what we have already ſaid of Inſtitution. As that the Coloſſians received their Order from Jeſus as the Lord, as well as their Faith. And beſides; That the Subſtantials of Church Government ſhould be ſet out by Inſtitution, all ſides have acknowledged, and the caſe therefore muſt needs be like, in all matters of like Order and Subſtantialneſs, for the Wiſdom and Prerogative of the Law-giver is alike concerned, to appoint one as well as another; and elſe too, Church-Government conſiſting of things of like rank and nature, ſome of them ſhould yet be Divine, ſome Humane, and ſo it would conſiſt ſome part of Gold, and ſome of Wood. So as here we need but apply thoſe generals to the confirmation hereof; but yet we ſhall further endeavour to confirm them all along, in the mention of, and together with thoſe particular proofs, which we ſhall alledge for the Heads forementioned. And thoſe reaſons ſhall not only or ſimply be drawn, from parallelling theſe two points of Order with other things, which are ſubſtantial in all Government, and are acknowledged almoſt by all, eſpecially by our Brethren, to be matter of Divine Inſtitution in, and about Church Officers and Government. We ſhall not thus only deal by conſequence, in the cloſure of the proofs for the ſecond Head, but alſo by Scripture, more directly holding forth the truth thereof, and all backt and ſeconded with an harmony of Spiritual Reaſons, according to the nature of the thing falling in, and ſuiting to it.

Only let this be taken along and remembred, that the ſcope of theſe Reaſons, in this place, is only to demonſtrate this in the general, and in the ὅτι that it is ſo, and and not now to prove the point, by laying out the very particular bounds and limits, ſet by the Holy Ghoſt. For that is to be tryed out afterwards, by our Brethren and Us, who of Us can ſhew the ſureſt and moſt antient Land-marks hereof, which particulars when they ſhall come to be delineated, and ſet out, and confirmed by Scripture and Reaſon, the proof of this general truth will be found more full and compleat, by whatever either ſide can ſhew to be the true and notive characters of the Inſtitution thereof. But till then, we muſt neceſſarily here in this place, content our ſelves with general Arguments, and which are accordingly ſuited to this ſcope, and none other.

1. I ſhall begin with the firſt Head; That both theſe are as ſubſtantial matters in Church-Government, as any of thoſe other about the Inſtitution of Officers Power, &c. can be ſuppoſed to be. To evidence which, what fairer eſtimate can be taken, whereby to judge of what is ſubſtantial in this Government, than from what is in all Mens apprehenſions ſuch, in any Government whatever? Now take any Society of Men that are embodied for Government, and if the Officers and Laws of it are defined, the Common-wealth or Body it ſelf, the Bounds and Limits of its Juriſdiction are defined alſo, and by the ſame hand, the one at firſt is conſtituted, the other is too, and this is true, eſpecially of ſuch bodies, as hold, from a ſupream power, the Charter for their Government, as all Churches do hold their Order from Chriſt the Supream Founder. In this caſe, it is every way as eſſential to have the Body of People it ſelf formed up into an Unity, and the extent of their Juriſdiction, ſet by that Supream Power, as to have Officers over it, and Laws by which they are Governed, The firſt is neceſſary in it ſelf for the good of thoſe bodies (in relation to orderly Government) and it is as neceſſary as the ſetting out the extent of every Man's Lands (which he poſſeſſeth, and of which the abutments and limits are as exactly mentioned in their deeds, as any thing elſe. And thus neceſſary is ſetting down the extent of Juriſdiction, of every Incorporate Town, and accordingly ſet forth in their Charter. Thus London is differenced from Weſtminſter, which otherwiſe would be judged but one City, and one Incorporate Body; And this was neceſſary in their firſt edition, and to preſerve diſtinction and intireneſs of Government without confuſion and uſurpation. 2: For the other particular, it is as neceſſary to confine thoſe Officers and their Juriſdiction within the compaſs of certain ſeats and bodies politick, as to define and limit the acts of their power, and wherein to judge and intermeddle. In all civil Bodies, Kingdoms, Common-wealths, &c. their Laws are as exact to ſet down the limits of Juriſdiction, the extent of power, as the degree, or kind, or ſort of acts, of power to be put in execution by thoſe entruſted with it; and all Officers in ſeveral Provinces or Bodies Incorporate, that give a Commiſſion of Power, from the Supream Power, have in their Commiſſions and Charters, as expreſs a mention and definition of the circuit and extent of power, as of their acts of Power, ſo as a greater nullity ariſeth not from any other thing, as from extending power commited beyond the bounds of Juriſdiction; and it is a Premunire as well to do an act of Government out of their Juriſdiction, as an undue act within it, as to Arreſt or Impriſon out of their juriſdiction. And that Mayors or Bailiffs ſhall judge only within ſuch a Town or Borrough, is as expreſs in their Charter (or at leaſt that the limit of their Juriſdiction being determined within the ſame, their Power without is null and void) as that they ſhall be Mayors and Bailiffs there. And thus this parallel confirms both parts of the Argument, both that it is alike ſubſtantial, and alſo that therefore it alike depends upon the determining of the Supream Lawgiver. And although this eſtimation be taken from Man's Law and Civil Government, yet it is in a matter, that is alike common to both. If indeed Church Government could be ſuppoſed to be a matter of that nature, that ſuch boundings and determinings of the Seat and Extent of Elders Juriſdiction, in order to Government, were not exiſtent in it, and neceſſary thereunto as well as to other Government alſo, but might be tranſacted promiſcuouſly without any ſuch boundings, then indeed the form of the parallel would not carry it to erect any thing in Church-Government, by a parallell from the Civil. But all that (do or will acknowledge any Eccleſiaſtical Government, as they do acknowledge fixed Bodies of Saints and Elders (which the former aſſertion cleared) ſo withal they muſt acknowledge ſuch a determination neceſſarily to be made to bound thoſe Seats of Government, and Extent of Elders Juriſdiction, either by God or Men. Now therefore in this we only argue, that the determination thereof, is of that nature, that it muſt be ſet out by the Supream Lawgiver, as well as other things are, that concern this Government. Thus much however is preparatory to what follows, that this Aſſertion is moſt rational and coincident with the like principles of reaſon humane, though of, and about a matter Spiritual. Yet becauſe it will be ſaid it is but an Argument from Men (which yet in the caſe of Miniſters maintenance, as in other things alſo, the Apoſtle uſeth to produce and confirm thereby the rationality of a Divine Ordinance, about this matter, when yet there were other grounds alſo for it in the Scripture that it is ſuch) therefore we will proceed to the other general head, that the forming Saints into Churches, and ſetting the bounds thereof, are matters of ſuch order as God and Chriſt hath Inſtituted, we ſhall endeavour to make forth (proceeding by degrees) both by parallelling theſe with other matters of Order, about Officers and Church-Government which God hath Inſtituted, and by demonſtrating that theſe are as great points of Order, as thoſe other which Chriſt as a Lord hath given: And we ſhall alſo evidence it, by the addition of ſuch Scripture proofs and inſtances, as do directly hold forth the truth thereof, and ſo confirm too, that other parallel reaſon about them.

Now to prove the parallel between this, and other matters of Order, let this be premiſed and taken along, that this ſecond ſort of reaſons, drawn from comparing theſe, or either of them, with other things that are inſtituted, and thence proving the Inſtitution of theſe alſo (though we inſiſt not only or wholly on them) is in this caſe juſt and ſure. For we ſtretch not the argument from parallel or like reaſon to find out any new thing in Church-Government, whoſe exiſtency is argued and founded meerly upon parallel reaſon. That way of reaſoning we leave to our Brethren, in rearing up their whole Fabrick upon the parallel reaſon of a particular Church, Mat. 18. to the prejudice of that foundation which theſe are built on. But the limiting of Elders Juriſdiction, and the ſeat of their ordinary Government, being a thing that neceſſarily exiſteth, and which muſt be acknowledged to have place already, or elſe no orderly Government can at all be ſuppoſed to be (as both ſides do acknowledge) If then the queſtion ſhall be (which is the thing now before us) whether the ſetting out thoſe limits, &c. be a matter of that nature, as ſhould be ſet out by the Inſtitution of Chriſt, as other matters of parallel nature are? Or whether Chriſt hath left them as things of that inferiour alloy and nature, and of ſo ſmall moment, as to be determined by the common rules for edification, as other circumſtantial matters are? In deciding this Caſe and Queſtion, and for the general demonſtration of it, certainly parallel reaſon will carry it, that theſe things are to be ſet out by God, and not left to Men, eſpecially when there ſhall be added unto theſe, Scriptures that directly ſpeak the ſame thing, that parallel reaſon doth. This being premiſed, we ſhall ſpeak to each ſingly.

I. We begin firſt with that of the bounding the extent of the power and juriſdiction of Elders; that this is to be found ſet out by Inſtitution will appear, for the ὅτι of it in the general, both ways, either, 1. By comparing it with other matters of Order, &c. Or, 2. By what the Scriptures do more directly hold forth, about ſetting the limits of the extenſive power of Officers; Or, 3. By Reaſon falling in therewith.

1. It is evident by comparing this point of order with other things which our Brethren themſelves, according to their principles, do hold to, and acknowledge to be matters of Inſtituted order, in many of which we alſo concur with them. Let but an impartial compariſon and eſtimate be taken and made with other things, concerning Church Elders and their Power, which they cleave to, as inſtituted, even to a nullity for the want of it in other perſons and things. They do ſhew themſelves ſufficiently tender and jealous of having Inſtitutions, for the exerciſe of any part of Eccleſiaſtical Power, and will allow none but perſons authoriſed by an Inſtitution, and in ſuch and ſuch a way, to the excluſion of others for want of Inſtitution. For example, 1. Why elſe do they exclude the Body of the People from having an intereſt of ſuffrage in Excommunication, or caſting out of the Church, or ordaining Elders, and confine theſe Acts, and all other ſuppoſed Acts of Government, unto Elders only? 2. Although to Excommunicate, &c. be an Act of Government, that belongs to the Office of Eldership, yet they would allow no one Elder to Excommunicate alone, no not in that Church whereof he is Paſtor in a ſpecial fixt relation, but it muſt be Elders united into an Ariſtrocracy, becauſe it is by Inſtitution ſo implied, Tell the Church, &c. which is always more than one. Yea, they Aſſert that ſuch an Act of Excommunication is Null and Void if but by one Elder alone. Yea, 3. If any one Paſtor though never ſo eminent, ſhould be ſet up in a lawful Presbytery to be of the Quorum in that Presbytery, wherein he is a Member and an Elder, ſo as nothing ſhould be done but with, and by his conſent, and ſuffrage, though not without the reſt of the Presbytery alſo, (which was all that Power, that Biſhops antiently challenged and exerciſed) yet this would be, and is denied to any, as a thing beyond that degree of Power given any one Man among the reſt. And 4. Thoſe that are acknowledged Elders, namely Ruling Elders, they would ſtrictly debar from Preaching, from Praying in Publick, or Bleſſing the People, or Adminiſtring the Sacrament, becauſe theſe are Acts of the Preaching Elder's Office by Inſtitution, or elſe why are they excluded if Chriſt would not have them ſo? Yea, 5. Though the ſubſtance of the Act of Ordination (which they call Miſſio Poteſtativa) be an Act of the whole Presbytery, Ruling Elders and others; yet the Right of laying on of hands, which is the leſſer, they allow not to Ruling Elders, but appropriate it to Preaching Presbyters in the Presbytery. And 6. Although there may be many Elders in a particular Church, that make up therein an Eldership, who when alone, without Neighbour Churches, did exerciſe all, and had compleat Power of Excommunication, &c. within themſelves (as they grant) yet when Churches came to be Multiplied, or there are Neighbour Churches whom they may aſſociate with, many of our Brethren hold, that in this caſe they have no longer Warrant or Power (at leaſt not as to the exerciſe of Government within themſelves) but are to joyn in common with thoſe other Elders of Churches for all Acts of Government. And all this muſt be becauſe Chriſt hath, by Inſtitution, ſo fixt the Power of Governing (in reſpect of the Acts thereof) as they are not, by any other or any otherwiſe, to be put in execution. Yea, 7. If that the Churches go and chuſe, &c. cull out a certain company of their Officers, and all the Churches in a Kingdom ſhould chuſe them that ſhould be ſet apart for Acts of Juriſdiction only, and attend them in a ſet and conſtant way, (as the Synedrim in Jeruſalem was choſen) our Brethren would ſay, that although here were Elders choſen out of all the Churches unto ſuch Acts (as are the Acts of Elders, according to their principles, lawfully thus choſen) and that they make up (according to them) one Body or Corporation repreſentatively of all the reſt, as the National Aſſemblies uſe to do; yet if theſe ſhould be thus conſtantly ſet apart unto ſuch a work, they would deny this to be lawful; and the unlawfulneſs muſt lie in this, that they are not formed up, according to the Inſtitution. So that a little variation, in this kind, muſt ſtill have a new Inſtitution for it, according unto them. And ſhall there not be the like for the bounding the exerciſe of Elders extenſive Power, which is of as much, if not far more moment, than many of theſe things can be ſuppoſed to be of? And then laſtly; Add to all theſe an 8*th* Principle, which ſingly and alone concludes the general point in hand, but, joyned with thoſe other, brings the forces of them all more ſtrongly up to the concluſion. In the Controverſie with the Biſhops, there is a diſtinction of a double Eccleſiaſtical Power; The one Poteſtas Intenſiva; The other Extenſiva. The one imports a further degree or kind of Power; The other a further extenſion of power. And in both theſe reſpects, they diſtinguiſhed a Biſhop from an ordinary Presbyter. In reſpect of Power Intenſive; A Biſhop might do ſome Acts a Presbyter might not do; even as a Presbyter might do Acts a Deacon might not do, which conſtituted theſe three ſeveral Orders in the Church. A Biſhop might Ordain and Excommunicate, not ſo a Presbyter. And as they made them to differ thus in acts of Order, and Intenſion of Power, ſo in reſpect of Juriſdiction, and in that reſpect chiefly, that is, that an ordinary Presbyter was ſet over ſome particular Flock and Congregation; But a Biſhop was for Acts of ordinary Government, ſet over a whole Dioceſs, and over many Congregations, to rule them in common, as making one Church. And ſo an Archbiſhop, though he was of the ſame Order with a Biſhop; (for they made thoſe two, not to conſtitute two ſeveral Orders) yet, in reſpect of a larger extent in Territory or Juriſdiction, they were ſaid to differ, in reſpect of extention of Power. Now our Brethren, and all thoſe, who writ againſt this further Power of Extenſion and Juriſdiction in Biſhops, called for an Inſtitution for ſuch a further degree and extent of Power, as well as for a new Order of Power, and that not only as to the large pretended power in a Biſhop, beyond a Presbyter's, but alſo of an Archbiſhop over a Biſhop. So do we alſo require an Inſtitution for that power which our Brethren claim. An uſurpation lies not only in an undue form of Government, that Chriſt hath not inſtituted; (as to ſet up one man to rule, when it is in the hands of many, which is to erect a Monarchy when Chriſt hath ordained an Ariſtocracy, which is the ground of exception againſt Epiſcopal Power) Nor doth it only lie in uſurping undue Acts of Power, which Chriſt never Inſtituted; But further it lies in a company of Elders taking on them an extent of Power for Territory and Juriſdiction, larger than that extent, which an evidence of Inſtitution can be produced to Warrant. In this caſe although a company of Elders do in their proceedings take on them to execute none other, but ſuch as are due Acts of Government, for the kind of them, and thoſe regulated according to ſuch Rules as the Word warrants (as in reſpect to the Sins proceeded againſt) nor none other acts, but which belong to the Office of Elders. Yea and tho' all this be done by them, as caſt and combined into a joint body, (no one Man amongſt them aſſuming more power than the reſt) and ſo this Government be carried in an Ariſtocratical way; (which is the Right form that Chriſt, according to them, hath Inſtituted) yet if they ſtretch the extent of their power unto a larger line or circuit, than Chriſt hath made the Territory or Seat of Church Government, this muſt needs prove an uſurpation, let the pretence be never ſo ſpecious, and the proceedings otherwiſe never ſo juſt. For extenſive power muſt be warranted by Inſtitution, as well as intenſive, or the meaſure or kind of power: Whereas yet we perceive many, that are zealous for Inſtitutions in thoſe other things, would (ſo far as we can underſtand) have the boundaries of the extent of power Eccleſiaſtical, to be left (with other things of leſs moment) to be ordered only according to the common rules of edification, and of the Law of Nature, as humane Prudence ſhall think fit to diſpoſe and ſet them out.

Mr. Rutherford's Temperate, Peaceable Plea. p. 5.

2. Unto which add, Secondly, That God hath, both under the Old Teſtament, as alſo the New, made the bounding and ſetting the extent of Church Officers extenſive power the ſubject of his own inſtitution and deſignment, which confirms the truth of this point in the general.

1. Firſt, in the Old Teſtament (which we have not now recourſe to, as our Brethren uſe to have as an Inſtance, that the ſame particular extent of Government that was then, ſhould be the Model of Chriſt's Inſtitution under the New; we ſhall confute that largely afterwards.) This was the matter of Chriſt's Inſtitution. As therefore under the Old, the ſeveral ſorts of Officers were appointed, and alſo their limits of Juriſdiction, ſo now under the New, as Chriſt hath Inſtituted the kind of Officers and Elders, ſo he ſhould ſet out the extent of their Juriſdiction: Eſpecially ſince we ſuppoſe ſuch Officers having ſuch a Power (as our Brethren and we ſuppoſe) by Inſtitution, it is therefore neceſſary, that it ſhould be determined either by God or Man, what the extent of their Juriſdiction ſhould be. We do not herein urge the Analogous like reaſon, of the Old Teſtament and the New, to raiſe up the like particular Rule and Inſtitution, for the extent of Elders Power, now as then; but only as a proof of this general Maxime, that when we find the like ſubject of Inſtitution in the New, the reaſon will hold, that as there was an Inſtitution ſet for the bounds of the Intenſive Power of Officers among them (as of the Order of Prieſts above Levites, &c.) and their ſeveral work accordingly deſigned, ſo the bounds of Juriſdiction and of Extenſive Power, in the Government of that State and Church, were ſet out by the ſame hand alſo; ſo in like manner, Chriſt hath ordered things in the New Goſpel Adminiſtration. They under the Old Teſtament had thoſe that were their Elders of Cities and Towns, whoſe Power was bounded within their ſeveral Cities and Territories, and this ſet out by a Law. They were, in the caſe of Murther, to meaſure the Ground, and the Elders of that City unto which the Field a Man was kill'd in, was neareſt, were to intermeddle in it. And they had their General Elders for the Nation or People, diſtinguiſhed from the other, ſo that the extent of their Juriſdiction was general, proportioned to the extent of the Nation, who are therefore called the Elders of the People, in general, Luke 22. 66. and which were that Synedrim, and ſtate of Elders at Jeruſalem for the Nation, Acts 22. 5. and ſo diſtinguiſhed from thoſe they called Elders of a City, Ruth 4. 2. Judg. 9. 3. 2 Kin. 23. 8. And as in theſe Scriptures ſingly, ſo Ezra 10. 4. we have both mentioned with their Titles of diſtinction, Let the Elders of all the Congregations ſtand, and with them the Elders of every City, and the Judges thereof. The one had the whole Body of the Nation for their Juriſdiction; The other had only their ſeveral Cities. Thus alſo the bounds of Extenſive Power, as well as Intenſive, was ſet out by the Word of the Lord in the hand of Moſes. The ſeveral charge of four ſort of Levites, in the things of the Sanctuary, was divided amongſt them, to have care of, and the limits of extenſive power of Juriſdiction were fixed in the hands of four Men, over each of thoſe Companies and Bodies of thoſe Levites, as you have it, Numb. 13. 3. which were called Overſeers over the reſt, Numb. 11. 14, 22. The like might be ſhewn in the Order of Prieſthood; There was the intenſive power, which was equal among them all; And above the Levites (for order of Office) there was by Inſtitution, in the High-Prieſt (as Aaron) a further or intenſe power of Office, for ſome ſervices above the reſt: Which degree of intenſe power, was by the ſpecial call of God, Heb. 5. 4. And as of a power of intention, ſo of extention or juriſdiction, there was a ſetled appointment. There were ſet over ſeveral companies of Prieſts, Chief Prieſts that were in thoſe ſeveral circuits Superiour to them, Mat. 2. 4. and 27. 1. Acts 19. 4. 2 Chron. 36. 14 who were twenty four in number.

Secondly, In the New Teſtament, we find the ſeveral extent of Officers Power and Juriſdiction to have been matter of Inſtitution. Our ſcope is not here to ſet out what the particular Limits are, for that belongeth to an after diſcuſſion. But all that we ſhall now produce, is but to confirm the point in the general.

1. We find differing extent of Officers Juriſdiction to have been, not only matter of Inſtitution, but alſo to have, among other things, put a difference upon Officers, ſuch as in imitation hereof, the Pope and the Biſhops challenged in difference from ordinary Presbyters. This was one thing made an Apoſtle differ from an Evangeliſt, and an Evangeliſt from ordinary Paſtors and Teachers; that an Apoſtle had the care of all Churches committed to him, whereas an ordinary Elder was deſigned to an actual care of a Church, as a Governour in a Family is of his Houſe, 1 Tim. 3. 5. In the 1 Cor. 5. the Apoſtle ſtrongly intimates the difference by a compariſon, of his Power as an Apoſtle, and their's as Corinthians, and that this Power differed in extent; Do not ye (ſays he) judge them that are within? Namely, your ſelves, and within your own body; What have I to do to judge them that are without? His main ſcope is to ſhew, that in their proportion, they had power to judge all within their juriſdiction, as he had in his; and that as his juriſdiction was in the extent of it, limited to all within, that is, all Churches of Chriſt, in oppoſition to Heathen, and he had no power, he had nothing to do to judge them without, ſo theirs was alſo extended to all within themſelves but no further. I that am an Apoſtle (ſays he) have a limited Juriſdiction in my kind, and you in yours, and as I am to do my duty in my Juriſdiction, ſo you in yours. And if the Apoſtle would not ſtretch himſelf beyond his line (as his own phraſe is) of juriſdiction ſet out to him, then ordinary Elders much leſs are to go beyond their's.

2. The New Teſtament is expreſs for it. The Holy Ghoſt hath appointed the extent of Elders juriſdiction over their own Flocks, and to extend to every Soul therein in particular, even over the whole Flock whereof they are Elders, and that as a whole Flock: Importing an intire body of perſons committed to them. Therefore the extent of a like kind of power, any further, or over any other, ought much more to have a ſpecial Inſtitution, which ſo far as it wanteth, and cannot produce and ſhew the bounds for, from Inſtitution, ſo far it is a nullity. Now we have an expreſs Scripture concerning the Elders of the Church of Epheſus (whether it be Congregational or Presbyterial, or Dioceſan, we do not now diſpute, but ſhall afterwards try it out upon which the Inſtitution falls) that they all and every of them had an extent of power by expreſs commiſſion given them, to that whole Flock; and that the Holy Ghoſt ſet them over that whole Flock, as in charge commended to them, Acts 20. 28. Take heed to your ſelves, and to all the Flock, over which the Holy Ghoſt hath made you Overſeers: Men had not chalkt out the limits of this Flock, nor ſet them out this their bounds of power and care over it, but the Holy Ghoſt made them Overſeers, that is, conſtituted them, as Heb. 3. 2. it is ſaid of Moſes. And when 'tis ſaid the Holy Ghoſt made them, it is not meant in reſpect of the perſonal call of thoſe Elders, for ordinary Elders were not choſen by an immediate revelation of the Holy Ghoſt, as Paul, and Barnabas was, The Holy Ghoſt ſaid, ſeparate me Paul and Barnabas, Acts 13. 2. But ſo theſe Elders were not made here: The conſtitution, or making, or appointing, and inſtituting them, muſt therefore neceſſarily be meant of the Holy Ghoſt's appointing that office of Elders, in which they were, and that he ſpecially was the Author by his Inſtitution of that kind of deſignment of Elders, to an whole Flock as Elders, as their ſpecial charge, within which, to take care as Elders of all; and by vertue of which (they undertaking the charge) the Inſtitution and Commiſſion of the Holy Ghoſt fell upon them. As when a King hath granted a Charter to ſuch or ſuch Towns, to have ſuch and ſuch Rulers over each of thoſe whole Towns, though the King put not in the Officers; yet becauſe the Towns chuſe them, as authoriſed by his ſpecial Charter, ordering their choice, and deſigning their juriſdiction, it may in charge be given to them, that the King hath ſet them over this whole Town to govern it. And what is attributed to the Holy Ghoſt thus, reſpects not a prudential management only, but the Holy Ghoſt's Office being in a ſpecial manner to be the Author of that Word and thoſe directions of Chriſt, by which the Apoſtles did give forth the pattern of ordering and framing Churches to theſe Epheſians, and other Churches; therefore it is peculiarly appropriated to him to be the Author of all ſuch conſtitutions Eccleſiaſtical, and this by ſo peculiar a prerogative, as is as proper to him, as to Redeem is to the Son. And therefore Man may no more aſſume to ſet up a new kind of Officers, or appoint them the bounds of their juriſdiction in the Church, than he can Redeem us. And therefore as to the Work of the Holy Ghoſt to the Church herein, mention is made of it, parallel with Chriſt's Redemption, in thoſe Words, Take heed to all the Flock over which the Holy Ghoſt hath made you Overſeers, to feed the Church of God, which he hath purchaſed by his own blood. And one ſpecial thing, which is attributed to the Holy Ghoſt (as an Inſtituter and ordainer of matters in the Church, and for which we cite this place) is, as to conſtitute the Office of Elders, and the form of Government, that all ſhould take care in common, (for Elders, not Elder, are mentioned) ſo to fix alſo, the extent of their care, charge, and commiſſion, to all that Flock, the Church of Epheſus, whereof they are ſaid to be Elders, ver. 17. It is his Inſtitution that Elders ſhould take care according to the extent of their relation, to a particular Flock, as their whole Flock committed to them: And by vertue of this his ordination, had they the full power of Elders unto this Flock. So as that ſuch an office of Elders, (not one Elder only) that ſuch a flock, as an whole flock, ſhould ſtand in relation to theſe Elders in common, as the ſeat of their care and juriſdiction; all this was the ordination of the Holy Ghoſt. And if ſo, then the extent of juriſdiction over ſuch a flock is inſtituted, as well as the Office. Therefore if theſe all or any company of more Elders, will challenge a new and further extent of juriſdiction, than to ſuch a flock as Epheſus was, they muſt ſhew the like commiſſion for that extent from the Holy Ghoſt; for it was by a ſpecial commiſſion from the Holy Ghoſt, they had power of juriſdiction to this Flock. And by the ſame reaſon that their commiſſion over this flock was by the Holy Ghoſt, by the ſame reaſon they muſt ſhew the like new commiſſion, for a larger from the ſame Holy Ghoſt. We will only add this, that in caſes of this nature a negative argument holds; For when extent of Power depends upon a ſuperiour appointment and deſignment, no further power, than that affirmatively declares and extends the commiſſion, can be extended but with a nullity, yea, and with the greateſt danger; and ſo unleſs the Holy Ghoſt declares affirmatively the extent of Elders power as Elders, in a Body united (as here he doth) over a larger company of Churches, as the ſeat of their juriſdiction, all the Elders in the World met together cannot, nor may not challenge it. A defect of commiſſion affirmative is excluſive in this caſe. Yea farther in that he mentions this Flock, as that whole Flock they had commiſſion over, he thereby ſpeaks excluſively of any other, that as Elders in a Body they were to exerciſe authority in. As in the like caſe, if a King gave a Charter to a Mayor and Company of Aldermen, to rule ſuch a Company or Body of Men in a Corporation as an whole Body, they were ſet over, and it manifeſtly imported, not only that the extent of there power therein, being by his Charter therefore they muſt not exerciſe it as ſuch a company out of the confines thereof, without the like Charter renewed; but alſo on the contrary, he who is the founder of their Power, and of whom they hold it, in his Charter, makes that company committed to them, to be all, or the whole flock committed to their charge. This evidently argues, that his Charter ſets bounds to them, reſtraining them from taking on them to exerciſe their Juridical Power elſewhere. So far is it from what the Presbyterial Principles hold forth, that in an analogous way, they may make new extentions of Juriſdictions, and in the ſame form model them.

3. Add to this that the Holy Ghoſt hath been pleaſed to ſet limits and bounds of Power to ſeveral ordinary Officers in the ſame Church, wherein they are, in reſpect of a continual charge and ſervice, ordinary ſtanding Officers, and where all of them are in a joynt and common commiſſion for the Government thereof. And look what diſtinction there is in their Offices, and what is proper to each Office by his appointment, his command is anſwerably, that the one ſhould not, by aſſuming to exerciſe the part of another, intrench upon the Office of another; ſo, that he who is a Ruling Elder, ſhould not take on him to Teach as an ordinary Paſtor, no not in the Church where he bears the office of an Elder, But let him that Teacheth, attend on Teaching, he that Exhorteth, on Exhortation, he that Ruleth, on Ruling, Rom. 12. 6. Now if Chriſt hath ſo ſet theſe bounds in the ſame Church and Body, as for any to uſurp the others office, is that ὑπερφρονεῖν, or taking on him above his proportion, (which he condemns, ver. 3. and prefaceth that general Rule, with ſpecial aim to keep each in their due bounds and ſtation) then much more, or at leaſt as much, hath his care extended to ſet down the bounds of Extenſive Power, which they might know, that as in the ſame Church the Officers might not ὑπερφρονεῖν, ſo the Elders of other Churches ought not ἀλλοτριοεπισκοπεῖν, intermeddle as Biſhops in another's Juriſdiction, (to uſe the Apoſtle's Alluſion) nor ſtretch themſelves beyond their Line, as the Apoſtle would not. Thus I have proved, that the extent of Elders Juriſdiction is to be fetcht from an Inſtitution.

What is next to be demonſtrated is, That the conſtituting and ſetting out the meaſure and extent of that Church, which is to be the Seat of Government, is alſo matter of Divine Order, and ſo to be fetcht from an Inſtitution.

The Popiſh and Epiſcopal Divines, have appropriated that word, Order, unto the conſtituting a Church Officer, and unto his Miniſtry, whether Biſhop or Presbyter, &c. This, in their phraſe, they called being in Orders, which in the thing carried this with it, viz. Their being of ſuch Orders or Kinds of Offices, as Chriſt had by his Order appointed. But ſurely they narrowed the ſignification of it too much, for it may be extended to all Inſtitutions whatever, and among other, to this of Church-ſtate, and the conſtitution thereof, according to an Order ſet by Chriſt.

For, 1. In that order of the Church of the Coloſſians, in which the Apoſtle rejoyced, the right conſtitution and formation of their Church-ſtate muſt needs be a main part intended Order (ſays Biſhop Davenant) denotes their coadunation into one Body, namely, ſuch as in an Army uſeth to be, and ſo reſpects the whole Body it ſelf, as united and conſenting together, and ſo made the ſeat of Order. Now as the diſpoſement and appointment of the Bulk and Body of the Army it ſelf, and the form, the extent, the Wings thereof, is a matter of as much order, and as eſſential, as to appoint what Officers ſhall be over it, or what diſcipline in it: So 'tis here, and the order of this body of the Church it ſelf, muſt be by ſome hand, either Humane or Divine, and ſure, it was a Divine Order the Apoſtle here rejoiced in, as we have before ſhewed. And this will appear,

For 1. If we conſider the moment of this their Church conſtitution and formation, we ſhall find it was meet and neceſſary, that the Lord Jeſus himſelf ſhould appoint it; For this is the form, which the efficient always gives, as well as the matter. As in natural Bodies, the Form conſtitutes them, as well as matter, ſo in all bodies that are the Seat of Government, their orderly frame and form, wherein they are united according to a Law or Fundamental cuſtom, conſtitutes them ſuch (that is, as they are Politick Bodies) as much as being Men of ſuch a function or qualification and rank. Yea (as was ſaid before) ſince a judicial Power of Government, depends as much upon a formality of Order, as it doth upon a material qualification of perſons, hence therefore it is as neceſſary (as was ſhewed by many inſtances) that Jeſus Chriſt ſhould deſign out, and conſtitute, and authorize the form and order, and the bounds of his Church, as that he ſhould determine the qualification of the perſons or functions to whom the power is committed. For acts of Government, being to have his Bleſſing in a peculiar manner, to accompany them with a Spiritual efficacy, as well as Acts of Worſhip, it is as neceſſary for him to appoint the Form or Orders of that Body, in which he would accompany them with that efficacy, as it is to aſſign out the material ſubject of Perſons and Functions that are to execute it; And this our Brethren aſſent to, making it as neceſſary for Chriſt to Inſtitute the form of Government, namely, an Ariſtocracy of Elders, as to appoint the Function or the Perſons, namely, Elders themſelves. For it may fall out, and often doth, that for the matter hereof, the Members of a Church, are not ſuch, in reſpect of their lives and qualifications perſonal, as ſhould be in the Members of a Church, and yet becauſe they take on them to be a Church, profeſſing the Name of Chriſt, and Publick Worſhip, &c. hence Miniſterially they are a true Church, as truly as an Ungodly Profane Miniſter is a true Miniſter, not in reſpect of his perſonal qualifications, but as his office is an Ordinance which he bears, and whence it is that all his Adminiſtrations, while in that office, are not null nor to be reiterated. The like is to be ſaid of the Church it ſelf, whereof he is a Miniſter, it ſubſerves Miniſterially as a Church to God, rightly to have Baptiſm and other Ordinances of Chriſtian Communion Adminiſtred in it, ſo as thoſe Ordinances are not null, though Adminiſtred among ſuch as are generally corrupt and not fit matter to be a Church. That therefore theſe Ordinances come to be rightly and lawfully Adminiſtred, in this Church as a Church, muſt be by vertue of Chriſt's Inſtitution and Charter, that hath made ſuch and ſuch a company of Men, ſo and ſo meeting for ſuch ends and purpoſes, to be a Miniſterial Church to him, and to be that great Ordinance, which is the Seat of all other Ordinances.

2. It is no leſs than the Seat, the ἑδραίωμα, the grand Repoſitory as of Truth (as 1 Tim. 3. 15.) ſo of Government and Worſhip, and ſo it is the next receptive of all the Promiſes that are made to accompany the Ordinances Adminiſtred therein. We ſay it is the Seat as of Truth, ſo of Government and Worſhip; For by comparing the 5*th* and 14*th verſes* with that 15*th*, we ſhall find that the Church of God is the ſame with that Houſe of God, mentioned ver. 14 and likewiſe ver. 5. If a Man know not how to Rule his own Houſe well, how ſhall he take care of the Church of God? A Church, that is the ſubject of Government, as compared to an Houſe, wherein the Governour of a Family Ruleth. And it cannot be intended of the Church Univerſal, though univerſally, or rather indefinitely expreſſed (namely, for any or for all the particular Churches that are by God's appointment, the Subjects of Government, of an Elders Care and Rule, as a Family, (to which it is here ſet in compariſon) is of an Ocumenick or Houſhold Government) for the Church there ſpoken of, is ſuch a Church as ordinary Miniſters take an actual ſpecial care of, like as he that is a Maſter of a Family doth of his own Houſe more than all other. And this kind of Church to which the proper Care and Rule of Elders is limited, as it is the ſubject of Government, ſo it is the Seat of Truth, where by God's Ordinance it i held forth with a promiſe to preſerve it among them, and to provide, that it ſhall b ſown in the Hearts of the People of God, in that great Ordinance of Preaching b Paſtors, which are God's own Inſtitution, and accordingly Gifts are preſerved and con tinued. As, if the Officers, the Laws and Statutes by which a Colledge or Town is governed, be by Charter, the Incorporation it ſelf is ſuch much more: So now if th Church be the Seat of Officers, then truly if God Inſtituteth the Officers themſelve to feed the Flock, the Flock, over whom they are ſet, is appointed and ordained much more, and to it, as to an Ordinance of his ſetting up, the promiſe of preſerving Truth is made. And if it be the Seat of all Ordinances (As the Apoſtle ſays, 1 Cor 7. 17 I ordain in all the Churches) then the Churches themſelves which are in this reſpect the Ordinance of theſe Ordinances, where he repoſeth and betruſts them, and in which he bleſſeth them, is much more Chriſt's Ordinance.

Ch. XI.

Yea, 3. Whereas if either of theſe two, the bounds of Elders Juriſdiction, or the Churches over which they are Elders, are to be fetcht from Divine Right, it neceſſarily argues both, yet of the two, the Inſtitution of the bounds doth mainly and principally fall upon Church, primarily upon Church, and but ſecondarily upon the extent of Presbyteries. That of Church is the more fundamental meaſure of the diviſion of Juriſdiction, and that of Presbyteries proportioned thereunto. Thus when it is ſaid, The Apoſtles ordained Elders, κατ' ἐκκλησίαν in every Church, or Church by Church, 'tis not ſaid that Churches were made κατα πρεσβυτέρες according to the mould or caſt of Presbyters, but Elders were aſſign'd according to the mould, meaſure or latitude of Churches, and ſo the ſeveral bounds of Church power is limited by the diſtinction of Church. Thus the ſtyle of the Scripture runs, and Churches were ſetled and not Presbyteries; And the diſtinction was not then taken from the names of Claſſes and Presbyteries, Provincial and National Aſſemblies, &c. And in Rev. 11. (where John takes the meaſuring Reed in his Hand) what is the ſubject that Reed is applied to, and whereof the Meaſure is taken? It is the Temple, the Church, and not Presbyteries or Elderſhips; Therefore alſo Mat. 18. the ſtyle runs thus, Go tell the Church, which if it ſhould be granted to be meant of the Elders, in our Brethrens ſenſe, yet of Elders in relation to a Church, and in that reſpect ſo ſtyled, as they are relatively the repreſentation of ſome Church, within which their Juriſdiction is bounded. So that if there be any Inſtitution that limits the bounds of their Power, it muſt neceſſarily fall upon the bound of Church firſt. Again, our Brethrens reaſonings doth confirm this, for the chief weight of their Arguments for the extent of the Power of Elders over many Churches, in thoſe inſtances of Jeruſalem, Epheſus, &c. is taken from hence, that many Congregations are called one Church, and ſo, from the extent of Elderſhips and Elders, Power is derived, and meaſured thereby: And the chief Power, that is exerciſed, is to caſt out of the Church, i. e. to judge them within their circuit.

To conclude; If either of theſe, the Juriſdiction of Elders, or the meaſure of Churches are to be fetcht from Inſtitution, or ſet thereby, then both are to be ſo. The reaſon of this conſequence is clear from this (which was but intimated afore) that all power in Governours or any other company of Men what ever, muſt have a Territory, a Precinct, a ſeat in which, and among whom to exerciſe their power, and accordingly the extent or limits of that ſeat, is the true meaſure of the extent of theſe Governours Power and Juriſdiction, the one being reſolved into the other. If the one be Divine, the other is alſo; yea ſo as although the Holy Ghoſt ſhould not have expreſly and directly ſet down both, yet having done either, it is ſufficient, for the one follows upon the other, and ſo conquently (as was ſaid) if either be of Divine Inſtitution, they both are ſo. Now the reaſon of this conſequence is clear, not only from common reaſon in its parallel of all Juriſdictions elſe (wherein the meaſure of the Officers extent of Power, is reſolved into the meaſure of the Bodies of Men knit together in one, to ſuch or ſuch an extent, whether taken from place, or whatever elſe is made the boundary.) But further it may be particularly demonſtrated, that this Eccleſiaſtical Government is according to the order of the New Teſtament. For ſuppoſe the power of Government, whether in whole or in part, be in a company of Elders, yet it is not given them ſimply as Elders to their Perſons, no nor ſimply as a Presbytery abſtractedly conſidered (that is, as a company of Elders meerly as ſuch, continuing as they pleaſe over theſe and theſe Churches, or as few as they will) but what ever Juriſdiction is in them, is given in relation to a Seat; ſo as the diviſion and partition of Elderſhips and Presbyteries, &c. and their extent and compaſs, ariſeth from the partition and diviſion of Churches, and the extent thereof. And although what theſe due Limits of either are, is to be afterwards conſidered; yet theſe General do argue, that ſuch are to be found ſet out by the Holy Ghoſt.

CHAP. XII.

That it is the Prerogative of Chriſt's Power and Wiſdom, to determine the due limits of Churches, and the boundaries of the Elder's power.

THE Prerogative of Chriſt, the Inſtitutour, is as much ſeen in aſſigning a due extent of power to Elders; and in meaſuring out the juſt bounds, wherein their Authority is to be exerciſed, as in any thing which he hath inſtituted.

1. Chriſt uſeth his great Prerogative in ſetting out, and in conſtituting and bounding of the Church, that ſhall be the Seat of Government, which is his Houſe.

1. In all Civil Government (and if there be a Covernment Spiritual derived from Chriſt, this Parallel will hold) the Stamp of Royal and Supream Authority (which is the Fountain of Government) is ſeen and exerciſed in nothing, more than in the grant of priviledges unto a company of Men, dwelling together to incorporate for Government, as alſo in ſetting the Bounds and Limits of ſuch a Juriſdiction; and this is fundamental to all the reſt; And anſwerably ſpeaks the Scriptures. Thus in Heb. 3. 3, 4, 5. the Prerogative of Chriſt, above Moſes, is argued from this, as the Higheſt Branch of it, that Chriſt was he that Built the very Houſe it ſelf; and therefore anſwerably, this is for the Honour of Chriſt. If a King had an infinite number of Subjects ſcattered over all the World, which could not be governed in the whole or lump, but by parts, diſtinguiſhed and formed up into ſeveral Bodies knit together; were it not his Prerogative as much, yea, more, to appoint out the ſeveral Provinces or Territories, and the bounds thereof, which he would have Governed exactly, as to appoint the kind of Officers, or Acts of Government? Surely 'tis more. Therefore the Founders and Diſpoſers of the Bounds of Commonwealths at firſt, have been eſteemed Great, and more Renowned, than thoſe that gave Laws, or Eſtabliſhed the ſeveral kinds of Officers. It cannot be denied, but that there muſt be a Commiſſion from Chriſt, to empower a company of Saints (that live in a Neighbourhood together as Saints) to become a Church to Chriſt, not in a Myſtical Relation only (for that they are as Saints, though they become not a Seat of publick Worſhip, and of an orderly Government here on Earth) but further to become a Subject of publick Worſhip; and alſo to injoy a Government among them. As the things themſelves thus injoyed are ſuch, as nothing more concerns God's Glory in this World; and the good and benefit of the Saints, ſo their becoming a Church (which is the foundation of this; and unto which, as ſuch the priviledge of theſe is vouchſafed) is as great a favour and priviledge, as could be beſtowed on them; which therefore muſt needs hold as much upon a free Gift and Charter of Chriſt, the Head and Lord of his Church, as any other thing can be ſuppoſed to do. A Gift and Favour it is, over and above their being Saints and Members of the Church Myſtical, Electively beſtowed, for ſuch they might have been, and yet never have been ordered ſo to meet. As to be a Miniſter to the Church, it is a favour beyond a Man's being a Saint, or having Gifts, and none is to take that Honour to himſelf; but he that is called of God, and hath a Charter from him, for the kind of Miniſtry deſigned, (and therefore Paul makes that great Character of himſelf, from God's putting him into the Miniſtry) ſo for a company of Saints to take on them, the Title and Honour of a Church, and an whole Church (as every particular Seat of Worſhip and Government doth) which is the Title of the whole Univerſal Body of Chriſt, yea, to take on them the Relation of a Body, an whole Body to Chriſt; this muſt be by a ſpecial Charter and Warrant, what ever company of Men there be that do it. None can give that Title of Church, unleſs Chriſt hath given it, as none can take the Title of being a City in a Kingdom, or of being a priviledged place, but by Charter. If none can take on him the Dignity of an Earl, or of a Viſcount, or of any Officer of State, ſo no company of People can of themſelves, preſume to be a City, but by ſpecial Charter much leſs to be a Seat of Government, whereby they become not ſimply a company but a Body politick. Church, in this Senſe, is an Authoritative Word, and ſuch Authority ariſeth not from place, or any External Circumſtance, no nor from meeting but from a Charter that adds Authority, and above ſuch conſiderations, unto ſuch a company.

2. That it ſhould belong to the Prerogative of Chriſt, to determine the bounds of Elder's Juriſdiction, as much as to appoint the Elders or kinds of Officers themſelves, evidently appears by it's Parallel. When any Officers derive their Governing Power, from a Supream State; it concerns the Honour and Prerogative of that State, to define the extent of the Diviſion of their Juriſdiction, as much as the kind of Officers. If therefore it be univerſally found, to be the Wiſdom of all Supream Powers, with one conſent to judge and account this bounding as juſtly to concern their Prerogative; ſhall we think that Chriſt hath been leſs jealous and careful of his Honour herein? Surely either there is no Government at all defined by him, and no ſort or kind of Officers ſet and diſtinguiſhed by him (but all is alike, left to Humane Prudence, as in Civil Government, all theſe things alike are) or it muſt be acknowledged, that the one concerns the Honour and Prerogative of Chriſt to Determine, as well as the other.

I know it may be ſaid, that though it is neceſſary; yet it muſt be ſafely left to the Law of Nature, and to the Rulers of Prudence, for Men to appoint it; and that yet however the partition or meaſure of Churche's and Officer's extent is Divine, becauſe God hath appointed that to be the meaſure; which Men in their Prudence ſhall think good to appoint. But this is indeed, to make both the extent of Officer's Government, and the meaſure of the Churches, and the Seat thereof to be both Humane, even as the extent of the Power and Office of Civil Magiſtrates is; and is called, 1 Pet. 2. 13. And Magiſtracy is called an Ordinance of Man; becauſe the extent of it is left to Men to appoint, as they ſhall think meet. And yet, if God had either ſet the bounds and extent of Officers Juriſdiction, or of Commonwealths, (which are both conſiderable) then had both been of Divine Inſtitution; but ſince neither of them are ſo ſet, they are Humane, although in the General, God hath commanded that Magiſtrates ſhall have that meaſure of power, which Men and Commonwealths ſhall give them.

I will add one thing more, to ſtrengthen Chriſt's Prerogative in this caſe, that Spiritual Reaſon ſuited to the Nature of the thing it ſelf, falls in to prove both the bounding the Elder's power; and the bounds of Churches, as the Seat of Government.

1. I argue from the Riſe of the call of Elders. For though it were true, as ſome ſay, that all Saints as Saints, or as they are Myſtical Members of the Church Univerſal, have a full and immediate right, (without any further Relation of Order and Union to a particular Church) ipſo facto, to enjoy all Ordinances; yet take Elders or Miniſters, and Church Governours as ſuch; and they cannot be ſuppoſed to have it ſimply as Members of the Church Catholick, nor have they it from their having Gifts. The Law of Nature they cannot plead, why they ſhould have that power, rather than other Perſons in the Church; and Chriſt's Charter immediately they have, not as naming their Perſons. From whence then muſt it be, that they have their power as Elders, but from an Inſtituted Relation? This muſt be then ſome other inſtituted Right and Priviledge given them. They are given to the Church, and ſo their Riſe muſt be from their Relation to a Church; and by the ſame Reaſon, the extent of the Juriſdiction of their Office, muſt depend upon the like; for what elſe ſhould give them power over theſe, or theſe Churches, and not others? As it is aſſerted by ſome, that the power is given to Saints, yet not to Saints, but as formed up into Bodies; ſo thoſe that will ſay, it is given to Elders, muſt at leaſt acknowledge it is given to Elders, as knit into Bodies, and ſet over ſuch formed Bodies. So as their Juriſdiction doth depend upon a Relation to, and a riſe of call, either from that Body, or at leaſt into that Body. Which is more evident upon this further Reaſon, than that forementioned will reach to. Becauſe God makes not Elders, immediately by his providential converting and working on them, for ſo he makes Saints; and yet he gives not (ſay our Brethren) the power to them, but as united into an orderly Body by Inſtitution, in which they exerciſe each to other. And the caſe of Elder's power, is more depending upon an Order and Inſtitution; becauſe they are called to be Elders by a Deſignation of Men. Their being Elders, at leaſt, is in order to a relation, and not by a providential immediate working on them, or from God's giving them gifts; or by an immediate call, as the Apoſtles were choſen, afore God erected his Church, to that end to erect it. There muſt be formed Bodies, to give a Riſe to their call, by deſigning and accepting them; and there muſt be a relation to thoſe formed Bodies, which they are ſet over; which muſt be ſet out by Divine Appointment, which alone maketh Elders, and gives them their power; and ſo the Riſe of their call and their juriſdiction, is commenſurable.

2. I argue from the neceſſity of the thing it ſelf. Neceſſary it was, that the extenſive power of Elders, ſhould be determined (as well as the intenſive) either by God or Man. If by God, we have what is deſired. If by Man, either by the Civil Magiſtrates (and they were not Chriſtians, for above Three Hundred years after Chriſt) or by the Elders themſelves, and the Churches, as they ſhould agree it. Now ſee the inconvenience to leave this part of extenſive power, to be determined by Men; eſpecially by the Elders themſelves, whilſt Chriſt ſhould take on him to determine only the other. Of all ſort of power, Church power is that wherein, when Men have any part, or any pretence to it, they are more apt to be ambitious of extending it, than any other: Witneſs the Ambition of the Prelates, and the Uſurpation of the Pope, &c. And they are as apt to uſurp an undue power in the extenſion of Juriſdiction, as well as unlawful intenſive Authority, as we have ſeen in Popes and Biſhops: The latter have aſſumed an undue extenſive power, over whole Dioceſſes, Archbiſhops over Provinces, and Primates over Nations; and Popes have Uſurped ſuch a power over the Univerſal Church. This too large power they have all challenged, as well as too much intenſive power, by which the Biſhops appropriate Ordination to themſelves, which Presbyteries (ſay they) may not do; and the Popes lay a claim to Infallibility, &c. Now our Presbyterian Brethren, quarrel at that power in Biſhops, and the Biſhops oppoſe that Univerſal extenſive power in the Popes. Now the Pope challengeth this intenſive power of Infallibility, but upon this right, that having ſuch Univerſal Extenſive power, as the Apoſtles had; therefore God hath enabled him (as in that caſe he did the Apoſtles) with an Infallibility, ſuitable to that large extent of power; and therefore he began his Uſurpation, with the pretence only at firſt, to an Univerſal Power for extent, in his Title of Univerſal Biſhop; and that brought on the other, and crept up with it, and is ſupported by it, as the Ivy is by the Elm. Thus Alexander the Great, being Lord of all the World in his own Opinion, flattered himſelf into the conceit of Divinity, and of being a God, as annexed to that Crown Univerſal. So that Men are as apt to err this way, as the other, and as dangerouſly in the conſequence. It was therefore as neceſſary, that Chriſt ſhould ſet bounds to the Uſurpation of Men (who were to be truſted with Church-power) as to any thing elſe, it was neceſſary to prevent the claim of any one (as of Biſhops) to determine the form of Government in the Church, not to be Monarchical; it was neceſſary to prevent impertinent intermedling in Officers, to ſet the proper bounds of each ſeveral Officer. It was neceſſary to prevent a Lording over the Flock, by ſetting down the Acts of Government, proper to Elders. And ſo that a ſtretching themſelves beyond their Line, and an intermedling Authoritatively in Churches, not in their Juriſdiction might be prevented, it was needful be ſet down by certain Limits, the Territory of Church Government, ſeeing as true a Tyranny and Lording, might equally ariſe over the Church, by an undue extent of Juriſdiction, as by the exerciſe of unlawful and new invented Acts of Church Power. And all this was the rather neceſſary, becauſe that if it had been left to common Rules (as other things of outward order are) and by Humane Prudence to be ſhared and divided, the Clergy themſelves, and Elders of Churches, were like to Arrogate the Determination hereof, (as in all Ages, they have done) and if they themſelves were to be the allotters of it; they would be ſure to look to their ſhare, and that Wiſdom (they would have it left to) would be ſure to caſt it ſo, and mould the frame of the power of Juriſdiction, into ſuch an Order, as ſhould advance and ſet up their power over all the Churches. And herein the whole Multitude of Elders and the Clergy, are as apt (yea, more apt) to be tempted, as a few Prelates that uſurp it ſingly, becauſe the Dominion extends to the totum genus the whole kind of them. Meet therefore it was, that the Lord Jeſus himſelf ſhould fix this, and determine it as much as any thing elſe that he hath done.

Then 3. As to the bounding the Churches or Bodies of Saints and Elders, that ſhould be the Seat of Church Power, it agrees with all reaſon, that Chriſt ſhould keep this to him, as a part of his Prerogative; and that it ſhould depend on his Supream Authority. It cannot be denied, but that (as was ſaid) for a company of Saints to be a diſtinct fixed Church within themſelves, and ſo to be the Seat of either the Ordinances for Worſhip or Government, is a ſuperadded priviledge to their being Saints. If Paſtors and Teachers be Ordinances, and the gift of Chriſt, Epheſ. 4. then to be Churches, and the Priviledges thereof, in and by means of which, the Saints come to have a propriety in theſe; and a ſpecial relation unto theſe, is a gift alſo, and ſo dependeth electively upon God's Will; and ſo is the Subject of Inſtitution, as well as any other thing. And theſe Churches of Saints, are not only the object of Government, and in that reſpect the Seat of it; but the priviledge of Government, the endowment thereof is in a ſpecial manner conferred on the Churches, who are the Seat of it; and thereunto is the grant primarily made, and unto them the benefit redounds. Thus in Civil Bodies, that are the Seat of Government, the Priviledge and Charter of having a Government, reſpects the whole community it ſelf principally, and not the Officers; and therefore it is called the Corporation's, the Town's, or the Citie's Charter; and not the Mayors and Aldermen. As therefore the main Inſtitution or Charter, falls on the Seat it ſelf; and ſo upon the Officers, and the power in them for them; and indeed on both, by one and the ſame Appointment: So anſwerably the Scripture Stile runs ſtill upon the Church, taking in the whole community of Elders and People (So I ordain in the Churches, &c. ſays the Apoſtle) becauſe that is the Seat, the Subject of the Priviledge; and ſo of that Inſtitution, that beſtows and endows it. Yea, and therefore the promiſe of Chriſt's Bleſſing and Preſence, is made to the Church, that is the Seat of Government I will be preſent ſays Chriſt, in the midſt of you, &c. which if it ſhould be Interpreted of a company of Elders; yet it muſt be as relating to a Church, that is their Seat; and to which they have a ſpecial Relation, and ſo by vertue of the promiſe made to the Church it ſelf, Chriſt walks in the midſt of the Candleſticks, which are the Churches. And the efficacy of this Government and Cenſures therein, depends upon a ſpecial bleſſing; and the promiſe of a ſpecial Bleſſing, is always the companion of his own Inſtitution. As no Acts of Government, but ſuch as are inſtituted, have the ordinary promiſe of Bleſſing, nor in the Hands of any other than ſuch as Chriſt hath given the power unto, ſo all is confined too within that Seat, or extent of Jurisdiction he hath appointed; and upon this ground, he is ſpecially preſent with thoſe Officers, and thoſe Acts in relation; and in a reſpect to that Body or Church, whoſe Elders they are, and to whom the promiſe is principally made, and upon whom the Priviledge and Inſtitution chiefly falls. In this reſpect then, it muſt alſo as much belong to his Power and Prerogative, to ſet out ſome Bounds and Limits of theſe Churches, as to Inſtitute and Appoint, that there ſhould be Churches that ſhould have ſuch a priviledge. And the reaſon is, becauſe the Greatneſs and Worth of the Priviledge, doth more or leſs depend upon the ordering the extent and bounds of that Church; and will accordingly more or leſs, redound to the good and benefit of the Saints therein, as theſe are ſet and ordered. And therefore it was fit that the Saints ſhould owe this to none but the Wiſdom of Chriſt himſelf; yea, nothing concerns the ſubſtance of the priviledge more; and therefore if the priviledge it ſelf be from Chriſt, then this alſo. Take any incorporate Body, if it be a priviledge to any ſuch Body, to have Officers and certain Acts of Government appointed for and over them, then it is as much ſo too, to have alſo a circumſcription of Juriſdiction among themſelves, as they are incorporate. Yea, their priviledge and the benefit of it, depends ſo much upon it; that according to the ordering thereof, it is rendred greater or leſſer, or perhaps made as good as void; ſo that all depends upon the ſet Determination of it, and had need therefore to be ſet out by the Founder, as diſtinctly as any thing elſe. The benefit of all priviledges, depends upon bounds of encloſure, which if left common, the priviledge is impaired. The priviledge of ſuch a Body lies, that incluſively they ſhould have ſuch a Government and Officers within themſelves; and alſo excluſively be free in ſuch and ſuch caſes, from the Juriſdiction of others, and if there be not ſomething of either of theſe, there is no benefit or priviledge in having ſuch a Government or Officers; and yet neither of them can be accompliſht, unleſs the extent of the Seat of Government it ſelf, and Juriſdiction thereof, be ſet out and determined. And if ſo much of the priviledge depends hereon, (as apparently it doth) ſhould not he appoint, and ſet out the Limits of theſe Bodies, who is the Author, Giver, and Beſtower of the Priviledge it ſelf; to whom theſe Societies ſhould wholly owe it, and not to the Diſcretion of others; and who alſo takes on him as his peculiar, to appoint both the Acts of Government, and Affairs for it, and form of Government they ſhould be Ruled by, the one being of as much conſequence, as the other. Thus the proportion of the greatneſs of the priviledge and benefit of Government, ſo much depending on it, it is meet, yea, neceſſary that he that is the Author of this Government, ſhould define and fix it.

4. I ſhall further add another thing, which depends upon the former, that the Efficacy of all Eccleſiaſtical Power and Cenſures, and the Efficacy of them depending on ſo Supernatural a Bleſſing, to ſubject the Conſcience unto thoſe Cenſures (againſt which Men's Conſciences are apt to be as obſtinate and rebellious, as to any kind of puniſhment inflicted by Men) if it was as neceſſary that Chriſt himſelf ſhould ſet out the bounds of Juriſdiction, within the compaſs of which, Men were to be ſubject to thoſe whom he betruſted with the Government, as to appoint any of thoſe other things forementioned. For Men were like to quarrel at nothing more, than the right of power in thoſe that executed it; and nothing was more liable to exception, than is this. They ſtill might ſay, what have you to do to Judge me; unleſs you can ſhew from Chriſt, I am in the way of your Juriſdiction? Yea, how elſe alſo ſhould it be known to whom it belonged, and over whom to execute theſe Cenſures; and who were in fault, if they were not Executed? The Apoſtle therefore ſtirs up the Corinthians to it, as a Duty belonging to them; and convinceth them of their ſin (on whom it lay, and on none elſe) that they neglected to cenſure that offender, who was within their Juriſdiction, do not ye Judge them that are within? ſays he, 1 Cor. 5. 12. And ſo far as the Sword of the Spirit is not managed by that Hand, where Chriſt hath placed it, it will be naked. And if ſo much of the Bleſſing depends upon other things of as ſmall moment, as upon the True Form of Government, that Chriſt hath appointed, that is, to be Adminiſtred by the many (as Paul ſpeaks) and not by one Man, a Biſhop, and by Men in Office, and not the People only, though many (as our Brethren will ſay, in ſo much as for want of theſe, ſome of them do account the Act Null and Void, and to have been weakned, and as a wodden Dagger) Surely of theſe Cenſures, it may as well be imagined, they might receive a proportionable ſtrength from the Addition of the like Inſtitution of the extent of Juriſdiction, over thoſe that ſhould be within the reach of them, theſe being Acts of the power of Juriſdiction, as they have been commonly called in diſtinction from thoſe other of Doctrine, and the Sacraments. Sure we are that Paul ſeems to put as much of the promiſe of the power to accompany it upon this, that the Inceſtuous Corinthian, was within the Juriſdiction of the Church of Corinth; and ſo had the promiſe of Chriſt's power, to accompany that ordinance to that Man, as upon any thing elſe. For Chriſt ſtill bleſſeth his own ordinance, when in that right hand he hath placed it, and it may well be thought one, if not the main reaſon, why the edge of this Sword hath been found ſo blunt and dull (as Laurentius Andreas obſerves) that there hath been more power in one Excommunication in the Primitive Times, than in all ſince, though backt with the Civil Sword, becauſe it hath been in them, that have not had the right of Juriſdiction to execute it; that whereas Tertullian ſays, it was in their Congregations, Tanquam fulmen, as a Thunderbolt, it hath been, Brutum fulmen, to us a Thunderbolt of no force, Nulla Major nullitas quam defectus juris, nec Major defectus quam Juriſdictionis; There is no greater Nullity, than a Deficiency of Right, nor a greater Defect, than that of Juriſdiction.

In the Concluſion of the whole, I infer, from this Aſſertion are chiefly theſe Corollaries.

1. That our Brethren of the Presbyterian way, if they would prove and eſtabliſh

Ch. XII. eſtabliſh their ſeveral Orders and Claſſical, &c. Aſſemblies, they muſt ſhew us Inſtitution for them.

2. And in this Agitation, let thoſe, that can produce out of the New Teſtament, the Trueſt, Genuine, Natural Evidences of the bounds of an Inſtituted Church, as the Seat of Officers and Government, carry it.

3. That an Inſtituted Church, according to the true and lawful Bounds thereof, being the Seat of the Priviledge, all power of Elders and Officers is to be drawn down thereto, in the exerciſe thereof; and in caſe of Defect, Elders are to be choſen to ſuch a Church, and not that Church taken in to other Elders; and alſo all Acts of Juriſdiction, are to be exerciſed therein.

The Government OF THE Churches of Chriſt.

BOOK III.

Particular Congregations, having a ſufficient number of Elders and Officers, are compleatly enabled for all Acts of Government, and Excommunication it ſelf, within themſelves, as well as for Worſhip.

CHAP. I.

That a Particular Congregation of Saints, having a ſufficient number of Elders, is a compleat Subject of Church Power and Government, proved, 1. From the Power which they have to Examine, and Admit Members. 2. From their Power of Suſpending from the Sacrament. 3. From their being a perfect Political Church.

THis is agreed upon by all hands that ſome particular Church is ſuch a Politick Body, as hath intire power to caſt out by Excommunication; and a caſting out of that particular Body, Is conſequently a caſting out of all the reſt, by the Law of Communion of Churches, whether implicite, (one Church reverencing the judgment of another, till they ſee apparent cauſe to the contrary) or explicite by vertue of that their Aſſociation. Now the Queſtion is, what particular Body or Church it is, whether a fixed Congregation (whereof a Man is a conſtant Member) when it hath a ſufficiency of Elders over it, or a Presbytery of many Congregations?

Propoſition, One ſingle Congregation of Saints, having a ſufficient number of Elders, and Officers, is an intire Seat of all Acts of Government, and of Excommunication it ſelf, as well as of Worſhip. The truth of this Propoſition will appear, if we conſider the following Arguments.

Arg. I. If ſuch a Church with the Elders are ſufficient to Try and Examine, and ſo Admit ordinary Members, without the help of other Churches, then it is ſufficient to caſt them out. For,

1. The one is an affirmative act, the other a negative act, but both are acts of the Keys only turning ſeveral ways, the one opening the other ſhutting; the one is but judging initial Repentance, the other is a judging of occaſional Repentance for a groſs Sin. And there is as much reaſon you ſhould require as evident ſigns of Repentance from the ſtate of Nature, as you do in caſe of ſcandal. For as to men grown up, till they ſhew Repentance, there is this prejudice againſt them, that they are Children of Wrath by nature even as well as others.

2. The not admitting of Men to Church Ordinances, and not receiving them, is an act of as great moment to Men's Perſons, as to be caſt out. If then Churches be betruſted with the one, why ſhould not they be betruſted with the other?

3. If Excommunication were more to the Man Excommunicated, than a not Receiving by way of Admiſſion, yet Chriſt's Honour is as much concerned in what Members are taken in and owned for his Body, as in what are caſt out.

4. In all Common-wealths, to Enfranchiſe and to cut off belong to the ſame Power, yea to Enfranchiſe doth more appertain to it. For Parliaments only do Enfranchiſe Strangers, but yet lower Courts do cut Men off by Death, according to the Law. And it holds in all Bodies elſe, for in Families, they have power to take in Servants, and power to caſt out, and in Colledges to Admit and to Expell.

Object. But it will be objected, that to Excommunicate a Man, is to caſt him out of all Churches, and therefore it is the greater Act.

Anſw. 1. That ſimply alone doth not make it greater; for a Man is caſt out of all Churches, not formally but only conſequently, becauſe the Churches have and hold communion one with another. Let the proportion be held between Admiſſion and Excommunication in this, and they will be parallels; For if you will ſay that all Churches about have an intereſt, becauſe they are to reject a Man, that is Excommunicated; ſo they have an intereſt alſo in Admiſſion, to Receive him alſo, if he be admitted, and they caſt a reflection up that Church he is of, if they Receive him not by vertue of his Fellowſhip.

Anſw. 2. A Man in being ſo admitted into a particular Church, by vertue of that Fellowſhip, he is received occaſionally into communion with any other Church.

Arg. II. If a ſingle Congregation may Suſpend from the Sacrament, without conſulting others, then they may Excommunicate. This is evident,

1. From Presbyterial Principles, for thoſe that hold Excommunication to be but a caſting one off from Communion with the Church, and not to include a further thing, viz. a formal delivering him unto Satan, do make but a very ſmall difference between Suſpenſion and Excommunication. A Man Excommunicated they will admit to Hear, and therefore his being caſt out of the communion of the Church, is but a depriving him of the communion of the Lord's Supper, and that is alſo done by Suſpenſion: Only the one is but a Suſpenſion from a few acts, this from many; but both are till he repents.

If it be ſaid that the conſequent of Excommunication, is to avoid civil converſe, which is more than Suſpenſion. We reply, that even ſo it is in Suſpenſion alſo; for there is to be a withdrawing from a Brother, that walks inordinately before he is Excommunicated, 2 Theſ. 3. 6. Yea, becauſe a private Brother ought to withdraw converſe with ſuch an one, it is made a ground of Suſpenſion from the Lord's Supper by the Church, that the Church ſhould withdraw communion with him, and ſo Suſpend him.

Arg. 3. Add to this, That they who are a Politick Church, having a ſufficient Presbytery and Elderſhip, have a power to do all acts of a Church, and therefore to Excommunicate. But ſuch a Congregation is a Politick Church, and have a ſufficient Presbytery and Elderſhip.

1. They are a Politick Church, and the leaſt Church hath thus much power, that he that hears it not, let him be as an Heathen and a Publican, and the greateſt hath no more. All the Churches in the World may add Advice in difficult caſes, and a reverential Authority, but they cannot add Power, for that Chriſt hath given to a Church as it is a Church. The Presbyterial Divines themſelves do argue the Power of Excommunication in a Presbytery, becauſe it is a Church; only they ſay a Congregation is an imperfect Church. Whereas there is not one Scripture in the New Teſtament that doth ſo much as call a Presbytery, over many Congregations, a Church or if it did, there is then a greater thing to be proved (namely, this diſtinction which the Scripture hath not made) that a Congregation having an Elderſhip, is an incompleat Church Politick, and the other compleat. All Churches may be imperfect in reſpect of Moral Power, in ſome caſes, wherein they need advice, and ſo a Presbyterial Church may be imperfect, and may run into errour, and ſo may a Provincial, ſo may a National, ſo may a General Council. And if the imperfection of a Church ſhould lie in this, that it is ſubject to another Church, and accountable thereunto (according to Presbyterial Principles) then alſo a Provincial and a National Church were imperfect, and by that rule they alſo ſhould not Excommunicate. But in a word, the imperfection of a Congregational Church muſt lie, either in reſpect of what they are as a Church, or in reſpect of their Elderſhip.

1. Their imperfection doth not lie in their being a Church, for they have more of Church than any claſſical Meeting of Elders hath, becauſe they have both People and Elders alſo, and ſo partake of both ſorts, which the other doth not. And the Aſſembly have in their vote acknowledged, Mat. 18. to intend a particular Church, and the Elderſhip thereof to be a Church, although they do not acknowledge it only to be a Church, and our Reformed Writers call Congregations, Eccleſiæ primæ, the firſt Churches

2. Neither doth their imperfection lie in their Elderſhip, as being inſufficient, for if ſo, then either Elders are not an Elderſhip unto them for acts of Government; or they are not a ſufficient Elderſhip for all acts of Governments. But

1. They are an Elderſhip or Presbytery unto them for acts of Government. For where there are more Elders than one united in common, for acts of Government, there they are an Elderſhip or a Presbytery, but ſo there are here. This is evident in the inſtance of Hieruſalem, brought by the Aſſembly themſelves, for they therefore prove Presbyterial Government, over many Congregations, becauſe thoſe Elders met for acts of Government, and that thoſe many Congregations were one Church to thoſe Elders. Now in a particular Congregation, where there are more Elders than one, there is one Church, and there are likewiſe the Elders thereof, meeting (ſay we) with that Church for Acts of Government, and that may meet apart (ſay they) for ſome Acts of Government. Of a Biſhop it is ſaid, (1 Tim. 3. 5. If he do not Rule his own houſe well, how ſhall he take care of the Church of God? That is to rule it, as the anſwering of one phraſe to the other imports. And ſurely, if, by Biſhop there, be meant a particular Elder, having relation unto a particular Congregation, Ruling in that Congregation is there intended, and to ſuppoſe that the Houſe of God, that he is to take care of and to rule, is many Congregations, as met in a Claſſes, is too hard a ſuppoſition, eſpecially ſeeing the Argument is taken from ruling his Family, and he is placed in a Congregation; and if the Congregation ſhould not be meant here, by the Houſe of God, the compariſon went per ſaltum, by too wide a Leap.

2. As the Name Church, is applied to the Houſe of Meeting in our Language to this day, ſo this is an Argument that Congregational Meetings are Churches, and ſo the Name Rector, which imports Ruling, continues alſo to this day. Presbyters "(ſaith Bains) in antient time were in great difference, or of a double ſort, thoſe who are called, Proprij Sacerdotes, Rectores, Seniores, Minorum Eccleſiarum præpoſiti. The Biſhop had not, nor challenged not that reſpective power over them, which he did over thoſe who were numbred among his Clerks, who were helps to him in the Liturgy, in Chappels and Pariſhes which did depend on him, as their proper Teacher, though they could not ſo ordinarily go out to him. The firſt ſort had power within their Churches, to Teach, Adminiſter, Excommunicate, and were counted Brethren to the Biſhops, and called Epiſcopi or Coepiſcopi even of the Antient; But the Presbyters, which were part of their Clergy, they had this directive power over them, (indeed) the Canons Eccleſiaſtical allowing the ſame. And this power, in their own Congregations, theſe Rectors had, although they were Minorum Eccleſiarum præpoſiti, Rulers over leſſer Churches. And ſurely they, that are fit to Teach their own Congregation, are fit to Govern their own Congregation: The word to Feed the Flock, implying, feeding them by Ruling, as well as by Teaching. They that are Parents to beget, have power of the Rod betruſted to them; and if they be fit to govern foro interno, then much more with others foro externo. It is a more Apoſtolical Work to beget, and to plant, and to multiply, than to Govern Men being converted. That thoſe that ſhould be fit to gather a Church, and to bring it to fulneſs from ſmall beginnings, ſhould not be fit to govern it, and to reap the fruit of it, but that the power ſhould be in others that are extrinſecal to their Congregations, is abſurd to think.

Bain's Dioceſan tryal, Pag. 66.

In the claſſical Government, if they admoniſh not perſonally only, i. e. each Miniſter apart, but as a body in common then they meet for Acts of Government, and that in common, as united: And if there be no admonition in common, wherein they all join, as an act of authority of the whole, then ſuch admonitions proceed from the Miniſter alone, that doth admoniſh, and the other Elders therein are but as Cyphers. Now therefore when there is Elders, and theſe Elder united in acts in common, and thoſe acts are acts of Government, there muſt needs be an Elderſhip. And this the Reformed Churches do acknowledge, and the Commiſſioners of Scotland, in ther papers, do own this to be an Elderſhip. The Reformed Churches, in France, call it a Presbytery; and the meeting of the Elders over many Congregations, that they call the Claſſis. And what doth make a Claſſical Elderſhip to be a Presbytery; but that materially there are Elders, that have relation to thoſe Congregations, and that formally they are united for Acts in Common?

2. It is as evidently true, that they are a ſufficient Presbytery. Its true indeed, (as was ſaid afore, no one is ſufficient for any of theſe things? And thus for moral imperfections, power might be taken from the Apoſtles themſelves, who acknowledge this imperfection of themſelves; but they have a political ſufficiency.

For 1. If it be ſaid that the inſufficiency lies in the fewneſs of the number, and that in a Claſſical Presbytery, there are more; on anſwer to that, the Rule ſaith, Elders of the Church, and ſo ſpeaks of them indefinitely; and our Saviour Chriſt ſaith, in Mat. 18. Where two or three are gathered, which the Presbyterial Divines do Interpret of the Elders. In Acts 13. 1. there are three Elders mentioned at Antioch, and that they ordained two Apoſtles, Barnabas and Paul, who (ſay our Brethren) acted as ordinary Elders, when joyned together in the ſame Act, and yet they ordained alſo, Acts 14.23. Thus the Church of Coloſſe, had two Miniſters, Epaphras and Archippus, and yet that Church was compleat, Col. 2. 10. And they were but one Congregation; for they were Paſtors to them, who is a Faithful Miniſter to you, (ſaith he) and that in reſpect of Teaching; for (he ſaith) they had heard it from him, Col. 4. And when the Scripture hath not put the ſufficiency upon a number, why, if there be but two, ſhould they be excluded? And then too it may fall out, that as many Elders are in one Congregation, as in ſome Claſſes. It will not be denyed by our Brethren, that two Churches may aſſociate, and make a Claſſis; and one Congregation may have as many Elders, as theſe two ſmaller ones, that do aſſociate. And aſſuredly their ſufficiency doth not lie, that they have relation unto many Congregations; for that this ſhould have the influence into their ſufficiency, is hard to be ſuppoſed; beſides that this is but a ſecondary Relation, for the primary Relation is to their own ſeveral Churches, inſomuch, as it was ſometimes affirmed by our Brethren, that they were not Elders to all thoſe ſeveral Congregations aſſociated, but an Elderſhip only. And that is but an extrinſecal relation neither, whereas that relation, they have to their own, is more intrinſecal; becauſe they are choſen by them, and becauſe they perſonally watch over them, and are fixed amongſt them, whereas this is but raiſed by a meer Aſſociation. And therefore this relation that they are Elders over, many Congregations can add nothing to their ſufficiency.

2. Or elſe Secondly, their inſufficiency is ſuppoſed to lie, in not having all ſort of Elders, in this Congregational Elderſhip, both a Paſtor, Teacher, and Ruling Elder. But if ſo, then a Claſſical Elderſhip may be imperfect too; for in ſome of theſe, one that hath the Office of a Teacher or a Doctor, may be, is often found wanting; or what if all Ruling Elders were wanting, and only Paſtors met, were this an imperfect Elderſhip? And if all ſorts and kinds of Elders, were neceſſary to make up the ſufficiency of an Elderſhip or Presbytery Claſſical; then it were firſt neceſſary that every Congregation ſhould have all theſe ſorts of Elders; for a Claſſis cannot oblige the Congregations under them, that ſome ſhould have a Teacher, others a Ruling Elder, others a Paſtor, to make up all ſorts among them; and beſides the firſt relation of all Officers, being unto particular Congregations, as being primarily ordained for them (for none is an Officer ſimply, made for a Claſſical Church) therefore the Seat of all theſe ſorts of Officers, is Congregations: And ſo if that the Claſſis have all, it is becauſe the Congregations have all firſt; and if the Claſſes be bound to have all to make theirs ſufficient, the Congregations alſo are bound to have all to make theirs ſufficient.

3. Or elſe thirdly they are ſuppoſed Deficient, becauſe they want Ability. But 1. If they are Elders of the Church Univerſal (as ſome of our Brethren affirm) and of all the World; and accordingly fit for any work of Elders, as their Office is, it were ſtrange that a company of them in a Congregation, two or three, or more, ſhould not be fit for all the buſineſs in that Congregation.

But 2. Their inability muſt lie either in want of skill, or want of power. If in want of skill, it muſt be either skill to diſcern the proof of the Fact, for which

Men are to be excommunicated ; and if ſo, then they are unable to Admoniſh alſo ; for they ſhould not Admoniſh, but upon proof of the fact ; and to diſable a Congregation, People and Elders, to do that, which any Jury of a few Men uſe to do, ordinarily in point of Life and Death, is very hard. Or elſe their want of skill muſt lie in diſcerning, whether the ſin be a ſin of that Nature, that it deſerves Excommunication for the matter of Fact, if it be not repented of ; but they cannot be ſuppoſed to want skil in that, for then they cannot likewiſe ſuſpend from the Sacrament, for they are to ſuſpend but for ſuch ſins, as, if not repented of, would deſerve Excommunication. Or elſe they muſt want skill to judge of Repentance, or the want of it ; but ſurely if a Brother may be able to Judge of the Repentance of a Brother, in caſe of a flagitious ſin (which in publick he ſhould be Excommunicated for, if he Repented not) then a Church and theſe Elders, may be able to Judge of his Repentance of Publick ſins. Yea, if a particular Eldérſhip (according to Presbyterial principles) do find that the Man Repenteth upon their Admonition, though the ſin be groſs and heinous, they may forbear to bring him to the Claſſis, and receive him again, or elſe their Admonitions are in vain ; and all muſt be brought however to the Claſſis. And if they may Judge of his Repentance, ſo as to prevent Excommunication, then they may as well judge of his Repentance, or of his Obſtinacy, when he is to be Excommunicated.

If it be ſaid that the fault may be ſo Atrocious, that they cannot ſo well judge of his Repentance ; the Anſwer is,

1. Then all ſuch ſins ſhould be brought immediately to the Claſſical Presbytery, and not to the particular Elderſhip at all ; for them to Admoniſh, or to deal with him in order to Repentance.

2. The more Heinous the Fault is, the more apparent it is ; and therefore the better they may judge of it, and the eaſier an Excommunication ſhould be for it.

Or 2. Their Inſufficiency muſt be ſuppoſed to lie in want of power.

But 1. If they be a Presbytery in a Church, they muſt needs have Power and Authority to do all that a Presbytery is ordered for, or is aſcribed to it. A Presbytery and Presbyterial Acts, are Relative and Mutual.

2. All Chriſt's Ordinances and Means, are ſufficient unto his end. As a Miniſter, if he be a True and Lawful Miniſter, hath ſufficiency both of Gifts and Power, to do what belongeth unto him as a Miniſter ; as to Acts of all ſorts, and the leaſt, as well as the greateſt : So if Chriſt do Ordain a Presbytery, to Govern as a Presbytery, it is a perfect means for all Presbyterial Acts ; for God's Appointments are perfect, and God's means for Government, are as compleat as his other means of Preaching and the Sacraments. A Presbytery, if it be a Presbytery, is as perfect, as a Presbytery, as a particular Miniſter, is as a Miniſter. A Miniſter, is a compleat Miniſter, not to Preach only, but to Baptize ; not to Baptize only, but to Adminiſter the Lord's Supper ; not to Preach one part of the Council of God, but all ; not to Adminiſter the Bread only, but the Cup ; and if he is the Miniſter of one Sacrament, then alſo of another ; for there are no ſuch Miniſters as the Biſhops, Deacons. Now look what a Miniſter is in his kind, that Elders are in their kind, and if they have power to Admoniſh, then power to Excommunicate.

3. If they be fit for one Act of Government, then for all Acts, of all ſorts and kinds (for of them we ſpeak now) we do not ſay in all caſes ; for a caſe may be too difficult for them, and then they ſeek Advice, but we ſpeak of the kinds. If they be able, they have the power, in one as well as the other, which is proved.

1. Becauſe our Presbyterian Brethren's own Arguments, do run from inſtances of one part of Government, to all. They cannot give Inſtances of all Acts of Government done by thoſe, that they ſuppoſe to be Claſſical Churches ; but they argue from ſome few, and thoſe leſs than Excommunication, as in the inſtance of the Church of Jeruſalem, they argue from the leſs, from having received Alms, that they meant to prevent a Scandal. Yea, they argue that becauſe the Synod in Acts 15. might with an Authority Doctrinal declare, that therefore they might Excommunicate. So we argue, if a Congregational Presbytery may do all theſe, then they may Excommunicate ; and it is their right to do it. Our Presbyterian Brethren, can give no inſtance of any one that did all ; and until they have an Inſtance, that Claſſical Churches did all theſe, it may ſtill be ſaid, that Claſſical Churches be imperfect ; and how then ſhall they or we, know what is a perfect Presbytery, and what is not ? To give them power to Admoniſh, to Suſpend from the Sacrament, and not to Excommunicate, is to make them imperfect. If then they are furniſht with power, they muſt likewiſe have Ability, for what Chriſt gives power to do, to that he gives ability ſufficient.

If it ſhould be ſaid, that Congregational Elders do but Govern in foro interno, I anſwer 1. That's the ſame that the Biſhops allowed, only unto Paſtor of Congregations, affirming themſelves had only the external Judicature. Then 2. They rule more than in foro interno, for they ſet up an outward Judicature in a Church of Elders, united in common, even while they Admoniſh in common, and ſuſpend from the Sacrament in common.

So that to conclude this Argument, to ſay that they are inſufficient for Ability and Power; it is 1. A wrong to Chriſt, in Reproaching his means, as inſufficient to his ends. It is 2. A wrong to the Presbytery it ſelf; it is enough to take away the power from them; but to take away a Man's power and his Eſtate, and make him a Ward under pretence, that he is not able to manage it, or hath no power to do it, is the greateſt wrong that can be. 3. If ſome Elders and Congregations be found inſufficient, then they are inſufficient to be Elders, put them out, or let them only be Wards, ſhall the Law be general for their ſakes? 4. If you ask what is a ſufficient Elderſhip? We ask you what is an inſufficient? And wherein inſufficiency lieth? And let not Churches be kept imperfect (when it is their due to have a ſufficient Elderſhip) that under the pretence of that, the neceſſity of Presbyterial Government may appear. But as in caſe of Separation, the Aſſembly hath affirmed, that if there be a want of officers, or the like, it is required that there be a ſupply, and that there be not a Separation; ſo in Congregations, let there be a ſufficient Elderſhip, let there be a ſupply, let not the power be taken away. For thus the Biſhops took away Ruling Elders, and did leave but one Paſtor in a Congregation, that ſo they might have the better pretence to govern, and to do all themſelves.

CHAP. II.

The fourth and fifth and ſixth Arguments, to prove a ſingle Congregation, to be a compleat Subject of Eccleſiaſtical power, drawn 1. From being a Body of Chriſt compleatly ordained, 2. Becauſe Worſhip and Government are Commenſurate. 3. From the Nature of Excommunication.

Arg. 4. THEY, that are a Body organized with all the Members, have all the priviledges of a Body; but a Church having a company of Elders, eſpecially if of all ſorts, is a body to Chriſt, and compleatly organized. The compleatneſs of the Natural body, lies not in the multitude of Members, but in having all. And that ſuch a body thus compleat, ſhould not have all power that a body can be ſuppoſed to have over its Members, is very ſtrange. And again; that power and liberty, which is to be given to every brother in his proportion, is to be given to every compleat body of Chriſt, in the like proportion as it is a body. Now every brother hath power as a brother (and as it is his Duty) to withdraw from him he doth judge to walk inordinately, 2 Theſſ. 3. 5. And then every body that is rightly organized, muſt therefore have power as a Body, to a ſuitable proportion, to cut off any rotten Member; and if it can heal it ſelf, to do it of it ſelf, the Law of Nature will teach it, as it is a Body ſo to do. That is not a ſound Body, that hath not ſtrength to purge out it's own Excrements. All Bodies and Societies of Men, have power ſtill within themſelves, to caſt out any who are Deſtructive to the Society, ſo Families have, (every lump purgeth out its own Leaven) and every particular Company in a Greater City, have that power ſo far as their own company reacheth.

The power which the Synagogues had and exerciſed, Congregations ſurely may have now. The Synedrim might give the Law in the Abſtract directing, who and what kind of Perſons were to be caſt out, and for what; but they medled not with the particular Sentence, and applying of it to any Man; nor did the Towns and Cities that judged in their Gates. Neither were the Synagogues bound to adviſe, but only when the caſe was difficult, which is clearly by this; that the Jews had Synagogues in all the Cities of the Gentiles, diſperſed up and down the World, and had their ſeveral Rulers in them; and they were not bound to come up to Hieruſalem, to the Synedrim. Theſe Synagogues, though they could not caſt out of the Temple, yet caſt out of themſelves they might; and therefore a Man was caſt out of the Synagogue.

As we argue in the caſe of Baptiſm of Children, that God hath not ſtraitned, but rather inlarged his Grace, and the Liberty and Promiſes thereof under the Goſpel; ſo we do argue here, that the liberty of ſuch Aſſemblies, (as the Synagogues were) which Chriſt hath now Inſtituted, muſt have all the priviledges they had, and ſo much the more, by how much, that the Aſſemblies of the Saints now are more Noble, than Synagogues were then; they being called a Temple, the Houſe of God, a Holy Nation, and a Royal Prieſthood; and upon every Aſſembly, under the Goſpel, God Creating a Cloud and a Pillar of Fire, theſe have all the promiſes and priviledges, that the Temple and the Nation of the Jews had, therefore ſurely as much as the Synagogues. The Prophet Jerem. 3. 16. makes the priviledge of every Church, under the Goſpel, to be as great as that of the Temple at Hieruſalem, where the Ark was, the place where God did chooſe for the Synedrim to ſit in, and to govern that Nation. In thoſe days, (ſaith he, ſpeaking of the times of the Goſpel) they ſhall ſay no more the Ark of the Covenant of the Lord (which therefore muſt needs be meant of the times of the Goſpel; for the Ark of the Covenant of the Lord, was the chiefeſt priviledge, under the Law, till Chriſt) neither ſhall it come into mind, neither ſhall they remember it, neither ſhall they viſit it, neither ſhall that be done any more; But in ſtead thereof, he takes one of a City, and one of a Family, and brings them to Zion, takes not the Nation, but Selects ſome out of the Nation; and gives them Paſtors according to his own Heart, as a greater priviledge than that of rhe Ark, and therefore it is meant of Congregational Aſſemblies; for to them Paſtors are fixedly and properly given to feed them with Knowledge and Underſtanding. And if that every Congregation enjoyeth a greater priviledge than the Ark of the Lord, in having ſuch Paſtors; then ſurely it ſhould alſo be governed by them, as the Synagogues alſo were by their Rulers, who were called Rulers of the Synagogue, not of the Synagogues; for each Synagogue had more Rulers than one, for the Government of them, as they were a Synagogue, Mar. 5. 22.

Arg. 5. If the Seat of Worſhip and Government be commenſurable, and of equal extent: Then a ſingle Congregation, as it is the Seat of Worſhip, ſo of Government. Now for Worſhip, none elſe do meet but Congregations; and if the Temple, Altar, and Worſhippers, be meaſured by the ſame line, Rev 11. the power that is in the Temple, is likewiſe ſo meaſured. If Altar and Judicature, be of like extent alſo (as they are, ſince the end of Diſcipline is to keep Worſhip pure) then where the conſtant Worſhip is, there ſhould be conſtant Diſcipline, eſpecially if Excommunication be a part of Worſhip, as was ſaid afore, as well as Admonitions are: It cannot be otherwiſe, but that the proceedings of the whole Diſcipline, Admonitions, and all, ſhould be before the whole Church, which is as well to be edified by it, as by Preaching; and therefore particular Congregations are to be the Seat of it: Thus we ſhewed before, that the main end of a Church was Worſhip, and that Diſcipline was the Appendix thereunto, to keep the Worſhip pure; and that ſo Chriſt under the Goſpel, had made the bounds of a Church, to be meaſured by that of Worſhip, Rev. 11. 1. Meaſure the Temple and the Altar, and the Worſhippers; and ſo all that belongs unto it. And this Worſhip and Government for the State of it, are of equal extent, commenſurable one to the other, which is made out by this; that all ſorts of Churches that ever were, had Worſhip and Government of equal extent. Before the Law, when there was a Church in the Houſe, and it went in a Family-way, as the Worſhip was in the Family, ſo the Diſciple was in that Family; and Excommunication was a caſting out of that Family; ſo in Adam's Family, it is ſaid of Cain, that he fled from the preſence of the Lord, that is, from his Father's Houſe. When as God did make a Nation a Church, the Church of the Jews (as 'tis called, Acts 7.) in the Wilderneſs, they did ſet all their Tents about the Tabernacle, and ſo, as one Church, they ſaw the Sacrifices. And when they were at Hieruſalem, they had anſwerably a National Worſhip, they had Ordinances, as they were a National Church; therefore the Synedrim was to ſit in the place that God ſhould chooſe, to be there for Government, as well as he appointed the Sacrifices to be there. And for that Moral Worſhip in the Synagogues, ſo far forth, as they were the Seat of Worſhip, Prayer, and reading the Word, &c. ſo they had alſo caſting out of the Synagogues : And although the Synedrim might make Laws, for what ſins to do it; yet the exerciſe of it was by the proper Rulers, who are called therefore Rulers of the Synagogues. It is therefore Bains, his Argument againſt Dioceſan Churches, that there could be no ſuch Churches, becauſe there was no publick Ordinances of Worſhip, as was in the National Churches of the Jews, unto which the Males came. And yet the Epiſcopal Government kept up this principle, for as they had a Dioceſan Government, ſo they had a Cathedral Worſhip in the ſame place, as in a Mother Church, like that Repreſentative Worſhip of Sacrifices in Hieruſalem; and they had ſet meetings at them, to which all came up ; and therefore their principles, in this, was better than this of the Presbyteries, for they had a Worſhip and a Government, that was commenſurable.

Bain's Dioceſan Trial, pa 69.

Object. 1. The performing of Acts of Worſhip by a Miniſter, belongs to the power of Order; but the power of Juriſdiction is a further thing. A Miniſter may Adminiſter the Sacrament, and perform a work of Order alone ; but he cannot Govern alone, but he muſt be joyned with others; and therefore Worſhip and Government are not commenſurable.

Anſw. The queſtion is not of the power, but of the extent of the State both of Worſhip and Government. He that is a Miniſter, and can alone perform an Act of publick Worſhip, yet he muſt do it in a publick Congregation; and ſo although it be done alone by his perſon, yet not beyond the extent of a Congregation, but ſtill according to the limits and bounds of it. Now the Seat of Government, and the extent thereof, is commenſurable to the Seat of Worſhip ; ſo as although he cannot perform an Act of Government alone in the Congregation, but with others; yet ſtill thoſe others are but to be thoſe, who belong to that Congregation, whereto he is a Miniſter, or an Elder for performing Acts of Worſhip.

Object. 2. The Apoſtles had a Latitude of power over all ſort of Churches, and therefore the extent of Worſhip, and the power of Government, are not commenſurable.

Anſw. Although the Apoſtles had, in their Perſons, power of Government over all Churches; yet ſtill they exerciſed that power (for acts of cenſure) but when they were, in any of thoſe Congregations, not in a conſiſtory out of thoſe Churches, but as perſonally preſent in the Churches. And therefore the Apoſtle ſaith, When I come, I will do ſo and ſo; and ſhall I come with a Rod? 1 Cor. 4. 19, 20, 21. And when they came to any particular Church, it was an Apoſtolick priviledge proper to them, which is not communicable to other Elders, they were συμπρεσβύτεροι fellow-Elders, (as Peter's Phraſe is, 1 Pet. 5.) in every one of thoſe Churches; and did for that time concur in the Government of that Church, though with the intereſt of an Apoſtle. So as ſtill de facto, the exerciſe of all their Government, was in a Congregation; and as they Adminiſtred not the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper alone, or out of Churches, ſo nor did they Excommunicate, but as joyned with a particular Church; nor did they chooſe Officers or Elders, but as preſent with Churches, whom theſe were to be Officers to. They might give Doctrinal Directions to Churches, concerning Government, in which they were infallibly guided by the Holy Ghoſt; but acts of Government, they performed not, but in the Churches themſelves, and as concreted and becomming one with that particular Church; and therefore the Churches remained as diſtinct Churches, notwithſtanding they were under Apoſtolical Government; and many Churches are no where called one Church, becauſe under an Apoſtle.

Arg. 6. That a ſingle Congregation, with it's Elders, is an intire Seat of Government, is proved from the Nature of Excommunication it ſelf.

1. Excommunication relateth to Communion, and Communion with Churches is either fixed, and in a conſtant way, or occaſional. To throw a Man out of occaſional Communion, is not Excommunication, it is but a ſecondary act, that ſuppoſeth firſt to throw him out of a fixed Communion. It is but Non-communion, or denial of Communion, and keeping of him out of it, as all other remote Churches may do. And the Execution of the act, is from the power of Chriſt; and that promiſe which he hath made, I will be in the midſt among you, when thus gathered together, Mat. 18. 20. whereas the way of Presbytery claſſical Excommunication, is as if the congregation was gathered in the Name of the Pretbyters, and with their power, and that they could promiſe to be in the midſt among them. Excommunication therefore, formally ly and properly is a caſting him out of a fixed Communion ; therefore that Church, which actually doth hold a fixed communion with him, hath that power, and to them properly muſt belong the caſting of him out. Do not ye judge them that are within, ſaith the Apoſtle? 1 Cor. 5. 12. And ſo far as any were Within to them, ſo far they had Power over them. Now to that particular Congregation, whereof a Man is a Member, a Man is ſo Within, in reſpect of a fixed communion as to no Church elſe in the World ; there is therefore a Power of throwing of him out, belonging to them, which belongs to no Church, nor unto all the Churches in the World. Other Churches can but throw him out of an occaſional communion as he ſhall come to them, and therefore anſwerably, their throwing of him out muſt be but occaſionally, as he ſhall at any time offer to come to them. Hence therefore the formal act of Excommunication muſt needs be proper unto them, whom he holdeth a fixed communion with. Add to this, that other Churches can throw him out, but of that communion which he holds with them, and the communion ordinarily, he holds with them, is but as being a Member of a Church aſſociated with them (ſuppoſing ſuch an aſſociation) and as far as their intereſt goes, ſo far their power may go, they may throw him out of their aſſociation, but no further. But Excommunication is a throwing of a Man out of a fixed communion of all Ordinances for Worſhip, now ſuch a communion he holds not with other Churches. They may indeed throw him out of their own Within, which is, for the fixed part of it, but a matter of aſſociation for Government ; but the Congregations, Within, are in reſpect of ordinary communion in Worſhip. Now anſwerable unto their Intereſt is their Power ; and therefore Excommunication is to take him from the midſt of them (from among you, 1 Cor. 5. 13.) with whom he did uſe to Worſhip. The very import of the word Excommunication is Excommuni cœtu, the formal and direct act therefore of Excommunication is to throw him out of that fixed communion, which he had. It is a caſting out of all other Churches conſequently, yea out of the viſible Catholick Church conſequently, but formally it is only out of that particular Church whereof he is a Member. Other Churches, by vertue of their communion together, may ratifie it by approving it, but that Church, which the act properly concerns in the formality of it, is a particular Church whereof he is a Member, and therefore anſwerably the formal power muſt lie there. And although this Government of Chriſt hath been never ſo much corrupted by a power ſet over Congregations, yet ſtill the act of Excommunication (or at leaſt the execution) hath been performed in the particular Churches whereof a Man is a Member.

2. Where and by whom that act is done, that excommunicateth a Man, there the power and the main of the power muſt lie, (for the ſubſtance of the act) and there alone. But in particular Congregations, and by the Elders of the People thereof, that act alone is done, by which a Man actually is cut off from communion with all other Churches, and whereby he is excommunicated ; Therefore that particular Congregation is the only, or at leaſt the main ſubſtantial ſubject of that power, whereby a Man is excommunicated. We have an inſtance in the Church of Corinth, when the Apoſtle directs them to deliver that Man unto Satan, when they were met together. Whether the Man was excommunicated, or no, it matters not, however the direction was given, and the direction falls upon the very act it ſelf, when and where it was actually to be executed and done, and in them it puts the power ; When ye are met together in the Name, and with the Power of the Lord Jeſus, deliver ſuch a Man to Satan, 1 Cor. 5. 4, 5. There's the Act, and there's the Power, all meet together, and he ſpeaks of the ultimate act of Excommunication ; and where, and in what Meeting that is to be done amongſt them, there the power reſideth.

1. In all Spiritual Ordinances, the power is inſeparable from the act : And therefore to make the power whereby a Man is excommunicated to lie in one Aſſembly, and the act of excommunication to be performed in another, is to divide what Chriſt hath put together. He that baptizeth hath the power of baptizing, and he that preacheth of preaching, and ſo thoſe that actually excommunicate of excommunication, and the act is more than the ſentence. If therefore they have the greater committed to them, they muſt needs have the leſs. And,

2. Whom Jeſus Chriſt betruſteth with the act, he muſt betruſt them the power, becauſe his power, whereof their's is but the execution, doth accompany their act, and therefore Paul ſaith, when you are met with the Power of the Lord Jeſus, give ſuch an one unto Satan. It is not as in Civil caſes, there the power lies in the Sentence, but here in the Execution. And indeed the ultimate Sentence lies in the Execution, and is all one with it, when in the preſence of all the Church it is ſaid, We deliver this Man to Satan. And therefore,

3. In Scripture the Power is expreſſed by the Act. Paul ſaith, Whom I did deliver unto Satan; and ſo ordination is called the laying on of the Hands of the Presbytery: The Power of the Presbytery is expreſly their act; and therefore where the Act lies, the Power muſt lie.

Now we ask this Queſtion, Whether a Man be actually Excommunicated and delivered up unto Satan, until he is ſo delivered up at a Meeting of that particular Church whereof he is a Member, Elders and People being preſent? We are not now inquiring what proceedings are to go before, preparatory hereunto; but this is that we contend for, that where the Act is done which ultimately Excommunicates him, there the ſubſtance of the Power lies.

Whereas it may be anſwered, that the Execution is in the Congregation, but the Sentence is in the Presbytery; as in Civil Courts it is where the Man is Sentenced by the Judges, but actually Executed by the Sheriffs. We reply,

1. That Inſtances of Civil proceedings will not hold here. For the Sentence by the Judge is that authoritative Act, as by him that hath the Power in Law to cut the Man off; but to Execute the Man, to put him to Death, that's an act of Nature which any Man can do, though he, that doth it, is to do it lawfully, by vertue of the Sentence; but the Act, whereby the Man is in Law kill'd, is the Sentence, and therefore he is from that time Civiliter Mortuus, dead in Law. But ſo it is not in this Spiritual act of binding of Sin, and of delivering unto Satan; there muſt be a power, and an authority that is in the perſons that doth accompany them, and that as met together. And the Execution of the Act is from the Power of Chriſt, and that promiſe which he hath made, I will be in the midſt among you, when thus gathered together, Mat. 18.20. Whereas the way of Presbyterial Claſſical Excommunication, is as if the Congregation was gathered in the name of the Presbyters, and with their Power, and that they could promiſe to be in the midſt among them. And however there may be, many preparatory acts unto it, yet the thing is not done till it be done, by them that have the Power. And therefore if the Claſſical Presbytery will challenge it, they muſt all be preſent, but if the Congregation muſt do it, it is an evident argument that the power lies there.

2. If the Claſſical Presbytery had the power hereof, then when they do Sentence him to be Excommunicated, they ought actually to Excommunicate him, and compleat it, for to ſay that the power ſhould be in them and not the act, when as thoſe that do the act are to meet and gather together in the power of the Lord Jeſus, is very inconſiſtent. If they do not actually Excommunicate, what they do muſt be only a doctrinal direction, that the Man deſerveth to be Excommunicated, ſuch as the Apoſtle put forth in caſe of neglect, when he gave his judgment, I have judged already (ſaith he, 1 Cor. 5.) Let ſuch a one be delivered unto Satan, &c. But he acknowledgeth the power to be in them, for ſaith he Do not ye judge them that are within? And therefore he ſaith not, I have delivered him, but that he be delivered. And it is in this as in caſe, ſuppoſe of Baptiſm, that a Miniſter had neglected his duty to Baptize one, and the Apoſtle had ſent to him, to Baptize him, and given his Sentence, ſuch a one ſhould be Baptized, and ſhould further preſs it, do not you Baptize ſuch and ſuch a one, do not you uſe to do it? So he ſpeaks here, Do not ye judge them that are within? Do you not uſe to do it? Now as in this caſe, the queſtion will be whether the power of Baptizing lay in the Apoſtle or in the Miniſter, that upon this doth Baptize? Certainly in the Miniſter, and he doth that by an immediate commiſſion from Chriſt. For he that doth the ſubſtance of the Act, in him the power lies; though he may be directed in a caſe of neglect by an Apoſtle when alive. And ſo now tho' a particular Congregation in caſe of a neglect may be called upon, and urged by other Churches, yet ſtill in the one caſe as in the other, in them the Power lies by whom the ſubſtance of the Act is done. Neither yet do we hereby intend to give that power to a Claſſical Presbytery that the Apoſtle had over Corinth, but only we alledge it thus far, that though the Apoſtle had Power to command now when abſent, and if he had been preſent, had power to have concurred with them in the very act, that yet ſtill the power lay in them, without the Apoſtle, to have proceeded, by whom the Act was to be done according to the Apoſtle's direction.

Book III.

3. According to Presbyterial practices, it is evident that the power is not in them, but in the Congregation; for after that they have Sentenced a Man to be Excommunicated, and it is to be ſuppoſed, that his ſin is ripe for Excommunication; and that he is obſtinate enough, to be now Excommunicated, then it ſhould be preſently acted and done, if the power were in them. But they ſtay the Execution of it, in the particular Congregation, for three days; they give him three Admonitions more, and the People are to pray for him; and ſo they do manifeſtly, de facto, hereby put the ultimate judgment of his impenitence into the Congregation, and the ultimate act of Execution alſo. For if the Man did Repent, they were not to Excommunicate him; and becauſe they judge him to continue impenitent, they do Excommunicate him, according to the Presbyterial practices.

If it be anſwered, as it is by ſome, that the Sentence, by vertue of which he ſtandeth Excommunicated, is that of the Claſſical Presbytery, and that the Elders of the Congregation, are but the Præcones, they do not exerciſe the ſubſtance of the Act, only declare and publiſh it: Then we reply.

1. That here is more than a promulgation, not only becauſe it is not preſently done; but becauſe other means of Admonitions, as Ordinances of Chriſt are applyed to him, to bring him to Repentance; and if ſo, it is apparent, that when the Claſſical Presbytery Intended him to Excommunication, that he was then not fit for Excommunication; for why ſhould theſe Authoritative Admonitions of his own Elders come afterwards? They may as well continue their Admonitions, publickly after his Excommunication. Now if his ſin were not fit for excommunication, ſo as they might take it upon their Conſciences, he ought not now to be excommunicated, then by vertue of their Sentence, he is not excommunicated, when he is excommunicated; for they Sentenced him, when his ſin was not ripe for it. So that according to their own practices, they make the Presbyterie's act to be but a Doctrinal diſcernment, that in ſuch a caſe, if he continues thus and thus obſtinate, he is to be excommunicated. But

2. That, which the Elders in the Congregation do, is more than to be Præcones of the Sentence of the Presbytery; and their delivering of him to Satan, actually, is more than a publiſhing, not only becauſe they do Authoritatively as Elders, Admoniſh him after the Presbyterie's Sentence (and if they do Authoritatively Admoniſh him, certainly they do Authoritatively alſo excommunicate him after their Admonitions, if he continues impenitent) but alſo becauſe when it is done, they call upon the Name of the Lord Jeſus; and they do it in the Name, and with the power of the Lord Jeſus. If it were a meer promulgation, there needed no invocation, as an act of theirs.

3. Again, if the Form of the Sentence, whereby the Elders of the Congregation do excommunicate him, be conſidered, do not they ſay; We, in the Name of the Lord Jeſus, and with his power, deliver thee to Satan to excommunicate thee. Yea, were not that Congregation in Corinth, to do ſo, which the Man belonged unto? Whereas if the Claſſical Presbytery had the power, and theſe were only the publiſhers; then the Claſſical Presbytery were only to uſe thoſe words, becauſe the power was in them; and the Miniſters were only to declare, that ſuch an one was excommunicated by them, in the Name of the Lord Jeſus. And if ſo, then all the Eldership of a Congregation are to the Claſſis, but even as Curates are to the Biſhops: And indeed, the Biſhop's principles are more conſonant to themſelves, than this; for they ſay, that the act of excommunication is done, and abſolved, and perfected in their Courts; and that the Curate doth only promulge it (as their manner is) but that the Man is indeed excommunicated by the Biſhop. But here there is a pretence of leaving the ſubſtance of the act, to be formally done and executed by the Elders of the Congregation; and yet a denial, that a power to do it lies in them; and the power to do it, aſſumed to be in them, who yet profeſs they do not actually excommunicate.

4. If they were only Præcones, then any Man may do it, as well as the Elders of his own Church.

If it be objected, that, in a Congregation it ſelf, when it is done, it is done by one Man that pronounceth it, the Paſtor of the place, or the like.

The anſwer is 1. That as in Prayer, when the Paſtor is the Mouth of all the People unto God, he is but the Mouth of thoſe People that are preſent, and do joyn with him; and it is their act, and not the act of Men abſent: So it is here, in this act he is the Mouth of the Elders, and the whole Congregation as preſent, as of God to throw this Man out: But to make the Elders of the Congregation, and the whole Congregation, to be but the publiſhers of what the Presbytery hath done, when they were abſent, this is indeed to make them meer publiſhers, which any Man may do, yea, they themſelves may do it, by fixing it upon the Church Door.

CHAP. III.

The ſeventh Argument, to prove that a ſingle Congregation, is the intire ſeat of Church-power, becauſe thus there appears a Harmony in all the Eccleſiaſtical Adminiſtrations.

Argu. AS we prov'd, that the conſtitution falls upon particular Churches, by ſhewing how naturally all things fall out in that way; and what diſtortions are in the other: So for the confirmation of the compleat power of particular Churches, for matter of Government, we ſhall now proceed in the like way of Argument. For the upholding of the Subordinations of Congregational and Claſſical Aſſemblies; and of many Congregations, being under one common Presbytery, made up of the Elders fixed to ſeveral Congregations, the Presbyterial Divines are forced to invent multitude of diſtinctions and diviſions, thereby to uphold their principles. They are forced to make one Church for Worſhip, and another Church meerly for Diſcipline, a Church Real, which is of the Saints, the Body of the Faithful, that are a Church to Chriſt; and a Church Repreſentative in their Elders, meeting in a Claſſical Aſſembly: A Church incompleat and imperfect (ſuch they make Congregations:) A Church perfect and compleat for Government, (ſuch they make a Claſſical Presbytery) yea, indeed as was obſerved before, they muſt make three ſorts of Churches, to make up one. 1. A Church of the Faithful (for ſo the Brethren are called, in diſtinction from the Elders) 2. The Elderſhip of each Congregation, a Repreſentative Church thereof; and 3. A Church Claſſical, the Elders of all thoſe Congregations aſſembled in one. They muſt alſo be put upon finding out a double Presbytery, for ordering of Government; one Congregational, the other Claſſical; when yet they are not able to give one note or character of ſuch diſtinction in the Scriptures. Yea further, to anſwer our Arguments, they have been fain to ſay, that the Elders of particular Congregations have the relation of Elders, in Senſu diviſo, to each Congregation; but the Relation only of an Elderſhip, in ſenſu conjuncto, as met in a Claſſical Presbytery, to all and each of theſe Congregations. And then alſo they muſt find out diſtinctions of the difference of Duties, what the Elders owe to a particular Church; and what to all the Congregations in common. They muſt alſo make the ſame perſons, to be Preaching Elders in the exerciſe of their Office, to their particular Congregations; and Ruling Elders alſo in the exerciſe of their Office, to all the reſt. And yet are not able to make any Foot-ſteps of any ſuch diſtinction, or of any ſuch boundary of Duties. And as the Reformed Churches, would not have made that diſtinction of thoſe ſeveral ſorts of Elders, under the New Teſtament, had they not had diſtinct and peculiar characters of ſome, that ruled, of others that eſpecially laboured in the Word and Doctrine, Rom. 12.8. He that Ruleth, let him wait on Ruling, he that Exhorteth on Exhortation, he that Teacheth, on Teaching. And unleſs they had found theſe Foot-ſteps of Diſtinction, bounding their ſeveral Offices, they would never have invented theſe ſeveral ſorts of Elders; nor could they be able to maintain theſe ſeveral ſorts without them. So if there cannot be found like warrant, for all the Presbyterian diſtinctions, can they be able to ſay, that Jeſus Chriſt hath made theſe ſeveral ſorts of Churches, and theſe various Reflections of Elders, and their Duties, &c. And thus whilſt to them, there are many Bodies, and many Churches; and Lords many, and Presbyteries many; our way is ſingle, natural, uniform, and to us there is but one Church, one Presbytery, tery, having mutual relation one unto another. One Church for the Seat of Worſhip, the ſame Church for the Seat of Diſcipline; and hereby all theſe groundleſs Diſtinctions are in a few words taken away.

Now as in the point of Inſtitution of Congregational Churches, this uniformity is a confirmation to us, and the contrary is an evidence of the falſeneſs of the conſtitution of the other: So when the point of power cometh to be diſputed, what ſhall belong to each Congregation, the obſervation of the like uniformity in ours, and diſtortion in theirs, confirmeth us that the power is compleatly and intirely in each Congregation, having a particular Elderſhip of it ſelf. As before they are put to diſtinguiſh, ſo now in this to part and divide the power between the Congregations, and theſe Claſſical Presbyteries; and that for ordinary Government. Their being out of the right way, produceth manifold diſtortions, their Adminiſtrations of the Diſcipline, differing from the Rules and Practices held forth by Chriſt, and his Apoſtles in their Epiſtles, unto which the placing the power wholy and intirely, and compleatly, in a particular Congregation, falleth uniform and ſuitable.

Presbyterial Divines, finding that particular Congregations were Churches, and that as ſuch they are intended, in Mat. 18. Tell the Church, for ſhame they could not take all power from them, but they muſt allot them ſome; becauſe they were a Church: And yet becauſe they could not uphold the conſtant and ordinary intermedling (and that not by way of Appeal) of a claſſical Presbytery, which did challenge it's primary cogniſance, and right in Excommunication, as well as the Congregations, however therefore they divided the power, and they put part of the power in one, and part in the other. They put the Sentence of Excommunication in a claſſical Church, and the Execution of it in the Congregational; and ſo indeed they do make two ſort of Governments ordinary, for one and the ſame ſuit or cauſe or matter, and perſon to be proceeded againſt. The particular Elderſhip of the Congregation proceedeth ſo far, as to admoniſh, and to ſuſpend from the Sacrament; and then when the Man is obſtinate, the claſſical Congregation ſaith; bring him to us, ere you preſume to Excommunicate him, that we may admoniſh him again, and ſo he may be found further obſtinate; and then for the Execution, carry him down again to the Congregation, and let him be admoniſhed, before all by the Elders thereof, and then again if obſtinate Excommunicate him. Surely if to compleat Excommunication, there had been ſuch divided proceedings in, Mat. 18. Jeſus Chriſt would have ſaid, Go tell the Churches, and not the Church; for it cannot be denyed, but that theſe are diſtinct Churches, the Congregational and Presbyterial. Whereas to us, as there is but one Congregation and Presbytery, ſo but one compleat and intire Government, whereof that congregation is the Seat. And however the knowledge of the matter may be firſt given to the Elders, and by way of preparatory cogniſance, they may conſider of it, (to cut off accuſations impertinent, and apparently defective) yet therein they proceed not by Authority; but all that they do in an authoritative way, is done before the whole Congregation, to the edification of all; and ſo there is but one ſort of publick proceeding, whereas our Presbyterian Brethren have many.

Now to Demonſtrate the Diſtortions of Adminiſtrations in their way, and the Nullity of founding any ſuch diviſions and parting of Government and Proceedings, we preſeut theſe conſiderations.

1. According to their own principles and practices, this diviſion of power, and proceeding, to compleat an act of Government and Excommunication, is not parallel'd with, or uniform to the power and the proceedings, in thoſe other Subordinances of Churches or Aſſemblies, which they would have erected for Government. It is known, that they make five ſeveral Subordinations. 1. Oecumenical. 2. National. 3. Provincial. 4. Claſſical. 5. Congregational. And all theſe are built but upon this one ground (the ſame that a Congregation puts in for) that they are all Churches, only the greater ſtill having power over the leſſer, as is affirmed, they are caſt into theſe Subordinations. Now then let but the ſame be granted to Congregations in this its lowred condition; let it but have the ſame proportion of Subordination to it ſelf, in compariſon of claſſical, that the reſt have one to another; let all theſe contignations, that conſiſt of lower and upper Rooms, be but uniform in this Model; and then, until a Congregation doth miſcarry in its Excommunication, it muſt needs have all the power within it ſelf. For Claſſical and Provincial, which are the two next Subordinations, each to other, Provincial and National, do not divide a power of proceeding, to compleat one act of Government between them; (ſo as the Claſſical ſhould have one part, and the Provincial another ; or the Provincial one part, and the National another ; and ſo as after the lower hath performed his part, it ſhould be brought to a higher, to compleat the Sentence) but each of them have an intire and compleat power, to perfect what they take in hand to Excommunication ; and matters are carryed from one to another, but only by way of Appeal, and that too after they have compleated the Sentence and Execution ; having full power to Excommunicate within themſelves. Why then ſhould the Congregational in its Conjunction and Subordination, to and with a Claſſical Presbytery, be more injured, than all the reſt? Why ſhould the Claſſical alone put in to divide the Lands with them, and go half, and the greater half ; and not ſuffer the Congregational to perfect, and compleat the Sentence of Excommunication, as well as any of the other ; and ſo all to be brought (if at all) only by way of Appeal to them ? Whereas now all is brought to the claſſical Presbytery, from the Congregational, in a way of imperfection and deficiency of power, to compleat the Sentence. And this is the greater injury, in as much that one of the great Arguments, that (until of late, and of late alſo) hath been pleaded for the power of claſſical Presbyteries, and ſo of Synods, is but from the analogy of the Congregation's Right, that what power they have over a Brother, a Claſſis ſhould have over a Congregation (as in our Kingdom, the Plea of Inheritance of the Eldeſt Son of a Yeoman, is the ſame with that of Nobles and Gentry ; yea, and in the Throne it ſelf) But why alone ſhould the poor Congregations be made Coppy-Holders, when all the reſt are free and intire in their own acts of Judicature.

2. Our Presbyterian Brethren by this, makes two Courts of Judicature for one and the ſame cauſe ; which is not ordinarily found amongſt Men. It's true indeed, in Humane Courts, the lower have only leſſer matters or faults committed to them, Debts of ſuch a value ; and Higher Courts have thoſe that are of an Higher Nature, or a greater value. But look what matters are committed to them, they are able to paſs a final and compleat Sentence upon them, and have power to execute it, if an Appeal be not made ; and if once a Suit be put in, they have power to end it, elſe it is no Court. But here now the Congregational Elders, are allowed to intermeddle, and have Authority in all Cauſes, even thoſe that are the greateſt, and the moſt Heinous ſins that deſerve excommunication, without any controverſie and difficulty ; but then they are allowed to proceed but ſo far in it, and then to bring it to the Claſſical Aſſembly for Sentence, where all muſt be heard over again, ere they can proceed to a Sentence; and then it is brought to the People, and there it is acted over again. And thus as they make two ſort of Churches, one for Diſcipline, and another for Government, and part the Seat of Government and Diſcipline; ſo for to compleat an act of one and the ſame Diſcipline, they make two ſeveral Courts ; and that not by parting them, by diſtribution of cauſes of leſs and of greater moment only ; but of acts of Judicature. And whereas the Claſſis pretends, that it's the perfect and compleat Church, and the Congregational imperfect ; according to theſe practices, it makes nothing more perfect, than the Congregational doth, as the Law did not ; but when the caſe is brought to this ſame perfect Church, yet it is forced to ſend the party down again to the Congregational (which is the imperfect Church) there to have the Sentence compleated.

3. Whereas the Apoſtles, in their Rules for Publick Admonitions, do make them to be two or three, Tit. 3. 10. An heretique, after one or two Admonitions reject as obſtinate : This way of proceeding makes three ſort of publick Admonitions, to the number of ſix or ſeven. It makes three obſtinacies, and three publick Sentences againſt a Man that is excommunicated. Firſt he is admoniſhed by a particular Elderſhip (and we would know whether thoſe be not publick Admonitions, yea or no, ſuch as the Apoſtle intendeth ; which is done by a publick Court, to which we preſume they will ſay, that all the People may come, and in that reſpect it is to be accounted publick, or if not ; yet that, which is done by publick Perſons, in a publick Judicature, is publick Admonition) Then before they bring him to the Claſſis, they muſt judge and cenſure him as obſtinate, and that by a Major vote, or he is not further to be brought (and we believe they will not cenſure him to be obſtinate, unleſs he hath had one or two Admonitions, and that by them) there's the firſt obſtinacy. Then he is brought before the Claſſical Presbytery, who are to Sentence him to be excommunicated (which we believe they will not do, unleſs they alſo have alſo have by Admonitions, tryed whether he hath been obſtinate and impenitent, or no, upon thoſe means which they are to uſe alſo, which is Admonition) then he is brought before the Congregation, there he is Admoniſhed again over and over. And is it for the good of the Man, or is it for the ſatisfaction of the People, that they may ſee him obſtinate, that he hath ſo good Admonitions given him? It cannot be meerly for the ſatisfaction of his obſtinacy, unleſs theſe Admonitions can be ſuppoſed fit to work upon him. And then again in the third place, he is to be judged obſtinate after all thoſe, or elſe he is not to be excommunicated; for if he Repented after all theſe, they are to forbear. And we may add, that they muſt needs make a judging of as many Repentances for his Abſolution; and the judging of his Repentance muſt be a perſonal experience. Thus they multiply publick proceedings, beyond the Rule, whereas the proportion of Chriſt's patience ſeems to be ſet.

4. How doth the dividing of things thus retard their proceedings, in caſe of open and manifeſt Scandals? How muſt needs ſo many removes rather harden the Man, than ſoften him, and in ſtead of being a means of doing him good, be a vexation to him? The pretence is, that hereby Scandal is avoided, if the party Repents; but the Truth is, this inlargeth it; for either the Scandal is a thing commonly known in the Congregation of the People, and then it is beſt to have it examined and cleared, and that before them preſently, if it may be, either by his Repentance afore them, that they may be Witneſſes thereof, or by his appearing innocent. If it be not known commonly and ordinarily abroad, it is more Scandal to have it brought to ſtrangers, than to have it to be kept in his own Church: eſpecially if that thoſe, of all the Churches (who are intereſted in what the Elders of the Claſſical Presbytery do) or any of them may be preſent at pleaſure.

5. This Presbyterian way of Excommunication, cauſeth ordinances to be miſplaced, a leſs effectual, after a more effectual; for thoſe Admonitions by his own Elders before the Congregation, being the laſt (according to order of Nature, in all Remedies, according to Chriſt's order and degrees of proceeding, in Mat. 18. and according to God's order in his dealing with us) muſt be ſuppoſed more powerfully effectual, than the firſt: And yet if the power of Sentencing the Man be in the Claſſical Presbytery, by vertue of which he is excommunicated; that muſt be ſuppoſed to be more effectual, to bring him to Repentance. And then alſo they let their Claſſical Admonitions be the laſt, before excommunication, whereas if thoſe before the Congregation be acknowledged to be the more effectual, then where the more effectual Admonitions, according to the ordinance of Chriſt, are ſuppoſed to lie in order to excommunication, there the power of excommunication muſt be ſuppoſed to lie alſo.

6. A 6th Diſtortion is, the deformity that is occaſioned by putting an intereſt into thoſe two ſort of Churches, Congregational and Claſſical, in the point of excommunication, and dividing the power between them; one for the Sentence, the other for the Execution. Which will appear from that intereſt the People have, commenſurable with the power that the Elders are to have. We ſpeak not now of joyning in the Sentence of Excommunication, and of ſuffrage in the Judgment, which will make a diſtinct argument, and is as ſtrong as any of the reſt, for power of excommunication to be proper and peculiar to a Congregational Church, and to prove that what ever other power Claſſical Presbyteries or Synods pretend to; yet of all other, they can claim no intereſt in this; becauſe in them, there is wanting one ſort or kind of Judges, into whoſe Hands God hath put the power. But ſuppoſe for the preſent, that the whole People have but an intereſt of preſence only, at the Admonitions that are to be given to the party afore excommunication, and at the act of excommunication it ſelf; and give them but the loweſt kind of conſent that may be, a Tacit conſent, when the act is to be done; yet allow them to be preſent, that thereby ſuch a Tacit conſent may be held forth, and that they may be edified thereby; and that by mourning, over the party, his Heart may be broken, and the more wrought upon; and their Conſciences may be ſatisfied in the juſtneſs of his excommunication; becauſe that they are to joyn in the execution of it, and not ſo much as to eat with him afterwards. Now this intereſt, both Presbyterian principles and Preachers, do give and allow unto the People of that particular Church, whereto he doth belong. Yea the Papiſts themſelves, who do hold, that what is done, in the Congregation, is but the promulgation of the excommunication, already compleated in the Biſhop's conſiſtory ; yet give ſo much to the people, to that particular Congregation, whereof he is a Member, that there ſhould be a promulgation. See the Rhemiſt's notes on 1 Cor. 5. But Presbyterian principles do give more ; for they will not excommunicate, if the People be againſt it ; yea, a whole National Aſſembly, if they ſhould determine it, would yet ſtop the execution, if the people be againſt it. And therefore we argued afore, from dividing Diſcipline it ſelf, and from the Sentence of excommunication, being given to the Presbyterian Claſſes, and the execution unto the Elders in the Congregations, ſo we ſhall now argue from the Deformity or Diſtortion, that is between the power given to the Elders of thoſe Churches, as one Church, compared with the intereſt of the people of theſe Churches, conſidered as one Church alſo.

The intereſt, that theſe Claſſical Elders come to have together, with the Elders of the Congregation in the Sentence, muſt be, becauſe that they are Elders of all thoſe Congregations, as of one Church. For the ſtrength of the argument, that is alledged by the Presbyterial Divines, for ſuch a Claſſical Elderſhip, is, that many Congregations make one Church, whereof theſe Elders, in common, are the Repreſentation ; and when they pronounce the Sentence of excommunication, as Elders of all thoſe Congregations, as one Church, which they are an Elderſhip unto ; and by that one individual act of theirs, the Man is authoritatively and (ſo far as concerns the intereſt of Elders) in a ſpecial manner excommunicated out of all thoſe Congregations, whereto they are an Elderſhip, as well as out of his own (ſo far as the Sentence goes) in ſuch a ſpecial manner, as belongeth not to the next Churches of the Presbyteries about, but by vertue of that forementioned ſpecial relation. And this common Elderſhip, in this Sentence of theirs, muſt either have the relation of an Elderſhip, only to that particular Church, whereof this Man is a Member ; ſo as that particular Church, and that common Elderſhip make up the adequate Relation of Church and Elderſhip, in and for this their Act, or this Elderſhip hath a relation to all the Congregations. If the firſt be aſſerted, then there would be ſo many ſeveral Relations of Elderſhips and Churches, as there are Churches, upon occaſion. For this common Elderſhip, and this particular Church, would be one Church in this act for this time, and for this Man's excommunication; and they would be another Church at another time, in relation to another Man's excommunication, in another particular Church, which were obſerved. And if they act in this act, as a common Elderſhip to all the Congregations, as one Church ; then the Sentence doth formally caſt the Man (ſo far as the Sentence goes) out of all thoſe Churches, as well as out of his own; and by one ſingle intire individual act, they do as Elders to this Church, excommunicate him formally out of theſe Churches, and but virtually only, and conſequently out of all other Churches, belonging to other Presbyteries, as out of the Univerſal it ſelf. And ſo far as the power of the Sentence reacheth in this common claſſical Presbytery, he is afterward caſt out executively in that particular Church, whereof he is more eſpecially a Member, by the ſame way of Authority, by which he is caſt out of that one Church, whereto he doth belong. For theſe claſſical Elders, being in their Vote a Church Repreſentative, they Repreſent that Church, whereof the Man is a Member, as making one with all the reſt of the Churches.

Now then, make theſe three things proportionable. 1. Make this intereſt of the people of all theſe Churches, in their kind and relation, proportionable to the intereſt of the Elders to all theſe Churches, in their kind and relation, theſe making one Church and they being but a common Elderſhip, becauſe theſe are one Church. And 2. Make the intereſt of execution, but anſwerable to the intereſt of Sentence. Yea 3. Make the intereſt of the Elders of that particular Church, whereof the Perſon is a Member, but anſwerable to the intereſt of the People of that particular Church, whereof he is a Member ; and there will appear ſo great a Diſtortion in the Presbyterian Government, thus ſharing with the Congregational, as will confute and overthrow it ; and ſuch an uniform in the Congregational, as will eſtabliſh it.

1. As for the firſt, there is all the reaſon in the World, that if theſe claſſical Elders do lay the pretence to their common Power and Authority, becauſe theſe Churches are one Church (and they are all one Church in reſpect of the People, as well as of all the Elders) if this be the Foundation of their Plea, if it ariſeth from this Relation and Reſpect ; then look what intereſt the Elders, as Elders, can pretend to, as one Church, being one Church Repreſentative ; that individual and like intereſt, muſt the People, that are one Church, alſo lay claim to; for there is a diſproportion, a great and a manifeſt Diſproportion, in giving that to the Elders, as Elders of a Church, that is not given to the people, according to their proportion, as a Church. As then by theſe Elders, in common, the Sentence of Excommunication goes forth, and the Man is Admoniſhed by them as Elders, to bring him to Repentance; and this is a common act of that whole Eldership, making a Church to all theſe Churches; ſo the People muſt be preſent at theſe, or ſome other Admonitions of the perſon (and that both for their edification, and for to work Repentance in the party) that their Tacite conſent, by preſence, might be given; and that they (ſeeing they are to execute it) might be ſatisfied in his being caſt out. If indeed the People had, as a Church, no intereſt at all, then we acknowledge this Argument would wholy fail; and theſe Elders muſt have the whole fall, and intire power to give Sentence, to Execute, to Admoniſh, and all were to be done there, in the claſſical Aſſembly, and no where elſe; but the whole buſineſs would be there compleated.

1. If it be ſaid firſt, that the power of Sentencing, and ſo of the act of excommunication, is performed in this common Presbytery, and that what is done in the particular Congregation, whereunto he belongeth, is but the promulgation of it?

Beſides what was ſaid againſt that before, this further here may be added; that the intereſt which the people have, is not meerly to have it promulged before them, but that they may be edified, and that they knowing the party, he having lived amongſt them, may mourn over him; yea, and bewail that ſuch a Scandal is fallen amongſt them, whereby their Ordinances and Communion, was in danger of being Defiled, &c. and that the Man hereby may be wrought upon; yea, and it is neceſſary, that the Man be brought afore that Church, where he is perſonally to be excommunicated. Now all this is more ſtill, than bare promulgation of the Sentence; for that might be done, whether he were preſent or abſent. Yet ſtill, if there be an intereſt of promulgation, let it be in all the Churches; and all theſe Churches, as met in one common Church, as the Elders themſelves are. Or if there be an intereſt of being edified by the Admonitions, let it be in all the Churches. But how can this be? If in each Congregation apart, how will your Admonitions be more multiplied, that were multiplied enow afore? And if in common, how can they meet, as Presbyteries are caſt? Or when did they ever?

2. If ſecondly it be ſaid, that it is promulged in that fixed Church, whereto he doth belong, in regard they have a ſpecial primary intereſt; becauſe uſually he receiveth the Sacrament there; we ſhall ſpeak to that under the third particular, by and by. Only for the preſent, conſider that if the intereſt of People and Elders be made up proportionably, ſo as that Church hath a primary intereſt in the Perſon, becauſe he hath a fixed Communion in the Sacrament with them, which, if he there partake, would be ordinarily defiled; and other Churches have but a ſecondary and remote intereſt, as the Genus hath to the individum, whereas this particular Congregation, is as the Species to this individum: Then let the Elders of the claſſical Presbytery, (be to make things commenſurable) acknowledging to have a remote and ſecondary intereſt alſo in their power, to ſentence him; and ſo let him come to them, but at ſecond hand. Or to make the comenſurableneſs yet nearer, as in the matter of promulgation, the People of all the other Churches, have but a promulgation at ſecond hand, by hearſay; and have no intereſt of preſence at all; ſo anſwerably let theſe Elders of other Churches, have but the like ſhare in that power, and the controverſie is at an end; for then as it is not at all promulged in other Churches, ſo the Man would not be at all ſentenced in the Claſſical Presbyteries. But if they challenge the primary intereſt, and that the power, by which he is ſentenced, belongeth unto them; then let the People of all thoſe Churches, be acknowledged to have the like primary intereſt of promulgation alſo; becauſe that they are the greater number in compariſon of the Church, whereof he is a Member; that being but a part, the other the whole; and therefore the Congregation muſt have the leſſer principal intereſt therein.

2. And Secondly, If that the act of excommunication, that is done in his particular Church, is the formal act of excommunication, by which actually he ſtandeth excommunicated, and delivered up to Satan, and not until then; let but this act of execution, be but commenſurable to the ſentence; and then as the ſentence was denounced by thoſe claſſical Elders, as making Elders to all thoſe Congregations, as one Church, ſo alſo ſhould the execution be; and ſo the Man muſt be actually excommunicated, over and over, as often as there are many particular Churches, to that Presbytery.

3. And thirdly; If the intereſt of the Elders of that Church, make an Eldership to that Congregation, and be made commenſurable with the intereſt of the Congregation, the one as Elders, the other as People; Then firſt, as this Church hath the primary and the fixed intereſt, and ſuch a peculiar intereſt, as all the Churches about him have not, viz. An intereſt of Communion, ſuitable to his caſting out, as he had a fixt Communion with them, it is therefore a fixt caſting out, which is properly the act of excommunication; and for theſe Reaſons, their conſent is ſo required, as of none of all the Churches about, and their ſatisfaction to be ſought, ſo as of none of all the Churches about. Now then anſwerably, let the Eldership of this particular Church, have but a like power of an Eldership in their Relation to them, as a Church; and then the People's intereſt being conſent, where conſent only is required; and the Elders intereſt being Authority, and the ſentence, it will follow, that, as the liberty of conſenting is only in this Congregation, ſo that the Authority of ſentencing ſhould only be in theſe Elders. And as other Churches do but declare their offence, if things have not been rightly Adminiſtred, ſo the Elders of other Churches ſhould do no more. At leaſtwiſe, as the conſent of this people is actually required, which is not of all the other Churches, and as without which, becauſe of their intereſt, the claſſical Congregation will forbear the execution of excommunication; yea, a whole National Aſſembly will: So then let the Elders of this Congregation, when they meet in this claſſical Presbytery, have but the like priviledge; that if they do diſſent, and think the Man is not to be ſentenced, or be excommunicated, the whole claſſical Presbytery, ſhould not have power to proceed to ſentence. For will not you give as much to the Elders in Government, as Elders of that Church, as to the people? Will you prefer the intereſt of the people, which is otherwiſe laid ſo low, before the intereſt of the Elders, that are over them in the Lord? And if that the Elders of that Church ſhould have this Prerogative, in the claſſical Presbytery, the power thereof would ſoon come to nothing, without diſputing againſt it. And in this caſe, theſe claſſical Elders are not a Presbytery in common, but the Paſtor, or Eldership of the particular Congregation, would have ſome kind of Epiſcopal power in this Presbytery, having a Negative among them. Or ſuppoſe that the Elders of his own Congregation deny to promulge the ſentence, and actually to excommunicate the Man, will you not give them the Miniſterial intereſt of Elders, in the execution of the ſentence of excommunication, as the Elders in common had in the ſentence? Or will you ſend other Elders to do it? If ſo, then they in that act are an Eldership to them only.

CHAP. IV.

The eighth, ninth and tenth Argument, to prove a Congregational Church, to be the due ſubject of Eccleſiaſtical Power; becauſe Admonitions are to be given, and Excommunication to be Adminiſtred in the preſence of ſuch a Church.

Argu. 8. IF further, the preſence of the people in the Church, is to be the Seat of all Authoritative Admonitions, that go before the ſentence of excommunication made by the Elders, to them that are accuſed of publick ſin and ſcandal, for their edification, and if the act of excommunication is to be (as was granted) afore them; then the Seat of the power of excommunication is not in claſſical Elders, by Chriſt's Ordination, but in Elders that are Elders of a particular Congregation. The Reaſon of the conſequence is clear, becauſe the party is to be ſentenced to be excommunicated, upon his being judged obſtinate; and he is to be judged obſtinate after Admonitions: That therefore, which is the Seat or Place in which theſe Admonitions are to be given, is alſo to be the Seat of the Judgment of his obſtinacy, and of the ſentence thereupon. It were ſtrange, that the Admonitions and other proceedings, that make way, ſhould be publick, and the Judgment and Sentence ſhould be private. It is ſo in no publick Courts. And if the particular Congregation be the Seat of the Antecedent Acts, the Admonitions, and of the conſequent Act, the Act of excommunication it ſelf; it were as ſtrange, that only that immediate Act of the ſentence, ſhould be privately done by the claſſical Elders, and not afore the people. Beſides, that the claſſical Elders are not to ſentence, is evident by this; becauſe thoſe that have the power to Admoniſh, ſurely they muſt have the power to Sentence: And therefore if the claſſical Elders cannot, nor do not come to perform the acts of Admonition before the people; then they cannot be thoſe that, according to the Scriptures, have intereſt in the ſentence as Elders. Neither can they be that Church which our Saviour Chriſt ſpeaks of Mat. 18. becauſe that the Admonitions of that Church, are expreſſed, as liable to be neglected, and therefore they muſt be ſuppoſed preſent at the Admonitions. And as the Apoſtle too commends it as an ordinance, that the Admonition ſhould be before the people, 1 Tim. 5. 20. So claſſical Elders cannot be preſent.

Now to prove, that particular Congregations, are the Seat of publick Admonitions, there is that place in, 1 Tim. 5. 20. which gives evidence, Them that ſin (ſaith he) Rebuke before all, that others alſo may fear. It is evident here, that he doth give a direction to Timothy, concerning Church proceedings, and keeping of a Spiritual Court; and therefore in the verſe before, gives directions about receiving an Accuſation, and how that Accuſation muſt be proved, by two or three Witneſſes; and he ſpeaks of all ſuch publick Admonitions or Rebukes, as are to follow upon the receit of the Accuſation, when it is made evident by Witneſſes, and of ſuch admonitions likewiſe, as are in order to excommunication, and for ſuch ſins as will deſerve excommunication, if Men be obſtinate (for if for any other ſins, then certainly for thoſe) and it is of ſins, in caſe of publick ſcandal, which are the ſubject of excommunication; therefore he ſaith, Them that ſin, Rebuke afore all, then when a Man's ſin is publick, and comes to be taken notice of afore all. Now he ſpeaks to Timothy, that was an Evangeliſt, and under him to all Church-Officers, to the end of the World, when Evangeliſts (who were extraordinary Miniſters) ſhould be removed: And as other directions, that are given to him, do concern the Elderſhip of Congregations in after Ages, ſo alſo this, to teach them how to behave themſelves in the Houſe of God. Now with the ſame breath that he doth give them power and warrant to Rebuke, when accuſations are brought orderly to them, he withal directs (and his directions fall chiefly thereon) where theſe Rebukes ſhould be, not privately, but afore all, and what all? Not afore all that are their Elders only, for they are to rebuke them afore all, that all may fear, ſurely therefore it is intended for the benefit, not only of the Elders, but of all the people.

If it be ſaid, that this place is to be underſtood, but as that of the Old Law, when a Malefactor was to be put to Death, it was, that all might hear and fear; and ſo theſe admonitions may be given privately in the Conſiſtory, and yet all may hear of it, and fear: The anſwer is, that there is this difference between executing of corporal puniſhment, and giving of ſpiritual admonitions; that the Terror of ſpiritual admonition, doth not lie in the hearſay, but it works by the people's perſonal hearing of it; and it is ordained ſo to do. The power of that ordinance (as of Preaching) lies in perſonal hearing, and as Faith cometh by hearing, ſo this fear muſt come by hearing alſo; otherwiſe it were all one, as to ſay, ſuch a Man Preached a comfortable Sermon, that all might be comforted; or he Preached the Law, that all might be Terrified; and yet ſhould mean, that all thoſe, that were at the Sermon, ſhould have comfort in it, or be Terrified by it. Therefore as thoſe, that are wrought upon to fear, muſt be wrought upon by the admonitions, ſo it muſt be by being perſonally preſent, and hearing of them.

If it be ſaid, that it is, in a claſſical Aſſembly, done in a place ſo publick, and in a Court ſo open, where all may come if they pleaſe: We reply, that the Apoſtle doth not only ſay, that it ſhould be done in a place where all do come; but he lays it as a Duty upon Timothy, to do it in a place where all may come; for otherwiſe, one of the great ends of admonition is loſt, he bids him Rebuke them, that ſin, afore all. That all may fear. If therefore our Presbyterian Brethren will attain the end of their admonitions (that all may fear) it muſt be done where all do uſe to meet; and if ſo, then either their claſſical Elders muſt come and meet in the particular Congregations, or the particular Congregations muſt come to them, and ſo all the company of people of the claſſical Church muſt meet, Women, as well as Men; for they are capable of that particular part of edification, of fearing, and why ſhould they be excluded the benefit of it? And whether the proceedings to excommunication according to our way, which is for the party to have his own Elders, before his own people, judicially to examine the fact, and to give publick Admonitions, edged with all ſorts of Scripture, to bring him to Repentance; and if he remain obſtinate in the view of all, then for him to be excommunicated; or if he Repents, to have that Repentance appear upon the place afore all (which all ſuit beſt, and fall in with the Congregational way) whether that this doth not agree more with right Reaſon, and all the ends than can be ſuppoſed of Examination, Admonitions, and Excommunication, either to work upon the party, or to work upon others, or for the fairneſs and equity of the proceedings, rather than the way of the Claſſical Presbytery, let any Rational Man Judge.

Ch. IV.

For what hath been ſaid of examination and admonition, and the ends of them, or any other end that the Scripture holds forth therein (that go before, or accompany excommunication) they are better attained in this Congregational Government, than in the other.

As 1. For the examination of the perſon, that the evidence of the fact, in a judiciary way, ſhould be before his own People, and by his own Elders, is every way moſt equal; becauſe that they are to joyn in the caſting of him out, and in the execution of the ſentence afterwards, and are therefore to be ſatisfied of the juſtneſs of his being caſt out: And there is that proper Communion, they have held with him, viz. a fixed Communion, which no Church elſe on Earth can pretend to. And if the People muſt be ſatisfied at any time, if after the Sentence by hearſay, and by relation (as the Presbyterians themſelves acknowledge) it will much more ſatisfie them before, when they hear the Perſon himſelf examined, and all that he can ſay. And if that be true of Cyprian, Quod omnes tangit, ab omnibus tractari debet, that which concerns all, the whole common, it ſhould be handled and tranſacted by all; and if that were not true, yet ſurely this, that what concerns all, ſhould be handled afore all.

The like 2. Holds for thoſe publick Admonitions, that are to be given, wherein alſo the people have an intereſt, that they may be edified thereby, as well as by Preaching; for what is Diſcipline or publick Admonitions, but a publick Application of the Truths of the Word of God, to the Conſcience of a ſcandalous ſinner, to warn others, and to bring him unto Repentance? So as indeed acts of Diſcipline, Admonitions, are the moſt paſtoral Sermon; and ſo are a part of the Worſhip of God, which therefore the people of his own Church, muſt have a peculiar intereſt in, as they have in other Sermons.

3. If it be looked at, that the Man is to be ſhamed, as a means to bring him to Repentance, as in 2 Theſſ. 3. 14. To have all theſe Examinations and Admonitions, and to have all Tranſacted, that concerns a ſcandalous ſin, before the whole Church, tendeth more to this. Neither can he be thought obſtinate, until ſuch time as he hath this means (which we ſee God hath Sanctified) in a Spiritual way applyed to him. In a word, for the whole, we ſay, as Bains long ſince ſaid (and it hath a reaſon in it, therefore we quote it) That when cenſure is the moſt ſharp Spiritual Medicine, it were ill with our Church, if he (ſpeaking of their Paſtor) who is Reſident always amongſt them, as the Spiritual Phyſician ſhould not have the power of Adminiſtring it. That which he ſaith of the Paſtor, to whom he gives the chief ſtroke in it, we ſay of all the Elders of a Congregation, that are continually a Reſident with it.

If it be ſaid, that afore he is put to this publick ſhame, before the Congregation, he ſhould be Authoritatively Admoniſhed by the Elderſhip, to ſee firſt how that would work: We Reply,

1. That either his ſin is notoriouſly known to the whole Congregation already; Res famoſa, as was the caſe of the Inceſtuous Corinthian; and then it is fit it ſhould be brought inſtantly to the Congregation, that he may be ſhamed. Neither is it to any end, that the Elders ſhould deal in the caſe privately with him; but as the Scandal is publick, the Admonition ſhould be publick alſo, even from the firſt. Or ſuppoſe his ſin be more private, then, if the private means, which Chriſt hath appointed, hath not been uſed by thoſe that bring the Accuſation, as telling it firſt to himſelf, and exhorting him to Repentance; and if that could not gain him, then taking two or three, or more, who alſo have dealt with him, and yet could not bring him to Repentance; in this caſe alſo the Elders are not to meddle in it, before the Church, till ſuch time as thoſe means have been uſed, for no man's ſin is to be brought to them, till he hath paſt thorough thoſe ways and means, which Chriſt hath appointed; which being done, then indeed the Elders may Admoniſh him, having thus the cognizance of it; but yet therein, they are not to deal as an Elderſhip, in a judiciary way; but as thoſe two or three Brethren, who are to be called to Admoniſh him, ſhould proceed. Though even ſuch Admonitions from Elders, would perhaps have more Authority, in reſpect of their Relation, than thoſe of private Brethren. But in caſe that a Man hath paſt through all theſe means, and ſtill is obſtinate and impenitent, and hath ſtood out Chriſt's proceedings; now it is the Man's own fault, that his ſin ſhould thus be brought to light, and now nothing will cure him, but the ſhame of it, by publick Admonitions before all.

Anſw. 2. If (for the tenderneſs of his ſhame) he is firſt to be dealt withal by the Elders, before he be brought to the Congregation; yet not by the claſſical Elders, who are ſtrangers to him. Who if they keep an open Court, as they ought to do (as all other Courts are) whither any one may come; then if not, the ſhame of his ſin, yet the Diſhonour of it will be greater this way, than the other; whilſt it is kept within the compaſs of his own Church, and of theſe who are his Brethren, and have known his Converſe, and have known alſo his Graces. And that ſhame, he ſhall have thus before Strangers, will be a means to harden him, whereas the ſhame, that he ſhall have before his own People, will work more kindly, and be a means to melt him.

Anſw. 3. The preſence of his own People, in all theſe proceedings, when he is thus convicted of the Sin, when he is thus Admoniſhed, and upon obſtinacy, cometh to be excommunicated, ſerveth to a further double end, both as it reſpects themſelves (ſo as no Church elſe, nor no Elders elſe whatſoever) and as it reſpects the Perſon alſo, and his good. For it reſpects the Congregation themſelves, both by vertue of that ſpecial Relation to, and Communion they have with him, as one Body to Chriſt; and therefore they are to Sympathize with him, to be humbled together with him, for his ſin, to bemoan and bewail him, and themſelves; that ſuch a puniſhment, even as to them, ſhould befall them, by ſuch a ſin falling out amongſt them. You are puffed up, (ſaith the Apoſtle) you have not Mourned, 1 Cor. 5. 2. That Law is to take hold on them, in reſpect of this proper near relation, which Paul giveth, 1 Cor. 12. 26. If one Member ſuffer all the Members ſuffer with it, or if one Member be Honoured, all the Members rejoyce with it; Now ye are the Body of Chriſt, and Members in particular; that is, the Church of Corinth, being a particular Body, have a more ſpecial Relation one unto another, more than to any other Churches. And this mourning and the like, it is to ſhew themſelves clear of that matter, which otherwiſe would be a ſin of that Body; and as, in all other Relations, Members of a Nation, mourn for the ſins of a Nation, Members of a Family, for the ſins of a Family; ſo eſpecially in this neareſt ſpecial Relation of all other, each Member is to mourn, and ſorrow for the ſins of a Member, as if it were the whole's; becauſe a Diſhonour is thereby reflected alſo upon the whole, and an anger of God expreſſed againſt the whole; for even Church ſins make God to be angry with particular Perſons. As for that ſin about the Sacrament, in the Church of Corinth, 1 Cor. 11. particular Perſons were viſited, for this cauſe, ſome are weak and ſick, &c. therefore (ſaith he) Judge your ſelves, that you be not Judged. It is therefore neceſſary, when a Man's ſin is ripe for publick Admonitions, that his own People ſhould know it; and therefore that all theſe Admonitions ſhould be afore his own, that the height and aggravation of the ſin thus ſet open before his Conſcience, to make him Repent, ſhould be ſet open alſo before theirs, for all thoſe ends afore mentioned. And to think that the Elders of a Claſſical Church, ſhould Repreſentatively mourn for all the reſt, or that, whereas the cauſe of mourning is neerneſs of Relation, that they ſhould mourn as his own would do, cannot be ſuppoſed. And then 2. If it reſpects working upon the Man, if that be the end of this bewailing, and of this mourning, to break his Heart, to have his own Congregation thus mourning, who have

Ch.IV. have thus known him, and with whom he hath communicated, and to ſee their Hearts broken for his ſin, when they have not ſinned, only are of the ſame Body with him; this muſt needs be an ordinance much more effectual to work upon him, than if he were brought afore all the National Councils in the World, who are taught with his ſin but remotely, as the Body of a National Church muſt needs be very remote to a provincial Church, and this alſo remote in its proportion to a Claſſical.

Now we find that the proceedings thus, to excommunication, are expreſſed to us by the very Phraſe, bewailing, I am afraid, (ſaith the Apoſtle) that when I come, I ſhall bewail ſome of you; that is, I ſhall be inforced as to Admoniſh you, ſo to proceed further; and ſo in 1 Cor. 5. 2. Ton have not Mourned, that, he that hath done this Deed, may be taken from among you. To bring him before National and Claſſical Aſſemblies, and the like, may work in a civil way more upon him; but, in a ſpiritual way, this is a means much more ſuited.

Laſtly, for the act of excommunication it ſelf, that then the People ſhould be preſent; we need not contend for; becauſe it is granted. And aſſuredly, if that they are to be preſent, that they may mourn and wail, when any is thus caſt out, their preſence is much more required afore, becauſe their wailing and bemoaning of him then, might have been a means to prevent what befalls him.

Argu. 9. But if beſides all theſe intereſts it be found, that the People of his own Congregation, have a joynt intereſt to judge; and that by way of Suffrage, and concur in the Sentence with the Elders, in the throwing of him out: Or have ſuch an intereſt with Judgment, and cutting off a Member, that a Jury have, joyned with the Bench of Juſtices and Judges, and that they are to judge of the Fact, and of his obſtinacy, and the like; why then, it will clearly follow, that the power of excommunication muſt be in every Congregation of People and Elders: And thus to have the Man judged, both by the one, and the other, is the faireſt Law in the World. And we account it even the glory of one Nation, that no Man's life is ſubjected to the judgment of all the Judges of the Kingdom, but that he muſt be Tryed by his Peers, per pares. That we ſhall ſpeak when we come to that Head, that the People are to have a concurring intereſt with the Elders.

Argu. 10. If no Elders are to ſet up a conſiſtory for ordinary Government, but in the preſence, and before the Church; then the power of all acts of Government muſt lie within the Body of a Congregational Church. Becauſe there are no other ordinary conſtant Church meetings of the Body of the People, but only by Congregations; for all ſuch Meetings are to be of as many, as can meet in one place; and all are intereſted in it for the preſent, one, as well as another.

CHAP. V.

The eleventh and twelfth Arguments, proving ſingle Congregations inabled to exert all Acts of Church-power. That ſuch Churches there were in the firſt Ages of Chriſtianity. That the Apoſtles planted ſuch Churches, that had the intire power within themſelves.

Argu. 11. THere were in the firſt Ages of Chriſtianity, Biſhops in Churches and Villages. And in the ſenſe of the Ages, in which this was, it was all one as to have an intire Government in a Church, in a Village; for the intire Government was in the Hands of their Biſhops, in thoſe times, ſuch a Government as is now claimed by the Presbytery. Therefore from the practice of the primitive times, it is evident that one ſingle Congregation, with its Elders, is a compleat Seat of Government, as well as Worſhip.

Argu. 12. The Churches in the firſt planting of them by the Apoſtles, were in all places Congregational Churches. Thoſe, in ſmaller Cities, may well be ſuppoſed to have been always ſuch. Thoſe in the great Cities, were at firſt ſuch: Of Philippi it is ſaid, that in the beginning of the Goſpel, it was a Church, and it was ſo called, Ph. 1. 4, 15. and it was a Church that had Biſhops and Deacons, chap. 1. 1. who Communicated to Paul, by way of giving and receiving. In a manner, all ſides have acknowledged this, even the Biſhops themſelves. Hieruſalem it ſelf at firſt, was but one Congregation; and other greater Cities alſo, were no more; for can we imagine that the Apoſtles ſhould ſtay forming up Churches, till ſuch time as they ſhould multiply to ſo many, as to make many Congregations under claſſical Churches? So this is not ſuppoſable, becauſe that the Apoſtles were to go over the World, and could not every where ſtay ſo long; they therefore ſtaid, till there were a ſufficient number to make up a Church, and Elders over them. And to be ſure, the firſt Church of all, had a ſufficient Elderſhip, for they had the eleven Apoſtles. And for them all to be Officers, to ſo ſmall a number at the firſt, is infinitely leſs diſproportionable to them, than for our Great Lord and Maſter to ſerve and miniſter (as himſelf was pleaſed at his laſt Supper, to Term it) the Sacrament of Bread and Wine, unto Eleven Apoſtles; and then to Preach a long Sermon unto theſe Eleven, whom he had taken care of. And at the firſt, when they were ſo few, as they continued in prayer together, Acts 1. it is to be ſuppoſed, they had the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and ſo were a Church, ſeeing they had received it with our Lord and Saviour, with commiſſion for him to do the like. And this Congregational Church at firſt, having theſe Apoſtles over them, who (as our Brethren ſay) acted the part of ordinary Elders, muſt needs be ſuppoſed to be as ſufficient for a Presbytery, as afterwards their acts can be ſuppoſed to be, when they multiplyed to more Congregations (as our Brethren affirm) And if we could give no inſtance of any act of Government they did; yet it is certain, that the ſame power with which they did acts of Government, afterward as ſuch a Presbytery, they had then at firſt; for they acted but out of that power afterward, which they had afore. And ſo in all thoſe other Churches, when they were ſingle Congregations, having Elders ſet over them, the like muſt be ſuppoſed. And when there was thus Congregational Churches, having Elders over them, they had the right, and they had the power to exerciſe all acts of Government within themſelves, or elſe when the Apoſtles left them, and commended them to the grace of God, having ſet Elders over them; they had not been left to a ſufficient means, to take away offences, and to purge out ſcandals, and to keep the Worſhip pure, and to preſerve themſelves for Succeſſion.

And if they had this Right and Power, they muſt have it by vertue of that Inſtitution, Matth. 18. Here then, de facto, Congregational Churches were inveſted with a compleat power. And ſo according to that Maxim, primum, in quolibet genere, eſt Menſura reliquorum, the firſt in every kind, is the meaſure of the reſt we have to plead, that the firſt Churches in exiſtence with that power we contend for, were ſuch Congregational Churches which we aſſert.

We further add, that ſuppoſe that theſe Churches came to be multiplyed, or to have Neighbour Churches near them, what became of that Power and Right, which as Congregations having Elders in them, and as a Church to Chriſt, they were inveſted with? How ſhould this power come to be taken away, or they come to looſe it, and be Transferred unto an Aſſociated Presbytery, of many Congregations? If upon this Aſſociation, there had been a new power, yet the old former power muſt be ſuppoſed to ſtand ſtill intire, or elſe they looſe it (as the Cities in Germany, before they were united into that Emperial Body, had intire priviledges within themſelves; and that they retain ſtill notwithſtanding their Union, only their Aſſociation was for Appeals, and caſes of common concernment) and as the multiplication was accidental, ſo a new accidental power might come over them, which they had not afore, if they ſhould miſcarry in that they had afore; therefore that power, that was firſt in them, is never to be taken from them. It is true indeed, before their multiplication this muſt be ſaid, they were Independent Churches, in that groſs ſenſe, which is impoſed upon us; that is, they were accountable unto none; why? Becauſe there were none near them, to be accountable unto. But that was not a priviledge Eſſential, but Accidental, not poſitive, but becauſe there was no other near exiſtent. And yet not ſo neither; for if there were any in the World, they ſhould have Appealed unto them. And ſuppoſe a Congregational Church, alone by it ſelf, can be ſuppoſed to have an accidental Independency private (which in this reſpect, is a Negative priviledge, rather than a poſitive) yet ſtill that poſitive power, which they were intirely inveſted withal within themſelves, for poſitive acts of Government, that was not inveſted on them, becauſe there were no other Churches; but becauſe they were a Church of themſelves. And this power, if once they had it, is not, by Multiplication of Churches, to be taken away from them; the Multiplication is but accidental, dental,

Ch. V.

dental, but the Form, they were caſt into at firſt, is the eſſential Form that conſtituted them a Church, and a politick Body.

2. When theſe Churches were multiplied, and (as our Brethren would have it) continued many Congregations, under one Presbytery, of the Elders of each of theſe Churches thus multiplied; Either that firſt Church and their Elders (which ſtill remain fixed Elders unto them) have all the power and priviledge they had afore, or not, in this New Government to come upon their multiplication and aſſociation: If they have the ſame power and priviledge, then this propoſition ſtandeth good; only the queſtion then will be, what power over them (their own remaining thus intire) in a way of dependency any other Church can have, which we muſt afterwards ſpeak to. If upon this aſſociation, this particular Congregation have not the power it had afore intire within it ſelf, then the Form of the Government firſt conſtituted, is clean altered, and clearly a New Form of Government is ſet up; and that both in reſpect of the Right of the People, and the Right of the Elders in that Congregation. If the People had any intereſt of preſence or of ſuffrage (which we contend for) at the Sentence of Excommunication, and the Examination of things; by vertue of this new Aſſociation, that intereſt is taken from them; and removed up into the Claſſical meetings of the Elders, and into a Government that is meerly Ariſtocratical. And look as in a Government conſiſting both of People and Rulers, and the intereſt of both, or including in it priviledges that the one hath, as well as the other, (though the one in a lower degree) if the one becomes meerly Ariſtocratical, we count that Government changed, and it will be a new Form of Government; ſo it would be here. Nor 2*dly*, Is it true, that becauſe the Government (as our Brethren affirm) is in the Rulers only; therefore it may be inlarged, and diſperſt to other Rulers of other Congregations, taken in with them; and the People not wronged of their Right. For firſt, if the Charter of a People, of a Corporation or Body ſhould be, that they ſhould be Ruled by their own Elders (whom themſelves choſe, as a Corporation) by their own Mayor, Recorder, and Aldermen, yet it were a new Form of Government, for them to come under two or three Mayors, Recorders, and Aldermen, of other Incorporate Towns, and they would account it ſo; And 2. The Rulers would think ſo too; As if there were a Family, the Maſter whereof had intire Government within it ſelf; and there were Families increaſt, and they all joyned in a Combination, to Rule all thoſe Families in common, and that in ſuch things, wherein before he Ruled alone; ſurely this would be counted a new Form of Government; how elſe doth Oeconomicks differ from Politicks? Would not Colledges think ſo, though Aſſociated into an Univerſity? If the Colledges ſhould have thoſe priviledges of chooſing Maſter-Fellows, Scollars, of Admitting, of Expelling, inveſted into other Hands, if all the Juriſdiction which they had when alone, or if any great part of it, ſhould be exerciſed in common for them, when other Colledges are built; becauſe they become an Univerſity, they would account this a Diſpriviledging of them. So it would be here in this caſe of Churches.

CHAP. VI.

Some Exceptions made againſt the laſt Argument, as not Concluſive removed, how we are to conſider the Churches, as at firſt planted by the Apoſtles as patterns, and Examples to us.

TO this Argument, there are many Exceptions, which I ſhall conſider.

1. It is excepted, That the firſt Churches, though but ſingle Congregations, having Elders in them, which did or might exerciſe all Church-Acts, cannot yet be drawn into an ordinary pattern; becauſe the firſt muſt, out of a neceſſity, do that which afterwards when multiplied ſingle Congregations, that can Aſſociate, may not do. Even as though Cain at firſt Marryed his Siſter, yet that is no Warrant for us, now to do the like, when Men and Women are multiplied; ſo neither can the Inſtance of the Church of Hieruſalem, or any other firſt Churches, be the pattern to Warrant ſingle Churches now multiplyed, to do that which they then did.

Anſw. 1. The Apoſtles did not ſtay in places, till there were a ſufficiency to ſet up a Church, but if that a Presbyterian Government, over many Congregations, had been the Rule of Chriſt; and that they muſt of neceſſity have been ſet up, they would have rather ſtaid, or ſent an Evangeliſt to Convert ſo many, as to make up a ſufficient Presbytery for a claſſical Church. If Adam could, with his Breath, have made Men and Women, though he had ſtaid a while, Cain ſhould not have Marryed his Siſter. And therefore, if that, by the Ordination of Chriſt, a Presbyterial Church were the firſt Church; God would have ſtaid, and the Apoſtles would have ſtaid, as God ſtaid giving the Ark, and the Tabernacle, and the Law of the Government of a National Church, till ſuch time as the Jews became ſo many, as to riſe to a Nation.

Anſw. 2. It lies upon thoſe, that affirm it, to prove that the endowing ſingle Congregations at firſt with an intire power, was an act of neceſſity, and not voluntary, and as it ſhould ſtand in all Ages. Had a Presbyterian Church Government been according to Chriſt's Inſtitution, the Apoſtles would have Taught Chriſtians to remove out of the places, where they could not make up Presbyterian Churches, and to go into Cities, where they might make them, that ſo Churches might be ſet up in their fulneſs at firſt.

Anſw. 3. The power of a ſingle Congregation, to have acted as a Presbytery at the firſt, was not grounded on a caſe of neceſſity (becauſe there were no other Churches exiſting, to aſſociate with, and ſo was accidental to them) but this one alone Congregation, was eſſentially and innately and intirely compleat in it ſelf, and within it ſelf, as much as when afterward there were many. To ſay the power of Eleven Apoſtles, as combined, was defective; becauſe but over one Congregation, and but out of an extraordinary neceſſity, would be the greateſt Derogation in the World. And if there could be a ſuppoſition, that there had been other Churches exiſting, or coming to Hieruſalem, this Presbytery of the firſt Church had not been bound to aſſociate, as not having ſufficient power within it ſelf. To affirm theſe things of this firſt Presbytery of the Eleven Apoſtles (as our Brethren ſuppoſe it, and it is the main foundation of their caſe) to have been defective, and their power (now becauſe over one Congregation) to have been founded on an extraordinary neceſſity only, as for Cain to Marry his Siſter, in a way below the Warrant, as of the ordinary Rule: Thus firſt to caſt them (in this Example) into the condition of ordinary Presbyters, to make it an argument for the Presbytery; and then to caſt their power at firſt, below the power of an ordinary Claſſis, and to make it then to be dependent on a providential neceſſity; how Derogatory is it to that Tranſcendent power of ſuch Officers? So then, if they are to be lookt upon, at all, as the pattern of an ordinary Presbytery; then as ſuch now, when over but one Congregation, as much as if they had been over many. For to ſay, they were but as extraordinary Perſons, when over but one Congregation; and afterwards an ordinary Colledge of Presbyters, when many, is too incoherent, and inconſiſtent with it ſelf, to be affirmed. And then what is the reaſon that this firſt exiſtence of an Elderſhip over one Congregation, ſhould not be as ordinary a pattern to Warrant, as full and ſufficient a Presbytery in one Congregation, as it is for the ſuppoſed Presbyterial Government over many? So that if it were ordinary, it ſerves as much for us, as them, and indeed for us firſt; becauſe that this, as one Congregation, exiſted firſt; and they were as much an ordinary Presbytery at firſt, as at laſt, and endowed with the ſame ſufficiency of inherent power. And if it were extraordinary, the inſtance will not ſerve them at all, firſt nor laſt, for a ground of Presbyterial Government. And ſurely if this Church at Hieruſalem, had ſo many Teachers beſides Apoſtles, as is pretended, when theſe Congregations came to be Multiplied (as is ſuppoſed) and divided, here was (if ever) enough to have made ſeveral ſufficient Presbyteries, to theſe ſeveral Congregations; and the Aſſociation of many Congregations into one can have place but in caſe of Defect, not of Sufficiency.

2. It is excepted, that we are not to conſider Churches, as they were when the Apoſtles firſt began, but as they were, when the Apoſtles left them; and that Ordo intendentis is one thing, and Ordo generantis is another. Thus Nature firſt makes but a Child, which afterward grows up to a Man.

Anſw. 1. As to the firſt, we argue the Example of thoſe Churches, which the Apoſtles left, and, when they left them, commended them to the Grace of God, as in Acts 14. when they had choſen them Elders, as having ſufficient means to ſupport themſelves. And (as Bains argues againſt Biſhops, and their Government over Churches) thoſe whom the Apoſtles placed as chief, in the firſt conſtituting of Churches, and left as their Succeſſours in their laſt farewell, which they gave to the Churches; they had not, nor were to have any Superiour unto them in the Churches, as is evident in the inſtance of Epheſus, Acts 20.28. & 1 Pet. 5.2. So ſay we, that thoſe whom the Apoſtles left, having placed Elders over them, and left as their Succeſſours at their laſt farewell, commending them to the Grace of God, and ſo conſtituted, without mentioning of Aſſociation for Government, with other Churches; they, by Apoſtolical Warrant, were not to enter into ſuch Aſſociations, for matter of Government and Juriſdiction.

Bain's Dioceſan Tryal, pag.65.

Anſw. 2. As to that other part of the Exception, we reply, that certainly thoſe Churches that the Apoſtles did thus leave, and the power in them, and the Presbyteries thereof, to do all Church-acts as a Presbytery now at firſt, were as perfect Churches the firſt Day (as Adam was a perfect Man, when firſt Created) as afterwards they could be ſuppoſed to be. If Nature at firſt do beget a perfect Child, with all the parts, it may indeed grow in Stature; but all the Natural parts it hath when a Man, it hath when a Child; and though it may grow in Stature, it doth not grow in perfection, nor is defective of any of its Natural powers, when a Child; but all exerciſe their Natural Functions, when a Child, as truly as when a-Man. And beſide, joyn a Thouſand Children together, they will not make one Man.

3. It is expected, that although no Churches may give away their Right, yet they may joyn with them, that will Corroborate their Right: So if the Congregation, that had a Presbytery afore, be multiplyed into another Congregation, it retains the ſame Presbytery, and is one Church ſtill.

Anſw. 1. Either it is at their liberty to Retain their proper Presbytery, proper to themſelves; and the other Congregation goes from them to have anew, or not. If it be at liberty, then Jeſus Chriſt hath Inſtituted two Forms of Government, made two ſeveral Seats or Subjects of intire Church-power, for Men Arbitrarily to caſt themſelves into, which they pleaſe. This is to make two ordinary Patterns, of two ſorts of Church-Government, one of a ſingle Congregation, the other of the Presbyterial over many; and to Warrant the ſufficiency and compleatneſs of either, when either of them have a ſufficient Presbytery. But that Chriſt ſhould leave the Government of his Church ſo indefinite, cannot be imagined; not only becauſe it is impoſſible, that one of them ſhould not be better than the other, but (alſo as hath been ſaid before) in reſpect to the Congregations themſelves; becauſe the one makes a vaſt difference from the other, in the point of fixedneſs and unfixedneſs of Officers; and further, becauſe one would deſtroy the other. For allow but this Principle, that all Congregations that may have a ſufficient Presbytery, may retain the Right and whole Government within themſelves, as the firſt Subjects of it, as agreeing with the Pattern, and what Church will ſubject it ſelf to the Presbyterial Government? And that this is not indifferent to all our Judgments, the Contentions on all hands do Teſtifie. If it be Arbitrary, then it would have been unlawful for any Congregation in the Primitive Times, to have Retained the Right that was firſt ſetled upon them; and to have in exerciſe all power within themſelves as whole, as when Churches did multiply. If it be given as a liberty by Chriſt; voluntary Subjection is not to take it away, and that Form of Government, which it doth give up its right to, being a new change of Government (as was ſaid afore) there muſt be as much an Inſtitution for it, as there was for that Right it had afore. It is impoſſible there ſhould be two Rights to the ſame thing, whereof the one is incompatible with the other; for if the Congregations can claim it as its Rights, then the Presbytery cannot; for that both ſhould exerciſe it, is impoſſible. There may be differing intereſts of power, in the ſame politick Body, but that one and the ſame, while power ſhould be in one, and alſo in a greater, and in another, cannot be imagined.

Anſw. 2. To the ſecond part of the Exception, viz. that it is a ſtrengthening of the power of Congregations, and not a taking of it away, it being an intrinſecal Government, We Reply. 1. That of all other Anſwers, we wonder at that; for if a Maſter of a Family, that Ruled as a Maſter afore, ſhould have his power, in governing of his Family, committed into the Hands of other Maſters of Families, together with himſelf; would he account this a ſtrengthening of his power, as he is a Maſter of a Family, mily, or a looſing of it? Maſters of Colledges would judge it a taking away of their power, not a ſtrong thing of it, for by this they loſt it as Maſters. And 2. If that all theſe do Rule in common, and ſo the Major Vote of them, in common, carries it, multitude of caſes will fall out (whereto tho' he gives a Negative) that ſhall be carryed by the Major Vote, ſo as he utterly looſeth his power, it being thus ſwallowed up by the greater number, how is this a ſtrengthening of it then? And in this caſe, is it not an extrinſecal power to that Congregation, which over-rules it, as well as in the caſe of Biſhops; when as the Votes of their own Officers that are proper to them, and fixed to them, whom they have choſen to watch over them, ſhall not carry matters that belong unto them, as afore they did. 3. The ſtrengthening of Churche's power, lies in countenancing of what Churches have done, after they have done it, out of an Honour to them, and not lightly to hear Appeals from them; but it is not confirmed, by taking the power out of their Hands, and doing their acts for them. Thus Kingdoms, in a League, ſtrengthen each other's acts, when as they do not Foſter Traytors, againſt each other; but if they ſhould mingle powers in common, this were to deſtroy their power and right, as they be politick Bodies.

If it be ſaid, it makes Churches equal ſtill: It is granted that it's true, it makes Churches in a like condition indeed; but how? Not in the priviledges of Churches, it makes them in like condition of Subjection, but not of freedom, as they are Churches, or incorporate Bodies to judge within themſelves. As if Incorporate Towns ſhould have their priviledge of Life and Death, within themſelves, given up to a Combination of many Incorporate Towns together, they were pares indeed, compeers, and here is an equality they are brought unto in this condition, but what equity there were in it, we ſee not.

That I may conclude, if, when Congregations were thus multiplied, a Congregation that before had the Government intire in it ſelf, being inveſted with it, began anew to Aſſociate with others for Government: Either the Claſſical Elders Aſſociated, have taken up the whole Government and Juriſdiction, and left to that Congregation and Elders, which once were inveſted with it, no part of it (which once they had proper to them afore) but as this exerciſed in common; or elſe there is a parting and a dividing of that power, and acts of Government they had afore. If all be taken away, let that be affirmed and practiſed, and a Warrant for it ſhewed, let the claſſical Presbytery chooſe, and ordain their Deacons, let them Suſpend from the Sacrament, let them only Admoniſh, let them admit their Members, let them chooſe their Elders, let them do all. If they part it, either it muſt be Arbitrarily, as themſelves pleaſe, (we will retain this, and you ſhall have that) and if ſo, then they Arbitrarily part with that which was once given them by Jeſus Chriſt; or elſe they part with all by a Rule, and a Command from God, putting the bounds between what the one ſhall have, and what the other ſhall have; let theſe bounds then be ſhewn, or any inſtances, in the Primitive Churches, be aſſigned of ſuch alterations when Churches were multiplied, which in this caſe is neceſſary. This will breed alſo a great alteration and change, in the conſtitution of theſe Congregations themſelves, and their Relations to their Officers, as is obvious to any one who conſiders it.

CHAP. VII.

Two Queries Reſolved, 1. When a Church hath but one Elder, or none at all, whether it retains its power. 2. Whether a particular Congregation having compleat power in it ſelf, may oblige it ſelf, in a conſtant way, to ask Advice and Direction from a Conſiſtory of Presbyteries. Reſolved in the Negative, and proved by ſeveral Reaſons.

I ſhall now Reſolve ſome Queries that may be put, and in anſwering them, ſhall farther clear up my Aſſertion, which I have Demonſtrated by ſo many Arguments.

Queſt. 1. Suppoſe a Church have but one Elder? Yea, ſuppoſe it have no Elders at all? What is become of its power then?

Anſw. 1. Yet that Church whereof there is but one Elder, being the Seat of this Government, it is in this Politick Body, as in the Natural Body. A Man (according to the Law of Nature) hath two Hands; but if one be cut off, or that he wants one, then he uſeth that one Hand, for which both were uſed afore. In this caſe, Vis recurret in proximum membrum, The intire Vigour, will return into the next Member; And this is properly a caſe of neceſſity, and not that other caſe which our Brethren would have, that one Congregation being alone, ſhould therefore have the Government within it ſelf of neceſſity, which it muſt part withall, according to the ordinary Rule, when more Congregations are multiplied.

Anſw. 2. The power of Government, being the Right of that Church, and not of other Churches over it; they are to chooſe more Officers, and they have a right ſo to do; and ſo thereby to preſerve the right within themſelves, rather than to borrow an Eye or a Hand from other Churches. We may ſay in this caſe, as our Brethren have ſaid in the caſe of not ſeparating from a Church rightly conſtituted, tho' it want an Officer or Officers. They ſay, that none ought in that caſe to ſeparate, but it is to be required, that Officers be choſen and ſupplied, ſo ſay we in this caſe. It is in this caſe, as it is in that of ſmall Corporations, which although they are decayed, yet they are Corporations ſtill; and they do not looſe their priviledges, and they do not therefore come under other Corporations to Govern them; but they are enabled themſelves, to chooſe who they are that ſhall Govern them.

Anſw. 3. Their having, or not having Officers, doth not take away their Right; but only it takes away the exerciſe, untill ſuch time as they have Officers. And their not having Officers, it doth not put the right into other Congregations, and the Elders thereof. The Right, in Elders, doth not lie in their being Elders, but in having a relation unto this Congregation, and in being their Elders.

Anſw. 4. Suppoſe when a Congregation doth want a ſufficiency of Officers, and ſo it be diſinabled to act according to its Right; yet its caſe is but as the caſe of a Ward, who, though he is not able to manage his own Eſtate, yet this doth not put him by his Right; and thoſe, that have the Wardſhip for the preſent, have not the right, they have but quaſi jus; And if a Congregation uſeth Foreign Elders, Elders can have a charge in it; but until ſuch time as the Congregation be able to have Officers of it ſelf. And therefore if, in caſes of Defect, Congregations ſhould be aſſociated; and by vertue of their aſſociation, make uſe of other Elders; yet they are not to be kept in that Defect, they ought, and they may purchaſe to themſelves ſuch an Elderſhip, and ſo exerciſe their own Right. The Churches of Chriſt, are not to be kept under Age and Wardſhip. Yea, ye ought to reform ſo, as the Churches ſhould be reduced to this, and have their Rights. The Biſhops, becauſe they would Rule the Churches, in ancient time, made Canons, that there ſhould be but one Miniſter in a Church, and they took away the power of ruling Elders, and ſo did deſtroy the Presbytery in every Church, that ſo in this Defect, there might be a colour for their Government. Whatever inconveniences therefore may be pretended, or whatever is the preſent State of things, nothing ought to prejudice the Rights of Churches; but all Congregations ſhould have liberty to procure themſelves a ſufficient Elderſhip, ſo to have the Government within themſelves.

Again, Suppoſe that ſuch Congregations, as having a Defect of Elders, ſhould ſubject themſelves to a Claſſical Presbytery for Government, untill they had a ſufficient Elderſhip of their own: Suppoſe (I ſay) that this ſhould be the more ordinary condition, of the moſt Congregations in this Kingdom; yet thoſe Congregations, that have a ſufficient Elderſhip, are not, for uniformitie's ſake with them, to ſubject themſelves thereto. For uniformity, with what the Holy Ghoſt in the Word holds forth as perfect, is rather to be held by thoſe Congregations, who are made thus compleat, than for uniformitie's ſake, to ſubject themſelves to the condition of thoſe that are imperfect, that all may be alike, although that hath been the way of uniformity, that hath been urged amongſt us; that becauſe all Miniſters cannot pray out of their own Gifts, that therefore for uniformitie's ſake, there ſhould be Forms of Prayer for all Miniſters to uſe, even thoſe that God hath inabled with ſufficiency of Abilities, and Gifts to pray. It is in this caſe, as in the bringing up of faſhions, many faſhions being brought up by thoſe that had infirmities, on purpoſe to cover them; they, who had infirmities, muſt be obliged to them, becauſe they are in faſhion, and brought up by ſome great ones.

Congregational Presbyteries, they are the Natural Presbyteries, thoſe others, they are but as Step dames, Secondaries; they are but Compounds, and Decompounds of the ſeveral Presbyteries, of Presbyterial Churches.

And what though a Congregation with Elders, they are yet a Church to our Judgments, and are ſo to be acknowledged, as the Church in the Canticles was a Siſter, though ſhe wanted Breaſts. If Congregations be ſmall, and want ſufficiency of Elders, they ſhould be united many of them together to one Church, that they may have a full Elderſhip, and put themſelves (though to ſome conveniences) to come together to Worſhip, for ſo, in the Primitive times, we find that Chriſtians did often come out of Villages to their Cities, to Worſhip on the Lord's Day; and ſometimes removed out of the Villages, into the Cities, that they might have Ordinances.

Queſt. 2. But ſuppoſe that Congregations, having a ſufficient Elderſhip, have alſo both Power and Ability, and right to act within themſelves; yet in a conſtant way, may they not ask Advice and Counſel, and oblige themſelves ſo to do; and before they proceed to Excommunication againſt their Members, if they be obſtinate, bring them to the Claſſical Presbytery, as to a further means, there to be Admoniſhed; and to have the Sentence of Excommunication there diſcerned by them?

Anſw. 1. All communion with Claſſical Presbyteries (which we rather look upon as Synods, than Presbyteries) that we may lawfully hold, we will hold; and all ſuch Communion we do account lawful, as is for ſuch ends and purpoſes, for which they are ordained unto by Chriſt. But what is beyond the ground of erecting ſuch Aſſociations, or of calling ſuch Synods, and the uſe and end of them, that will be to put an unlawful power into them; for every Ordinance, or Inſtitution of God, is commenſurable to the ground upon which it is founded. So as ſuppoſe for the preſent, that God had appointed Synods to be held on ſome occaſions, in caſe of Mal-Adminiſtrations in Congregations; and in that caſe, had endowed Synods with the ſame power over Churches, that Congregations have over their own Members; yet becauſe they had this power in this caſe, and upon this ground, it would not draw on an obligation in the Churches Congregational, conſtantly to adviſe with them ſo; and to bring their Members to be Admoniſhed by them, afore they proceed to cenſure. So as ſuch advice, as this, is not a caſe of Appeals; which always ſuppoſeth a Sentence paſt in inferiour Courts already; But it is a laying the Congregation yet lower; for it is a Suſpending the exertion of that primary and firſt right, which they had, until ſuch time as they have adviſed with another, ſuppoſed more ſufficient and able Elderſhip.

It is with us in this particular reſpect, unto the Presbyteries, as it was with thoſe that were moderate Separatiſts, in reſpect of their Communion with the Miniſtry of England, although we, in other caſes, give more to theſe Presbyteries, than they would do to ſuch a Miniſtry. Many of them, as Mr. Robinſon and others, could communicate with the Miniſtry of England, in Hearing, and in Praying; becauſe in theſe actions, they were not neceſſarily, or only to be conſidered as Miniſters, by all them that ſhould communicate with them; there being other grounds ſay they,

upon

Ch. VII. upon which they might Preach and Pray; and therefore although there was an unlawful relation or reſpect, which they pretend to Preach upon; namely, that they were Miniſters; yet becauſe there was another ground, upon which (ſuppoſe there had been no Miniſters) they might have Preached; hence therefore they did, and could communicate with them in theſe Ordinances, ſo far as that other ground would bear them out. But if it came unto any act, wherein they ſhould properly ſhew themſelves to be Miniſters, in theſe they did abſtain, and could not partake with them; for thereby (according to their Principles) they might have acknowledged them to be ſuch, which they thought they were not, and to have that Authority, which they thought they had not. Therefore if it came to the receiving of the Sacrament, becauſe this is a Miniſterial act; they therefore would not communicate with them, no not for one moment. So alſo as touching claſſical Presbyteries, we can, and ſhall willingly communicate with them, in all ſuch things wherein we think there is a ground for their Erection; and ſo far as there is ſuch a ground, we can Preach among them, and hear them Preach, where a company of Elders might reſolve caſes of Conſcience, we can pray with them; yea, and have recourſe to them for Advice in caſes of difficulty, being the Elders of other Churches, and able to Reſolve ſuch caſes. And this we can do, although we conceive that they are erected to a further end, and inveſted with a further power, which is to us unlawful: But wherein there is a proper acknowledgment of ſuch a power, or that the former right of Congregations mentioned ſhall be prejudiced, and the Power and Ability, that Jeſus Chriſt hath put in them, impaired we cannot do any act that ſhall joyn with them herein. We cannot do it, no, not for one Moment, much leſs for a conſtancy. And the Reaſons why we Judge Congregations ſhould not do all this, Namely, Adviſe conſtantly, bring their obſtinate Members to be Admoniſhed by the Presbytery, nor require their Sentence, ere they proceed to Excommunicate, are theſe.

Reaſon 1. If it were no more but to adviſe, that liberty is not to be taken from a Body of Chriſt, enabled by him to act within it ſelf, and purchaſed by him; which is not to be taken from a Man, by a State or Common-wealth; becauſe the Law of Nature hath beſtowed it upon him. That liberty is not to be taken from a Church in its right, which the Law of Chriſt gives it; that is not to be taken from a Man in his right, which the Law of Nature giveth him. In all actions that a Man is the guide of himſelf in, he is not bound to ſeek advice, much leſs, that there ſhould be a ſtanding Court erected for Men to come into. And in all the other rights that a Man hath, as he is a Ruler or Governour of any Society? as ſuppoſe he be a Maſter of a Family, in which he hath a right by the Law of Nature, it would be an infringement of his Liberty, if in thoſe acts, that belong unto him as a Maſter, he ſhould be bound to adviſe with others, as for the putting away of a Servant, &c. To direct him indeed, in what caſes he ſhould ask advice, the exigents and neceſſity of the thing is the ground and foundation of it; but out of thoſe caſes, it is an impairing of his liberty. Wherein he thinks there is a danger of miſcarrying, and wherein he himſelf wants light, therein he is to ask advice, becauſe there is a ground for it; and yet therein a Man is at liberty, of whom, or with whom he will adviſe; and to take that away, were to take away from the priviledge of a Man, if Men are to preſerve their Native Priviledges, Churches are much more to ſtand faſt in the liberty Chriſt hath purchaſed for them, Gal, 5. 1.

Reaſon 2. That which the Cities of Judah, having Power and Juriſdiction within themſelves, were not obliged to do, nor were to oblige themſelves to do, (although they had a Synedrim, a ſet Court ſet over them by God, for advice in caſes Difficult, and when it was too hard for them to Judge) that the Churches now under the Goſpel, having the like priviledges of power within themſelves, with a promiſe of God to be amongſt them, are not to do, nor are others to uſurp it: For in caſes not Difficult, it had been an uſurpation of an unlawful power in the Synedrim to require, they ſhould ask their advice; and it had been a Diminiſhing of that right and queſtioning of that promiſe of God's being with them in Judgment, to have gone ſtill and adviſed, in caſes clear, eſpecially to have always depended upon an autoritative Sentence of Judgment, required of them to be pronounced by the Synedrim, before that they proceeded; and without which, theirs ſhould not have been valid.

Reaſon 3. A conſtancy of ſeeking advice, and to be bound to it, doth in it ſelf ariſe unto a Subjection to Authority; thus it is Subjection in a Child, to be bound to adviſe with his Parents in all actions of moment (whether they be clear to himſelf or not) as diſpoſing of himſelf in Marriage, and the like; and it is an acknowledgment of an Authority. Yea, to be bound thus always to adviſe with, and not to proceed without the Sentence of a claſſical Presbytery, in Judgment, is of greater Authority in ſome reſpect; and is more than for them to have a coercive Authority over other Congregations, in caſe they proceed amiſs. It is a further limiting of them, thus to tie them up, that they ſhould not exerciſe Government without them. For Magiſtrates may Coerce the Churches, if they do amiſs; when yet they will not oblige Miniſters always to adviſe with them, and have their Sentence afore they proceed. For one Miniſter to depend thus on another, for the exerciſe of his calling, is more than to be ſubject to the cenſure of another, if he doth exerciſe his calling amiſs. It is a greater ſign of Servitude, to do what one doth by the Direction of another, than to be under Authority, that ſhall puniſh him if he do amiſs: This latter is the caſe of a Subject, the other of a Servant. This eſpecially is true, when as thoſe, we ſhould be bound to adviſe with, do claim and challenge an Authority, upon which it ſhould be done (as thoſe that are for the Presbyterial Government in a rigid way do.) It was one great ground, that the Antient Non-conformiſts went upon, againſt yielding to Ceremonies, that ſuppoſing they were things indifferent; yet to have things indifferent in the Worſhip of God, Determined one way, and Men obliged to practiſe one way, when as God himſelf had left them indifferent; this was to give away that liberty, which Jeſus Chriſt had given us. Eſpecially when as theſe, that urged them, pretended to have a Right and Power from Chriſt, to Determine things indifferent in the Worſhip of God; in that caſe to have ſubmitted to them, had been to have acknowledged an unlawful power.

We will put this Parallel caſe, to be judged by their own Principles, that are for the Presbyterial Government. Suppoſe there were found one Man in a Presbytery, that is but an ordinary Miniſter for his Station, in a particular Congregation (and ſo he hath a right and lawful calling in the Miniſtry) and (as it is poſſible there may, and oftentimes it doth fall out to be) ſuppoſe that this Man hath more Abilities for Wiſdom, Holineſs, and all other Miniſterial Gifts; than all the reſt of that Presbytery, ſuppoſe ſuch an one as Calvin, who was an ordinary Miniſter of Geneva, and an Elder in the Presbytery there. If now that Presbytery he liveth in, having a a right and an ability in themſelves, as a Presbytery, to Judge and Determine in all caſes that fall, within the Juriſdiction thereof, ſhould oblige themſelves not to proceed to Sentence without his advice, in a peculiar manner firſt asked, they would think it both a Bleſſing of their Authority, and a giving of too much Authority to that Man; much more if this obligation ſhould lie upon other Presbyteries, whereof he is not a Member. This ſtep (which was the firſt Epiſcopal Authority) the Presbyterians would think unlawful to allow unto ſuch a Man; and in this point, they are ſo tender, as they will not yield ſo much as a conſtant Moderatorſhip, without any other power; and yet that there ſhould be always one Moderator, in ſuch an Aſſembly, is neceſſary, if there be an order kept up amongſt them, as is in other Bodies. But now for a Congregation to adviſe with a Superiour Presbytery, in a conſtant way, is not ſo much as neceſſary; for where there is no need of advice, it is not neceſſary. Let this caſe and the other, be Paralleled, and ſee whether there may not be the like ſaid for Congregations, they having this right amongſt themſelves.

The conſtancy of asking advice upon all caſes, though it were pretended to be but advice; yet the act it ſelf, by reaſon of its conſtancy, would argue a Majority of Power and Rule, it would turn to ſuch in them (at leaſt in the iſſue) that already claim it; and ſo claim it, as that ſome of the Presbyterians pretend all the power to be in the claſſical Presbytery, and not in the Congregational; and that the Congregational Elders, in their act of Excommunication, are but the Deputies of the claſſical Presbyteries, and that they are Præcones, the Proclaimers only of the Sentence; but the Presbyterians are the Judges. That power that is already in one Kingdom, hath a jus divinum, and if ſet up in another, would pretend to it; and when the plurality of Men ſhall be once for it (for the Rigidity of that power) it will draw up all the power to it ſelf. And a Churches yielding, from ſuch Liberties and Priviledges, is by God's uſual Diſpenſation, the loſs of them in the iſſue, To whom we yielded not, (ſaith the Apoſtle) no, not for an Hour, that the Truth of the Goſpel might continue with you, Gal. 2. 5.

When the Court challenged (about the choice of Maſters of Colledges) this as the priviledge of the King, that the Party ſhould at leaſt be made known to him, the Univerſity ſtood upon their Priviledges, that they might chooſe and admit, without giving notice to the Court; knowing that they ſhould ſoon looſe their power, if but ſo much were given up to a greater power over them. Had there been yielding but for a time, it would have indangered, in the iſſue and conſequence, the very continuance of that Truth of the Goſpel, which in that reſpect was profeſſed by them. Periculoſum eſt in rebus Divinis ut quis ſuo jure cedat ac poteſtate, Cyprian Epiſt. ad Jubaian de heret. Baptiz: And all thoſe Arguments, which were brought againſt Biſhops, as having a direct power over Miniſters, will fall in here; for directive power is that, when the exerciſe of it is at the direction of another.

And farther, conſider that, what will make the Church to be under Age, and to be a Child for Knowledge, and guided of it ſelf, is unlawful; but always to ask advice, and to be bound ſo to do, is to bring the Church under Age, and ſo to be in Bondage (for to be under Age, and in Bondage, is all one, as in Gal. 1. 2, 3.) to be as well under theſe Tutors, as under Governours; under Tutors, whom they muſt adviſe withal; and under Governours, whoſe Authoritative Sentence muſt firſt be asked.

Reaſon 4. That which the Churches of the Primitive Times did, having a Right and an Ability to do it, and was a Duty lay upon them, to do of themſelves, that ſhould Congregational Churches, having a right to do now, do without having firſt Recourſe for advice to Presbyteries. And what the Apoſtles, though ſet over Churches, and who were more able to adviſe, than all the Presbyteries now are, did not yet require of the Churches; but blamed them, if they neglected to proceed of themſelves, that Presbyteries are not now to require of the Churches to do, which the Apoſtles did not. But for Churches then to adviſe with the Apoſtles or Evangeliſts, or extraordinary Officers, before they proceed to Excommunicate, was not then required; but it was their Duty to proceed of themſelves, according to the power Chriſt had given them, without waiting for ſuch advice. This is clear in the caſe of the Church of Corinth (whether it were Congregational or Presbyterial, we diſpute not now) becauſe that this Church had a Right to Judge that Inceſtuous Corinthian; and the Fact was ſo evident, that advice they needed not (Do not ye Judge (ſaith the Apoſtle) them that are within? Doth it not belong to you) he blameth them, that they did it not. And as Chryſoſtom ſaith, he accuſeth them, not that they did not certifie him of it; but becauſe they had not mourned, or thrown him out. The Apoſtle thus ſhewing, that it ought to have been done without a Monitor, becauſe of the Evidence of the Sin: And when they had neglected to do it, Paul doth not do it himſelf; but only as an Apoſtle Doctrinally declareth ſuch an one to be Excommunicated by the Church he liveth in. He doth not require, that they ſhould come unto him for his Sentence, before they did it; but he calleth upon them to do it themſelves becauſe they neglected it.

Reaſon 5. That which is to be ſuppoſed needleſs, that is not to be done in a conſtant way. To go ask advice, when there is no need of advice, is needleſs. The Synedrim was God's Ordinance in its place, but if the Cities ſhould ſtill have come up for advice needleſly, they would not have found a Bleſſing in it. And beſides that which is an acknowledgment of the Deficiency of God's Ordinance, and God's Preſence with his own Ordinance, that ought not to be done; but ſuch a conſtant having recourſe for advice, is acknowledgment of ſuch an inſufficiency; for if they do not want it, why ſhould they be bound to ask it?

Reaſon 6. Let this obligation to adviſe with another Presbytery, and for them to approve, &c. ere that a Church (that hath Power and Ability from Chriſt) proceed to Excommunicate, be but Parallel'd with the obligation of a particular Miniſter or Paſtor, for the works of his Office; which, by vertue of his Office, he is enabled, by Chriſt, to do ſingly, and alone; the Presbytery of a Congregation being (as was ſaid) as perfect and as compleatly inabled, for all acts within it ſelf, as particular Miniſter can be ſuppoſed alone to be enabled to the works of his Office, (ſuppoſe Preaching, and the like) God's means being as perfect for Government, as they are for Preaching or Baptizing. Now then, as it would be a Derogation from the Gifts of Chriſt,and from the Office that Chriſt hath put a Man into; and a Diſhonour to the Man that is a Miniſter, conſtantly to adviſe afore he performs any act of his calling; and be bound ſo to do,before he Preacheth a Sermon,or the like.The like Derogation would it be to a Church,and the Presbytery thereof,to be obliged to adviſed,for all their acts of Government,which they perform. And yet look what ground or occaſion there will be, for a Man that is a Preacher, to adviſe with others of his Brethren, about what he is to Preach; the like will be acknowledged, and as far the one, as the other, in their ſeveral proportions, for a Congregational Church, and the Presbytery thereof, to adviſe with other Churches. If a Miniſter ſhould be to Preach any thing that is of great Difficulty, and like to be much gainſaid, and contradicted, any thing that is of great Moment, or new, or uncouth; in that caſe he may do well to adviſe, afore he Preacheth, and have the Judgment of his Brethren. So if ſuch a caſe of Government cometh, in any kind, that hath a great difficulty in it, wherein they are not clear what they ſhall do, or they, upon grounds, think that the way, they are to proceed, is like to be offenſive and ſcandalous to the Churches, about them when done; in this caſe they may adviſe. Occaſional adviſings, ſo far as there is a ground for them, we deny not.

Reaſon 7. That which a claſſical Presbytery is not bound to do to a Provincial, nor a Provincial to a National Aſſembly; that upon the ſame grounds a Congregation (if it have a ſufficient Presbytery) is not bound to do to a claſſical Presbytery. What ground can be alledged, why a claſſical Presbytery is not bound to adviſe with a Provincial Aſſembly, ere it proceeds to Excommunication, but this? That it is an Ordinance ſufficient for thoſe acts, within it ſelf. If then a Congregation be by Chriſt inabled (he having given ſufficiency of Power, and Gifts among them) to do all acts within it ſelf. Why ſhould this Church (which the promiſe of Chriſt's Preſence, to be among them, is firſt made to) which is the Seat both of Worſhip and Government, be deprived of its priviledge, when the others are not. Where Jeſus Chriſt hath given Power, he hath given Gifts.

Reaſon 8. What is it they ſhould adviſe thus conſtantly for, and about what ſhould they depend upon the Sentence of a claſſical Presbytery? Firſt, it is not out of want of Skill; for that muſt be either of the Jus, that is, that they are unskillful, to know the Rule,for what ſins Men ſhould be Excommunicated. Now in the conſtant caſes that fall out in Congregations,for which Men ſhould be Excommunicated,the Rule is known well enough;that Excommunication is for ſuch and ſuch groſs ſins as the Scripture holds forth, and as are Scandalous to all Chriſtians; and if any new caſes fall out, let them adviſe. And we acknowledge, that Synods may be of uſe to find out thoſe Rules, and to hold them forth; But when once they are held forth and known, and commonly received, there needs no advice to know the matter of right, for which Men are to be Excommunicated. Or elſe it muſt be want of Skill, of judging the matter of Fact done; and for that they need not adviſe, for it is to be proved by Witneſſes. A company of Elders, and a Congregation, may as well be able to judge of that, as all the Aſſemblies in the World; and may be thought as ſufficient, and as faithful to judge, whether the Fact be fully proved and cleared by Witneſſes, or no, or is it want of skill, in that Judging, what obſtinacy and impenitency is. As for that (as I ſaid before) they are intruſted to Judge of it; for if they will receive him upon his Repentance, without bringing him to the claſſis, they may; neither are they to bring him thither, till he is obſtinate. Secondly; It is not to have Authority from the Sentence of that Synod, that advice is neceſſary. For that Authority, muſt either be an Authority of Reverence only, or a further power Political. There needs not a further Political power, to be judged by their Sentence; for if a Congregation, and the Presbytery thereof, ſhould proceed to Excommunication, the party was as truly Excommunicated, and with as full a power from Chriſt, as if all the Synods in the World had ratified it. And therefore to add Authority, as Defective in the Congregation, to that end their Sentence is needleſs. And then when a Man is to be Excommunicated, he is to be Excommunicated by them; when it is done, it is done by them; and if a claſſis addeth not Authority, it ſhould not take away this Authority, by obliging Men to adviſe, and to have their Sentence firſt. If of Reverence only, then it ſhould be giving a reſpectful Deference to their Judgments, which in ſome caſes is allowable.

Reaſon 9. Thoſe Admonitions which the claſſical Presbytery are to give to the Perſon that is brought before them, by the Elders of his Congregation (they having themſelves Admoniſhed him, and he remained obſtinate under their Admonitions) are either an Inſtituted Ordinance of Chriſt, Preparatory to Excommunication, to be further applyed to him, over and above thoſe given him by his own Congregation: Or they are to work in a way of Moral perſwaſion, and by the way Reverence, that the perſon hath of the claſſical Presbytery, more than of his own Congregation; that is, they either work politically, as an Inſtitution of Chriſt upon him, or only Morally. For what is it, by which this Man's Conſcience muſt be wrought upon, in theſe Superadded Admonitions of the claſſical Presbytery, having been obſtinate under thoſe of his own? It muſt either be vi materiæ, by reaſon of the matter; and that they have a great Reverence in the Man's Conſcience; or it muſt be by their being inveſted with an Authority from Chriſt. And if theſe Admonitions of the claſſical Presbytery be as an Inſtitution Preparatory, they are to be reckoned Ordinances of the ſame Rank and Kind, with thoſe which the Elders of his own Church hath given him; which Admonitions are not as if a company of Saints or Miniſters ſhould meet him occaſionally, and Admoniſh him; (for he may have a Thouſand ſuch Admonitions, and yet his ſin not be accounted ripe for Excommunication) but his ſin is then ripe for Excommunication, when Admonitions Miniſterially Adminiſtred, by ſuch as Chriſt hath appointed, have been Adminiſtred to him, and he continues obſtinate. So that Admonitions either may be ſaid to have a perſwaſive power only, or elſe a Miniſterial power by way of Inſtitution; and ſo work on a Man by the Bleſſing of God upon them, and by vertue of the promiſe: And, in the want of either of them, a Man cannot be judged fit to be Excommunicated; becauſe that Chriſt's means, appointed by him, have not been applyed to him. So then every Admonition, in this way of Ordinance, is in order unto Excommunication, if the Perſon continues obſtinate.

Now then firſt; if it be ſuch a neceſſary Ordinance to be Adminiſtred by the claſſical Presbytery, afore ſuch time as the party can be Excommunicated; Then 1. The Congregational Elderſhip, and the Admonitions thereof, is not a perfect Ordinance. And 2. It were not only a ſin, for any Congregational Church to Excommunicate a Man, without bringing of him firſt to the claſſical Presbytery; but the Man alſo is not capable, till then, of being Excommunicated by his own Church; for it may be ſaid, there wants an Ordinance to be applyed to him, before he is to be Excommunicated; for all ſuch Admonitions, that are a ſpecial Ordinance of Chriſt, as being preparatory to Excommunication, and in order thereunto, are not to be omitted. And let it be ſhewn, that Chriſt hath divided by his Inſtitution, that ſome Admonitions ſhould be in a Man's own Congregation, by his own Elderſhip, and others afterward to be by a claſſical Presbytery, before he is to be Excommunicated by his own Church. And alſo 3. If it were thus, then a Congregational Presbytery hath not ſufficient power to Excommunicate a Man; for if he is, by vertue of an Inſtitution, to be Admoniſhed, alſo by a claſſical Presbytery, this Presbytery muſt, by Inſtitution, have power alſo to give Sentence, without which, the Sentence of the Congregation were not ſufficient; for that Church which hath power to Admoniſh publickly, in order to Excommunication, muſt neceſſarily have the power alſo to joyn in the Excommunication, or elſe the Excommunication is not valid.

But Secondly; If they be Admonitions only in a perſwaſive way, to a Man that is obſtinate, to work upon him, as, and with a Reverence of the perſons Admoniſhing, and to that end, he is brought to the claſſical Presbytery, to be Admoniſhed, conſider what will follow from it. 1. That thoſe Miniſters ſhould rather be called out, which he in a peculiar manner moſt Reverenceth; they being the fitteſt Perſons to give Admonitions, as John Baptiſt was to Admoniſh Herod, becauſe Herod Reverenced him (as the Text ſaith) and therefore to make an Admonition-Court, of a certain ſort of perſons, whom perhaps the Man knows not, this is to extend it beyond what the ground of a Reverence will always reach unto. And by this reaſon likewiſe, there might be ſome one man, of Eminent Gifts, ſet up to Admoniſh, which ſhould move a greater Reverence in the Hearts of Men, more than half a Dozen Presbyteries. 2. If he be brought only upon this ground, to be thus Admoniſhed by them; then a meer Moral Ordinance of leſs force, is preferred to a ſtanding Inſtituted Ordinance, that, according to Chriſt's Inſtitution, is of a greater: a Moral power is preferred to a political that is given by Chriſt, whereas on the other ſide, the means, that a Man's own Congregation hath uſed, being Inſtituted means, the Bleſſing of Chriſt depends upon it.

Its true, we grant that if a company of Saints, or a company of Miniſters occaſionally meet him, they might admoniſh him, and God may bleſs it; but when thoſe means, that Chriſt hath appointed, hath paſt upon him, and he is not wrought upon by them, then for us to ſet up any other Court of a Company of Men, to bring him unto; which, by Chriſt's appointment, hath a power of a leſſer kind (as if it is but a Moral Reverential power, it is no more) this is but a Secondary and remote power, in compariſon of the former. It is but Perſwaſive, it is not Miniſterial, and perſwaſive Admonitions were applyed to him afore, and he was paſt them; he was Admoniſhed by the Brother in private, he was Admoniſhed by two or three more, which that Brother took to joyn with him; and therefore in a Congregation, Chriſt brings him to an Authoritative means, which himſelf hath in a publick manner inſtituted; and to bring him then from theſe means, unto perſwaſive means again; this muſt needs fall ſhort, and be blaſted to this Man's Conſcience, when the means, that Chriſt hath in a ſpecial manner inſtituted, had taken no place upon him; and this would alſo make Jeſus Chriſt to proceed, from the greater to the leſſer: Unleſs it be affirmed by thoſe, who hold that the Congregations have a ſufficient Presbytery for Excommunication, yet Chriſt's appointment is; that claſſical Presbyteries muſt always joyn with them, without which they are imperfect, which is indeed a condition. Thus there is the ſhew of an ordinance ſet up, to the prejudice of the ordinance of Chriſt; whereas there ſhould not be ſet up an Image to reſemble any appointment of Chriſt; and if any thing, put into the road of an ordinance, be in the ſtead of an ordinance, or preferred to an ordinance, it will grow flat, though of it ſelf it be good, and, upon occaſion, may be uſeful; as we acknowledge the admonitions of a claſſical Presbytery may be; but not in this caſe. We acknowledge that ſuch an admonition, God may bleſs, as he may bleſs good conference; but if any would ſet up good conference, as a more efficacious ordinance than Preaching, when Preaching is the ſpecial ordinance, there would not be found that bleſſing in it.

If it be ſaid, but may not all good means be uſed, to reclaim a Man that is obſtinate, before he be proceeded againſt by Excommunication? And is it not good means, to be admoniſhed by a company of Men Grave and Holy; and is not this better, than to be admoniſhed only by thoſe of a Man's own Congregation?

I anſwer 1. That the goodneſs of all means lies in the Bleſſing and Appointment of Chriſt; and if he have appointed means ſufficient, as the admonitions of the Eldership of a particular Congregation is, then in a conſtant and ſet way, to have an admonition Court, to bring Men unto, further to be admoniſhed, hath not a Warrant for it. If the Congregational Presbytery be a ſufficient Presbytery, then they are a ſufficient means; and Curſed is he that addeth, as well as he that takes from Chriſt's Inſtitution, he that will uſe more than Chriſt hath appointed, as well as he that will uſe leſs. In this caſe we may ſay, If they will not believe Moſes and the Prophets, neither will they believe if one come from the Dead; becauſe God had appointed Moſes and the Prophets, to be a ſufficient means. And thus in Phyſick alſo, to uſe more than is preſcribed, is as dangerous as to uſe leſs. And further, if he is to be accounted obſtinate, after the admonition of his own Congregation, ſo as to be Excommunicated (as if they be a ſufficient means, he is to be ſo accounted) then as God cutteth Men off, when their ſins are ripe, ſo the Church alſo doth.

Anſw. 2. If all good means were to be ſet up, as inſtituted ordinances, then this Man ſhould be brought to be admoniſhed by the principal Aſſembly, before he is Excommunicated; yea, and before the National too (if you will ſet the bounds in a claſſical Presbytery, why had you not as good ſet them in a Congregational (if a Congregational be ſufficient) where Chriſt hath ſet it?) For you may ſuppoſe ſtill, that if he had the provincial Aſſemblie's admonition (Men of greater Authority and Reverence) it might prevent his Excommunication. And beſides, if he may, after his Excommunication, appeal to them, why ſhould he not be brought unto them before?

Reaſon 10. Add to this, that until the Delinquent hath been Admoniſhed, before all the People of the Congregation, he hath not had all the means applyed unto him, in his own Congregation, which Chriſt hath appointed to work Repentance in him: For the whole Church is not told of it, as Chriſt would have it; neither is he Rebuked before all, ſo that all may mourn and lament over him, to break his Heart. And ſurely, it is the right of every Congregation, and of every Member in it, to have all means uſed, that are ſufficient within that Congregation, afore its Members are brought before Strangers. Now if they are to be admoniſhed by the claſſical Presbytery; after that they have been thus admoniſhed twice or thrice, publickly in the Congregation, then, in that reſpect alſo, there is a proceeding from a greater, and more ſufficient means unto a leſs ſufficient For the admonition of the claſſical Presbytery, though given by publick Perſons yet it is given privately; whereas the means according to Chriſt's Order, is to go from more private, to more publick, as a way of doing the perſon good. And the ſhame is more publick afore the Congregation, than afore the Conſiſtory; and therefore, according to the Presbyterial practices, they are admoniſhed firſt by the claſſical Presbytery, and when they are found obſtinate, there they have two o three admonitions publickly before the people, afore he is Excommunicated; which admonitions, if they are in order to Repentance, then they are more Efficacious than what hath been done in the conſiſtory of Elders, and therefore uſed laſt; and and if more Efficacious, why (according to the right of a Congregation, and according to the ſufficiency of means in a Congregation) were they not uſed firſt ſo as the perſon need not be brought, in order to his Repentance, before the claſſical Presbytery; becauſe a more ſufficient means hath already been uſed? So tha In a word, they are carryed unto the Presbytery, either afore or after they are admoniſhed publickly in the Congregation; if afore, all good means have not bee uſed in the Congregation; If after, you go from a more Efficacious means, unto leſs Efficacious, even in that reſpect forementioned alſo.

Reaſon 11. When the Apoſtle ſaith, Tit. 3. 10. after one or two Admonitions, hi that is an Heretick Reject, as condemned of himſelf, as much by thoſe means, a by a Thouſand; the admonitions he intendeth there, are thoſe that are publick and given by them that have the power of Excommunicating. If he be admoniſhed afore his own Congregation, and the Elders thereof, theſe are either ſuch admonitions the Apoſtle there intendeth, or not; if they be, he is to be rejected, without being admoniſhed by any other; for the Apoſtle's Rule plainly evideneeth, tha there is but one kind of publick power, by which the admonitions ſhould be applyed: And therefore if the claſſical Presbytery were that power, which ſhould Reject an Excommunicate this Man, upon their two or three admonitions, then he is not t be brought down, to have admonitions again, afore the people in his own Congregation; but he is to be Rejected, without any further proceeding; ſo that if h be brought to the claſſical Presbytery, after he hath been admoniſhed before th whole Congregation, the Apoſtle's rule is not obſerved, or if he be brought to th Congregation, after he hath been with thoſe that have the publick power, to admoniſh and caſt him out; the Apoſtle's rule is not obſerved neither; and thus wherea God hath built one or two Altars, this would be to build ſeven.

Reaſon 12. That practice, which will breed diſtractions, and more inconveniences, ought not to be. But for a Congregation, that is ſuppoſed to have ſufficient powe in it ſelf, to depend upon the claſſical Presbytery, for a Sentence firſt paſt, wi breed greater inconveniences, than for them to proceed without them. For the firſ if the Congregational Elderſhip be of one mind, that a Man ought to be Excommunicated, and the claſſical Presbytery is of another, the Congregational Elderſhi having ſufficient power, and the Conſcience of Duty lying upon them, they are t proceed notwithſtanding; and ſo by rejecting the advice aforehand, of the claſſic Presbytery, they are brought to caſt a greater contempt upon it, than if they h proceeded without their Sentence, and ſo as to give them an account. And as fo the party, if he will refuſe to go afore the claſſical Presbytery (his conſcience judging, and that upon right grounds, that the Congregation hath ſufficient power, t proceed againſt him) what Rules, in Scripture, will compell him to go to be admoniſhed afore them? If he goes by an Appeal, that's after Sentence, and then th

Congre

Congregation and he are parties; if he goes as complained of by the Congregation, by what rule can they conſtrain him to it?

CHAP. VIII.

Some Objections anſwered..

Object. 1. THat Excommunication is a matter of ſo great weight, to give a Man up unto Satan, to throw him out of the Communion of Saints, as that for the weight and greatneſs of the Sentence, it ſhould be adviſed upon, by a further Eldership, by a greater company, than thoſe of a Man's own Congregation.

Anſw. 1. You greaten the ordinance of Excommunication, as the Papiſts did that of the Lord's Supper, preferring it before Preaching, and ſo magnified the Clergy, and the Prieſts that Conſecrated the Sacrament, and alſo drew the people to the Worſhipping of the Bread. Thus you alſo advance an undue power of the Clergy, combined in an Aſſociation of particular Congregations; and to take their power away, under pretence of the greatneſs of the ordinance committed to them.

Anſw. 2. And yet, it is not ſo great and dreadful a Sentence, according to your own opinion, making it only to be a cutting off of a Church, and not to import a formal delivering up unto Satan. And Anſw. 3. If the Congregation, and the Elderſhip thereof, be ſufficient for power and skill, and faithfullneſs; why, for the greatneſs of the Sentence, ſhould there be a going out to other Churches, when Chriſt hath proportioned his means to his end? And what is there in the Execution of a Brother, that theſe may not be ſuppoſed to be ſufficient for, and to be betruſted with? They are betruſted to Preach the word, every particular perſon is (whether it prove Error or Truth) till he do miſcarry. They are betruſted to admit Members, to Suſpend from the Sacrament? why not to Excommunicate? Yea, the Sentence, and the proof it ſelf, depends upon two or three Witneſſes by God's appointment, and they caſt it; and this, though the matter were brought before all the Judges in the World; then why not, when the matter is brought afore two or three Officers, faithful Men, and a Congregation of Saints; why ſhould not they be eſteemed as faithful Judges, as others? If you commit to a Jury, and one Judge, a Recorder or a Lawyer in an Incorporate Town, though decayed, the power of Life and Death, and cutting a Man off from this life, which when it is done, cannot be remedyed again; then why ſhould you not betruſt the power of cutting a Man off from the Church (if it be unto the Congregation, as being in this caſe the Judges and Jury) Eſpecially, when as there may be a remedy? For he is not ſo cut off, but he may be reſtored.

Anſw. 5. Wherein ſhould the greatneſs of Excommunication lie, but in the matter for which a Man is Excommunicated? We profeſs, it is not for niceties; but for ſins againſt light, againſt the common principles of Nature, and Chriſtianity; as the Apoſtle ſaith, 1 Cor. 5. 3. He that hath ſo done this Deed. There muſt be a Scelus in it, that, if he goes on in it, will Damn his Soul; and therefore the Apoſtle calls that Corinthian, That wicked Perſon ver. 13. And for theſe things, the Congregation is as well able to judge, as all the Elders in the World. In the matter of fact, (as was ſaid afore) a Jury of Twelve men, do judge of the Fact, when a man's Life is concerned; and by a parity of reaſon, a Congregation may judge of the matter of fact, for which a man is to be thrown out of the Church.

Object. 2. But Excommunication is, Res communis, a common concern, which other Neighbour Churches have an intereſt in, and in that reſpect, they are to have a joynt concurrence in it aforehand.

Anſw. 1. So it is likewiſe, to all the Churches in the World, more eſpecially in the Nation, and the party may remove to any other part of the Kingdom; and ſo, then all the Kingdom ſhould have a concurrence in the act aforehand as well, and then the whole Nation ſhould be called.

Anſw. 2. If the common intereſt of Churches ſhould carry it, then it would follow, that becauſe he is Excommunicated out of all the Churches of that Presbytery, all the Churches ſhould be preſent at his Excommunication, as well as that particular Church he is a Member of.

Anſw. 3. If Neighbourhood and common intereſt be inſiſted on, then the Churches of the next Presbytery (whereof many may be nearer to that Congregation, to which he is joyned, than this claſſical Presbytery) ſhould be preſent alſo ; for the Man may go thither to be received, and therefore it is fit that they ſhould have an intereſt aforehand too. There is no Reaſon to be given, why it ſhould be Res communis , A common affair, to that claſſical Presbytery, more than to other Neighbour Churches, as to the thing it ſelf, it can only be ſaid, they have aſſociated voluntarily : But then the ground of that Aſſociation muſt be conſidered.

Anſw. 4. When a Man is caſt out of one Church, he is caſt out of all Churches ; but not formally, but only conſequently, and by vertue of communion of Churches, this common Law being among them, that no other Church ſhould receive him, till he have given ſatisfaction to his own ; and therefore anſwerably, it is not an antecedent cogniſance afore, and by other Churches, that it is neceſſary, but only a conſequent, as was the manner of the Primitive times, to ſend to Churches after, and to tell them, from ſuch an one let us abſtain, this being the Law among Churches ; that if a Man be caſt out of one Church, he is caſt out of all ; either all Churches muſt be called, one as well as another, or elſe ſome particular Church muſt be betruſted, and betruſted by Chriſt ; and if ſo, why not his own Congregation, having a ſufficient Elderſhip for Excommunication.

Anſw. 5. In admiſſion (as was urged afore) every particular Church is betruſted to admit Members ; and, by vertue of the admiſſion of Members into it, they are admitted to have communion in all Churches ; and therefore, why ſhould it not be intruſted for Excommunication alſo. It is no obſtacle, that it is R*es communis*, A common Buſineſs ; for the other is equally ſuch, to all other Churches. We ask alſo, if that Suſpenſion be not Res communis, A common concern alſo, inſomuch, that untill ſuch time as he is Excommunicated, all Churches are to Suſpend him from th Sacrament, after his own Church hath Suſpended him ? And if ſo, upon that ground why ſhould not all Churches be acquainted with his Suſpenſion aforehand ?

Anſw. 6. The fifth Canon of the Council of Nice tells us, that Synods were therefore appointed amongſt other ends, that all the Churches might know, who ha been Excommunicated by a particular Biſhop (as the manner was then) that all th reſt might account him ſo, until he had given ſatisfaction. They were not therefore to be called aforehand, afore he was Excommunicated, on the pretence of common intereſt.

In Tom. 2. Collect. Concil. Labbei, pag. 46.

Object. 3. But in the multitude of Councellours, there is ſtrength.

Anſw. 1. Let them have the uſe of Councellours only, and we deny it not. A Man will not go for Counſel, unleſs there be need ; and in caſes of need, we do acknowledge it.

Anſw. 2. That Rule is the Rule of Nature ; but we have a Rule for the ſufficiency of the Elderſhip of a Congregation, with an Inſtitution, and with a promiſe o Chriſt's preſence, where two or three are gathered together. If this were founde upon meer Nature ; then we would yield, that this Axiom might have place, an they might ſtill take in more Councellours to them. But a Rule of Nature, wi not ſet up an ordinance, though it may help to manage it ; and it ſhould not be ſe to weaken it, and diſparage it, as this doth. Let us reſt in God's ordinance, and re in God's number, what he hath thought ſufficient ; and the conſcience will rather b quieted, and wrought upon by ſubjection to an ordinance, than to a multitude. Th promiſe is not to a company of more perſons, as ſuch ; but the promiſe is mad to the relation, to the conſtitution, and the bleſſing depends upon the promiſe ; an to this purpoſe, God will be with two or three, as well as with three Thouſand in a ordinary way. The Laws of England ſets not up a multitude of Counſellours, tha is, of Lawyers, for the Judging of Life and Death ; but it ſets up a few Judges, wh ſometimes alone, ſometimes two or three together, do Judge all Cauſes, when y there are multitudes of Lawyers, and as good Lawyers as they, and as able to Counſe If we all do reſt ſatisfied in this Law, as the ordinance of the Kingdom, why ſhou we not reſt in the other, as the ordinance of Chriſt ?

Anſw. 3. If this alledged rule held, then claſſical Presbyteries ſhould go to greater Synods; for there is a multitude of more Councellours. And then all the Churches ſhould continually have had recourſe to the Apoſtles, while they were alive, in all ſuch Acts of Diſcipline; for any Apoſtle might have ſaid, am not I Wiſer? Send them unto me; yea, cannot I more effectually perſwade? Therefore both take my advice, and come to me for my Sentence; bring them afore me, to be admoniſhed. The Apoſtles indeed, when they were preſent in Churches, did joyn with the Elders and Officers of the Churches, in their Acts of Government; but they did not require (if abſent) that the Churches ſhould come to adviſe with them.

Object. 4. But may not this be done for peace ſake, whenas this will compound all, and accommodate the differences amongſt us?

Anſw. 4. It is in the caſe of Peace, as in the caſe of Scandal. If a Brother be offended, and the thing be indifferent, and in my liberty; then indeed I may forbear, and I ought to forbear, becauſe of an offence; but I am not to forbear, if it be a Duty which he is offended at; neither am I to give away a liberty: So for peace, Men may forbear things that are indifferent to them, and ſo they ought to do: Yea, they may conceal their own Judgments, and forbear to practice ſome things, which otherwiſe they might do; as the Apoſtle ſays, Rom. 14. 22. Haſt thou Faith? Have it to thy ſelf. But a Man is to do nothing poſitive, that ſhall acknowledge a ſeeming power, and bring Congregations into Bondage, when Chriſt hath ſet them free; for Peace muſt be ſo kept in Churches, as that withal their priviledges muſt be kept. There is no yielding from that right, which Chriſt hath given. The caſe of peace holdeth not in the acknowledgment of a falſe power, for that will breed Deſtruction.

Anſw. 2. It is the keeping of the true bounds of power, as Chriſt hath ſeated them, that will preſerve the peace of Churches; but to yield unto a falſe power, will always be occaſion of quarrels.

Object. 5. But becauſe that theſe Churches may be perhaps offended, with what you do, and with that Sentence you ſhall give, and ſo be ingaged to queſtion you for that Act, after you have done it; is it not therefore better to adviſe aforehand, and ſo to prevent that offence?

Anſw. 1. It was the preventing offences, and the avoiding of Schiſms, that did ſet up Epiſcopal Power, as Jerome ſaith; for becauſe a multitude of Presbyters could not agree in their Presbyteries, they devolved it into one Man; but the Remedy was worſe than the Diſeaſe; for it Degenerated into Tyranny.

Anſw. 2. Simply to prevent an offence, the liberty of Churches, nor the rights that is in Churches, is not to be taken away. An actual offence ariſing is a ground indeed for the Neighbouring Churches, to call upon that Church, to give them ſatisfaction; and there doth hereupon a Duty lie upon this Church, if it have miſcarryed, to give them ſatisfaction. But then they muſt be actually offended.

Anſw. 3. The ground, why they would have us adviſe with the claſſical Presbytery, is not meerly to prevent offences; but it is becauſe they claim an Authority.

Anſw. 4. The caſe muſt be ſuppoſed ſo to fall out, that either the claſſical Presbytery will be of the ſame mind with the Congregational, or not. If it be ſuppoſed, that they ſhall be of the ſame mind, then there needs not to be advice to prevent offence; and this will ordinarily be the caſe, when the Rulers for Excommunication are fixt, and by ſome common Agreement, concluded upon between Churches. Or if it be ſuppoſed, they may not agree, in that caſe the Congregational Presbytery is put into a greater ſtrait, and will run into an higher contempt and offence of the Presbytery claſſical, when they ſhall think themſelves bound to Excommunicate the Man, againſt the Advice and Sentence of the claſſical Presbytery given them.

Anſw. 5. There is no Inferior Court, which hath a Power and Ability to Judge, that, upon a Suppoſition of miſcarriage, and of offending of an Higher Court, hath an obligation laid upon it, upon all occaſions, therefore to adviſe with that Higher Court, to prevent theſe Appeals, and theſe Offences.

Anſw. 6.

Ch. VIII. Anſw. 6. If,for avoiding of offences, there ſhould be ſuch adviſing always afore Sentence with other,or more or greater Churches; then the claſſical Churches ſhould never give Sentence; for they may incur the offence of the Provincial,and this latter likewiſe of the National. And therefore, ſuppoſing that theſe Courts were one above another, and that the inferior had a full Right and Power to finiſh the Sentence of Excommunication, it were much better, to leave it to the cogniſance of the higher Courts, by way of Appeals, than under the preſuppoſition and pretence, that offences may ariſe to weaken the Right of the particular Congregation, by an obligation to adviſe, and to have the Sentence of the higher Court antecedent.

The Government
OF THE
Churches of Chriſt.

BOOK IV.

The claims of the Presbyterian Government conſidered, and refuted. That the Church Univerſal, is not a Church Political, and the Seat of Government. That the Inſtitution for Worſhip and Government, falleth not upon the Saints in a Nation, as a Nation or Kingdom, to be the Seat of it. That an Argument cannot be urged, for a National Church-Government, from the Inſtance of the Jewiſh Pattern. That a ſtanding Presbytery is not to be ſet up, to Exerciſe Power and Juriſdiction, over particular Congregations.

CHAP. I.

That the Church Univerſal is not a Church Political, and the Seat of Inſtituted Government.

I ſhall now examine the Validity of the Presbyterian claims for their Government; and firſt, I ſhall prove, that the Church Univerſal is not, in the whole, and in all the Subordinate parts of it, a Church-Political, and the Seat of Inſtituted Government. The Church Catholick is not a formed Politick Body, which Chriſt hath made the Seat of this power. That it indeed affordeth fit materials, both of Saints and Men gifted, we grant, even as Men are by Nature, having variety of ſeveral parts, and variety of gifts, fitted to the Bodies Politick; and if you take all Mankind, there is, among them, variety of gifts, and Diſpoſitions fitted to make up Common-wealths; yet all Mankind, taken together, are not a politick Body, but as they are formed up into Common wealths or Kingdoms; and Men, having thus ſeveral gifts, are put into ſeveral Offices and Places, in thoſe ſeveral Kingdoms and Common-wealths; which are ἀνθροπωχίτησις, a Humane Creature, as the Apoſtle calls it. Even ſo it is here.

We yield alſo, that take the Church Univerſal in its parts, and ſo the Keys are given to the whole partitive, as divided into ſeveral Bodies, in whom God hath ſet Teachers and Paſtors, &c. As we ſay he hath ſet, in a Kingdom, Conſtables and

Ch. I. Juſtices of the peace, &c. but yet every Conſtable is not a Conſtable of the whole Kingdom; ſo he hath ſet in his Church Apoſtles, &c. who were as the Nobles, and were Miniſters, and had power in all Churches; yet exerciſed their power, per partes, as they came to this Church, and that Church; but he hath ſet other ordinary Officers, as other Juſtices of Peace in their ſeveral leſs Juriſdictions, or as Majors and Recorders in Incorporate Towns.

We yield alſo, that all theſe Churches, by vertue of their Catholick Relation, are knit together again in a common communion, on which they owe one unto another, by ſeveral Bands and Tyes, ſo as they have communion one with another; and that as Churches too, and with their Elders, as Elders: But the preſent queſtion is, of the Keys of Juriſdiction.

1. Theſe Keys cannot be given to the whole Univerſal Church; for firſt they do not, nor indeed can aſſemble.

2. The whole Univerſal Church, hath not all the Keys; for it is not capable of Preaching, nor is it capable of Receiving the Sacraments altogether. And ſuppoſe there were a General Council, of all the Miniſters of the World, and they ſhould receive the Sacrament; they ſhould not receive it as Miniſters, but they ſhould receive it only as Believers.

That the Church-Catholicks on Earth, neither is, nor can be the Seat of this publick Worſhip, nor of this Government, as appears by thoſe Arguments.

1. It can no more be ſo, than all Mankind can make a Common-wealth.

2. This is reſerved to Heaven, which is the only General Aſſembly, where the Worſhip of God is perfected; to which all other particular Aſſemblies, the Family on Earth, come, Heb. 12.23.

3. If this power of Governing be given to the Church Univerſal; then either to a meeting of Elders, or of all the Faithful: Not of all the Faithful, for they cannot meet as in Congregations they do; nor is there any Inſtitution for all the Males to meet, as in Hieruſalem, nor for all the People, Male and Female, as once every Seventh year there, ſo theſe in ſome one place in the World. Neither is this power of Government, given to any meeting of Elders, as Elders to the Church Univerſal; for then either it muſt be, that God hath appointed a ſet company, as in the Synedrim, whoſe Office peculiarly it is, to be theſe Catholick Elders, ſet apart for that Work, as thoſe who were Elders of the People (ſuch in a manner were the Apoſtles,) And if ſo, let the ordinary Inſtitution for this be ſhewn, ſuch as theirs was for that, Deut. 7. 17. This indeed is the Popiſh principle, that all Biſhops, are by Office Catholick Biſhops; and may all, by their Office, attend a General Council: And thus as in Jury, God might have made two great ordinances, for the Government of his Church only; an Univerſal Synedrim for the Church Catholick (ſuch as the Parliamentary power is in this Kingdom) and the other in that of Villages and Cities; there being none intermediate, or ſubordinate between them. But if it were ſo, then all intermediate Synods ſhould be taken away, and only a General Council be that, to which all Congregations ſhould Appeal. And that the Inſtitution was not ſo, is evident by this, that all our Divines do acknowledge, that General Councils are but ad bene eſſe, and not abſolutely neceſſary, (which they would be, if the primary Inſtitution fell upon them) and therefore for the firſt Three Hundred years, there was none. But if the meaning be, that each Elder is an Elder of the Church Univerſal; and that the Church Univerſal is a Politick Body, thoroughout from top to bottom, the greater part ſtill Ruling the leſſer, and the Univerſal Ruling the whole: So as by vertue of their Relation to the whole, they act in any part, or may act in the whole (which is according to the Principles that the Aſſembly goes upon, in their anſwer to our Reaſons) then the Inſtitution of the politick Power, is made to fall firſt, and primarily on the Church Univerſal; for in their firſt Præcognitum, they ſay the whole Church is one, made up of the collection of all; and that hence there is a dependency of all the leſſer, as parts upon the whole. But

4. If the Inſtitution falls upon the Church Univerſal, then the Church Univerſal is a politick Body; and if ſo, then as this whole Church ſhould be but one politick Body, ſo each Elder, ſhould be an Elder to this whole Church, for all ends and purpoſes of an Elder, both for Worſhip and Government, for Elder and Church are Relative; as when the Apoſtle ſaith, Ordain the Elders to every Church, aſſuredly they had the relation of Elders to that Church, both for Worſhip and Government. Now this will ſet up an unparallel'd Monſter in Government, the like to which Mankind never knew; and therefore cannot be the Inſtitution of Chriſt; for Chriſt's Government is orderly. Now the Monſtrouſneſs of this will appear. 1. This will make an external politick Government to be managed by Men, (by Chriſt the Head, we grant it is now managed) that is, greater than any of the Monarchies, which, through their vaſtneſs, were hurtful to Mankind, whom they Ruled. For the Church Univerſal on Earth, is now, and hath been ever ſince the Apoſtle's time, in moſt of Nations, As Mr. Brerewood proves. There are the Ethiopick and Arabian Chriſtians in Africa; the Grecians under the Turk: The Armenians under the Perſian, the Indian Chriſtians of St. Thomas, ſo called, becauſe he was the Converter of Chriſtians there; then there are all which are in Europe: And that many of theſe Churches are, in a great meaſure, pure in their Doctrine, or at leaſt have enough to ſave Men; and ſo cannot be excluded out of the Liſt of the Church-Catholick, appeareth by that confeſſion of Faith, made by Patriarch Cyrill, in the Name of the Grecian Churches. Now to have ſo vaſt a Body to be in the whole, the Seat of Government (eſpecially if you add to it, when the fullneſs of the Jews and Gentiles ſhall come in, and the North and South ſhall give themſelves to Chriſt) how can this be practicable? And if not ſo, how can it be the Inſtitution? It is true, that Chriſt's Internal Kingdom, and is thus large managed by himſelf, both in whole, and in part, and by his Spirit: But that his External Kingdom ſhould be ſuch, is inconceivable.

2. That, which increaſeth the wonder, is, that all theſe ſhould be governed by a general Ariſtocracy, whereas that it ſhould be governed, by one Man, would be more feaſable: But then,

3. It makes it more ſtrange, that this ſhould further be the Law of it, that every Elder of every Congregation, ſhould be the Elder of theſe Churches, yea, of the whole Church; for all acts of Government, and that he ſhould be bound up in his conſtant function, and exerciſe to the compaſs of one Congregation; and yet have, by a Fundamental Inſtitution, a Right of Eldership in power, in all the Churches of the World beſides. See but how abſurd ſuch a Government will be in the like civil Society, that were ſo vaſt a Body; ſuppoſe that in all theſe Countries mentioned, or all over the World, the Forms of Government, that now are, ſhould be pull'd down, and ſhould begin anew; and that the Government ſhould be, that the Burgomaſters or Aldermen, yea, Conſtables of every little Town or Village, choſen by the People, ſhould be an Alderman to all ends and purpoſes, in all Towns Imperial, Incorporate, yea, in Villages, to Hang and Draw, as occaſion is, throughout the World, and to have as much Right, as any therein; and by vertue of the Law, this Duty ſhould lie on him, to ſtir up others, and joyn with others (if there be any thing amiſs) to aſſume the Authority to execute this. We read indeed, that in the Roman Monarchy, it was the priviledge of private Perſons, that he who was free of one City, Rome, was free of all the World, for Trading, &c. but that he ſhould have power of Office in all Cities, was never heard of. This is a thing that never fell out, no not in Iſrael. There were indeed, general Elders, on purpoſe, appointed over all the Nation; but they were not Elders over every City. It is no where found, but in Turky, it is not to be parallel'd, but in that Government, which the Janizaries have, and among the Jeſuits, it is the Law of their Society, but it is formidable to Princes, as was that of the Templers.

4. It is ſtrange, that Chriſt ſhould appoint ſuch a Government, and leave it looſely for the perſons, if they be called (as that is the Limitation with which our Brethren would mollifie it) to act in this, or that part of the Univerſal Church; and never ſo much as ſet down any of theſe things. In ſo great a Body, and Latitude of power, there had needed to have been, the moſt ſure and certain Order, diſtinctly appointed by Chriſt. For let it be conſidered, how many things were to be ordered; As whether there ſhould be but one General Council, to which all controverſies ſhould be brought, as in Iſrael the Sanhedrim was: And whether it ſhould be of a conſtant ſtanding, or be choſen anew every year: Whether in it, there ſhould be more of Ruling or Teaching Elders, or an equal number of both; Whether there ſhould be many Subordinations of ſorts of Elders, and how many of them; and by what Rules and Limits, ſet out; and what number of each Elders ſhould be therein: And who ſhould chooſe them which are to be ſent, whether every individual Elder meeting, as in provincial Aſſemblies they did, or whether a few choſen ſhould chooſe the others. It is a wonder, that Chriſt hath ſet down none of theſe things, that he neither appointed one General Court, to which all Appeals ſhould be brought; nor, if there were to be Subordinate Synods, hath aſſigned how many they ſhould be, nor ſo much as declared, that there ſhould be any ſuch Subordination. And if the General Law of this ſuppoſed Government is, that every greater number ſhould Rule the leſs; this would be an exceeding looſe, and confuſed foundation of a ſetled Government; and a ſetled Government, Chriſt muſt be ſuppoſed to have left. In this caſe therefore, ſurely there ſhould, of neceſſity, be the moſt poſitive Law to determine what that call is, whereby ſuch ſhould execute it, as well as to lay down a Law for the right, or elſe every one of them would challenge it; for every Man will ſay, he hath as good a Right as another, nay, greater.

5. This Right would both give all a pretence to it, as alſo lay it upon them. For as it is their Duty (as it was Paul's) to take care of all the Churches, ſo they have a call already, by their Fundamental Relation. And then if Elders, choſen by the Churches, ſhould determine one way; yet the reſt having a Fundamental Right, being Catholick Elders by Inſtitution, might Determine the other way; for the obligation is by vertue of their being Elders of this Catholick Church.

6. Chriſt never gave an Inſtitution, which was never brought forth into Act; but ſuch is this pretended Inſtitution of a Catholick Church, to be the Seat of Government.

1. Becauſe that Church can never meet; and as fruſtra eſt potentia, ſic etiam poteſtas quæ non reducitur in Actum, i. e. not only Natural Power; but Authority too is in vain, which cannot be brought into the condition of Acting. Chriſt did not ſet up a Doctrinal Principle for Government, and policie in the Speculation; but ſuch an one as is practical. And our Presbyterian Brethren make uſe of the Notion, yet reject the thing; for they would be unwilling, that a General Council of all Chriſtians intereſted, ſhould be the Major part, Determining all the parts of Government and Doctrine, and bind up all Churches thereunto. Surely Jeſus Chriſt ſuited his Government of his Church to all times, and there have been few times, in the World, in which this could be done, no not by General Councils; Diviſions have and will hinder it, Perſecutions, or diſtance of place, or want of conſent, who ſhall call them, will hinder it.

2. It cannot be, that the primary Inſtitution ſhould fall upon it; for then the Inſtitution ſhould fall upon the Repreſentative Church firſt, rather than on the Church both of the Faithful, and of the Elders too. But the Inſtitution muſt rather be where both are; for they have more of the Reality of a Church.

3. God giveth Gifts and Abilities, ſuitable to all his Inſtitutions; when God did call Apoſtles to an Univerſal Elderſhip, he gave them Gifts ſuitable: Now there are few, we may ſay none, of Elders that are fit to be Elders Catholick, that are fit to act in the Church Univerſal: And yet, every one in their place, every Ruling Elder, by this principle, muſt be ſuppoſed to be fit if called; for the Inſtitution and their Office (according to this principle) doth give them the Jus, the Right, and the Ability; whereas the choice, by others, gives only the exerciſe; but the right, if founded upon an Inſtitution, ſuppoſeth a fitneſs, or an Ability in all. That every Biſhop (who pretended to have an higher Degree of Office, than ordinary Elders, by Divine Inſtitution) ſhould be a Catholick Biſhop (for by the Antient Canon Law, all Biſhops, in the World, might be of a General Council, by vertue of their place) is far more ſuppoſable. For as by their principles, they were of an higher Function; ſo a ſuppoſition might be made, of a proportionably higher Eminency of Parts, and Gifts to be in them, above other Men, as in ſome few in the Church there eminently is, as well as there is a vaſt difference of Natural Gifts, among the Sons of Men. Thus as Biſhops were ſuppoſed to be Men of an Higher Degree, ſo, like Saul, they might be ſuppoſed Taller than their fellows. But to make all Elders, yea, Ruling Elders, (for they muſt come in too, if they be likewiſe by Inſtitution) and all Miniſters, Catholick Elders, and fit for General Councils, is to aſſert, that Chriſt hath alſo given to them all Gifts and Abilities, ſuitable to ſo Great a function and charge.

4. God never called Men to do work in any part, which they are not capable of, as theſe Catholick Elders are not; for they ought to have variety of Languages, as God gave the Apoſtles. For if Appeals may be made, they are to hear every Man in his own Language ſpeak for himſelf. When God did make Catholick Elders, Catholick Rulers, he gave them Languages. You argue more Congregations than one, from variety of Languages in Hieruſalem, or elſe they could not perform their Duties to each. We may do the like againſt this Catholick Elderſhip here. If it had been only aſſerted, that every Man is an Elder of a Church, in the ſame Nation, then indeed ſuch Elders might, in reſpect of Language, have been fit for their Office; but if you extend their Office to all the World, then it is impoſſible for them, to diſcharge it, when they are called to exerciſe it in any part of it, ſince they have not all Languages; and ſo are not capable of a call, to exerciſe their whole Function (as our Brethren ſay, their Right and Office is) in every part, or in the whole. But now when God made Officers of all Churches, he gave Gifts accordingly, Tongues, and Languages, as to the Apoſtles. Now we believe, that moſt Ruling Elders, have but one Language; yea, and if Latin, were the general Language, they were not fit to be Catholick Elders.

5. By the Law of this Rule, if the Apoſtles ſhould have met in a General Council, other Elders being alſo in that General Council, Catholick Elders, and being there, by vertue of being Catholick Elders, they muſt needs have been, in that reſpect, equal with the Apoſtles. For in that place, and in that Sphere, what could the Apoſtles challenge more of Authority amongſt them, ſince to be a Catholick Elder, was the Higheſt Authority of an Apoſtle?

6. This principle is contradictory to other principles of our Preſbyterian Brethren: For, whereas to rear up their Subordination of Aſſemblies, they invented a Repreſentative Relation, perſonating many Churches, and alſo other Superior Aſſemblies, ſuch as National, and General Councils; this new taken up principle, of every Elder's being an Elder of the Univerſal Church, deſtroys it, or makes it needleſs. It takes away all ſuch Repreſentations; for every Perſon, choſen to be of them, was already a Member really, and not Repreſentatively of the whole, and hath a full Right of Elderſhip of the whole Church, according to this their Notion, and the ſpecial call, any one hath, is but Deſignatio perſonæ, a Deſignation of the Perſon, who ſhall ſerve at ſuch a time; but in that Council, when met, he Repreſenteth the whole Church, as much as any particular Church, when he meeteth there. And to make him an Elder, repreſenting any particular Church, is to give him a lower Title than he had; for he is an Elder of the Univerſal. And his call only gives the Exercitium, the other gives the Jus, which is more than the Exercitium, for it is the root of it.

7. It would make Bellarmin's Argument good, that the greater company of Elders ſimply would have the greater Authority; for, it lying not in repreſentation, but in being Elders of the Catholick Church, they muſt (though out of a Council) needs carry it, if more of them will agree to meet in a Body, at any time.

8. If every Elder were thus an Elder of a Church Univerſal, then the Church Univerſal ſhould call him to his Office; but the Church Univerſal doth not call him, but only particular Churches. For Church and Elder are Relatives, and the call is that which makes the Relation: And Jeſus Chriſt calleth either mediately, or immediately. Immediately, he indeed did call Apoſtles to be Officers of the Church Univerſal; but then himſelf did it, and gave Gifts accordingly fit for it. When he calleth mediately, there is a proportion between the means by which he calleth, and the thing whereto a Man is called; and therefore the proportion muſt lie in this, if he be a Member of the Church Univerſal, the Church Univerſal muſt be the means of his call; and if he be called by a particular Church, then his Office reacheth no further: We have an expreſs Inſtitution, that Elders were ſet over their particular Flocks, by the Holy Ghoſt, Acts 20. and when the Apoſtles themſelves, who were General Officers of all Churches, did Ordain any Elder, it was but Κατα πολιν, and Κατ' Ἐκκλεσιαν, ſo that although the callers had an Univerſal power, which no Synod in the World hath the like; yet the Office of the called was limited, according to the Seat and Church, to which he was called: And if the Apoſtle did not make General Elders, who yet had an Univerſal Power, then ſurely a particular Church cannot make a general Elder, that exceeds its proportion; he is thereby limited both by the extent of the power of the callers, and the limits of the Seat, to which he is called: And indeed, the Nature of an Office, in the Church, is a Separation of him for a conſtant work; it is not to do here and there an act of Office, as a Journyman, but to have a conſtant imployment, which Office therefore is limited to a certain Church, which Church alſo calleth him to a certain imployment there. And if it be ſaid that a Corporation hath power to call a Man to be a Member of the Parliament, for the whole Kingdom. Yet there is a double difference in this. The Law ſaith not, that every Burgeſs is a Parliament Man, and a Burgeſs of the Kingdom; which is, that you would make to be the Law here. And then in the Second place, the whole Terminus, and Object of his call, is to be a Burgeſs in that caſe of the whole Kingdom; and the relation ceaſeth, when the uſe and exerciſe ceaſeth.

And if it be ſaid, that every Member is a Member of the Church Univerſal; and therefore every Elder is an Elder of the Church Univerſal: The caſe is not the ſame: For the one is a meer communion by way of priviledge: The other is by way of Juriſdiction. And there is a great deal of difference, between a Man's being free to Trade in all places, and in all Countries; and to have the power of a Senator, or a Conſtable, or a Noble-man, in all Countries where ever he comes. And ſure our Brethren will not hold themſelves to the parallel thereof, for 1. Tho' a Member of any other Church hath the priviledge to Receive the Sacrament, or have his Child Baptized; yet they would not allow him a capacity of being called (when he comes occaſionally among them) to chooſe an Officer with them, or exerciſe ſuch a priviledge over them, or with them. 2. If the proportion of Elder and Members be obſerved, then by this Rule, as any Member of another Church may, without any further ſpecial call, than barely a Teſtimony, that he is a member of another Church, challenge communion with any Church; (without any precedaneous active call of the Church intervening) ſo by the ſame Rule of proportion, if every Elder, were an Elder of the Church Univerſal, you need not ſay, if he be called by another Church, he may do thus or thus; but if it be made out by Teſtimony, that he is an Elder of another Church, he may challenge the priviledge of an Elder, as the other may of a member. 3. As for the communion of members in other Churches, there needs not any ſpecial Aſſociation of Churches into a Presbytery, neither hath a member a further right or call, to receive, in a Church within his Aſſociation, then in any other Church in the World. By like Reaſon, Aſſociations ſhould be as needleſs for theſe Univerſal Elders to exerciſe Government in, and if the proportion holds, then as the Elder or Elders of one Aſſociation is excluded from coming to intermeddle in a Neighbour Aſſociation: So members of another Aſſociation ſhould be from communion in thoſe Churches, which are not Aſſociated with it.

9. That which is the principle and foundation of Popery; and which if it prevail'd, and all the Churches challenge the right of it, would hinder further Reformation and Growth in the Truth; and would make all the Reformed Churches Schiſmaticks, and would juſtifie Nonreſidency, and introduce a Foreign Eccleſiaſtical Government, in all States and Kingdoms, that cannot be Chriſt's Government: But ſuch is this Catholick Political Church.

1. As for Popery, Bellarmine and Suarez lay this Foundation for the Pope's Authority. 1. That the Church Univerſal is a politick Body, and he quoteth the ſame Scripture, that our Brethren uſe to do. And 2. He ſaith therefore, it muſt have a Supream power, exiſting ſomewhere: For as there cannot be una res publica ſine Civili Suprema poteſtate, nor unus exercitus ſine imperatore; ſo nor can there be Eccleſiæ politia una, without an External Supream power, ſuited thereunto. And if there be ſuch a politick Body, ſee how eaſie a ſtep it is, for the Pope's Monarchy in the third place: for if the Inſtitution do ſall firſt upon it, then there is reaſon ſuppoſed, that Chriſt hath ordered a conſtant exiſtent Government; for the greateſt Inſtitution deſerveth the greateſt Bleſſing; And he that gave Ordinances to every particular Church, Paſtors and Teachers, would be ſure to give them to the whole, conſidered as a politick Body. So Bellarmine argueth alſo, that if the particular Churches had not been united into one Body, one Paſtor might ſuffice each; but if they be all united into one great Body, there muſt be (ſaith he) one external Paſtor over the whole.

2. To think that Jeſus Chriſt ſhould make an Inſtitution of a Doctrinal principle only (which ſhould not have exiſtence) namely of this, that the Church Univerſal is a politick Body, only to ſet up pedling Presbyteries, by vertue of it, or Provincial Aſſemblies, when yet his Inſtitution, is by that principle, ſuppoſed to fall primarily, upon the Church Univerſal, is not likely.

3. The competition would be, whether a General Council ſhould be the conſtant exiſtent Government, or one Man. A General Council there never was yet, one that was truly General (as all acknowledge) but that ſome Churches have been left out, either thoſe in the Indies or Gothland, or ſome-where elſe they have been ſtill, as Chamier argues againſt the Pope: And if it could be, it could be but rarely; but Chriſt would have appointed his Government (if his prime Inſtitution had fallen here) for one time, as well as for another. But now as when Moſes was wanting, they ſet up a Calf, the Chriſtian World, if this principle were true, would ſay, here is an Univerſal Church, but where is a Government extant?

4. And then if a General Council were extant, yet herein one Man may moderate; and it is not againſt the eſſence, or the conſtitution of Government, (as Presbyterial Divines acknowledge) that one Man ſhould be a conſtant Moderator.

And then 5. If that this General Council were Diſſolved, at ſome time they might have the ſame power that a National Aſſembly uſeth to have in Scotland, to make a Committee of a company of a Head City, to be Commiſſioners till the Council meet again, and this would be a good ſtanding conclave (ſuch as is at Rome) for the whole Church.

And then 6. If you would help it out with the Law of Nature, as you uſe to do with this principle of the Univerſal Church, if the Inſtitution be not very expreſs, the Law of Nature will as well ſet up one Man, to whom Appeals may be made; and the Analogy of the Forms of Civil Governments and Monarchies of the World, which all the World runs after, will help to ſtrengthen it.

And then 7. You ſhall have the Examples in the Old Teſtament (which alſo, in this caſe, you uſe to have Recourſe to) to back it. There was a perpetual Synedrim, where there was a National Univerſal Church, and there was an High Prieſt, and if the High Prieſt were ceremonial, yet that one Man ſhould be over the ſeveral Order of Prieſts, was according to the Law of Nations, whereby the Eldeſt, in a Tribe, was over the reſt. And to have this one Man, and this Conclave to be peculiarly deſigned for the Church Univerſal, is more practicable: For if there were ſuch an Inſtitution, who would not rather think, that there ſhould be one Man, or ſome Men, whoſe buſineſs ſhould be ſet apart, to watch over all in common, with Apoſtolick promiſe made to them, than that thoſe that have charges of their own little Congregations (which Congregations are to be the main of their care) ſhould be all Catholick Elders? That other way the Church would be eaſily governed; for particular Paſtors would only have the care of particular Churches, and one Man perhaps, together with others ſingled out, ſhould be appointed for nothing elſe but the publick: Whereas this principle would make it every Man's care, and ſo no Man's, or divide them between the general and their particular charges.

8. Then you would have all the inconveniencies of an Ariſtocracy, in the Government of ſo great a Body, which will prove equal to thoſe of a Monarchy: For firſt, all Hereſies have ever been from the Clergy, and their Diviſions. And ſecondly, the Church would ordinarily, this way, want a Supream Government, which the other way of one Man, would be conſtant in. And 3. Diviſions would not ſo eaſily be allayed. So as indeed, it is more Rational, (if this principle had been true, that the Great Body of the Church Univerſal ſhould be a politick Body;) that Chriſt ſhould have Inſtituted a conſtant Conclave for the Government of it, under ſome one Man.

Laſtly, It would make the Clergy, the Catholick Church in the Creed; for to tell the Church, if it be a politick Body, is to tell theſe Elders which Repreſent the whole. Yea, by this you would make two Churches; one of the Elders, another of the Faithful: And if you diſtinguiſh it yet further, into the viſible and inviſible, you make three. And then as for that Catholick Church of the Elders, they would be a fit Body for the Pope preſently to be the Head of them, and to ſtep into the Throne; for the Pope, and the Popiſh Clergy, make that one Beaſt mentioned in the Revelation.

2. This principle would hinder all Reformation, if Practiſed according to the Law of it; and prove all Reformed Churches Schiſmaticks: For if there were, de jure, a General Aſſembly of all Grecian, Egyptian, Ethiopick, Perſian Chriſtians, and they would ſet down the Doctrine, which we ſhall all be confined to; and we ſhould be, by the Law of the Univerſal Catholick politick Church, obliged to an uniformity with them, or with the greater part of them, as well as now we think our ſelves to be with the Reformed Churches: How would this ſet the Clock of Reformation back? And yet according to this principle, we are more bound to the Law of uniformity to this General Body, than we are to any particulars: For Inſtitution doth fall firſt according to this Notion, upon the Church Univerſal, and therefore the Law of it would oblige more. And ſo if we refuſe to do this, we ſhould make our ſelves Schiſmaticks, from the Great Ordinance and Inſtitution of Chriſt. Yea, this muſt have been the Law of Reforming Churches in all Ages, with reſpect to the Church Univerſal. For the Law is perpetual, and is at no time Diſpenſable; for Chriſt is with his own Ordinances, to the end of the World. If Luther had been bound up, by this Law, how had the Church been Reformed? We ſhould not have gained that in ſeven Hundred years, that he did in Twenty. Yea, if this Synod had been ſo choſen by the Law of the Univerſal Church, as to take in the Miniſters of all England; ſo that the Law were to call all, one as well as another (for one and all are Miniſters, as well as Churches) this would have ſpoil'd your Reformation. And beſides, this would make us all Schiſmaticks, by our National Covenant; for if we were under the Law of the Church Univerſal, as a politick Body, we do make a Separation from this Law, by combining our ſelves only with Reformed Churches, that are ſo ſmall and inconſiderable a part of the Church Univerſal.

The Aſſembly of Divines at Weſtminſter.

3. It juſtifies Non-reſidency, or makes Non-reſidence, Jure Divino; for Miniſters, being Elders of a Church Univerſal, by a prior Inſtitution, can never be abſent from their Flock. And every Man may pretend, for a more general Service of the whole, whereof he is a Member, that the leſſer ſhould give way. And this was the chief grounds for Non-reſidency, in the Biſhop's times, that every Man was a Miniſter of the Church of England in general, and ſo he might ſerve the whole; and therefore, though he were a profeſſor in the Univerſity, he was ſerving the whole Church, and ſo he might hold other livings too, and yet be abſent from them.

4. It layeth a Foundation of bringing in a Foreign Power, to bind all or any of the Kingdoms in Europe. It will bind any, for the greater part of the Reformed Churches, if we ſhould go no further, may challenge, by vertue of this ordinance and inſtitution, that, what they agree upon, we all ſhould receive.

Object. But you will ſay ſtill, that the Magiſtrate may ſtill call thoſe Univerſal Elders to meet in a Council, or not call them.

Anſw. 1. But ſtill if this be an Ordinance, they are to call themſelves: It is their Duty; They are to aſſume it, if the Magiſtrate ſhould neglect. And Anſw. 2. However when they are called, they may impoſe their Canons. And Anſw. 3. The Magiſtrate is bound to be Subject, for they are Chriſtians, and ſo Pars Eccleſiæ, and ſo to be Subject to this Ordinance; for they have not a power to break the Ordinance of Chriſt: And they are not to Reſiſt it, for there is a Law of Chriſt's Inſtitution upon it. If it be but conſultive to the Magiſtrate, then they ſay no more than we; if obligatory, then it bindeth, and then they muſt either take the Magiſtrates into the Council as Members alſo, which is the uſual Salvo for it; and ſo they are parts of the Parliament and Common-wealth, which hinders the freeneſs of the Vote of the Eccleſiaſtick Perſons; And then if the Major part which carry it be not the Magiſtrates, but Miniſters, as uſually they are; then the Magiſtrates, in their civil Aſſemblies, when they come to confirm it, are bound either to ratifie it, or not: If not, then the Authority of the Synod is but conſultive to them: If they be bound, then this Synod is a Superiour power to the King and State; and this within their own Dominions, by vertue of this Catholick principle. And then, without their Dominions, the greater number of Churches will oblige both the one and the other, and is a power over Princes; yea, and a Foreign Power may be brought in hereby, and as well as by Popery, only with this difference (if you cut off Infallibility) that there is but one Man, the Pope, but here an Ariſtocracy of Divines.

Laſtly, Any among us would not be more bound to the Elders of our own Churches, then to the Biſhops, and Elders of the Eaſtern Churches, if there was to be found more of the Catholick Church, or a greater among them; for hereby I have as good a Warrant and Authority to cleave to them. Cohabitation doth not oblige me to my own Elders, when the Inſtitution is Univerſal all the World over.

Thoſe places that are ordinarily alledged, 1 Cor. 12. 28. and Epheſ. 4. although they import communion amongſt Churches, by vertue of that Catholick obligation; yet none of them hold forth, that that Catholick Church is a politick Body. Indeed it is ſaid there, that God hath ſet up Apoſtles, &c. in that Church; but it is as a Man may ſay, he hath ſet up Kings and Emperors in the World, it doth not therefore follow, that the whole World is one politick Body; and all the Kings and Emperors have an Authority over the Univerſe, but only partitive in their ſeveral Dominions.

And the communion which the Members are obliged unto, and the bands and ties, there mentioned, are not only between the Saints and the Churches, and the Officers thereof now extant, and exiſting in the World, the Catholick State of the Church, in all Ages, is implyed, with whom we profeſs to hold a communion now, and we ought to do it, as well as with the Churches now extant. And that is clearly the Scope, in Epheſ. 4 and 1 Cor. 12. 28. for he ſpeaks of Prophets and Evangeliſts, Paſtors and Teachers, that are given to build up the Churches in the Faith, untill the coming of Chriſt, every Age being knit unto another, by certain bands and tyes; and the Church in every Age, receiving a benefit by the Paſtors and Teachers, and by the Prophets and Apoſtles, and their Writings in former Ages: And in all Ages, they have conſpired ſo far, as to preſerve Fundamental Truths. And from thoſe places it may as well be argued, that Paſtors and Teachers, and general Councils in former Ages, have a Juridical power upon all the Churches afterward, as that the preſent Churches have, for he ſpeaks both of the one, and the other, as one Totum complexum.

Object. And if it be ſaid, that the Apoſtles were Miniſters of the Church Univerſal, having Juriſdiction over the whole Univerſal Church; therefore once the whole Univerſal Church, was a politick Body in their time, and why not now: It is thus anſwered.

Anſw. 1. Beſides the difference of Apoſtles and other Elders, elſewhere ſpoken of, even to the Apoſtles themſelves, all the Churches Univerſal did not make one politick Body, to be governed in common; but the Apoſtles ſtill as they came to ſeveral Churches, had power in all thoſe Churches ſeverally apart; ſo as all thoſe Churches are not called one Church, no, not in reſpect of the Apoſtle's Government. But this opinion of the Univerſal Catholick Church, being a Body politick to all theſe Elders, would make it to be in order to a Combination under thoſe Elders, as one whole politick Body, governed by them in common, and in, and by common Aſſemblies; whereas the Apoſtles, ſeverally and apart, had, in all theſe Churches, the power ſtill as they came occaſionally: And therefore to aſſert, that particular Churches, having their particular Elderſhips, by whom they are governed, make up one Myſtical Church, is in this to anſwer the pattern of the Apoſtle's Government it ſelf; that as the whole Church then was not governed by the Apoſtles, as a whole Church, but only by parts; that is, the particular Churches by an Apoſtle, as he came into it, or as he had occaſion to write to it; that ſo now this whole Church is alſo by parts governed, that is, the particular Churches are governed by their ſeveral Elders, having Juriſdiction therein, and therein only. And if unto Apoſtles themſelves, this whole Church was not a politick Body, taken as one, then much leſs to Elders of particular Churches.

2. And alſo further, the meaning of that place, in 1 Cor. 12. 28. is not that every Elder hath an Authoritative politick Juriſdiction in all Churches, as occaſion is, which is evident by this; because other particulars are there mentioned, as namely Ruling Elders, and Deacons (which our Brethren do underſtand by thoſe words, Helps and Governments, for ſo it is in the Original) ſo then they alſo ſhould be Officers, as Deacons, and as Governours in all Churches alſo. And therefore his meaning is only this, it is as if it ſhould be ſaid, in a Common-wealth he hath ſet Noble-men and Judges, &c. who have the power in the whole, and every part of a Kingdom; and he hath ſet Juſtices of Peace, and Conſtables, and Headboroughs, &c. but it would not follow, that as the Noble-men and Judges have power in every part, ſo the ordinary Juſtices of Peace, and every Conſtable or Headborough hath: And yet if from that place they would argue, that ordinary Elders have power in all Churches, as Elders, they muſt alſo acknowledge Deacons to have the like.

3. And that place in *Epheſ.*4. ſpeaks of Paſtors and Teachers, in reſpect of Doctrine, and therefore mentioneth only thoſe that did labour in the Word and Doctrine, ſuch as Prophets and Evangeliſts, Paſtors and Teachers; and ſpeaks of their being ordained to keep that unity of the Faith; and therefore ſpeaks only of their Doctrinal power, not of their Judicial power of acts of Government.

4. And it is farther to be conſidered, that when it is ſaid, that he had ſet Apoſtles, &c. in the Church, he ſpeaks not of Officers in the concrete, or of this and that Church, in this or that Age; but he ſpeaks of Church, and of Officers in the Abſtract, he ſpeaks of the kind; and ſo anſwerably we read, Eph. 4. 8. He gave Gifts to Men, that is, to ſuch Officers in the Abſtract.

5. The general Church receiveth Paſtors and Teachers, but as formed up into particulars; therefore they are ſet in it only partitive; and though the Church is ſaid to be the Subject in which they are ſet, yet not as a collective Body, and therefore they do not make up a general Government.

Object. It may be objected, that the Apoſtles are ſaid to be the Church Univerſal.

Anſw. 1. They are not ſet in it as a Collective Body, and if they were, yet as all Paſtors cannot ſupply the Office of an Apoſtle, when met all together, ſo they are not ſet as Apoſtles, as the Apoſtles were. The Earls in a Kingdom are ſet otherwiſe in a Kingdom, than the Conſtables are; and therefore the meeting of all the Conſtables in a Kingdom, cannot make up one Office of an Earl, or the Relation they have to the whole Kingdom.

2. The Apoſtles were executively ſet in particular Churches only, and ſo the whole Church was not one Church, in Relation to them, nor did all Churches make up one Church, in relation to them for a Government.

Then 3. We acknowledge, that they may be all ſet in this Body as Apoſtles, and as Elders, and that by vertue of communion of Churches; and if you will keep it in that Myſtical way, they are to be reſpected as Elders of ſuch and ſuch Churches, by all the Churches in the World.

As it is again objected out of thoſe places, Eph. 4. and 1 Cor. 12. that the Gifts there, that are given to the Church, are not proper and peculiar to the elect.

Anſw. It's true; but yet, though they are not given only to thoſe that are elect in the iſſue, and in the event; yet they are given only to thoſe that were viſibly ſuch unto Men, and to be taken for ſuch; and ſuch as, if we had lived in thoſe times, would have been to be accounted Saints by us. All that are true Members of Churches, we are to look upon as elect, for they are elect to us; and therefore he Writes to the Church elect in Babylon. They are all Saints to us, and ſo they are viſibly ſuch, that make the viſible Church. And that the viſible Church there, though conſiſting of Men that in iſſue proved not the elect, is yet under the notion of ſuch as are, appeareth by this; that they are ſaid to drink into one Spirit, that is, into the Holy Ghoſt, alluding to the Receiving of the Sacrament; becauſe that none ſhould be ſuppoſed to be of that Catholick viſible Body, or of particular Bodies of Churches, but ſuch as are ſuppoſed to partake of the Holy Ghoſt, as every True Saint doth. And the drinking into one Spirit there, cannot be meant of extraordinary Gifts, which may be ſuppoſed to be given to Reprobates, becauſe the Spirit in extraordinary Gifts, is not received by the Sacrament.

Object. Whereas it is ſaid, that the Elders and the Officers, are given to the whole Univerſal Church; therefore that is a politick Body: I anſwer, that by the ſame reaſon, Mankind ſhould be a politick Body alſo, for they are ſaid to be given to Men, Epheſ. 4. and the Gifts that are there ſaid to be given to Men, are not to be underſtood ſtood of the inherent Gifts or Qualifications, in reſpect of thoſe Men they are given unto (as the grace of an Apoſtleſhip to an Apoſtle) but it is meant of Men giftedly put into Office, given unto other Men, or to Mankind; which appeareth by this, becauſe they are given by converſion, before Men are of the Catholick Body, as well as for building up after they are in it.

It is again objected, that 1 Cor. 12. it is ſaid, that the Members are to Honour one another, that there be no Schiſms in the Body, ver. 25. if one Member ſuffer, all the Members ſuffer with it, ver. 26.

Anſw. As there is a double Body of Church to Chriſt, the one Myſtical, and the other Inſtituted; ſo there is a double Union, the one Myſtical, though external; and the other more ſpecial for Government and Juriſdiction. And the ſame things, that are ſpoken of the Duty of Members in a Body Inſtituted, that are a Body to Chriſt in particular, as the Apoſtle afterward diſtinguiſheth, are due alſo to all Saints, by vertue of their Myſtical Relation. And we find that the Apoſtles indeed, do argue the inſtance of the communion of the Body Catholick, which is between all Saints, to exemplifie and to illuſtrate the Duties that are to be between Saints, in a particular Body ſo joyned; yet by way of Similitude, but not oneneſs for kind. And becauſe alſo all the Duties of Love, which, in particular Congregations, the Members are to perform one to another, are Duties by a Myſtical Relation, as well as by that ſpecial obligation: Yet they are bound to them by an obligation, beyond that of the Myſtical Relation, which they bear to all Saints in the World. For though the Church Myſtical Univerſal, affordeth matter for ſuch an Inſtituted Congregational Church; yet that they ſhould thus meet in Chriſt's Name, is a Superadded Form to this matter, and lays a farther obligation upon the members.

CHAP. II.

That the Inſtitution for Worſhip and Government, falleth not upon the Saints in a Natiõ, Qua Nation or Kingdom, as the Seat of it.

Though the Pattern of the Jewiſh Church be urged to prove ſuch a National Church, yet it will not ſerve the turn.

1. For it was not therefore a Church, becauſe a Nation, but becauſe there were no more Nations that God had choſen, nor would chooſe till Chriſt came; and therefore if any other turned Proſelite, they were to turn Jews, and to be as Natives.

2. The Inſtance of the Jewiſh Church, will rather ſerve for the proof of an univerſal Church, than for any evidence, that there ſhould be as many Churches, as there be Nations. When the Jews did turn Chriſtians, they were the ſame Nation; yet the Apoſtles do no where Write to them, as a National Church: They Write not to the Church of Judea, but the Churches.

3. That the Church of the Jews, was a Type of the Churches in Nations, as Nations, let that be ſhewn. We can ſhew that the whole Nation, and Temple-worſhip, was a Type of Congregations, and that Royal Nation (as that whole Nation was then called) and the Holy Prieſthood, is a Type of the Saints in all Nations.

4 God at firſt Set up a Church-Government, ſuitable to that of a Kingdom, and ſuited unto the Government of the World; that policy is therefore called the Elements of this World, unto which the Church in the New Teſtament, is not to be conformed, Rom. 12.

5. And then when there was a National Church, there was a Worſhip for the whole Nation, as a Nation to come unto; and ſo a Government in the place that God ſhould chooſe for all to appeal unto; but there are no ſuch orders now.

6. If the Inſtitution do fall upon them, it muſt fall upon them either as they are a Church in a Kingdom, or as a Kingdom. But not as a Church in a Kingdom, for Qua Church, there is a greater Church out of that Kingdom, namely the Univerſal.

7. This opinion, tho' it ſeems indeed calculated to comply with Magiſtracy, for it divideth the independency of Government, according to the Diviſion of the Supream power of Magiſtrates, and ſo would ſeem to fence them from any external power, from any other Kingdoms or Churches: Yet it makes the Church-power in that Kingdom, independent upon that Magiſtrate, and that united into a greater Body, would be too hard for them, whereas the diſperſing it, into particular Congregations, makes it eaſily wieldable.

Neither doth the Inſtitution fall upon a conformity, either to the extent, or to the Government of Cities, as thoſe who are for Epiſcopacy have intended, and ſome Presbyterial Divines alſo; and both upon the ſame grounds, although with this difference, that the Biſhops would have the Government of Churches, to be conformed to that of the Cities, taking in the Villages about them, and ſo to make a Dioceſs and a Dioceſan Church; but thoſe for the Presbytery, contract it to the extent of a City within it ſelf, and ſo make a claſſical Church; the opinions of either, differing in this reſpect only, viz. the point of extent of larger and leſſer Juriſdiction, the one confined within the City Walls, the other extending without.

1. Becauſe if it were ſo, then the conformity either muſt fall upon the Government of Cities, or the bounds of the place; that look what extent either the Government, or bounds of the Local Circuit of Cities have, the ſame extent ſhould your claſſical Presbyteries have conformable thereunto; and in aſſerting either unavoidable Abſurdities, would follow.

1. To make the Government conformable to the Government of Cities, as their extent ſhould fall out, is to make a warly Government, the pattern of Eccleſiaſtical, is wholy to conform Spiritual Government, to the Government of the World; and then the ſame degrees of Officers of Superiority, and Inferiority, that is in Cities, ſhould be in Eccleſiaſtical Government.

2. The conformity muſt rather fall upon the bounds of the Governments of Cities, than upon the circuit or material conſideration; becauſe that, which makes it a City, is the Government of it, whether the bounds of it be within the Walls, or other Towns about it, whether it extend to a larger circuit, or to a leſs.

3. It muſt either fall upon a City, as having many Congregations in it; and if ſo, it might as well have faln upon Villages in the Country, capable by Aſſociation to be many Churches as well, and the one would be as uncertain as the other; becauſe there may be many Congregations in the one, as well as in the other. Or elſe 2. It muſt fall upon the Form of the Government of Cities. Or elſe 3. Upon Cities of ſuch and ſuch a circuit; and ſome Cities greater, and ſome leſſer, that would be uncertain alſo; becauſe ſome Cities are greater, and ſome leſſer.

2. The Foundation of this Aſſertion cannot be a conformity to the Government of the Cities amongſt the Jews; for 1. The Villages, among the Jews, had a Government in them, as well as the Cities. 2. Suppoſe that the Government of the Gentiles, in their Cities, was not conformed to the Government of the Jews in their Cities (which may well be ſuppoſed) for the Government of the Gentiles, was oftentimes to have whole Empires under the Government of a City; ſo Rome had, and then all the World under Rome, whilſt it was a City Government, muſt have been one claſſical Church. or however, among the Gentiles, the Cities were the Head of a whole Province, and of all the Villages under it, and it is ſo in many Cities at this Day; and that would make for a Dioceſan Government, and not Presbyterial.

If thus the bounds cannot be fixed, we are ſtill to ſeek even in Cities, what ſhould be the bounds, and are as uncertain, as in Villages. So as the concluſion is, the bounds according to this meaſure are uncertain.

3. God doth not ſhape a Spiritual Government, unto the political; and the bounds thereof. Political Government, goes by the bounds of the Soil; ſo doth not the Spiritual. All that do live within ſuch a place, or within ſuch a Country, becauſe they are of that Soil, fall under the ſame political Government; but there is no reaſon, that they ſhould fall under the ſame Spiritual.

4. If the Frame of the Church were to be conformed to the City Government; then as the City did take in the Suburbian Towns, the Daughters round about, ſo the Church ſhould not be confined only to the compaſs of the City, but extend to a whole Province: As the Biſhops argue for a Dioceſan Church.

5. Chriſt's Government is ſuitable to all Ages, times and places; but now in all Ages and places, there is not the City Government; and there could not be the ſame Rule for the Government of Churches in Villages, and therefore it did not ſuit all places.

6. Jeſus Chriſt's way is rather conformed to the Synagogue way; for ſo the Churches are called, and it is therefore conformed to the Government of the Synagogues, although in Cities.

7. If this were the Ordinance of God, to conform Church Government to the Government of Cities, then all, in London, ſhould make one Church, becauſe it is but one City; and Alexandria and Grand Cairo, if it were converted, would be ſo too, nay Rome it ſelf (whereof the preſent Rome, is but the tenth part of what it was, as Cyprius ſhews) muſt have been but one Church, if they had been all converted; and there ſhould have been but one claſſical Presbytery, to have Governed all the Churches there. Yea, in ſome places there are two Cities built together, that have the priviledges of Cities, as Conſtantinople and Galata, London and Weſtminſter, the two Pragues; yea, Jeruſalem had the City of David within it, and ſo there muſt have been two claſſical Presbyteries in Jeruſalem, from the firſt; For thoſe of the City of David, might have challenged the priviledge of it, the Church had been conformed to a City Government; and perhaps that was the reaſon, why we read of two companies of the three and twenty Elders, that did ſit in Jeruſalem; becauſe each City had an Elderſhip of Twenty three, and ſo there being two Cities in that one, that of David, and the other of Jeruſalem it ſelf; there might be two Elderſhips, for thoſe two Cities, beſides there great Synedrim.

8. When Cities are decay'd and do leſſen, and are brought low, it may be to as ſmal a number of Inhabitants, as Villages; yet they often retain their Priviledges as Cities, as many decayed Incorporations do. Now then if there were but one Congregation left in ſuch a leſſen'd City, it would claim by vertue of this City, priviledge to be intire within it ſelf.

Object. But the Apoſtle hath ſaid, in Tit. 1. Ordain Elders in every City, and that is parallel with that in Acts 14. They Ordain Elders in every Church, holding forth the pattern of a City, and the Government thereof for the bounds of it, to be ſet for that of a Church.

Anſw. 1. That place in Acts 14. in every Church hath Relation, as well to Churches in Villages, as in Cities; and ſo to Churches in thoſe firſt times of the Goſpel, that conſiſted of no more than might meet in one place; and therefore as well it may be interpreted, that there was but as many as would make but one Church in every City, as ſuiting the Phraſe of his Direction, in Relation to what number of Chriſtians were ſuppoſed to be in each City of Crete, when firſt Titus came thither in the beginning of the Goſpel; and this number may well be ſuppoſed, to be no more than could make up one Congregation, and it was well if ſo too, no more than could make up.

Anſw. 2. Ordinary Elders in every Church implies farther, that if there were more Churches to be in a City, that then he ſhould ordain the Elders, Κατ᾽ ἐκκλησίαν, to every Church apart.

Anſw. 3. That it is ſo, appears; Becauſe as hath been ſhewn πόλις City is meant, ſmall Towns as well as Cities.

Anſw. 4. The Reaſon why his Direction runs to Ordain Elders in every City, was becauſe though they did Preach the Goſpel in Villages, yet principally in Cities at the firſt; becauſe they were to leaven the Countries. And the Apoſtles, when they did Write to Churches in a Province, did uſe to Write to the Church of the Head City, as more eminent, not becauſe that was either a Mother Church, as the Biſhops ſay, or a claſſical Church of more Churches, as the Presbyterians ſay; but becauſe it was more eminent, and from it the Epiſtle might be ſpread to others, as Paul's Epiſtle, to the Coloſſians, was ordered to be ſent to Laodicea, which was in all likelihood, a leſs City than Coloſſe. And thus when they Write to the Churches of Syria and Cilicia, Acts 15. they Write eſpecially to Antioch. So when he would Write to all the Churches about Corinth, he nameth eſpecially the Church of Corinth, together with them; and wrappeth up all the reſt thus, and all that call upon the Name of the Lord.

Object. It was the Ordination of the Apoſtles in the Primitive Times, that all, in a City, ſhould be one Church; both becauſe the Diſtinction of Churches, and alſo their Names are taken from the City, as the Church of Epheſus, &c. And therefore whether in one conſideration or more, whether for the preſent, or for the time to come, the Saints, in ſuch and ſuch a City, were to be one Church; and a Congregational Church they could not be, therefore a diſtinction of a claſſical Church was intended by a Church in Cities. And the Elders had charge given them, to take care of that whole City, to convert them. And to this pattern of a City Government, were the Villages alſo to be conformed, ſeveral Villages making an Aſſociation into one Church, as thoſe Cities did.

Anſw. 1. To the firſt part of the objection I anſwer, that they are called one Church in a City, and ſo diſtinguiſhed; becauſe there was but one Church for the preſent, as in Acts 3. 1. Κατὰ τὴν οὖσαν ἐκκλησίαν, the Church exiſting at Antioch, that is, which at preſent was there. It doth not follow, that all the Churches, that ſhould afterwards be there, ſhould be but one Church. So as Bains ſaith, there is an Adequate acception of theſe Phraſes, per accidens, not becauſe the City and Church, was to make but one Church; but becauſe the Chriſtians by occaſion of their number, not being then too great, were formed into one Church, not becauſe there was to be but one. Now he, who thus uſeth them promiſcuouſly, doth imply, that one Church was as yet conſtituted, not that there was to be but one, through the circuit of a City, Suburbs, and Country. Thus likewiſe it is eaſily anſwered, to the purpoſe of the Propoſition; for thus the Multitude of Citizens converted, and unconverted, could not be a Church of one Congregation; yet the number of thoſe, who in City, Suburbs, or Territories, were actually converted, was no more than might be ordered into one Church; and the Apoſtles framing theſe into one, on the preſent occaſion, did not exclude the after conſtituting of any other within the ſame local bounds. But if there had been more, there would have been other ways to have diſtinguiſhed them: As when there were many Synagogues in a City, they were diſtinguiſhed (for all the Synagogues could not have been called, by the Name of that one City; ſo nor the Congregations) and perhaps that was the reaſon, why that a School, which was a kind of a Synagogue, was for Diſtinction's ſake, called the School of Tyrannus, as being the Ruler of it.

Anſw. 2. If that were a Reaſon, then alſo the Name of a Village or ſmaller Town, as that of Cenchrea, would make as ſtrong an Argument, that in every ſmall Town, if there be a Church there, that it ſhould be one intire Church (having the Government wholy in it ſelf) as well as that many Congregations in a City, ſhould become one Church for Government.

Anſw. 3. The name of a Church, in a City, is not taken ſimply from the City, but from the People; as in the Revelation, the Church of the Smyrnians, and of the Laodiceans, &c. Suppoſe they had removed (as in thoſe times, thorough Perſecution they often did) to ſome other City; they would have been the Church of the Smyrnians, as well as the Church at Arnhem was called the Engliſh Church. So as the Name doth not refer ſimply to a City, and the bounds thereof. And when there was a Church of Strangers, of Aquila and Priſcilla, &c. in Rome, it is called the Church in their Houſe; and ſo alſo when they were removed to Epheſus, it bore the ſame Name, to Diſtinguiſh it from the Church of the Epheſians. It is one exception againſt us, that when we ſay the bounds of a Church ſhould be ſo many as can meet in one place, we hereby do fetch the conſtitution of a Church, from what is meerly external and accidental to it; and the exception were true, if we fetch it from any one ſet or ſtanding place, or Houſe of meeting; but we fetch it from that which is eſſential to a Church, which is oneneſs of communion, in ordinances together, meeting with one accord, as in the Acts, their meetings are characterized, which becauſe it cannot be done, unleſs they do meet in ſome place or other, hence we ſo expreſs it, not as that thing the Ordination is ſet upon, but as the neceſſary conſequent or adjunct; but this exception made againſt us, falls fully and directly upon them, that would make a City the extent, either of the Local bounds, or the Government thereof a pattern or meaſure of a claſſical Church, and the Inſtitution of it.

If many Churches had been in one City, they might have been Diſtinguiſhed by the Names of ſome of the Rulers, or as now they are by the Streets, or places of their conſtant meetings; for as if the Holy Ghoſt doth Write to the Angel of the Church of Epheſus, as if the King doth Write to the City of London, he ſhould intitle his Letter, to the Mayor and Aldermen, as Writing to the whole Corporation in their Names; ſo alſo might ſeveral Churches in Cities, have been as well Diſtinguiſhed by the Names of their Rulers, and of their Elders and Paſtors, as Tyrannus his School was. And there are other Reaſons, why in that caſe the Names ſhould be taken from the place; for cohabitation and dwelling together in a place, we acknowledge is a ground, why the Saints, ſo far as poſſibly they can, ſhould meet in one Church-Fellowſhip, and not make ſeveral Fellowſhips. And we much rather think, that ſtill the Denomination of one Church, in a City, did hold forth this Rule, that in all Cities, the Saints dwelling together; and ſo elſewhere, ſhould make as big Churches as they could; to ſhew their Unity, and to make the Worſhip more Solemn, and to have more of the aſſiſtance of the Holy Ghoſt; and therefore they ſhould not make many Congregations, where there might be one only.

Anſw. 4. To the Second part of the Objection, concerning the converſion which the Elders are to take care of, I anſwer 1. To Preach is one thing, to cenſure is another. And beſides at that rate of arguing, all thoſe, that a Man begets to Chriſt, hath therefore Authority over, to Rule them, to be their Miniſter. 2. The Elders, at Epheſus, indeed had a charge as Elders, by way of Government over the whole Flock, the Church that God Redeemed by his Blood; that is, of thoſe that were conververted; and although that they were to endeavour to convert others (for how ſhould the Goſpel otherwiſe be propagated) yet if more had been converted, then there muſt have been Churches multiplyed; but ſtill in the uniform frame, that this firſt Church was, having the ſame priviledges; and ſo to have New Elders placed over them, as over a New Flock. And beſides, they are not called Elders of Epheſus, but Elders of the Church at Epheſus. The care of Elders ſet in a City to convert, was to be extended as well to the Neighbour Villages, as to the Cities, eſpecially then when they had gained as yet but few in a City: And then by this Reaſon, thoſe in the Villages were obliged to be Aſſociated with them, as well as thoſe in a City, although all the City ſhould alſo be converted, eſpecially if thoſe in the Villages were the firſt converts; and this is one of the Epiſcopal grounds for a Dioceſan Church; they in effect tell the ſame ſtory, for the rearing up of Epiſcopal Government.

Anſw. 5. To third part of the Objection, we Reply, that the way of conſtitution of Churches under the Goſpel, being uniform according to Chriſt's inſtitution, both in Villages and Cities, it is therefore ſquared, as well to the condition of the one, as the other: And therefore a Church, in a Village, may as well be made the pattern for the conſtituting of Churches in a City, as a Church in a City, for forming one in a Village. But Chriſt hath framed his inſtitution ſo, as will ſerve both; and the certain Rules for both are the due bounds of a Church ſet (whereof there are many ſure and certain characters in the word, from the Nature and thing it ſelf) that ſo many as dwell together, that can conveniently meet in one place, ſhould become one Church.

We grant (as Bains in the like caſe, pag. 12. Concluſ. 2. concerning a Dioceſan Church) that God might have made this pattern of City Government, an Ordinance of Church Government, as he did once take a Family Government under the Old Law, and made that a Church; and extended the bounds ſtill by a Family, as they grew either greater or leſſer: But as then, if a Man's Family had ſpread into many Families, though he was the Prieſt of all theſe Families in publick Worſhip; becauſe he was the Eldeſt of the Family, whilſt he lived; yet that would not have been a binding Law to ſeveral other Families living together, that had not ſprung one from another; that they ſhould have come under the ſame Law of Aſſociation, that the others did. And therefore, though this were granted concerning Cities, it would not follow, that the Villages muſt be conformed thereunto.

CHAP.

CHAP. III.

That the External Inſtitutions of Chriſt, for the Government of his Saints under the New Teſtament, is not the ſame that was under the Law, nor can the Government of the Jewiſh Church, be made a certain Rule for the Government of the Church of Chriſt.

THere are many things that were commanded to the Jews, which are obligatory to us Chriſtians; tho' there are alſo many things which were Rules and Laws to them, which are not ſo to us. It will therefore be neceſſary, in ſtating the caſe firſt, to ſhew what is equally binding to us both.

1. All ſuch Duties as depend not upon Inſtitution, but are Duties belonging to the Firſt Commandment, as to Pray, to hear the Word, to give Thanks, muſt needs continue as well under the New Teſtament, as under the Old, and are the ſame.

2. Such things as then had then a Morality in them, yet if the Morality was only by meer Inſtitution, which depends upon the Will of God, (which Divines call Moral poſitions) even ſuch Inſtitutions, in their own individual Nature, cannot be urged upon us as Rules. As to inſtance in that of the Sabbath Day; if any ſhould infer, that that Seventh Day ſhould be the Sabbath Day under the New Teſtament, which was the Seventh after the Creation, would be a falſe Reaſoning; although indeed, the Inſtitution of the Seventh Day, to be the Sabbath, was not Ceremonial meerly, but had a Morality in it; for it was from the Creation. The two Sacraments of Circumciſion and the Paſſover, had aſſuredly beſides the Ceremonialneſs annexed to them, the Inſtitution of Typifying of Chriſt to come (which Circumciſion did by Blood, and being Adminiſtred the Eighth Day) theſe Sacraments ſignifying Jeſus Chriſt, the Subſtance of them muſt needs be Moral, and that by Inſtitution, as well as ours are now; as in 1 Cor. 10. 1, 2. They did all eat of the ſame Spiritual Meat (the ſame Spiritual Manna) and all Drank of the ſame Spiritual Drink. But yet it doth not follow, that the ſame Sacraments for Subſtance (cutting off the ceremonial part) ſhould continue, but God was pleaſed to Inſtitute other two in their rooms.

3. Yet whatſoever was Moral in the Subſtance of the Jewiſh Inſtitution then, there is this equality, that Jeſus Chriſt ſhould Inſtitute ſomething in the room of it, in the New Teſtament. As for Example, becauſe there was an High Prieſt; becauſe there was an Houſe of God then, the Apoſtle therefore argues, (Heb. 20. 21, to 26.) that we having an High Prieſt over the Houſe of God, there is to be Aſſemblies to be now, as well as then: But as theſe Aſſemblies ſhould be Formed up, and caſt into the ſame Latitude and Extent, and the like, which their Aſſemblies had then; herein a new Inſtitution putteth the difference. They had National Aſſemblies then, not ſo now: The Prieſts were maintained by Tithes and Offerings then, the equity of this continueth, and the Apoſtle urgeth it in his Epiſtle to the Corinthians; but yet it followeth not, that their Maintenance now ſhould be the ſame way. And although there was a Moral equality in it, yet the Apoſtle Superaddeth, So I Ordain in all the Churches, 1 Cor. 7. 17.

4. When the Goſpel hath once made an Inſtitution in the Room of what was under the Law (as it hath done Baptiſm in ſtead of Circumciſion tho' not exactly on the ſame Moral Ground; yet on the ſame Evangelical Ground, as Baptiſm was the Subſtance extant, under the Type of circumciſion) this will warrant the Application of Baptiſm, unto like Infant Children now; when the Goſpel it ſelf alſo holds forth the ſame priviledge for Subſtance, unto ſuch Children now, as it did then; and renews the ſame promiſe to them; tho' in an Evangelical way, far differing from that in the Old Teſtament, which contained a Typicalneſs in it. And this is not to raiſe up a New Inſtitution, it is only the Application of an Inſtitution to a Perſon; and that alſo when the Goſpel holds forth the ſame ground which the Law did. But if any would reaſon, that becauſe there was a circumciſion under the Law, a Sacrament of initiation into the Church, therefore there muſt be the ſame under the Goſpel (if they cannot ſhew that Jeſus hath appointed it, for the continuing of ſuch an Inſtitution) ſtitution) the Argument from the Old will not hold, or if they would argue, that it ſhould be Adminiſtred in the ſame Latitude; or that the ſame Perſons, who did Adminiſter Circumciſion under the Old Teſtament, may Adminiſter Baptiſm now, we believe our Brethren will not concede to it, though the Argument will be as ſtrong one way, as the other; for the Father of the Family might circumciſe them, and did; but they would have only Miniſters to Baptize now; and they too circumciſed then in their Families, and did not bring their Children to the Temple.

5. That the Laws of the Old Teſtament, do help up to Regulate many Inſtitutions in the New, we acknowledge (as likewiſe the Laws of Nature do) but they will not be Warrant ſufficient, to ſet up the like. So the Rules of the Judicial Law, concerning the puniſhments of criminal Acts, that none ſhould be condemned under two or three Witneſſes, theſe Rules will ſerve unto, and perhaps ought to be received by, every State (as ſome have held) to Regulate their proceedings againſt Malefactors: But yet unto Jewiſh policy (take it for the Government of it, and the ranks of Officers among them, and power they had) Nations are not bound ſo, as though the Rules of equity, whereby that policy did proceed, were perpetual, yet the queſtion remains ſtill of the power. That Miniſters ſhould be maintained, as they were then, the equity of the Law holds, but it will no way follow, that there ſhould be the ſame Ranks of Miniſters.

6. That the New Teſtament, intitles ſome of thoſe Ordinances, that it ſelf hath anew Inſtituted, with the ſame Names and Words uſed in the Old Teſtament, argues not that thoſe Ordinances are to be framed and formed according to the Analogy of the Old: But they have the ſame Names, becauſe that the Old were Types of theſe. Thus that our Ordinances now are called Sacrifices: That Chriſt is called an High Prieſt: That the Officers of the Church are called a Presbytery: That Excommunication is called a purging out the Old Leaven, and many ſuch like, in the Evangeliſt; all this will not prove, that there ſhould be Sacrifices, High Prieſts, &c. under the New Teſtament. In the Evangeliſt, Chriſt ſpeaking of the Teachers of the New Teſtament, ſaith, (Matth. 23. 34.) I will ſend you Wiſe Men, and Scribes, &c. but yet it follows not, that the Orders of the Officers of the New Teſtament, ſhould be anſwerable to the Wiſe Men, and the Scribes: So when a Believer, or a Church is called the Temple of God, when the Saints are called a Royal Nation, and the like; no inference can be made, that there ſhould now be a Temple, and a National Church.

7. There were many things which are Moral now, that were not Moral then. To caſt out of the Church for Moral ſins, as ſuch Qua Moral, is the Law of Chriſt now: But under the Old Law, they did not keep Men from Ordinances, for ſins as Moral; but as having a ceremonial uncleanneſs annexed to them. No Man is to put his Wife away now, becauſe ſhe is a Heathen; but they were to put their Wives away then, if Heathens, after Moſes his Law was ſetled. In deſtroying matters of Idolatry, they were to be much ſtricter than we are bound to be, as Meats Sacrificed to Idols, they were in no place to eat thereof, Daniel refuſed the Kings Meat; but out of the Idol's Temple, we may eat things that have been Sacrificed to Idols, as the Apoſtle ſaith. They were to deſtroy all the Temples and Groves, &c. but if places have been abuſed to Idolatry, we under the Goſpel may make uſe of them. They were to deſtroy the Canaanites out of the Land, not we ſo now. They were to burn Idolater's Goods, as in Jericho, &c. Not ſo now.

Having thus made way by theſe particulars premiſed, I ſhall now prove my Propoſition, that the Jewiſh Economy, is no Pattern or Rule for Modelling the Church of Chriſt, under the Goſpel.

1. The Prieſthood being changed, there is a neceſſity of a change of the Law, Heb. 7. 12. and ſo of the Law of the Government, which depends on Chriſt's Prieſtly Office. We having a new High Prieſt over the Houſe of God, we have a new Order in this Houſe. For he is the Apoſtle and High Prieſt of our Profeſſion, and it was meet it ſhould appear, he was the new High Prieſt, by uttering the Inſtitution for Worſhip and Government. So then that Old Law, which depended upon Inſtitutions, as the High Prieſthood it ſelf did, is to be changed, and a new Law of Inſtitutions, is to come in the room of it; and therefore in the Heb. 9. 10. it is called a Reformation, and the time of the Goſpel is called, the time of Reformation.

2. That Jewiſh Frame, and Form of Government, is called the Elements of the

Ch. III. World; and therefore both in Coloſſ. 2. and Rom. 12. the Apoſtle bids us under the Goſpel, not to be conformed neither for Worſhip nor Government (further than as Jeſus Chriſt hath been pleaſed to take what was before, and make it anew) to the Elements of the World. So in Galat. 4. 2, 3. he ſaith, they were under Tutors and Governours, till they came to be of Man's Eſtate, or to be of Age; which under the Goſpel, they are in compariſon. And indeed the Goſpel being more ſpiritual the Frame of the Government, and Inſtitutions of it, are not formed to a Worldly way to Governments of Nations, and of Kingdoms, as that was then, to an outward external Glory, as their Worſhip alſo was. As God hath choſen the Preaching of the Word, which is fooliſhneſs, ſo he hath choſen many of thoſe things, which are vile and baſe, and contemptible, and a fooliſhneſs of Government, in compariſon of what was then: And this is it deceiveth the World; for the Goſpel is a Myſtery throughout: He chooſeth the Synagogue, and not the Temple; he chooſeth a Congregation and Eldership, and not the Synedrim; he chooſeth Baptiſm, and not Circumciſion, &c.

3. Our Lord and Saviour, ſpeaks altogether of a new Church to be made, a Church gathered in his Name, as when he Inſtituted Baptiſm, to ſhew that it was a new Ordinance; he bids them Baptize in his Name, ſo to ſhew that he erected a Frame of a New Church, he bids that it ſhould be gathered in his Name.

4. Our Brethren's Principles, that hold the Univerſal Church, to be the Seat and Subject of Chriſt's Inſtitution, argue this; for as his Church now over all Nations, both Jew and Gentile, is a differing Seat from that of the Jew only, ſo anſwerably, to ſet in his Church Apoſtles and Prophets, &c. in ſtead of chief Prieſts, &c. is a new Inſtitution; and it is certain. that that Church, whereof the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 1 Cor. 12. Eph. 4. is the Church of the New Teſtament: And therefore if the Church Univerſal being a politick, be argued from thence, it is by a new Inſtitution, differing from the former; becauſe the Church of the New Teſtament, which he ſpeaks of there, began with the Apoſtles. And beſides the Inſtitution fell upon the Church of the Jews Qua National; but this falls upon the Church, Qua Univerſal, in all Nations, elſe it would not extend to all Nations to be equal ſtanders in it, whereas under the Law, they were not to be ſo with the Jews; but were to come under that National covenant, only when Proſelited.

4. There ſeems to have been ſeveral ſorts of Policies and Orders extant, under the Old Teſtament, and unto which of theſe ſhould the conformity now be made? By what rules ſhould we now judge?

1. There were 1. Chief Rulers over ſeveral Bodies of the Prieſts and Levites: To which Government the Biſhops ſay, their order is an Alluſion. There was alſo a power in theſe Prieſts and Levites, proper and peculiar to them, to judge of the clean and unclean; and concerning the matters of Worſhip in the Temple. And this Government was purely Eccleſiaſtical; and unto this therefore, rather ſhould the Analogy refer of matters in the Church, ſeeing that theſe were purely ſuch.

2. Again, There were the civil Judicatures in their Cities and Towns, and in their great Synedrim at Jeruſalem, for all controverſies within their Gates, as the Diſtinction is in Deut. 17. Yet theſe were all Eccleſiaſtical, but indeed mixed both in reſpect of cauſes and perſons; their Church and Commonwealth being ſo mixed, as it is hard to diſtinguiſh what belonged to them, meerly as a Commonwealth, and what belonged to them as a Church, in reſpect of what came under the cognizance and power of thoſe Courts.

3. Then again, There was their Synagogical Government, which ſeems to be differing from what either the Prieſts had in the Temple, in reſpect of Perſons clean and unclean ceremonially, or over one another; or from Courts of Judicature in their Gates. A Government thoſe Synagogues had, for there are the Rulers of them mentioned; and alſo puniſhments they had, for when the Romans took away their Government in their Gates, they ſcourged in their Synagogues. There were Admonitions alſo, or Excommunications, or caſting Men out of their Synagogues. The Great Synedrim, and their other Courts, did puniſh by civil mulcts, and the Synedrim did put to Death: In the Temple, the Prieſts kept out the unclean; and the Judgment of that was not by the Synedrim, but by the Prieſts that did look to the Worſhip of the Temple: But the Synagogues did caſt a Man out; and the Prieſts did not Supervize the Government of the Synagogues.

And that all this was a matter of a differing cogniſance, from what was Tranſacted in their other Courts, is evident by this, that for many ſins (beſides the civil puniſhments that were adjudged in the Courts of their Gates, as to reſtore and the like) a Man was further obliged to come to the Temple, with Confeſſion, and with a Sacrifice ; ſo as the charge of the things of the Temple, and the Order and Diſcipline thereof, was another thing than that of their civil Courts. And although a Man was caſt out of the Synagogues, and was in reſpect of ſuch a communion, as a Heathen and a Publican; yet he might ſtill come to the Temple, and partake in the Worſhip thereof. But that the Synedrim did at any time pronounce that Sentence, that a Man ſhould be as an Heathen or Publican, that this was proper to their Courts, we believe not. Now it is left very uncertain, to which of theſe the Analogy of the Government of a Goſpel Church ſhould be accomodated.

Object. It is ſaid, that our Saviour Chriſt, in Matth. 18. reflected upon ſome Bench or Court, the next then extant, to which the People were wont to reſort among the Jews, and ſo intimated, that his Will was, that the Church, under the Goſpel, ſhould be formed up conformably to us, and that ſo it ſhould be like to that of the Jews , and ſo the policy of the Church of the New Teſtament, ſhould be conformed to the policy of the Old, by vertue of that firſt Inſtitution, And from thence it is argued, that there ſhould be Ruling Elders, that are not Teachers, becauſe there were ſuch among the Jews : From thence it is argued, that there ſhould be a National Church, a National Synedrim or Aſſembly, as was among the Jews : From thence it is argued, that the power is in the Elders alone, becauſe it was ſo among the Jews, who are called the Church: And ſo this Analogy of the Jewiſh Church, is one of the great Foundations of the Presbyterian Government, and of Claſſical and National Aſſemblies.

Anſw. But beſides that, it was not neceſſary that Jeſus Chriſt ſhould allude to it, though he uſeth the ſame Phraſe : The Deformity of that Pattern, and the policy of the Government of the New Teſtament is ſuch,as that that cannot be Chriſt's intent.

For 1. If we take the Jewiſh Pattern, in matter of Government, we ſhall be worſe put to it, to judge what is ceremonial, and what is perpetual, or what was a judicial Appendix to the ceremonial, and added upon a ſuppoſition of it, more than we are put to it to judge, what was ordinary, and what was extraordinary in the Apoſtle's practices. If that our Saviour Chriſt alluded to it in the groſs, and in the lump, who ſhall be able to diſtinguiſh ?

2. If that policy ſhould thereby be Eſtabliſhed, it would as well ſerve for the erecting of Epiſcopal Government over Miniſters ; for although it is ſaid, that Aaron's High Prieſthood was Chriſt's Type, and not the Type of Biſhops ; yet that the Prieſts and the Levites (ſeveral companies of them) ſhould have one that was the chief overſeer over all,who is by the Septuagint called 'Επίσκοπος Biſhop and Overſeer was no way Typical.. There were four ſorts of Levites. Prieſts, Kohathites, Gerſhemites, Mecarites, Numb.3.30, & 35. And over each of thoſe, were four Eminent perſons, whereof Eleazar was one, Numb.3.32. And when Eleazar was made High Prieſt, then Phinehas was Governour of the Levites,and had overſight of them, Ruling of them, as 1 Chron 9. 20. And Numb.4.33. Ithamar was over the Sons of Gerſhom and Merari. And in Neh.11. 14, & 22. They are called Overſeers, or as the Septuagint tranſlates it 'Επίσκοποι Biſhops,the ſame word is uſed of the Apoſtles, Acts 1,1.20. and their cffice,unto which (ſay the Epiſcopal party) Biſhops do Succeed as Rulers over other Miniſters (though perhaps called Biſhops alſo) as the Apoſtles were over the Seventy, and all other Miniſters. And for this, will the Jewiſh pattern and policy (if that were alluded to) ſerve as well as for the Presbyterian Government. And in 2 Chron. 35. 8: we read of the three Rulers of the Houſe of God, whereof but one was the High Prieſt : Now although that the High Prieſt, for his going into the Holy of Holies , was a Type of Chriſt, yet not all thoſe other that were the Rulers of the Prieſts, and of the Houſe of God.

Theſe were called the chief Prieſts Mat. 2.4. & Ch. 27.1. Acts 19.4.

And if it be replyed as it is by ſome, that this was but the Law of Nature, the Heads of theſe Familſes being Rulers over the reſt, it is anſwered.

1. So was not Korah, Numb. 16. 1.

2. The Law of Nature, makes as well for one Man to Govern over many, and ſo for a Monarchical Government, as for an Ariſtocratical, and ſo Epiſcopal Government might be argued to be ſuited to the Law of Nature, as well as to the Jewiſh.

3. It belonged not to the ceremonial Law, but it ſerved only for Order ; and although the Eldeſt of the Family were thoſe Governours that were ſet over the reſt of a company of Prieſts of the ſame Family, and ſo that the Eldeſt had it by Birth, and by the Law of Nature; yet that one ſhould be ſet over the reſt, was meerly a matter of Order, and therefore will plead for it ſelf as ſtrongly (if we take the Jewiſh Pattern) as for any other way of Government.

Ch. III.

It may be objected, that upon this ground, that one Man makes not the Church, Epiſcopal Power is cut off, and that therefore the Alluſion of our Lord Chriſt in Matth. 18. is to thoſe Courts that were erected among the Jews.

Anſw. 1. In the firſt place, either there were two ſorts of Courts, one civil, and the other purely Eccleſiaſtical, two kind of Synedrims, both in each City, and in Jeruſalem, which can never be proved: And if two, which of theſe two Chriſt ſhould Allude to, will ſtill be the queſtion. Or if there were but one kind of Court, that was both for civil and eccleſiaſtical Government; then the Jewiſh Pattern will not ſerve the turn, for then, by that reaſon, Perſons Eccleſiaſtical, now ſhould deal in civil cauſes (for ſo they did then) and Perſons civil, ſhould deal in Eccleſiaſtical. Yea, and thoſe that hold there were two Courts, the one for cauſes civil, the other for eccleſiaſtical; yet they ſay, the Perſons in both were mixed. And becauſe that both were thus mixed, therefore in Deut. 17. 9. ſpeaking of the Synedrim, he ſaith, When thou ſhalt come to the Prieſt, or the Judges, which ſhall be in thoſe Days, &c. for ſometime a Prieſt was the Preſident of that Council, and ſometimes a civil Perſon, that was not of the Prieſt's Office, whom therefore he calleth a Judge. It was by Inſtitution, that there ſhould be ſome Prieſts, Ezek. 44. 24. Deut. 24. 8. 2 Chron. 18. 18. Deut. 16. 18. And alſo that others then Prieſts and Levites, were of the Synedrim, and alſo Judges of particular Cities, as all ſides acknowledge. For from hence, all Presbyterian Divines argue, the Pattern of Lay-Elders, which yet, if there be not an Inſtitution for it in the New Teſtament, would never be able to be argued from hence; and therefore many of our Brethren that acknowledge Perſons civil, that were not Prieſts and Levites, to have been mingled in thoſe Courts, yet deny the conſequence of that Argument, unto Ruling Elders now; which if the Jewiſh Pattern had held, it would have argued it. And it appears further, that therefore the Elders and the Prieſts are mentioned. Phariſees that were not of the Tribe of Levi threw off their Rulers, and the Prieſt or the Judge, Deut. 17. and the Judges, Elders and Prieſts, are uſually put together in their Cities and Courts.

And the Reaſon why both were mixed thus, to become but one Court, was becauſe that then the Church was mingled with the Common-wealth, and both were but one; therefore the Church of Iſrael is called the Common-wealth of Iſrael: And the Laws of their Common-wealth, were given immediately by God; and therefore the Levites, as well as the civil Authority, were the Interpreters of that Law. If therefore this ſhould now be the pattern, as when according to our Brethren's Aſſertion, the Church grows up to a Nation, there ſhould be a National Church; becauſe that was the Pattern of the Jews, ſo when the Churches grew up to a Nation, the Eccleſiaſtical State, and the civil, ſhould become mingled, and Miniſters ſhould Judge in civil Cauſes, and thoſe, that are not Miniſters, ſhould Judge in Eccleſiaſtical, for ſo in that Synedrim they did.

If it be ſaid, that all the Acts were not Church Acts, as ſending Ambaſſadors, making Wars and the like: The anſwer is, that all ſuch Acts as were towards other Nations, might not ſo properly be called Church Acts; but the queſtion is, what was among themſelves? And yet even their Wars were Holy, and their God was called the Lord of Hoſts, and the Prieſts wait with Trumpets, to incourage the People to fight, as if it had been an Eccleſiaſtical buſineſs.

Anſw. 2. Again Secondly, if that be the Pattern that Chriſt alludeth to, then if that State had whilſt it ſtood in the Apoſtle's times turned Chriſtian, it might have been conformed to the Jewiſh Patern of Government, as it then ſtood; and ſo the Perſons of the Synedrim, that were Judges of the Jewiſh Church, ſhould have continued Judges of the Chriſtian Church.

3. If that the Jewiſh Government had been the Pattern, then there ſhould be but two Courts Subordinate one to another; for ſo there was no more among the Jews, in a way of Subordination. There was the Court in each City and Town, conſiſting ſome of more, ſome of leſs, according to their proportion and bigneſs, that did Judge of all cauſes within themſelves; and then there was the great Synedrim, and Appeals were made immediately from each of the Inferior Courts, unto this Superiour. And whereas it is ſaid by ſome, that there were three Courts at Jeruſalem for Appeals; we find not by the Scriptures, that there were three ſuch Courts, although ſome of the Rabbins ſay there were. And when the Text ſaith, in *Deut.*17. that whoſoever would not obey the Sentence of the Judge, that ſhould be in that place, ſhould be put to Death; then when they brought it to the firſt Court, the Judges of the Twenty three at Jeruſalem, according to that Notion, they ſhould have been put to Death, and never have come to the great Synedrim. And if there were two ſuch Courts of the Twenty three, beſides the Synedrim, yet they were not for Appeals; but they were either the one of that City of Jeruſalem, which as a City had the priviledge to have Judicature within it ſelf, beſides the Synedrim for the whole Nation; and the other of the Prieſts for the matters of the Temple (for the Temple was an incloſure) or elſe the one was for Jeruſalem, and the other for the City of David (each having the priviledge of a City, although in two places, as Weſtminſter and London have) the one was at the Door of the Mountain of the Lord, the other at the Door of the Temple. If then the Form of the Jewiſh Government be the Pattern, then all thoſe Subordinate Congregational, Claſſical, Provincial, and National Aſſemblies, they ſhall be cut off; for the Jewiſh Pattern will not ſuit theſe.

4. If that were the Pattern, then the National Aſſembly ſhould be the Supream Judge; and there ſhould be none above that: But our National Aſſemblies, Presbyterian Divines, do place an Univerſal General Council, and make that to be the Supream; whereas the National Synedrim of the Jews, Qua National, was the Higheſt Court.

5. If that that be the Pattern, the matters brought to that Synedrim, ſo far as we have a Rule in the Word for it, were only matters that were too difficult; and when they were too difficult for thoſe particular Courts in the Cities or Towns, they were brought to the General Aſſembly, Deut. 17. If a matter be too hard for thee, &c. Even as the hard matters, which none could Determine but God, were brought to Moſes, Exod. 18.21.

6. When the Inferior Court it ſelf did find it to be too hard for them, it was not by way of Appeal, that they brought it to the Superiour, ſo in Deut. 17. If it be too hard for thee: So as it was not in the liberty of any Perſon to Appeal; but the Court finding themſelves not able to decide the controverſy, they were to carry it to the Synedrim (therefore the Rabbins ſay, that that place, Deut. 17. belongs only to a Rebellious Elder) And if ſo, then this place will not ſerve to have Eccleſiaſtical Courts for Appeals.

7. The Synedrim did only judge of the matter of the Law and Right in a Doctrinal way, in ſuch and ſuch a caſe; but it was ſtill left, after their Sentence, unto the Inferiour Court to judge of the matter of fact, and to apply the Sentence: So as by this Rule, the greater Aſſemblies of Synods and Councils ſhould not at all Excommunicate; but only Doctrinally deliver the Sentence, ſtill leaving, to the particular Churches, the Application of that Rule, by the Sentence of Excommunication, in whoſe power alone it is. Therefore ſpeaking to the Judges of the Inferior Courts, he ſays, Thou ſhalt do according to the Sentence of the Law, which they ſhall teach thee, and according to the Judgments which they ſhall tell thee, Deut. 17. 10, 11.

8. The Synedrim executed civil puniſhments, as putting to Death, &c. if their Sentence was not obeyed, ſo that they Excommunicated not, but puniſhment was civil, which their Court inflicted.

9. If Appeals were made, and things were carryed to the Higher Courts, from the lower; there was an High puniſhment for the neglecting of the Sentence (ſuppoſing there were an Appeal) meerly becauſe the Sentence of that Court was contemned. The Man was to be put to Death, although the matter wherein he diſobeyed, did deſerve a leſſer puniſhment. But in the Eccleſiaſtical Government, that Chriſt hath ſet up, there is no higher puniſhment than Excommunication, and delivering to Satan, therefore this Pattern will not ſerve.

10. In that Synedrim, Perſons were ſtill the ſame Men, continually Reſident; They were Officers on purpoſe that were ſet, and conſtant for that Church (even as Biſhops are amongſt us) and they reſided at Jeruſalem. And ſo the Foundation of the calling of the one to that National Aſſembly, and the calling of Miniſters to our National Aſſemblies (which they would pattern by this) do wholy differ; for as ours are called by a new choice for that ſpecial Aſſembly, as occaſion is, and by a choice too, reſiding in their particular Congregations and charges.

Object. It is ſaid, 2 Chron. 19. 8. They returned to Jeruſalem. It ſeems therefore they rod Circuit.

Anſw. That was occaſional, when firſt Religion was to be Reformed, and the People inſtructed, after a neglect of all Order and Government amongſt them. Otherwiſe they were conſtant at Jeruſalem, and had therefore a peculiar Title, being called Elders of the People, whereas others were called Elders of the Cities. And ſo the pattern of Biſhops, who were conſtant Officers for a National Church, and attend wholy upon the publick (as the ſame Perſons did always here in the high Commiſſion) will much better ſuit the Jewiſh pattern.

11. They had always a chief, whom they called the Naſi, or the Prince, in imitation of the firſt Court, wherein Moſes was chief, and the number with him : Seventy one, and ſo it is too Eze. 8. 11. 70 Elders, in the midſt of them, Jazanias as the Prince ; and if the Jewiſh pattern ſhould hold, there ſhould be ſuch now. Therefore in Deut. 17. the Court, being Denominated from ſome one, is called the Prieſt or the Judge ; and it would, according to that, much better ſuit Rome, than Zion, the Popiſh Government, than that of the Reformed Churches, it being a nearer pattern to have one Naſi, one Prince, one High Prieſt, with a conſtant number of Cardinals, in a place which they pretend the promiſe is made to. And accordingly Bellarmine urgeth it for the State of Antichriſt, and with more reaſon and ſtrength, and more likelihood, than for the Presbyterian pattern. For the High Prieſts were ordinarily over that Synedrim, ſo the Aſmones in the time of the Machabees, Matth. 26. 5. 7. and Acts 23. 5. compared with, Exod. 22. 28.

12. There was a peculiar place, which God did then Sanctifie at Jeruſalem, in which the Great Synedrim was always to ſit : Therefore it is ſtill ſaid, in Deut. 17. Thou ſhalt go to the place that God ſhall chooſe, as well as that they ſhould go to the Judge, or to the Prieſt ; becauſe it was God's promiſe to be in that place, and with the Court ſitting there ; and therefore alſo it is ſaid, If they ſhould not do according to the Sentence of the Prieſt, that ſtandeth before the Lord. And if they ſhew us any one place that God hath ſo peculiarly Sanctified, and ſet up ſuch a Court as the Papiſts would pretend to do, then it would be a pattern, or elſe not. But God hath not Sanctified any place now, therefore the pattern will not hold. It may much better, in a Type, be Transferred to the general Aſſembly in Heaven, even to which we under the Goſpel are come, or to the General Judgment of the Great Day, when all cauſes ſhall be judged over again.

13. Neither were all cauſes Eccleſiaſtical, brought to this Synedrim ; therefore it is ſaid, Thou ſhalt bring all Cauſes within thy Gates, not all cauſes in God's Houſe. Therefore the High Prieſt is ſaid to be over the Houſe of God, and the charge of that Houſe belonged unto the Prieſts ; and there were three Rulers over the Houſe of God. Therefore to the Synedrim belonged Judicials, and ſuch Ceremonials, as did not appertain to the Temple, as the cutting off of a Man, that had Leaven in his Houſe, Exod. 12. But yet the ceremonial belonged to the Temple, and the Prieſts themſelves were Judges thereof. And the Order of Prieſts and Levites had a peculiar power to Judge of Leproſie, and of Perſons that were unclean, and to keep them out of the Temple, Levit. 10. 10, 11. Ezek. 44. 23. Hag. 2. 11, 12, 13. therefore the Prieſts of the Temple put out Uzziah, when he was ſtruck with the Leproſie. So Chriſt anſwerably ſpeaks, Matth, 8. 4. Go ſhew thy ſelf to the Prieſt, ſaith Chriſt, to the Man that he cured of the Leproſie, that he might judge of it, whether he were whole or no. Neither were there any Perſons that we read of, but thoſe that were Prieſts, that were to do this. Yea, the Leproſie was ſo infectious, that there was no Warrant or Promiſe, that any that converſt with, or came to a Leper ſhould be kept from it, but only the Prieſt. And in Numb. 3. 7. they were to keep the whole charge about the Tabernacle of the Congregation : And in Ezek. 44. 27, they were to look to the Sabbath. Now it is evident, that others, beſides the Prieſts, made up that Great Court at Jeruſalem,

14. If that this were the pattern, then the Church in each Village or City, now ſhould have an immediate and intire Government within themſelves ; and ſo it would ſuit the Congregational Government. For each Town in Judea had Elders in their Gates ; in the ſmaller there were three to judge their cauſes, in the greater Cities there were Twenty three.

15. The number of the Perſons were all ſet, they were Seventy, So that in the concluſion, we may ſay as Paul of thoſe of the Circumciſion, and obſerving the Law that they themſelves keep not the Law, ſo nor thoſe that were the Analogy of the Jewiſh pattern, here being theſe ſo great, ſo eſſential, and many differences between the Jewiſh and Presbyterial Government, ſo now for a National Aſſembly.

And if it be ſaid by them, we urge not the identity, that it ſhould be the ſame: We reply 1. Why not the identity in things that were not ceremonial (for ſuch they pretend to make a pattern) but matters of meer Order and Policy, ſuited to them, as to a National Church, and that by God's Inſtitution, If they make the Inſtitution of God the pattern in one thing, why not in another? 2. If it be only a meer Analogy, they themſelves might ſhew ſome other Warrant, firſt, for the like things Inſtituted anew, by Chriſt under the New Teſtament, which being ſo Inſtituted, do bear Analogy with what was under the Old. For otherwiſe it's left unto the pleaſure of Man to take and refuſe what he pleaſeth, and ſet it up as Analagous to the Old; and ſo others may ſet up other things, and indeed pick another form of Government out of other things, that were Analagous to the Government of that pattern. As when they argue out of Matth. 18. that Chriſt Alludeth to the Courts that were then in Jury, where he ſaith, Go: tell the Church, and urged the Analogy to hold in this; that as their Courts which were called Eccleſiæ, were a Colledge of Elders and Judges, and that therefore, the Church, that Chriſt means under the New Teſtament, muſt be a conſiſtory of Elders, and National Aſſemblies (as the leſſer and greater Synedrim was diſtinct, and apart from the People) we have juſt reaſon to reply, why ſhould the Analogy hold in this only, unleſs the New Teſtament hold forth that the Aſſembly of a company of Elders, apart from the People, are called a Church? If that were firſt found, then indeed this Analogy might be applyed thereunto; but to pick and chooſe out one piece of the Model, and leave out the reſt, and to ſay that Chriſt intends this, rather than the reſt, without a ſpecial Warrant of his ſo to do, but Humane and Arbitrary, under the colour of Divine Inſtitution.

Tous this is an infallible Rule, that where God hath applyed a Type, or any thing out of the Old Teſtament, to an Inſtitution under the New, we ſhould ſo far be led by it, as he hath in his or that particular applyed it; for otherwiſe the Analogy of thoſe chief Prieſts, which are called ἐπίσκοποι Overſeers, as the Septuagint rendreth it, Pſal. 109, 8, Acts 1. 20. Zech. 11. 14, 22. would hold for the Order of Biſhops, by way of Analogy, as ſtrong as any Argument can be framed from the Analogy of their Courts, to the like Eccleſiaſtical now,

It is urged by ſome, that that which belonged to that Church, as a Church, is Moral in all Ages (as that which belongs to a Child, as he is Animal rationale, belongs to a Man, though what agreeth to him as a Child, agrees not to all Men; but what agrees to a Child, as it is Animal rationale, is common to all Men) now this Government, ſay they, did not belong to the Church as Jewiſh, and as in its Infant condition, in a Typical reſpect, but as a politick National Church,

We anſwer 1. That their being a National Church was in a typical reſpect; and therefore all their Laws, Ceremonial, Judicial, Moral, the Laws that were given the State, were given by God; Jus civile judaicum pars Theologiæ fuit, The Jews Civil Law, was part of their Divinity. And therefore the Common-wealth of Iſrael is called the Church; and in 2 Pet. 1. Peter, ſpeaking to the Saints, ſaith, applying the type, you are a Holy Nation, a Royal People, he ſpeaks not to them, as they were a Nation under a Government, one National Church, although he Writes to the Jews that were Diſperſt over many Provinces, 1 Pet. 1. 1. Totus ſtatus illius populi fuit figuralis, Aquinas, prima ſecundæ Quæſt. 104. Art. 2.

Yea, 2. That great Synedrim, at Jeruſalem, ſeems to have a typical Reſpect upon it, it being reſtrained to the place that God ſhould chooſe, and was a type of the General Aſſembly in Heaven, or at the Day of Judgment; for to that Aſſembly; doth Chriſt ſeem to Allude, when he ſaith, they ſhall ſit upon twelve Thrones, Judging the twelve Tribes of Iſrael; and the great Synedrim, at Jeruſalem, was only that Court that did Judge the twelve Tribes, and no other Court beſides.

3. There was that peculiar ground of the Jews, being a National Church (which was the main ground, why God made them a National Church) as is compatible to no Nation under Heaven; they were a National Church, not only as Men living under the ſame Government, and under the ſame Prince, and in the ſame Land, or of the ſame Language; but chiefly and principally, as they were the Children of Abraham, to whom the promiſes were made as to one common Father, whoſe Seed did grow up into a Nation, whom God did ſever from all other Nations as ſuch, and made a Nation of them, dwelling alone, ſo as they were not to Marry out of their own Nation. And herein Abraham was Chriſt's type, Jeſus Chriſt being now the Father of all the Faithful in all Nations, who are become one Royal Nation unto him; but a Royal Nation Spiritually, and a Royal Kindred, although out of ſeveral Nations, but not as formed into a National Government. And when they did grow up into a Nation, then God gave them Laws for the Government of them as a Nation, God did Inſtitute them to a National Church and Kingdom, and made a new Covenant with them, and gave them Laws. And if now under the Goſpel, we ſhould come to a National Church, and have a like Government, it may have an Inſtitution under the New Teſtament, as that had then.

the

And there is likewiſe this difference between our Churches under the Goſpel, and that of the Jews, that the prima notio, the firſt Notion of a Church fell upon them, as they were a Nation; but now doth not fall upon the Saints, as they are a Nation in that ſenſe that they were; but it falls either upon the Church Univerſal, which is the Church Myſtical, or upon Congregational, but upon none Qua Nation, as it did upon them; and therefore their being a National Church, was a type of the Univerſal, and not of this or that particular Nation, now Qua Nation; but we can ſhew too, that Qua Nation, they were the type of particular Churches and Congregations.

5. There is a great Fallacy in this Argument. It is true, that that which agreeth to a Church, Qua talis as ſuch, is in every Church that is ſuch; and ſo what was in that Church as National, purely ſo conſidered, may be, and ought to be in any other Church that is National in a political reſpect, as whatſoever belongeth to a Man, Qua rationalis, belongeth to every Man: When therefore it is ſaid, this Government did belong to it, Qua Church, ſo we deny it, for it belonged only to it, Qua National Church in the general, and hath many ſpecifical differences annexed. There is a Church National, ſuch indeed was the Jews; and there is a Church Congregational, and ſuch are thoſe under the New Teſtament; there is a Church Univerſal, which is the Church Myſtical; But what belongs to the Church of the Jews, as National, and caſt into a Kingdom, will not belong to the Church Univerſal, nor will it belong to the Church Congregational, for it belongs to it only as National; and ſo we might as well argue, that what belongs to one Species under a genus, belongs to the other Species, or that what belongs to a Man, Qua animal rationale, ſhould belong to a Beaſt, becauſe he alſo is Animal. So that this remaineth firſt to be proved, that Jeſus Chriſt hath made National Churches under the New Teſtament, to be polilitick Bodies; and then the Argument might have ſome ſhew in it, that what belongs to a Church, as a National Church, ſhould belong to a National Church under the New Teſtament, for matter of Government. But otherwiſe it may as well be argued, that what Form of Government agrees to a Kingdom, as a Body politick, muſt be found in every Corporation; and that the ſame Government muſt be in the one, that is in the other (whereas a Body politick is the genus, as alſo Church is, and National, Presbyterial, &c. are but Specifical differences annexed) and alſo that what belongs to the Common-wealth of Venice, as an Ariſtocratical Common-wealth, muſt belong to all Common-wealths, whereas there are Common-wealths that are Monarchical, which we call Kingdoms, others that are Democratical, and what belongs to the one, with theſe differences, belongs not to the other. What belongs ſimply to a Monarchy, as a Monarchical Common-wealth, muſt not be ſaid to belong to a Democratical Common-wealth. In a Monarchy, there are differing Degrees of Marqueſſes, and Earls, and Lords; it will not therefore follow, that in a Democracy, or in a Common wealth, whoſe Government is by ſeveral Hance Towns, there ſhould be the ſame too.

6. And if Chriſt had appointed National Churches under the New Teſtament in a political Reſpect, it was not neceſſary that the Analogy of the Jewiſh Government ſhould be obſerved; no more than that, in every Kingpom and Common-wealth, the Analogy of the Jews political Government ſhould alſo be obſerved. And the Analogy too, might be kept and obſerved in its proportion, in every Congregational Church, as the Analogy of the three Eſtates, in the Superiour Court in Parliament, is ſhadowed out in many Corporations, where there is the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council; but it is not neceſſary, that there ſhould be the ſame Subordination of Courts, all keeping the ſame Analogy as was amongſt the Jews: For Churches depending immediately upon the Magiſtrates, in every Kingdom, might be well governed, as we ſee the Church in Geneva is and the Helvetians are. But we anſwer.

7. Whereas the Argument runs,that that Government was not ceremonial, ſuppoſe that their having ſuch a Form of Government with Courts of Appeals, having Judicature in them, were not typical and ceremonial, yet it will not follow, that the like muſt be in the Churches in Nations, under the Goſpel: Therefore Gerſom Bucerus Diſtinguiſheth, that ſome things were meerly ceremonial; and they were cut off, other things were perpetually Moral, and other things, though they were not ceremonial, yet they did peculiarly ſerve to the conſervation of that policy, and were annexed for order's ſake, to the preſervation of what was ceremonial. Now that National Synedrim, was of that latter ſort; for ſuppoſe it were not ceremonial altogether; yet that Church being conſtituted a National Church, as a politick Body Eccleſiaſtical, it muſt have a National Synedrim, that was ſuitable and anſwerable. For if we ſuppoſe a National Church, it muſt have a National Government proportionable to it, and Officers accordingly: And ſo that there ſhould be thoſe Heads of the Prieſts, and that imparity accordingly amongſt the Prieſts, was a thing proper to the policy of the Levites, and yet not typical; for multitudes of them meeting in their ranks and courſes, for the Service of the Temple, it was neceſſary that there ſhould be one that ſhould order thoſe Multitudes of them, that in their courſes came up.

De guber. Eccl. p. 51

It muſt be acknowledged, that what ever conſtitution of Churches as politick Bodies, Jeſus Chriſt hath made, he hath took a ſuitable order, for the preſervation of order among them: So having made congregational Churches thoſe politick Bodies, he hath taken order for the Government of them as ſuch. And if he had made Churches National, as politick Bodies; he would have took ſuitable order for them alſo, as he did among the Jews, and he would have done it afore ſuch time, as Churches were multiplyed, ſo as to come up to a Nation; for ſo he did with the Church of the Jews, afore they came into the Land of Canaan, but ſo he hath not done in the New Teſtament,nor did the Apoſtles live to ſee it ſetled; and it were ſtrange that that Form ſhould be erected by Chriſt, that the Apoſtles lived not to ſee.

So that the concluſion of all, it muſt be this, that Jeſus Chriſt did ſtill ſuit the Government of his Church, to the condition of the matter, thus the Church, when in Families, had a Family Government; and when a Nation was ſingled out and choſen, it had a National Government; but the Saints being to be diſperſt over all Nations (as the Jews themſelves were, when they had their Synagogues diſperſt) he hath Eſtabliſhed a Government anſwerable.

A Church is ſaid to be National, either 1. In reſpect of the Members, that all, that are of the Nation, are Members of the Church, which was the conſtitution of the Jewiſh Church: Or 2. In reſpect of Government, that becauſe they are a Nation, they are caſt therefore into a National Government. Now indeed, the National Government of the Jews did follow upon their National conſtitution of Members; and anſwerably under the Goſpel, even in Nations, the Government of Chriſt's Church doth follow the condition of the Members. Now the condition of thoſe that are Saints (which are only fit to be Members of Churches) is to be ſcattered up and down, and to be few; for they are Redeemed out of Nations: There are few Cities in England will afford more Saints, than will make one Church, but London. So as the reaſon, why, that under the Goſpel, there is not this National Government for Churches, is becauſe a Nation comes not up to Chriſt's terms, and if it ſhould, there are other reſpects that make the alteration; for it was fit that the Body of the Saints, the People, ſhould have intereſt of preſence, and of a virtual concurrence, and of edification; yea, of ſuffrage in the Government. It was for the Honour of the Saints, that are come out of their Nonage, that it ſhould be ſo, and that Worſhip and Government, and communion in both, ſhould be commenſurable; God loving more the Spiritual communion, that Saints have in publick Worſhip under the Goſpel, than the National Sacrifices under the old Law; and did therefore caſt the Government under the Goſpel thus, to attain this end, without which, it could not be attained; and alſo, becauſe that Churches, as Churches, would be more ſweetly ordered by the Law of communion of Churches without Juriſdiction, than by a Juriſdiction placed in combination of many Churches over each, ſeeing that Government could not be tranſacted in the preſence of the Saints, but by delegated Meſſengers, and Repreſentative Elders.

CHAP. IV.

Whether a fixed and conſtant Aſſembly of Presbyters or Elders, have a Right of Authority over particular Congregations. The queſtion ſtated.

THough thoſe, who have ſtood up and Written for the Presbyterial Government, (as it is practiſed in the Reformed Churches) do aſſert it to be the only ordinary ſtanding, and perpetual Government, which ought to be embraced in all Churches and Chriſtian States; yet the Wiſdom of the Aſſembly of Divines, at Weſtminſter, thought meet to propound it to this Debate, that the Scripture holds forth it may be.

And whereas when the aſſerting the Jus Divinum of it is waved, that yet it is a Government the neareſt, and in a Conſpicuous Eminency, moſt conformed to the Scripture Rules and Examples in the New Teſtament, is a poſition in Succeſſion, the next, though a far lower ſtep than the former. And leſs could not have been expected to have been held forth, when all other Governments are laid aſide, to give room for its Entertainment. Yet this firſt and leading propoſition, to all the other that follow about it, viz. that the Scripture intimates, that ſuch a Government may be, falls as low in its undertaking, as any Government that can be ſuppoſed to pretend the leaſt for it ſelf. And in the like manner, the reſt of the Propoſitions, that follow, run but in the ſame Stile, that it is lawful and agreeable to the Word, that things ſhould be ordered thus or thus.

Though the Reverend Aſſembly would not venture ſo far, yet the next faireſt way, left for Deciding this controveſie, had been to have patterned the practices and directions, which the ſeveral ways of Church Government pretend to, for their Warrant; and to have compared theſe, each with the other, and by an Harmonious Draught and Platform of either, when ſet together, it would eaſily have been diſcerned, not only which of them May be, but which of them rather ſhould be; and that of the two which appeared to hold the greateſt likeneſs, to the Primitive picture, drawn in the Stories of the New Teſtament, and in the Rules and Commands in the Epiſtles, ſimular unto, let that have been eſteemed the True Child there. But the propoſition is ſo caſt, that we muſt directly oppoſe it with ſuch grounds, as may ſhew, that this Presbyterian may not be, without troubling our ſelves to conſider, which of the Forms of Government this ſhould be.

The Propoſition as thus ſtated for the Diſpute, upon a meer, It may be, as it allows the greateſt Latitude and compaſs to the affirmers of it, for their way of defending it; and paves the way for paſſableneſs with all Men, of all ſides whatever, whoſe Judgments are not bound up with the opinion of a Jus Divinum, in Church-Government, ſo it did put the greateſt difficulty, upon thoſe that were negative in Judgment to diſprove it. The Difficulty lay in this, that the moſt direct and punctual way, to overthrow the Propoſition, is Firſt, to prove and make good this other more general Aſſertion, ſo much controverted; That there is a certain ſtanding ordinary Term of Church Government, held forth in the Directions given to the Apoſtles, or the Examples of thoſe Churches we read of in the Scripture, erected by their guidance; and that alſo ſeconded by this Negative, That there ought to be no other, than what is by Inſtitution. Which two General Principles, if ſuppoſed or gained, then indeed this alone had been Argument ſufficient to Diſprove the Presbyterial Government, that if it be not held forth in the Scriptures, as the ordinary ſtanding Government for the Churches, that then it may not be. Theſe afore ſaid General Propoſitions having been Determined, there needed no more words, to have been o the Opponent's part, but to examine the Aſſemblies proofs, whether therein there appeared this ſtanding Government Inſtituted. But the Diſcuſſion of the General Propoſitions, was denyed by the Aſſembly (in the very firſt entrance into the Diſpute of Diſcipline) to be ſo much as Debated; and therefore could not be aſſumed here, nor any where elſe into any Debate, but againſt the former Order of the Aſſembly, ſo that they ſtood upon this Advantage, to maintain their Aſſertion upon Eraſtian Principles, and yet left us to diſprove it upon the contrary Principles, which yet are common to them and us, and which (as one ſaid, when it was laid aſide) would require a quarter of a years Debate, and alſo would have been left wholly upon us to make good, although it be laid as the Foundation, by the Church of Scotland, and other Reformed Churches of the Pesbyterial Government, and made uſe of againſt the Epiſcopal, to prove that the Government of the Church by Biſhops, may not be.

And whereas it may be ſaid, that yet this was left us, that by proving the Congregational way, to be by Inſtitution, we might by that, as another Medium, have ſhewed that the Presbyterial Government may not be: We were in this Diſadvantaged alſo (if we would have introduced the Debate thereof, as againſt the Propoſition) that though we had never ſo ſufficiently proved all, (that is, a compleat) Government) to be in a Congregation, by Chriſt's Inſtitution (and yet for this Demonſtration of that, (as our Brethren full well know) it had been neceſſary to debate and diſcuſs at large, firſt, that forementioned Principle, by what ways the Inſtitutions of Chriſt in the New Teſtament are held forth, whether in ordinary Examples and Practices of the Primitive Churches) yet that had been (as to our Brethren) an inſufficient Argument to diſprove this Propoſition, that therefore a Presbyterial Government over many Congregations, may not be. And the conſequence would have been denyed by many of our Brethren, that hold all power of Government, to be in a Congregation, but not ſolely or only; and ſo a claſſical Government over many Congregations, may yet be. And therefore, to have overthrown their Aſſertion, there were two Propoſitions yet more neceſſary to have been proved by us, or the proof had not been ſufficient as to them: Firſt, that an Eccleſiaſtical Government may not be ſet up (unleſs Warranted by Inſtitution) over many Congregations, that have it by Inſtitution within themſelves: Or Secondly, that the Scriptures do not hold forth by Inſtitution, an Eccleſiaſtical Government in claſſes, &c. over many Congregations. One of theſe, or both, muſt have been proved by us. If the firſt, we ſhould fall again into a new General Head about Inſtitutions, Namely, That what in Church-Government is not by Inſtitution, may not be. The latter we alſo ſaw, the Aſſembly did Decline, and ſtated their Aſſertion upon an, It may be. And then again, this latter alſo being a Negative, the Demonſtration lies not in poſitive Arguments to the contrary; but in a Defenſive Denyal, with anſwers to the Arguments which might be brought to prove the Affirmative. And our Brethren not undertaking to prove an Inſtitution of the Presbyterial Government, all our anſwers to their Arguments, had anſwerably ſtill fallen ſhort of diſproving the Inſtitution of that Government. So that our Attempt this way, to oppoſe their Propoſition, would have been unavailble, and in vain.

But this was not all the obſtruction that lay in our way, to the confuting this Propoſition, in reſpect of this their ſtating it upon an, It may be; but the Difficulty was increaſed further alſo, and yet no leſs from the vaſt indefiniteneſs, and indeterminate Ambiguity and uncertainty of that other Term [Presbyterial Government, over many Congregations] which importing an Aſſociation of the Elders of many Congregations for Government, doth admit many Variations, and includes in it ſeveral patterns of Government, and alſo differing Conſtitutions of thoſe Congregations. For, (to give an Inſtance) there might be conceived, a Twofold Presbytery or Aſſociation of Elders, over many Congregations. There might be one for the Ordinary and Standing Government thereof, ſo as the greateſt matters appertaining to any of thoſe Congregations, ſhould be in a conſtant way brought before their Conſiſtory, as belonging to their Juriſdiction: So as the Congregations and their ſeveral Elderſhips ſhould not proceed, but as firſt Warranted by the Sentence of the Higher Presbytery. And there might be another Presbytery or meeting of Elders (and the Aſſembly had not declared any difference between Synodical and Presbyterial Aſſemblies ſet for a ſtanding Government) but only in caſe that Schiſms and Contentions fall out in the ſeveral Congregations, either about matters of Doctrine or Government, or for Difficult caſes, which the ſeveral Elderſhips of the Congregations, do find too hard for them, and ſo ſeek their help and direction: Or otherwiſe when the Elderſhip of a particular Congregation, hath Scandalouſly managed their Government, or wrongfully Excommunicated, &c. Then the Neighbouring Elderſhips offended, or appealed unto by the Perſons offended, are to Judge and Determine of it. This is the firſt and moſt General Diviſion of the Preſbyterial Government, into which (as 'tis propounded in the [May be] it can be caſt. If it be limited to an ordinary and ſtanding Government, yet ſtill as great an Ambiguity, as the former, remains touching the ſeveral ways, ſorts or kinds, into which this Presbyterial Government, and the conſtitution of theſe Congregations may be, and are caſt in the Reformed Churches, ariſing from a differing Relation, that the Elders (that thus are to make a common ſtanding Presbytery) do bear unto theſe Congregations.

1. The one is common and promiſcuous, unfixed for all ſorts of Duties, of Preaching, &c. as well as for Ruling: That as in common, they make one Presbytery over them all for Government; ſo likewiſe they all are alike Elders and Paſtors to each Congregation, and do beſtow like pains and care for all Paſtoral Duties of Preaching, Feeding, &c. in their courſes and rounds, as is practiſed in ſome Cities in Holland.

2. A Second variety is, that they are a Presbytery unto all in common, for Acts of Diſcipline; yet they are Paſtors or Elders fixed in their Relations properly, but to one Congregation, to perform all ſuch Duties thereunto, and not unto the reſt.

In the firſt, the Miniſters of all theſe Congregations do, in a circular way, Preach to them all in their courſe, as well as they do Rule in common; as if three or four Pariſhes be together, the Miniſters of each ſhould in their turns feed them all, and the People partake of the Gifts and Graces of all, as well as the Miniſters Rule all. Now if theſe Congregations, for the number of the Perſons belonging to them, conſiſt only of ſo many as can at times meet altogether, with their common Elderſhips for matters of Diſcipline, choice of Miniſters, Admonitions and Excommunications, and can be all preſent upon ſuch Great and Solemn Acts of Government, in which we conceive all are intereſted, ſo to joyn in them, and to be edified by them; although in reſpect of convenience, they make ſeveral Set and Fixed Congregations for Worſhip, either on the account of Perſecution, or of Diſtance from each other, or the like: And if they are ſo few Congregations, and ſo near as that Elders, that make up an Elderſhip in common, can fulfil the Duties of the Relation of Paſtors to them all, in their round and courſe; ſo as thoſe Congregations, do partake of the Gifts and Graces of them all, as well as are Ruled by them all; this kind of Presbytery of Elders in common over ſuch a number, as can, and do, for their great Acts of Government, meet in one Aſſembly upon ſuch occaſions, both People and Elders altogether, make up one kind of Government and conſtitution of Congregations. But when there are Presbyteries that either through their extent and compaſs of the number and diſtance of the Congregations under them, or otherwiſe by the Law of their Combination, neither do nor can hold the Relation, nor diſcharge the Duties of Paſtors in common unto them, but do only and meerly rule them (and ſo do in reſpect to this, make a greater Presbytery over their many leſſer Congregations, and this for the ordinary Government of them) and when the Members of theſe Congregations cannot meet to be preſent at the Acts of Diſcipline (wherein they have an intereſt of preſence and edification) This is a ſecond ſort of Presbyterial Government; and which is generally practiſed in the Reformed Churches.

3. And again yet further, this latter may alſo be (in Rational Suppoſition) caſt into two ſorts of Government.

The firſt ſort of Government is, wherein the Elders of theſe many Congregations, have no ſhare of Government in publick Admonitions or Cenſures, nor bear no Rule in thoſe Congregations, they are reſpectively affixt to; but ſuch as under the Biſhops, the Paſtors of the Congregations had, of preaching, private Watching, viſiting the Sick: All Suſpenſions from the Sacrament, publick Admonitions, Cenſures, being immediately to be brought to the common presbytery of Elders, ſet over them all for Government.

2. Another Form of Government, is, that many Congregations (as in Scotland) having their proper and peculiar paſtors and Elders, hereby come to be ſo many formed and diſtinct Churches; for the Relation of a paſtor and other Elders, or Rulers, cannot but be unto a Church, properly ſo called; for Church and Elders are Relative, as Rulers and a Common-wealth. And therefore they are called Eccleſiæ primæ, as thoſe to whom the Notion and true Nature and State of a Church doth firſt belong. And further, theſe Officers of paſtors and Teachers, being firſt in theſe ſeveral Churches, and there being in each, ſome competent number of Elders or Officers, as a Paſtor or Teacher, with other Ruling Elders (for otherwiſe the greater Presbytery ſhould not be made up compleat, of ſome of all theſe ſorts of Officers out of each Church, ſince the firſt Seat of all theſe Officers, is ſome particular Church) theſe paſtors and Ruling Elders, do make up a Presbytery over each of theſe Churches reſpectively. And further, being thus particular Churches, or having a presbytery or Elderſhip, they have ſome, yea, and a great part of Government allotted to them within their ſeveral Churches, as Suſpenſion from the Sacrament, publick Admonitions, &c.

For to ſuppoſe them Churches, and to have Elderſhips over them, and to have no priviledge of governing, would be to make an empty Title, without any of thoſe things the Scripture gives to the Churches and their Elderſhips. There is only this difference, that when it comes to the great matters of Ordination or Excommunication, theſe are taken up to the great Presbytery. And thus within the Territory of this presbyterial Government, intended in the propoſition, two ſorts of Elderſhips are to be underſtood, as included leſſer, and greater ones over them, and two ſorts of Churches (though called only Congregations) Churches leſſer, and incompleat joyned to make one Church, as the Subject of the common presbyterial Government.

In theſe unlimited and incomprehenſive Senſes, was this propoſition (the firſt Born of all that follow about this Government) propounded to the debate, although we urged upon the Aſſembly, that they would ſpecifie and determine, which of theſe Governments they intended, and would maintain, but it would not be granted, nor any thing added for the limitation thereof; as [muſt be] nor [rather be] in ſtead of [it may be] not [over many Churches] in ſtead [of many Congregations.] The advantage of which, on their part, was a liberty to defend it in any of theſe Senſes, and each upon the loweſt Terms [it may be] for the propoſition might vary, and alter with any of theſe ſhapes, for its defence, as if a ſtanding Government, immediately over many Congregations, could not be defended; then extraordinary and mediate of Elders Aſſociated in Synods might: If the common ſtanding Government of fixed Elders, to their ſeveral Congregations, would not abide the touch, then ſtill the propoſition (they might ſay) is not confuted; for presbytery of promiſcuous unfixt Elders might notwithſtanding be true, and ſo the Truth of the propoſition would ſtand.

Being reduced to this narrowneſs in the entrance into the Debate, both for the ſtate of the queſtion, and for the Medium of arguing, We (1.) Profeſs to lay our Arguments againſt that way of Presbyterial Government, over many Congregations, as it is extant, or practiſed in the Church of Scotland, over many Congregations, having Elders fixed to them: And we did alſo deſire, that no other anſwers might be given; but ſuch as they would in rearing up the presbyterial Government, reduce to practice. And 2. For the Medium of Arguing, we had little elſe left us, to have in a direct and open way recourſe unto; but thoſe Exhortations and charges given to Elders in the Epiſtles of the Apoſtles, as lying apparently croſs to this way of presbyterial Government, as thwarting the Rule of Chriſt, and Directions of the Apoſtles.

The State of the Queſtion then is this.

1. By Government is meant, a ſtanding ordinary and conſtant Government, exerciſed over many Congregations, in all the matters of greateſt Moment, that concern any Perſons therein.

2. Theſe Congregations are ſuch, and ſo conſtituted, as to have ſeverally or apart, each their proper Elders affixed to them, to preach to them, and watch over them; and to be intereſted in leſſer caſes of Government, as Admonition, &c.

3. But it is queſtioned, whether for all caſes of Government that are the greater, as Excommunication, &c. that ſhall fall out in any of thoſe Congregations, thoſe Elders in common, meeting in one great Presbytery or Elderſhip, and made up of them all (even as for leſſer matters, the Elders of particular Congregations meeting, are leſſer Presbyteries to their ſeveral Congregations Reſpectively) ſhould not appropriate this greater Government to themſelves, which we deny, and ſhall endeavour to refute in the following chapter.

CHAP. V.

That if a Presbytery of Elders be erected, having power over many Congregations, beſides their General Relation, they would alſo bear a particular Relation to each Congregation.

That no company of Elders Aſſembled together, hath a Power and Rule over many Congregations, will appear, if we do but conſider what the New Teſtament declares concerning Elders in their Relations to their Flocks committed to them; and concerning the Exhortations and charges to them, of Duties towards thoſe Flocks, founded upon that Relation; as alſo the Duties of their Flocks to them, all which is like to be the ſureſt meaſure to find out the extent of their power, and bounds of their Flocks, and whether that power for the ordinary way, be limited to one Congregation or many. For thoſe Exhortations and Charges, muſt needs be ſuppoſed, ſuited to that boundary of Churches, and that conſtitution and extent of Relation, that the Elders of thoſe Primitive times were placed in over them: Like as in the queſtion about Polygamy, what the Scripture hath ſaid of the Duties between Man and Wife, which were given and ſuited to the extent of that Relation, as God from the beginning bounded it; manifeſtly evinceth, that one Man cannot have many Wives, but one.

We have hitherto taken this for an undoubted Maxim; that as a Mutual Relation, is the ordinary Foundation of all power, whether Oeconomical, Civil, or Eccleſiaſtical; ſo the extent of all power, is commenſurable with the extent of that Relation. A Maſter, as a Maſter, hath power but over ſuch Servants, of whom he may ſay, I am your Maſter, and they of him, we are your Servants; for what hath any Man to do to Judge another Mans Servant? As the Apoſtle ſpeaks. And the ſame is true correſpondently here; thoſe Elders that aſſume to be over either one or many Congregations, muſt have, as the Office of Elders, ſo the Relation of Elders unto that one, or thoſe many Congregations; that they may be able to ſay, we are your Elders, and you all are our Church; which two are in Scripture expreſſion, the Relate and the Correlate, as King and Kingdom, Magiſtrates and Common-wealth.

Now againſt this ſtanding Government of theſe Elders in greater Presbyteries (as the Queſtion hath been ſtated) We ſhall Humbly make uſe of the forementioned Maxim, for a Medium to overthrow this Government, by preſenting together therewith, the Incongruities and Inconſiſtencies of it, and alſo by Arguing what the New Teſtament ſpeaks of the Elders and their Duties, in relation to the Flocks committed to them; which all do argue, that according to the Scriptures, ſuch a Government May not be. And we frame our Argument thus.

If many Congregations, having all Elders already affixed Reſpectively unto them, may be under ſuch a ſtanding Presbyterial Government: Then all thoſe Elders, muſt alſo (according to the Scriptures) ſuſtain a ſpecial Relation of ordinary and ſtanding Elders to all the People of thoſe Congregations, as one Church their Flock, and to every one as a Member thereof.

But for a company of ſuch Elders already affixed, &c. to ſuſtain ſuch a Relation, carries with it ſo great and manifold Incongruities and Inconſiſtences, with what the Scripture ſpeaks of Elders, in their Relation to a Flock or Church committed to them; and likewiſe with the Principles of the Reformed Churches themſelves, as cannot be admitted, and therefore ſuch a Government may not be.

That according to the Scriptures, ſuch a ſtanding Presbyterial Government, neceſſarily draws ſuch a ſtanding ſpecial Relation, we endeavour to evince by parts, thus.

1. They muſt have the Relation of Elders, for Church and Elders are Relatives. And the Argument, for the Presbyterial Government, is taken by the Presbyterial Divine from this; That many Congregations in Scripture, are made one Church, and the Elders thereof Elders of that Church. This we had the greateſt reaſon to take for granted, from the former Writings and Expreſſions of the Presbyterial Divines: Yea, the main Arguments, by which themſelves have proved this Government, have been taken from this; that many Congregations, in the New Teſtament, do make one Church, and the Elders thereof, Elders of that one Church; and therefore are to govern that Church. And this we have the greateſt reaſon to take for granted ſtill, for in the proof which was preſented to the Honourable Houſes of Parliament, by the Reverend Aſſembly (and before we entred into the Debate, was brought in by the Committee, in the inſtance of the Church of Jeruſalem) this is one Medium, that mention is made of the Multitudes there, as of one Church, and of Elders, as the Elders of that Church. Yea, and there being no mention made, of any diſtinct particular Congregations or Churches therein, but of a Church, and the Elders thereof; as thereby the prime Notion of a Church is held forth and Attributed thereto; So the prime and more principle Relation of Elders, as Elders to this one Church, and every Member of them is imported, and ſo as true and as Genuine a Relation (according to the Scripture's intent and expreſſion) muſt be ſuppoſed to be intended, as can be ſuppoſed between any particular Congregation and their Elders. Yea, and moreover, to make out the Presbyterial Government over thoſe many Congregations, as one Church, whilſt the Apoſtles were the Rulers of it, the Apoſtles themſelves are made to act and become, as ordinary Elders to that Church. It was therefore deſired, that they who ſhould deny this Propoſition, would raſe out of their Writings for ever, all ſuch expreſſions; and that in the proofs after, to be brought to Eſtabliſh the Presbytery, they would forbear that Medium, which yet as a main ſtudd in this Building, cannot be wanting.

2. This Relation, which theſe Elders have, muſt be a more ſpecial Relation: As is evident from the practice and principles of this Government. For when the Congregations, in Shires, are divided into ſeveral Presbyteries or Deanries, the Elders (though Neighbours) of a bordering Presbytery, intermeddle not with the Congregations under another Presbytery; and yet they are for their Office Elders. It is therefore a ſpecial Relation, puts the difference, that thoſe of theſe Presbyteries, Judge the Congregations under them, as having a ſpecial Relation to them, ſuch as not to other Congregations. So the Elders of the Church of Jeruſalem, as they all had the Relation of Elders to that Church, ſo they had a ſpecial Relation to that Church; and the Church was an intire diſtinct Church within it ſelf, from the reſt of the Churches in Judea, and the Elders of that Church were in ſuch a ſpecial manner Elders thereof, as of no Church elſe in Judea; yea, in ſuch a ſenſe as they might be ſaid not to be Elders of thoſe other Churches, but of this.

3. It is an ordinary ſtanding Relation: For they exerciſe and aſſume a conſtant and ordinary power, as the Presbyters of leſſer Congregations do. Their meetings as Elders, in a Presbytery, are conſtant and ordinary, as thoſe of the leſſer Presbyteries are; and as theſe are Eſtabliſhed for the ſmaller matters of Government, ſo theſe always are for the greater, and moſt Solemn; and they are both alike ordinary: For their Meeting, Work, and Exerciſe of power, being ſtanding their relation muſt be ſuitable and anſwerable, to that of Elders in their Congregations reſpectively.

Unto the Argument, ſeveral Anſwers were given by the Reverend Reſpondents. 1. Some ſaid, that they meet not Qua Elders, only Qui: They, meet, as Commiſſioners, but not as Elders. But this anſwer is taken away, by the firſt and ſecond Argument; which proves, they have the Relation of Elders in Ruling. 2. It was denyed by others, that if they make up a Presbytery to theſe Congregations, and all the people of them, that then they muſt bear the Relation of Elders to theſe Congregations, and every Member of them: For though they are Elders taken ſingly and apart, as in Relation to their ſeveral Congregations, which they are affixed unto; yet in this their conjunction into a common Presbytery over them all, they bear the Relation of Elders, but of a Presbytery or Elderſhip acting all in common: For as all theſe Congregations, under this Government, are to be conſidered as one Body, and as making up one Church, ſo all theſe Elders, met in this community, are to be conſidered as one Body and commuuity; and therefore although they be conſidered altogether a Presbytery to that whole Church; yet it follows not, that they bear the Relation of Elders to each Congregation or Perſon they Govern; for according to that Logick Rule, Quod convenit toti qua toti, non convenit cuilibet parti, what agrees to the whole, as a whole, doth not agree to every part; theſe Elders, as in a Presbytery, make one Totum aggregatum; and theſe Congregations, as making up one Church, make another Totum aggregatum correlative thereunto: But take any Elder out of this Presbytery, and conſider him in a ſingle Relation to any of thoſe Churches under the Presbytery; and he is not an Elder of any of thoſe Churches, no more than if you take any Member of all thoſe Congregations, that make up a claſſical Church, it would follow, that therefore he is a Member of all thoſe many Congregations, whereas he is only a Member of that Community, as making one Church. And it was exemplified thus; that in Juda, the Heads of the Tribes Governed the Tribes; but ſo, as the Heads of the Tribe of Benjamin were not the Heads of the Tribe of Manaſſes; and ſo in the Univerſity, the particular Heads of Trinity Colledge, and of Queen's Colledge, are altogether Heads of the Univerſity, as a common Body; but it follows not, that the Head of Trinity Colledge, is Head of Queen's, and of all the other Colledges: And ſo in Parliament, a Burgeſs of Warwickſhire acts for all England; yet it follows not, he is a Burgeſs of Norfolk: So the caſe is here, they are Elders in ſenſu compoſito, as united into one Presbytery or Community; but not in ſenſu diviſo, to each of theſe Congregations, but each to their proper Congregations, to which they are affixed: As the Collonels in an Army, are Collonels but to their ſeveral Regiments; yet they all joyn in one Body, as a Councel of War to the whole Army. And ſo theſe are Elders here in ſenſu aggregato, collectively to all the Congregations, though apart with a more ſpecial Relation to each. It was Retorted alſo, that in a particular Congregation, according to our Principles, the community of all the Brethren have power over any particular Member, as Thomas and Peter, with the reſt over John; but it follows not, that Peter hath power over John apart, but only as in this Community conſidered; and ſo in this Presbytery, all theſe Elders are a Presbytery to the whole; but yet bear not the Relation of Elders to each apart conſidered. But we anſwer,

1. That we had the greateſt reaſon to take it for granted (from the former Writings and Expreſſions of the Presbyterial Divines; as alſo becauſe the main Arguments, by which themſelves had proved this Government, have been taken from it) that many Congregations, in the New Teſtament, do make one Church; and that the Elders thereof, are Elders of that one Church, and therefore they are to Govern that Church.

2. That Logical Axiom is indeed true, Quod convenit toti, qua toti, non convenit cuilibet parti, and ſo here, that which doth competere toti, to the whole of thoſe Elders, belongs not to every part: For take them all as met together, they are a Presbytery; and accordingly each Elder is not a Presbytery, to all theſe Congregations. Nor doth the Argument ſuppoſe it, but only that if they all be a common Presbytery to all theſe Congregations, that then they bear the Relation of Elders to them. Thus in a particular Congregation, though all the Elders are acknowledged by all, to be Elders to every Member of the Congregation; yet each cannot be ſaid to be a Presbytery to the whole, or each Member; for that which belongs to the whole, as the whole belongs not to every part. That indeed which belongs to an aggregate whole, or collective community, formally conſidered as ſuch, cannot be Attributed to every part; but what materially belongs to them, belongs to each apart. As take an heap of Stones, 'tis true, each Stone, is not an heap of Stones; but each Stone is a Stone; and both the Stones apart, and as an heap may be ſaid to be ſuch or ſuch a Man's propriety, and to relate to him; ſo this company of Elders muſt be ſuppoſed both a Presbytery, and alſo Elders to this whole People, and every Member of them,

3. If they be a Presbytery in common to thoſe Congregations, then according to the Scripture Notion and Expreſſion (and what the Scriptures hold forth, is the Subject matter of this Debate) they bear the Relation of Elders alſo; and then they muſt be ſuch Elders, as the Exhortations and Duties of Elders mentioned do concern. Now this conſequence we make good by theſe Arguments.

1. The Scriptures would have the people look at them, and Honour them as Elders in all Acts of Ruling and Governing, thoſe eſpecially wherein the moſt and chief of Government lies, and wherein the excellency of their Ruling is ſeen: Now the chief of the Acts of Government, and the moſt excellent thereof, are aſſumed and exerciſed by theſe Elders, met in a common Presbytery, as Excommunication, &c. And therefore they that exerciſe ſuch Acts of Government over Congregations, muſt bear the Relation of Elders to them; for upon that Relation, we are to Honour them, as performing this Rule; and under that Relation, they muſt be ſaid to perform it, The Elders that Rule well, are worthy of double Honour, eſpecially thoſe that labour in the Word and Doctrine, 1 Tim. 5. 17. From whom are they to have this Honour given them, but from the People under them, and to be Honoured in their Relation; and this, as well in Ruling as in Preaching, though an Eſpecially is put upon that. And therefore if in giving this Honour to them that labour in Preaching to them; they are to look at them, under the Relation of Elders, and their Elders labouring in the Word to them; then in giving that Honour to them that Rule them, they are ſo to look upon them, and therefore they muſt ſuſtain that Relation in that Ruling; and beſides, otherwiſe we deſtroy the Relation of Elders, as Elders in the Higheſt Acts of Governing, which are exerciſed in a Presbytery, whereas the Apoſtle calls them Elders in Ruling, as well as in Preaching.

2. The New Teſtament doth indifferently and promiſcuouſly, uſe the word Presbytery, and the word Elders of the ſame perſons, in Relation to the ſame people; and therefore to whom the Elders are ſuppoſed to be a Presbytery, to them they muſt bear the Relation of Elders. That the phraſe is promiſcuouſly uſed, is evident by Matth. 21. 33. where thoſe that are called Elders of the People, are called, Luke 22.66. Τὸ πρεσβυτέριον τοῦ λαοῦ, the Presbytery of the People, ſo that if they were Related as a Presbytery to the people, to the ſame people they were Related as Elders. Neither are they ſaid to be Elders in Relation to their being a Presbytery, but to the people; therefore it is not ſaid the Elders of the Presbytery, but of the people, as bearing a direct Relation as Elders to the people: And ſo in Analogy thereunto, if they be a presbytery to many Congregations, they muſt be ſuppoſed Elders of thoſe Congregations; for to whom ever they are a Presbytery, to them they are Elders; and to whom ever they are Elders, to them upon occaſion they are a Presbytery. And in Analogy, the New Teſtament uſeth the word Presbytery, as under the Goſpel but once, and in all places elſe, the Holy Ghoſt ſtill when he exhorts them to their Duties, calls them Elders, or them that have the Rule over you, and yet in all thoſe places, he intends to involve the Duty of Elders, as met in a Presbytery, as well as thoſe ſingly performed to each perſon.

3. It is evident from the like parallel inſtance of the Elderſhip of a particular Congregation, where the Elders bear the Relation of Elders to each Member, and when met in common, they are an Elderſhip or Presbytery in common to that Church, and each Member of it. And then this their being a Community, takes not away their Relation of being Elders, as if the anſwer given by the Reſpondents, ſhould hold, it would; for they would only be a Presbytery, and not Elders in that Community, when as they never are Elders more than then, and are not Elders of that Church, becauſe met in a Presbytery; but therefore meet in a Presbytery over that Congregation, becauſe they perſonally bear the Relation of Elders to it. And when they meet in that Presbytery, they are Elders particularly to each Member, as well as are Univerſal Elders in the Aſſembled presbytery. The Scripture commits the care of Churches, to theſe as in a presbytery, as well as out of it; and therefore they are Elders of their particular Flock in this presbytery, as well as when out of it. Thus (Acts 20. 28.) all the care of the Flock was committed to them as Elders, and having Relation to it as ſuch; and therefore when met in a presbytery (therein to have care of the Flock, or any Member of it) they were Elders to it. And they are therefore to meet in a presbytery; becauſe they were firſt Elders to their ſeveral Reſpective Congregations; and that they muſt be acknowledged Elders of all the people in thoſe Congregations, the very inſtance it ſelf alledged by our Brethren, will evidently clear;] for the General Elders of all the Tribes, were called Elders of the people,

Mat. 21. So as ſuppoſe the ſame individual perſons, had been Members of the General Sanhedrim, or common Eldership of the people, and alſo Elders of the Tribes Reſpectively; yet they might as juſtly be called Elders of all thoſe Tribes in their General Relation, for ſuch ends and purpoſes, as truly as they were Elders to their particular Tribes, for other ends and purpoſes. Now therefore by like Reaſon, muſt all the Elders in this common Presbytery, have the Relation of Elders to all the Congregations, as well as ſeverally they have their proper Relations to their ſeveral Congregations. For if in the inſtance given of the Jewiſh Government, we take all cauſes common to all the Tribes, as the Elders of Manaſſes, were Elders to the Tribe of Benjamin, ſo in like manner muſt theſe Elders of a Presbytery, in common to all theſe Congregations, be ſuppoſed to be to each Congregation, when any cauſe comes afore them in their cogniſance.

Laſtly, Thoſe places and exhortations of Scripture, concerning the Duties of Elders, &c. to their Flocks, and their Flocks to them, may be alledged to ſtrengthen the Argument, Heb. 13. 7. Remember them that have the Rule over you, and have ſpoken the Word of God to you. And 1 Theſſ. 5. 12. Know them which labour among you, and are over you, and Admoniſh you. And to the ſame purpoſe is the charge, Acts 20. To the Elders of Epheſus, Feed the Flock, &c. Theſe are all ſpoken of them, and to them, under the very Notion and Relation of Elders and Rulers, (which is Equivalent) and as their Rulers and Elders. And ſurely if any Perſon in a Congregation, were called afore one of thoſe Presbyteries, over many Congregations, they would urge upon the Conſcience of the Perſon, theſe and the like places to obey them, by vertue of theſe commands. If he ſhould Reply, that theſe places ſpeak of ſuch as have the Relation of Elders to their Flocks, and every Perſon therein; and that by vertue of their being ſuch to them, this Obedience is urged upon them; but you of the Presbytery, do not own the Elders of your Prebytery to have a Relation to the Congregation I am of, and ſo I am quit of Obedience to you; how could they by vertue of theſe places, holding this principle, that they have not the Relation of Elders to him, enforce Obedience from him? And how will his conſcience ever be brought to a Submiſſion to their Sentence againſt him, if not ſatisfied of this Relation to him thus Specified? And yet would not theſe Elders by the Presbyterial Principles expect equal, if not more Obedience from him, than the Elders of that particular Congregation he is a Member of would do? I am ſure that in practice, they aſſume more; and I doubt not, but any one of theſe Elders, or all of them apart, would as Authoritatively Admoniſh him (as an Elder to him) in private after the cauſe is brought afore the Presbytery, to obey and ſubmit to them, as any of his own Elders would do before or after their publick Admonition, and would require Obedience to him as an Elder, by vertue of theſe places of Scripture before mentioned. If therefore they would require it; then the Relation muſt be the ſame. Yea, do not often ſome few of the Elders of a common Presbytery, come into particular Congregations, and perform Acts of Government, and ordain Elders to them; and in caſe of obſtinacy, Excommunicate the Elders of any particular Congregation? Upon what plea of Authority do they this, as Elders to that particular Congregation, or not?

4. We come now to conſider the other Diſtinction. 1. Of their being Elders only in a community to all theſe Congregations as one Church, in ſenſu aggregato: And 2. Of their being apart, Elders unto their particular Congregations reſpectively: And ſo the Duties mentioned of Feeding the Flock, &c. concern them only as conſidered apart; but Acts of Government, belong to them as Elders in a Presbytery. We reply 1. That this Anſwer ſuppoſeth two diſtinct differing Relations, the one a more particular Relation of Elders, as proper Elders to their ſeveral Congregations apart; and another more common Relation of the ſame perſons conſidered as Elders meerly, as in a Presbytery. Now for the confirmation or Eſtabliſhment of this Diſtinction, by the one ſide or the other, the Foundation on which we proceed, muſt be remembred, viz. what the Scriptures hold forth; and therefore what ever Suppoſitions or Inſtances may be found in other conſtitutions, to Illuſtrate ſuch Diſtinctions here; yet if what the New Teſtament ſpeaks of Elders in Relation to their Flock, warranteth it not, yea croſſeth it, it may not be. Now then it is to be conſidered, that when the New Teſtament ſpeaks of Elders and Churches, it ſpeaks Univerſally, and without Diſtinction of a different Relation. It calls them ſimply and ſimply Elders of the Church, and delivers (in that Relation to their Church, they were Elders of) Exhortations to their Duties, which that Relation ſpecially called for; and in thoſe exhortations intends their Duties, as their Elders, met in a Presbytery, as well as thoſe they are to perform in other Miniſtrations towards their Flocks, and on the other ſide, exhorts the people in like ſimular expreſſions, to Obey and Honour their Elders that Preach the Word, Rule them, and Admoniſh them, preſcribing Obedience to them, in their Rule in a Presbytery, as well as in other Adminiſtrations; and all this without any Diſtinction of this Relation of Elders in common, and in ſpecial. And farther 'tis enjoyned, that theſe presbyterial Elders, muſt perform thoſe Duties which belong to their Office, unto all thoſe they are thus Elders unto, without any Manifeſt Diſtinction of any ſeveral bounds of this ſo differing Relation. This evidently argueth, that there is but one ſingle Relation of Elders, to one Flock, to whom they perform theſe Duties; and that the ſame that Preach, ought to Rule them in publick; and that the ſame Perſons that Admoniſh them privately, do alſo in the publick Presbytery Rule them; and that the ſame Perſons that Rule them in thoſe publick Presbyteries, do Admoniſh them in private. So then, the ſame Perſons ſuſtain in the Holy Ghoſts intention, and view when he made thoſe exhortations, one and the ſame Univocal Relation of Elders to their Flocks, committed by him to them, whether they be met in a Presbytery for Acts of Government, or otherwiſe perform the Duties of Elders apart. And it is evident, that in a particular Congregation, they are Elders in one Univocal Simular Relation, unto the whole Flock, and every Member thereof. But now this is the wonder, that when Elders are thus affixed to particular Congregations; and that their Relation is a differing Relation from that other in common Presbyteries (yea, ſo vaſtly differing, that our Brethren dare ſcarce acknowledge them Elders, calling them rather a Presbytery, than Elders of thoſe Churches) that yet the exhortations in the Scriptures, ſhould ſo univocally fall on them, to ſo differing Duties, founded on differing Relations; and that yet this only Genuine Relation of Elders to their particular Congregations, ſhould not be mentioned apart; and the Duties accompanying it, ſingled out from the reſt, ſeems to us very ſtrange. Yea, and to direct the Diſcharge of the Duties of the People likewiſe, to either of theſe Elders (that they might know what Duties to perform to their more proper Elders, acknowledged theirs by way of ſo eminent and differing a Relation, and what to thoſe more common; and that all confuſion might be prevented, that the one aſſume not the Duties of the other) it was as neceſſary to have ſet the differing Limits of theſe, as to ſet the bounds of Officers in the Church, which the Holy Ghoſt hath done.

ſingly

2. And Secondly, If there had been this differing Relation of Elders, which from thoſe Similitudes in Common-wealths, Armies, and the Univerſities is given; it was neceſſary that the Scripture ſhould have held it forth, either by differing Names and Reſpects, or by differing charges, whereby it might appear, that this Relation obligeth them to this Duty, and the other Relation to that; which being not done in Scripture, the Diſtinction will not paſs upon us. That it is thought neceſſary, that the Scripture ſhould preſcribe herein, appears from the inſtances brought by the Reverend Reſpondents. As 1. That of the Tribes, where there were General Elders of all the Tribes, and there were (and perhaps ſome of them the ſame Men) Heads and Elders of Tribes: But as this was a differing Relation, and reſpect in the ſame or diverſe Perſons, ſo they had Names and Titles of difference and diſtinction; for the Heads General (as we may call them) were called Elders of the People: The particular Elders of particular Tribes, were called by way of Diſtinction from them, Elders of ſuch Cities, Families, &c. And there were as Diſtinct Laws given, ſo that in ſome cauſes the Elders of the ſeveral Tribes did judge ſuch and ſuch particulars in their Tribes Reſpectively: And the General Elders had reſerved caſes, of War, Blaſphemy, &c.

So in that Inſtance of Heads of Colledges, and Heads of the Univerſity; there is as a differing Relation, ſo a Diſtinguiſhing Character. For the Names are changed, ſince the particular Bodies are called Colledges; and the General Body the Univerſity: And their ſeveral ſpecial Relation to their Colledges, is expreſſed by the Title of Maſters of ſuch or ſuch Colledges; and the other by the Title of Heads to the Univerſity. Yea, and accordingly there are differing Statutes, the Local Statutes for each Colledge apart, or for Colledges as Colledges, and the Duties of Maſters in their ſpecial Relations ; and there are Statutes for the Univerſity, and for their Duties as Heads of it. And this Diſtinction or Difference was neceſſary here too, if there were this differing Relation : But for the caſe in hand, if we come to the New Teſtament, to find out the ſeveral Modifications and Relations of Elders therein, we ſtill read but ſimply and ſingly, Elders and Churches, as Relatives, without any ſuch Note of Diſtinction of a claſſical Church, and the Presbytery thereof; and the Congregational Church, and the Elders thereof. The New Teſtament in all its mentioning of Elders, ſpeaks uniformly of them, as Elders of the Churh, and this Rule is to us certain, Ubi Scriptura non diſtinguit, nec debemus diſtinguere, Where the Scripture makes no Diſtinction, we ought not to make any.

But however, I will Repreſent the difference between us and our Brethren, by the Propoſition of ſuch a Caſe in Law as this is : If all the Records and Ruled Caſes and Laws of this Kingdom, ſhould, in ſetting down the ordinary Government thereof, have made mention only and ſingly, of Burgeſſes (as the Rulers) of Corporations (as the Correlate to them) and uſed no other Diſtinguiſhing Word (when yet there were undeniably Burgeſſes of every incorporate Town, continued from Antiquity) might any one afterwards pretend, that this Word Corporation, was intended by our Anceſtors, to import an Aſſociation or Community of many of theſe Corporations in one Shire ; and that by Burgeſſes of theſe Corporations, were meant a community of all theſe Burgeſſes in one Body for Government ; and ſo pretend to the ſame Name without Diſtinction, and ſay, that theſe Communities were alſo meant, and to prove it, give inſtance in ſome Foreign Government, where there are States General of Provinces, and States particular of Cities ; when as they have in their Laws, a Diſtinction and Differencing Character; but in the Laws of this Kingdom, there is no ſuch Diſtinction made ? But now if the Laws about the choice of ſuch Burgeſſes in each Corporation, and the Duties given them in charge, and their Relation to their Corporations, do run without any Diſtinction of what the Burgeſſes in the ſuppoſed greater Corporations ſhould do, in that Relation and Community ; from what the ſame Burgeſſes in their leſſer Corporations do in their more proper Relations : Yea, and if the Duties ſet down in thoſe Laws, mutually between Corporations, and thoſe Burgeſſes, ſhould argue an inconſiſtency with the Government of Burgeſſes, over many Corporations in common ; but ſhould all naturally fall in with that of Burgeſſes over ſingle Corporations, and argue ſuch a Relation : Would not this plainly evidence, that therefore the Laws of the Kingdom did hold forth, there might not be (that is, according to the Laws thereof) ſuch a Government of the Burgeſſes of Corporations over many others ? And if in anſwer to ſuch Arguments, it ſhould be ſaid, that both theſe might be conſiſtent ; for that in other Foreign States and Kingdoms, and Societies, there are Burgeſſes of particular Corporations, and there are Burgeſſes in an Aſſembly of Parliament (ſo called by way of Diſtinction) met in common for the ordinary Government of all thoſe Corporations in common ; and therefore the like may be here in this : The reply were eaſy, that what ever ſuch Diſtinction there is in other States ; yet the queſtion is of ſuch Burgeſſes, as the Laws of this State holds forth, and as this Kingdom hath ſet up, where there is no ſuch Diſtinction of Burgeſſes of Corporations, and Burgeſſes in Parliament mentioned ; but on the contrary, only one ſingle uniform Stile and Title in the Laws, Namely, Burgeſſes of the Corporations ; and further, the Rules about their choice and duties mutually between them, and the Corporations they have Relation to, be alſo delivered without any difference ; which doth argue them to have been Anciently the Relation of Burgeſſes to ſome one Corporation, and not many ; yea, to be utterly incongruous and inconſiſtent, with ſuch a manifold Relation. Now Parallel to this caſe, are our Arguments ; and the Anſwers given to the Arguments of our Presbyterian Brethren.

But they Retort the Argument upon us, and ſay, that it ſollows no more, that they are to be Elders to each Congregation, becauſe joyned in a common Presbytery, than that in a particular Congregation ; Peter or one Member apart, hath a power over John ; becauſe in community with the reſt of the Brethren, he hath power over any one.

We anſwer, That let this Parallel decide it ; and then as the Foundation of any one Members having an intereſt in that community over John, or any other, conſiſts, in this that he ſtands in the Relation of a Brother to John, as a Member of that Church ; and o in like manner to all the reſt of the Members in that community: So likewiſe all and every one, when in that common Fraternity, ſtand in the very ſame Relation of Brethren to John, as well as when they are apart out of it; and do not become Brethren, having power over him, becauſe met in a community; but therefore meet, becauſe as Brethren; this Duty lies on them in common, to Judge him as much as in private to Admoniſh him; and ſo one and the ſame Relation, puts them upon both theſe Duties. And in Scripture, the Exhortations run to the ſame Perſons to perſorm theſe Duties, though of differing ſort; becauſe of their Relation as Brethren. Let this Parallel be applyed to the thing in hand, and as it anſwers the Inſtance, ſo it ſtrengthens our Argument.

Laſtly, If they be acknowledged to have the Relation of Elders, as Aſſembled in a Presbytery; and in that reſpect, to have a Relation to all the People in the ſeveral Congregations: Yet ſtill the ſame Incongruities mentioned will follow upon it. For many of thoſe Duties from all the Congregation, as Honour, Maintenance, &c. are due to them, as well as to their own Elders, for that their Works ſake: And the Acts too alſo of theſe Elders in this Presbytery, though in common, are the moſt eminent Acts that belong to the Office of Elders; and in which the Conſciences and Intereſt of the People, and each Member, is as much concerned, as in the daily Preaching of their more proper Elders (as for Diſtinction ſake, we now call them) for they have power, and they alone to cut them off from all Ordinances, and to deliver them unto Satan. Now then, if they are to be intereſted in the choice of their proper Elders, to Rule them in ſmaller things, then their concern ought to be, as much in the choice of, and conſenting to theſe their General Elders, and they ſhould be preſent at the Ordination of all of them; for one great part of their Function, is to be exerciſed towards any, and all of thoſe Congregations in a ſtanding way; yea, and to Rule them in matters of the greateſt concernment. Thus then ſo far, as they are acknowledged Elders, ſo far theſe Inconveniences will ſtill follow upon the Heels of that acknowledgment; and the Scriptures indifferently ſpeaking the ſame things, without Diſtinction of both theſe kind of Relations, under the common Name of Elders, the People have as much cauſe to challenge their right about the one, as they have about the other; and theſe Elders may expect the ſame (by vertue of thoſe Scriptures) from the People.

CHAP. VI.

The Incongruities which flow from the Elders of a Presbytery, ſuſtaining ſpecial Relation of Elders to all the particular Congregations.

I have proved, that if a Presbytery be ſet over many Congregations, the Presbyters thereof muſt bear a ſpecial Relation of conſtant, and eſtabliſhed Elders to all thoſe Congregations: I ſhall now evince, that for theſe Elders already fixed to ſeveral charges, to ſuſtain alſo a ſpecial Relation of Ordinary and Standing Elders to all theſe Congregations, as one Church; and all the people thereof, as Members of that Church; carries with it Great and Manifold Incongruities, and Inconſiſtencies alſo, with what the Scriptures hold forth concerning Elders, and other Officers of Churches, as alſo with the Principles profeſſed by the Reformed Churches themſelves.

1. This breeds an Incongruous Diſproportion, between the Relation of the Officers of a Church, of this ſort of Officers, Namely Elders, in the extent of their Relation and Power; and of thoſe other ſort of Officers of the Churches, acknowledged by the Reformed Churches, viz. Deacons. Now let us therefore put it to the examination of the conſciencious, whether what the Scripture ſpeaks of Elders, and of their Commiſſion, Duties, &c. in their ſeveral Relations to the Flock under them, will afford clearer characters of the extent of their ſtanding Government, to be Congregational to one Congregation, than of its being claſſical over many. Yea, let us ſee whether the Deſcriptions of Elders, and Exhortations given unto them concerning their ſeveral charges, do not plainly overthrow any ſuch Relation of Elders (as Elders) unto many Congregations, as Inconſiſtent thereunto. Surely unto us, there appear many great and unanſwerable Incongruities and Inconſiſtencies, in this claſſical Government.

If we compare the extent of this Office of Elders in their Relation, with the extent of other Church Officers in their Relation; we ſhall find, that what holds true of one ſort of ordinary Officers of a Church, according to the word, may well be ſuppoſed to hold true of another; or elſe there is a diſproportion between the ſeveral Relations of Officers; and the one is not of like extent with the other, which yet the Scriptures make commenſurable, and to be of equal extent. More plainly, if the Scriptures had intended, and held forth many Churches, as making one Church; and the Elders of thoſe many Churches, to have been Elders in common to thoſe Churches, as one Church; then the Deacons of all thoſe Churches, ſhould make up a common Deaconry, and be Deacons in common, unto all thoſe Churches in an ordinary way, as the other are Elders. But this is contrary to the practice of the Reformed Churches, though ſubject to the Presbyterial Government, in which the Deacons have the ordinary Relation of Deacons, in no reſpect extended further than to a particular Congregation: Nor do they exerciſe Acts of that Office, in a ſet way to other Congregations, nor to Neighbour Congregations more than to another; much leſs is there a common Deaconſhip of them all. And yet why ſhould not this common Deaconry be erected over all thoſe Churches, as one Church, as well as a common Eldерſhip, eſpecially if in matters of this Nature, a parity of Reaſon ſhould carry it? For,

1. A Church in Scripture, and all the Officers are alike Relatives, as a Church and the Elders are. The beſt of the Presbyterial Arguments for this common Presbytery, are founded upon the commenſurable extent and relation of Church and Elders; that if any Churches make one Church, then the Elders of them all make one Elderſhip, and they are Elders in common unto them; then why not the Deacons alſo? Now this Reaſon of theirs, fetcht from this Mutual Relation of one Church, and one Elderſhip or Elders thereof, will require the like for Deacons: for every Church, as it is a Church, being a Body, hath a Relation to all its Officers, as Organical Members thereof: As we have it aſſerted, Rom. 12. 4. As we have many Members in one Body, and all Members have not the ſame Office, ſo it is alſo in the Church of Chriſt; and the Members have ſeveral Offices in the Church, which he mentioneth, ver. 8. and ſo if that Church of Rome were one Body, and a Church of many Churches; then the Deacons were Deacons in common of thoſe many Churches, as they all were one Church. For as the Paſtors and Teachers Office is held forth in that following Deſcription, ver. 8. He that Exhorteth, and he that Teacheth: So the Deacons in that, He that Giveth. And in the Analogy of the Natural Body (to which there the Apoſtle refers us, to exemplifie this of a Church organized with Officers, as a Body to Chriſt) though one Member may be leſs and inferiour to another, in bulk or uſe; yet it is a Member of that whole Body in its uſe. The little Finger, is a Finger of the whole Body, as well as the Arm is a Member of the whole: The Foot that ſerves the whole Body, is a Member in its Office, as fully as the Hand; and the extent of its Juriſdiction or Uſe, according to its kind, is the ſame, by vertue of the ſame Relations. If therefore theſe are Elders in common, or an Elderſhip do Rule in common thoſe Congregations as One Church, and as Organical Members thereof, as one Body; then why ſhould not the Deacons in as ordinary a way, perform their Office in common, and bear the Relation of Deacons in common unto all, as One Church? And

2. The Scriptures do confirm this like commenſurable extent of the Deacons and Elders Office, as Relating to a Church: For the Apoſtle Writing to Philippi, a Church in a City (which therefore we ſuppoſe our Brethren will needs have to have been a Presbyterial Church, of many Congregations, leſt any one inſtance of a compleat Congregational Church, ſhould be left unto us) He Writes to the Biſhops (the Elders) and the Deacons of that Church. And Acts 6. the Deacons of the Church of Jeruſalem (if there were many Congregations, as our Brethren ſuppoſe) were choſen by the whole Multitude, when gathered together by the Twelve; and therefore were Deacons of that whole Church, as well as the Elders were Elders thereof. Now if the Deacons Office ſhould thus be extended to all the Congregations, as the Elders is; then why ſhould not each Church be bound to bring Contributions to the Deacons of each Church, to be diſtributed in common; and ſo our Purſes ſhould be ſubject to the Deacons in common, as far as our conſciences to the Elders in common; and they might challenge the ſame power in their Office over the one, that the Elders do over the other: And then alſo each Congregation were in as ordinary and ſtanding an obligation, bound to Relieve all the poor in thoſe Churches, as well as thoſe in their own: Not only by the common Law of charity, but by vertue of a ſpecial Relation of their being one Church; which Relation in all theſe things, doth beget the like obligation, that it doth in Government: And ſo all things in this Nature, ſhould be alike common to all and each; and there ſhould be a common Treaſury for this one great Diaconate Church (as we may in a Parallel Alluſion, to that other Name of Presbyterial call it) as there is a common Regimen or Government, for this great Presbyterial Church. This ſtrange Diſproportion between the Officers or Members of this Body, which the Presbyterial Government doth make, ſeems to us, at leaſt, unnatural: Whereas this (as all other things) fall in ſuitably and naturally, when the Relation of Elders and Elderſhips, is extended no further than each Congregation; which, as it is to be an Original Body unto Chriſt, ſo the Officers and Members thereof, according to the Law of Nature, are alike Members of, and for that Body; and the Uſe, Service, Relation, of all and each in their ſeveral kinds, bear alike proportion to the whole. And that even by the practice and judgment of the Reformed Churches themſelves, the Deacons are confined to each particular Congregation, is to us a Teſtimony (as the remaining Office of Overſeers for the poor under the Epiſcopal Government, hath been judged a pregnant evidence of the Deacons Office once in the Church) that the limits of a Church and Elders were all once within a particular Congregation, although the Elders, becauſe a Superior Office, have aſſumed to extend their power and juriſdiction in their kind, further than the other more inferior in theirs.

But let it be ſuppoſed, that ſome reaſon of difference might be given of this Diſproportion in the Elder's Office, and the Deacons, and that a common Deaconry would not follow upon a common Presbytery. Yet

2. There are other as great Incongruities will fall upon the very Relations of the Elders Offices themſelves, which this Frame of fixed Elders to ſome Congregations reſpectively, and yet of ordinary Elders to all of them, cauſeth. God hath made ſome Preaching Elders; ſome Ruling Elders (as the Reformed Churches allow) or Church-Governours to aſſiſt the Paſtors in Government. And to Preaching Elders, both Preaching and Ruling belongs; which are conjunct in that Office, according to the Principles of the Presbyterial Government, and the Scriptures. But the buſineſs of Ruling, belongs only to the other; and by this they are diſtinct, as two Subordinate Species, or as the Senſitive and Reaſonable Soul, whereof the one hath Senſe only in all its Acts, the other both Senſe and Reaſon, and yet are Specifically diſtinct.

Every Church of Chriſt, is a Body ordered, Coloſſ. 2. 1. Rejoycing (ſays Paul). to ſee your Order. And the intent of the Presbyterial Government, is profeſſed to be, to preſerve Order in the Church; and if in any thing this Order is moſt to be ſeen, it is in the Diſtinction and Order of the Officers thereof. Now this Frame of Government, brings in a great Diſorder in the Offices and Officers, and confounds them, and their Relations. To Demonſtrate this, let us conſider the Paſtors, or Preaching Elders. They are all undeniably Preaching Elders, to their particular Congregations, of which they are the fixt Paſtors; and yet they have another Relation of Elders (by means of this Presbyterial Government) to all theſe Congregations, conſidered as one Church: And if theſe Paſtors be any way Elders to both; they muſt Suſtain the Title of both ſorts of Elders in theſe two differing Relations, which is an evident confounding of both theſe Offices, in one and the ſame perſon. For,

1. It is evident, that they do each apart, bear the Title and Relation of preaching Elders unto their particular Congregations; and ſuch paſtors, or ſuch preaching Elders, they can be to no more or other than thoſe they ordinarily preach unto; for they Labour in the Word and Doctrine, unto no other; and this is the character of Diſtinction from the other Elders and Governours, in 1 Tim. 5. 17. And it is evident, that they being fixt each as Paſtors to their particular Congregations, cannot Labour in the Word and Doctrine to them all; therefore they ſuſtain this Title in Diſtinction of Elders, only unto thoſe their ſeveral charges. And it is certain, that all Offices have their Diſtinction and Denomination, from that ſpecial Praxis or Function they are ordained unto: As that is an Eye to the Body, whoſe Praxis or Function is to ſee for the whole Body. They can thereſore be ſaid to be Preaching Elders to no other of this claſſical Church, than that Praxis of Preaching is extended unto. It is an Argument which Whitaker uſeth againſt the Pope; and our Divines make uſe of it againſt the Biſhops: That nor he nor they, can be ſaid to be Paſtors unto all they yet pretended to be Paſtors unto, becauſe they are not able to exerciſe the Function of Paſtors unto them. Therefore,

2. We ask what ſort of Elders the Paſtors are that are in this common Presbytery? What ſort of Relation of Elders do they bear to this one Presbyterial Church, over and above that Relation, they, as Paſtors, bear to their own? (And this Church and Elders, as Elders, are Relatives, as well as the particular Congregations and their Elders, or elſe this Great Church, muſt want its correlative of Elders to it) Surely they bear no other Relation, than of Ruling Elders, if they be Elders at all (and to make them no Elders, and not to have the Relation of Elders to this Great Church in this Presbytery, we believe will not be affirmed) And if they be Elders, then the Notion of their being Elders, muſt have one of thoſe two forementioned Formal Differences annexed to it, either of Preaching Elders, or meerly Ruling: And this Difference and Denomination muſt be fetcht (as was ſaid afore) from the differing Praxis, or uſe they ſerve for. And it is evident, that the ordinary Acts they ſerve for, and exerciſe in thoſe common Presbyteries, are meerly Acts of Ruling Elders (in all which therefore, Ruling Elders concur in common with them) and accordingly it is called the Presbyterian Government.

And further, the power of an Office in the Church (though exerciſed but as conjoyned with others) is a Relation in reſpect to ſome Adminiſtration in a conſtancy; now the conſtant and ordinary Adminiſtration they ſerve for in ſuch a Presbytery, is only Ruling, not Teaching, there being no Acts but ſuch, that Ruling Elders joyn in. So as by this Frame, the ſame Preaching Elder or Paſtor, muſt bear two ſorts of ordinary Offices, in theſe two Relations, of a Preaching, and a meer Ruling Elder, as if one were both a Phyſician and a Chirurgeon, and were fixed to one of the Companies in the City, to practice Phyſick to them, he ſuſtained the Office of a Phyſician to that Company; and if he were beſides, called to practice Chirurgery, to many other Companies, he were certainly only a Chirurgeon unto them, as truly as a Phyſician to the other. So as we ſhall not need to Diſpute the point of Ruling Elders any more; for here are ſuch as are Elders, acknowledged ſuch by all ſides, and yet for the ſort of their Office, but plain Ruling Elders, and deſerve properly in this Relation, no other Name, if we hold the Presbyterial Government; and they are as truly and properly to this Preſbyterial Church ſuch, and no other, as thoſe Governours that Preach not at all, are unto thoſe they are Elders unto.

And this Incongruity, no Diſtinction will Salve; call them Elders in this Preſbytery, in what Senſe you pleaſe, whether in Senſu diviſo, or Conjuncto, yet Elders they are; and if ſo, then one of theſe two ſorts of Elders, they muſt be to this Presbyterial Church, either both Preaching and Ruling Elders, or meerly Ruling. Their being Elders together in this Presbytery, cannot be ſuppoſed to Diveſt them of the Title of ſome ſort of Elders (and there is not a third ſort) no more than the Elders of a Congregation, met in a Presbytery, do thereby looſe the Title of Elders, which they ſuſtain to that Congregation, or no more (as was even now inſtanced) than when the Body hath two Eyes, that always concur in one Act of ſight, either of them ſhould not be Denominated Eyes unto the Body apart, and the one called the left, and the other the right.

The Diſorder and Confuſion hereby, may be further ſet out, 1. That by this means, the ſame Officer hath a full Relation to one Church, and but half a Relation unto another; and it cauſeth him to perform the whole of his Offices to one Church (the particular Church) to which he hath Relation, and but the half thereof to the other. And 2. It makes an ordinary Paſtor, not only perform the work of two Officers, but to bear the Relation of two Offices; for in his ſeveral Relations to theſe two ſeveral Churches, his Congregational and Claſſical, his Relations are parted and divided.

And it brings up the ſame Abſurdity which was put upon Epiſcopal Government; That a Biſhop profeſſing himſelf to bear the Relation of a Paſtor to the whole Dioceſs; yet was but a Ruling Elder to them, not a Teaching.

3. To extend a Paſtor's power of ordinary Ruling, beyond the extent of his ordinary Teaching, is againſt the order which Chriſt hath ſet (and all extent of power, muſt as well have an Inſtitution of Chriſt, as the Power or Office it ſelf; for the difference of Evangeliſts, and of ordinary Paſtors, lay but in extent of power) and then we argue thus; if the extent of a Paſtor's ordinary Ruling Power, as a Paſtor and Elder, be but to the Flock, as his whole Flock, which he is able to Feed: Then to bear the Relation of a Paſtor or Elder for ordinary Government, to any more than he is able, and doth thus Feed, May not be. But the extent of a Paſtor's ordinary Ruling power, is but to that Flock, as his whole Flock, which he is able to Feed. And this Argument, as alſo the former; beſides that, it ſerves to make up more Incongruities of this Presbyterial Government, ſo it might ſtand alone, and make a compleat Argument of it ſelf againſt it; for if the Paſtor's ordinary power in Ruling, be not to be extended further than of his ordinary Preaching; then this ordinary ſtanding Government of Paſtors fixed for Preaching to their own Congregations, may not be over thoſe many in common.

Now that the extent of a Paſtor's ordinary Ruling power, reacheth only to that Flock which he is able to Feed, I prove 1. By Scripture. 2. By Reaſon.

1. I prove it by Scripture, Acts 20. 28. Take heed to your ſelves, and to all the Flock (the whole Flock) over which the Holy Ghoſt hath made you Over-ſeers, to Feed the Church of God, which he hath purchaſed with his own Blood. Here are 1. Elders, (ver. 17.) ſpoken to. 2. Their having Relation to a Flock, an whole Flock is mentioned. 3. They are enjoyned to Feed the Flock, and the whole Flock: And all theſe are commenſurable. Whence 1. We ſee that the ſpecial Limitation of their extenſive Power and Relation to a Flock, and to all the Flock, is ſet by the Holy Ghoſt, and not by Man; and therefore is not to be extended by Man, further than the Holy Ghoſt hath appointed. 2. The extent of that Relation, is to that Flock; and the whole Flock they Feed, and they are to Feed all that Flock alike: And if they be Preaching Elders, then they muſt Feed it by Preaching; and therefore are Overſeers to them, to Feed them, and becauſe they Feed them. 3. He ſpeaks to Preaching Elders eſpecially, that Feed by Doctrine: For 1. He propounds his own Example to them, ver. 20. that he had Revealed the whole Counſel of God. And 2. He ſays, ver. 30. Some of you ſhall ariſe, ſpeaking perverſe things. And 'tis Pauls farewell; and (as Baynes argues againſt Biſhops) thoſe to whom at laſt the Apoſtles commended Churches, were the ordinary Governors left; but he commended them not to a Biſhop, but ordinary Elders. Thus we argue alſo, for the extent of the Relation of thoſe Elders that they are to Govern only that Flock that they are able to Feed; and therefore they have not the Office of Overſeeing, as ordinary Elders over thoſe whom they Feed not. And Peter ſeconds Paul in this, 1 Pet. 5. 2. Feed the Flock of God which is among you, taking the overſight thereof, the Flock, ἐν ὑμῖν among you, is that Flock that any of them had Relation to, as his Flock Reſpectively. Thereupon Writing unto the Churches in a whole Nation, in chap. 1. ver. 1. (whereas in Acts 20. 28. the charge is to the particular Elders of Epheſus, to that whole Flock) he therefore puts in that Note of Reſpectiveneſs ἐν ὑμῖν among you, that is, that which Reſpectively belongs to you, anſwerable to which is that Text, Col. 1. 17. Who is for you a Faithful Miniſter, that is, your proper Paſtor: And Acts 14. 23. They ordained Elders Church by Church, Elders to them, that is, proper Elders to them, ſo the Flock ἐν ὑμῖν ſignifies your ſeveral proper Flocks that belong to you. Hereby it appears, that their Feeding, and their overſight over any of thoſe Flocks, are commenſurable; and that Flock which they are not able to Feed, they have not the overſight over, for they are both of the ſame extent. Thus alſo, Heb. 13. 7. 17. Remember them that have the Rule over you, and have ſpoken to you the Word of God, which he ſpeaks of Preaching Elders, for the extent of their Rule and their Preaching is all one. And of Ruling Elders he ſpeaks, ver. 17. Obey them that have the Rule over you; for they watch for your Souls, as thoſe that muſt give an account. And not to Diſpute, whether theſe places note out two ſorts παντὶ τῶ ποιμνίω.

Ch. VI. of Officers, Preaching Elders, v. 7. and Ruling Elders, v. 17. Or but one ſort, and ſo but ſeveral Acts of the ſame Office; yet this is certain that theſe are commenſurable; for they are Officers together in the ſame Church: And if the Paſtor's power of Ruling extends no further than his Preaching, then the meer Ruling Elders power, or his that is aſſiſtant to him, muſt extend no further alſo. 1. Remember thoſe that have ſpoken the word to you. 2. Obey and Submit to thoſe that watch for your Souls. This is the Natural Obligation to Obedience, and ſo is the meaſure to ſet the bounds of the extent of ordinary Church-power. 'Tis one Argument uſed againſt Epiſcopal power, that they are enforced to obey him that ſpeaks not the Word to them, nor watcheth over their Souls; and this holds as well againſt theſe Presbyterial Offices; and when a Man comes before ſuch to be Excommunicated, he may ſay, I am not bound to obey you in ſuch an Authoritative way, nor do I owe a Subjection as to a power of Cenſure in you; for many, nay moſt of you, have never ſpoke the word to me, nor do watch over my Soul: Nay, perhaps the Man can ſay, he never ſaw their Faces afore. And it avails not to ſay, that they they may occaſionally Preach; for the Apoſtle, 1 Theſſ. 5. 12. ſpeaking of reſpect to their Officers, Know them (ſays he) that Labour among you, and are over you in the Lord, and Admoniſh you. Theſe two, Thoſe that Labour, and are over you, are commenſurable, and they are meant, who make it their callings to have the care of the Flock, which the many Paſtors and Elders in a common Presbytery do not. But in what is it they Labour, the 1 Tim. 5. 17. expounds it to be, That Labour in the Word and Doctrine; The Elders that Rule well, as worthy of double Honour, eſpecially thoſe that Labour in the Word and Doctrine. And whether you expound this latter known place of Teaching Elders only, or of Ruling and Teaching both (as the Reformed Churches do) however it affords this to us, that the extent of Ruling, in either the one or the other, is but as large as Teaching. And if it be meant of Teaching Elders only, that both Rule and Labour in the Word and Doctrine; yet if they be limited in labouring in the Word, as being fixt Paſtors to their own Congregations, then in Ruling alſo. And if it be meant of Ruling Elders (as diſtinct from them) yet their Ruling is of the ſame extent, that the others labouring in the Word; and that is extended but to one Congregation, whereas Paſtors they are fixed. And

2. Though in a Paſtor's Office, in which Preaching and Ruling is joyned, yet his power of Ruling flows in him from, and is the Adjunct of his power to Preach; and to be ſure, it is not extendable further. And however, yet there is the ſame proportion of either; and then by juſt Reaſon, the extent of the Church, which i the Subject of his ordinary Ruling, cannot be extended larger than what is the ordinary Subject of his Preaching, and ſo thoſe Relations are of equal limits, (which is the preſent caſe of a Paſtor's Authority, appropriated to a Congregation, and extended but to his own in an ordinary way) and to make the ground of a Relation narrower, than the extent of it is abſurd. If a Father hath the power of Governing as a Father, then it is extendable only to thoſe he is a Father to. An that a Paſtor hath his ordinary Ruling power, annexed to his ordinary power o Preaching, we prove by theſe Reaſons.

1. If he hath no this Ruling power upon this ground, then muſt be aſſigned ſome other He hath it not by any ſpecial Faculty or Office, over and above this of Preaching for then he ſhould be made a Ruling Elder, over and above his being fir a Preaching Elder, as a new Faculty given him: Nor hath he it by being mad a Ruler firſt, and then having this of Preaching Superadded (as the Biſhops fir made Deacons, then Presbyters.) For

2. All the Keys are given him at once, the Keys of Ruling, with the Keys o Knowledge. The power of the Staff intrinſecally follows, his being a Paſtor o Shepherd; and though the one is a power of meer Order, Namely that of Preaching, and that of his Ruling is of Juriſdiction (to be exerciſed in many caſes with others and not alone) yet ſtill his receiving power to joyn with others in thoſe Acts o Rule of Juriſdiction, is from this power of Order; and the ordinary extent of hi Authority therein, is extended no further than his ordinary call to Preaching Yea,

3. Th

3. The extent of the power of the Apoſtles themſelves, in Ruling in all the Churches, was founded upon, and extendable with their Commiſſion to Preach; and their very Call and Obligation being not to Preach in a ſet and fixt Relation, as an ordinary Paſtor's calling is; but to all Nations, and in all Churches, hence their power of Ruling was anſwerable. It was their very Call to be Univerſal Paſtors, and therefore Univerſal Rulers; Yea, and their Authority of Ruling, was narrower in the extent of it, than of their Preaching. The Apoſtles might preach to Heathens, and their Call was ſo to do, to convert them; but they had not power to Rule all Men, What have I to do to Judge them that are without? ſays the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 15. 12. But in this way of Presbyterial Government, though they alſo may occaſionally Preach, where they may not Rule; yet the proportion of their ordinary Ruling, is extended beyond the proportion of their ordinary Preaching, which was not ſo in the Apoſtles themſelves. Let but the ſame Line of proportion equally be drawn over the Apoſtle's power in theſe and theirs, according to their ſeveral meaſures. Their Call to Ruling, was Uniform to Preaching in all Churches, though their Preaching was larger than their Rule, Namely, to thoſe without; but ordinary Paſtors have a ſtanding fixt Call to Preach, but in one Congregation; let their Call and power of Ruling, be Uniform to it, and they can have an ordinary ſtanding power to Rule, but in that Congregation; either extend both further, or contract both to this. It is no anſwer, to ſay that they may Preach as Paſtors in Neighbour Churches occaſionally; for ſo they may Preach to any Reformed Church, as in Scotland, where yet they have not ſo much as an occaſional Call to Rule, and in ſuch occaſional Acts of Preaching alſo, they have but the proportion, which the Apoſtles had, whoſe power in Preaching, was larger than of Ruling; for it was extended to them without. But ſtill if an ordinary ſtanding power in Ruling, although with others (for the Apoſtles exerciſed their power with others) ſhould be ſtretcht where they have not an ordinary ſtanding Call to Preach, it ſhould exceed the proportion of the Apoſtles in that reſpect.

4. And Fourthly, From hence ariſeth another Diſproportion between theſe Officers, Ruling and Preaching Elders, compared among themſelves; and it is ſuch a Diſproportion, as is like to the former, alledged between the Deacons and the Elders. For this Government makes the extent of the Ruling Elders Office and Relation, to be larger than that of the Teachers or Paſtors: For the Paſtor as Paſtor, is limited to his particular Congregation he is fixt to, as the Deacons alſo are: But the Ruling Elders Office, as Ruling Elder, is extended over all theſe Congregations in this Presbytery. The Ruling Elder performs his Office, in the higheſt perfection of it, as to Admoniſh, Excommunicate, &c. to all in theſe Churches; but the Paſtors are limited as Paſtors, in the Higheſt Work of their Callings (which preaching is; and more excellent than Ruling, yea, than Baptizing) unto one Congregation. That place in 1 Tim. 5. 17. (interpret how you will) Juſtifies what is aſſerted.

Now theſe are ſtrange Diſproportions, which are occaſioned by this and the Presbyterial Government. And this greatly makes for the Congregational way, wherein as to theſe particulars, no ſuch Incongruities are found, but all things fall naturally Uniform.

2. A Second Head of Incongruities and Inconſiſtencies, which will follow upon this Government, concerns the Mutual Duties required, that do neceſſarily follow upon this ſtanding Relation, for a conſtant Government of theſe Elders, to all this people of theſe Churches, and of the people to theſe Elders.

1. The people of all theſe Elders (according to what the Scripture ſpeaks of, as due to ſtanding Elders) owe at leaſt Honour and Eſteem to them; yea, Maintenance to all of them, whether they ordinarily Rule them, or Preach to them; and they owe it on both accounts, 1 Tim. 4. 17, 18. Let the Elders that Rule well, be counted worthy of double Honour, eſpecially that Labour in the Word and Doctrine, Which Honour is, (ver. 18.) in the Analogy of that Law, Not to Muzzle the Mouth of the Ox, that treadeth out the Corn: And this is certainly due to Elders, on account of what is the Work of Elders, whether performed apart or together; by way of Juriſdiction. And it cannot be denyed, but that their conſtant Ruling, as in the Presbytery, is one great part of the Work of Elders, here intended and mentioned with Preaching, for which an eſpecial Honour is due. God appoints no conſtant work in the Miniſtry, but he appoints a Reward from thoſe, for whom it is performed. And as they owe a Duty of Ruling to every one in the Flock, as Acts 20. 28. So there is a due of Maintenance and Honour, due from all this people, to all and every one of thoſe Elders, to thoſe that Rule, as well as to thoſe that Labour in the Word and Doctrine. And in Reaſon, if the Elders that Rule well, and perform the leſſer Acts of Ruling in their particular Congregations, are to have this Honour from them, in their Relations; then all theſe Elders that Rule well in the common Presbytery, and perform the greateſt Acts of Ruling, are to have the like from all of that claſſical Church; for the Emphaſis being put upon Ruling well, and in thoſe Acts done by them, the Excellency of Ruling conſiſting; therefore to theſe, is this Honour due from this Great Church, more eſpecially, than from the leſſer Congregations, Reſpectively unto their proper Elders. Neither will the Diſtinction of being a Presbytery in common ſalve it; for if the particular Elders of Congregations, are to have this Honour for what is done by them in their joynt Acts of Ruling in the particular Presbyteries; then theſe are to have it in what is done in their common Presbyteries alſo. And the precept is, not to Honour Presbyteries in common in an abſtract Notion, but to Honour Elders; becauſe the particular perſons of the Elders, are to be the Object of it; and thoſe moſt, who excell moſt in that Rule, that Rule well, or beſt. But when there are many Congregations apart, who have their proper fixt Paſtors and Elders, whom they maintain for performing one part of the Elders work (for they perform but one part of it) how ſhall they perform this due to all the reſt, for that other part of the work? How Burthenſome, how confuſed would this be? And yet due it is, for they are all one Church to them. And then how can this Duty be proportioned (ſuppoſe it ſhould not be Maintenance, but Honour and Eſteem) for the people will not be able well to judge of it, not only becauſe they cannot be preſent at their Work, and ſo cannot judge of it; but becauſe either it muſt be proportioned to them that are conſtant, as Preaching Elders, or as Ruling. For the ground it is there, (1 Tim. 5. 18.) required upon is, that they tread out their Corn, and the Apoſtle ſays, Eſteem them for their Work ſake, that Labour among you, 1 Theſſ 5. 12, 13. So as it is to be proportioned to the Work of a Paſtor, as Paſtor; but to Honour or Eſteem them as Ruling Elders only, were to Honour the Preaching Elders, below the Rank and Degree of their Office.

2. It alſo brings the like Incongruity, upon the performance of thoſe Duties of Elders, which the New Teſtament indifferently requires of all thoſe that it acknowledgeth to be Elders unto a people; and therefore no ſuch conſtant Relation of Elders, to ſo many Churches may be. 1. One Duty is praying with the Sick, Send for the Elders of the Church, to pray for them, Jam. 5. 14. What! are theſe Elders of the Presbyterial Church bound to this? And this Duty lies in common upon Elders of the Churches; and how ſhall we Diſtinguiſh, when the Scripture doth not? 2. Another Duty is viſiting from Houſe to Houſe, as Paul in his Example inſtructs the Elders of Epheſus, Acts 20. 2. 3. Another Duty is watching over Men's Souls, as thoſe that muſt give an account, Heb. 13. 17. and that the people ſhould obey them; and no Warrant is given to obey others in the way of an ordinary Rule. And to watch, is not to ſtay till cauſes are brought by Appeals, or ſo, from the Congregations; but perſonally to watch over them, as Souls committed to them. 4. Another Duty is Preaching (if they be Preaching Elders) in Seaſon, and out of Seaſon. The Biſhops ſaid, the Flock was theirs, and the whole care committed to them; and to Salve the Incongruity, of not being able to preach themſelves to them all, they profeſſed a Derivative delegated Power to Inferior Paſtors, whom they called their Curates. This was plain dealing; but theſe Elders make all the whole Flock theirs; and this from thoſe Scriptures, that ſpeak of Elders and Flock; and yet themſelves have no Curates, and ſo are perſonally obliged according to the Rules in Scripture, and yet cannot perform the obligation, which is a worſe Incongruity. 5. It will be their Duty alſo, to attend to all cauſes, which ſo many Churches will fill their Hands with ſufficiently; for Churches will be full of Scandal, and there will be caſes of Difficulty. What a deal of Work, did one Church of Corinth find Paul? And 'tis the Duty of each Elder, to attend to all thoſe that come in his cogniſance, as if he alone were to Judge; for he is to give his Judgment of them all, as one that is to give an account. 'Tis an Argument againſt Epiſcopacy, that they cannot take the care (according to what the Scripture ſeems to require of an ordinary Officer) of ſo many Churches in a Dioceſs; now this Work (ſuppoſe of Ruling only, as in a Presbytery) lies upon each of theſe Elders, as if he were but one, as to the matters of attending thereto (as was ſaid) though each is helped by the Suggeſtion of others. And beſides the common Work that muſt needs ariſe from all theſe Churches, they are to attend to all caſes of Conſcience, and of Temptations, in their particular Congregations, or from elſewhere, if thoſe Churches will have Recourſe to them. If it be ſaid, that they may part theſe Duties among them, and perform only to the whole, thoſe that are in common: The anſwer is plain, Ubi Scriptura non diſtinguit, nec nos debemus diſtinguere, Where the Scripture makes no Diſtinction, we ought not to Diſtinguiſh. Now all thoſe Duties are ſpoken of, as owing from Elders to the Flock, without any Diſtinction. Paul ſaith to thoſe Epheſians, Feed the whole Flock, Acts 20. 28. Peter ſays the like to thoſe he Writes to, that they Reſpectively ſhould Feed, and take the overſight over the Flock, ἐν ὑμῖν, which was among them. The Apoſtles tells the Hebrews, that their Elders watched over their Souls, Heb. 13. 17. And to the Theſſalonians, he Deſcribes them to be thoſe that are over them, and Labour and Admoniſh them, 1 Theſſ. 5. 12. When theſe Injunctions are thus laid upon all, how ſhall the Conſcience of Elders be able to part and diſtinguiſh themſelves out of the diſcharge of them, and to ſay, though I am an Elder in common to all in theſe Congregations; yet I am bound but to govern them in greater matters, and to Admoniſh them as with others, when publickly met in a conſiſtory, and to no other Acts of Eldership; and yet to my own particular Congregation, I am obliged to private Admonition, Rule and Watchfulneſs, &c. Where hath the Scripture ſet theſe bounds, or thus parted them? Therefore certainly all theſe places hold forth ſingly, only the Elders of a particular Church fixed thereto, and their Duty to it, as knowing no other. And indeed it was neceſſary that Chriſt ſhould ſet the bounds, and give the Diſtinction, and not indifferently lay all theſe Duties upon all: And either in theſe places, the Duties of Elders in a common Presbytery are contained, or they are not to be found in the New Teſtament.

Laſtly, That which is Inconſiſtent with the ordinary way of the Call of Elders held forth in the Word, and by the Reformed Churches allowed, May not be: But ſuch is this Presbyterian Government. It is the Call, which breeds Relation between Elders and Church, and is the Foundation of it. None are to aſſume the Honour of Ruling the Church of Chriſt, that are not called thereto, as Aaron was not to have been over all the Church, but that he was called of God.

There are two parts of this Calling, 1. Choice. 2. Ordination.

1. As for Choice, Chamier in the Name of all the Reformed Churches, allows to the People, the Approbation of their Elders; and ſo it is in Scotland. And if the Apoſtles themſelves, allowed them the choice of the Deacons that had the charge of the Church Treaſury, and took care of their Bodies; then much more of their Elders that have to do with their Conſciences. Look what ever Right of the People, is in the choice of thoſe who ſhould preach to them, there is as much Reaſon they ſhould have the exerciſe of it in the choice of theſe, that in a common Presbytery do Rule over them; for they perform one part of the Elders Duty, Namely Ruling, as the preaching Elders do the other; and therefore by the equity of the ſame Law, that ſpeaks of Elders indefinitely, if they chooſe any Elders as Elders to them, they are to chooſe theſe alſo, there being no Diſtinction put of chooſing preaching Elders only, but Elders indefinitely. And further, the greateſt and higheſt Acts of power over them, are committed in an ordinary way unto them, as of Excommunication, which is of all puniſhments, the moſt Formidable, and ſo there is put as much, if not more than every Mans Life (that is a Member of that claſſical Church) into their Hands. The enjoyment of all Ordinances for ever, and the power of Depoſing their Miniſters, already fixt to them, and the power of Refuſing to ordain them they ſhall approve, is lodged in this claſſis. And therefore in the Primitive Church, the Perſons of the Biſhops, who had the power of all theſe, were choſen by all the people, and by panegyrical Meetings.

And the Argument is ſtrengthned by this further parallel. A Miniſter's call hath two parts, 1. Ordination, which belongs to the Elders, 2. Choice, in which the people have ſome intereſt; therefore thoſe Elders as Elders in common, and theſe Congregations as one Church, being Relatives, that intereſt which a Church hath as Church, is commenſurable to the intereſt of theſe Elders as Elders. If therefore in Ordination, all the Elders in a common Presbytery, joyn to Ordain an Officer; then all the people as a Church, muſt joyn in chooſing and approving him; for the common Right of chooſing, cannot be ſwallowed up by the intereſt of their Elders Ordaining him. And if it be ſaid, they all chooſe by vertue of the general Law of Combination, as in the Shires they do Parliament Men: It is anſwered, that the conſtitution of the State makes it ſo, and if the like be found in Scripture for this other, it will be ſufficient; but if not, but that this intereſt muſt be common to the people of the claſſical Church, it is asked, when a fixt Paſtor is to be choſen to a particular Church, what Office he ſhall be choſen to, with reſpect unto the people of the other Congregations? Not to a Paſtor's Office; for he is not to be ſuch to them: If he be choſen to be a Ruling Elder only, then beſides that he hath two Offices, he muſt have two choices, and two Ordinations; we chooſe him for our Paſtor, ſays the particular Church he belongs to; and we, ſay the other, to Rule us. And beſides the people have an intereſt of preſence, and joyning in Faſting and Prayer, at his Ordination: And this therefore muſt be performed either in a panegyrical Meeting of all, which cannot be as the practice is, or in all the ſeveral Churches, which will multiply the Ordination of him.

The Government
OF THE
Churches of Chriſt.

BOOK V.

The Juriſdiction of Synods Debated. That Appeals are not neceſſary to the Government of the Churches; and therefore there is no neceſſity of Synods upon that account. What power may be allowed to a Synod, occaſionally meeting to conſider the Male-Adminiſtration of any particular Church. That they have not that grand Prerogative of power given by Chriſt, to Excommunicate other Churches; and ſo by that Rod, to inforce them to Revoke their Sentence of Male-Adminiſtration, and to receive a Perſon wrongfully Excommnnicated by them. The Subordination of Synods, Conſidered and Refuted. Though particular Churches are not Subject to the Juriſdiction of Synods; yet they are not wholly independent, but there is a communion, which they ought to hold one with another.

CHAP. I.

Concerning Appeals. That they are not abſolutely neceſſary to the Government of the Churches.

THAT Appeals are not of abſolute neceſſity to the Government of the Churches; and that the Law of Nature doth not neceſſarily require them, is apparent from theſe Reaſons.

1. In the firſt Government under the Law of Nature, there were no Appeals in Criminal cauſes: But Judah the Head of his Family, peremptorily pronounceth the Sentence, Let her be burnt, Gen. 38. And indeed, to whom then ſhould any Appeal have been made? Therefore Appeals are not neceſſary by the Light of Nature.

Ch. I.

2. The Law of Nature among the Jews, required them not. The Government was in the Cities, and no Appeals (in Deut 17. or elſewhere) in caſe of wrong, were made by the Injured party; but only in caſe of Difficulty, they had Recourſe to the Judgment of the Great Synhedrim, to Reſolve caſes that were too hard for them. And as for that inſtance of Moſes, Exod. 18. 22. that the great matters were brought to him, and the ſmall matters to other Elders, it was a dividing of cauſes, according to their ſort and kind, and not a bringing of matters by way of Appeal unto him.

3. Some of the Reformed Churches have no Appeals, and yet are well governed; and in as much peace as thoſe in Scotland. In Geneva, there is but one Conſiſtory; and if there be any Appeals in caſe of Male-Adminiſtration, they are made to the Magiſtrate. And if it be ſaid that it is ſo, becauſe they being a Common wealth, and having Supream power, do bound the Church power: Yet ſtill however, if the power of this our Government would appoint Magiſtrates to hear Appeals of particular Churches, and ſo bound their power in themſelves (as the Imperial Towns in Germany, or the Cantons in Switzerland do) there is a great poſſibility to Govern theſe Churches, without any other or further Appeals, in caſe of unjuſt Sentences, as well as Geneva, and other Reformed Churches are Governed.

4. In matters of Life and Death in this Kingdom, there is no Appeals, not ſuch as to Right the Man if wronged; but every Corporation hath the priviledge touching the Execution of the Man, to do it within themſelves; and yet if in any thing, De morte hominis deliberandum eſt, There is the greateſt Deliberation to be had about the Life and Death of a Man; and yet this way of proceeding without Appeals, in ſuch a caſe as this, is not againſt the Law of Nature.

5. In Democracies, where the Sentence of Life and Death (as in many caſes it was ſo) were referred to the immediate Sentence of the people, there were no Appeals; and yet ſuch a Government, is not againſt the light of Nature. Now taking away of a Mans Life, may well be conceived to be of as much moment, as caſting a Man out of a Church; for that deprives the Subject of all Ordinances for ever, and alſo of further time to Repent; and yet Incorporations and a Recorder, are betruſted with this, without the ordinary benefit of Appeals to relieve the Man; and therefore why may not a Church, a company of Saints, that hath the promiſe of Chriſt's preſence to guide them, and which is a Body to Chriſt, being ſufficiently furniſhed with Officers, having two or three Elders over them, be as well betruſted in Eccleſiaſtick Adminiſtrations? Nor can it be ſuppoſed, that God ſhould take more care under the New Teſtament, for Relief of wrongs in Churches ſcattered, than he did in that National Church of the Jews, which (as a Nation) was capable of Appeals: Or that God for the pretended Relief of particular perſons wronged, ſhould Subject whole Churches, yea, Provinces to a coercive power, armed with the dreadful Sentence of Excommunication, in a National Aſſembly.

2. That Appeals are not abſolutely neceſſary, is evident, becauſe, if they were ſo, they ſhould be brought either antecedently to the Sentence of Excommunication in a particular Church, or after it hath paſt on the perſon Excommunicated.

1. But that an Appeal ſhould not go before the Sentence of Excommunication, appears,

1. From the power and duty of that Court, to which the perſons cauſe is firſt brought. The Congregation that is told of the perſons Sin (according to Chriſt's Inſtitution, Matth. 18. 17.) hath the power of the cenſures; and Chriſt's command lies upon them, to execute Chriſts Ordinance, if he hears not that Church to whom the Accuſation of him is firſt brought; whereas by an Appeal afore, the Sentence would be Suſpended, and ſo it would be in the power of an obſtinate Sinner, to hinder the Sentence from coming into Act.

2. It is apparent from the good of the perſon. For 1. If an Appeal was thus brought antecedent to the Sentence of Excommunication paſt in a particular Church, then a Man ſhould never be obſtinate, until he came to the National Aſſembly, and ſo he would want the means of his converſion all that while, which would be the ready way to harden him in his Sin, to defer his Repentance at leaſt for a year; and then he muſt run through all the ſame courſe of Admonitions by the higher Courts, ere they can pronounce the Sentence. 2. Then God muſt wait upon, and lackey after

Men, and Suſpend a Sentence, till a Man hath gone through all theſe Courts on Earth, and baffled both God's Sentence, and alſo Man's.

2. That Appeals are not to be made, after the Sentence of Excommunication paſt in a particular Church, appears,

1. From the Nature of the Sentence, which is deciſive, and is irreverſible, as being bound in Heaven, unleſs the perſon Repents, and upon his Repentance, is reſtored again.

2. Becauſe a particular Church, by yielding to ſuch Appeals, would give up that Power and Authority, with which Chriſt hath intruſted them. For Chriſt hath given them full power to exerciſe all Acts of Diſcipline within themſelves (as hath been proved) but if they admitted of Appeals to be made to a Superior Court, as having power over them, to Diſanull their Acts; they would thereby acknowledge a Supream Authority, and that they had not the perfect power in themſelves.

2. If there may be ſuch Appeals, whether afore or after Sentence (other than to relieve the Perſon, and thoſe we grant) then there ſhould be a greater puniſhment for the Appellant, if he be caſt in the provincial Aſſembly, and yet a greater alſo than that, if he be again caſt in the National. So it is in civil Courts, and it deſerves it here as much as in any; for a Man becomes Guilty of a greater Sin, by ſo Appealing (if indeed he is criminal) for he is guilty of more obſtinacy; If the Appeal be afore the Sentence, by hindring it, if after, by continuing more impudently impenitent; and in both caſes, in troubling all the Churches. But theſe Courts have no greater puniſhment to inflict, than what the Congregation or firſt Church hath; for the Man is by Excommunication, out of his own Church, caſt out of all Churches, as well as when caſt by the National. They can only Admoniſh, and Excommunicate at laſt, if the Sentence be not paſt afore the Appeal, or if the Appeal be after the Sentence, they can only pronounce the Sentence to be juſt, they have no further or more grievous Excommunication for him. There is indeed a final Excommunication with a curſe, Anathema, Maranatha, (1 Cor. 15. 22.) to him that loves not (which is a Diminutive) that is, that ſhews Hatred againſt the Lord Chriſt, after inlightning; and ſo hath ſinned againſt the Holy Ghoſt: But we believe that ſuch an Excommunication, is not that which upon Appeals to the National Aſſembly (if the Perſon be caſt there alſo) they ſhall have power to inflict. In the caſe indeed of Eternal Damnation, every Degree for every Sin, is another Hell added to the former (not an increaſe of Torment by a circumſtance, but Subſtantially) but it is not ſo here; for every new Sentence of theſe gradual Courts, add not a new Degree of Excommunication. Whereas Excommunication is a giving up to Satan; if the Congregation Excommunicating gave up to one Devil, and the claſſical to more, and the Provincial Aſſembly to more; and then the National to worſe than the former (as in the Goſpel Chriſt ſays of a Man apoſtatizing, that ſeven Devils worſe than before, enter into the Man) then theſe Courts might Arrogate ſuch Appeals to them, and proportionably puniſh the Perſon's obſtinacy, who wrongfully makes them, but the caſe is otherwiſe. If it be Replyed, that the ſhame is increaſed, that he is Rebuked by ſo many, and that is a puniſhment; and that as Chriſt's Death is aggravated by the ſhame, ſo here the Excommunication is made the more ſhameful in the National, than it would have been in the leſſer Aſſembly: The Anſwer is, 1. That ſtill that which is of the Subſtance of this Spiritual puniſhment, and which is Spiritual in it, and in which the Spirit of it lies, is not, nor cannot be added unto; viz. God's binding the Man in Heaven, which God did, and doth as much upon the firſt Excommunication, as upon the ſecond or third; and as for Satan's power to Terrifie him, he is as much delivered thereby to it, and he is as much caſt out of the Ordinances in all Churches by it, as by the confirmation of the Sentence in the National Aſſembly. And what is that outward ſhame of it (ſuch as follows upon all other civil Crimes, made publick) to be compared with theſe, or to correſpond to that further proportion of Authority, that theſe Higher Courts, by challenging of Appeals to be made to them, do ſeem to uſurp, as if an anſwerable degree of Spiritual puniſhment, were by Gods promiſe Miniſtred in them? And if there ſhould not be a further puniſhment unto the Appellant, then it comes all to one, with what we affirm; for if it be in order to relieve the party only, we acknowledge Appeals in thoſe reſpects, to be uſeful to, by declaring the Sentence Null, and that there was no due or juſt Excommunication. And if it be a juſt Sentence, we acknowledge Appeals ſo far to be made to Neighbour-Churches, that they may declare it is a juſt Excommunication already paſt : So that what we contend againſt, is this, when under the colour of Appeals, they challenge to themſelves a Juridical power, to Reſcind Sentences, to have the power of Excommunication, as much as the Churches that do Excommunicate, to oppoſe or ſtop any Church inferior, from proceeding ; and in a Reverence to this their power, to give liberty to any Perſon offending, to Appeal before Sentence unto them to judge of it, and to pronounce it.

Ch II.

3. The liberty of ſuch Appeals, afore or after Sentence, through all thoſe gradual Remedies, of Claſſical, Provincial, National (which we conceive ſhould be rather for matters of Doctrine, than for the Relief of Perſons of all ſorts ; and they ſhould deal in generals, rather than in ſuch particulars, as themſelves are more General Aſſemblies) will breed great inconveniences: As,

1. Either the lower Churches muſt ſpare many groſs Offenders in a Nation, that there may be few Excommunications, and ſo prevent occaſions of Appeals (and then they would not take away the Diſhonour done to Chriſt, by multitude of Scandals) or elſe if the lower Churches be Faithful in proceeding againſt all ſuch Offenders ; yet by ſetting up three ſuch Courts over them for gradual Appeals, with liberty to Appeal to them, there will, inſtead of Relieving particular Perſons, be occaſioned the greateſt Trouble and Cumber to theſe Aſſemblies in Multitudes of cauſes depending ; for who will not Appeal, knowing at laſt he can be but Excommunicated ? And they muſt diſpatch theſe cauſes either by Committees only (and ſo to do, is to Reduce the Supream Judgment to a fewer company of Elders, than were in the firſt Claſſis or Provincial Synods, that judged it ; beſides that, it is a meer Delegated power, which ſuch Committees exerciſe) or elſe they muſt truſt the lower Courts wholly, and proceed according to their Sentence ; and then to what end are ſuch Appeals ? Surely the Higheſt National Court, cannot deny to hear any Man that Appeals to them, and if they will hear all that will Appeal, they will be filled with them ; and that will prove vexatious, both to the Perſons, and Churches Appealing, and will be impoſſible to be diſpatcht. And beſides, no Man being to be Excommunicated, but upon impenitency, which may be where the Fact is acknowledged and confeſſed, and yet the Church not ſatisfied with the Repentance (for an undue outward formal confeſſion, will eaſily be acknowledged not to be that upon which Churches ſhould forbear Excommunication, in caſe the Fact be Scandalous, it being a Godly ſorrow, 2 Cor. 7.9, 10. that is required of Men in ſuch a caſe) may therefore proceed juſtly to Excommunication, becauſe they judge, that he Repents not, though the Appealer ſays he doth Repent; and then the Trial will be of the Man's Repentance, performed at his Confeſſion, whether it be Godly or no, which how can any judge of, but upon their own having ſeen it, or putting the Man to a new Repentance afreſh, upon a Reiterated admonition by them ; and how then will a National Aſſembly ſo eaſily be able to judge of it ? And if they could, yet if they hear all things as fully over again, as all the Inferior Courts did (or how ſhall they judge to the ſatisfaction of the Appellant ?) What work would this create to all ſuch Aſſemblies ? It was objected againſt the Biſhop's Extenſive power, over ſo many Congregations, that they had more Churches, and ſo more Buſineſs to come before them, than any one Man could, or themſelves did manage ; and therefore had their Arch-Deacons and Chancellors, and the like under them : But a National Aſſembly will have much more to do ; and yet it ſits not as the Synhedrim all the year, but only a few weeks. To Diſcourage Men from thoſe Appeals, at laſt by Baniſhment, &c. if caſt, is to eke out the Spiritual power with the Temporal. A ſufficient Spiritual Remedy is ſought for, and it muſt be within it ſelf ; for that of the Magiſtrate, is but External, though helpful, and we ſeek a ſufficient Government, that was in the Primitive Times, when there were no Chriſtian Magiſtrates.

2. Such National Aſſemblies in a due proportion, ſhould rather have work ſuited to their conſtitution, viz. National Reformation, and Advices to the Magiſtrate about that which is common to all Churches in the Nation (and they will find enough of it in all times) than every Man's perſonal cauſe by way of Appeal (that hath a mind to Appeal) to come afore them: Even as civil Aſſemblies, Parliaments, &c. do not admit ordinary Appeals from all Courts in this Kingdom ; but leave them to theſe Courts, the Kingdom affording matters of far greater Moment for their Cogniſance.

3. Theſe Appeals ſtill being made from one Eccleſiaſtical Court to another, and thoſe Superior (when the cauſe is out of the Congregations Hands) conſiſting moſt of Paſtors, or if of others, yet of Perſons Eccleſiaſtical (for as ſuch they ſit in thoſe Aſſemblies, being Homogenial Members of Presbyteries, and lay Elders you will not call them) by this means all cauſes are taken up into the Clergies Hands, abſtracted from the People; and the Clergy will take part one with another, and the one Ratifie what the lower hath done, as the High Commiſſion did what a particular Biſhop had done, againſt an inferior Miniſter or other.

4. When the cauſe comes to the National Aſſembly, whoſe power is purely Eccleſiaſtical, either the Appeals muſt reſt here, and go no further; and the civil Magiſtrate, if he back their Sentence with a civil Mulct, muſt, without his examining of the cauſe, judge as they have Determined it; and ſo the Temporal Power muſt purſue, and execute the Decrees of the Spiritual, by an implicit Faith (which was the Bondage the Secular Powers were in, unto the Popiſh Biſhops in thoſe Times.) Or elſe they alſo muſt take full cogniſance of the cauſe, and have a power to Redreſs and Rectifie the wrong, if they find all theſe Courts to have injured a Perſon, perhaps differing in Judgment, or the like: And then it muſt either be the Supream power, the High Court of Parliament (and then that Honourable Court, muſt be fill'd with all Mens Eccleſiaſtical Appeals) or it muſt be ſome leſſer ordinary Court of Magiſtracy inferior, which ſhall have power to correct the wrong; and we believe the National Aſſembly, will very hardly Subject their Sentence to their power, to Reſcind and Declare it to be Unjuſt, ſo as to be bound by the Magiſtrates power on them to recall it; and yet otherwiſe, it is in vain to appeal at all to the Magiſtrate. One of theſe ways muſt be taken, or elſe the civil Magiſtrates muſt be denyed to have appeals in ſuch caſes brought to them; but all be left in the Churches Hands, and the benefit of Appeals made to them altogether, be cut off.

5. If the King and Parliament ſhould in the Judgment of the National Aſſembly, aggrieve you in point of Religion, may appeals be made to the National Aſſembly therein? Will you appeal to the National Aſſembly againſt them? Whether our Brethren will not decline that anſwer, that was given by one of the Brethren in the Debate, Why ſhould we be afraid to affirm they might Appeal to them, we know not; but we cannot ſee how the Principles of the Presbyterial Government, can avoid the aſſerting of it. Surely that Independency ſo opprobriouſly aſcribed to us, and retorted on us, is with Submiſſion to the Magiſtrate; and an Obedience by ſuffrage, without appealing further, we profeſſing not to know any Spiritual power on Earth, to which an Appeal may be made from the Sentence of the Magiſtrate, eſpecially if it be the Supream Authoritative Magiſtrate. Though we acknowledge a Relation to no other Eccleſiaſtical Authority, that hath a coercive power, Sub pœnæ Excommunicationis, or of delivering unto Satan; yet we own a Subjection to an Aſſembly of other Churches, as occaſion is; and that as to an Ordinance of Chriſt. But now to ſet up a National Aſſembly, growing up from the Eccleſiaſtical State, as a Court to whom Appeals may be made from the Sentence of the Supream Magiſtrate it ſelf, is ſo Tranſcendent a way of Independency, not Negatively only, as knowing no Superior; but affirmatively alſo, Subjecting the civil power to the Church, as the other deſerves not the Name of it. And if from the civil power, Appeals may be made to ſuch Aſſemblies; then they have the Authority over it, ſuch as under the Notion of Appeals is contended for. They will have a power to Convent, yea, to Excommunicate, and that as a joynt Body or Parliament.

CHAP. II.

What power Synods compoſed of the Elders of particular Churches occaſionally aſſembled, have in caſe of Male-Adminiſtrations, by any particular Church.

AS we acknowledge elective occaſional Synods of the Elders of many Churches, as the Churches have need to refer caſes of difference to them: So in caſe of Male-Adminiſtration, or an unjuſt proceeding, in the Sentence of Excommunication, and the like we acknowledge Appeals or Complaints may be made to other Churches; and the Elders of thoſe Churches met in a Synod, who being offended, may as an Ordinance of Chriſt, Judge and Declare that Sentence to be Null, Void, and Unjuſt; and that not ſimply, as any company of Men may ſo Judge, giving their Judgments of a Fact done; but as an Ordinance of Chriſt in ſuch caſes, and for that end, Sanctified by him to Judge and Declare in matters of Difference. And the Church and Elderſhip of a particular Church, that proceedeth ſo unjuſtly, ought to look at this their Determination, as an Ordinance of Chriſt to them; and entertaining it as ſuch, more ſadly to review their own Act and Proceedings, to conſider the grounds which the Synod gives why it is unjuſt, and themſelves ought to acknowledge it ſuch, and receive the Brother again with acknowledgment of their Sin, and of the wrong done him: Yet not with an Implicit Faith, becauſe the Synod hath ſo Determined, as having a greater power from Chriſt to Reſtore the Man.

In caſe this Church will not own this Petſon thus wrongfully Ejected; theſe Churches, or any of them, upon this Determination of their Elders (the Churches at their return approving their Sentence) may both receive the party in among themſelves, and ſo Relieve the Man; and further alſo profeſs to hold no Communion with that Church, if they perceive that Church doth continue obſtinate, having either for the manner proceeded therein, againſt the common principles of Equity and Right (ſuch as in Judging of matters of Fact, civil Courts proceed by, as when matters are not ſufficiently proved, &c.) or againſt, and beſides the Principles whereby Churches are to proceed (as for the matter of Excommunication it ſelf) which that Church it ſelf hath, and doth hold forth and profeſs.

If it fall out that a Perſon be thus caſt, firſt by his own Church, and now by a Synod of many Churches, to whom he Referred his cauſe, and appealed, he is bound rather to ſit down, than Curſitare (as Cyprians word and advice is) run up and down, ſtill to other and greater number of Churches, and to ſuffer wrong rather (as in 1 Cor. 6. the Apoſtle in another caſe exhorts) than engage Churches againſt Churches (which may prove the event) in his own private quarrel.

In Chriſtian Commonwealths, Appeals may be made in all ſuch caſes of wrong to the Magiſtrate, as to the other Churches, the Subject matter of Excommunication, being but ſuch things as are againſt the common profeſſion of Chriſtianity, in Doctrine and Manners, and (not the niceties and curioſities in Theology) and ſuch as the Laws of the Magiſtrate approve of; and the manner of proceeding for the proof of the Fact, being the ſame that are to be in all other Courts civil.

Now theſe things being premiſed and acknowledged by us; we proceed to the Negative part, what power we deny to Synods in point of Male-Adminiſtrations, which our Brethren would give them, and herein the points in difference are three.

1. We deny them to have power to Reſcind a Sentence, but only Doctrinally to Judge a Sentence of Excommunication, to be void and unjuſt. Now the power to Reſcind a Sentence, according to the acceptation of the words imports, 1. An Act of the ſame kind of Miniſterial power, that gave the Sentence: It imports the ſame power to make it void, that did eſtabliſh it; yea, a power containing in it all that the inferior hath, and is withal Superior to it. The Chriſtian Magiſtrate hath a power over Churches, in caſe of wrong, not only to declare the Sentence to be unjuſt, as he is a Chriſtian Magiſtrate, but to cauſe that Church that pronounced it, to Revoke it as ſuch; but yet the Aſſembly will not, that they have power to Reſcind the Sentence, as they ſay Synods may. Therefore this word (as in Synods the Aſſembly would place the power of it) muſt import not ſimply power of Judging and Declaring the Sentence unjuſt; for that is refuſed, but further, a power of the ſame kind, and yet Superior, by vertue of which the Sentence is made void, Coram Eccleſia, before the Church, and is now ſo to be conceived of all. And as in the Act of the Church that Excommunicated the Man, there was a further power put forth, than a bare Declaration, that he was to be Excommunicated ; for they actually, with the power of Chriſt, did caſt out, and deliver the Man to Satan : So here in this Act that bears the Name of Reſcinding, there muſt be ſuppoſed a power, not ſimply to declare the Sentence unjuſt ; but further, a power upon their Sentence, to make void the other's Act, that the Perſon before Excommunicated, ſtands now Coram Eccleſia, Unexcommunicated.

2. A Second power which we deny to Synods, which is contended for by our Brethren, which alſo the word Reſcind imports, is the like coercive power in this Synod given them by Chriſt, whereby to compel this Church to acknowledge their Sentence unjuſt, and to Receive that Brother again. And the puniſhment by which they are enabled to compel them to it, muſt be of the ſame kind with that which theſe ſuppoſed inferior Churches have over their Members, if they did not obey ; Namely, to Excommunicate and deliver up to Satan that Church, Claſſis, or Province, that hath thus unjuſtly proceeded ; and will not receive this Man in again, upon their Reſcinding it. And this it imports in the Senſe of our Brethren, for otherwiſe they do but intend that Government in theſe caſes to be in Synods, which we the Diſſenting Brethren contend for ; which is, that theſe Synods, and the Churches under them, may in ſome caſes withdraw Communion from other Churches offending, but not preſume to Excommunicate, or deliver them to Satan, or Unchurch them ; and lay a Law upon their Conſciences, to ſhut up their Church-Meetings, and to be all Heathens and Publicans to one another, as well as to the Synod and their Churches. And yet this which we contend for, is cryed down with this common prejudice, that it is no Government, becauſe this power of Excommunication is wanting. Again, when they Reſtore the Party wronged, is it to their Communion only, or to the Communion with that Church, out of which he was Excommunicated alſo ? If only to their own, then ſtill it is no more than what we acknowledge Neighbour Churches may do, in caſe of wrong ; and it is a Relief to the party. But if alſo they have power to Reſtore him to the Church he was caſt out of actually ; then they muſt have power to compel that Church to receive him. In this caſe theſe whole Churches and their Officers, would be Subjects to be dealt with by theſe Synods ; For 1. The appellant wronged is one party, and they another. And 2. The Excommunication was a publick Church Act, wherein the Elders and the People are involved, eſpecially when they all ſtand to own him, and to execute the Sentence.

3. A Third thing wherein we differ, is concerning matters of Appeals. We taking them as importing, in the Senſe of our Brethren, a Juridical Superior power, in the Superior Synods to be appealed unto. Concerning which we ſay, 1. That ſuch appeals are not ſo abſolutely neceſſary to the Government of the Churches, nor doth the Law of Nature neceſſarily require them : 2. Eſpecially not ſuch appeals as ſhould acknowledge a Superior power in the Synod appealed unto, either by making the appeal afore the Sentence is given in particular Churches, and ſo the matter is taken out of their Hands, by vertue of a Superior in Synods, or by making the appeal after Sentence given, we deny them to be ſuch fixed and ſolemn Courts of Judicature.

Firſt, As for that Reſcinding power pretended, if more than Declarative is intended, we conceive that the Nature of the Sentence of Excommunication, when untimely executed is ſuch, that by what ever Court (that is the firſt Subject of pronouncing it) it is pronounced and executed, it is not capable of being Reſcinded. It is capable of being declared Void, Null, or Unjuſt ; but not of being Reſcinded, in the Senſe afore explained, in matterts civil, one Court having a Superior power, may in a true and proper Senſe, Reſcind the Sentence of another ; becauſe it hath a greater power of the ſame kind, by vertue of which, it can make that Act void, which ſtood before by vertue of the inferior power as valid, each Act depending upon that power, which on Earth is ſet up ; and ſo the greater may undo, and Reverſe what the former did. But thus to Reſcind a Sentence of Excommunication, no power on Earth is able to do. Which is evinced thus.

There are two parts of that Sentence, one outward, which the Church performs (which is Ejection out of Communion.) The other inward, which God accompanies the Sentence with. And if the Sentence were formally no more but a caſting out of the outward communion of the Church on Earth, then a greater power in Earth, might have power to Reſcind their Sentence, and Reſtore him to communion; but there is a further Judicial Act annexed unto it, which is binding in Heaven, and delivering to Satan, &c. which muſt be ſuppoſed ſuch a ſpecial Judicial Act of God; ſome Men's Sin is in ſome Senſe bound in Heaven, till he Repents, when he commits it, and is Admoniſhed by any Chriſtian, whether he be in the Church or no, and whether he be brought before the Church or no for it; and ſo the Brethren that Admoniſh him in order to Excommunication, may be ſaid in ſome Senſe, to bind his Sin. But there is a further Judicial Act of God's put forth, when the Church hath Miniſterially Sentenced the Man aright; for the Church ſo binds Sin, as no private Brother can; or elſe it might be ſaid, that a Brother may deliver to Satan. Hence that Aſſembly, which is the firſt Subject of this power from God, hath the promiſe of this, and God is ſuppoſed by us, to have performed it upon their Sentence; and then it is impoſſible there ſhould be a Superior power of the ſame kind on Earth to Reſcind it, or unbind it in Heaven, and to whom a further promiſe is made, that when they pronounce it void, there is an unbinding in Heaven. So as ſuppoſe the Congregational or Claſſical Church (be it either the one or the other, that is acknowledged the firſt Subject of this power, and which of theſe ſhould be, could never yet be brought to the Debate) hath bound the Man; and the Provincial confirms it, and binds him alſo: If the National hath power to Reſcind this, it hath then one Key to unlooſe what theſe three Keys have lockt. The anſwer to this is only, that this Argument goes upon a falſe Suppoſition, that appeals ſhould be, when the Excommunication is juſt, whereas they are only when the appeal is unjuſt, and ſo the Sin is not bound in Heaven. To which it is Replyed.

1. In caſe of appeals. That's the thing ſtill in queſtion between the Parties, whether it be juſt or unjuſt? And therefore to ſuppoſe that all appeals fall out only in caſes of real unjuſtice and wrong, cannot be a ſufficient anſwer. Yea,

2. The Sentence is to be judged by all the Churches (till the matter is examined, and cleared to the contrary) to be a right Sentence of Excommunication, and that his Sin is bound in Heaven: For they are rather to Judge that the Church hath proceeded rightly, than to Judge on the Appellants ſide, until the matter is cleared: And ſo ſtill it goes up as a Sentence binding in Heaven.

3. Whether the Sentence be juſt or unjuſt, the matter is capable of no more than declaring and adjudging it ſuch accordingly; and therefore it is capable of no ſuch Act as may be called Reſcinding. For if it be Juſt, no Sentence on Earth can Reſcind God's Act upon that firſt Sentence, for it is bound in Heaven, and Man cannot alter God's Act; and if it be unjuſt, then there needs no power to Reſcind it, but only to declare it to be unjuſt and void; and ſo to hold the Man, as if he had never been Excommunicated. And if Synods have but ſuch a Declarative power, then let no more be affirmed, and we will not contend about it.

4. If they have power of Reſcinding the Sentence, then the Act done by the inferior Courts, is made void by their ſole Sentence, without any Act of Reverſing, by the conſent of thoſe Congregations or Churches, that have pronounced it. For no Superior Court hath that power to Reſcind the Sentence of another; but hath it ſo, as by their Act the Sentence is made void, without any Act of Revocation by the lower Court. Thus the Honourable Houſe of Parliament, if it Reſcinds an Act of an Inferior Court, ſends not down to that Inferior Court to Reverſe it; but doth it without them. And if that be the intent of this Reſcinding, let it be ſo declared.

CHAP. III.

The other Prerogative of Power challenged by Synods, to Excommunicate other Churches, conſidered and invalidated.

THE Second Prerogative of Power challenged by Synods, which we contend againſt, and deny to them, is ſuch a coercive power to be in them, as given them by Chriſt to Excommunicate other Churches, and ſo by that Rod, to enforce them to Revoke their Sentence of Male-Adminiſtration, and receive a Perſon wrongfully Excommunicated by them.

That ſuch a power is not in Synods to Excommunicate a Church or Churches, or ſo Reſcind a Sentence paſt in a particular Church, is evinced by theſe following Arguments.

1. For ſuch a pretended power, there is neither Precept nor Example.

1. The Apoſtles never did exerciſe ſuch a power, who yet had power in all Churches, and over Perſons among them.

2. None of the Reformed Churches ever practiſed it. Mr. Paget, a Learned Preſbyterial Writer, acknowledgeth that none of the Reformed Churches ever practiſed it. Mr. Cartwright ſpeaking of this power, did in his Days, put an, If it may be upon it.

If it be ſaid their Government is ſo good, as it hath had no occaſion to put ſuch a power into Act: I anſwer.

Let the Arminian Congregation, that were in the Low Countries, be remembred. Though a National Synod was called; yet none of them were Excommunicated, and yet we believe they judged their Errors worthy of their cenſure. So the Churches of Anabaptiſts among them, who not only hold the not Baptizing of Children, but run into many other groſs Errors, were never yet Excommunicated.

If it be ſaid that they forbear to do it, becauſe of great Inconveniences that would follow, by provoking of Multitudes; and that it tends more (in ſuch caſes) unto Edification to forbear it, than to execute it: It is Replyed,

1. That God hath Suited his Ordinances to the ordinary way of his Providence; and therefore would not have given an ordinary ſtanding power for Government, which could not ordinarily be executed, without Tumult and Diſturbance; and therefore there is no ſuch power given.

2. If a Church or Churches did deſerve it, it cannot be for Edification to forbear it; for not to Excommunicate them, is to edifie them in Sin. Churches that deſerve Excommunication, can be edified in nothing by being connived at in their Sin, that will Damn them. And Excommunication is the means appointed by God, for the deſtroying the Fleſh, and ſaving the Soul.

3. Neither can a Multitude be an excuſe for the neglect. For however theſe Synods (if they have ſuch a power) are to Diſcharge their Duty, and the Soul or Souls of Sinners, muſt thus be puniſht.

4 Let it be obſerved, that ſuch a power is contended for by the Presbyterial Divines, which was never practiſed, which themſelves think and judge inconvenient to practice; and yet without this power granted to them, they ſay there is no Government: And herein lies the main of this great controverſy, whether they ſhould have ſuch a power or no, which they never have exerciſed; and themſelves think it to be ordinarily inconvenient to exerciſe it, reſerving it as a Rod, in the Houſe which they never will uſe, as if they kept it to ſcare Children with. But the Efficacy of Government, lies not in the Speculation and Doctrine, but in what is practicable. Shall Kingdoms be Diſturbed about the Diſpute of that which in the practice is a Chimera, and when they have it, ſhall be exerciſed Arbitrarily, and at Diſcretion? Yea, may not a Tryal be made, whether that the other way (which they call no Government) may not be ſufficient?

We further conclude this firſt Head of Argument with this, that as ſuch a Synodical power hath no Preſident or Example in the Primitive Practices, nor in the Reformed Churches, ſo it hath this character upon it, that none but the Pope and Biſhops, and Synods of Biſhops ever practiſed it: And they have practiſed it by interdicting Kingdoms, not ſimply as civil States, but as Churches in Kingdoms, commanding the Miniſters to forbear to adminiſter the Holy Things unto any that did cleave to their Prince, or for any the like cauſes. And certainly by the principles of this Doctrine, a general Council of all the Reformed Churches, may in like manner Excommunicate any Nation or Kingdom, whom they judge Heretical, or to make a Schiſm from them; for whilſt the Foundation of the power of Synods is pleaded to lie in Chriſt's Inſtitution, as it hath ordinarily been urged in the Aſſembly, in anſwer unto our Reaſons, that the Church-Catholick is one politick Body, and ſo the Elders of all Churches have power over any Churches, that are parts of that great Body, be they in Nations or in Provinces, which Subjects all States as truly to the Thunderbolt of Excommunication from Foreign Churches, as it did once to Rome.

What though it be ſaid that ſuch Counſels are not likely to be practiſed, or if ſo, it muſt be with the States own conſent: Yet ſtill the Myſtery is, that ſuch a power is contended for as a Rod over them, as well as over leſſer Churches; for though they have not Excommunicated de facto, any particular Churches; yet they have claimed that power, as a Rod to keep them in awe with.

If it be ſaid, the Pope challenged to do this, as an Head of the Church Univerſal, and as Infallible: We Reply, that there is indeed this difference, that he, as but one, uſurps it, and as the External Head of the Church; but yet theſe challenge the ſame power, as being themſelves the Catholick Church it ſelf Repreſentatively. For if to tell the Church, Mat. 18. be in its aſcent to tell General Councels as the Church; then they muſt be interpreted to be the Catholick Church, and infallibly may in the iſſue (through Mens pride) become the claim alſo, by how much many conſenting, are more likely to have the Holy Ghoſt to aſſiſt them, than that, and ſo have more reaſon for their claim, then one ſet up to challenge it. And at firſt, that one was ſet up only to receive Appeals, and to Reſcind Sentences, and to Excommunicate Churches, and from granting to them that power at the firſt, did that other of Infallibility ſpring.

A Second Head of Arguments, is drawn from the Nature of Excommunication; becauſe that it contains more in that, than that which we call Non-communion, Namely this, that Perſons are not only caſt from communion with all theſe Churches (which we acknowledge) but further, are delivered to Satan, for the internal part thereof. And for the external part, it is ſtrange that this Law of Synods, ſhould oblige their conſcience, that they ſhould not meet among themſelves, when as yet they are already a Church, and were a Church, without any power derived from their aſſociating with others. All then that they can fall from by vertue of the Sentence of the Synod, is but what they have from them, and among them by their aſſociation, and not what they have among themſelves. Yea, the very words whereby Excommunication is expreſt, is but this, Sit tibi Ethnicus, Let him be to thee an Heathen, and take that Wicked one from among you: And therefore when Neighbour-Churches, deal ſo with a Church; they can but eject and keep them and their Members out from amongſt them. But this power contended for, goes further; for the Synod aſſumes to throw a Church out of it ſelf, and to make them to be Heathens and Publicans, inter ſe, among themſelves, who yet have all this while been a Church to Chriſt.

And that which further ſtrengthens all this, is, that very Principle which the Aſſembly doth go upon to Eſtabliſh this power in Synods and Presbyteries (given up in their anſwer to our Reaſons againſt Presbyteries;) That as Families are bound to joyn into ſome Congregational Church, ſo thoſe Churches into Aſſociation together: And as theſe joyned in a New Congregation, gives them power over each other; ſo this aſſociation of Churches, gives the whole a power over each of theſe Churches. Tho' we wholly aſſent not to this latter, yet ſuppoſing it (and it is one of the beſt and faireſt grounds for the Presbyterial way) the Law of this Principle (if the Parallel be rightly made up) will not extend to a power of Excommunicating any of theſe Churches ſo aſſociated. For, 1. If you take that External part of Excommunication, it is a cutting Men off from all Ordinances, wherein Church-Communion lies (as ſome hold) but more eſpecially from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper (which latter is acknowledged by all) for ſince Suſpenſion cuts off from the Lord's Supper, therefore Excommunication muſt do it much more: Now the Parallel Law between theſe two kinds of aſſociations, muſt run thus; That as a Congregation caſts out of the communion of all thoſe Ordinances, which a Congregation is the proper Seat of; ſo this greater aſſociation can by vertue of its aſſociation, only caſt out of thoſe Ordinances that belong unto them, as ſuch an aſſociated Body in common, and from among themſelves in particular; and then that Sentence can ariſe to no more than what we contend to be the only power that Churches have one with another; and that is Non-communion. The Reaſon is clear, becauſe they can but caſt that Church out of their aſſociation, and from having any intereſt in their counſel and advice, &c. For aſſociated Presbyteries, have not the Sacraments, nor the Solemn conſtant Ordinances of Worſhip; and therefore they can but by vertue of this aſſociation, deny them communion with themſelves; and this we grant to Neighbour-Churches, that they may and ought to deal thus with an offending Church, by vertue of that Apoſtolick Rule, from ſuch turn away. But this power of Excommunicating a Church contended for, is a further thing, it is a laying a Law upon a Church, to Diſſolve their being any longer a Church, until they do Repent of that Sin they charge them with; it is to call in their Charter, that they can meet no more, Inter ſe, among themſelves to enjoy the Sacrament, or any other Ordinance whatſoever. This is beyond the extent of the power of an aſſociation; yea, this is more than they are able to execute, and doth Chriſt give power to do that which they cannot execute? Now they may keep them from communion with them, either by not letting them into the Aſſembly (and therefore they had Oſtiarii Door-keepers in the primitive times) or they may do it by thruſting them out; as the Prieſts of Iſrael did the King, when he came to offer Sacrifice, or rather by a Moral conteſt againſt them, or forbearing to Excommunicate, when they are preſent: But they cannot keep them from meeting, inter ſe, among themſelves. In the Primitive Times indeed they had Recourſe to the power of Magiſtrates for it; but we ſeek for a ſufficient Eccleſiaſtical Remedy.

To this if it be Retorted, that ſuch will the caſe be too, when in a particular Congregation, a company of Perſons deſerving Excommunication, are ejected (as a Paſtor and others with him) yet they will meet ſtill, and no Law can oblige them to the contrary: We Reply, by giving this Difference of the caſe.

1. That when a Congregation doth caſt out the very Members, the Act it ſelf whereby they caſt them out from among them, leaves them barely a company of Out-laws, without Church State or Relation among themſelves; for they had it but as Members of that Church, they are now caſt out of; and they can Retain no other Relation left them, that gives them actual Right to Ordinances; for this is their Original firſt Relation. And therefore if they meet, yea, with a Mutual conſent to be a New Church, they meet as Men, and Outlawed from a Church Relation, which they had put their Souls upon the Laws of; or at leaſt by a Judicial Act paſt on them, they have now forfeited. They fall as the Angels, from that Original State, and if they will ſet up a New Kingdom, they do it but as the Devils do. But although Neighbour-Churches did caſt them out from among them, that Act in the Nature and Extent of it, Reacheth not to caſt them out of that Relation of a Church, that they had originally among themſelves; Neither do they fall by vertue of that Act (which is all that is in the Synods power) from that Church Relation they had among themſelves; which they had before their aſſociating with them, and was the Foundation of it.

2. By that Act of being caſt out of this Congregational Relation, they are caſt out of the formerly enjoyed communion of the Lord's Supper, in a conſtancy in that Church; which they never enjoyed at all in that other Claſſical Church, for it is not the Seat of it: And ſo this Act of Excommunication, as in a Congregational Church performed, caſts them out of all Ordinances, and out of all that is proper to ſuch Relation and Fellowſhip; but it is not ſo in the other caſe. And hence it comes to paſs that Excommunication from all Ordinances, can only be in a Church where all Ordinances are; and therefore not in or by a claſſical Church, where the main Ordinances Men are ſhut out from, are not Adminiſtred:

3. This Act of a Synod's Excommunicating a Church, is yet further for the External part of it, not ſimply an Obligation, not to meet for Ordinances, and to account of each other as Heathens; but further yet, the Sentence Terminates it ſelf upon their Church-fellowſhip and Communion, Diſſolves that, cuts them off from being an External Body, or Spouſe to Chriſt, gives them ſuch a Bill of Divorce, as removes the Candleſtick, takes that in pieces, yea, delivers them as ſuch to Satan, and makes them as Heathens and Publicans each to other. For otherwiſe if the Act be only the Synod's putting away this Church from among themſelves, or the communion of other Churches; that we readily grant may be done, and ſurely it is Remedy ſufficient through Chriſt's Bleſſing (although this is reckoned no Government.) But to do the other Act mentioned to Church or Churches, Chriſt hath not given power to Synods.

If it be anſwered, as it is by ſome, that the Object of this Excommunication of a Church, is only the Perſons therein materially conſidered, but not their Church-State, otherwiſe than by conſequence: We Reply, that formally the Object of this Sentence, is a Church as ſuch, which is evident from this; that the great Argument alledged by the Presbyterial Divines is, that elſe there is no Remedy for an erring Church, as well as for Heretical Perſons: And alſo that the Sins, which are the grounds of ſuch Excommunications, be ſtill Church Acts, Publick, not Perſonal, as groſly evil Adminiſtrations, or permiſſions of Notorious Sins, or Hereſies Profeſſed, Upheld, Defended, Adhered to by all in their Aſſemblies. And how elſe ſhould Excommunication of a Church differ from the Suſpenſion of a Church? This puts them into that State, as during the time of their Excommunication, they are to be reckoned as no Church, untill they Repent; for if they are as Heathens and Publicans, then they are no Church, unleſs we will make Heathen Churches, which is a contradiction. And if that whole Church ſhould die Impenitent, they are to be reckoned to die, as out of Church-State among themſelves, as well as in Relation to other Churches.

Now to prove that it is not in the power of Synods, thus to do to Churches, let the following Reaſons be conſidered.

1. This is a Maxim of the Reformed Churches, that Eccleſiæ ſunt pares, Churches are equal, and Par in parem non habet poteſtatem, one equal, hath not power over another. Admoniſh they may, withdraw communion they may; for as one Brother may do ſo from another, ſo theſe Churches may from an erring Church; yea, and a Synod being an Ordinance to them to heal them, and conſiſting of more Elders than are in that Church, they may declare Chriſt's command and will to them; but yet they have that power to deliver to Satan, to unchurch them, &c. We find not that a Synod or company of Elders are called a Church, and if they ſhould be ſo Named, yet ſtill they have not more of Church in them, than other Churches have; nay, they have leſs, for they want a Body of the Faithful, and their intereſt joyned with theſe Elders, who are more uſually called the Church: They are not the Seat of the main Ordinances, for which Churches were conſtituted: They have not the Sacraments adminiſtred: They are not Bodies erected primarily for Worſhip; but only ſo far, as may occaſionally accompany and ſubſerve their Diſcuſſions, and Determinations. It would therefore be ſtrange, that theſe ſhould have ſo much more of Church in them, as to have power to unchurch other Churches and Bodies to Chriſt, when themſelves are but Repreſentative, at moſt of the Body of Chriſt (for Chriſt hath no Repreſentative Body to him) but every Church conſiſting of Elders and People, are the Body of Chriſt, and ſo called, when the other never hath that Name.

2. To Diſſolve a Church's external Eſtate as to all Ordinances, is a matter ſo far above Excommunicating ſingle Perſons, though never ſo many, that it is Chriſt's Prerogative alone to do it. This is confirmed,

1. By like inſtances in civil States, wherein to Diſſolve an Incorporate Town, and to call in, and take away their Charter and Priviledge, belongs to the Supream Power; and though Judges and others may deal with Perſons in Corporations, yet the Corporations themſelves depend on the Crown.

2. It is confirmed by Scripture, Revel. 2. 5. Chriſt from Heaven makes it his Prerogative, to remove the Epheſian Candleſtick, Repent, or I will come quickly and remove thy Candleſtick. The Candleſtick was their Church-State, Revel. 1. 23. The ſeven Candleſticks, are the ſeven Churches; and therefore he ſpeaks not of their Myſtical State, as they were Members of the Myſtical Body, but of them, as they were a Candleſtick Artificially formed up into that Holy Fellowſhip amongſt them. So alſo it was Gods Prerogative alone, to give a Bill of Divorce to Iſrael, as ſhe was a Church, and ſo it is expreſſed. And if it be ſaid, it was done Miniſterially by the Prophets declaring it, and ſo may this alſo be done to a Church by its Miniſters: We Reply, that it was done by them Prophetically, as foretelling it; but there is no ſuch Spirit of Prophecy in Synods.

3. It is Chriſt's Prerogative alone, to build and erect a Church, without the intervention of Miniſterial Eccleſiaſtical power, to derive power to them; therefore alſo to Diſſolve that Fellowſhip, and the uſe thereof, belongs only to him. Chuches to be Erected, may and ought to have the direction and conſent of Neighbour-Churches, becauſe a New Siſter is to be added to, and aſſociated with them; but they receive no power from them, to become a Church. It was not the Intervention of the Apoſtles power, that conſtituted Churches, further than as they converted Materials for Churches to be made out of, and as they Directed and Taught them to become Bodies unto Chriſt, teaching them to do whatſoever Chriſt hath commanded them; but we never read, that making them Churches, was a Miniſterial Act in them; we read they Ordained Elders, but not that they Ordained Churches. Paul ſays, he planted indeed, and he was a Wiſe Maſter-builder; but he ſpeaks the one of converting Perſons, the other of Doctrines, becauſe he ſpeaks of building Hay and Stubble afterwards.

It is the great Error of ſome of this Age, that having loſt all Church-ſtate and Miniſtry; therefore (ſay they) there muſt come Apoſtles to make Churches again, whereas if all Ordinances had been loſt under Antichriſt, yet if there be Saints alive, and they have the Apoſtles Writings, thoſe Writings do Authorize them as fully to become a Church, and chooſe Miniſters, and then to Ordain them, as if the Apoſtles were alive. Moſes was not the Builder of the National Church of the Jews, but Chriſt immediately did it, and not merely gave Directions, Heb. 3. 3. This Man Chriſt, hath more Honour than Moſes, in as much as he that Builded the Houſe, hath more Honour than the Houſe, whereof Moſes was but a part himſelf.

If it be anſwered to all this, that by Excommunication, their Fundamental Church-State is not Diſſolved, as the character of a Brother, or of a Miniſter, is not ſo defaced when Excommunicated; but that if he Repent again, he remains a Miniſter without a New Ordination: We Reply, beſides the Reaſons forementioned, that ſo likewiſe if Chriſt ſhould remove the Candleſtick, and unchurch any, if they Repent, their Church-State would be Reſtored; and 2. If they be thrown out of their own Church by Excommunication, this Church-State muſt remain as it were in the Air, as an accident without a Subject. And 3. If they be caſt out of the viſible Church (which is the greater) by Excommunication, then they are caſt out of the leſs alſo.

It may, and hath been ſaid, that in caſes of Male-Adminiſtrations, wherein Churches have Miſcarryed and Erred, though Synods have the power of Excommunication in ſuch caſes; yet it is not neceſſary for the Rectifying of that Evil, that they ſhould proceed againſt the Church, ſo as the Church ſhould be the object of their dealing with; but it may be enough for them to deal with Perſons only that are Scandalous, whom the Church will not amend; and that then in caſe of the Churches neglect, they may Excommunicate thoſe Perſons.

Now unto this we Reply, that in theſe caſes of evil Adminiſtrations, what power Synods are betruſted withal, is to be primarily, or at leaſt as much exerciſed upon the Church that hath miſcarryed and neglects its Duty, as upon the Perſons: And therefore it will not Salve it, that they ſhould let the Church alone, or deal more lightly with them; and ſo take upon them to Excommunicate the Perſons, whom the Church neglects to Excommunicate. Which is made good by theſe Reaſons.

1. From the priviledge and power of that Church, be it Claſſical or Congregational, that is the firſt Subject of Excommunication; they have the power firſt from Chriſt to do it, and a command ſo to do, and the Duty lies on them. And therefore Synods are to call upon them, and to provoke them to do it, who have that power committed to them, and not take it out of their Hands; for Synods are not to aſſume more power than the Apoſtles did. When the Church of Corinth had neglected to Excommunicate the inceſtuous Corinthian, Paul did not take it upon him, and Excommunicate him himſelf; but in this caſe he deals with the Church, for not doing their Duty, becauſe the power of Judging was committed to them; Do not ye Judge them that are without? 1 Cor. 5. 12. He blames them, lays it upon them as a Sin, and if they had ſtill continued in that neglect, their Sin had been as great as that of the Man himſelf, and greater. And therefore Chriſt alſo in his Epiſtle from Heaven, to the Church of Thyatira, Revel. 2. 20. blames that Church and the Angel thereof, for ſuffering Jezabel to Teach, and lays the Sin upon them in this caſe, as well as upon Jezabel her ſelf: And therefore if Synods are to Excommunicate at all, and have power to Excommunicate the Perſons, they muſt proceed againſt the Church alſo.

1. If it be ſaid, that the Church muſt be ſuppoſed not to ſee that Reaſon (for want of light) to Excommunicate a Member or Members, that the Synod doth, and ſo they may not have that cauſe to deal with the Churches, that they have with the Perſon or Member: We Reply, that if the Sin be not evidently notorious in all Mens Eyes, deſerving Excommunication; but ſuch, as it may be well ſuppoſed, the Inferior Church might not ſee ground for Excommunication, why ſhould the Synod meddle with caſes of that nature, why ſhould they not rather reſt in the Sentence of thoſe Inferior Courts? And if it be ſuch a Sin as is Notorious, and the Scandal anſwerably, then ſurely this Church that Perſon belongs unto, is as much, yea more in fault for their neglect or partiality. Aud ſurely Synods (if they had any ſuch Authority) being ſuch Great and Superior Bodies, ſhould not intermeddle but in caſes ſuitable to themſelves, in caſes of Moment, great and manifeſt to all Men's Conſciences.

And 2. The conſtitution of Synods, and the Relation they bear to Churches argues it. They are not as Totum integrale, but Collectivum; not an integral whole, they are not Eccleſia integralis, but Collectiva, not an integral Church, but Collective, that is, they are in our Brethren's intent, a Church of Churches (if a Church at all) and not in an immediate way a Church of the Members of thoſe Churches ſingly, and apart conſidered. Their Firſt and Primary Relation is therefore to the Churches, as a part of that whole, and but Secondarily unto the Members; and they are therefore accordingly to deal in all ſuch caſes of omiſſion with the Churches. Their Work is to have the care and care of Churches, and their Miſcarriages; and therefore to deal with Members only, and let the Churches alone, is to neglect that which is their proper charge.

3. So it was in the Government of Judah, the Synhedrim did not themſelves meddle with the Perſon to be Judged, and pronounce the Sentence in ſtead of the Judges of a particular City, but left it to them ſtill to Judge according to their proper Priviledge; but dealt with the Judges, in caſe they pronounced not the Sentence; and ſo here it ſhould be, if we will ſuppoſe any ſuch power at all to be in Synods.

2. It may and hath been ſaid, that Presbyterial Government ſuppoſeth the fault of this Excommunication, to lie in the Elders that Excommunicated the Man, and ſo need not to deal with the Churches by way of coertion to them; but only with thoſe Elders that had the Hand in it, who may be Depoſed, and others placed in their room.

To which we Reply, 1. That the People are ſuppoſed alſo at leaſt to give their conſent to the Excommunication of a Perſon in a Church (by their own acknowledgment, and according to the practice of the Reformed Churches) yea, and are to Judge as the Jury doth, by finding a Man Guilty; and the Officers are as the Judges (ſo in the Church of Corinth, 1 Cor. 5*th* and 6*th chap.*) And if ſo, then they are to be Judged in fault, as well as the Officers.

But 2. If the People are not to be Cenſured and Judged, yet ſuppoſe they cleave to their Officers in this Act, as thinking that they ought, and as being convinced with them, that this Man is to remain Excommunicated; and therefore dare not partake with him, as it is their Duty in ſuch a caſe: Then the People are to be Excommunicated, as well as their Officers, and both of them for this ſame thing, as being a Church Act, according to their intereſts, common to both.

3. If the Officers only ſhould be Excommunicated in this caſe, and others put in their rooms: Then 1. If the People do cleave to their former Officers, theſe Officers will want a Church to officiate unto; and why ſhould they Deſert their Elders, when they in their conſciences Judge their Act to be Juſt? It becomes them to ſay, let us all dye with them in ſuch a caſe. And if the Synod will Excommunicate a Paſtor, and the Elders of a Congregation (ſuppoſing the People cleave to them) where is it that you will Excommunicate him? In their own Church, or in your Churches? In his own Church, the People are againſt it. And if in your Churches, where is the Peoples concurring conſent to this Man's Excommunication? And if it be done in your Churches, you only throw him out of your own. Or 2. If they do not cleave to their Officers, yet they conſcientiouſly Judging that they ought not to receive the Man into communion with themſelves, here is ſtill no ſufficient remedy for the Man by this.

4. Let it be further conſidered, that if theſe Elders only ſhould be Depoſed; yet they are perhaps the whole, the greater part at leaſt of a Claſſis (for by the greater part, every thing is carried) and ſo of the Elders of many Congregations. Yea, if the Provincial hath ſeconded the Sentence; then the greater part of the Elders of a Province, are to be Excommunicated alſo: And if the People cleave to them (as of old they did uſe to do to their Biſhops) then the People of all thoſe Churches alſo, muſt be Excommunicated, and what a havock of the Churches will this make?

If it be ſaid, that in this caſe as in a Rebellion, ſome few are ſingled out for example to the reſt: It is anſwered,

1. It is not in this, as in civil Government; for there capital puniſhments are chiefly for example, to prevent and deter others; but here this of Excommunication, is for the perſonal good of thoſe that have Sinned, to deſtroy the Fleſh, that they may be ſaved; and therefore the Souls that deſerve it, ought and muſt be Excommunicated: Neither is there any Warrant to think, that when the Merit and Obſtinacy of the Sin, calls for that Ordinance appointed, the only means to cure it (which cure is only to bring Sinners to Godly Repentance) that that Sin will be healed, by any lower means of making others an Example: The Excommunication of ſome few, may be a means to prevent thoſe that are not fallen; but not thoſe that are fallen into obſtinacy. 2. In ſuch civil Mulcts, Princes and States have power to Pardon the Rebels, or to paſs the Crime by; becauſe the Injury (ſo far as 'tis civil, is to themſelves) but no Eccleſiaſtical Court hath power to forgive, but where Chriſt forgives, and he forgives only the Penitent; nor yet ought they to forbear, if they have the power of inflicting this Spiritual Puniſhment.

Laſtly, Let the Inconvenience be conſidered, if Synods ſhould Excommunicate Perſons (when the Inferior Churches did acquit them) without Excommunicating the Churches themſelves, what Confuſion and Diſturbance it is like to bring. The Perſons Excommunicated will ſay, where I am known, and am a Member, there I am acquitted, and not medled with; but by Strangers, and the Elders of a Nation (having taken the cauſe out of their Hands) I am condemned. This will bolſter up Perſons, and make them obſtinate, and they will oppoſe Sentence againſt Sentence.

CHAP. IV.

Arguments againſt Subordination of Synods, to rxerciſe Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction or Government. The firſt Argument, that there is no Warrant or Deſignment of ſuch a Subordination in all the Scriptures.

THough we judge Synods to be of great uſe for the finding out, and declaring of Truth in Difficult caſes, and encouragement to walk in the Truth, for the healing offences; and to give Advice unto the Magiſtrate, in matters of Religion: And though we give great Honour, and conſcientious Reſpect unto their Determinations: Yet ſince not only an occaſional, but a ſtanding uſe of them be aſſerted and maintained; and that in Subordination of one unto another, as Juridical, Eccleſiaſtical Courts; and this in all caſes: We Humbly preſent theſe Reaſons againſt it.

All Subordinations of theſe Spiritual Courts, having greater and leſſer Degrees of power, to which in their order cauſes are to be brought, muſt have the greateſt and moſt expreſs Warrant and Deſignment in the word for them. Whence it is argued thus.

Argu. 1. Thoſe Courts that muſt have the moſt Expreſs Warrant and Deſignment for them in the Word; and yet have not the leaſt, their power is to be Suſpected, and not Erected in the Church of God; But theſe have not the leaſt: Therefore, &c.

There ought to be the greateſt and moſt expreſs Warrant, and that for two things belonging to them. 1. For their Subordination and Number. 2. For their Bounds and Limits of Power. And becauſe this principle is made uſe of both in the point in hand, and other of like nature; Namely, to argue à pari ratione, from like and Parallel Reaſon, the Argument to Eſtabliſh this Propoſition, ſhall proceed accordingly, from the ſtrength of like Reaſon, in other caſes and inſtances, that there ought to be, that there ought to be a Warrant and Deſignment in the Word for them.

1. From the like Reaſon, in the caſe of Subordination of Officers in the Church, one over another, there was a ſpecial Inſtitution, and it is required, or we own them not; and that for intenſive power, and extenſive power; and therefore for the Subordination of ſuch Courts alſo. The Rule of proportion holds; for a Government of, and by ſpecial Subordinations, whether of one Church-Officer or Perſon over another, and of him over others; or of a many in the like Degree of Subordination are but ſeveral Forms of Government, of which there is the like reaſon in common. As of Subordinations in a Monarchical way, wherein but ſome one Perſon is Superior to another downwards, or in an Ariſtocratical way throughout, in this they come all to one; that if there be to be an Inſtitution or Warrant for the one, there is to be for the other, whether God or Men be to be the Inſtitutors of them. Now in the Government of the Church, for the Subordination of Officers, there was an expreſs Inſtitution, or Men ought not to have aſſumed it, 1 Cor. 12. 18. God hath ſet in his Church; Firſt Apoſtles, Secondarily Prophets and Evangeliſts (who were of a Parallel Order) Thirdly Teachers; and the difference of power in Apoſtles and Evangeliſt's, is by Subordination; but Chriſt hath not ſet the like Subordination of Courts.

2. It is proved from what the Presbyterial Principles themſelves Reject: An Inſtitution is required by them in the caſe of Subordination of Biſhops, Archbiſhops, Popes in their arguing againſt them and their power: Yea, and by the Epiſcopal Writers themſelves, who when it is objected, that if there may be a Biſhop, and an Archbiſhop over him, why not a Patriarch over Archbiſhops, and a Pope over all? They deny this, and Reject a Patriarch or Pope (although theſe Popes ſhould Renounce Infallibility) as not warranted by the Word. They ſay, an higher and more Univerſal Subordination, alters the caſe. And the uſual exception againſt this Subordination of ſuch Church-Governours, is that in Scripture, we read neither of the Name of an Archbiſhop, nor of the thing, and therefore not of a Subordination. The like may be ſaid of thoſe; where read we of Councils Provincial, National, Names or Things? Yea, and in this way of arguing (in this Reſpect) the Diſadvantage is on this ſide rather; for we are ſure that once there was in the Church, ſuch a Subordination in Church-Officers, Evangeliſts over Paſtors, Apoſtles over Evangeliſts (only they were extraordinary, and ſo no Patterns.) But of ſuch Subordinations of Councils in an Ariſtocratical way, there is nothing to be found.

3. It is argued from like and juſt reaſon, in other Societies and Bodies politick. In all Kingdoms and Commonwealths, well ordered and conſtituted, there is, and ought to be a ſet and expreſs Order by the Laws, both of the number and bounds of Courts of Judicatory, from whom, and to whom Appeals are made, and in what caſes, &c. And if this Subordination ſhould be ſet forth, and fixed by the Law, is as neceſſary as the Laws and Rules by which Men in a Kingdom are to be Governed. The Wiſdom of the Law doth Judge it not enough to appoint ſeveral kind of Officers, as to ſay, Councellors, Serjeants, Judges; but deſigneth alſo, and appoints ſeveral Courts, with their power and bounds, the Deſignment of which (eſpecially ſtanding Courts being made up of theſe) is a matter of much more Moment, than the other. Yea, and ſtill the greater and higher ſuch Courts and Aſſemblies are, having amplitude of power over others, the more expreſs Evidence and Warrant for their power, there is and ought to be; as for Parliamentary power, and the priviledges thereof. And this is evident, as from the Example of all Kingdoms, ſo from what the Scripture ſpeaks of the conſtitution of them. Each part of the Subordination of ſuch power in all Government, both was and is called a Creation of Men in things Humane, whether it be in a Monarchical or Ariſtocratical way, 1 Pet. 2. Submit your ſelves to every Humane Creation.

And he ſpeaks there evidently of (and therefore thus ſtileth) the Subordination of powers in a Common-wealth, whether Officers or Courts, for it follows, whether unto the King as Supream, or unto Governours, as thoſe that are ſent by him, &c. and ſo have Subordinations of power under him, now Parallel, Spiritual and Eccleſiaſtical Government with this. As in the rearing of an Humane fabrick and contignation of power, there muſt be an Ordinance or Creation from Man, when God hath left the framing of it (as in this caſe he hath) ſo this Subordination being in Divine power, there muſt be a Divine Inſtitution of it, beſides that of the Diſtinction of the Officers themſelves.

4. It is argued from like Reaſon with Chriſt's Inſtitution, Matth. 18. If in a particular Church, Chriſt hath preſcribed the ſeveral Subordinations of proceedings, and ſet forth the Degrees, Bounds, and Order of them; then much more it is required in theſe, by how much a larger extent of power is committed to them. The Firſt Rule in Matth. 18. for proceeding, is, If thy Brother offend thee, tell him thy ſelf: Then 2. Take two or three, and if he hear not them, then 3. Tell the Church. If there were a Thouſand Brethren in a Congregation, a Man were not bound, nor were it orderly in an ordinary and ſet way, to take, as the Church ſhall pleaſe, firſt two or three, and then ten, and then twenty, and ſtill the like proportion of a greater and greater number, ere he comes to the Church it ſelf: But Chriſt hath ſet the Order, and his Wiſdom ſaw it meet thus to deſign, and limit the proceedings in a particular Church: And it had been much more neceſſary, to have appointed the like about theſe more general and greater Aſſemblies; becauſe every one of theſe Courts (intended) have the power of a Sentence and Judgment, whereas thoſe two or three, proceed but in a way of Admonition, in order to a Superior Court. Shall he take care of Congregations (which are eſteemed the meaneſt) and not for theſe, of which if he ſhould not have ſet the bounds of power, and the Subordination thereof? None would know what belongs to them, who is in fault, if offences be not corrected; now would any know whom firſt to Appeal unto, I will appeal to the National Aſſembly firſt, ſays one, and am not bound to the Claſſical or Provincial: Another would ſay, I will appeal to a general Council, which can beſt judge, and will be ſure to make an end of it. Why ſhould any be hindred from going, per ſaltem, if Chriſt hath not ſet forth, and obliged us to theſe Subordinations in their Order?

5. In the Churches of the Jews, the Subordinations that were, were ſet forth and Determined, by Inſtitution or Example, how many Courts there ſhould be, and where to reſt. There were the Courts of the Cities and the Towns; and then their Synhedrim, to which the cauſe was to be carryed, if it were too hard for their particular Courts, Deut. 17. In the New Teſtament, we have for removing Scandals, a Congregational ſtanding Court and Government (or be it a Claſſical ſtanding Presbytery, over many Congregations, as our Brethren ſay) and we have an example alſo, of going out from a particular ſtanding Church, whether the one or the other electively to another Church or Churches, when Diviſions are therein (which Acts 15. holds forth) but ſtill for ſuch ſtanding Subordinations and Courts, as theſe out of this Church nothing at all. If there had been any National Synhedrim, a ſet and conſtant Judicatory; then Chriſt would have appointed it as he had done before, but he hath not, no example, no conſtitution holds it forth, which is the ſecond. And

I come now to prove, that theſe Subordinations of Synods, have not the leaſt Warrant and Deſignments of them in the Word of God.

1. The New Teſtament is ſilent in it. And if it be ſaid, that all Nations were not then converted, when the Apoſtles Wrote: It is anſwered, that God in the Old Teſtament, took care aforehand to ſet the Order when they had no Cities, nor were ſetled in the Land. And accordingly, if the Apoſtles had not lived to ſee that which might occaſion ſuch an Inſtitution or Precept; yet they would ſome way have left order for time to come.

2. But Secondly, Though the Apoſtles lived to ſee many Famous particular Churches Erected in a Province, as well as in Cities; in a Nation, as in Judea, in Aſia, in Creete, there were many Cities and Churches in each: And although all the People in thoſe Countries, were not Chriſtians nor Members of Churches; yet there was matter for the moulding and caſting them into theſe Subordinations, as well as now in France, where not the third part are Proteſtants; or in the low Countries, where not the Tenth part of the Inhabitants are Members of their Churches. It had been as neceſſary to have appointed them. They ſet up, and appointed all needful Remedies, for ordering the Churches after them, when they ſhould be gone: And 'tis more ſtrange, that in the caſe of the ſpreading of Errors, they ſhould not Write to Churches as gathered into Synods, and as having the ſtanding power to prevent and ſuppreſs them (if ſuch Ordinary ſtanding Aſſemblies Armed with coercive power, had been then in that exiſtence as now.) That upon no occaſion, this ſhould be done, when yet they had occaſions.

Take the Seven Churches in Aſia, Epheſus, Thyatira, Smyrna, &c. with the reſt of the Churches therein, a Province, called therefore Proconſular Aſia, and though therein we find many great Diſorders, and ſome in Doctrine (the more proper Work of theſe ſtanding Synods) yet we ſee that Chriſt Writes only to each of theſe Churches apart; and Reproves each, for the Diſorder in Each: Whereas had they been one Church, in ſuch a ſtanding Aſſociation for Government, and had had ordinary Provincial and National Aſſemblies extant, as now, the Reproofs would have been eſpecially directed thereunto. As if Errors and Diſorders were in the claſſical Churches (as thoſe all are pretended to be) of Scotland, the chief Rebuke would now more juſtly fall upon the National and Provincial Aſſemblies as their conſtitution is.

3. Yea Thirdly, The Holy Ghoſt would have at leaſt vouchſafed to theſe or ſome other Churches that were in like manner in a Nation or Province, as Galatia, &c. in Reſpect of ſuch a Combination, the Name of a Church, who muſt have had according to the Principles of this Government, ſo much of the power of a Church. But no where are the Churches in a Province called a Church, but Churches in the plural: And if the leſſer Churches, then theſe; yea, rather theſe, having moſt of the power, ſhould therefore rather have had moſt of the name. Yea, and by how much the Church-power thereof, ſhould have been moſt independent (as a Nation is) and ſo come moſt eminently within that Rule, Tell the Church (from which words, theſe pretend their power; and yet cannot ſhew ſo much Title thereto, as to have the Name Church given them) let a Rational account be given of this.

CHAP. V.

The Second Argument againſt Subordination of Synods, that it would introduce a Foreign Eccleſiaſtical Power over every State and Kingdom. The Third Argument, that there is no conſtant ſtanding Rule, by which ſuch a Subordination ſhould be ordered and managed.

Arg. 2. IF there be ſuch a Subordination of Synods in the Church of Chriſt, then there is no Independency, but in an Oecomenical Council : Which firſt would bring in a Foreign Eccleſiaſtical Power over each State and Kingdom. And Secondly, which therefore of all other, ſhould have its Deſignation and Exiſtence in the Word, and is more needful, than all the other two ſorts of Synods mentioned; for if any ſhould be Extant, then that which is Remedium efficaciſſimum. 'Tis ſaid, there is wanting Remedium efficax, if theſe Subordinations be not; but according to theſe Principles, there is wanting that which is the moſt Efficacious Remedy, if a General Council be not extant. For if there be not a Reſting in a claſſical Presbytery, but Provincial alſo muſt be, and appealed to; neither are they reckoned Efficacious enough, but there muſt be National alſo, upon this Suppoſition, that the greater Aſſembly hath more of the promiſe and aſſiſtance of Chriſt, than the leſſer; then of all other, a General Council muſt be ſuppoſed in a Tranſcendent manner above all the reſt, to have the promiſe of Aſſiſtance made to it, and ſo to be the moſt eminently Efficacious (if not the only) Remedy on Earth; yea, and only to be Reſted in, being that which only is the ultimate. Some of the Papiſt's, they gave this to ſuch a General Council, that it cannot err; but according to theſe Principles of Presbyterial Divines, though it might err, yet it is ſuppoſeable to be Tranſcendently more irrefragable, than all the other under it; and God more with it, than with all the reſt: And therefore God in his Word, would have given eſpecial Order for this, above all other; and the ſame God that ſuits his Providences to his Inſtitutions, would not have fail'd in what is the moſt Soveraign Remedy of all other, that it might have been exiſtant in all Ages; as we ſee his promiſe was to the Jews, to keep their Land, when the Males thrice a year went up to the General Aſſembly at Jeruſalem. But for 300 years, the Churches wanted them, and could not enjoy them, and they are adjudged, therefore not neceſſary to the Government of the Church, which yet according to theſe Principles, muſt have been the moſt neceſſary of all the reſt. Yea, and further elſe, Thirdly, there muſt be an Injurious Independency ſet up in a National Synod; For when a Man hath Appealed from one Court to another, and comes to this National, that is, the ultimate exiſtant, and upon the Sentence thereof, comes next to be Baniſht out of a Nation, to have his Eſtate forfeited, to the Ruine of himſelf and Poſterity; then it is he moſt of all needs the Relief of an higher Remedy, more Efficacious, than all thoſe he hath gone through (if ſuch an one may be) yet then he is left Remedileſs, and (according to thoſe Principles) left more unſatisfied than ever; becauſe, thinks he, there is by God's Appointment, a Court that hath more of God, and of Chriſt in it, than all theſe to Judge of the Truth and Right; and Lo it is not, nor can ever be expected.

Let it be withal conſidered, that when God appointed a Subordination of ſtanding Courts, he withal deſigned out which ſhould be the Supream, and made it the Ultimate: And the Supremacy and Independency of it, in a Set and Standing way, was his Inſtitution, as much as the appointment of the Court it ſelf: So that he was to be put to Death, that obeyed not the Sentence of it, and all Appeals were thereby cut off. Therefore if a National Church, doth take upon it to be an Independent Church, upon the Sentence thereof, to have the extreameſt puniſhment executed (but that of Death) that in a Nation Men are capable of it, had need, for the quieting of all Men's Spirits, that muſt ſubmit to it, not only ſhew a Warrant from God, to be an Eccleſiaſtical Judicatory; but alſo to be the Supream Court, as the Synhedrim was, that Appeals ſhould be made unto.

Arg. 3. To that end Thirdly, Let it be examined, what Set Rules there is, or may be ſuppoſed to be of theſe Subordinations, and their Bounds, and the Ultimate Independency in a National Church; which ſhould be fetcht from ſome ſtanding conſiderations, which the word Warrants: God never having conſtituted a Church, but he gave the bounds thereof. All variation of Church-power, is from God. The alteration of the Government of his People the Jews from a Family Government (which had been under the Law of Nature) to National in Moſes his time, was by expreſs appointment: And as himſelf made and conſtituted it a National Church, ſo there was an Eccleſiaſtical Government framed by himſelf, ſuited thereunto. And in the New Teſtament, there is a Reed to meaſure the Temple, Rev. 11. 1. a Rule to ſet out the limits of Church-power, as well as under the old. And therefore the Argument is framed thus:

That Church-power which cannot ſhew a ſet and conſtant Divine Rule for its Variation and Subordination, and Ultimate Independency, is not of God, and ſo May not be. But this Variation of Church-power into theſe Subordinations, cannot ſhew any ſuch ſteady conſtant Rule for theſe things. Therefore, &c.

The Major is evident from what hath been ſaid. The Minor is made good by a removal of all particulars, that may be ſuppoſed to be the Square of framing theſe Subordinations, &c.

1. Not that Rule, that the greater number or company of Churches, ſhould Rule and Govern the leſs; and that the whole ſhould Rule the part, is a ſufficient ſquare, by which to Frame theſe Subordinations.

For then, 1. There would be as many ſeveral Subordinations, as there can be ſuppoſed Variations of greater Numbers; and that will ariſe to more than theſe three only. Every New greater company, would conſtitute a New Synod. 2. Where is the promiſe of God, that he will be more with the greateſt part of them that profeſs Chriſtianity, rather than with a few, ſo far as to conſtitute a New Power and Government? Yea, 3. The greater number of Churches profeſſing Religion, are more corrupted; the pure Churches are fewer. It had been ill for Philadelphia and the Angel, and Elders thereof, if thoſe ſeven Churches in Aſia, had been caſt into ſuch a Subordinate Aſſociation for Government, to be exerciſed by the Angels and Elders of all the other ſix Churches, with the reſt in Aſia. And the like may be ſaid of the purer Reformed Churches in Germany; if the greater number of thoſe that yet were True Churches, ſhould have Ruled the leſſer; then (Lutherans and Calviniſts, being bound to this Government) the Lutherans (being alſo True Churches, and yet the more in number) would by vertue of this Law, have ſoon corrupted the purer. And what reaſon can be pretended (according to this Rule and the Principles of this Government) to leave any True Churches out of an Aſſociation? 4. Suppoſe there ſhould be as many Elders and Churches, more purely Reformed in one Province or Shire, as in the reſt of a whole Nation beſides (as inſtance might be given in ſome of the Reformed Churches that there are) why ſhould not God be thought to be as much with them, as with the National Aſſembly ? And if all are to give themſelves up to this Law, how will the greater, which is the woſe, either corrupt the purer, or expreſs them ? 5. If Qua greater, then the Decrees of greater ; (viz. General Councils) in former Ages ſhould bind us more than National or Provincial now ; for they ſhould have had more of Church in them (by this Rule) and ſo more of Chriſt ; and then take all General Councils, that ſet up Popes and Biſhops, and all other Superſtitions. If it be ſaid, we choſe them not ; yet ſtill that is not the ground makes their Decrees leſs Divine, or obliging to us ; but it lies in the Authority of God's Ordinance, that they were the greater and more General Councils. And however, ſtill if this be the Rule, that the greater number of Churches, Rule the leſs ; then take the meaſure of this greatneſs and number of Churches from Time, ſtretching the Line over all Ages paſt, as well as from the greater number of Churches in ſuch or ſuch a place, or Nation in the preſent times ; and ſo look what General Councils, for moſt Ages of the World did Eſtabliſh, ſhould (by vertue of this Law) oblige the preſent times, and have more force upon us, than the Univerſal Church in this preſent Age ; much more than of any National Aſſembly, if either be ſimply conſidered, under a meer Eccleſiaſtical obligation ; that is, Qua greater, and more of Church : Time varies not the caſe ſo, but that all their Acts, having been Acts of the Church-Univerſal in all Ages, ſhould comparatively ſtand more in force ; but however, the Acts of any of the laſt General Councils will ſtand in force, until a Ceneral Council of like extent, Repeal thoſe Acts, as the Statutes of Parliament of our Anceſtors do, if not Repealed by like and equal Authority.

2. It is not the notion, or the conſideration of their being Churches in ſuch or ſuch a Nation or Province, that can be the Rule of making this Obligation, or ſetting of theſe Bounds. It muſt be conſidered, that the queſtion is of a meer Eccleſiaſtick obligation, by vertue of Church Principles, ſuch as ſhould have been a juſt Rule and Meaſure to the Primitive Churches, e're Princes turned Chriſtian, to have reared up the like Subordinations. Now then the Limits from hence, muſt either riſe from being firſt one Church in a Kingdom, under the ſame civil Government. Or Secondly, One Church in a Nation ; that is, either from a National reſpect, or Political.

1. Firſt in general from neither ; for that inſtance in Acts 15. of the Council there, its Riſe, or the bounds of its Authority, was founded upon either : For if either National or Political Reſpects, ſhould have obliged them, they ſhould have ſent to Syria, or Cilicia, and not Hieruſalem, who were both under a differing Government civil, and of another Nation. But,

2. Secondly, More particularly.

1. Not Qua Church in one Kingdom ; for that is per accidens to a Church, that it grows up to a Kingdom, or that the whole Nation is converted to Chriſtianity ; and therefore a Set Rule for all Times cannot be fetcht from thence. This could not be the certain meaſure of the Independency of Church-power, in the Apoſtles times. 2. This makes the bounds of Eccleſiaſtical Independency and Juriſdiction, uncertain, varying, as the bounds of Kingdoms do vary. When the Roman Empire had all Kingdoms under it, all the Churches muſt then have been obliged, to have had then General ſtanding Councils, ſuited to the extent of the Empire, to have been the next unto the Provincial, for their Supream Judicatory, ſuch as the National are now to the Provincial, or elſe before the Empire turned Chriſtian, there was this Rule, even as many Independencies as Churches : And then again, when this Empire was broken into ten Kingdoms, yea, and many more, there aroſe inſtead of the former, many new Independent Boundaries of Church-power (of which only the queſtion is, and not of that power which a Church doth come to have, and ſimply and alone holds of the Magiſtrate, which will be meerly civil) and then, as Kingdoms vary by Conqueſt ; the like alteration the bounds of Church-power muſt receive. Among the Jews it did not, which when the Church was broken into two Kingdoms, by Gods appointment, yet the Church-State by God's Inſtitution, varied not ; but was ſtill one Church. Laſtly, If this Independency ariſeth from the Magiſtrate, then there is no need of ſuch Subordinations, which is proved by experience in Reformed Churches abroad, who are well enough governed, without theſe Subordinations. Geneva hath no Appeals, but is governed by one claſſical Church; and why may not all other Churches, as well without them, if the Magiſtrate overſees them,and keep each to their Duties? The Churches in the Low Countries, want National Synods, and yet are peaceably governed; yea, ſome for a long time have been without Provincial, and ſay, if they can, they will never have more; and yet are peaceably and quietly Governed. It is as the civil Magiſtrate will Terminate the Independency, and himſelf overlook it.

2. Secondly, If theſe bounds be fetcht from National Reſpects, then in Germany, the Calviniſt's muſt be ſubject to the greater number of Lutherans; and in this Kingdom, all Miniſters muſt make up this Aſſociation, and the greater number will be the worſe, and oppoſe the good. If becauſe the Calviniſts that profeſs a further Reformation, are Diſobliged from Aſſociating with the Lutherans, then thoſe in any Nation, that profeſs a further Reformation than others, are free by the ſame Law. Surely uniformity of Principles, is a more intimate bond of ſuch Aſſociation, than any ſuch outward extrinſecal reſpects. 2. If Qua Nation, then Wales muſt be Independent: 3. If Qua Nation, then 1. If Nation be taken for a People of the ſame Tongue and Kindred, all the Chriſtian Jews in the Primitive Times, when ſcattered into any Nation, were bound to have made one Church Diſtinct, from all the Churches they cohabited with. 2. If for a People dwelling in the ſame National bounds; then the ſame Jews being diſperſed into ſeveral Countries and Nations, muſt have made one Church, with the ſeveral Nations where they lived; whereas Peter in his Epiſtle, and James in his, and Paul to the Hebrews, wrote unto the Jews apart, as Churches in all Nations.

CHAP. VI.

The Fourth Argument againſt Subordination of Synods, that it requireth Repreſentations of Spiritual Power, ariſing from other Repreſentations.

Arg. 4. THAT Government which neceſſarily requireth and produceth Repreſentations, ariſing out of other Repreſentations of Spiritual Power, having a Derived power therefrom, there is no Warrant for. But theſe Subordinations of Synods, Provincial, National, Oecumenical, for the Government of the Church do ſo, &c.

The Major ſhall be ſpoken to, after the Minor Propoſition is both cleared and proved, which is done by putting two things together. 1. That if there be an Authoritative Subordination of all Churches in the Provinces, to a National Aſſembly, and ſo of many Nations to an Oecumenical, binding unto Subjection; that then all in the Provinces, muſt be intereſted in that National, and all in the Nation, in that Oecumenical; ſo as it may be ſaid, that they are all involved and included, and ſo obliged, as it is in Parliamentary power, wherein the Shires are involved. 2. That this intereſt in this Subordination,cannot ariſe but either by immediate choice of thoſe Elders who ſhall Repreſent them, by each Church and Congregation immediately (which is the caſe of our Parliament Men choſen immediately by thoſe they Repreſent) or elſe, that the Provincial Elders ſent by the Congregations, ſhall chooſe out of themſelves, ſome few that ſhall Repreſent the Provinces; and ſo likewiſe the National Aſſemblies, ſhall chooſe out ſome few, that ſhall Repreſent the whole Nation in a General Council. Now the firſt of theſe is not, nor can be: The Congregations meet not for any ſuch immediate choice; but the Elders of them, all chooſe out of themſelves. So as the Obligation of all the Churches, to Subject to a National Aſſembly (ariſing out of thoſe other Subordinations) is not becauſe they are a greater number of Elders or Divines; for in a Provincial Synod, there may be Aſſembled as many, as in the National; but it ariſeth from hence, that ſome out of all, do Repreſent the reſt; and otherwiſe, when a National Aſſembly ſits in a Great City, all other Neighbour-Miniſters muſt come, and Vote with them, and Outvote them who are the Repreſenters of the whole.

Now ſuch a Repreſentation, having a derived Spiritual power from other Repreſentations, is not in matters Spiritual Warrantable. Beſides all Arguments againſt delegated power in matters Spiritual, all Miniſters being immediately Chriſti vicarii, and that all ſuch Repreſentations grow weaker, as Reflections uſe to do, Elders Repreſent the Churches in Claſſical and Provincial Aſſemblies, as being immediately choſen by them; but the Elders in National Aſſemblies, are the Repreſentations of Elders in Provinces, and ſo are a ſhadow of that firſt ſhadow, whereas yet they have the moſt of power, even all that can be ſuppoſed to belong to the whole Subſtance. Beſides ſuch conſiderations, it is argued thus.

Ch. VI.

1. If that theſe few out of Nations, ſhould bind all thoſe Nations in matters Spiritual, and a few out of Provinces, the Nation, they muſt be ſuppoſed to have the the promiſe, and an Aſſiſtance anſwerable. But where is either the promiſe, or can Gifts in a few, be ſuppoſed to produce ſuch an Obligation? 'Tis true, where two or three are gathered together, his promiſe is to be in the midſt of them, and ſo ſuppoſe with more, when more are met; but that his promiſe ſhould be to be with a few out of a Nation, as with the whole Nation; and thoſe not choſen immediately by the Nation, but the Repreſenters of them, cannot be expected. 'Tis granted, that each ſo met, hath the Gifts and Aſſiſtance of an Elder; and ſo the whole, as of ſo many Elders met (as we in this Aſſembly are to be lookt upon, and the Judgment thereof accordingly Reverenced.) But that as they are Elders Repreſentative of Hundreds of other Elders, who themſelves are Repreſenters of Churches, that any ſuch Addition ſhould ariſe to them, by vertue of this Duplicated Repreſentation, over and above what is in their ſingle Gifts and Offices, let either a Warrant be produced, or a promiſe. Two things are allowed them; but a third denied them. 1. It is granted, they may have Aſſiſtance to Judge as Elders, which is their Office. 2. Aſſiſtance to Judge according to their Perſonal Abilities, being thus called to give their Advice. But 3. Such a Superadded Aſſiſtance, as holds proportion to that Spiritual Bulk and Body, which they Repreſent (for ſuppoſe that always it falls out, that the beſt and choiceſt of a Nation, are choſen; yet ſtill not to hold proportion to a whole Nation) there muſt be a more than ordinary promiſe for it, and therefore had need be expreſs and evident. That it is otherwiſe in Common-wealths, is becauſe the Repreſentations, and alſo the power conveyed, being Humane Creations, the Perſons Repreſented, can ſet up a power which ſhall Repreſent them: But this power we ſpeak of, is Supernatural, and muſt be from God, and his Inſtitution. The Synhedrim of Jeruſalem, had a ſpecial Aſſiſtance above all Courts elſe; and therefore God appointed cauſes to be brought to it, which ſpecial Aſſiſtance is intimated twice in the Inſtitution of it, Deut. 17. by this, that they ſhould go up to the place which God ſhould chooſe, ver. 8. and do according to the Sentence which they of that place (which the Lord ſhall chooſe) ſhall ſhew thee. An Emphaſis is put upon the Bleſſing, which by God's Choice and Election, did accompany that place which God had choſen, to put his Name, and promiſed to be in an eminent manner, preſent in, and to accept their Sacrifices there offered (which was a Repreſentative Worſhip of that Nation) and not elſewhere. Now as that was the Repreſentative Worſhip of the Nation, ſo theſe Governours were the Repreſentative Governours of the Nation; and both Sanctified in that place, as the Gift was by the Altar, as that which God had choſen. If the like Inſtitution were found, with the intimation of ſuch a Bleſſing from a peculiar choice of God's, of National Aſſemblies, all ought to ſubject to them in matters Spiritual.

2. If there be ſuch Repreſentations as theſe, in one or few Perſons of many Churches; they have each for that time, whilſt in ſuch an Aſſembly, Archiepiſcopal and Epiſcopal power, and their caſe is Parallel (Parallel then for that time and occaſion, and as met in a Synod) with that of ſo many Biſhops, when met in a Council, whoſe Epiſcopal power, as then and therein met, lies in this, that they are ſo many Churches Repreſentative, eſpecially this would fall out, if theſe Synods ſhould ſtill conſiſt of the ſame Men, or if ſome few ſhould be always choſen to them. And why may there not be ſtanding Perſons, that are more Skillful in ſuch Affairs, through exerciſe uſually choſen, as well as ſtanding Aſſemblies themſelves? And then as touching matters of Juriſdiction in ſuch an Aſſembly, they are for the preſent, the ſame with ſo many Biſhops met in a Convocation.

3. If theſe Repreſentations, having the power of all the Churches in the Nation, were Warrantable, they muſt be a Church. Beſides, that they are no where ſo called (we leave the Uſurpation of that Name, to the Popiſh Clergy) and if ſo, then a Body to Chriſt; for ſo every Church is, and where is Chriſt ſaid to have a Repreſentative Body, of his Body? They are a Church, that is, a company of Elders perſonally gathered, but a Repreſentative Church they are not, cannot be; and yet muſt be, or they have not the power of all the Churches in a Nation in them, nor otherwiſe do their Acts oblige them to Subjection.

CHAP. VII.

Reaſons againſt the Allegation brought, of Acts 15. for the Subordination of Synods, Provincial, National, Oecumenical. And Reaſons againſt the Argument drawn from the Analogy of Matth. 18.

BEſides what hath been ſaid againſt this Example, alledged to prove Presbyterial Acts of Government, by the Elders of the Church of Hieruſalem, in the Reaſons formerly preſent, proving, 1. That that one Example, cannot ſerve to prove both the Presbyterial Government and Synodical; but that if the Aſſembly will lean to the one, the other muſt be quitted. 2. That the Aſſembly was not a formal Synod, but only a Reference by the particular Church of Antioch, of their differences among themſelves, unto this particular Church of Hieruſalem, and no other. It is moreover added, that the Example of it is here further extended, to prove all ſorts of Synods and Subordinations thereof, both Provincial, National, and Oecumenical, and ſo it muſt ſuit all theſe ſo great varieties, when it was not made fit for any one of them.

But if it had been a Synod; yet 1. Neither Provincial, nor National, but the contrary; for Antioch conſults not with the Churches of her own Nation, but ſeeks to Jeruſalem, a Church of Judea, of another Nation, and another Province. 2. Neither is it the inſtance of a ſtanding Synod (which the word Subordination doth neceſſarily infer them to be ſtanding Courts, or elſe the Links of thoſe chains, will not hang together) but Elective; for they ſent, out of Election and choice to them, but about this one queſtion at this time, without any obligation to refer all other matters to them in an ordinary way. 3. Nor is it the Multiplication of Synods, but only of one, in whoſe Judgment thoſe of Antioch reſted. 4. Much leſs is it the inſtance of rearing up of a Subordination, and Contignation of Synods, Superiour and Inferiour, which is a further thing. For though when offences are not healed, and one Reference to other Churches is not ſufficient to cure them, there ſhould be a ſeeking to others; yet the example obligeth the Churches that are in difference, not to take and chooſe the Churches of that Province, either as of that Province, or as the greater number to whom both thoſe among whom the controverſie is, and thoſe to whom it was afore referred, muſt be Subordinarily Subject. Much leſs doth it hold forth, that the Churches of that Province, may judicially challenge a Right of Authority to decide it, and oblige them ſub pœna, to their Determination; and then the Churches of that whole Nation, challenge the like over all. But ſtill it runs in this way only, that thoſe who ſhall be Judged meeteſt and ableſt, and Faithfulleſt to Determine and compoſe it, by thoſe who are to refer it.

The Argument is uſually drawn from like Reaſon, and let there be found like Reaſon, and it is granted; and though it ſelf is not the pattern of a Formal Synod, yet it holds forth this Rule of Equity, that when offences ariſe among Churches, References ought to be made from out of themſelves, to Churches abroad to heal them. But the queſtion is, to what Churches theſe References are to be made, and how? And let the like Reaſon held forth in the Example, be kept unto, and decide it. Say we ſtill to thoſe Churches, the Churches offended or divided, ſhall chooſe as fitteſt and ableſt to determine it. This is clear in the Example; Antioch was not bound to refer it to the Church of Jeruſalem, as greater, or as a next Neighbour, or of the ſame Province; but as beſt able to Judge of the Differences. And this way agrees with the Law of Nature, and of Arbitration, ſo uſual amongſt Men, which God hath there ſet up, as an Ordinance and Pattern of proceeding in ſuch caſes. But this Subordination of Synods intended, holds ſo differing a courſe from this, as 1. In ſtead of Elective Synods and Occaſional, it ſets up Standing, and ſo ſet to be the Judge of the Churches under them for ever. 2. Not in one caſe (as Antioch to Hieruſalem) but in all caſes what ever ſhall fall out. 3. Not in a way of Multiplication or Diverſification, as need ſhall be, but of Subordination and ſetled Superiority; and the grounds of this to be, becauſe the greateſt muſt Rule the leſs, and that they are Neighbour-Churches, in the ſame Province or Nation. And this the like Reaſon, in Acts 15. is ſo far from countenancing, that in all things it is unlike, and ſo there is a differing conſtitution, and Riſe of thoſe Synods thus Subordinate, and what the Reaſon drawn from Acts 15. will warrant; and therefore doth make a differing formal Reaſon in the Government; and Humane Prudence added, will not Rectifie it, when the Reaſon of the Inſtitution is ſo much varied from. For inſtance, if the Fundamental Law for Remedy of Wrongs, and deciding controverſies in any Kingdom, were by Arbitration Elective to take them their Judges, whom the parties in difference judge apteſt every way for the preſent controverſie, and that the Preſidents and Ruled caſes hold forth no more; and if that the Government of another Kingdom were, that the greater ſhould Rule and Determine the cauſes of the leſs, and according to the proportion thereof, to have Subordinate ſtanding Courts erected, to which (by Appeal from the one to the other) all cauſes ſhould be brought: Whether were not theſe two ſuch differing Frames of Government, ſo as that he that would mould the firſt to the ſecond, might not be challenged to ſet up a new Government, differing from the Fundamental Law of that Kingdom? And whether the one is not at liberty to withſtand the Second, if it were vouchſafed to any Kingdom (and that is the caſe here) is humbly Submitted? And the bounds of ſuch Aſſemblies Elective, needed no ſet or ſtanding Rule; becauſe they riſe from occaſional Electiveneſs, in caſe of controverſie and offence, and the extent thereof: And ſo the condition and nature of the things themſelves, do preſcribe their own Limits, and hold forth their own riſe; like as the bounds of particular Congregations, to be of ſuch as live ſo, as conveniently to meet in one place, ariſeth from the Nature of the thing it ſelf, and the neceſſary requiſites thereunto.

I ſhall now conſider the Argument drawn from the Analogy of Matth. 18.

1. The ſtrength of the Argument runs, that becauſe there ſhould be this Remedy, that therefore there is ſuch a Remedy.

2. 'Tis granted there is a Remedy, which is a going forth to other Churches, which Acts 15. holds forth; but that Excommunication (which is the Remedy held forth in Matth. 18.) of the offending Church or Churches, ſhould be the Remedy, is not there held forth, as hath been ſhewn. There is a Remedy of Co-ordination, ſuch as between two Nations, and as between Pares (as Churches are) proceeding in a way ſuitable to their condition, but not this of Subordination, that the greater number of Churches ſhould become ſtanding Courts, and have power to Excommunicate the leſſer; but that all Churches have a power to Declare the offence, and withdraw communion from thoſe Churches. And in Reaſon, how is it poſſible for a National Church, to Excommunicate all the Churches of a Province? And how ineffectual would that be? Or for a General Council to Excommunicate a Nation? And if they cannot uſe this Remedy, to what end is this Subordination of Synods, having this Authority pleaded for?

And whereas 'tis ſaid, that there muſt be the ſame Remedy, that is is in a Congregation for an offending Brother, or elſe where the Diſeaſe is ſtrongeſt, the Remedy is weakeſt: It is anſwered,

1. That where the Diſeaſe is ſtrongeſt, there this, which is called the ſtrongeſt Remedy, cannot be applyed, or with an apparent inefficaciouſneſs; for when the Churches in a Province err, or a National, here the Diſeaſe is ſtrongeſt, and yet it would be in vain to interdict them communion among themſelves, or deliver them unto Satan. Yea, when it comes to the higheſt, and where the Diſeaſe is greateſt and ſtrongeſt, there is not only no Remedy, but the higheſt and greateſt power to do hurt upon all under them; as when the generality of the Clergy were Arrians: And if they err, the error is worſe than of a Pope's erring, or of a Biſhop's, he is but one, and may be Depoſed; and in the greater Bodies of the Clergy, the greater part are, and have been ſtill the worſer, and more corrupt, as is apparent in this Kingdom at preſent, in which (by vertue of the Presbyterial Principles) all Miniſters muſt be taken in; and if you will put them out, where will others be had in their room? Convert

Men we cannot, and if not converted, Miniſters of all others, are the worſt and greateſt oppoſites to Religion: And if a National Aſſembly be choſen by theſe, the greater number are like to be of the worſt, and ſuch as may alter all that you now have done. And if it be ſaid, that this would hold againſt great politick Bodies as well, who may undoe the Common-wealth: The Anſwer is, that the common and equal intereſt of all, and the common Principles of preſerving the Rights and Liberties of a State, and ſeeking the common good, is natural to the generality of Men; but the Truth of the Goſpel and Purity of Religion, and the power thereof, is contrary to the principles of all Natural Men; and in all Ages the moſt of the Clergy have been apteſt to corrupt the one, and oppoſe the other. And in thoſe Ages, when ſuch Councils began to be ſtanding, and in moſt credit, after the firſt 300 years, then was it that the Myſtery of Popery did work moſt powerfully, and thoſe Superſtitious and corrupt Opinions grew up, which made way for the Man of Sin, and that Body of Popiſh Doctrine, that hath overſpread the World. And if there ſhould be no danger of corrupting the Truth; yet the Churches (though Reformed) coming all out of Popery, and not being fully enlightned in all things, and the firſt Notion of any thing further in matters of Theology, uſually falling into the Hearts and Spirits but of a few, we ſhall have no further Truth taught, but Suppreſſed, till a whole Nation is inlightened in it.

2. The Efficacy of all Remedies, doth depend firſt upon Chriſt's Bleſſing on them, which depends upon his Inſtitution of them; and Par Ratio, or like Reaſon will never ſet up an Ordinance, unleſs Chriſt hath himſelf appointed it: And in the example Acts 15. there is not this way of Proceeding held forth. Secondly, it lies inſuitableneſs to the condition of thoſe that are to be dealt with: Now when many Churches deal with an erring Church, the Churches in a Province, with many erring Churches, or of a Nation with a Province, they muſt be in Reaſon dealt with, ſuitably to the condition of Churches, and of a Multitude; and ſurely a Brotherly way of Admonition, and withdrawing Communion, is more ſuitable unto ſuch: As in the civil Government, if a Province Rebelleth, or a great Multitude of Subjects, ſhould the State preſently hang up all in that Province, although unto particular Perſons Rebelling, this is Efficacious to ſuppreſs Rebellion. Thirdly, Chriſt hath ſuited his Remedies unto all times. and unto all conditions; and how National and Provincial Aſſemblies could be during the firſt 300 years, when yet the Churches were all Governed, is ſubmitted.

3. And Laſtly, if the Analogy of this 18*th* of Matth. be argued; then firſt let the Analogy be kept, and then when a Church hath offended other Churches, they are not to bring them to a Set Court of Judicatory at firſt; for Chriſt's Rule is otherwiſe, in dealing with an offending Brother, electively to take two or three Churches, and Admoniſh them, which is ſuited to that way forementioned, Acts 15. But as for the proceedings againſt a Brother in a Congregation, there is not a Set appointed number, of two or three ſtanding Perſons, to be the Admoniſhers of all, e're it comes to the Church, nor have they power to Excommunicate: And thus by this proportion, in ſtead of theſe Set and Standing Provincial Aſſemblies, to whom cauſes are next brought, and theſe Armed with power of Excommunication, there ſhould only be two or three or more Neighbour-Churches, to Admoniſh the offending Church; and not a Stated Court to bring it unto. Secondly, Let it be ſhewn, where a ſtanding Synod of Elders is called the Church; and how then can the Analogy hold, when it holds not in this, the main, Tell the Church? Laſtly, the like reaſon holds not, unleſs theſe particular Congregations have the power of Excommunication; for otherwiſe if theſe greater Aſſemblie's power be argued from the Analogy of the leſſer, and the ſame Remedy, Excommunication, and the particular Congregations have not that allowed them; then by the principles of this Analogy, it is no where to be found, but as the Congregational Churches have a power only to Admoniſh, and to Suſpend to Sacraments, that ſo the greater Aſſemblies ſhould have no more alſo. And though the Church Univerſal, is called a Church, and one Body to Chriſt; yet as materially conſidered, and not as a politick Body, in reſpect to Government; which was never yet aſſerted by this Aſſembly.

The Aſſembly of Divines at Weſtmiſter.

CHAP.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Intercourſe or Communion, which particular Churches are to hold one with another. That there is a Twofold Communion of Saints, the one ariſing from the Relation which they all bear to one another, as Members of Chriſt's Myſtical Body; the other which proceeds from their being formed into particular Churches by Chriſt's Inſtitution. That the Duties of Catholick Communion, which one Believer ows to another, by vertue of their all being Members of the ſame Myſtical Body of Chriſt, thoſe Duties, one, or many Churches, may and ought to perform to another Church.

HAving proved that neither the Church Univerſal, nor a Church as National, or in a Kingdom, nor a Church claſſical of many Congregations aſſociated, are the Subjects and Seats of political power for Juridical cenſures, as Excommunication, &c. but a Congregational Church only: There yet remaineth to be conſidered, what Intercourſe, Communion, and Correſpondency we aſſert, to be between each Church and their Elders, by vertue of any, or all thoſe conſiderations and reſpects. We acknowledge, that by vertue of the conſideration of the Church Univerſal, whereof each Congregation is a part; and by vertue of Churches being in a Nation of the ſame Language, under the ſame civil Government, or living in the ſame Neighbourhood, and being of the ſame Judgment; there is to be a great and near communion to be entertained between all ſuch Churches, and according to ſuch reſpects. This communion is to be obſerved, with ſome more nearly and ſtrictly, and ſuch is the Nature of this communion, as it will oblige all Churches one to another, in a multitude of mutual Duties; which if obſerved, may help to preſerve Churches from running into confuſion, may rectifie miſcarriages, preſerve them from errors, and may Salve all thoſe inconveniences, which uſe to be objected againſt this Aſſertion, of placing only political power in Congregational Bodies.

We lay this for a General Rule; that there is a Twofold Church, and Church Relation, which the New Teſtament holds forth; and anſwerably, a Twofold way of communion. There is firſt, a Church-Myſtical; and ſecondly, there is a Church Political, or a politick Body, which is the Seat of Government by Inſtitution. We ſaid at firſt, that communion of Saints and Churches, do both run along together, in a parallel proportioned communion of Saints, being the Foundation of uniting all into that Body of the Church, and as we ſaid, there is a Twofold Communion of Saints, one fixed for communion in publick Ordinances, the other occaſional, ſo there is a double conſtitution of Church.

1. There is firſt a Church Myſtical, and a communion anſwerable, whether we take it for the inviſible company of the Elect, or for the viſible company of the profeſſors of Chriſtianity, that do walk as Saints throughout the World. The inviſible Church, is acknowledged by all ſorts, to be a Myſtical Body; but it is not only called a Myſtical Body, as it is oppoſed to the Church viſible, but as it is oppoſed to a Church by Inſtitution, that is, a politick Body. The viſible Catholick Church, is not a Body by Inſtitution, as in Heaven it ſhall not be. We acknowledge, that the viſible Saints in a Kingdom, or in a City, may be called the Church, as bearing the reſpect or conſideration, or notion of the Myſtical Univerſal Church (as every part of water bears the Name of the whole) ſo as it is not only the Church Univerſal, that hath the conſideration of a Myſtical Body put upon it; but the ſame conſideration may be put upon any company of Saints, whether ſmaller or greater, in a Kingdom, or in a City, or in a Province. And ſo we believe, that oftentimes when in the New Teſtament, the Saints in ſuch a place are ſpoken of, and called the Church; they are called ſo, Sub conſideratione Myſtica, under that Myſtical conſideration, and not as conſidered as a politick Body; as when it is ſaid, that Saul perſecuted the Church, 1 Cor. 15.9. it was not the Church Univerſal that he perſecuted, it was not a Church under a political conſideration; but it was the Saints in every place, where he came: So when it is ſaid, that Prayers were made by the Church for Peter, Acts 12. 5. it is not ſpoken of them, as a Church congregated for Worſhip, or a Church political; but the meaning is, that the Saints generally in Jeruſalem, and about in Judea, prayed for him, the Saints being there called a Church under that Myſtical conſideration, that the Church Univerſal is called.

Now anſwerably unto theſe two ſeveral conſiderations and notions of Church, whether applyed to the Church Univerſal, or to any parcel of Saints; there is a Twofold Communion, and the Duties are Twofold, which the Saints owe one to another. The one in reſpect of general and Myſtical Relation, as occaſionally they meet, or are caſt together; and the other is as they are formed up into ſeveral Bodies by Chriſt's Inſtitution. This may be exemplified by the like, among Mankind. Take all Mankind, as they are made of one Blood, under the general notion and conſideration of being Men, by vertue hereof, there is a communion that one Man may have with another, and there are Duties that thence do ariſe, and as it is the Law of Nature, ſingly and apart conſidered, which obligeth them, as they are Men; ſo anſwerably there is a communion, and there is a Duty, which every Man oweth to every Man, as a Man, and a Duty which one Man oweth to many Men, conſidered as many, or to a greater number of Mankind; and therefore we ſay, there is the Law of Nature, which holds all the World over, and Laws of Nature, that are Fundamental to Men, as Men: And if you caſt Men into ſeveral Nations, there is the Law of Nations, common to all Nations, as they are Nations, which binds them to Duties, one toward another. But there is another communion that Mankind hath, as they are formed up, and when they are formed up into ſeveral commonwealth, which tho' it be a mutual communion of thoſe commonwealths, one with another; yet it ariſeth not to Government and Authority over one another, but is but ſuitable and anſwerable to that communion, which Men have one with another as Men. Thus in the matter of communion of Saints as Saints, there is a communion which is carryed through all Saints, as it were by the Law of Nature, and that is carryed between theſe Saints, as formed up into ſeveral Bodies or Churches. The ſame kind of communion, holdeth between Church and Church, Elders and Elders, that would hold between Mankind, as formed into ſeveral Common-wealths; and there are Duties which they are obliged unto mutually, for mutual Help, for mutual Strength, &c. There are Aſſociations, and Leagues made to ſeveral purpoſes; and there are Defiances, and Renunciations, when the Laws of Nations, and Nature common to Kingdoms, are broken. Amongſt the Saints, there is a communion betwixt the Saints caſt into the ſame Family, and there are Duties anſwerable and ſuitable; and then there is a communion which the Saints have, conſiſting of many Families united into one Church, and there are Duties agreeable: And there is a communion, and Duties which are to paſs between theſe Saints, as they are Members of a Nation, and as they are Churches in the ſame Nation, and upon many ſuch Reſpects; yea, and alſo as they are parts of the Church Univerſal. Only in this, here lies the difference between us and our Brethren, that they would make the communion which is between all the Saints, and all the Churches in the World, to be as truly political, the leſſer being ſubject to the greater, in the Church Univerſal, or in a Nation, as it is in a particular Congregation, as we would; or as it is in a Church claſſical (according to their Opinion) or as it is in a particular Congregation, as we aſſert it.

Now that there is ſuch a differing kind of communion, the one by way of Authority and Juriſdiction; and the other according to the common Law of Nature (as we may ſo expreſs it) is evident by the Principles of either ſide. For the Preſbyterian Divines, who hold National Churches, in a political conſideration (when Churches come up to that number, as to make a Nation, and ſo ſeveral Nations, ſeveral National Churches) yet hold, that there is a communion to be held between theſe, and an obligation to a multitude of Duties; yea, and an uniformity that is to be between theſe, when yet they will not ſay, that the one hath Authority, or power of Juriſdiction over the other. As for inſtance, if you take the National Church of Scotland, and the National Church of England, or if you ſuppoſe that there were but two Churches in the World, there would be a great deal of communion held between the one and the other, and ought to be, when yet the one could not aſſume a power over the other; but each retains a power of Juriſdiction intire within themſelves. This different kind of communion, appears likewiſe by this, that there are Duties which one Saint oweth to another, upon meer Moral grounds, as that a Man ſhould pray with, and pray for a Saint, and build him up in his Holy Faith, and Admoniſh him; and not let Sin lie upon him, or withdraw from him, if he do not Repent, &c. So that if there were but two Saints in the World, which could not make a politick Church, they would owe all theſe Duties one to another; but not upon a ground of Inſtitution, as a Duty of the Second Commandment, but as of a Duty the Second Table, which bindeth us to love our Neighbour as our ſelves. And ſo if there were no Congregations or Churches in the World, the Saints would upon ſuch a conſideration, owe to one another abundance of Duties. Yea, indeed there is almoſt no Duty that is practiſed in a Congregation, by way of Inſtitution; but a Duty of a like kind upon another ground, is required occaſionally of Saints one to another. Men that have Preaching Gifts, might exerciſe them occaſionally, to the edification of others in a Natural way, where there was not a Church, nor Officers of a Church; and yet God hath took up Preaching into an Office, made a calling on purpoſe for it, by way of Inſtitution. So, to avoid any Man that walketh inordinately, to inſtruct him, to reprove him, are Duties which one Saint oweth to another, and one Saint to many Saints, and many Saints, to any Saint; which kind of Diſcipline, the Saints did practice one toward another, in the Biſhop's times, and had a Warrant ſo to do, in the Word of God; but all this did run, as it were by the Law of Nature, in a Moral way, by vertue of the Second Table, and the Duties of it. But as Jeſus Chriſt hath by Inſtitution, formed up his Saints into ſeveral Churches (ſo that ſuch Bodies are by Inſtitution) He hath ſtamped all ſuch Duties, as are amongſt Chriſtians by this general Law of Nature, with an Inſtitution over and above that former meer Natural or Moral conſideration. He hath here appointed one Brother to Admoniſh another, in order to bring him up to that Church he belongs unto, to a cenſure; and he hath Ordained publick Perſons, that ſhould be by way of Office Admoniſhers in publick; and that ſhould Admoniſh with Authority, and with ſuch an Authority put upon that Admonition, as thus performed, as is not to be found in all the Saints in the World, if they ſhould Admoniſh a Man. There is not only a withdrawing (which one Saint may do from another, though there was no way of Church-Fellowſhip) but there is Superadded, an Inſtitution of caſting out; and not only ſo, but a delivering unto Satan, which all theſe Saints in the World cannot do; for what power had they, unleſs it be from a promiſe annexed to an Inſtitution, to deliver a Man to the Devil, for him ſeize upon a Man's conſcience, when he is thrown out.

See the Scotch Reaſons for Uniformity.

Hence therefore the Saints formed up into Congregations, with their Elders, being to us, the only Eccleſiaſtical Body by Inſtitution; an inſtituted Authority and Power of Juriſdiction, is found only anſwerably in them; and all other Relations of Saints and Churches one to another, fall only under a Myſtical conſideration, and therefore their Communion and their Power, is anſwerable. The one runneth in a way of ſpecial Inſtitution; the other, Modo Myſtico, in a way of Myſtical Communion: To the one, the Ordinance of Excommunication, is therefore only proper and peculiar, to the other a withdrawing, or a Non-communion appertains.

1. Hence therefore in the firſt place, we do grant and acknowledge, that many of the ſame Duties and Actions, which performed in a particular Church, do riſe up to Juriſdiction, are and may be performed by a greater number of Churches to another Church; but only Modo Myſtico, in a way of Myſtical Communion, becauſe the Relation is ſuch; and yet the Duties may be the ſame, and the Actions the ſame. A greater number of Churches, may Admoniſh another Church, they may caſt out another Church from their Communion and Aſſociation; but all this will not ariſe to a Juridical power of Excommunication. They may declare Men to be perverters of the Faith, to be Hereticks, ſo as to fulſil the Apoſtles Rule, not to eat with them, or bid them God ſpeed, John 2. 10, 11. and yet in all this, it doth not ariſe to aſſuming Juriſdiction.

2. We acknowledge in the ſecond place, that in ſuch Actions of many Churches toward one Church, there is an Impreſs of Authority, taking it in a larger Senſe, for that which hath a perſwaſiveneſs, and an inducement in it; but it will not ariſe to an Authority Juridical, ſuch as Jeſus Chriſt hath placed in them, as they are a political Body: But for that power which is placed by Chriſt, by vertue of an Inſtitution, there is a Superadded Authority of Jeſus Chriſt, beyond the force of Moral or Rational Inducements; and the conſcience is to be ſubject to the Power and Authority therein, as unto the power of Chriſt, for his Will and Inſtitution ſake. If we take the Elders of one Congregation, beſides all the conſiderations that are common to them, with all other Elders and Sains in the World, there is an Authority ſtamped by Chriſt upon them, by vertue of their Relation and Office, ſo as the Members of that Congregation, are to be ſubject to them, not only upon Moral grounds, but on account of that Authority with which Chriſt hath inveſted them: And in the Acts that they do (Admonitions, caſting Men out, Excommunication and the like) there is an Efficacy to be expected, which is in no other order of Men in the World, if they would undertake the like. The Difference of theſe two powers may appear, by Abſtracting all Rational or Moral Inducements. 1. This Authority of the Elders, is more than Authority by way of Reaſon, or by ones alledging an expreſs Rule out of the Word, which a Man's conſcience may apprehend by Faith, from the Mouth of him that doth direct him, or lay it before him. Another Man's Wife or Servant, may Subject her ſelf to the guidance of a Reaſon, or of a Scripture, that is brought by another Man, who yet hath not Authority added to it, ſuch as her Husband hath, when he addeth a command thereunto beſides. A Child is ſaid to lead one New Converted, Eſa. 11.6. But in this caſe, it is meerly the Authority of the Word or Reaſon alledged, that the conſcience ſubjects it ſelf to, without any further reſpect to any thing in the propounder. 2. The Authority of Juriſdiction, which is in a particular Church, is more than the Authority of Reverence or Reſpect, to the Grace or Judgment of another, founded upon whatever conſiderations, beſides the Inſtitutions of Chriſt. There are many conſiderations, that may breed Reverence to another, as their Grace and their Holineſs, and the power of their Gifts, as Herod Reverenced John Baptiſt, and feared him, becauſe he was an Holy Man. Thus a Man's Wife may be induced to obey the command of one that is a Miniſter, though not her Miniſter, ſhe knowing him to be a Judicious Man, and a Man of much Holineſs; but yet ſtill, this doth not ariſe to a power given from Chriſt Juridically, by way of Inſtitution, over and above ſuch Reſpects. It is not ſuch a power, as her own Miniſter hath over her, and for which, ſhe is to reſpect and regard him; neither is it ſuch, as her own Husband hath over her. The Judgment of many Miniſters Aſſembled, hath an Authority of Reverence in it, becauſe they are Wiſe; yea, and becauſe they are the Miniſters of Chriſt, by whoſe Judgments, Jeſus Chriſt leadeth Men into Truth; and as they are Miniſters of Chriſt, they have a ſpecial Bleſſing accompanying of them, and all ſuch Reſpects the Conſciences of Men are to take in to move them to yield to what they declare and determine: Yet, ſtill this doth not ariſe to the conſideration of Juridical Authority, which they have from Chriſt, over thoſe whom they would guide, but ſuch a Man's own Elders have. 3. There are many conſiderations, which may make a Man to Subject himſelf, to what another ſaith, which yet doth not riſe to Juridical Authority. A Man in the caſes of Scandal, and offending of a Church or a Brother, may forbear to do that which is in his liberty to do; but the Brother offended, hath not Authority Juridical over the other; for it is but an accidental conſideration.

3. In the Third place, we acknowledge that by vertue of this Myſtical communion, the Churches hold one with another, in their Mutual Tranſactions one with another, they are to look on them as Churches, and on the Elders, as inſtituted by Chriſt, and not only as Holy; but yet ſtill they are not to regard them, as having an Inſtituted Authority given them by Chriſt, over this or any other Churches. Thus when Paul would put a weight upon his commendation of Titus, he put it upon this; that he was one, whoſe praiſe was in all the Churches, and that he was choſen by the Churches, to carry the Alms. And therefore of old, in the Letters that were wrote from one Church to another, were Superſcribed as from the Churches (as in Clement's Epiſtle, the Stile runs thus, The Church of Rome, to the Church of Corinth) and they do deal with them, as one Church of Chriſt dealeth with another; and as having the Authority and Spirit of a Church with them, in their Admonitions, in their Reproofs, in their Directions, or the like; but ſtill it riſeth not to Juriſdiction. As if one Kingdom or State, doth deal with another State, they look on it as ſuch, and accordingly Reſpect it, and their Mediations or whatever other interpoſitions of theirs, are directed to them, not only as a company of Men, but as they are a State: And yet ſtill it riſeth not up to any Juriſdiction, that one State hath over another. And ſo alſo in the Tranſactions of Elders of other Churches, unto any Member of a Church, or to the Church it ſelf, over which they are not Elders, they yet are to be looked upon as Elders, and accordingly reſpected in their Admonitions, and in their Judgments; but ſtill it riſeth not to Juriſdiction. If a Noble Man comes from one Kingdom to another, as the Nobles of Scotland, as Commiſſioners into England; they are to be Reſpected and Regarded as Nobles, according to their Place and Quality, by the Law of Nations, and the Law of Nature, and communion of one State with another; but ſtill they are no way to be regarded, as having Juriſdiction, or exerciſing the Office of Nobles where they come, as the Nobles of England do.

4. In the 4th place, we do grant that other Churches may deal with any Church (as occaſion is) as in the Name of Chriſt; and Admoniſh them, Reprove them, and the like: But they deal in Chriſt's Name, in this Senſe, that they intreat them by vertue of that Name of Chriſt, which is called upon by them, and which in a common way, all do profeſs, and which would be thus and thus Diſhonoured: But they deal not with them in the Name of Chriſt, in this ſenſe, as if they had a Juridical power from Chriſt, to deliver them up to Satan, ſuch as the Church at Corinth had, when met together, over the Inceſtuous Perſon, 1 Cor. 5.

5. In the 5th place, it may ariſe to an Authority of commanding, and that in the Name of Chriſt; and anſwerably it ariſeth to be the Duty of that Church to be ſubject, and to obey them. In 1 Cor. 16. 16. (ſays the Apoſtle) I beſeech you, ſubmit your ſelves unto ſuch, and to every one that helpeth with us, and laboureth. He ſpeaks of Miniſters, thoſe that Labour in the Goſpel. It's the ſame word with that which is uſed of Subjection to a Mans own Elders, in Heb. 13. 17. And yet it is not Subjectio legalis, a Subjection by Law of Authority, (as Eſtius Diſtinguiſheth it) ſuch as a Man hath to his own Biſhop (ſaith he) but Moralis; Qualem reverentes præſtamus virtute excellentibus. But a Moral Subjection, ſuch as we yield in Reverence, to thoſe who excel in vertue. So as all Elders are to have in all Churches, the Reverence of Elders; and yet but ſuch as a Church, conſidered as ſuch, hath, and is to have from all other Churches. It is Reverenced, as a Church indeed, and as a Siſter Church, but not as having that Authority over another Church, which it hath over its own Members, and ſuch an Authority all the Churches in the World have not over one Church; as all the Imperial Cities of Germany have it not over one City. So as the queſtion is not, whether there be not an obligation ariſing from the Admonitions and Judgments of many Churches, and the Elders of them, and alſo a Duty commanded from Chriſt; upon all ſuch conſiderations as have been mentioned: Yet ſtill ſo far, and no farther, than ſuch grounds will carry it, is this Duty to be laid upon a Church, and a Subjection called for, as Jeſus Chriſt himſelf lays it upon them. They are to be Subject, not only becauſe theſe Churches do preſent to them, in the Name of Chriſt, what is their Sin, or what is their Duty; but further, they are to take into their conſideration, their being Churches, and Churches Inſtituted by Chriſt, with whom the Bleſſing of Chriſt is to lead them into Truth, and to regard the Elders of Churches, as Perſons with whom he is in a more peculiar manner preſent. But yet ſtill they are not bound in ſuch a Subjection to them, as to their own Elders, who are by Inſtitution, ſet over them, and to whom they have a Special Relation, Acts 20. 28. If a Paſtor of another Congregation ſhould come, and is admitted to Preach for his Brother Elder in any Congregation; they are to hear him as an Elder, but yet not to hear him with that ſpecial peculiar Subjection, which by vertue of Chriſt's Inſtitution, a Congregation ows to their own Paſtor.

CHAP.

CHAP. IX.

The ſeveral Duties of Communion, which one Church ows to another, Enumerated. That this Communion doth not include in it, that one Church may exerciſe any Act of Juriſdiction over another.

HEnce then all ſort of Duties, that the Law of Love and Brotherly Union can any way exact or extend to, and that are founded thereupon in the Word of God, of Saints to Saints, and Church to Church, we approve of, and Judge ought to be held by any Church, to all Churches in the World; which we take to be the true meaning of that Scripture, in Epheſ. 4. 16. that the whole Body of the Church being joyned together, every part is to edifie every part, and the whole, upon all occaſions, and in all ways poſſible; but it is in ways of Brotherly Love, it is not with a Spiritual Rod, but of coercive cenſure and juriſdiction. The Bonds and Tyes of Law, are acknowledged, not Rods and Whips of coercive cenſure, and Juriſdiction Sub pæna Traditionis Satanæ, under the penalty of delivering to Satan.

1. Thus firſt, They are to afford part of their Spiritual good things, as occaſion is, to all or any Church: So by vertue of that communion, the Church of Philippi, was bound to cauſe to be read, as much as in them lay, that Epiſtle which was Writ to them in the Church of Laodecea alſo, which was one of the Aſian Churches; yet that their cauſing that Epiſtle to be received by the Laodeceans, was not by any Juriſdiction, but by communion of good things.

2. There may be communion in whatever is matter of meer priviledge in any Church; but not in Juriſdiction. Yea, there may be Aſſociations, and Leagues of Friendſhip, as between two States, when yet not Subjection, thus between Kingdoms, a mutual intercourſe of Trade. As he that was free of Rome, was free all the World over, and he might come and Trade in any other Kingdom; ſo any that are Members of ſuch Churches as profeſs both, for receiving in of Members, and caſting out of Members, to go according to the Rule of the Word, may occaſionally receive the Sacrament in any Church truly conſtituted, and bring their Children to be Baptized, and may partake of all the Ordinances; for this is only to partake of the common priviledges, but they are not to exerciſe any act of power or puniſhment, when they come to thoſe other Churches; as if a Miniſter were to be choſen, or a Member to be thrown out, or Suſpended from the Sacrament, they are not to take upon them, to have a voice in it. Between two Families, there may be communion of good things, without exerciſing of Acts of Power and Authority; when as one Family doth not take upon them, to exerciſe Authority in the other Family, as not to chaſtiſe the Children, to diſpoſe of parties in Marriage; nor is there any communion in conjugal Acts. So in Common-wealths, there is a communion of things communicable, as to afford Men, Money, and Aſſiſtance, to give Subſiſtence to any one that will live in a Stranger Kingdom: But they are not admitted to choice of Magiſtrates, to Judge of Cauſes, to be of a Jury in any Nation, but their own.

3. Alſo Thirdly, There is that Brotherly communion between Churches, that whom one Church denies communion with, having caſt him out by a juſt cenſure, all the reſt of the Churches do Reject him alſo; which was an uſual practice in the primitive times, as often Cyprian Writes to other Churches, ſaying, Abſtinuimus, we have abſtained from ſuch or ſuch a Man, that they might have warning not to admit communion with him. And this ſeems to be one great end of Synods, as appears from the fifth Cannon in the Nicene Council before cited. And the Reaſon is fetched from that principle, which both Mr. Cartwright, and Didoclavius aſſert, that we have communion with the Univerſal Church, by means of being joyn'd to a particular Church; for communion with the Univerſal Church, we cannot have immediately, and yet by vertue of a particular Church, we enjoy the ſame kind of Ordinances, as if the whole Univerſal Church ſhould meet together: Hence therefore, as we have communion with the whole Univerſal Church, by having communion with a particular Church, ſo we are caſt out of all Churches, by vertue of being caſt out of one; the truſt being committed by Chriſt, to particular Book 3. ch. 8. pag. 148. Of this Diſcourſe.

Altar. Damaſcen. cap. 10. pa. 853.

Churches:

Ch. IX.

Churches: And the Law of Eccleſiaſtical Society, and Brotherly communion between Churches, requires it; that if they be caſt out by one, they are Rejected by all; for there is that Sympathy and Concordance between all the Members of this Body, as one Body, and ſo between particular Churches, as Members of this whole, that as when one Member ſuffers, all ſuffers; when one Member rejoyceth, all rejoyceth, ſo whom one Church caſteth out, all Churches caſteth out, and whom one receives, all receives by vertue of this communion. Or if, when it is bound by a particular Church, it is bound in Heaven, then all the Earth over too; all Churches being to Reverence the Act and Judgment of a particular Church, with whom Chriſt hath betruſted the Keys. So as all the Churches do not Reject ſuch an one, by an Act of Juriſdiction, or of intereſt in the Juriſdiction, but by the Law of communion; and by the like Law, that there is among Kingdoms, where there is Leagues Offenſive and Defenſive, to be Enemies to thoſe that are Enemies to any of them, and not to Harbour thoſe whom they have thrown out, and to be Friends to thoſe that they are Friends to, and that are their Allies.

4. There maybe a communication, by a ſending out of Elders from Churches, to Churches that want; yet without Juriſdiction, or the chooſing of Elders for them, or putting Elders upon them. So Anciently, the Biſhops in Cities did Inſtruct and Educate young Men, to fit them for the Miniſtry, whom afterward they ſent out to the Villages that wanted (as young Men in Colledges, now under a Maſter) but yet (as our Divines againſt Biſhops have argued) that did not prove a Juriſdiction, as in Colledges it doth not. So the Church in the Canticles, Cant. 8. 8, 9. ſpeaking of a Siſter Church ſhe had, which wanted Breaſts, by way of communication of good things, ſhe afforded help, but yet without Juriſdiction, for ſhe was her Siſter. For ſtill thoſe Elders which in that caſe they ſhould ſend out and afford, and part withal from themſelves, or any other Church, are to be received and choſen by that Church, as Elders to them; and no way by vertue of any Juriſdiction, in the Church that lends them.

Dioceſan Trial, p.72. 5. So alſo in matter of Advice, there is communion between the Churches. There is a double Direction (as Baynes Diſtinguiſheth) one Poteſtativa, Autoritativa, the other Sociacia, or Social, as one Servant that hath more experience than another, may give Advice to another upon occaſion. An Advice we acknowledge in Churches, by vertue of this communion; but then let it be but Advice, and where there is need. And ſo now in difficult caſes, we acknowledge they are bound to Adviſe with other Churches; and in caſe of Miſcarriages, they are to be Adviſed, and Admoniſhed by other Churches. But when they do Adviſe, that ſuch a Man ſhould be Excommunicated, for ſuch an Act done, they do not add Authority to that Church: Jeſus Chriſt hath furniſhed the Church with ſufficient Authority in it ſelf, only they add Counſel, and Direction, and Countenance: Moral ſtrength or countenance they add, but not political Power or Authority. There is as much power in the Church it ſelf, to deal with its own Members alone of it ſelf, as in all the Churches of the World, put together: But this Adviſe is given, but as Alms is given to a Neighbour-Church. And again, that Advice, as to the object of it, is properly but only to give their Judgment of the Rule; it is not a joynt putting forth the Act of Adminiſtration of an Ordinance, in a way of Application of the cenſure to the Perſons: Neither is a Congregation bound up by the Inſtitution of Chriſt, to Adviſe ſo, as if they do not Adviſe with a Neighbour Presbytery, the Act is Null, and made Void, which they do, as if by Chriſt's Inſtitution it were ſo, that they ought to Adviſe, ſuch their caſe would be. In Babylon, they had ſuch Elders as came to enquire, but not to judge, Ezek. 14. 1. & 20. 1. But all this Obligation to Adviſe in ſuch caſes, and the help that the Churches do give, ariſeth (as our Brethren themſelves ſay, in their anſwers to our Reaſons) Ex Charitate, ex debito mutuæ ſocietatis colendæ, from Charity, and the Duty of maintaining Mutual Fellowſhip, Pag. 49. as is between Friends and Equals; Non ex debito inferioris conditionis ad præſtandum obſequium, not from any Duty, obliging the Inferior to Obedience. And all that they there ſay afterward, pag. 50. unto line 16. we acknowledge. And ſince they ſay it is ex debito ſocietatis colendæ only, and ex charitate, or as others have expreſſed it, Jure fraternitatis, by the Right of Brotherhood; and that the communion between Churches, according to their own expreſſions, is founded but upon that ground, hence therefore it can never grow up to Jus Juriſdictionis, a Right of Juriſdiction; for if the communion of theſe Churches, be in a way of Fraternity, then the Acts it ariſeth to, will be but Acts of communion in a Brotherly way, but for the communion of Friendſhip to ariſe to Acts of Juriſdiction, exceedeth the Sphere of it, as the Acts of Grace, exceed the Acts of Nature. And if it be ſaid, that all Acts in a Church, are Acts of Brotherly communion; it is anſwered, they are Acts of Brotherly communion, in diſtinction to Magiſterial power, or ſuch power, as a Maſter hath over his Servants. It is not Lordly Power; but the power of Spiritual Juriſdiction, is a middle thing, between that of meer Brotherhood, which is between Saint and Saint, or Church and Church, and that which is Lordly; for it is a power Miniſterial, erected by Jeſus Chriſt, and by Inſtitution, having alſo a Spiritual puniſhment, put into their Hands, to execute it, with a promiſe to accompany it.

6. One Church is bound to communicate to another their Temporal things, to ſend Alms, &c. and one Man may be choſen by ſeveral Churches, to carry in their ſeveral Alms, to ſeveral Churches, as (2 Cor. 7. 19.) it is ſaid of Titus, that he was choſen of the Churches, for that Service, the contribution being to be carryed from many Churches. But it is not to be ſaid, that all thoſe Churches met, when he was choſen; but his Office, being the Office of an Evangeliſt, to Travel up and down from Church to Church, he was by a Tacite conſent choſen, firſt by one, then of another, and ſo of a third; otherwiſe the Apoſtle would have ſaid, he was choſen of the Church of ſuch a Province, if all the Churches had been united into a Synod, when it was done; but in that he ſaith Churches, it implies, that they were a part, when he was choſen. But if it had been ſuch a common meeting; yet it was not an Act of Juriſdiction, it was by a common conſent, to carry Alms; and ſuch Acts in Synods, we acknowledge.

7. We acknowledge, that there are Res communes, things in common, that concern many Churches alike, in a Brotherly way. There were between the Apoſtles themſelves, ſome things that were Res communes, as that they ſhould confer, to ſee how far they ſhould agree in the ſame Doctrine; and how far God had Revealed the ſame things to them, as Paul went up to that end, to confer with the Apoſtles at Jeruſalem, Gal. 2. And yet there was not an Authority, that the greater number of the Apoſtles had in matter of Doctrine over another Apoſtle. We acknowledge, that the ſetting up Miniſters over particular Churches, is Res communis; becauſe the Tranſactions of all Buſineſs's between Neighbour-Churches, is ordinarily done by the Elders thereof; and therefore the bringing in a new of Miniſters to ſuch Aſſociations, ſhould be with their Privicy and Knowledge. But that will not ariſe to this, that the Neighbour-Miniſters have the power of Ordination, the power of Depoſition, or that they have a Negative Vote, by way of Juriſdiction, to which the Church muſt by vertue of an Inſtitution ſubmit: They may give the Right Hand of Fellowſhip, and it may be a due, Ex debito fraternæ charitatis, from the Duty of Brotherly Love, that a Church, when it chooſeth its Elders, ſhould ask the Right Hand of Fellowſhip from other Churches; but it muſt be remembred, that it is but giving the Right Hand of Fellowſhip, it is not giving the Right Hand of Authority to chooſe them their Elders, or to lay Hands on them. Becauſe that Marriages are of a publick concernment to a Commonwealth, and to Families in a Common-wealth; therefore States are to be acquainted with Marriages, but the Power and Authority to guide them whom they ſhould Marry, lies in the Parents, and in the Perſons that are to Marry; and they may Marry whom they will, only in the Lord. And ſuch a Reſpect to other Churches, it is no more an Act of Subjection to them, as having Juriſdiction then according to our Brethren's Principles, it is a Subjection in the Elders not to Excommunicate, if the People (who they ſay have no intereſt of Authority, or of a Negative Voice at all) ſhould be againſt the Excommunicating of a Perſon.

As there are theſe ways of communion, differing from Government; ſo there are certain Tyes and Bands, ſome more general, ſome more ſpecial among all Churches, by which this communion is to be exerciſed, as appeareth by Epheſ. 4.

Vide Zanch. in Eph. 4. in Tom. 6. oper.

There is 1. That General Tye and Obligation of the Church-Catholick, which we acknowledge to be the chief Fundamental Relation or Obligation (Tranſcendent above all others) of communion of Churches: the other particular being but ſeveral Reſpects and Relations, that do knit more faſtly by vertue of it.

2. We do acknowledge that every particular Church is to be conſidered as a Member of the Church-Catholick, as 1 Cor. 12. 27. the Apoſtle ſpeaks of the Univerſal Body, in the words afore, and in the words after. But although it be a part of the Church Univerſal, yet not of the Church Univerſal, conſidered as a Miniſterial Body, that hath Juriſdiction in it; but as being a Myſtical Body, and it is therefore obliged to perform to other Churches, by vertue of this Catholick Obligation, only all ſuch Duties of Chriſtian communion, as proceedeth in a Myſtical way, as hath been ſhewn. So as we profeſs our ſelves wronged, to have this put upon us, that in gathering of Churches, we make ſeparate Churches from all the World; but do acknowledge as many, and as great Duties in a way of communion, to lie between us and all other Churches, as according to their Aſſertion, there are Duties of exerciſing Juriſdiction and Subjection, reſpectively among themſelves.

3. They are to look alſo to the other Churches Elders, as Elders, and accordingly to Reverence them; but yet not as Elders, they carry Juriſdiction over all Churches, about with them. It will be hard to ſhew wherein Miniſters have power of Juriſdiction over Perſons that belong not to their own Churches.

If it be acknowledged that they are Elders, and ſo to be looked upon by other Churches; yet ſtill but by vertue, and in the way of a Myſtical communion, as all things in the World are the Saints, 1 Cor. 3. 21,22. Therefore let no Man glory in Men, for all things are yours: Whether Paul, or Apollo, or Cephas, or the World, or Life, or Death, or things preſent, or things to come, all are yours.

Again, there are two things to be conſidered in every Elder. There is firſt his Separation unto the work of the Miniſtry, and unto Chriſt, that he is Dedicated, and ſet apart to him: And then in the ſecond place, there is his Relation of an Elder, to this or that particular Church.

Now his particular Relation of an Elder to this or that Church, may ceaſe by the Churches ceaſing, by the Death of the Members, or by his Removal or Abſence, when yet his Separation to Chriſt, and the Relation that is between Chriſt and him, continueth: It is here, as in the caſe of Widdows, as they were Dedicated to Chriſt, as Widdows, and ſhould have waxed wanton againſt Chriſt, if they had Marryed; ſo he, if he ſhould (unleſs upon an abſolute neceſſity) divert to another calling, he would offend againſt Chriſt. And if his Relation to a Church, ſhould thus ceaſe; yet the Bleſſing of Chriſt, in Reſpect of his Dedication to him, might follow him in his Preaching unto thoſe, who yet perhaps would not acknowledge him to be their Elder, in Reſpect of Relation to them. And the power of Juriſdiction, that he hath together with other Elders, is (for the exerciſe of it) in Reſpect of his fixed Relation to that particular Church, to whom he is an Elder: And therefore, although in many Miniſterial Acts, he may have the Bleſſing of an Elder ſecretly accompanying of him from Chriſt; yet he cannot claim the power of an Elder, in reſpect of Juriſdiction. The Apoſtles themſelves, had the Bleſſing of Apoſtles, and Miniſters of Chriſt in their Preaching to them that were without; and yet they had not a Juriſdiction Eccleſiaſtical over them that were without; What have I to do to Judge them that are without? ſaith Paul, 1 Cor. 5. 12.

Again, our Divines have Diſtinguiſhed, that there is Poteſtas ordinis, and Poteſtas Juriſdictionis, in Miniſters and Elders; Power of Order, and Power of Juriſdiction; and that there are Acts, which are Acts of meer Power of Order of his Office, as an Elder, which he may perform alone, as to Preach, and the like; and that power he may carry along with him, where ever he goes; becauſe he performs it perſonally, in reſpect of his Dedication to God and Chriſt: But the power of Juriſdiction is a farther thing, which therefore he exerciſeth with other Elders; and with other Elders not materially conſidered, but as formed up into the Relation of Presbytery, to a Church which is to be the Seat of it. Power of Juriſdiction, is an External power, and therefore dependeth upon an External Relation to Men; but the Bleſſing and Power, that accompanieth his Miniſterial Acts, to Preach, and the like, that depends principally upon his being Dedicated unto God, and is internal, and hath a more ſpecial Relation to God, according to which Relation, Men where ever he cometh, Reverence him, and receive him; and the Bleſſing of God may accompany him. And therefore this power of Juriſdiction with others is not to be extended beyond the Seat, the Church, to which he hath Relation. As is the caſe alſo of Magiſtrates, if you could ſuppoſe, that beſides the Relation of a King to his People, in reſpect of which, he hath a Juriſdiction as a King over them, that there were ſuch a Dedication and Separation of him to this Office, that where ever he came, he were a King in reſpect of ſome Acts, had a Kingly Spirit, Kingly Wiſdom, to give Counſel in an Diety or Aſſembly of King's and Princes in the World, he might be received in all ſuch, to perform ſuch Acts; when yet he could not perform an Act of Juriſdiction; becauſe that's founded upon that ſpecial Relation he hath to his own People.

And it is in reſpect of the communion of Churches, and other Elders, as it is in reſpect of Churches, and the Brethren of other Churches. If the Brethren of other Churches, few or more, occaſionally come to a particular Church in a City, where, a Mart of Men coming from many Cities, is kept, if they receive them to all the meer Priviledges of that Church, by vertue of their Church-communion; yet they would not receive them, ſo as to ſit and Vote with them, in the choice of Officers, or the like; becauſe that's an Act that properly concerns that particular Church, whereof he is to be an Officer. So anſwerably, a particular Church, may receive the Elders of other Churches, and receive them as Elders, in reſpect of ſome Acts, as Preaching and the like; but not in reſpect of Acts of Juriſdiction, which we believe our Brethren themſelves, would deny to the Elders of other Churches: As for example, if upon an occaſion, the Elders of other Churches, belonging to other Presbyteries, ſhould be preſent at ſome one claſſical Presbytery, although they would receive them as Elders, and Reverence them as ſuch; yet they would not have them to ſit with them, and Vote, ſo as that the Vote of thoſe Stranger Elders, which yet they acknowledge Elders, ſhould over-rule, or caſt the Acts of their Presbytery. They would perhaps hear their Advice, and their Judgment as Elders, but not admit them to Acts of Juriſdiction, and Ecceſiaſtical Authority; becauſe that that dependeth upon Relation to ſuch a Seat or Corporation of ſeveral Churches, according to their Principles; but, to the Seat of a particular Congregational Church, according to ours.

CHAP. X.

That though it were granted, that the Elders of one Church, might exerciſe Acts of Authority and Juriſdiction in another, occaſionally and when called to do ſo by that Church; yet from this cannot be concluded, that Authority over particular Congregations, which our Presbyterian Brethren challenge.

BUT if the Elders of other Churches, were capable to exerciſe the Acts of Juriſdiction occaſionally in ſome caſes over Churches (which they have not a conſtant Relation of Eldership unto) by vertue of the Catholick communion of Churches, yet the Seat in which, and the Bounds of Extent, over which this Juriſdiction ſhould be exerciſed, muſt ſtill be only a particular Congregation. And the call by which this Juriſdiction is to be exerciſed, ſhould be occaſionally from that Congregation, in caſe of want or need; which therefore ſhould, in ſuch caſes, ſtand in ſtead of a fixed and a conſtant Relation, that Elders do bear to that Church, the call being occaſional, and from themſelves, in caſe of need, as the Juriſdiction they exerciſe is but meerly occaſional, and for that time. And ſo by this means, ſtill as the right bounds, that Chriſt hath Inſtituted for the Seat of Juriſdiction, is kept unto, and not exceeded; ſo the power of the Congregation it ſelf, is hereby alſo preſerved. But it is another thing, which by vertue of the Catholick communion of Churches, and the Elders thereof, that the Presbyterian Divines do challenge, and would erect, according to their Principles. They do challenge an Aſſociation, to be an Inſtitution of Chriſt; by vertue of which, the greater company of Elders of other Churches may aſſume and challenge a power over any Congregation in that Aſſociation; and ſo erect a conſtant and an ordinary conſiſtory, whereby not only the bounds and limits ſet by Chriſt, for the Seat of Juriſdiction, are tranſgreſſed and exceeded; but an unlawful power is erected, and ſet over the Churches; not only in reſpect of the conſtancy of it, but in reſpect alſo of the want of that Relation, of being Elders to them, which is the Foundation of the conſtant exerciſe of Juriſdiction.

So as the queſtion will not be, whether by vertue of this Catholick communion, a particular Congregation may make uſe of the Elders of another Congregation, to Ordain, to aſſiſt them in Excommunication, &c. and ſo they may come to have power in a particular Church, by their ſpecial and peculiar call, for ſuch an Act at ſuch a time, (though this will not be acknowledged by us) but the queſtion is, whether by Chriſt's Inſtitution, they may erect a Judicatory, and challenge a Subjection from all the Churches. In the other way, the Congregations do not Subject themſelves, nor their Liberty, but make uſe of that Miniſtry of an Elder, which Chriſt hath put upon them: Even as in Arbitrations, or in References unto other Churches, they do not Subject themſelves to other Churches, it being done occaſionally, and by their conſent, whom they would ſingle out to be the Arbitrators. So as it is one thing, that there may occaſionally be an exerciſing of an Elder's power, in another's Congregation, and it is another thing, that it ſhould be aſſumed and challenged (which is the thing that remains further to be proved by the Presbyterial Divines) as it is one thing for a Child under Age, though he ſhould not govern himſelf, to have liberty to chooſe a Guardian for the time; but it is another thing, that a company of Men ſhould aſſume to be his Guardians for ever. It would be one thing for a Corporation to ſend to another Corporation for their Recorder, a Man skillful in the Law, to perform the Office of a Recorder, with a Jury at their Seſſions, they now wanting one, or there falling out a caſe of Difficulty, wherein their own doth need aſſiſtance: But it would be another thing, for the Recorders of ſeveral Corporations in a County, to go and challenge by vertue of Aſſociation, and the common Law of communion in the Kingdom, a conſtant power of Juriſdiction to be exerciſed over them.

And in this caſe, the communion of Churches in reſpect of Members, Qua Members, and of Elders Qua Elders, anſwer one another, according to our Principles. For as the Members of another Church, if they come to a particular Church, and are received by their conſent by them (and ſo for that time, become as one Body with them, by vertue whereof, they receive the Sacrament amongſt them, as being for this Act incorporated, and as one bread with them occaſionally) in this do not receive meerly and ſimply, as Members of another Church, diſtinctly and a-part conſidered, although by vertue of their being Members of another Church; but they are thereby for that time, occaſionally received into that Church, ad tantum, ſo far, as to enjoy ſuch and ſuch a Priviledge: So as the Sacrament in this, is not ſaid to be given to the Members of two Churches a-part conſidered, but to one Church, as thus making one, tho' upon a differing reſpect. And ſo it is alſo in their receiving Elders (if we may make that Suppoſition) to perform Acts of Elderſhip occaſionally, they do it not in this ſingle and a-part conſideration, that they are ſimply Elders of other Churches, as if conſidered only as ſuch, they may make a conſiſtory met out of this Church, to be over this Church, and ſo Excommunicate; but they come to, and are preſent in and with that Church, being called by them, and received as Elders for that Act, aud for that time, as one with them: So as the Acts which they do perform are acts as of that Church, or of Elders in that Church, and are not to be conſidered as acts of other Elders that have power over that Church.

Though Miniſters thus ſhould be ſuppoſed to have, in reſpect of their Dedication to God and to Chriſt, a paſſive capacity to be uſed for any Miniſterial Act in any Church, by vertue of the communion of Churches; yet it would be electively, and upon the call of that Church: But that they ſhould have an active power, ſo as to come unto Congregations, and ſay, we ought to have this power amongſt you, by vertue of Chriſt's Inſtitution, and you ought to Aſſociate with us, for all Acts of Government in common; and thus to challenge, as Elders, a power, upon occaſion in any or all Churches in the World, this is that which was properly the prerogative of an Apoſtle. The greateſt thing in the Apoſtles, for their extent of power lay in this, not only that when they came to a Church, they were capable of being called to joyn with a Siſter Presbytery, and Elderſhip, when they wanted Miniſters and Elders; but it lay in this, that when ever they came to any Church, they could challenge this, as having an Univerſal call as Apoſtles, from Jeſus Chriſt; and ſo they had Authority active, which they might aſſume. And if it were granted by us, that ordinary Miniſters ſucceed the Apoſtles ſo far, as to have a paſſive capacity and power to be called to exerciſe their Miniſtry, in all or any Church; yet to aſſume the other, were to ſtep into the Apoſtles Throne. The power of Authority of Juriſdiction is an active thing, not a paſſive, it is not as a dead Inſtrument that may be uſed; it is not ſimply to have the Gift and Ability to Judge, but it is to have the Power and Authority to Judge; which if the Church ſhould not call them unto, they might call upon the Church, regarding it to be their Duty to exerciſe it for them. As the power of Government, or Juriſdiction of a King, is not a meer paſſive capacity, but it is a power to command them that are under him, which he is to perform and exerciſe among them. It is the Authority that gives the calling.

coul

And in this reſpect, the Arguments that our Brethren uſe to bring, that Elders may exerciſe ſome Acts of Elders in others Churches, as that they may Preach, &c. and are to be received as Elders in other Churches, by vertue of the Catholick communion of Churches, are no way ſufficient to prove and eſtabliſh that Juriſdiction in their way. For,

1. It doth not follow, becauſe they may do one Act of Miniſtry, as of Preaching, or Adminiſtring the Sacrament, that therefore they may do all; no more than it would follow, that becauſe a Man may Preach alone, Baptize alone of himſelf; that therefore of himſelf alone, he may exerciſe Juriſdiction. Unto Acts of Juriſdiction there is a Formality, and the Formality doth lie in their Relation to ſuch or ſuch a Seat or Subject, over whom the Juriſdiction is exerciſed, and ſo and ſo bounded, and that by ſpecial Inſtitution.

2. It will not follow, that if they may exerciſe as Elders one Act of Miniſtry, therefore all of Juriſdiction; becauſe there may be ſome Acts of Miniſtry, which are properly belonging to the Church Univerſal, as Univerſal, and ſuch Acts we judge Preaching, and Baptizing to be; and therefore we read, that Baptiſm was done both out of a Church Relation, and without the preſence of a Church, as the Baptizing of the Eunuch by Philip. But ſo Ordination is not, ſo the Lord's Supper is not; Baptiſm we rather take to be an Ordinance of the Church Univerſal, One Faith, One Lord, One Baptiſm, Eph. 4. 5. But the Lord's Supper is an Ordinance of a particular Church, making one Body, and one Bread, and conſiſteth in a communion. One Apoſtle, and one Man, could not receive the Supper of the Lord together, becauſe they could not make one Church, for this is made eſſential to it, 1 Cor. 10. We being many, are one Bread; therefore it is called, the Communion of the Body of Chriſt. But one Apoſtle may Baptize one Man when alone, and ſo we think one Miniſter may do it at this day, if he had converted him.

3. If the Elders of other Churches ſhould have power to Judge and Determine things in a Doctrinal way, to give the Rule upon occaſion; it will not follow, that they have the power of Juridical Application, of Excommunication according to that Rule. The Apoſtles might deliver the Doctrine of Faith, as Apoſtles to them that were without, when yet they could not Juridically judge them that were without. The Phariſees by their Doctrine, did bind Burthens upon Men's Conſciences, and that in their Sermons, when they Sat in Moſes his Chair, when yet they did not bind by way of cenſure. Yea, every Miniſter may Doctrinally deliver the Rule, when yet alone, and that as a Miniſter he cannot exerciſe an Act of Juriſdiction. We ſee this in civil power in Kingdoms, the Judges of the Kingdom altogether met cannot condemn a Man, without a Jury, though they may deliver what is Law, and ſay what is the Rule. Yea, though the Houſe of Commons in Parliament, in an extraordinary way, by way of Bill, may adjudge a Man to Death, yet in an ordinary courſe, they are not Witneſſes to the Fact; and although they have power of making all the Laws in the Kingdom, they do not give an Oath, as the Houſe of Peers doth. The Aſſembly that now Sitteth, they are betruſted with power in a Doctrinal way, to give their Judgments what ſhall Reform the Kingdom; and their Judgment herein is to be looked upon, as the Judgment of ſo many Elders of ſeveral Churches; but they have not power to Adminiſter a cenſure.

The Aſſembly of Divines at Weſtminſter.

4. Becauſe they may come to have as Elders, Authority in any Church, in the way forementioned, occaſionally, electively (the power of the Church being ſeen, in calling ling them upon ſuch an occaſion together to aſſiſt them, and to be preſent with them, they exerciſing that power but in that Church, and joyntly with that Church, and as an entire Act of that Church, whereto for the preſent, they perform the Office of Elders) it will not follow, that therefore they may in all Churches, uſurp a power over them, and call upon them, and challenge it from them. This will not follow from the other, becauſe, as was ſaid, the Priviledge of Government is given unto the Church, as the Seat of it, and is therefore to be drawn down to it, exerciſed in it, and not to be claimed out of it.

The one therefore running thus in a Natural Moral way, the other by a ſpecial Inſtitution, forming up a Body on purpoſe, and arming it with a power, over and above what the Natural Law of communion and Non-communion reacheth to, which is to deliver unto Satan, and to perform all Acts of Admonition and Cenſure, in order thereunto: Hence therefore,

1. This commuion with other Churches, is not in a fixed ſet way, but occaſional. The Synhedrim was a Set and a fixed Court, and therefore by Inſtitution; but this communion is but as the communion of Saints one with another, in a general way. Hence,

2. It being in a Moral way to other Churches, and the Elders thereof, therefore the Obligation for matters of ending of controverſies, is anſwerable and ſuitable. They are not bound to go to the next Neighbour-Church, but to any other whom they do moſt Reverence, or who are moſt fit and proper to end the controverſie; therefore Antioch ſent to Jeruſalem. If it were by Inſtitution, it would take in the Neighbour-Churches, as in the caſe of Murther, the next City was to make an Atonement. When James doth bid us confeſs our Sins one to another, in caſe a Man be ſo troubled with Luſt, ſo that he is called to confeſs it to another, the Obligation doth not require him neceſſarily to confeſs it to his Miniſter, or to the next Saint or Brother he meeteth; for it is not laid upon him in a way of Inſtitution, but upon a Moral ground, and anſwerably he is Morally to conſider who is the fitteſt Man to confeſs this Sin unto, and will be Faithful and Secret, and is able to eaſe him; ſo that it runs not in a way of Inſtitution of Set Perſons.

3. Hence therefore, that Neighbour-Churches ſhould have a Ground and a Warrant to call a Neighbour-Church in queſtion, or to an account, is not by way of Power and Authority, as, if it ran in a way of Inſtitution, it ſhould be; but it is by way of Offence, and therefore they are to do it, when they are offended with their proceedings, and with their miſcarriages. So then, as the Subjection of a Man or a Brother, in the caſe of Offence, to forbear ſuch a practice, which is otherwiſe indifferent to him, is not by vertue of any Authority his Brother hath over him, but it is in a Moral way; ſo it is in this caſe.

4. Whereas the Analogy of Mat. 18. is urged to be as well between a Church offending and other Churches, as between a Brother and a Congregation; that when they are offended, they are to tell it to a greater number of Churches. We ſhall not be againſt this Analogy, for the like way of proceeding; only we are againſt the like Authority of proceeding. If other Churches will deal with a Siſter-Church, in the way of Moral communion ſpecified, let them obſerve the ſame Analogy, and we ſhall ſubmit to it; but if they will erect from that Analogy the like Authority and Power of Juriſdiction, unto that we deny the Analogy to reach; becauſe that in the Church-Univerſal, and the communion thereof as ſuch, Chriſt hath placed no ſuch Juriſdiction.

CHAP. XI.

That Churches in the ſame Nation, are obliged to maintain a nearer communion, one with another, than what all Churches, though ſeparated by Diſtinct Kingdoms, are bound to, by vertue of their Catholick Obligation.

AS there is the general Bond of which I have Diſcourſed, that knits all Churches together, which, like to that which the Apoſtle ſpeaks of charity, is above all, and runs through all, and gives Strength to all other, ſo there are more ſpecial

Relations and Bonds, which knit ſome Churches to a more near communion than others: Even as in a Congregational Church, although there is a common Bond and Tye, which knits all the Members together; yet there are ſpecial Bonds and Tyes beſides, by which that Fellowſhip is improved more between ſome of the Members, than others; as the Relation of Man and Wife, Servant and Maſter, Friend and Friend, all which are occaſions of more converſe, and ſo of Edifying one another more.

And herein we give and acknowledge much to thoſe National Relations of being under one common civil Government, if conſidered as a bond or Tye, which makes the communion more near, and occaſioneth more obligation of Duty. As alſo there is a cloſer communion between Churches, that are more near, Neighbouring in the ſame City, and the ſame Vicinity; becauſe they have a more ſpecial occaſion of converſe, and of knowing each other's Affairs. But yet ſtill all thoſe Bonds and Tyes, by which Churches are thus knit together, doth not give Neighbour-Churches, or a National Church, power of Juriſdiction. For it runs in a way of that Myſtical communion of the Church Univerſal; only there is a ground and occaſion of exerciſing that communion more nearly. Thus in the Churches of a Nation, many Advantages do ariſe (we acknowledge) unto Churches thereby, as that they have the benefit of the common Laws, to protect them under the Chriſtian Magiſtrate, who is to be a Nurſing Father, and a Nurſing Mother to them; and ſo to unite them together, and make that Myſtical communion more entire. But the power of the Magiſtrate cannot ſet up, or form them into any other Eccleſiaſtical Power and Government than Jeſus Chriſt hath Inſtituted. What communion Chriſt would have to be amongſt Churches, the Magiſtrate may exact of them, and keep them to it; but he cannot raiſe up a new kind of communion, their having one Language, their having one Government, makes a greater nearneſs of it. The Apoſtles Write therefore unto the Churches of Aſia, as in one Nation, or in one Province. Thus Paul Writing to the Church of Corinth, Writes to the Saints of Achaia, and many Churches in Achaia, may be called Achaia, for ſo it is in the Apoſtles Stile; Achaia was ready a year agoe (ſaith he, 2 Cor. 9. 2.) meaning many Churches in Achaia. So we may ſay England, for the Churches of England, and the Name may be given from the Nation, but the Name with the word Church, is never put together, as being a National Church, caſt into one Body, in reſpect of Eccleſiaſtical Government and Juriſdiction, as the Kingdom is for civil Government. The Apoſtle therefore, when he Writes to Churches of a Nation, calling them Churches and not Church, doth argue, that the common Relation between them, was by way of communion, each Reſerving their Juriſdiction as ſeveral Churches, but not as caſt under one Juriſdiction, as being one Church. Yea, perhaps the Name Church may be given unto a Nation in a Myſtical Reſpect; that which is given to the whole, being given to any part or number of Saints. The Strangers that were ſcattered all over leſſer Aſia, 1 Pet. 1. 1. are called a Flock, 1 Pet. 5. 2. And ſo our Saviour Chriſt ſaith, he had Sheep that were not of that Fold, i. e. that were not of that Nation, but that were Gentiles, and yet they are both called one Church in the General; for he would make them (both Jew and Gentile) one Fold; but they are ſo called, in reſpect of their Myſtical Relation, as under him their Shepherd, not in reſpect of Government. Peter calls the Jews that were Scattered, a Flock in the General, diſtinct from the Gentiles; becauſe they could not perhaps underſtand the Tongues of the Gentiles; and therefore kept together, as Jews diſtinct.

So then we ſhall grant very far to National communion of Churches kept in a Myſtical way. As,

1. * We grant, that God under the Goſpel, hath made a covenant with, and a promiſe unto Nations (in reſpect of the Goſpel) as well as unto Families. Paul when ſome in Achaia, had received the Goſpel, calls them the firſt Fruits of Achaia, Rom. 16. 5. He calls them the firſt Fruits, as a ſign that more would come of the ſame Nation; but he would not Baptize Men of the ſame Nation upon it, or upon a bare outward profeſſion, as the Apoſtles did not therefore Baptize all the Nation of the Jews, becauſe ſome received the Goſpel as the firſt Fruits. Abraham's covenant indeed goes to Nations, as well as to Families; Eſa. 52. 15. He ſhall ſprinkle many Nations. And God removes the Light of the Goſpel from Nations, as well as from particular Churches. The Goſpel it ſelf becomes a National Bleſſing; and we ſee that that one Nation hath more light in one Age than another; as the Grecions and thoſe in Aſia once had, and now we Europeans, in the Northern parts have. That part of Brittain which is now called Wales, had it more than the reſt of the Nation, when Auſtin the Monk came into this Iſland, thoſe that oppoſed him, being only found there, whereas now the whole Kingdom hath had it ſince, and the Goſpel becometh a National Bleſſing; and when the Practices and Priviledges of it are Eſtabliſhed by the Law, it cometh to be a National Right. And when the civil Magiſtrate by Law doth countenance Religion, God doth bleſs the Nation, and bleſs the Magiſtrate for it, as he did the Houſe of Obededom, for the Ark's reſting there, 1 Sam. 6. 11, 12.

* Yet we underſtand this in the ſame ſenſe, as Revel. 5. 9. interprets it, of the Redeemed out of all Nations, ſo that all the people in Nations, will never grow up to be Members of Churches, eſpecially, not till the call of the Jews.

2. There are National Duties, which the Churches in a Nation, as they are a Nation, owe unto God in a joynt way, as to keep Solemn Faſts and Days of Thankſgiving for National Bleſſings, or for threatned Judgments, as Nineveh did.

3. In caſe that the Churches of a Nation are corrupted, they may have Aſſemblies and Conferences, where mutually it may be ſeen, what light theſe Churches can hold forth; ſo to make a Reformation, and to become a new lump, they may have ſuch Aſſemblies, to direct them to do it. In Babylon, the Jews had Elders to come one to another, Ezek. 14. 1. Eze. 20. 1. but they had not the power of a Synhedrim, which was Inſtituted by God, that was only proper to them, while they were in the Land; and the promiſe was to it, as being in the place that God ſhould chooſe. They came to enquire, but not to judge; and the Prophet was with them, who yet had not the power of Juriſdiction as a Prophet. Or otherwiſe at other times, we acknowledge, that National Aſſemblies may be choſen out by Parliament for National Reſpects, to adviſe them.

4. And by vertue of oneneſs of Language, and of Affinity, Churches in one Nation are able (by vertue of this Bond, as a Band and Tye to knit together) to edifie one another more than other Churches, as by Writing Books in the ſame Language, ſpeaking the ſame Tongue, &c. Yea, and as they are Churches in a Nation, as they walk more exactly, God will give ſuch a Nation more light than he doth another Nation. Theſe, and many more ſuch Advantages as theſe are, in ways of communion, we do acknowledge belong to them as a Nation; and the ſame alſo, by reaſon of Neighbourhood to Neighbour-Churches.

But to caſt all theſe Churches into ſuch a National Government Eccleſiaſtical, and ſuch Subordinations as Presbyterian Government caſts them into (ſuch as being a Nation, in reſpect of civil Government, they are caſt into) and that they ſhould be obliged in reſpect of a National Bond to an uniformity, or obliged for uniformities ſake, to the ſame Pitch and Model, that one particular Church, ſhould not practiſe further than another, or hold forth more light in matters of Doctrine than another; but that there muſt be one Standard for all, and that they ſhould be obliged to this, by vertue of a National conſtitution, ſuch an Uniformity as this, we think is prejudicial to the Churches; the Apoſtles Rule holding in this, that ſo far as we have attained, we ſhould walk by the ſame Rule. So the Churches in a Nation, may meet to ſee how far they have attained, and to convince one another, and ſo Eſtabliſh by common conſent, a common Rule amongſt them ſo far; but ſo as that if any be otherwiſe minded, they ſhould wait in this, till God Reveal it in his time; for otherwiſe the purer Churches, which will ſtill be the fewer, muſt be kept and conformed to the light of the impurer, which would ſome corrupt them. And the greater compaſs is taken, to make the uniformity, ſtill it will be the worſe; becauſe the greater part is ſtill more corrupt.

And therefore for meer uniformities ſake, to make a general Rule, that ſhould bind weak and ſtrong alike, when that general Rule alſo, is made in favour of the weak only (as to preſcribe forms of Prayer, becauſe many, or the moſt of Miniſters, cannot pray conceived Prayer, or to make one and the ſame form of Government for all Churches; becauſe many or moſt Churches, have not Miniſters, or a People fit to Govern, or to give Prudential Rules for Worſhip, which ſhould bind all; becauſe ſome Elders of Churches as now conſtituted, have not wiſdom to direct themſelves, and yet are ſuffered ſtill to be Elders) thus to bind up both weak and ſtrong, under the ſame Rule, and to Reſtrain the one, for the ſake of the other, we think is contrary to the Apoſtolical Rule. As Men in a perſonal walking, are to be left to a more or leſs purity, ſo Churches too, and there is no reaſon, that thoſe that have a further light, ſhould be Retarded by thoſe that have not.

And that which we ſay of the Churches of a Nation, may in their ſeveral reſpects (ſo far as the Bond or Tye will hold) be ſaid of the Churches in a City, or in any Neighbourhood: Yet ſo, as we conceive, that always Neighbourhood is not ſo near a Bond to induce Churches to Aſſociate, as correſpondency of Principles and Practices. As in Germany, where there are Churches that are Lutheran Churches, others that are of the Calviniſt's, the Neighbourhood is not ſo near a Tye or Bond, as agreement in Principles to Aſſociate themſelves; tho' this principle is to be held Sacred, by vertue of the univerſal Catholick communion, that ſo far hold forth as Churches have any thing that is good in them, ſo far forth (whether in reſpect of Doctrine or Worſhip, or the like) there is to be a communion held with them (when in practice there cannot, yet, in judgment there ought to be) to acknowledge them the Churches of Chriſt, and the Miniſters of Chriſt, and approve whatever is good in them; and if in one practice we cannot joyn, yet in others we may. This we do acknowledge, to be the univerſal Law of communion between Church and Church, throughout the World.

And we do acknowledge that it is poſſible, that a Congregational Government may be adequate with a Nation. For if it were a Nation of all viſible Saints, according to the Rules of the Word (as the Nation of the Jews, when called perhaps ſhall be, Rom. 11. 28.) then the Nation and the Church, would be adequate. But a few in Nations, come to be Saints; and then the Government muſt be ſuited to them. And if you would make a Rule for a whole Nation, where there is but a few Saints, tho' the whole profeſs Chriſtian Religion; then the Rulers, whereby Jeſus Chriſt would have his Churches Governed, as by the Peoples chooſing the Officers, and the Peoples having an intereſt in cenſures, would not univerſally be applicable, and ſuch a Government would not ſuit to a whole Nation, in a Congregational way; but the fault is not in the Government, but it lies in the Perſons. Caſtellus Bononienſis, would ſay that the Old Government of Chnrches would not be available, Niſi Eccleſiæ quoque ſtatum antiquum obtineat. The Rules whereby Jeſus Chriſt would have his Church Governed, will not ſuit Churches, unleſs they have that State and conſtitution for Members, which in the Apoſtle's times they had, which, in the common profeſſion of Chriſtianity in a Nation and Pariſhes, as now more generally they are conſtituted in reſpect of Members, cannot be.

CHAP. XII.

That though no Church or Churches have the power to Excommunicate any other Churches, yet they have Authority of declaring Non-communion with them, upon occaſion of juſt offence given.

THE upſhot of the difference, between us and our Brethren, lies in this Principle; that all Church-Government, conſiſting in a Spiritual Inſtituted Puniſhment, or being in order to it, which is properly called a cenſure and an ἐπιτιμία, a puniſhment by the Apoſtle, 2 Cor. 2. 6. (for that is properly Government, which hath a power inflicting of puniſhment as ſuch) now Excommunication being properly a Spiritual puniſhment, in a ſtrict Senſe ſo taken; hence therefore, where that only is placed, there is the Government placed, in a ſtrict Senſe. And that which makes Excommunication, as it differs from Non-communion, to be a puniſhment, lies in this.

1. That it is a delivering up to Satan, which becauſe it Superaddeth to the ſevering of a Perſon or Perſons from external communion, which is common to it, with that which we call Non-communion; therefore it muſt be a ſpecial Inſtitution, and cannot be founded upon a natural ground, for who hath power to give up a Perſon to Satan, when any Church hath thrown him out, but only Chriſt? And hence other Churches, after a particular Church hath Excommunicated a Man, cannot Excommunicate him further, they cannot give him up to Satan again; for that

Ch XII.

Act is already done, if he be rightly Excommunicated, and all their Act can be but a pronouncing Non-communion.

2. Excommunication and Non-communion differ thus, that in Excommunication, the Perſon is to look upon himſelf, as caſt out of communion with Chriſt, and he hath his ſins Judicially bound upon his conſcience, not only in a Doctrinal way (for ſo his ſins are bound, when a Brother reproveth him) but as by ſuch an Ordinance, wherein Jeſus Chriſt doth, as as a Judge from Heaven, bind his ſin upon his conſcience, having promiſed to do ſo, upon the Churches binding ſin upon him; but declaring Non-communion, they do not a-new Judicially bind his ſin.

3. In Non-communion, there is not ſo much an Authoritative Act over others, as an endeavour to keep themſelves pure. It is indeed an Authoritative Act over others in this Senſe, or the Church that doth keep another Church, or the Perſons of another Church from communion with them exerciſe Authority in this Senſe, that they having Authority from Chriſt poſitively, to partake in ſuch and ſuch Ordinances, and to receive Men thereunto, they receive only ſuch and ſuch Members (although of other Churches) and refuſe others. Both theſe Acts are comparatively (take both poſitive and negative together) Acts of Authority; for they proceed by way of conſequence, from the Authority they have to Adminiſter ordinances amongſt themſelves: Yet the keeping out of that Perſon is not an Act of Juriſdiction over that Perſon, as the keeping out of an Heathen is not an Act of Juriſdiction over him.

4. Look what difference is between Suſpenſion from the Sacrament and Excommunication within a particular Church; the ſame may ſerve to expreſs the difference of Excommunication and Non-communion by other Churches. The Act of Suſpenſion from the Sacrament is but by vertue of the Myſtical communion that is between all Saints; but Excommunication is by vertue of the communion, which the Members of a particular Church, have one with another.

If it be ſaid that they differ thus, that Suſpenſion is but for a time; but Excommunication is a Final Sentence: The Anſwer is, that even Suſpenſion is for ever, unleſs the Man Repents, as well as Excommunication; but they differ only in this, that the one is a withdrawing from a Brother to keep themſelves, and the Ordinances pure; but the other is an Authoritative giving him up to Satan, in the Name of the Lord Jeſus. Suſpenſion therefore is after the Sin, till they try whether he will Repent or no; but Excommunication is when they have tryed, and they ſee he doth not Repent.

Of Non communion, there may be two grounds.

1. The one is when a Church urgeth, ſuppoſe in ſome one Ordinance (as kneeling at the Lord's Supper) that practice upon a Perſon which to him is Sin, although in all other Reſpects, that Church to him, is as pure a Church as any is in the World. In this caſe he is forced to a Non-communion, that is, to a forbearing communion with them in that practice, and in that Ordinance, wherein eſpecially publick communion with the Saints lies: And this is done without any cenſuring of that Church; but only profeſſing his not being able to ſee that light and ground, upon which he ſhould have communion with them in it. Therefore thoſe that leave other Churches upon ſuch grounds, do not pronounce a Sentence of Non-communion with thoſe Churches; but do it meerly and only to keep themſelves pure and undefiled.

2. Another ground, or perhaps a Second kind of Non-communion is this, whereas a Church or Churches do judge another Church or Churches to be corrupt in their Doctrine, or in their countenancing ſuch groſs Sins, for which Men ſhould be Excommunicated, and ſo are offended at thoſe Churches; which being Admoniſhed, do not Repent, but continue obſtinate. Now ſuch a kind of Non-communion in theſe caſes, is materially for ſuch kind of Sins, and ought not to be for ſuch, as for which in a particular Church, Excommunication is to be Denounced againſt a Member or Members: And ſo both the one and the other do agree.

1. In the object matter of offence, for which, Men proceed to the one or the other.

2. They may agree in this, that for the external Act they are the ſame, and for the conſequences of it too, ſo far as lies in their practice one toward another externally. For the outward ſubſtance of the Act, they are both a denying outward communion in Ordinances; and alſo for the conſequent Act, they are both of them a denying communion in ordinary converſe.

Then 3. They agree in the Analogy of their proceedings, that as in a particular Church, in Admonitions tending to Excommunication upon Impenitency (upon which Excommunication follows) there are theſe degrees of proceedings; firſt to take two or three privately, then to give two or three Admonitions in a publick way, e're they proceed to Excommunication: So ſhould other Churches deal with a Siſter-Church offending, e're they proceed to Non-communion.

If the queſtion be askt, what Inſtitution there is for Non-communion: We anſwer,

1. There needs no Inſtitution for it, ſince it ariſeth from all the former Principles, and is not an Act of cenſure by way of Inſtitution; but according to the Law of Nature; And as the Saints are taught of God to love one another, ſo they are taught of God to withdraw, and alſo any Church to withdraw from thoſe that live inordinately. As the Myſtical communion runs in a natural way, by Reaſon of the Law of Love that is in the Hearts of all the Saints, ſo doth the Law of Non-communion.

2. It cannot be ſaid that there is no Warrant: For 1. The ſame Precept that Warrants Suſpenſion, Warrants this; Namely, the withdrawing from a Brother that walks inordinately, as to what is in their power to give or refuſe him Fellowſhip in; and it is in the power of one Church, to give or refuſe Fellowſhip to other Churches in their Ordinances. So that it cannot be alledged, that there is not a command for it, but only that there is not an Inſtitution for it; it is a Duty, though not an Act of Authority. 2. That which Warrants any Chriſtian not to bid an Heretick good ſpeed, which yet is not an Act of Juriſdiction, nor to receive them into their Houſes, Warrants alſo this. 3. That which Warranted Timothy, being a Miniſter to Guide and Direct the Churches, to turn away from thoſe who had only a form of Godlineſs, denying the power of it (2 Tim. 3.5.) Warrants alſo this Non-communion of which we are Diſcourſing. It was Written to him by way of Prophecy, and ſo to all Miniſters and Churches in the latter Age, when the profeſſion of Chriſtianity ſhould grow as common, and be carryed by the ſame grounds of common Education and Imperial Laws, as the Pagan Religion before had been. When before (all in a general implicit way, thus profeſſing Chriſtianity, the Churches might be in danger of being defiled, by holding communion indifferently with all, ſince the caſe is ſuch, that many ſhould have a Form of Godlineſs, and deny the power of it, although profeſſing Religion: Therefore (ſaith the Apoſtle) from ſuch turn away. 4. What one Apoſtle did to another in caſe of offence, the ſame one Church may do to another, upon the ſame grounds. One Apoſtle had not power to Excommunicate another in a way of cenſure; neither had Paul power to Excommunicate Peter, or Admoniſh him in an Authoritative way; but to Admoniſh him by way of that Myſtical communion, which all Saints owe one to another, and ſo was due from one Apoſtle to another. Paul accordingly did Admoniſh Peter, and withſtand him to his Face. And when in that contention between Paul and Barnabas, Barnabas was in the wrong (for he went upon a carnal ground, becauſe Mark was his Siſters Son, and ſo therefore he would have him along with him, though formerly he Deſerted the Service; for which Paul would not take him into Fellowſhip with them) they, upon this occaſion, part Fellowſhip one from another, and Paul did juſtly do it from Barnabas, though he could not Excommunicate him.

If the queſtion be, why Jeſus Chriſt ſhould put this Ordinance of Excommunion, and delivering up to Satan, in a particular Church, rather than in a Multitude of other Churches: I anſwer, although the Reaſon of Inſtitutions is only the Will of Chriſt; yet all his conſtitutions are conſonant to Spiritual Reaſons, and the conſonancy of this particular inſtance to Spiritual Reaſons may appear in this.

1. Becauſe in the proceeding of other Churches with another Church offending; they can have but half that power as preſent to concur in it, which the Ordinance of Chriſt hath ſetled Excommunication upon. For there cannot both Elders and People meet in Synods ordinarily; and yet in a Congregation, both Elders and People muſt concur to Excommunication, as a Judge and a Jury uſe to do. Now to ſuppoſe that the power of this Ordinance ſhould be Transferred to thoſe that have but half the intereſt, to a company of Elders only, where the concurrence of the People as preſent

Cha:XII.

preſent is wanting: To ſuppoſe that in a Congregation both theſe ſhould concur, and that in a Synod which hath the greater power but one of theſe ſhould concur, would not be uniform to this Ordinance. Dealings with other Churches, muſt be Tranſacted by Commiſſions, and by way of Repreſentation; and the power of Excommunication is not given to a Repreſentative company. And for theſe to have power to take upon them to Excommunicate not only Perſons, but Churches, when yet to Excommunicate Perſons in a Church, both People and Elders concur, is yet leſs imaginable.

2. Again this Honour God hath given to his Church of Saints, that if the Formal Authority of Jeſus Chriſt be not placed in them; yet virtually it ſhould be exerciſed as amongſt them, ſo as the unanimous concurrence of their Spirits, as well as of the Miniſters, ſhould have an influence unto this Ordinance, or ſhould be concomitant to this Ordinance; and that therefore the power of Jeſus Chriſt ſhould be put forth, 1 Cor. 5. 4. When you are gathered together, both Elders and People. As the vertue of the Load-ſtone is then put forth, when it is ſet in Steel, and as the Authoritative power of an Act of the King and State is exerted, when both Houſes of Parliament are met, and in their Preſence; without which it would not be an Act of Authority, to Ratifie and Eſtabliſh Laws; ſo is here: The power of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, to deliver a Man up to Satan, muſt be in the preſence of the People: And as tho' the Eye alone ſees, yet, as Seated in ſuch a Body; ſo ſuppoſe all the power ſhould be in the Elders, by which a Man is delivered up to Satan, yet, in the Elders, as Seated in this Church. And therefore to take a company of Elders abſtracted from their People, Jeſus Chriſt hath not given this power unto them, as the Laws of this Kingdom hath not thought fit to give the power of condemning any Man to the Judges alone, but as concurring with the Jury.

3. The enjoyment of a conſtant communion, as in a Congregation formed up into a fixed Body for Worſhip, is only proper to a particular Congregation, and the Members thereof; therefore the throwing out of ſuch an enjoyment, out of ſuch a Body (having this puniſhment annexed to it, to be given up to Satan when he is thrown out) is moſt proper to it, rather than to any other Body, where a Man comes but to meet occaſionally: And as it only is the Seat of fixed Worſhip, ſo it only is the Seat of throwing one out of the Seat of Worſhippers, and of delivering him up to Satan. And the nature of the Ordinance is ſuch as that it could be placed but in one Seat; and therefore that Seat which hath it firſt ſhould only have it; or a Man can be delivered to Satan but once.

Now the next queſtion will be, how far this Law of communion of Churches will draw on a Subjection of one Church to another, and will tend to order Churches? And what proceeding by vertue hereof, one Church may have toward another, and what one Church, or many Churches, is to give to any Church?

We lay this for a general ground, that as there are particular Duties, and in a manner for the external part all the ſame kind of Duties, which are to paſs between a particular Church, and the Members thereof; therefore by Analogy, there may be the ſame proceedings uſed, and courſes taken for the diſcharge of theſe Duties between Church and Church occaſionally, as is amongſt the others. As,

1. There is an obligation of one Church over another, by vertue of this communion; to enquire in caſe of Jealouſie, or common Fame and Report, how it fares with them? And therefore there may be an Aſſociation of Churches, whereby (in the meetings of their Elders or others Deputed) there may be enquiries of Miſcarriages, which may be equivalent to thoſe of Annual Viſitations, which have been amonſt us.

2. If that Perſons wronged do complain, and their complaints do ariſe to that Height and Appearance of Injuſtice, as that there is a juſt offence occaſioned: In ſuch caſes, or in what ever other caſes of Miſcarriages, one Church or many Churches are bound to give an account; and in caſes doubtful, to give Oaths to clear things; and to Swear Witneſſes to help to find out the Truth.

3. For the Judging part, they may declare againſt Churches, by way of Declaration Doctrinally, that they have thus and thus Tranſgreſſed the Rule. They may condemn them as having Sinned againſt light, as perverters of the Faith; they may Admoniſh them and Threaten them in the Name of Chriſt; that is, for his Name (his Name is put for his Honour) and ſo for his Honour's ſake, that is called upon them.

them; his Name is put alſo for power. They may declare that they are offended as a Church, and that it is a Church Act as from them, and ſo deal with them, as a Church offended with a Church Delinquent; but ſtill they act not by a power over them given by Inſtitution from Chriſt: They do not Act from a power of delivering up to Satan; but only with the power of Chriſt's word, and Threatnings laid a-fore the offending Church.

4. When by way of Sentence, they profeſs to hold no communion with them; that Sentence yet is not that of Excommunication, for therein tho' they exerciſe Church-power over their own ſelves, in Relation to themſelves, binding themſelves as a Church, not to have communion with them; yet it is not an Act of Authority over them: As a Lord of a Mannor meddles not with anothers Mill, when he interdicts his Tenants to grind there; for it is not an Act of Juriſdiction over the other, but only over his own Tenants.

If the queſtion be, what Fruit and effect there may be from Regulating Churches in this way? We anſwer,

1. That the Efficacy of all means, lies in the Bleſſing of Chriſt. Now there being two ways of Church proceedings, one by way of communion of Churches, and the Law of Nature, the other by Inſtitution: there is to either, in their kind, a promiſe of Chriſt. The Admonition of one Saint to another, though not in Church-fellowſhip, as it proceedeth by vertue of the communion that is among Saints, and as a Duty of one Saint to another; ſo it hath a promiſe of Bleſſing anſwerable. The Exhortation of one Saint to another, hath a Bleſſing often to convert, though Preaching by Officers be the only inſtituted means; and ſo is it here. Therefore ſuch proceedings, by way of Admonition and by way of Non-communion, have the promiſe of the Bleſſing of Chriſt as well as that of Excommunication in a particular Church.

2. In a Moral way there is a great deal of Efficacy in theſe means, to work upon Men. 1. A convincing of a Church offending of their Sin, and of the Error of their way. 2. There is a Teſtimony given againſt them. 3. There is a ſhaming of them, for the deſign of ſuch withdrawing is (as the Apoſtle ſaith, 2 Theſ. 3. 14.) that they may be aſhamed: There is 4. A Depriving them of the Priviledges of communion with all other Churches.

3. In an External way, this is like to work as much as Excommunication it ſelf, eſpecially, being back'd by the civil Magiſtrate, as Excommunication uſeth to be.

4. It is more ſuitable for Churches to deal with another Church, or with Multitudes, with Provinces, with Churches in this way, than to aſſume a power of delivering them up to Satan.

If it be ſaid that Excommunication being the Higheſt Supream Means, if this means ſhould not be uſed, there is the moſt Efficacious means wanting: I anſwer, that God doth not always Eſtabliſh that means that is moſt Efficacious for one ſort or kind of Perſons, or in all caſes that he doth in ſome, and unto ſome. Neither is it neceſſary therefore, that what is in it ſelf to be ſuppoſed the moſt Efficacious means ſhould be applied to Churches, from a greater number of Churches, as the Argument would hold forth. For according to this Reaſon, God ſhould have appointed Apoſtles always infallibly to have Governed Churches; becauſe that was the moſt Efficacious means, and was once extant in the World. And it may as well be ſaid and objected, as it is by the Papiſts, that unleſs there be an Apoſtolical Seat aſſiſted with Infallibility, there is not an Efficacious Remedy for all controverſies; and that God hath not provided for his Church, in our Age, as he did for his Church in the firſt Age. But it ſuited his Wiſdom to leave the Churches in after Ages to have Recourſe, in reſpect of Government, to a means leſs Efficacious. The like he did with the Church of the Jews, to whom he ſtirred up Prophets in all Ages, till after the Captivity, but then left them to the ordinary guidance.

The Government OF THE Churches of Chriſt.

BOOK VI.

Of the conſtitution of a particular Congregational Church. The Riſe, Inſtitution, and Definition of it. A Compariſon between it and the Church Univerſal. That Chriſt hath given to his *S*aints, a Right and Liberty of Gathering into ſuch Holy *S*ocieties. That, in doing ſo, they are not Guilty of *S*inful *S*eparation or *S*chiſm. Of the *D*iverſe kind of Officers in a Church. That there is an Inſtitution for each ſort. That the Paſtor and Teacher are equal in Authority and Power. Of the Exerciſe of the Communion of Saints, which the Members of a Church ought to have, one with another.

CHAP. I.

The Reaſons why God and Chriſt would have a Church, as the Seat of Divine Worſhip, wherein they might be Adored and Praiſed. What a Church is. That Saints or Perſons Regenerated and Holy are the proper matter of it. The Church is either the Univerſal Myſtical Church, or a particular Congregation. The grounds of this Diſtinction ſhewed from Scripture.

IT is the practice of all Societies and Corporations, at firſt embodying themſelves to read over their Charter. Thus at the Aſſizes the Commiſſion is firſt Read, and in Parliaments, the Writ, by which they are Summoned, is opened.

It is then requiſite, when any number of Saints do, by mutual conſent, joyn into ſo Holy a Fellowſhip as a Church is; to ſhew what Charter and Commiſſion they have for it from Jeſus Chriſt. The queſtion otherwiſe may be put to us (which was put to Chriſt, Mat. 21. 23) By what Authority we do theſe things? Which Authority, if we are not able to produce, we incur that premunire, Acts 19. 40. We are in danger to be queſtioned by God, by Men, If there be no cauſe whereby we may give an account of this meeting. The word is ἐκκλησιας, whence, the name of ἐκκλησια is given to ſuch a Fellowſhip of Saints.

All inferior civil Societies do embody themſelves by a liberty granted and derived from the Head of the Common-wealth they live in; eſpecially when they take on them to exerciſe any judicial Acts. Therefore this Holy Divine Fellowſhip, muſt much more be Authorized by Chriſt the Head of the Church Univerſal, ſince thoſe joyned in it, take upon them the Authority to Judge them within it, as occaſion is, 1 Cor. 5. 12. As all meetings in civil Affairs are ſaid to be in the King's Name, ſo we muſt prove this to be in Chriſt's Name: and for this we have that known place, Matth. 18. 20. Where two or three are gathered together in my Name, &c. Where he ſpeaks not of every Aſſembly of Saints; but of ſuch an Aſſembly as doth make and conſtitute a Church; for (ver. 17.) thoſe two or three to whom this promiſe is made are call'd the Church. And by Name is, among other things, chiefly meant the Power and Authority of Chriſt; and is uſually ſo taken in Scripture. So Acts 4. 7. The Phariſees take it, asking the Apoſtles, by what Name or Power have you done this? And in that Senſe the Apoſtles make anſwer, ver. 10. Know that, by the Name of Chriſt, this Man ſtands whole before you.

That there is and ought to be a Church is the confeſſion of all the Profeſſors of the Name of Chriſt: Papiſts and Proteſtants agree in this Aſſertion, it being a Principle of the Goſpel, univerſally aſſerted to by all, to whom the ſound of the Goſpel is come: As, that there is a God, is owned by all to whom the ſound or preaching of the Works of God is come. As that Notion of a God was preſerved in the ruines of the fall; ſo the Notion that there is a Church hath been preſerved, notwithſtanding the Apoſtacy and falling away of Nations to Antichriſt, and accordingly hath been Tranſmitted to us. And as that Notion, that there is a God, was the occaſion of an Idolatry and falſe Worſhip through Darkneſs; and of Worſhipping a falſe God, not knowing the true: So this Notion, that there is a Church on Earth, hath, through the like Darkneſs been the main occaſion of all Errors about Eccleſiaſtical Government, Men not diſcerning what was the Church which Chriſt intended.

And indeed, that God ſhould have a Church, is exceeding natural and requiſite.

1. The Divine Nature in God deſires it, as it deſires communication of it ſelf to the Creatures, that they might glorifie him, ſo it deſign'd a communication of it ſelf to many, and to many together united, mutually to praiſe him. The God-head it ſelf is naturally communicated to three Perſons, who mutually rejoyce each in the other, and together in the Union and Participation of ſuch glorious Attributes, Prov. 8. 30. There is a bleſſed Fellowſhip between thoſe three Perſons; and God would alſo have Creatures taken up into the ſame Fellowſhip; not only each a-part with himſelf; but mutually together to glorifie him, which is the nature of a Church. Thoſe three Perſons that were three in one, would have a Church of Creatures alſo; and reſolv'd, that many ſhould become one, as they are one, John 17. 21. 23. The Goſpel is called the Fellowſhip of the Myſtery, Epheſ. 3: 9. Wiſdom alſo loves to open and cry her precious Wares in places of concourſe, Prov. 1. 21: Pſal. 22. 22. Pſal. 40. 9, 10. Chriſt who was this Wiſdom of his Father ſays, he had declared his Faithfulneſs not to his Brethren only apart, but together in the great Congregation, (Pſal. 35. 18.) Becauſe thereby Glory and Praiſes, being joynt and mutual, are ſo much the more encreaſed; for Glory manifeſted Reſults out of the Apprehenſions and Encomiums of many joyned: Therefore God, e're he would ſo fully communicate himſelf, deſires a meeting, and an Aſſembly of the People. So Exod. 25. 8. Let them make me a Sanctuary, that I may dwell among them; and Exod. 29. 42, 43, 44. There I will meet with you, that is, when they are all met there. And therefore it is called, in the Original, the Meeting-place; ſo that if there be a God, he will have a Church to Worſhip and praiſe him.

2. Jeſus Chriſt deſires it alſo, who was to be made glorious; and therefore was to have a Church, that is, many united in one, whereof he might be the Head: So Epheſ. 1. 22. God gave him to be Head to the Church. It was a priviledge to him to have a Church, ſhe is therefore given him; and as this was his deſire too, his Father in anſwer beſtows her on him, Ask and I will give thee, Pſal. 2. 8. As he was to be a Head, ſo to have a Body; in whom, as in a Head, they might be gathered together in one, ver. 10. He was to have many Brethren; and his deſire was, that they might be gathered together about him. Thus he declares, Pſal. 22. 22. and thus he promiſes to them when aſſembled on Earth, Matth. 18. and thus he Prays, John 17. 24.

Ch. I. That he and they may be together. So as if there be a Chriſt, there is to be a Church alſo.

3. The Divine nature in us, (2 Pet. 1. 4.) breath's after ſuch a Fellowſhip As Reaſon and Underſtanding deſires communion with Men, ſince Man is by Nature (as he that had but Nature ſaid) Animal πολιτικον ſociable, a ſociable Creature, ſo a Saint is too. As it was not good for Adam, the New Creature of the Firſt World, to be alone ; ſo nor for the New Creature of Chriſt's World. It was that one thing of Davids Deſires, that is, the Top the chief of them, Pſal. 27. 4: One thing have I deſired. to dwell in the Houſe of the Lord. The Church, as they have a Relation to Chriſt, ſo likewiſe one to another ; for they are not an Holy Seed only, but an Holy Nation, a Royal Kindred: Who, out of an inſtinct, deſire Fellowſhip one with another. They are taught of God, (ſays the Apoſtle, 1 Theſ. 4. 9.) And therefore as natural inſtincts ſhew themſelves in Creatures, who, when new fall'n from the Dam, gather in a company about it ; ſo a Spiritual inſtinct ſhews it ſelf in thoſe, who, being new Born, aſſociate together. So in Phil. 1. 5. Paul gives thanks for their Fellowſhip in the Goſpel from the firſt Day ; as if, when they were not an Hours ſtanding, they deſire it. And therefore in the Acts, to be converted to the Church and to the Lord are uſed promiſcuouſly ; they breathing after a Church-Fellowſhip with the Saints as well as with God.

But our Buſineſs further, is to enquire what manner of Church it is, which Chriſt would have erected ; and unto which his promiſe is made that he will be in the midſt of them.

We ſhall come the better to know what this Church in particular is to be, if we enquire what the Church in general is ?

A Church in general is an Aſſembly of Saints, of Believers, of Men called.

1. It is a Company or Aſſembly united. If there had been but one Angel, or one Man ſaved, he had not made a Church. 'Tis a Body that hath many Members, 1 Cor. 12. 15. and Rom. 12. 6. We being many, are one Body. 'Tis a Nation, 1 Pet. 2. 9. A Flock, an Houſhold, a Kingdom, a Common wealth, Epheſ. 2. 12. The ſame Men, that conſidered a-part are call'd Saints, collectively taken, are called the Church.

2. A Church is a company united in one, for without Union, they are not a Church, but a confuſed Multitude ; Therefore it is called one Body, Epheſ. 4. 4. as there is one God, and one Spirit, &c. 1 Cor. 12. 12, 13. And Epheſ. 4. 16. it is ſaid to be knit together.

3. A Church is a company of Saints united in one. It is a Society of Believers who are called, as 'tis a Nation for Multitude and Order, ſo 'tis a Holy Nation, 1 Pet. 2. 9. as it is an Houſhold, ſo of Faith. As it is a Common-wealth, ſo of Iſrael, Epheſ. 2. 12. As it is a Temple, ſo an Holy Temple, ver. 21. Holineſs becomes thine Houſe, Pſal. 93. 5. It is a Congregation, but of Saints, Pſal. 89. 5. 1 Cor. 1. 2. To the Church of God at Corinth ; to them that are Sanctified in Chriſt Jeſus, and called to be Saints, not by Invitation only, as if all to whom ever the Goſpel is Preached, might have that name ; for ſo the Weſt-Indians, if but Preach'd unto, ſhould be called. But they are called Saints by qualification, that is, they are Sanctified. They that were not my People ſhall be called my People, Rom. 9. 25. (called Saints) that is, that are Saints ; for God calls things as they are. They are called with an Holy Calling, 2 Tim. 1. 9. To all callings a qualification is required. If a Man is to be of the Privy-Counſel, the place requires that he ſhould be Wiſe: If he is to be of a Company to Trade, it is requiſite that he be brought up to it : If he is a Miniſter, that he be Gifted ; and ſo, if he be of a Church, that he be Holy.

4. It is a company joyned to have Fellowſhip with Chriſt, 1 Cor. 1. 9. It is called therefore Chriſt, 1 Cor. 12. 12. and Complementum Chriſti, the fullneſs of Chriſt, Eph. 1. 23.

The Kingdom is Spiritual, ſo are the Subjects ; for Chriſt is, in Relation to his Church, a King of Saints, Rev. 15. 3. To be in a Church is to be fellow Citizens with Saints, Eph. 2. 19. and with Chriſt, 1 Cor. 1. 9. And as Reaſon only fits us to have Fellowſhip with Men ; ſo Grace only qualifies us to have communion with Saints and Chriſt. A Fellowſhip is of thoſe who are alike in Nature and Diſpoſition. Thus God would not have Adam joyned in Fellowſhip with Beaſts, and therefore fore made a Woman for him, as a meet companion, much leſs will God admit his Second Adam Chriſt, and his Members to be joyned with Swine. What Fellowſhip is there between Righteouſneſs and Unrighteouſneſs, 2 Cor. 6. 14, 15, 16, 17. They are a Temple to God, and the Stones which frame it are Hewn, before they are laid in the material Building, 1 Kings 17, 18. and therefore they are to be lively Stones, not Dead, as Peter alludes, 1 Pet. 2. 5. They are a Body, and the Body of Chriſt, and therefore the Members are to be ſimular to the Head. Hence hath ariſen that diſtinction of a Church Myſtical, and of a Church Inſtituted, which ſuppoſe the ſame matter, the ſame Men, and which are but ſeveral Adjuncts of the ſame matter or relations, whereof the one may be Superadded to the other. As in Holland, the ſame Man that is a Member of the Society of the States General is alſo, and may be alſo, of the States of a particular Town; but yet ſtill he muſt be a Dutchman: Or as in London, every Man of a particular Company, may alſo be a Member of the Common-Council of the whole City but yet he muſt be a Londoner, and free of the City. So here in this caſe, if a Perſon is a Member of the Church Myſtical, or of an Inſtituted Church, he ought to be a Saint. As a Church in general is a Company and Aſſembly of Saints united; ſo the Church Myſtical is the general Aſſembly of all Saints on Earth united in Chriſt to him, and one to another: And the Church Inſtituted is, a particular Aſſembly of Saints on Earth, united in Chriſt by a ſpecial Covenant. The Members of both the one and the other, are to be Saints united into a Company and Aſſembly, that ſo there may be a communion.

1. I will ſhew the ground for this Diſtinction of Church, in Scripture.

1. There one Church is called The General Aſſembly, and the Church of the firſt Born, Heb. 12. 23. An Aſſembly it is, and a General Aſſembly: And that part of the diſtinction argues, there is another to be found from which, by that word, it is Diſtinguiſht. And therefore, there are particular Aſſemblies, which alſo muſt be called a Church. Members of this General Aſſembly, theſe Hebrews were; for he ſaith, ver. 22. Te are come to this General Aſſembly as being made a part of it: And that theſe Hebrews were alſo Members of particular Aſſemblies, though Diſperſed through all Countries, and that they had a Relation unto them, is expreſly mentioned, Heb. 10. 3. 25. Not forſaking the Aſſembling of our ſelves together. And they were ſo to Aſſemble, as in a ſpecial Relation joyned to conſider and exhort one another.

Yea, more expreſly we find this mentioned, 1 Cor. 12. 27. where having Diſcourſed of the whole Body in the former verſes, he (in ver. 27.) draws down all he had ſaid in the General of the whole Church, to that particular Church at Corinth, to whom he Writes, chap. 1. 2. Now ye are the Body of Chriſt (ſays the Apoſtle) and Members in particular: Where the Phraſe in particular, hath Reference both to Body, as well as to Members. So as the meaning is this, that they in particular, made a Body of Chriſt; and were Members one of another, alſo in particular. And therefore all that he had Diſcourſed of the Nature of the Body, and the Members, and the Offices, and Duties in General, he brings home as particularly true of them, as making a ſpecial Body a-part, ſo the word is ἐκμέρους. They were a Body a-part in Relation to other Churches, and more particularly Members one of another, and that in ſuch a particular manner, as they were not ſo of any Church elſe. The like we have as expreſs, Epheſ. 2. Where having Diſcourſed of the Body Myſtical, as made up both of Jews and Gentiles, as appears by ve. 16. he ſhews (ver. 19.) their Relation thereunto. Te are no more Strangers, but fellow Citizens with the Saints, and of the Houſhold of God, (namely, that great Houſhold of Heaven and Earth, as he calls it, (chap. 15. and are Built, &c. ver. 20. With all Saints into an Holy Temple. And then he further adds, ver. 22. and you alſo are Builded together for an Habitation of God, through the Spirit. Where 1. He means ſome one more ſpecial further Temple, then to be Members of the Myſtical general Building: For he had ſaid before, ver. 19, 20. Ye are Built up with the whole Church into ſuch a Temple, and it needed not ſo Emphatically be Repeated again. But in that he ſays, you alſo και, &c. he affirms ſome further thing of them, then what he had ſaid of them before. He means ſomething more than that, whereas the whole Body is built into a Temple, they are built with them, as a part of that Temple: For that he had ſaid afore (ver. 19.) they being part of that whole Temple, of which he ſays, all is built, &c. ver.

20. 2.

Ch. II. 20. 2. he makes them a diſtinct Temple from the former, and plainly intends, that as with the whole they grew up into a Temple: So they in particular, were built up as an Habitation, beſides the other. You Epheſians, and you as together conſidered (ſays he) συνοικοδομεῖσθε, are built up together. So as he ſpeaks it not of that Perſonal Relation and Conjunction, which they had with all the reſt of the Saints in the World, and which every one had privately and perſonally to the Myſtical Church (for that was as common to the Galatians as to them) but he means that which they had together in a more peculiar manner, in joynt Relation each to other. If he had deſigned only their common Relation, he would rather have ſaid, you together with all Saints, are thus built up, but this he had ſaid afore; but now (ſays he) You Epheſians together one with another, are built up into a more ſpecial Houſe, or private Oratory (as I may allude to private Chappels in great Cathedrals) or little Sanctuary (as the Prophet ſpeaks, Ezek. 11.16.) private by themſelves. I might prove the ſame out of Epheſ. 4. where having firſt at large Diſcourſed of the whole Body on Earth (ver. 12.) he then paſſeth (ver. 16.) to the uſe, and end, and benefit of a particular Congregation, which he alſo calls a whole Body fitly joyned together, ſo as to ſupply Nouriſhment, and to edifie each other. Which of all the Saints on Earth, making up a Myſtical Body, cannot be ſaid; for how is every one ſo Diſperſed able to edifie each other in love?

And becauſe there is the ſame Reaſon every way of the Body Myſtical, and of the Body Inſtituted; therefore the ſame priviledges every way, which appertain to the whole Body Myſtical, do belong alſo as fully to every ſuch particular Church, ſo as indeed they are one, that is, there is unica & eadem ratio, one and the ſame conſideration of the one and the other, as there is the ſame Nature of a drop that is of the Ocean, ſince both are Water, the one as well as the other. Therefore the Apoſtles do ſo promiſcuouſly ſpeak the ſame things of the one and the other; and in their Diſcourſes, paſs without much Diſtinction from the one to the other. As he that reads an Anatomy of the Body of Man in general, may be ſaid to read it of every Man in particular: So what is ſaid of the inviſible Church may be ſaid and applyed to the viſible. As the one is called the Body of Chriſt, ſo is the other. Yea, as the one is called the whole Body of Chriſt, ſo is the other. So of the Church of the Corinths he ſays, when the whole Church is come together in one place. For the Church of Chriſt is totum homogeneum, an Homogeneal whole, whoſe parts are of the ſame Nature with it ſelf; and ſo what is ſaid of the whole, is ſaid of every part.

CHAP. II.

The Reaſons why Chriſt hath Inſtituted a Congregational Church.

I will now give Reaſons, why Chriſt did Inſtitute ſuch a particular Ordinance, as a particular Congregation of Members joyned, to grow up to be a Body, a Temple apart unto Chriſt, and why he hath thus endowed them with the priviledges, Name and Nature of the whole.

1. That there ſhould be joynt and publick profeſſion of the Name of God; and that God ſhould be Worſhipped of his Creatures, as Aſſembled together, is exceeding neceſſary, and indeed natural. Though the manner of Divine Worſhip is Inſtituted, yet that God ſhould be Worſhipped by many (when many are extant, that may Worſhip him) is as natural, as that he is to be Worſhipped. Therefore all Nations have ever had publick Aſſembly's, in which to Worſhip iheir God's. And therefore in Geneſis, no ſooner did that common Work of Mankind ſpread into Branches; but it is upon the Genealogy preſently Recorded, and put unto it, as the conſequence of it, Gen. 4.26. Then began Men to call upon the Name of the Lord, that is publickly and together; for privately, they had done it afore: Or if it be meant of Idolatrous Worſhip (as ſome interpret it) that the Men began prophanely to call on the Name of the Lord; yet publick it was. And however that they thus fall upon it, argues the voice of Narure as it is, Mich. 4. 5. and is argued from it. The People of God argue from it, to provoke one another to publick Worſhip, of which he there ſpeaks,

(ver. 1, 2.) How in latter Days, that is, under the Goſpel, there ſhou'd be flowing to the Mountain of the Lord, and all People ſhould flow to it. And many Nations ſhall ſay, come, let us go up and Aſſemble, &c. He ſpeaks in the Language of the Old Teſtament, to expreſs the Worſhip of the New. You know the Temple ſtood upon a Mountain, to which the Church of the Jews Reſorted for publick Worſhip, ſo as to go up to the Mountain of the Lord, is to Aſſemble together to Worſhip. And how do they provoke one another to this? By the Law of Nature Written in all Men's Hearts, ver. 5. For all People will walk in the Name of his God; that is, make a joynt and publick profeſſion of him, and together call upon him: For to that he there exhorts, v. 5. It is a Natural inſtinct in the New Creature, therefore they breath after it.

2. As to have Aſſemblies wherein to Worſhip God, is natural; ſo now under the Goſpel, particular Aſſemblies are neceſſary. When indeed the Church was contracted in Judea, ſo as all the Nation might at once meet; for greater Solemnity, God ordained three Solemn meetings every year; and therefore they were a National Church. But now when the Goſpel was Preached all the World over, and Saints were to be gathered from over all the World; it was neceſſary that Church Aſſemblies ſhould be Inſtituted, and ſet up every where. Thus Paul gives Directions for publick Ordinances, that as now they might pray for all Men, which the Jews might not do, ſo that God now would have all Saved, 1 Tim. 2. 4, 6. And therefore he was the Apoſtle of the Gentiles, 8. 7. I will therefore (it is an inference therefrom) that Men pray every where, he ſpeaks of publick Aſſemblies, and the ordering them, as in the whole Epiſtle. Therefore Judea it ſelf, which was before a Church National, and they were to come to the Temple to Worſhip, now had many Churches in it, Gal. 1. 2. And therefore the Prophets ſpeaking of the latter days, and Prophecying of the Church Aſſemblies, then call them not an Aſſembly only (as that of the Jews was called the great Congregation) but Aſſemblies. So Iſa. 4. 5. He ſays, He will create upon every dwelling place of Mount Sion, Aſſemblies, &c. not Aſſembly: Which yet ſhould be all on Mount Sion, and have the ſame priviledge and promiſe, that Mount Sion had. So we have it expreſſed in Malach. 1. 11. Incenſe ſhall be offered up every where; and ſo the Temple was to be every where.

For 3. It cannot be imagined, that Chriſt ſhould not be as good to his Church, in reſpect of Diſpenſations of Grace under the Goſpel, as under the Old Teſtament. Therefore all the Priviledges that the Jews met together in the Temple had, and all the Ordinances wherein they joyntly partook, and the like helps, and more full of Grace in ſtead of thoſe other, were to Succeed in the New Teſtament: For his Name, he ſays, ſhould be as great among the Heathens, as ever among the Jews. Therefore Chriſt ſets up a Temple, and gives power to his Church in all places to ſet up Temples and Habitations to himſelf; and endows all thoſe private Churches, with all the priviledges and endowments that the Aſſembly of the Jews had. And hence now, every ſuch Aſſembly is called the Lord's Mountain, and his Temple; and hence, all the Encomiums mentioned of the Jews Church, are now given to two or three poor Aſſembled. As he ſaid of the Temple, I will put my Name there, (Deut. 12. 11. 1 Kings 8. 29.) ſo now Chriſt's word is, (Matth. 18. 19, 20.) I ſay to you, That where two or three are gathered together, I will be in the midſt of them. Which words as Cameron Notes, are not Aſſertory only; but Inſtitutive. Yea, I ſay further, look what Priviledges and what Ordinances all Saints on Earth, if Aſſembled together, ſhould partake of, the ſame as fully and entirely hath Chriſt appointed, two or three Aſſembling in his Name to partake in, till they all meet together in Heaven.

4. It was for Chriſt's Honour, that it ſhould be thus; that ſuch Spiritual Regiments and Common-wealths, and Bodies of Saints, ſhould be erected to ſhew that Chriſt is King. For Chriſt is a King, and muſt Rule amongſt the midſt of his Enemies, Pſal. 110. Rev. 15. 3. He Reigns over Wicked Men by his Providence; but as he is peculiarly King of Saints, Rev. 15. 3. ſo in and over his Saints peculiarly, and that not in their Hearts only; but outwardly and viſibly in an ordered inſtituted Kingdom and Body. He is King not only in having Saints, but in having Saints ordered and embodied together in Holy Societies, Col. 2. 2. I rejoyce to behold your Order. He is a King over the Bodies of his Saints, as well as their Souls, 1 Cor. 6. 20. for he Redeemed both. And therefore as his work is to guide their Souls inwardly wardly by his Spirit; ſo their outward Man by his Officers and Ordinances appointed. An Inſtituted Church is called his Kingdom, Mat. 21. 43. For he ſays, That Kingdom ſhall be taken away, he means Ordinances, and the Candleſtick of the Church. And it is reaſon, that his Kingly Office ſhould be extended as large as his Prophetical and Prieſtly. His Prophetical reacheth to outward things, to Baptiſm, and the Lords Supper, &c. His Prieſtly Office was performed externally a-fore the World; and ſo he was to the Jews in outward things, Jeſus Chriſt the ſame to day that yeſterday, Heb. 13. 8. The Kingdom then anſwerably, is viſible in an external Adminiſtration. Chriſt was to have an Houſe under the New Teſtament, as under the Old, Heb. 10. 21. We have an High Prieſt over the Houſe of God, aud thereupon he urgeth Aſſembling together, ver. 25. which makes Chriſt an Houſe: Now if we are not to forſake the Aſſemblies, it is then our Duty to begin to form them, and it is remarkable that he ſays Aſſembling, not Aſſemblies only.

5. By the Inſtitution of theſe particular Churches, Chriſt ſets up a Kingdom, and judgeth a-fore-hand. He judgeth them within, by caſting them out if Offenders, which ſhews, that he will not bear with Scandals: And he Judgeth alſo thoſe without, in denying to admit them, and ſo ſeparates between the Pretious and the Vile, and makes a day of Judgment aforehand. Therefore we find it made by the Prophets, the Fruit of theſe Aſſemblies that Chriſt Judgeth amongſt the Nations, Iſa. 2. 3. 4. Michah 5. 2. 3. And another Fruit is that they are Bleſſed, as means to convert Souls, Acts 9. 31.

6. Saints have as much need now of Aſſembling thus, as then. Adam had need of Fellowſhip in Innocency, and much more do we need it in a State of Corruption. Therefore the Apoſtle exhorts upon that ground to theſe Aſſemblies, Heb. 10. 25.

CHAP. III.

A Compariſon between the Church Myſtical, Univerſal, and an Inſtituted particular Church. Wherein they both agree, and in what Reſpects there is a difference between the one and the other. The Definition of a Congregational Church.

SInce there is like Reaſon for the Univerſal Myſtical Church, and particular Churches; and ſince every particular Church hath the Reſemblance, Name, Priviledges, and Attributes of the general, and all that it hath, is Modificated by a ſpecial Inſtitution: Let us therefore compare a little the one with the other, by which we ſhall the more clearly ſee the true Notion and Nature of an Inſtituted Church, by ſeeing both what is common to both, and wherein the one is Modificated, and differs from the other.

A Church Inſtituted, is a company as well as the other, 1 Cor. 10. 16, 17. for th Ordinances of it are a communion, ver. 16. And we being many, are one Body, an partakers of that one Bread, ver. 17. There is only this difference, that an Inſtitute Church is but of as many as come together in one place, 1 Cor. 14. 23. When th whole Church is come together in one place; mark that, he calls that the whole Church which yet was but thoſe Saints at Corinth, 1 Cor. 11. 20. When you come togethe in one, not with one mind only, but in one place: But that other Myſtical Church is the company of Saints all the World over. And the Reaſon why God did contrac this Inſtituted Church to ſuch a number, as could meet in one place, was becauſe th end of that Inſtitution and Meeting, was full communion and entire, ſuch as tha they who meet, ſhould partake in all Ordinances together with one accord, as Ac 2. 46. And then Nature doth teach, that it can be but ſuch a company, and ſo many as can all hear and edifie one another, &c. and who may from the ſame Paſtor, re ceive the Holy Ghoſt, and the ſame provocation of Grace at the ſame time; and wh may Glorifie God with one Mouth, and one Mind, Rom. 15. 6. and ſerve him with on ſhoulder, Zach. 3. 6. And therefore in that Inſtitution of a Church, Matth. 18. he men tions their agreement. 'Tis agreement as met together, which is eſſential to ever

Ordi

Ordinance. If two ſhall agree, our Saviour, *Matth.*18.19: The word is συμφονησοσιν that is make up a Conſort, an Harmony; for Ordinances and Prayer are ſo to God, *Epheſ.*5.19. And therefore, 1 *Cor.*10.16. Though he ſays, many made that one Body at Corinth; yet they were but ſo many, as could be partakers of that one Bread, and receive the Sacrament together, and as many as might all learn, when they Propheſied one by one, 1 *Cor.*14.31. And ſo at Epheſus, (Acts 20.28.) The Elders were to take care of all the Flock, therefore ſuch a Flock is to be no more, then ſuch as Paſtors can take the care of. And therefore in thoſe Countries and Regions, where the Saints did Multiply, their Churches were Multiplied alſo, as in Galatia, there were the Churches of Galatia, 1 *Cor.*16.1. and ſo in Aſia too, *Revel.*1.4.20. Acts 18.41. But the Myſtical Church, is the Aſſembly of all Saints, it is the whole Family both in Heaven and Earth, *Epheſ.*3.15. which, like the Sea, is too vaſt in this World, to be gathered into one place.

2. As the Church Myſtical is a company of Saints; ſo is the Church Inſtituted alſo to be. So was the Church of Corinth, 1 Cor.1.2. To the Church at Corinth, called to be Saints. And it is a company of ſuch as are Elect: So 1 Pet,5.13. The Church which was at Babilon, is ſaid to be Elect together with them, that particular Church was ſuch. Thus Paul Teſtifies of that Inſtituted Church at Philippi, *Phil.*1.1. calling them the Saints there, with the Biſhops and Deacons, and in as much as he mentions Officers, he ſpeaks of them as of an Inſtituted Church. And this he ſays, not ſpeaking of the better part, as giving the Denomination to the whole; but as of every one amongſt them, ver. 6. being confident in this, that you have a good Work in you. And he expreſſeth that it was meet to think ſo of them all, ver. 7, elſe they all had not been meet, to have been of the Church. The like is ſpoken of the Theſſalonians, 1 *Theſ.*1.2. and 1 *Theſ.*5.5. And there is a World of Reaſon for it.

1. For to all callings there is to be a Qualification.

2. Becauſe theſe are to make up a Body to Chriſt, as well as the Myſtical; therefore they muſt be anſwerable to their Head. It would be very unſuitable, Humano capiti cervicem jungere equinam, To joyn Monſtrous Members to ſuch a Glorious Head. They who are joyned to Chriſt, muſt not be Members of an Harlot.

3. Theſe are called to Fellowſhip with Chriſt and his Saints. And as Moral vertues fit Perſons to have communion with Men, ſo Grace only qualifies Men to have communion with Chriſt and Saints.

4. Their Fellowſhip, and Meetings, and Tranſactions, are to be with one accord, Acts 4.32. and with one Heart. Now Faith will give them that. The Believers met with one mind, Acts 4.32. And they only can and will do ſo. There is to be an Agreement, an Harmony, σύμφονία in a Church, and one falſe ſtring makes a Diſcord. There muſt be agreeing in Principles to fit Men for Church-Fellowſhip, and as Men that agree in the Fundamental Laws of a Kingdom, are only fit to be Subjects in that Kingdom: So thoſe only are fit to be Subjects of this Spiritual Kingdom, that agree in acknowledgment of the Fundamental Principles of Godlineſs; which only true Faith will enable a Man to do, Titus 1.1. Philemon 6. Therefore thoſe, who deny the power of Godlineſs, are not to be received; but we are to turn away from them, 2 *Tim.*3.5. Nay, ſuch a mixture will cauſe apparent variance, ſo Chriſt ſays, Matth. 10.34,35. For ſuch Perſons are contrary, and led by contrary Principles; and how then can they be joyned in ſuch a Fellowſhip, as is the moſt near communion with Chriſt.

5. The ends of Church-Fellowſhip, are the Form of it (as I ſhall ſhew anon) Now therefore ſuch matter is only to be taken in, as may comply and be Serviceable to thoſe ends. Chriſt, when he makes any Inſtitution to an end, makes it ſuch as may attain that end; or elſe it is in vain, and ſo not an Ordinance. Now wicked Men are no more fit matter, nor no more capable of the Spiritual ends of a Congregation, than the body of a Beaſt is fit for a reaſonable Soul to dwell in and enform, and to uſe to actions reaſonable. For the ends of this Body of a Church, and of this Holy Society, and of every Member of it, is to edifie one another, and every part is to ſupply Grace to it, *Epheſ.*4.16. And for that Men muſt have received the Spirit, and ſome Spiritual Gift. Therefore thoſe who have not the Spirit of Chriſt, and have no Spiritual Gifts and Graces, have but the Spirit of this World, and are unfit, and will be ſo far from edifying the Church, that (as Solomon ſays Eccleſ. 9: 18.) One Sinner will deſtroy much good. And are ſuch Perſons alſo fit to Reprove, to Judge, and thereby to preſerve the Church pure? Since they are ſuch whom Chriſt calls Swine; they are ſo unfit to Reprove, as they are not fit to be Reproved; *Matth.*7.6. And it is of ſuch the Apoſtle alſo ſpeaks, (1 *Cor.*2.14.) That they cannot receive things Spiritual; but they are fooliſhneſs unto them, and therefore they are unfit to Judge thoſe within, for the Spiritual Man only Judgeth all things, and is Judged of none, 1 Cor. 2.14. How many Men are of Gallio's Temper, if it be a matter of right or wrong, that is to be Judged of in the Common-wealth, they can do it: But if the matter is about the Spiritualneſs of the Law or Goſpel (which things are within the proper cognizance of this Church-Court) they care for no ſuch matter; or if they Judge, they will certainly caſt out their Brethren, *Iſa.*66.5: And ſay God be glorified when they have done.

So then as well an Inſtituted Church, as the Myſtical is to conſiſt only of Saints, and Saints are to be the matter of both; only de facto, indeed there ſometimes falls out this difference.

1. That the Myſtical Church being immediately called by God, conſiſts of thoſe only, whom, as the Apoſtle ſays, The Lord approves and Judgeth ſuch, (2 Cor. 10.18.) without the Judgment of Men coming between, who are Jews inwardly; and whoſe Religion is that of the Heart, and whoſe praiſe is not of Men, but of God, Rom. 2.29. But this Inſtituted Church, though immediately ordained to be of God, and according to his Laws; yet the gathering of it, and aſſembling of it, is an Act of Man's (namely of Saints) and therefore Heb. 10. 25. It is called the Aſſembling themſelves together. And ſuch is the calling and apointing of Miniſters; whoſe calling, though it be of God's Inſtitution; yet the Deſignment, who ſhould be a Miniſter, is immediately by Men. And therefore ſo the Apoſtle Diſtinguiſheth his immediate call from that of other Miniſters, (*Gal.*1.1.) That it was not by Men, but by Chriſt: Hence therefore becauſe what Perſons ſhould be of this or that Congregation is Determined by the Judgment of a company of Men that are Spiritual, whom in theſe things God hath left Supream Judges on Earth, (1 *Cor.*2.14. The Spiritual Man Judgeth all things, &c.) And becauſe they in Judging are, and may be often deceived; hence de facto it comes to paſs, that in great Congregations there may be ſome found that prove Hypocrites. Thus the Apoſtles tells them, Acts 20.30. that in Epheſus, Men of themſelves ſhould ariſe Teaching perverſe things, though, in the inſtitution and choice of Members, never ſo great care was had. But ſtill though theſe Saints may be deceived in the application of the Rule; yet they are to hold faſt the Rule it ſelf, that Saints only are fit matter for a Church, and that ſuch only are to be admitted (tho' they who have the power of receiving them are often miſtaken. Yea, though Temporary Believers may be found in the Church, without a Wedding-Garment; yet to them in the Church they are as Saints, and juſtified as ſuch, being not known to be otherwiſe. So as though before God, and as to his Knowledge, others than Saints may be in a Church, yet none but ſuch as are to us, and in our Judgments, Saints and Holy, and of whom (as the Apoſtle ſays, 1 *Phil.*1.6,7.) it is meet for us to think they have a work wrought, knowing their Election, 1 Theſ. 1. 5. are to be admitted by us into Church-Fellowſhip. By us there are none to be admitted, but ſuch as to us are Saints. So then to us, a Church Inſtituted is all Holy, and Juſtified, and Elected, and Sanctified.

2. And hence alſo, this further difference between the matter of the one and the other ariſeth; that thoſe who are Saints inviſible to Men, or inwardly ſuch; and who yet are viſibly ſuch to God's Eye, are the matter of the Myſtical Church: But ſuch as are viſible Saints to Men, not to wicked Men; (for they are blind, and Judge not of Colours) but viſible to them who are appointed Judges, which are the Saints; who as they only have a Right to Ordinances, ſo to Judge, 1 *Cor.*2.15. So that as True Faith before God, is the Form of the Members of the inviſible Church, ſo a true profeſſion of Faith outwardly, is eſſential to make fit matter capable of being Framed into an Inſtituted Church. And as that is ordained to be an External Viſible Body, ſo a viſible True Faith is neceſſary in the Members of it; and therefore it is called the Houſhold of Faith, Acts 4.23. Now it is not he that ſaith he hath Faith (James 2.14.) in a verbal profeſſion that is outwardly a viſible Believer; But ſaith James, Shew me thy Faith by thy Works, ver. 18. Faith is called therefore, (2 Cor. 9. 13.) a profeſſed Subjection to the Goſpel; but it muſt be a Faith that is effectual to the acknewledging of ſuch Truths, as are after Godlineſs (Tit. 1.1. Philemon 6.) and ſo effectual, as to prevail in others that are Saints, to acknowledge every good thing in them, (Philemon 6.) and ſuch as it may cauſe them that are Saints, to think it meet ſo to judge of them (*Phil.*1.6.) and ſuch as hath the obedience of Faith to attend it, (*Rom.*15.) and ſuch as hath a profeſſed Subjection to the Goſpel in the whole Man; for it is to be ſuch, as is no lye: Now to profeſs in Words, and deny in Deeds, is the greateſt lye that is, 1 John 1. 6. And Lyars are to be without, *Rev.*22.15.

3. As the Church Myſtical is a company knit and united together into one Body to Fellowſhip with Chriſt, and one with another by the Spirit: So alſo is a Church Inſtituted to be.

1. It is to be a company knit and united together; for they, though many, are called One Body (1 Cor. 12.20. and *Epheſ.*4.16.) joyned together and compacted, and (Epheſ. 2. 22.) they are Builded together for an Habitation for God; a Diſtinct Habitation by themſelves (thoſe places ſpeak all of an Inſtituted Church) yea, and ſo in particular united, as to make a diſtinct entire Body unto Chriſt from all other Churches, as thoſe Epheſians (*Eph.*2.22.) did; and the Corinthians, 1 Cor. 12. 27. Thus the Apoſtle ſpeaks likewiſe, Rom.12.4. We being many are one Body in Chriſt, and every one Members one of another. And he ſpeaks it in Relation to an Inſtituted Church, for (ver. 6,7,8.) he Reckons up the Offices and Organs of ſuch a Body (He that teacheth on teaching, &c.) and therefore he intimates them to be in ſuch a particular manner, Members one to another, as to none Elſe; and to be joyned into ſuch a Body, as that they have power by vertue of ſuch a conjunction, to Judge one another that are within the Body (1 Cor. 5. 12.) and to put out from among them, ver. 13. Which power they have not over other Saints, or any Saints in the World; but only over ſuch as were by ſome ſpecial means made of them, and of their Body; and therefore diſtinctly Formed, as into a Diſtinct Common-wealth. And it is a Body not Confuſed, but Ordered, according to ſeveral Gifts, to ſeveral Functions, 1 *Cor.*12. ſo the Apoſtle ſaith of the Coloſſians, that he rejoyced beholding their Order, Col. 2. 5. So he tells the Epheſians, that they were a Body not only joyned together; but fitly joyned together, *Epheſ.*4.16.

2. It is to be a company united by the Spirit. So the Church of the Epheſians was built together by the Spirit, into an Habitation, *Epheſ.*2.22. And thoſe other places are to be underſtood of both, Eph.4.4. There is one Body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called, &c. that is, this is exemplified in you, who by one Spirit have been called into one Body, as into an hope of calling, and (1 Cor. 12. 12.) by one Spirit we are all Baptized into one Body, being made all to drink into one Spirit.

4. It is a company joyn'd to have Fellowſhip with Chriſt, ſuch was the Church of the Corinthians, to whom he Writes as to a particular Church (1 Cor. 1. 2.) and who are ſaid to be called to Fellowſhip with Chriſt, ver. 9. ſuch were the Philippians, who were an Inſtituted Church, Phil 1.1,2. And they are ſaid to have Fellowſhip in the Goſpel from the firſt Day, ver. 5.

Theſe things are common to both the Church Myſtical, and Inſtituted; but there are theſe differences between the one and the other.

1. In their knitting together and union, there is a difference. The union of the whole Church Myſtical is internal, and ſimply by the Communication of the Spirit, and by the commnnion of the ſame Faith and Love, having the ſame Spirit in them, that dwells in Chriſt, and all his Members; and having the ſame Faith (like precious Faith, 2 *Pet.*1.1.) which is called the communion of Faith; and being intereſted in the ſame benefits, in the ſame common Salvation, as Jude calls it, Jude 3. and in the ſame common Lord, (1 *Cor.*1.2. with all that in every place call upon the Name of Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. But the union of an Inſtituted Church (though it contains and ſuppoſeth all this in the matter of it) as it is more Special, particular, and Diſtinct, ſo it is founded upon ſomething more peculiar. And as the Government of it is external, ſo the union of it is alſo. As 1. Is ſeen by gathering together in one place, in the Name of Chriſt, Acts 2.44. All that Believed were together; and Mat. 18.20. Where two or three are gathered together, &c. When the Law was given, and that Church of the Jews was to be Conſtituted, the People were all Aſſembled to meet God. Thus it is under the Goſpel too, when ye come together, ſaith the Apoſtle, 1 *Cor.*14.26. as coming together and cohabitation is neceſſary to a Marryed condition; ſo it is to this. Though indeed it do not ceaſe to be a Church if diſperſed, or any Member to be a Member, if ſevered a while; but their union being in Relation

Ch.III.

lation to gathering together, it may continue as Man and Wife, may be Man and Wife ſtill, , though for a Seaſon they are aſunder, but yet their Relation was ordained to be by coming together, (1 Cor.7.5.) And therefore if either voluntarily will depart, the other party is free, ver. 15. And becauſe this Church-Relation is Ordained for coming together; therefore if any forſake the Aſſembling together, it doth unchurch them, Heb.10.25.

And whereas their gathering is in the Name of Chriſt; it is meant to be either in the Authority of Chriſt, as was ſaid, or further alſo, for the Name of Chriſt, for ſo ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι is taken. This Chriſt ſays, (Matth.11.6.) Bleſſed is he that is not offended in me, that is, for me. So we are ſaid to Exalt the Name of Chriſt in his Ordinances, and every Ordinance is Chriſt's Name, &c. This being gathered in Chriſt's Name, is the end of this Holy company, which Diſtinguiſheth it from all Societies elſe; for Finis in moralibus idem quod forma in naturalibus; the end of Moral things, is the ſame as the form in Naturals. As a company of Students meeting together at publick Acts, &c. makes a Colledge; a company of Men Aſſembling to conſult, are called the Council: So a company of Saints met not to any other purpoſe, as to eat, &c. (for then they make not a Church, 1 Cor.11.20,21,22. Have you not Houſes to eat in, &c.) but in the Name of Chriſt, and to call upon his Name, are a Church for that end put upon the meeting, muſt go to make a Church.

They are to be united together, to a conſtant gathering together. It is not every ſuddain meeting that makes a Church, as to Pray, Faſt, &c. for they are to be compact together, Epheſ.4.16. It is an united company of Brethren, that muſt dwell together in Unity, Pſal.113.1. Jeruſalem the Type of our Aſſemblies, was a City compact, Pſal. 122. 31. The firſt Church (as 'tis called, Acts 2. 47.) continued in the Apoſtles Fellowſhip, and that ſtedfaſt, Acts 2,42,46. For otherwiſe it could not make a diſtinct Body unto Chriſt, as the Epheſians did, Eph:2.22. They were made an Habitation unto God, alluding to the Temple; which was called the Houſe of God, and was a ſetled thing. And the word ἐις κατοικητηριον is obſervable to this purpoſe (as it is by Beza) for κατοικεῖν and παροικεῖν differ as Habitare and commorare, to dwell, and to abide, Natura Domicilium nobis non habitandi ſed commorandi dedit, as Tully ſays. A Church is an abiding place, not a Tent for a Night; and in that he ſays, they were not only an Habitation, but that they dwell together ἐις, &c. κατοικητήριον to be an Habitation, the Phraſe implies conſtantly. And ſurely, that which ſetleth any Common-wealth into a Body, muſt fix this Sacred company. A company meeting at ſeveral Fairs or Marts, never make a Body or Corporation, becauſe they are fluid and part again; but conſtant Aſſembling and Unity, makes a Society; and in as much as it is a Body compacted to edifie it ſelf, it implies conſtancy. For if Members ſhould be Disjoynted, and ſome Members make up the Body the one day, others another, there would be little ſupply of Nouriſhment; for the Nouriſhment is from what every joynt ſupplies.

And therefore to fix them, it is meet and requiſite they be joyned by a ſpecial covenant, which may make and expreſs a more ſpecial Relation. For indeed, as the Relation which Faith internal works between us and Chriſt, is the Form of the Church Myſtical; ſo the Special Relation to Chriſt and to one another, to enjoy all Chriſt's Ordinances, goes to make up the Form of the Church Inſtituted. This Relation a Covenant formally and expreſly works; and conſtant meeting with ſuch an intention, really and virtually makes. And therefore not Saints ſcattered, though living and meeting in one place, makes a Church, Acts 19. 1. Apollo is ſaid to find Diſciples at Corinth, but not a Church.

The Tabernacle, the Type of this Goſpel-Church was knit together by Taches, Exod.26.6. which (Acts 15.16.) is made. by James, the Type of Building up the Church of Chriſt for Worſhip, under the New Teſtament. And if no mention had been made of any ſuch thing; yet the Nature of the thing implies it: For a Scattered People, that Aſſemble not out of an obligation, cannot be ſuppoſed to have power each over other. Hence alſo we find in Scripture, that the Apoſtles Writing to particular Churches, ſpeak of ſuch as were Members in covenant with them, in a Phraſe of propriety and ſpecial Relation. So ſays the Apoſtle of Epaphras, Coloſ.4.2: Who is one of you, in Special Relation: And there was a Stipulated Subjection to Chriſt; 2 Cor.9.13: as indeed all Societies are knit by outward agreements:

2. As the Saints are joyned into one Body, ſo, as occaſion is, into a Body ordered, not confuſed. For God in the Church is not the Author of Confuſion but Peace. It is to be a Kingdom, a Common-wealth of Iſrael, a Body Politick, not civilly Politick, but Spiritually: An Army with Banners, in which are ſeveral Stations, Ranks, Laws and Conſtitutions. Therefore Coloſ. 2. 5. he Rejoyceth, as in their Faith as Chriſtians, ſo in their Order, by which things were ordered in their Church among them. Which Order may note out.

1. An Enjoyment of all Ordinances Inſtituted by Chriſt, according to Chriſt's Laws. So when the Apoſtle had Rectified their Abuſes, and brought them to the Primitive true Inſtitution of the (Sacrament, 1 Cor. 11. 23. That I received of the Lord, I delivered to you) He calls this a ſetting things in Order among them, the Reſt I will ſet in Order when I come, ver. 34. All which Ordinances when rightly and duly Adminiſtred, he calleth, (*ver.*2.) Traditions or Ordinances, as he delivered them. Whereof the one was the right Adminiſtration of the Lord's Supper, *ver.*23. Which I think were called Traditions, not that they were unwritten, as the Papiſt's aſſert; but becauſe they were new Inſtitutions, which came in the room of the Jewiſh Ordinances, and Form of Government, and which were meerly Inſtitutions, de novo, received from Chriſt, and delivered only to them, (as *ver.*25.) implies: And not to be found formerly commanded, in the Writings of the Prophets.

2. The Order of a Goſpel-Church, imports the Ranking and Ordering all their Members into ſuch proper Offices, according to their Gifts; that all thoſe Ordinances might be enjoyed; and all Gifts among them, to the utmoſt, be improved to the uſe of the whole. As therefore it is called a Body, for the Identity of Members in Nature, which are made for ſubſtance of the ſame Fleſh and Nature, (for all Saints are Fleſh of Chriſt's Fleſh, and Bone of his Bone (as we ſay) of thoſe that are a-like and a Kin) and of the ſame Graces: So alſo it is a Body joyned, (*Epheſ.*4.16.) for Union and Unity; and not only ſo, but fitly joyned. It is not only rightly joyned, but fitly placed and diſpoſed according to the Gifts of every Member. It is fitly joyned, not for the Ornament and Beauty only of the whole; but for the uſe and ſupplying true Nouriſhment to the whole. Which we ſhall find to be that which under the Similitude of a Body, the Apoſtle doth much inſiſt on, Rom. 12.4,5,6. 1 Cor. 12.

In a Body there are not only many Members, as was obſerved, and ſo in a Church; But 2. Theſe Members are of ſeveral ſizes and meaſures of Gifts and Graces, Epheſ. 4.16. There is a proportion in every part, which according to its meaſure ſupplies Nouriſhment to the whole; which the Apoſtle calls, (Rom. 12 6.) the proportion of Faith received by each. And 3. Theſe Gifts are divers, (1 Cor. 12. 4.) there are Diverſity of Gifts, as are in the Members of the Body. The Hand is gifted and fitted to do ſomething, which the Eye is not, &c. 1 Cor.12.15. The Hand is not the Foot, &c. that is, ſerves not for that uſe the Hand doth. Which Diverſity of Gifts or fitneſs for uſe to the whole, ariſeth partly out of the ſeveral Inſtitutions and ordering of Graces. All the Members for Subſtance, conſiſts of the ſame Simular parts, Fleſh, Blood, Veins, Nerves, Arteries, Bones, which are a-like in the Hand and Foot; but being variouſly ordered and tempered (as the Apoſtles word is, *ver.*24. συνεκερασε) in one there being more of Nerves, in an other more of Fleſh; in ſome there being one Grace more eminent as Love, Pity, &c. in others Knowledge, &c. accordingly doth there ariſe a ſeveral Gift out of the various compoſition and temperament of the ſame Graces. They alſo ariſe from Superadded habits, infuſed by the Spirit; as in the Primitive Church the extraordinary Gifts wholly did, ver. 9, 10. And now theſe ordinary Gifts (that one ſhould have his underſtanding furniſhed more for words of Knowledge, to teach Churches; another for words of Wiſdom, to apply them wiſely, *ver.*8.) are from a ſeveral inſuſed Habit, put in by the Spirit over and above their Grace.

4. As their Gifts are divers, ſo the Offices, and Adminiſtrations, and Ordinances in the Church are divers; and the one are ſuited to the other, there being no Gift, but an Office is appointed to exerciſe it; and an Ordinance alſo is Inſtituted, unto which both theſe Gifts and Offices ſerve. This we find in Rom. 12.4. that all Members as they have not the ſame Gifts; ſo nor the ſame Office, and in 1 *Cor.*12.4,5. that as there are Diverſities of Gifts, ſo of Adminiſtrations, that is, Offices, or Miniſtries, as the word ſignifies; to exerciſe them in. And the Operations of theſe Ordinances, and Succeſs by thoſe Ordinances, are anſwerable in the Hearts of the reſt. And all theſe are fitted to all the needs in the Church, (ver. 21.) The Eye cannot ſay to the Foot, I have no need of you; not ſo much as a little finger can be wanting.

5. As the whole Church hath need of the right placing and diſpoſing of all theſe Members to thoſe ſeveral Offices, for the enjoying all thoſe Ordinances, ſo Chriſt hath appointed it. This is the Order of the whole, and makes it a Body, when the Hand ſtands not where the Eye ſhould, nor the Foot where the Hand ſhould, which diſpoſure the Apoſtle (ver. 24.) called ſetting divers Officers in the Church, or fitly ordering them. And therefore to this Day, the putting or ordaining of any to the Miniſtry, is called giving and taking Orders.

In this doth this Inſtituted Body differ from that Myſtical; that though, when all the ſcattered Members of that Myſtical Body, ſhall come all together at latter day, there will be a differing meaſure of Grace and Glory (which Epheſ. 4.14. The Apoſtle calls the meaſure of the Stature of every Member) which, put together, makes up Chriſt's fullneſs, and each Perſon a perfect Man in his Body Myſtical, all having their ſeveral, yet full Stature: Yet then becauſe there ſhall be a perfect Unity in Faith and Knowledge, as there ſhall be no need of Ordinances (God being all in all, and the Lamb the light of them, and ſo no Temple there, Revel. 21.23.) ſo nor of variety of Gifts and Offices, which in this Inſtituted Body are found, Till we all come to the Unity, &c. and no longer, ver. 13.

We may then take this for a ſure Rule, in Reading the Epiſtles of the Apoſtles, that where we find the Body of Chriſt with Members, and varieties of Gifts and Offices, and Executions of Offices ſpoken of; there this Inſtituted Body of Chriſt is only and principally meant.

The Church Myſtical, and the particular Churches Inſtituted agree in this, that both of them are ordained, that in them we might have a Fellowſhip with Chriſt, and one with another, ſo (Phil. 1.5.) It is called Fellowſhip in the Goſpel. And in the Inſtituted Church, there are the ſame Ordinances that are in the Myſtical, only there are ſome Ordinances in this, that are not in the other; ſo as it differs from it in ſome ways and means of Fellowſhip. In the Myſtical Church, the Members have Fellowſhip with Chriſt, by Duties of the firſt command, eſpecially private Prayer, &c. but in an Inſtituted Church, they have communion with him by Duties of the ſecond command: That as the Church it ſelf is an Ordinance, ſo the means of Fellowſhip in it, are Ordinances external alſo. Chriſt here communicates himſelf by publick Gifts and Diſpenſations, by the Offices of Teachers, Paſtors, Elders; and by Sacraments, and by Excommunication, &c. and ſo by theſe ways too, the Members have Fellowſhip one with another. By Ordinances of the Myſtical Church, as the Members have common Faith; ſo in immediate fruits of it, they have and may have a communion; as to love: and ſhew effects of it by Relieving, Reproving, &c. For if there be a communion of their Perſons, then alſo of their Graces, Philemon 6. Titus 1. 4. If they have a communion, as of one Chriſtian Friend with another, then in Offices of Friendſhip too. Thus having the ſame Spirit of Faith, they may build one another in Faith by Speech, Pſal. 116.10. I Believed, therefore ſpeak. They have the ſame Spirit of Prayer, and therefore may Pray in the Holy Ghoſt, may ſay our Father, and ſo likewiſe out of Love, may Relieve one another. But in a Church Inſtituted, there is this difference.

1. Tho' that theſe things are all taken in; yet they are made conſtant Set Duties, not to be omitted. To others they are but occaſional, tho' by a ſpecial obligation, thus they are bound to do good to all, but eſpecially to the Houſhold of Faith; and ſo to love all, and to pray for all Saints as occaſion is; but theſe joyned in Church-fellowſhip are eſpecially, Setly, and ex Officio, by Office engaged in theſe Duties: As to talk Holily every Day, but ſetly on the Sabbath Day. Therefore Exhortation to theſe common Duties, comes in after a Church ſuppoſed to be Inſtituted ſo, Rom. 12. 9,10,11 Heb. 10. 23,24,25.

2. Theſe common Duties are taken in here as Ordinances, and ſo have a Superadded Relation put upon them; ſo as they have the Nature of an Ordinance. Thus (Matth. 18.15.) Private Admonition is made an Ordinance; and therefore comes in after and upon the Inſtitution of ſuch a Church-fellowſhip, Heb. 10. 23, 24,25.

3. In a Church Inſtituted there are Ordinances, in which the Myſtical Church out of ſuch a State, cannot at all partake. There is the Sacrament, which is a Communion of many made one Body, 1 Cor. 10.17. and there is Excommunication, which ſuppoſeth a Body; and a Fellowſhip engaging each other, and having power to Judge them within it ſelf. Thus likewiſe there are Offices in an Inſtituted Congregational Church, which are not in the Univerſal Myſtical Church. The Jews had publick Feaſts and Ordinances, not to be uſed out of the Holy Mountain, and a great Aſſembly, (Lev. 4. 4. Deut. 12. 5,6. and ver. 14.) which was not to meet out of it, Ezek. 37. 26, 27. And this was a Type of Goſpel-Aſſemblies, Heb. 10.25. Iſa. 2.2,3,4. As private performances are not accepted, until a Man is a Member of the Myſtical Body; ſo nor theſe, till a Man is joyned in the Inſtituted Body. As Miniſters are ſet in the Church, (1 Cor. 12.28.) ſo are theſe Ordinances too.

4. In an Inſtituted Congregational Church, there is a further Bleſſing on all Duties. We Pray in private, but in the Temple more acceptably, we Reprove a Brother, but in a Church way more acceptably. There may be a Preaching out of Seaſon, but in the Church 'tis in Seaſon, as Sermons, on Week-days, bleſs; but on the Sabbath, give a ſpecial Bleſſing Redoubled from the conſideration of the Day, and of the Duty, ſo it is here in this caſe, Pſal. 133. 3. The Lord hath commanded a Bleſſing.

Thus, one end of a Church is, that a Man therein may enjoy further fellowſhip and more ways of communion than out of it. There is a threefold Fellowſhip.

1. Perſonal in Secret Duties; ſo John, in Pathmos, had Fellowſhip with Father, Son, &c. 1 John 1: 3.
2. There is a Myſtical Fellowſhip common to all Saints.
3. There is a communion of Saints in an Inſtituted Church, which takes in all that is in the other, and ſome things beſides. This was Typified out in the Jews, who had private communion in their Synagogues, as they had a publick communion in their National Worſhip.

Another end of communion of Saints, in a particular Church, is to edifie one another in Faith and Love, which is the end of all Gifts, Ordinances, and of the Inſtitution of a Church it ſelf, Epheſ. 4.16. and Coloſ. 2.19. The whole Body being thus fitly knit by what every Joynt, and Calling, and Member, ſupplies in every part, doth the whole in every part encreaſe to the edifying of it ſelf in Love. For this end alſo, the ſeveral Gifts and Offices do ſerve, ver. 12. Paſtors, Teachers, &c. for the edifying of the Body of Chriſt. It is not only πρὸς καταρτισμὸν, which we Tranſlate perfecting, but it may ſignifie the joynting in of Members, ſo as it includes converſion, and the bringing Men into the Body, which are ſcattered from it; and the engrafting and joynting them into the Body of Chriſt, and the excellency of Gifts is to be meaſured by it, 1 Cor. 14.12. But alſo for edifying the Saints. Now to have the Church edified, is as much, and of as much moment and neceſſity, as to have the Saints converted at firſt: For there is a fullneſs of Stature appointed, and every Member muſt grow up unto it, before it goes to Heaven; for when all meet, every Member muſt have a due proportion in the whole. And therefore Chriſt ſays, (Matth. 18 3.) Except ye be converted, i.e. Except ye be further converted; ye Diſciples already converted, ye cannot be Saved. Now for this edifying every part, doth this Ordinance of a Church, and of the Offices in it ſerve. And the Reaſon why among us, the Miniſtry ſerves to converſion more then building up; and the Gifts are more to work on Wicked Men, than to build up Godly Men, is that we want this Ordinance of a Right conſtitution of Churches, and of the Ordinances and Officers thereof. Whereas yet it is of as much conſequence as the other. For as by converſion, the Church is encreaſed Extenſively in Perſons, ſo, in the other, Intenſively in Graces: And to this end ſhould all exerciſes, in Church Aſſemblies, and other meetings of particular Members of it in private tend, 1 Cor. 14.26. Let all things be done to edification, ver. 31. That all may learn and all may be comforted. And ſo in private meetings of the ſame Body, they ſhould provoke to love and good Works, Heb. 10.24. and to have the Church edified.

And to conclude this, thus hath God ordained, that till the whole Body meet together, with every Member grown up to its full Stature (when they ſhall grow no more, and need no more edifying, being come to its full growth) theſe particular Bodies ſhould ſerve to encreaſe them, and to fit them for that General Aſſembly againſt the time that they then meet; when this imperfect Church, and all the Gifts and Ordinances of it, ſhall be ſwallowed up in that General Church, as Rivers are when they fall into the Sea; and then all this, which is imperfect, ſhall be done away.

This communion of Saints in a particular Church, is further deſigned to the glory of God through Chriſt, which is the end of all: So gathering together in his Name, may be underſtood. Which may mean for his Name (as was obſerved) ſo 2 Cor. 20. 8. Thou haſt Built a Sanctuary for thy Name. He would put his Name there; and his Name was Great, great there, Pſal. 76. 1. Epheſ. 3. 21. Unto him be Glory in the Church through Chriſt. And through all his Works praiſe him; yet his Saints bleſs him, Pſal. 145. 10. And they ſpeak of the Glory of his Kingdom, and of the Glory of his Power, ver. 11. And where but in the Aſſembly of the Saints? Praiſe waiteth for thee in Sion, Pſal. 65. 1. that is in the Church, where the ſound of Praiſes Eccho again, and Reſound in every Heart and Multiply, and is made more Glorious, therefore ſays he (Pſal. 35. 18.) I will give thanks in the Great Congregation; and I will praiſe thee in the preſence of much People; for that is the moſt proper place of Praiſe, and of making his Name Glorious.

This Fellowſhip of Saints in a Church, is all through the Spirit, Epheſ. 2. 22. Built through the Spirit: 1. It is the Spirit makes them Saints, and ſo fit matter for this Building. 2. It is the Spirit, and not Man, that makes them willing, and moves their Hearts, to joyn in this Ordinance. 3. It is the Spirit, that gives all the Gifts that are in the Members. 4. It is the Spirit that is that Energy (as the word is, Epheſ. 4. 16.) through which every part ſupplies Nouriſhment to others.

The Definition of a True Goſpel-Church, will Reſult out of the recollection of all theſe forementioned parts together. It is a company of Saints Aſſembling together in one place, built by a ſpecial covenant into one Diſtinct Body, which, as occaſion is, is to be fitly ordered to enjoy conſtant Fellowſhip with Chriſt in all his Ways and Ordinances; to their own mutual edification, and the Glory of God through the Spirit. And the cauſes of it may ſeverally and apart be conſidered, as included all in this Definition.

1. The true, and only true matter of this Church is Saints viſibly obeying Chriſt, and a true profeſſion of this, is the only true Adequate note of the matter of it.

2. The Special Relation which they have to Chriſt, and one to another in this way, and the Fellowſhip with Chriſt, and with one another, is the true Form of a Church. The mutual agreement works that ſpecial Relation, and is the Inſtrument of conjoyning this Matter and Form.

3. The Order and Right Adminiſtration of the Ordinances, and diſpoſing of Members is the Forma Externa, the External Form of this Body. The Bleſſed Spirit that Acts and Breaths in all the forma Aſſiſtens, the Aſſiſtant Form, and their own Edification and God's Glory, through Chriſt their Head, is the Final cauſe of this particular viſible inſtituted Church.

CHAP. IV.

That Jeſus Chriſt hath given Liberty and Power to his Saints, to imbod themſelves into Congregational Churches. That in doing ſo, they are not gui ty of ſinfull Separation or Schiſm.

WE have ſeen, that a particular Church is the Inſtitution of Chriſt, and wha this Church is, and of whom to be made up, and how: There yet remains ſhew the Riſe, Original of ſuch Churches, and to clear it out, and by whom any ſuc Churches are to be Reared, Erected, and Begun, and Set up; and in whom the Pow and Authority lies to begin and Build, and gather together Saints into ſuch a Churc Which we muſt conſider; for otherwiſe, though the thing done is Lawful and Warra table, and is God's Ordinance; yet we may ſtill be ask't (as they ask't Chriſt) by wh Authority do ye theſe things?

For the building of the Temple, it was not only neceſſary, that a command and Inſtitution could be produced, that ſuch an Houſe was to be built; which though Moſes gave expreſs Warrant for, but yet this was not Warrant enough for every one to begin to Build it; no not for David, for though he was the King of Iſrael, and ſo had the Supream power in the Common-wealth, &c. committed to him; yet it was beyond his Commiſſion to Attempt the Building it, till he ſhould have a Special Commiſſion from God to do it, as God tells him, 2 Sam. 7. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. He indeed provided Materials, and gave the Platform; but Solomon was only to build it, v. 13. As therefore we are to look to a word of Inſtitution, that it be done, and to a right Pattern and Modell how it be done, and to right Materials, of whom this Houſe be built; ſo as much alſo to the true and lawful Power, by which it is to be put in Execution; and by whom it may be built. For as the Apoſtle to the Hebrews tells us, (Heb. 3, 4.) Every Houſe is built by ſome Man; ſo this Houſe muſt have a lawful Builder.

All Aſſemblies (as at firſt I intimated) muſt be conveened by lawful Authority; and ſo muſt this. Now though it is Warranted to be ſet up in Chriſt's immediate Inſtitution; yet the ſetting of it up is done by Men, whom Chriſt Authorizeth to do it. He Reareth it not as he doth our Houſe in Heaven, without Hands (1 Cor. 5. 1.) but his Temple here below, as that of Solomon's is made with Hands; and the Rearing of it runs through the Hands of ſome, as the Builders of it.

Now there are that pretend to have this power as of Governing; ſo only of beginning and giving Warrant to Saints to make Churches: Who yet will be found to prove in this, ſuch Builders as the Phariſees, who refuſed the head Stone, and neither build truly themſelves, according to the Pattern, nor will ſuffer others. And they are ſuch Magiſtrates, and ſuch Church-Governours, who would call in all Church-Patents, not erected by themſelves, with a quo Warranto?

This power muſt certainly lie ſomewhere, elſe it were an Inſtitution in vain, which could never be produced into Act. Now this is that which I am about to Demonſtrate. That as the Saints and Members of Chriſt Myſtical, are only fit matter for this Church; ſo they have an immediate Independent Power and Authority from Jeſus Chriſt, their immediate Head and King, to gather and combine themſelves in ſuch an Aſſembly, without expecting Warrant from any Governors, what ever on Earth: I ſhall firſt explain, and then prove it.

1. Miniſters make not a Church, nor are they or their power requiſite to the firſt gathering of it. The Miniſters or Church-Governors, even thoſe that begat to Chriſt, have not this power of caſting us into Churches, and Diſpoſing us herein. So far as they had a hand in begetting us: So far they may have a hand in it, that is by directing us to it, and exhorting us unto it; but the power is in our ſelves immediately. And there is this Reaſon, why the power of gathering Churches is not Dependent on them, becauſe they are to be ſet in Churches, 1 Cor. 12. 28. Acts 14. 23. There were Churches gathered, e're Elders were made in them. And then beſides, if ſuch a power was Reſident in the Miniſters, then when they dye, a Congregation ſhould ceaſe to be a Church. We are not then to a-wait the leave of Church-Governors, for the gathering of a Church.

2. Two or three Saints have an immediate power from Chriſt, to begin this Fellowſhip.

1. It is ſo in Chriſt's Inſtitution, Matth. 18. 20. The Writ or Commiſſion for it runs immediately and ſingly in his Name, not in the Kings, nor in the Miniſters, &c. becauſe his Power and Authority is Warrant enough. Neither is it the meaning only, that when ſo gathered, they ſhould do all in his Name, but even to Gather themſelves into a Church, is in his Name. For if the very gathering together, be an Ordinance of it ſelf to frame a Church thereby; then there is the ſame reaſon of it, that there is of all other Ordinances. And therefore as when gathered, they have power in his Name, to Excommunicate in his Name, 1 Cor. 5. 4. and to Baptize in his Name, &c. ſo to gather in his Name too: And as a Magiſtrate hath power to forbid thoſe an Ordinance to be Adminiſtred, ſo not to hinder this other. For if gathering together it ſelf be an Ordinance, as it is, it therefore hath his Name put to it, as well as the reſt; and they have not power to intermeddle in it, nor is their power to be required for the one, more than for the other. And beſides Chriſt's bidding Saints to gather in his Name, is as if the King ſhould in a Commiſſion, ſay to ſuch and ſuch when ye are gathered together in my Name, do thus, which implies, that he gives them power in his Name to meet.

Cha. IV.

2. As Chriſt did thus immediately in his Name ordain it: So the Apoſtles taught the Diſciples to practice it as immediately from Chriſt, without expecting leave from Magiſtrates or any other; and what they taught them to do, we may do to the end of the World. And there is the ſame reaſon for doing it under Magiſtrates, Chriſtian, as Heathen; for the power is but the ſame. The Apoſtles bad them not forſake Aſſembling themſelves, *Heb.*10.25. He ſpeaks not only to particular Perſons not to leave the Aſſemblies; but to the whole Churches of the Jews, not to forſake Church Aſſemblings, not to break up their meetings, notwithſtanding they were Perſecuted, ver. 33. And ſo for the ſame reaſon, we are not to forbear to Aſſemble. And the true Radical Fundamental grounds of this are,

1. Becauſe as Jeſus Chriſt is the King of Saints, ſo he is an immediate King unto them, Epheſ. 1. 22. As God hath given him to be over all things, ſo over all things a Head to his Church; ſo as in this point of Head-ſhip, no Inferior power on Earth doth come between. In all matters which immediately do paſs between, and which concern him and them in this Relation, he is an immediate Governor to them; and hath put none of his power out of his Hands, to Magiſtrates or the civil power. And therefore his Ordinances they are to exerciſe and enjoy, without any immediate Commiſſion from Men.

2. As he is thus immediate King; ſo he hath Reſerved this power to himſelf: And you ſhall find that Chriſt mentions this his Tranſcendent power, to this very purpoſe. He firſt ſent his Apoſtles out to Preach, and make Diſciples, *Matth.*28.19. All power is given to me in Heaven and Earth, (ſays he) Go ye therefore and make Diſciples, (as the word is) and Baptize them, and Teach them to do what ever I command, whereof this, as was ſhewn, was one. And in this ſaying, I am not with you only, but thoſe that believe on me, to the end of the World, (ver. 20.) Chriſt mentions his Supream Power, and ſhews that he was able to command and make good this; for he had power over all. He commanded it, and promiſed this. And with all to ſee the equity of it, conſider that he who is over all, and hath derived much of his power to Kings and Magiſtrates, his Vice-gerents on Earth, hath Subjected the Eſtates, Lives and Perſons of his Saints as Men, as well as the reſt of Men to them; yet that which concerns Spiritual power between him and them as their King, he reſerved to himſelf, as a ſo exempt flower of his Prerogative. And it is as equal he ſhould aſſume it and ordain it thus, as it was that God ſhould reſerve to himſelf one day of Seaven, having given us Six. So doth Chriſt allow Magiſtrates power in Temporal things over Men, and all Creatures here below; only his peculiar People, and Royal Nation, as they are Saints, and in things pertaining to him and his Worſhip, he hath Exempted them. The Magiſtrates are indeed to uſe their power, to ſee his Laws kept; ſo that this Liberty of ours, is not to be maintained and practiſed of us, as our Liberty; but as Chriſt's Prerogative, which we his Courtiers are not to ſuffer to be encroached upon, or diminiſhed.

3. As he is thus a King immediate, and hath reſerved this power to himſelf; ſo he hath given and imparted all to his Saints, that might fully enable them, and qualifie them for it.

1. By giving them Right, and ſuch a Right, as is Natural to a Saint, as a Saint; and therefore can no more be encroached on by them, then Natural Liberties of Men, as Men May be invaded. The Saints (as was ſaid) by reaſon of the Divine Nature do breath after a Fellowſhip one with another, even as every one as a Man, doth after fellowſhip with one of the ſame kind. It is not good for Man to be alone (as God ſaid, Gen. 2. 18.) And therefore he Created the Woman, and beſides Inſtituted that Ordinance of Marriage in Paradiſe, for the comfort and propagation of Mankind. The Right unto which Fellowſhip, and the comforts of it belongs unto a Man or Woman as ſuch naturally, as likewiſe there is a Natural propenſion to it. So likewiſe to ſatisfie this common deſire in all Saints, of having Fellowſhip together, Chriſt the Author of this New World and Generation, ordained this Ordinance of a Church, and Ordinances to be enjoyed in it, for the Building up of the New Creature; and the Propagation of it to others. And likewiſe the Right unto this Fellowſhip, and the Ordinances of it doth reſide in a Saint as a Saint; and ſo in all Saints, whereever they be. So Chriſt ſays of Children, Mar. 10. 14. Suffer them to come to me, and for- bid them not, for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven; that is, they have Right in me, as well as you, and in ſome Ordinances, as well as you. But more expreſly the Holy Ghoſt ſpeaks, Rev. 22.14. Bleſſed are they that do the commandments, that they may have Right to the Tree of Life, and to enter into the City. He ſpeaks of that Glorious Church, afore the end of the World; which was that City; and the Tree of Life is Chriſt, in the Ordinances of that Church: For ſo to Adam, the Tree of Life was a Sacrament of the Second Commandment. Which Tree of Life ſtanding in the City, a Man muſt firſt enter into, and be admitted into the City; and then to the eating of that Tree. So that,

1. He that doth the commandments, and is a Godly Man, hath a Right as ſuch both to the Sacraments and to a Church-fellowſhip: But to the Sacraments but Remotely; and not till firſt admitted into the City. So that a Saint's immediate Right to the Sacrament, is founded in a Church-State, into which he muſt firſt be admitted; yet ſuch a Radical Potential Right he hath, as he ought to be admitted; as every Man as a Man, hath a Right to Marriage comforts, but yet remotely; for he muſt be Marryed firſt, and entred into that Fellowſhip, and then he hath an actual Right.

But 2. He hath to a Church-fellowſhip, a more immediate Right, ſo as there is nothing betwixt him and it; but only that others joyn with him in it, as in a Marriage-fellowſhip it is.

3. Unto this Fellowſhip and Ordinances none other have Right, ver. 23. Without are Dogs, and that make a Lye, falſe Profeſſors, and Rev. 21. 27. There ſhall in no wiſe enter into it any thing that defileth, &c.

2. As they thus have a Right to this Fellowſhip and Ordinances (Chriſt having ordained them, and them alone, as the Children's Bread, and not for Dogs) ſo Chriſt hath given them an immediate power from himſelf to enjoy theſe Ordinances, not deriving it from any other power whatever, but his own. Wherein it doth, in part, differ from that Ordinance of Marriage, to which, though a Man hath a Right as a Man, yet Parents have power over their Children (1 Cor. 7.37.) to enjoin them in this Ordinance, that their conſent be asked, and obtained. But it is not ſo in this Combination Spiritual, unto which a Saint, as a Saint, hath both a Right and full power to caſt themſelves, and joyn in ſuch a way immediately; not only without asking Magiſtrate's conſent. Whoas in Marrying of the Subjects, they have no power in any Common-wealth, nor are to have, (it being an Act of Natural Right, not Civil, and ſo out of his Bounds) ſo much leſs have they power in this Spiritual Union, it being a Spiritual Right, which is Tranſcendently more out of the Sphere of their Authority and Power. Alſo according to the Law of Nature, King's have nothing to do with Family Government and Order, to appoint whom I ſhall admit, &c. becauſe their power preſuppoſeth Family Government firſt: Much leſs have they power in God's Family-matters.

1. 'Tis true indeed, they have a power to permit it. So Cyrus gave commiſſion to build the Temple, and protected them in it. And therefore Paul bids them in their Congregations, to Pray for Kings, 1 Tim. 2.2,3,4. That they may lead peaceable Lives in all Godlineſs, and ſo in all the Ways and Ordinances of it. And that advantage the Saints have, when Magiſtrates are Godly, &c.

2. They have power to exact the performance of Chriſt's Laws. Magiſtrates have a power to puniſh Saints that are either Subjects, if they neglect any Ordinance, and ſo if they neglect among the reſt, this Duty of caſting themſelves into Aſſemblies. And God's good Hand may be with them in ſuch commands, as 2 Chron. 30. When Hezekiah ſent out commands to the People to Aſſemble to the Paſſover, ver. 12. The Hand of God was to give the People one Heart, to do the commandment of the King, by the word of the Lord.

3. They need not to expect their power or leave, for their gathering into a Church, as if without it, ſuch a Combination were unlawful; nor to forbear out of Conſcience of their Prohibition. If indeed they uſed force or perſecution actual, they might forbear their Aſſemblies as the Diſciples, Acts 8. 1. and ſcatter themſelves; but not becauſe of the command ſimply, but the Perſecution; becauſe God will have Mercy, not Sacrifice.

4. Chriſtian Magiſtrates have no more power herein, then Heathen Magiſtrates; for his converſion encreaſeth not his power, but Sanctifieth it. And therefore not as Chriſtian Magiſtrates are we to expect their leave if we have immediate power from Chriſt.

3. Chriſt hath inveſted his Saints with ſuch a power, by giving them power to Judge of, and to call each other to come into ſuch Church-Fellowſhip. Let us go to the Mountain of the Lord, Eſa. 2. 3. For the Spiritual Man Judgeth all things, and is Judged of none; and therefore is Supream Judge in things Spiritual, as this meerly is: As he is a Judge of Truths (ſo as he needs no outward Judge in Doctrines) ſo alſo of Perſons. And if they have power to Judge them within, without the help of Magiſtrates power; then alſo to Judge whom to take in.

4. Chriſt Inveſts them with this Right, by communicating his Offices to them, even as Moſes put ſome of his power upon the Elders; ſo hath Chriſt on his Church. They are Kings and Prieſts, and made ſo by him; and if ſo, then in what they are Kings, they are Supream, and Independent, Rev. 1. 6: And as he is to have an eternal Government over them; ſo they are to have towards one another in his Church Fellowſhip.

5. This Kingdom is too Tranſcendent for the Sphere of any Inferior power to deal in. For their's is but of this World; but my Kingdom, ſays Chriſt, is not of this World, John 18. 36. And if they have nothing to do in things Natural, which Men as Men have a Right and Power to do, much leſs in that which is Spiritual, and which belongs to Saints as Saints.

6. It is a Liberty that Chriſt hath purchaſed for his Saints: Which, whatever it be, we are to ſtand faſt in, Gal. 5.1. Now this is part of our Liberty, that in matters of Worſhip; which are things of another World, we are not Subject to Ordinances of Men, 2 Col. 20. Why as living in the World, are ye ſubject to Ordinances, In things of this World, you may be ſo, but not in things of another World; ſuch as Chriſt's Ordinances, whereof the Fundamental one is this of Church-Fellowſhip. Which Liberty, though the Defence of it, hath coſt us our Liberty in the way we once went in, and in the Ordinances then enjoyed; and ſo in ſome things, and eſpecially in ſome times, may be a Snare; yet it is a Royalty, which take all times and ſeaſons (that may run over the Churches Head) is for our Advantage, that by vertue of it in all times, we may enjoy the Ordinances as freely from Chriſt in one time or Age as in another.

7. For that was the end why Chriſt ordained it thus. For if Chriſt had not given this immediate Independent power to the Saints, as well as Right, then they might in ſome Ages, yea, in moſt, never have enjoyed that which they had a Right unto; and ſo that Right would have been in vain. But Chriſt did not leave his Saints ſo Deſtitute; but that as he gave them a fitneſs for a Church-Society, deſires after it, a Right to it, and Ordinances to be enjoyed; ſo he gave power to enjoy them Independently, let Magiſtrates, &c. be in all Ages what they will.

Thus you ſee what Power and Liberty we have to begin a Church: But then again, the queſtion and caſe will further be put; that we living under Chriſtian Governors, and among Churches and Congregations allowed by them: What Warrant may we have for this apart, and Clanculary practice, of ſetting up ſuch a Church as this?

In anſwer to this, ſuppoſe them Churches we will, as indeed I will not Diſpute it (only to any of you that think them not; you have the fuller Warrant for that Practice, Warrant enough for that opinion; which I have not) therefore I will go upon Suppoſition, and ſuch grounds, as all may and will agree in.

1. Though they are Churches; yet if you were never truly Members of any, you are free to begin where you will; and ſo to be of the beſt. This liberty we under the Goſpel have, that the Jews had not; for there being to them but one Church, and that was National under the High Prieſt; they were in no caſe, to ſet up another; and but in caſe of Idolatry, to remove from communion with it. But now under the Goſpel, Churches may be erected every where by Saints, and 'tis free to them to joyn with whom they pleaſe. Now for us, whether any of us may account our ſelves Members of any of their Churches, needs not much examining. To give our ſelves up to ſuch a Fellowſhip with thoſe, with which we did partake the Ordinances, was not our Intention then; but we came to receive Chriſt, as Members of his Myſtical Body, and ſo as ſuch who had a Perſonal Right to Chriſt, and that was all. Which Acts, though God accepted, winking at our Ignorance; and for thoſe times and oc-caſions of receiving Sacraments, accepted them as Church Acts ; yet not ſuch as to oblige us to the Congregation we received in; we intending no more ſpecial communion with the Saints therein, in one than in another.

2. Though they are Churches before God, and ſo to be acknowledged by us, in our opinion of them; yet they are not ſuch as neceſſarily we ſhould be tyed to continue in; and not to remove from.

1. Becauſe they are Churches defective in Ordinances, it is Warrant to remove to ſuch a Church, where all may be enjoyed (which, do what we can, could not be in them) and this by vertue of that liberty mentioned under the Goſpel. So as it is not a Removal from no Church to a Church; but from a Defective Church, to a Church more compleat in all Ordinances of Propheſying, Offices, Excommunication, &c. And in ſuch Churches, where the Admiſſion uſeth not to be Formal, the leave to depart needs not be Formal.

2. Becauſe they are Defiled Churches to our Judgments, and ſo Defiled, as to continue in them, a Man himſelf would become Defiled alſo; in this caſe a Man may remove from them; and therefore much more he may chooſe, whether he will ingage in them when he is free. For though they remain Churches to my Judgment ſtill (as a Leprous Man is a Man) and that becauſe they are ſo in God's acceptation; yet to me they are the ſame as no Church, if I cannot enjoy the Ordinances in them; or ſhall be Defiled in the enjoying them. So as they may be Churches as to their State, when not in uſe to me.

As 1. If to the free enjoying any Ordinance, any thing ſinful muſt be practiſed; as in receiving the Sacrament, let that Church be in it ſelf, and in my Judgment otherwiſe never ſo Reformed, yet if this be impoſed on me, or I muſt not receive; it is no Mother to me, for it denies to me her Child, the Bread which is due to me as a Child's Portion.

2. In other practiſes it is ſo Defiled, as that I cannot conſtantly be a Member in it, but I muſt alſo be Defiled; as in mixt receiving, in which ſince the wicked are made one Body with the Saints, there is a ſin which lies ſomewhere, 1 Cor. 10.17. And if that the not exerciſing this power, which is due to a Congregation, and which they are not to forbear to exerciſe, in caſting out ſuch is a ſin of the whole, and it be a Duty not to joyn with them: Then I am not to partake conſtantly with them (becauſe then I ſhould partake of their Sin) in ſuch a mixture, and ſhould alſo ſin in omitting the Ordinance of withdrawing from them, 2 Tim. 3. 5. The command being, Ezek. 44. 24. That God's Laws ſhall be kept in all the Aſſemblies, (eſpecially ſeeing by the Godlies preſence, they become Aſſemblies; and God vouchſafes unto them that priviledge) they again ſhould ſee to execute his Laws, which from Chriſt Independently they have Tranſmitted to them. However, if this Practice, and Omiſſion, be made but doubtful unto me, it is to me a Sin to continue among them.

3. Though it ſhould be granted, that I might occaſionally receive the Sacrament in them (as being Churches pro hac vel illâ vice) yet it will not follow, that I ſhould be a conſtant Member to continue with them. For in ſuch an occaſional receiving, I am not ſo made a Member, as to be called to exerciſe any ſuch Judicial Act of caſting out the bad; but it lies on them who are conſtant Members of it; who by their Approbation, make themſelves one Body with them.

4 But in even ſuch a receiving occaſional, I am not to partake, till I am a ſetled Member in ſome Church. For, as was ſaid, this is a Church Ordinance, which, as a Myſtical Member of Chriſt, a Chriſtian hath but a Remote Right unto. And therefore I muſt be in a Church, ere I partake of it any where. And ſeeing we are not ſo in theirs, Original Members, it is neceſſary we be of a more pure Church, e're we can be capable of receiving the Lord's Supper.

5. This Church-Society therefore is not a Separation from them, as no Churches in themſelves; but as no Churches to us in uſe. For Separation is ſo to part from them, as to condemn them for no Churches (as when the Saints came out of the World, they are ſaid to Separate from it, as condemning it as lying in Wickedneſs and Unregenerate) but ſo we ſeparate not from them; not as from no Churches to our Judgments; but as none fit for us to joyn with.

6. This, our not Separating, we may teſtifie by holding ſuch communion with them, wherein we may not be Defiled; and by vertue of this our Church-Fellowſhip, have this further improvement by their Ordinances, as to partake with them in a New Relation.

lation. And ſo it is not a Separation but a new moulding of a new Church more compleat, as whem a Man that pulls down an old Houſe, and builds with the ſame Materials a new one more compleat. And herein we may do as the Saints did in Hieruſalem; they were joyned in a Church-Fellowſhip-Chriſtian, and yet went to the Temple, and enjoyed the Ordinances there, Acts 2. 46. Which Jewiſh Church they Rejected, not as no Church, though ſuch as was to vaniſh afore the new.

7. It need not trouble us, that this is not a viſible Church (that is in the exerciſe and profeſſion of it) for though that would be more comfortable; yet it is not of the eſſence of a Church, it being but an Adjunct. And it is called viſible, not in reſpect of a neceſſary viſibility to others; but as to themſelves, and one to another. For ſo, in the Primitive Times, their Congregations were not things viſible to wicked Men; but in ſecret to themſelves, the Church being fled into the Wilderneſs.

8. No Danger is to Reſtrain us from doing our Duty herein, as in the Primitive Times it did not, when Perſecution was more hot than now, Heb. 10. 25, 33, 34. 'Tis true, God will have Mercy rather than Sacrifice; but then, if the enjoying Sacrifice be a greater Mercy, than the loſs of what is hazarded can be, if both being put into the ballance, Sacrifice is the greater benefit of the two, compared with what is hazarded, then we are to chooſe Sacrifice rather, even by vertue of that Rule, that as the Body is better than Rayment, ſo the Soul, than meerly Liberty or Eſtate. Tho' in caſe of Life it would alter; for then you take away the Subject which ſhould enjoy the Sacrifice it ſelf. Therefore when the Perſecution was but the ſpoiling their Goods, Heb. 10. 33, 34. they forbore not to Aſſemble; but when it touched Life, they Diſperſed themſelves, Acts 8. 1.

CHAP. V.

That it is neceſſary there ſhould be various kinds of Officers in a Church, and that each ſhould be ſetled by a Divine Inſtitution.

I ſhewed before, what the conſtitution of a Church is, that, as it was to be a Body of Saints, ſo alſo an ordered Body, as Col. 2. 5. is intimated, and elſewhere, which Order, as I then ſaid, noted out two things. 1. Enjoying all Ordinances. So 1 Cor. 11. ver. 23. compared with, *v.*24. The Lord's Supper is reckoned a part of the Apoſtolical Orders; and ver. 1. the Inſtitutions of the New Teſtament are called Traditions, &c.

And 2. That Order, conſiſts in their Ranking their Members into ſuch Offices, according to the Gifts as Chriſt hath appointed; that ſo all the Ordinances might be enjoyed.

I ſhall now ſhew the neceſſity of Officers and Miniſters in a Church.

It may abundantly convince us, that Heb. 6. 2. Impoſition of Hands, is reckoned as one of thoſe ſix points, which are of the Foundation, and firſt Principles of Religion, ver. 1. laid by thoſe Maſter-Builders, and by the ſign uſed at the Ordination and calling of Officers, the uſe and power of the Miniſtry, and Officers of a Church is meant; and placed here next, and conjoyned with the Doctrine of the Sacrament (Baptiſm being here put for both, as breaking Bread is elſewhere put for the whole Lord's Supper.) becauſe the one is conjunct with the other: Anſwerable unto which in the Reddition, is, taſting the good Word of God; which uſeth to be Diſpenſed by thoſe Officers. The partaking of the Holy Ghoſt, is eſpecially in Baptiſm and the Sacraments; and he uſually is powred forth more abundantly at the Sacrament. This eſtabliſhment of Officers in a Church, is not indeed neceſſary and fundamental to the Perſonal Salvation of a Chriſtian, yet unto the Building of them up, which is as neceſſary as Converſion.

And therefore anſwerably: The courſe of the Apoſtles was, firſt, to go to plant and convert Men to Chriſt, and then to knit them into Church-Fellowſhip; as Acts 2. v.47. And then a while to leave them till Men fit for Offices, ſhould be found amongſt them by Trial of their Gifts, and ſoundneſs of their Converſion; and then to ſend Evangeliſts or themſelves again to viſit them: Both to confirm them in the Faith, and alſo to ſettle Officers and Elders amongſt them, according to Chriſt's Inſtitution.

And thus in every Church theſe Officers were ſetled, ſo Acts 14.21,22,23,24. Paul and Barnabas returned to Antioch, Iconium, Lyſtra, confirming the Diſciples; and when they had choſen Elders in every Church, with Prayer and Faſting they departed, v. 13.

And where themſelves could not come they ſent Evangeliſts, as Titus to Crete; 1 Tit. 5. for this cauſe, to ordain Elders in every City, where Churches were planted: So as the great care and work of the Apoſtles and Evangeliſts, was as firſt to gather Churches: So then to ſet Officers over them, and ſo to commend them to their charge, and God's grace: ſo in Epheſus, Acts 20.17.28,32. for then they made account they had provided for them, as much as in them lay; even as Parents, do when they ſee their Children Marryed, and well beſtowed. The uſe, and excellency, and neceſſity of them to the Church, might many ways be demonſtrated unto us.

1. Theſe Officers and Gifts, are the Joynt and Diſtinct work of all three Perſons. They conſpire and have a Diſtinct hand in framing them for the Church, as well as in the Great Work of our Salvation; Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt meet in the making and ordaining Officers: And each Perſon diſtinctly contributes ſomething. As we gather the Excellency of the Creation of Man, above all Creatures, becauſe the whole Trinity ſay, Let us make Man; and ſo of Redemption, that Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, ſet their Hands to it, and bear Offices in it; ſo we may infer the greatneſs, neceſſity, excellency of Officers in a Church and their holy Communion, becauſe all three Perſons, not only as in other Works, but diſtinctly and apart concur unto it. So we have it at once told us; and we need not have Recourſe to ſeveral places for it, 1 Cor. 12. 4, 5, 6. Thoſe three Perſons are the three Great Officers in our Salvation: And theſe Officers in his Church, are the leſſer, Chriſt is the chief Paſtor, they the Inferior under him, 1 Pet. 5. and ſo are co-workers with the Trinity; ſhall all three Perſons concur to conſtitute them, and ſhall we neglect to have them?

2. They are the Gifts bequeathed us by Chriſt at his departure; and his laſt Gift muſt needs be a great one, and ſo to be eſteemed by us, and made uſe of accordingly. To have a Gift given (which is ordained ſimply for uſe, or elſe it is made vain, and ineffectual) and to let it be unuſed, what a ſlighting is it of any ones Love? If a Garment be given as a Legacy to wear, what a contempt of the Donor's Gift would it be to ſell it? Now Officers are Chriſt's Legacy, and his laſt Legacy, Epheſ. 4. 11. when he aſcended, He gave Gifts to Men, as Elias at his Aſcending, obtained a reſting of his Spirit on Eliſha, and what were thoſe Gifts, ver. 11. ſave Apoſtles, Paſtors and Teachers, &c. and mark it, the Gifts given, that make them to be Paſtors and Teachers are not alone ſaid to be the Gifts, but the Men endued with thoſe Gifts, and put into thoſe Offices; Paſtors, Teachers. The Miniſters themſelves are Gifts, and ſo their Gifts became of double and treble uſe when Officers, to what before when private Men: Thus in like manner, Numb. 18. of the Levites it is ſaid, to you they are given as a Gift for Jehovah, and as to ſerve Jehovah, ſo them alſo. And Numb. 18. 7. Aarons Service is termed a Service of Gift, and next to God's Son, and Spirit theſe are the greateſt Gifts, becauſe conveyers of both to us. If a precious Jewel were given you, would you not place it in a Ring where it might ſhine, and adorn you? If a Loadſtone, which of it ſelf would draw; yet would you not ſet it in Steel, that it might draw more, and not let it lie unuſeful? Thus do with the Gifts of Men among you, which in Office will be more Serviceable, ſhine more, give a greater Luſtre.

And the rather do this, for thereby you give their Gifts again to God, and return them to him. So when the Levites were conſecrated by the Impoſition of the People's Hands (Numb. 8. 9, 10, 11.) They were offered as a wave Offering ſays the Hebrew to the Lord, and as a Gift ſays the Septuagint, that they might execute the Service of the Lord. Some Services you cannot do without them, and ſo God is a looſer of Worſhip which is imperfect without them.

And then 3. God in recompence again will come, and be more preſent with you then before. For this compare but, Pſ. 68. 8. with that, Epheſ. 4. 11. it being the place whence theſe words are taken. Thou haſt given Gifts to Men to dwell among them. When Chriſt aſcended, he became abſent from his Church, therefore when he aſcended he gave theſe Gifts, that by their Miniſtry he might dwell in their Hearts by faith more, and alſo by his Spirit. By theſe Officers he Buildeth the Houſe more and more, and adds to it both intenſive and extenſive more Members, and more Graces; (Epheſ. 4. 12.) for the perfecting the Saints, and building up the Body of Chriſt, (as alſo, 1 Cor. 3.10.16.) and when he hath built them up, and the more, the more he dwells among them; and the more he delights to do it when the Houſe is finiſht, and furniſht with all his Officers. Your ſelves love not to dwell in an unfurniſht Houſe, you would have all utenſils, and Servants of all ſorts about you, you will ſtay Removing till a Houſe is Furniſht,and as God brought Man into the World not till it was Finiſht, ſo doth Chriſt. God would have his People firſt become a Church, that he might meet and dwell more among them, then when the Stones lie ſcattered here and there, ſo *Mar.*18. his promiſe to invite us to be a Church is, I will be in the midſt of you; and Ezek. 48. 35. The Name is, The Lord is there; and then when you have Officers and Ordinances diſpenſed by them, then you have a further preſence, he will come down oftner amongſt you: The more of Ordinances, the more of Chriſt; the more of Officers, the more of Ordinances.

And 4. The effect of them, and God's dwelling will be growth in Grace: So it follows, *Eph.*4:13. Till they all come to their fullneſs of the Stature of Chriſt: As in the Body after it is begotten, God hath appointed Ordinances of Food, Sleep, &c. for the growth of it: And if any of thoſe Ordinances are wanting, there is a decay of ſtrength or Health,and a defect in Growth; ſo if any Ordinances be wanting to the New Creature, you will find the defect of it in your Souls,and for all ſuch Ordinances for growth, Officers are appointed, and their Miniſtry, ſo Acts 20.32. After they had Elders, he commits them to their charge, and the word of his Grace in them to build them up; his Speech implies that they were all converted,elſe they had not been of a Church. They wanted now nothing till they came to Heaven but building up; ſo it Followes, to give you an Inheritance with them that are Sanctified: And there is that near connexion between Heaven and building up in Grace, becauſe growth is as neceſſary to bring us to Heaven as Converſion, as therefore you would think the Miniſtry neceſſary for the Salvation of your Children to convert them; ſo of your own Souls for growth in Grace, ſo as you cannot be Saved,unleſs you grow to ſuch a pitch,to that fullneſs of Stature which in Chriſt God hath appointed you, except ye be converted ſays Chriſt to his Diſciples, you cannot enter into Heaven, as well as except ye be born again; and though many have grown to that perfection without Ordinances, being ignorant of them; yet none that know and may enjoy them,and therefore alſo of Timothy's Miniſtry it is promiſed, he ſhould ſave himſelf and them that heard him. So as they are neceſſary to a Man's Salvation, that knows them to be Ordinances, and Ordinances appointed.

If you ask the reaſon of this connexion and neceſſity, 'tis true it is not abſolute, as was not Chriſt's Satisfaction, as Chriſt intimates when Praying the Cup might paſs, he ſays, all things are poſſible; but yet it was neceſſary, becauſe it was God's will ſo to have it: Thus God could ſave you, build you up without Ordinances, and ſo he hath many; but yet hath appointed theſe, and having appointed them, to thoſe that know it, they become neceſſary; though they are not ſuch in themſelves; yet becauſe ſo it hath pleaſed God. The reaſon we find of Diverſity of Gifts and Adminiſtrations, 1 Cor. 12. *ver.*18. God hath ſet the Members in a Body, as it hath pleaſed him that is all his Reaſon, and anſwerably that which he ſays referring to this, ver. 28. that God hath ſet ſome in the Church, firſt Apoſtles, Prophets, Teachers, is for the ſame reaſon alſo: It is as if you ſhould ſeek a reaſon why Bread and Wine of all Creatures, are Typed out to be Elements Sacramental: There is no reaſon but ſo it pleaſed; ſo if you ask why theſe Miniſtries, there is no reaſon but ſo it pleaſed him,and there was no reaſon of neceſſity abſolute but only the will of God: For he that Governeth the Angels and the Church above us, immediately by his Spirit,and all the Creatures below us (who yet continue to this day according to his Ordinances, in their courſe he ſet them, Pſal. 119. 91.) in which courſe they are acted by an inviſible power of his immediately concurrent, could in like manner have governed Men, yet choſe as to have the World of Men governed by Magiſtrates: So his Church alſo by Officers of his own Inſtitution and Appointment, and as of all other of God's appointments elſe, ſo of this we may behold and admire a Glorious and Wiſe harmony and conveniency and ſuitableneſs, that ſo it ſhould be.

What in particular is the conveniency and neceſſity of each Office in particular, as ſuited to all particular neceſſities of a Church, I will ſhew when I ſpeak of each particular Office, and their diſtinction. I omit alſo their uſe and neceſſity in reſpect of them without, to convert and add Men daily unto the Church, which is one great end of their Office mentioned, Epheſ. 4. 12, πρὸς ʃὸν καταρτισμὸν, which imports the joynting in Members into the Church, and gathering in all the Saints, and making their number perfect as others read it.

Now we chiefly ſpeak of in relation to a Church Inſtituted and their edification; which is the other end there mentioned, where he alſo tells us that theſe Inſtitutions (as alſo this Ordinance of particular Churches) ſhall laſt but till that General Meeting or concourſe of all Saints in their perfection, as the word καταντήσομεν ſignifies, when there ſhall be but one Fold, and one Shepherd, John 10. 16. But untill then, he hath appointed the Miniſtry of Apoſtles, &c. whoſe Miniſtry we enjoy not in their Perſons but writings; and ordinary Officers we enjoy in their perſonal Employments: We will but take the Reaſons which he doth there inſinuate.

1. Becauſe the Church is under Age,(which he implies, *ver.*13.) therefore ſhe is to have theſe Officers over her, untill ſhe come to a perfect Man,and to the full Stature: And Children under Age now as well as then, are to be under Tutors and Governours, *Gal.*4.2. And though we are not in ſuch Bondage to Beggerly Elements, but comparatively are Men grown; yet as we are not perfect Men, not come to that full Stature we ſhall come to, ſo far,we are ſtill left under the care and eye of Tutors and Governours, who yet are not the Heads,but Servants of the Church. As great Men's Children are (whilſt at School learning the Elements and Rudiments) under the ferula and Bondage of School-Maſters;from which being delivered, as being come to more R peneſs; yet eſpecially if abſent from the immediate eye of their Parent,and Travelling in a ſtrange Country, their Parents ſet Governours to have an inſpection over them, to bring them up and inſtruct them, till they all come home; Thus hath God done with his Saints not as Men grown, but whilſt they are abſent from him here, he hath betruſted them with the Government of Tutors and inſtructors, to have an eye unto them who yet are but their Servants. Which argues God's infinite love and tender care towards them, for their Education; yea, Though there be but two or three of them in a Congregation, yet he will not let them Travel here without a Guide, (as the Apoſtle calls their Elders, Heb. 13. 17.) ſo his promiſe was of old, Jer. 3. 14, 15. I will take you one of a Tribe and one of a City, and give you Paſtors (not Paſtor only) according to my own heart. The Education and Training up of his Children, God accounteth of to be a matter of greater concernment, than you can poſſibly eſteem of the Education of yours, becauſe, according to their growth here, they are ranked and placed in that body of Chriſt hereafter, where,if any Member ſhould not have its full growth, the diſproportion of a Member would reflect upon the Head, Chriſt, and caſt a deformity on the whole, therefore every Member is to grow up to that Stature which Chriſt hath appointed it; and hence anſwerably God takes care for them, and thought it requiſite to make it the proper and ſole buſineſs of Men enabled, with the greateſt gifts that ever were poured out upon Men, to attend and look to the bringing up of his Children, and thought it not enough for Men to have gifts, but for the improvement of them, to have Men ſet apart to ſuch Offices, as might be ſeparated (as Paul unto the Goſpel, Rom. 1. 1. and ſo Gal. 1. 16.) the Phraſe is taken from the Levites, who *Numb.*8. 14. are ſaid to be ſeparated to do the ſervice; or, as the Septuagint have it, to the work, which word the Apoſtle uſeth, Epheſ 4. 12. for the work of the Miniſtry, is a buſineſs of that weight, that they are to give themſelves wholly to it, 1 Tim. 4. 5. Firſt, God tendred ſo much the inſtruction and proficiency of his Children in the knowledge of Chriſt, which is mentioned here, that he contented not himſelf to have them enjoy ſuch occaſional means as the Brethren in communion were able to afford each other, as their callings and occaſions ſhould permit; (though we all were able to Propheſie) but he would farther have Men of the beſt and eminenteſt gifts ſet apart uſually unto it, by continual labour to perfect themſelves,and his Church. As in a School or Colledge, beſides what Pupills may get out of Books, and mutual conferences daily with others,Parents provide Tutors for them, and Colledge-Officers,Univerſity profeſſors are ſet apart to ſtudy what to read unto them; ſo God would ſhew himſelf more careful,for his and he would not have his children rendred too extemporary, he would have them fed with the fineſt fare,and therefore would have Men dedicated to his Service; yea further, he would have them grow in knowledge and grace, and every age to exceed another, which is tacitly intimated (as it ſeems to me) in the 12. and 15. verſe, he would have as every Member, ſo the whole Church grow till the day of Judgment: And one age to ſow, and another to reap a more plentifull Harveſt; now this would not have been in an ordinary way and courſe, unleſs Men were dedicated to this work, for every Scribe inſtructed to the Kingdom of God, brings forth out of his Treaſure things new and old, Matth. 13. 52. If Timothy will profit and have his profiting appear to all, he muſt give himſelf wholly to it, 1 Tim. 4.15. He muſt be inſtructed, and he muſt have a Treaſure, and that not of Coyn only, of preſent currant money, but he would have his children enriched with importation of new commodities, and to be ſuch a Scribe requires the whole Man, ſuch an one was Ezra, ch. 7. 6. 10. Ezra was a ready Scribe in the Law of Moſes, that is, verſed in it and the meaning of it, and the good hand of God was on him, ver. 9. For he had prepared his heart, ver. 10. to ſeek the Law, that is, to ſearch out the meaning of it, and to do it, and to teach in Iſrael; yea further the Apoſtle otherways intimates, that without Men being ſet apart to it, there would have been no preſerving of knowledge, but the ordinary ſort of Believers would have been expoſed to the danger of being carryed away by Seducers, ſo, Epheſ. 4. 14. That we henceforth be no more Children, &c. I take it, he makes it not ſo much an inference from the former by way of inſtruction of what we therefore ſhould be, but goes on to ſhew the ends of theſe Offices, and the Word, μεκὴτι, is all one with alias, otherwiſe, &c. And indeed otherwiſe, our running into error could not have been prevented. For ordinary ſort of believers being children not fully grown up, would eaſily have been ſeduced, if they had not had guides committed to them, who had been able to convince gain-ſayers. The Apoſtle uſeth many Metaphors to expreſs their danger herein, as Firſt that they are children, and how eaſily are they deceived, Secondly, in danger to fluctuate as a reed in the water, this way and that way, and to have been in doubt what to hold and ſtick unto; and Thirdly, to be expoſed to be carryed about with every wind of Doctrine as Ships in the water, if there be no Pilot nor Mariners that know how to ſteer and guide them. And therefore the word uſed by the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 12. 28. concerning ordinary Officers is, κυβερνήσεις, that is Governours of a Ship, Cuboſa being uſed in Cicero for the greater kind of Ships then uſed, built ſquare, and ſo it follows in, Epheſ. 4. 14. ἐν κυβεῖα ἀνθρώπων in the Ship of Men, as Beza ſays it may be interpreted, wicked and naughty Men, if learned, would have driven the Ship whither they had pleaſed; To prevent this he appointed them Pilots, the Apoſtles, who left alſo behind them Writings. and ordinary Paſtors and Teachers, who ſhould be more then ordinarily skill'd in their writing, and be Pilots unto others. And as in that part of growing in knowledge, ſo likewiſe for their lives and manners God would have them watched over, and would not truſt the care hereof to that which every Brother would have one of another; but thought it worthy of ſome Mens whole pains and care, to whom he might commit the charge of Mens Souls to watch over them, and of whom he might receive an account, as Heb. 13. v. 17. Even as in Colledges (beſides private helps of Tutors) there are publick Lecturers and Deans to inſtruct and overlook the whole, ſo jealous is God of his Church and Children, and carefull of their Education. And there was need of all this, and all little enough; and otherwiſe if this buſineſs had been, in common, left to the common care of every Member watching over each other, there would have been a defect.

2. As many Officers are neceſſary for the growth, &c. of every Member in particular, ſo for the publick managing of common affairs amongſt them, for every Church is a Body, a Common-wealth, a City, &c. which by vertue of their combination will (as all Societies) have many buſineſſes in common that will concern the whole, every Church will have their τα περί ὑμων, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks of the affairs of the Church of Philippi, 2 Phil. 20. Church buſineſſes, as Corporations have common Town-buſineſſes, and as he intimates there, there had need be ſome to take care of them, to prepare them, to contrive them, to ſtudy them, to manage them, theſe common buſineſſes are admiſſion of Members, Excommunications. To examine Witneſſes in caſe of Scandal to judge of the cauſe, to give a juſt weight to the ſin according to the ballance of the Sanctuary. It was an eſpecial Office of the Prieſts under the Law, to teach the people to diſcern between the clean and unclean, Ezek. 44. 23. And in all theſe things, not only is it requiſite ſimply for Order's ſake, that ſome do in the name of the reſt propound, diſcuſs, &c. but alſo for the eaſe of the whole. and not only ſo, but for the better managing and diſpenſing all things, when Men ſhall make it their buſineſs to ſtudy Church affairs, as Men in Authority do thoſe of their Common-wealth; and Laſtly, it conduceth to the more faithful managing of them: For otherwiſe that which is every Man's buſineſs, is no Man's; and common buſineſſes, if not committed to the eſpecial care of ſome are ordinarily neglected, and miſcarry as we ſee in ordinary experience.

3. It is neceſſary that there ſhould be many Officers in every Church, unto whom the exerciſe of Church-power may be eſpecially committed, tho' the power it ſelf be wholly in the Church it ſelf, whoſe Servants and helpers they are, 1 Cor 1.24. and not Lords over them, and it is fit theſe Officers ſhould be conſtantly the ſame, becauſe the Fellowſhip is to be conſtant (as was ſhewed) and through long experience they will be better exerciſed in ſuch affairs, as they give themſelves wholly unto.

Laſtly, It was for the great Honour of Chriſt and of his Church to have ſuch Officers, as Servants to attend his Royal Spouſe and Queen, and Children. Princes you ſee have for every ſmall buſineſs that belongs to them, an Officer on purpoſe becauſe their Perſons are ſo great, that no buſineſs might be forgotten or neglected that concern them. Now ſuch proviſion hath Chriſt made for his Church, that as Princes Children and Wives have their Courts apart, and Officers apart, ſo hath the Church whilſt here below; yet ſhe keeps a Court, and hath Servants to attend her. You may read, Eſt. 2.2, 3. how Officers were appointed to gather together fair Virgins for the King out of all Provinces, and how Stegai with others, were to puriſie them for his Bed. So did Chriſt appoint his Apoſtles and their Succeſſors his Officers as children of his Bride-chamber, (as Matth. 9. 11. He calls them) who ſhould puriſie and adorn his Spouſe for him; and they are jealous over them with a great jealouſie, to preſent them as a pure Virgin unto Chriſt, 2 Cor. 11. 2.

In like manner in the Type, for the Honour of the Temple, and the ſervice of it were there ſo many ſorts of Officers and Attendants to watch, &c. when there was no need: And ſo it is reckoned up amongſt Chriſt's Honours, Pſal 44. That, as his Queen ſtands at his Right Hand, ſo that there are Honourable Women, Kings Daughters, that are Her's and his Servants, ver. 9. to bring her to him, and her Virgins, ver. 14. From the neceſſity of them to us, we will deſcend to the Inſtitution of them by God; which dependeth only on God's will.

I ſhall now then diſcourſe of the Inſtitution of theſe Officers by God, which depends only on God's Will, which is our rule in this caſe. It is God that hath ſet the Members of the body as it pleaſed him; and as of the Members of the body, it is ſaid that they are ſet down in his Book, Pſal. 139. ver. 16. it is all one here, for in like manner it is ſaid, God hath ſet in his Church, ſome Apoſtles, ſome Prophets, &c. as principal Members of that his Church, and in his book we muſt find them all written too. Our Parents who yet are the Fathers of our Bodies, cannot ſay how their children ſhould be formed, what Members they would have added, nor do they contribute any thing to the ordering or placing of them: But God's Pencil ſecretly draws and limns them; nay, we our ſelves cannot make a hair black or white; or add a cubit to our Stature, can much leſs add a Member which God hath not written in his book. So wonderfully and fearfully are we made in the lower parts of the Earth, and ſhall we think that any, though Spiritual Fathers, can diſpoſe of the Members of the Body of Chriſt; yea, of that Body, which Eph. 4. 12. is called Chriſt's, and ſpeaking of Officers, ver. 28. He ſays, he hath ſet Apoſtles, &c. the word εθητο is the ſame in both, and it implies, he hath done wiſely, to an end, deliberately, and not at random; bnt in a wiſe and orderly manner.

Authors of the Gifts of the Members in the Church, all will confeſs they are not: They are χαρίσματα, Gifts: And if that be not enough, κατὰ τὴν χάριν, according to grace, as the fountain of them, and if that be not enough, δωθεῖσαν ἡμῖν, given us, Rom. 12. 6. and Authors of the ſucceſs of thoſe gifts, and the operation of them, Men will acknowledge they are not: Paul may plant, and Apollo water, but God muſt give the encreaſe, 1 Cor. 3. But yet Men think they may appoint Officers how theſe gifts may beſt be improved according to their diſcretion and intention; but what ſays the Apoſtle in the Chapter afore cited, 1 Cor. 12. 4, 5, 6. as he makes the ſame Spirit Author of all the Diverſities of Gifts, ver. 4. and the ſame God Author of the ſeveral operations of theſe gifts, ver. 6. In like manner the ſame Lord Chriſt Author of all the Adminiſtrations or Offices in the Church, ver. 5. which is ſet between both, as whereby thoſe gifts ſhould be ſucceſsfully employed in the Church. And nothing is more ordinary than the word διακονία uſed there, to ſignifie the Office Cha.VI. fice or Miniſtry, as διακονία of the Apoſtleſhip, Rom, 11.13. of Evangeliſts, 2 Tim. 4. 5, &c. And as gifts are there ſuited and ordained to Offices, and ſtrained in a fitneſs for them.; ſo both of them for operations through God's bleſſing even as Media and means ſuited to ſuch an end, now it is the ſame power that appoints the end that muſt appoint alſo the means, and here in this caſe eſpecially, ſeeing the effects allways of theſe means, dependeth on God's bleſſing: If Man therefore would undertake to appoint a new Office, he muſt be able to give new gifts, and to give a ſucceſs; but ſo he is not. As Moſes then bleſt the Tabernacle, Exod. 39.43. when he ſaw all made according to the pattern or will of God; ſo God will accompany his own Inſtitution only with a bleſſing; nor can any promiſe themſelves a bleſſing farther. And ſo as the Apoſtle makes an enumeration of ſeveral gifts, as ordinary, ver. 8. and extraordinary, 9, 10, &c. ſo after an illuſtration from the ſeveral Offices of Members in the body, from ver. 12. He ſhews, ver. 28. theſe ſeveral Offices God hath ſet in the Church, both extraordinary and ordinary: And the reaſon of it is, becauſe.

1. The three Perſons as was ſaid, ſharing the glory between them, to make Chriſt to have a leſs hand in his ſhare and allotment; and proper work, than the other two in the other, how diſhonourable were it for him.

As it were Sacriledge for any Simon Magus to think to beſtow at his pleaſure, the gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, and diſhonourable to the Spirit, ſo as diſhonourable is it to Chriſt to think at pleaſure to appoint Officers in the Church; and as great Sacriledge every way, eſpecially, ſeeing Chriſt challengeth it as his own Prerogative, and that as the Lord, King, and Ruler of his Church; he reſerves the power of inſtituting and appointing what Miniſtries ſhall be in his Church. Every King will challenge it as his Prerogative, to appoint what Officers ſhall have his power imparted to them, as the Elders had from Moſes: Though the people chooſe the Men, yet Moſes made them Rulers, Deut. 13. and God gave them of Moſes's Spirit, Pſal. 11. v. 17. 1 Rev. 2.13. And allegiance is ſworn to the King as Supream, or unto inferior Governors as ſent by him as having his power imparted to them, thus Supream are Kings often: And ſhall not Chriſt the Lord be thus Supream, and there is as much reaſon for the one as the other, and more; for as the buſineſſes of a Kingdom are the King's matters and ſo called, 2 Chron. 19.11. ſo the matters of the Church are the Lord's matters, and ſo called there in that place.

2. The Second Reaſon is, becauſe every Officer in the Church hath the power of Chriſt imparted to it, and he muſt communicate it. I have all power in Heaven and Earth ſays Chriſt, and he bids them go and teach; and this he ſpeaks to all that ſhould teach to the end of the World, Matth. 28.18. Chriſt's power is a part of his Image, and it is High Treaſon in Man to ſtamp it upon any but by his Authority. 'Tis true that Officers in Civil things Men may appoint; which Officers (and not their Laws) as the coherence ſhews, are therefore called, by way of diſtinction, ἀνθρωποκίνισις, Humane Creation or Inſtitution, thereby to diſtinguiſh them from Divine Inſtitution, which Officers in the Church are; and every ſuch Officer is κτίσις, a Creature, and a power muſt go to make it; But it is ſuch a Creature, as all the power of Men and Angels cannot make, none but this Lord from Heaven: A Man can receive nothing (ſays John) ſpeaking of power in things Spiritual, and of Chriſt's Miniſtry, except it be given him from Heaven, John 4.27. and the like Chriſt again intimates of John's Miniſtry, Matth. 21.25. The Baptiſm (ſays he) that is by a Synecdoche; the whole Miniſtry of John, was it from Heaven or from Men? Whereby he expreſſeth it to be unlawful if from Men. And the like Paul ſays of his Miniſtry and Apoſtle-ſhip, Gal. 1. That as he had Chriſt's full call to it, it was not given of Man, that is, it was not meerly Humane. And if it be ſaid that theſe things are true of ſuch extraordinary callings, the anſwer is, That Epheſ. 4: 11, 12. and 1 Cor. 12. 28. ordinary and extraordinary are made alike in this reſpect that Chriſt gives them, and ſo 1 Cor. 12. 28. where he tells us, that God ſets them in the Church; he reckons up both ordinary and extraordinary. No, Chriſt is the Lord, and appoints his own Adminiſtratio here on Earth; he is Lord over his own Houſe, Heb. 3. and fit it is he ſhould appoint by what kind of Officers his Houſe ſhould be governed, Luke 12.42. Wh then is that Faithful and Wiſe Steward, whom his Lord ſhall make Ruler over hi Houſhold, to give them their portion in due ſeaſon: Mark it, It is whom the Lord ſhal make. Now ſuch great Officers are Miniſters, 1 Cor. 4. 1. Moſes and all the Apoſtle were but Servants, as 'tis there, and did all by appointment: He built not the Houſe, ver. 4. there, nor added any thing of his own Head. All Officers in that Houſe, and their diſtinction then was according to the pattern: But Chriſt is Lord, Timothy, an Evangeliſt, he muſt take Rules how to behave himſelf in the Houſe of God, 1 Tim 3.15. having mentioned Officers to be ordained, in the verſes before. So then Chriſt is to give orders for God's Houſe: And as he is the Lord, the Houſe is his own; and he is a faithful Lord, much more then Moſes; and he as a Lord, built the Houſe, ver. 2, 3, 4. and ſo as faithfully as a Lord, hath appointed all Offices in it, and things pertaining to it: As Moſes whoſe faithfulneſs lay in doing by pattern. It was part of his laſt work mainly after his Reſurrection, Acts 1. 2, 3. Then he ſpake of things pertaining to his Kingdom; and it is obſervable that it is placed at the beginning of that work, called the Acts of the Apoſtles, ſhewing the Scope and Argument of what ſhould follow to be, eſpecially thoſe things which concerned his Kingdom; and that Book contains not ſo much the Doctrine as example of the Apoſtles in ordering Churches. But if it be ſaid, ſuch Inſtitutions as theſe are ſuch petty matters of his Kingdom, as he reſerves them not to himſelf, but leaves the diſpoſing of them to Men; the anſwer is, he is Lord, in reſpect of Adminiſtration, and ſo as Lord, hath reſerved them to himſelf; and Secondly, to appoint What Officers are in a Kingdom, is a main appurtenance of it: And if the Lord ſo ordained in all Churches, for the maintenance of theſe Officers, 1 Cor. 9. 14. 1 Cor. 5. 4. Then, what the Officers ſhould be, much more. For Men to appoint Officers of the Church, is to make Chriſt a Servant, and themſelves Lords, and the Inſtitutions then would not be perpetually binding. But as they are from Chriſt, they are of eternal obligation. For,

1. They proceed from Chriſt as a King and Lord, as that place ſhews, Matth. 28.19. where he mentions his Kingly Office, as the foundation of ſending them Apoſtles, and Epheſ. 4. 11. The entrance into his Kingly Office, by his aſcenſion into Heaven, is made the cauſe of giving gifts, when his prieſtly Office is ſubjected to his Kingly, as afore his Kingly was to his Prieſtly: Now his other Offices remain for ever, and the Laws of them all are the ſame. In his Prieſthood, (Heb. 10. 14.) He conſummated for ever with one oblation, all that are Sanctified; and his prophetical Office, gave Rules of Faith but once for all; Jude 3. and why ſhould not the Inſtitution of his Kingly Office alſo be thus, Heb. 12. 26, 27. yet once more I ſhake not the Earth only, but Heaven alſo: And this word, yet once more, ſignifies the removing of theſe things that are ſhaken, that thoſe things which cannot be ſhaken may remain: And we have received a Kingdom cannot be ſhaken, and ſo the means of his Kingdom are unchangeable, he had ſpoken of the change of thoſe who are Servants, and Officers under the Law; but in the Kingdom we have received or do receive (ſo that he ſpeaks not of that State in Heaven, but of that under the Goſpel, which is called the Kingdom, in which Kingdom there ſhould be no more ſuch change) the Offices now are unchangeable, and ſo is the work. And therefore, in the cloſure of that Epiſtle to Timothy, wherein he had diſcourſed of the ordinary Officers of the Church, he ſets an Apoſtolical ſeal upon it from him, and all his Succeſſors in him which was never to be violated or broken up, 1 Tim. 6. 13, 14. I charge thee to keep this command to the day of Chriſt's appearing, &c. That is, all the commands of this Epiſtle, for elſe he ſhould not be blameleſs. And though here he ſays commandment in the ſingular, yet ch. 5. 21. where he makes the like obſervation, he ſays, Theſe in the plural. His way of expreſſion is obſervable, he ſays.

1. I Charge, not Counſel, as leaving to liberty.
2. It's a Commandment, not a Permiſſion.
3. He mentions a living God, and our confeſſing Chriſt to our lateſt breath: They are ſuch Truths as we ſhould be willing to lay down our Lives for.
4. He tells us, that they are to be kept without ſpot, not in the leaſt part neglected.

It is ſuch an Epiphonema as that, Rev. 22. I teſtifie to him that ſhall hear the words of this Book, that if he add or take from, &c. And here to keep the commandment blameleſs, is all one as not to add or detract, and it is the ſame power to add as to detract and Man muſt do neither: And he ſpeaks this as to Timothy, ſo to all whoſe Duty as Timothy's is ſpoken of in this Epiſtle. As alſo Matth. 28. and laſt, and elſewhere he ſays of his Apoſtles, in the name of their Succeſſors, I am with you to the end of the World.

It concerns us therefore to have a warrant for the Officers we chooſe rightly grounded on the word; and withal, we may deteſt the ſin of thoſe who are like Jeroboam, 1 Kin. 12. 31. who appointed Prieſts which were not of the Sons of Levi, and yet his variation was not of the Office, ſo much as of a qualification of the Officer God appointed. And therefore ſince we live amongſt theſe that are guilty of that ſin, let us do as theſe of Judah, when they were to fight againſt them, 2 Chron. 13. 9, 10, 11. So God ſhall be with us, and againſt them, as ver. 12. To add is as great a ſin, as to take away; ſo John, Rev. 22. threatneth the ſame curſe to both, for both equally detract from the power and wiſdom of God.

CHAP. VI.

That particular Congregations are each of them to have more Elders than one ſet over them, for the publick Adminiſtration of their Worſhip and Government.

NOT only the Synogogues among the Jews, to which Congregational Churches bear a reſemblance, had more Elders than one in each of them, but the Churches conſtituted under the Goſpel had ſo too. So theſe Churches, Acts 14. and Tit. 1. (which we have proved to be Congregational Churches) were conſtituted, for the Apoſtles ordained Elders to them in every Church, &c. It is expreſſed Elders, not Elder.

Obj. The exception that ſome have made againſt this is, that this manner of Speech might be uſed, though there were but one Elder in Each Church, as in like phraſe of Speech, if it were ſaid the King appointed Mayors in every Incorporation, there would be no incongruity in ſuch a Speech, though but one Mayor were in each town.

Anſw. To which we anſwer, 1, That it were ſomewhat an hard phraſe of Speech, to mean Church in the ſingular number, and yet to ſay, Κατὰ εκκλησίαν, which is equivalent to Καθ' εκκλησίαν, to every Church; and it is uncouth too to ſay Elders in the plural, as reſpectively to every one of theſe Churches; and yet to mean but one Elder in every of theſe Churches.

But 2. To follow the example given, if ſome of thoſe Towns in the ſuppoſition, had more Mayors at once than one in them, though ſome others of them had each but one, then to ſpeak uniformly of all alike in the plural were not ſo diſtinct, much more if the King ſhould give direction (as Paul doth here to Titus) in ſuch a way of Speech to appoint Mayors in every Incorporate Town; and yet his meaning be in ſome to have more than one, and in others but one; how would this direction be underſtood, if he ſpeak in the plural of each? Now ſo is the caſe here; for that the Apoſtle planted more Elders than one in ſome Churches may be evidenced, and we ſuppoſe will not be denyed; much leſs can it be affirmed, that there ſhould be a confinement unto the number of one Elder in each Church, and ſo there was left a priviledge and liberty of having more. Yea, if there be two kinds of Elders Teaching and Ruling, and of Teaching two kinds alſo, Paſtors and Teachers, there may be three in each Congregation. So as if we conſider that Elders in the plural are mentioned, and that they are expreſſed to be in every Church in the ſingular, who will not conclude the Holy Ghoſt's intent to have been, that Elders and not an Elder only, ſhould be in each Church? Yea, ſurely his meaning would be ſo underſtood of any that ſhould read it, unleſs it can be ſhewed by ſome other place, that his appointment was to define, that but one Elder ſhould be in each Church.

3. It is eſpecially remarkable, that he adds ((Acts 14. 23.) αὐτοῖς to Κατ' ἐκκλησίαν, which imports, that he choſe and ordained Elders in every Church to them. He ſatisfies not himſelf to have ſaid in every Church, but adds to them alſo, to ſhew that he meant not Elders to many Churches in a common and indefinite phraſe of Speech, but proper to them in each Church, not in one Church one Elder, and another in another, and ſo Elders in every Church, ſpeaking collectively, but by way of further appropriation, Elders to each, to them.

4. The comparing theſe Phraſes together; Elders in every City, and Elders in every Church, evidently argues the ſame thing. For when he ſays Elders in every City, (Titus 1. 5.) he certainly means more Elders, than one in each City; yea, and a ſufficiency of Elders for number, to Rule and Govern (or elſe an Epiſcopal Government of one Elder alone in each City muſt be aſſerted) and therefore why ſhould not Elders in every Church have the ſame conſtruction alſo? That is, that there ſhould not be only one Elder in a Church, but more; yea, and a company of Elders ſufficient to Rule and Govern that Church?

5. We never read Church and Elder mentioned, but Church and Elders, either when ſpoken of in the abſtract indefinitely, or when mention is made of any particular Church: So as other Congregational Churches are no where intended, when Church and Elders are mentioned, or they had more Elders than one over them, in relation to them as their Elders. Thus it is expreſſed (Jam. 5. 14.) ſend for the Elders of the Church, not Elder, but Elders; and theſe not Elders of a Presbyterial Church in common, but ſuch which are properly the Elders of that Congregational Church, unto which the ſick Perſon does belong, who are Elders to him. For it cannot be ſuppoſed the Duty of all the Elders that make up a Presbytery over many Congregations, to viſit the ſick of all thoſe Congregations, and to be ſent for, but the duty is incumbent on the Elders appropriated to that Congregation. Alſo when all ſorts of obedience to Officers is called for, it is ſtill in the plural, Obey them that have the Rule over you, &c. Heb. 13. 7. It is ſpoken in the plural, not him only in the ſingular. Alſo when the Apoſtle Writes to Philippi, he Writes to the Biſhops and Deacons, not to one Biſhop, Phil. 1. 1. Peter ſpeaks anſwerably, (1 Pet. 5. 1, 2.) I ſay to the Elders that are among you, feed the Flock, &c. So at Epheſus, (Acts 20. 17.) Paul ſent for the Elders of the Church.

6. As his own example was, (Acts 14. 22.) that he ordained Elders in every Church, ſo he enjoyned Titus to do the like, to ordain Elders as he had appointed him, Titus 1. 5. This argues that he appointed it ſo to be, and ſo hath left it unto us, and that 'twas made an Inſtitution.

7. In Coloſſus there was two Teaching Miniſters, Epaphras, (of whom the Apoſtle ſaith, Epaphras who is a faithful Miniſter for you, who is one of you) and Archippus, of whom he ſaith, ſay to Archippus take heed of thy Miniſtry, &c. Col. 4. 12, 17.

8. In Phillippi which was a Church in the beginning of the Goſpel, (ſo he calls it, Phil. 4. 14.) there were Biſhops and Deacons, Phil. 1. 4.

9. As the natural Body conſiſts of more ſort of Members than one, that are publick Organs for the uſe of the Body (as the Apoſtle Reaſons, Rom. 12.) ſo a Church organical ſhould have more Officers and Elders than one, or of one ſort, as the Apoſtle alſo doth there Exemplifie.

CHAP. VII.

That the Lord Jeſus Chriſt hath not only appointed many Officers to be in every particular Church, but hath aſſigned Offices of different kinds, which they ought to diſcharge, Rom. 12. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8.

WE have ſeen in general, 1. The neceſſity of Officers And 2. That they are to be only ſuch Officers as God hath appointed, and no other. Now 3. Let us enquire particularly, what are theſe ſeveral Officers Chriſt hath appointed in his Church. I will not much trouble you with the diſtinction of the Extraordinary; and Ordinary: They are the ordinary which we here enquire after. 1. Who are the ſucceſſors of the extraordinary; not in their Office, in that degree, and manner, and authority in the Church; yet in reſpect of the eſſential things adminiſtred, they perform the ſame to the Church now, that the extraordinary did of old, 2 Tim. 2. 2. The things thou haſt heard of me amongſt many Witneſſes, the ſame commit to faithful Men, that ſhall be able to teach others alſo. And ſo, when he ſent them out, Matth. 28. he ſays. Lo, I am with you to the end of the World. Even as when God firſt bleſſed thoſe creatures then exiſtent, in thoſe words encreaſe and multiply, he in them, bleſſed all that were to grow up in their name for ever, Gen. 1. 2. They are ſo ſometimes put into the Catalogue with the extraordinary, promiſcuouſly, and the ends of both made one and the ſame; becauſe the Miniſtry is of the ſame uſe and neceſſity to the Churches in theſe times, in that way as that of the extraordinary was in theirs, ſo Epheſ. 4. 11, 12. and 1 Cor. 12. 28. ver. 8, 9, 10. And the beſt way to diſtinguiſh the one from the other in ſuch promiſcuous enumerations, and to diſcern which are ordinary, which are not, is to conſider what gifts are ſtill in the Church, and what are ordinary ſtanding neceſſities of the Church, and what not, and ſo we ſhall diſcern them as in the places cited. As in the Church we find ſtill gifts of Teaching in differing ways powred out on Men, and abilities with Spiritual Diſcretion and Authority, to guide and govern others, more eminent in ſome Men; and bowels and helpfulneſs in others, to Adminiſter to the neceſſities of poor Saints. But we find Apoſtle's gifts of Miracles and Tongues ceaſed, and ſo we may in thoſe places mentioned, diſtinguiſh the one from the other; and may thereby know, which of theſe Officers here mentioned are to remain, which not; for God gives gifts in Relation to Adminiſtration. So as there doth remain theſe ordinary ſort of Officers, God continuing no gifts in vain, but fitting the one to the other, as Cor. 12. 5, 6. and Rom. 12. 6, 7, 8. evidently implies.

Ch. VII.

In this enquiry, we will conſider 1. How an Officer differs in general from an ordinary Member. Then 2. What theſe Officers are, and how differing among themſelves. As to the Firſt, He is a Servant of the whole, ſeparated to ſome ſpecial work, with ſpecial authority in the name of the whole.

1. He is a Servant of the whole, ſo Rom. 16. 1. and 2 Cor. 4. 5. not ſimply a Member to ſerve one another occaſionally, but more; he ceaſeth to be, Sui Juris, as Servants do. Of Epaphras he ſays, not only that he is one of you, Col. 4. 13. but chap. 1. 7. who is for you a faithful Miniſter of Chriſt. All his Strength, Pains, and Abilities are theirs, and to be laid out for their Service, to ſpend and to be ſpent, Phil. 2. ver. 17. Yea, and if I be offered up upon the Sacrifice and Service of their Faith, I joy and rejoyce with you all.

2. Separated to ſome ſpecial work, ſo the Deacons, Acts 6. 3. whom we may appoint over this buſineſs. As the Apoſtles choſe other Miniſters, to give themſelves continually to the word and prayer, ver. 4. So as though a private Member doth the ſame work, yet he but occaſionally, the other makes it his buſineſs, his calling, his employment; a Brother, when he ſees his Brother want, is to diſtribute to his neceſſities, but a Deacon's Office is to ſeek out who want, and in diſcretion to diſtribute the Alms of the Church; that as the Sabbath day differs from other days, that on other days, ye are to perform Holy Duties occaſionally, but the Sabbath is ſet apart for nothing elſe; ſo do private Members differ from an Officer; it is the value of the day, it is the ſeaſon of it; ſo is ſome ſpecial ſervice, it is work and employment; Archippus muſt take heed to fulfill his Miniſtry, Col. 4. 17. Every private Member is to advance his Brother, but it is an Elder's work to do it.

3. He is inveſted with ſpecial Authority, and an Authority of right, to do that lawfully in ſome things, which in others he could not. Let a Man ſo account of us, as particularly priviledged and authorized to be the Miniſters of Chriſt, and Stewards of the Myſteries of God, 1 Cor. 4. 1. ſomethings they are ſo Stewards of, that they are kept under Lock and Key; and without them the Church cannot come to them (as the Sacraments are continued to be) and other things they do adminiſter, which others may, which are yet adminiſtred by them in a more ſpecial Authoritative way, not ſimply out of gifts, as when they Teach or Admoniſh, but out of a ſpecial Authority of Chriſt withal, as Ambaſſadors, as if Chriſt did Admoniſh and beſeech, and not a Brother only, 1 Cor. 2. 5. ver. 20. And though to Admoniſh others gifts, might ſerve as well; yet, the Diſpenſations is not from inherent gifts ſo much, as an intereſted power Authoriſing, virtute officij, by vertue of Office; thus a Colledge Seat cannot be ſet, unleſs they have a Governour (becauſe an exerciſe of power is neceſſary) tho the fellowes may have power to chooſe and inſtall that Governour. John ſpeaking of Chriſt's power to Baptize, ſays it was a ſpecial power from Heaven given, John 3. 26, 27. And in the Name of Chriſt and the Church, the Act of an Officer is as the Act of the whole in Adminiſtring, &c. not ſo as to the Acts of private Members, not ſo as to every Adminiſtration of a private Brother.

Now 2. More particularly to enquire into the Offices themſelves.

1. They are not only many but diverſe, ſo we find almoſt every where, where we find them ſpoken of, 1 Cor. 12. 4, 5. There are diverſities of Gifts and Adminiſtrations, ſo Rom. 12. 6. Having gifts differing, he ſays not, greater or leſſer, but differing, &c. which Gifts and Offices are not only different in nature, but in the perſon alſo, that is, that ſeveral Perſons have ſeveral Gifts and ſeveral Offices, for ſo 1 Cor. 12. 8. To one is given the word of Wiſdom, to another the word of Knowledge, and 1 Cor. 7. 7. Every one hath his proper gift, one after this manner, another after that, and ſo much as to the Scope of his Similitude, drawn from the Body as he brings it, For in the Members all have not the ſame Offices or Action, ver. 4. ſo as his meaning muſt be, that ſeveral Gifts, and ſo Offices, do belong to ſeveral Perſons. And the Preface the Apoſtle makes, (Rom. 12. 3.) is that every Man is to think ſoberly, or within his own compaſs, of that meaſure God hath given him, every Age hath but his part, not all; The word Tranſlated, Sobriety, σωφρονεῖν, ſignifies a ſound mind; a ſound Member ſwells not, ſo as all are to keep within the compaſs, neither thinking too highly of their Gift or Office, nor ſtretching themſelves to an higher or other calling then is given them; for ſays he, the Members in the Body have not the ſame Office, &c. and then, ver. 7. 8. mentioning theſe Offices, he doth it not ſimply by naming ſeveral works, as Teaching, Exhorting: But as relating to ſeveral Perſons deſign'd to theſe works; he that Teacheth, he that Exhorteth: As if he ſhould ſay of the Members of the Body, let that which heareth, hear, that Member, which ſeeth, ſee, as having ſeveral Functions, ſo as there are ſeveral and diſtinct Offices, in ſeveral Perſons. And the reaſon why God hath many, and thoſe diſtributed Offices ſeverally, and a ſeveral part to be performed by them, is becauſe God would have no one do all, but keep all in Sobriety, (ſeeing he hath but his meaſure) and in mutual eaſe and charity, that (as 1 Cor. 12.) One Member ſhould not ſay to another, what need have I of thee, that all might both partake and communicate: As alſo, becauſe the ſeveral works in Offices would be too much for one; thoſe Maſter-Builders needed helps, Rom. 16. 3. And it is for Ornament unto the Church too, which ariſeth out of ſuch a variety. And another reaſon of it is, that ſo each work might be the better and more throughly done, when every one ſhould according to his gifts, have a ſeveral part given him; which he was wholly to give himſelf unto. In Arts and Sciences, and Profeſſions, none prove Eminent, neither are they advanced and promoted but ſuch as give themſelves wholly unto ſome one Science, and it is the wiſdom of the Jeſuits, in diſpoſing of their Followers in ſeveral profeſſions. And this wiſdom and care God hath taken for his Church, as a great Man, that would have his Children Educated in ſeveral profeſſions, ſets over them, not one, though ſomewhat ſeen into them all, but procures the moſt eminent in all kinds, wherein he would have them inſtructed, one to read Philoſophy, another Tongues, &c.

2. That therefore which is chiefly to be done, is, as to enquire how many there are, ſo alſo eſpecially, what the diverſity or difference is, to ſeek out the formal diſtinction between Office and Office, which is a matter every way, of exceeding great moment: That confuſion in the Offices, and the performance of them, ſhould be avoided, which God hates, being the God of Peace and Order, and alſo that God's own Inſtitution be rightly kept. We ſee how ſtrict God was in keeping the bounds of difference between the Prieſts and Levites, they being diſtinct Offices, Numb. 3. 10. Thou ſhalt keep the Prieſt's Office, and the Stranger that comes nigh ſhall be put to Death; and by Stranger there he meant not only their Brethren the People, but even the Levites their Fellow-Officers; Numb. 16. 40. And God requires the chooſers, that they take a right eſtimate of Men's Gifts and Offices, and ſuit them according to their proper difference and diſtinction, that a Man's gifts, like waters, may have their natural current to run in, and ſo as they ſhall not need to uſe Art to force the ſtreams another way, Phil. 2. 20. 1 Pet. 5. 2. that ſo they may naturally take care to feed the Flock, not in any the leaſt way of conſtraint, no, not in reſpect of their gifts, to which a violence is offered, when they are not rightly placed. And ſo their gifts are to the utmoſt improved, and their work the better done; For the edifying of the Church. It is an error (as the Author of the Tryal of Wits, in his Preface complaineth) and a great error, like that which Solomon complains of, Eccleſ. 10. 6, 7. in diſpoſing of dignities unſuitably, that in Common-wealths there is not a ſuiting of natural endowments and callings, to the great detriment of it: There being no Man's natural parts, if rightly placed, but would prove eminent: And the like error if committed in Churches, is much greater; by how much the gifts and callings therein are more pretious.

Let us therefore enquire into what theſe are, and wherein their diverſity conſiſts, which is eminently the proper Scope of, Rom. 12. That Epiſtle is, of all Epiſtles, written in a Syſtem and Form of wholſom words, methodically compoſed, as might be ſhewn; Credenda, or matters of Faith, he had handled in the eleven firſt Chapters, and then facienda, or matters of practice from the 12*th* to the 16*th* Chapter (which he ſpends in Salutations) the inſtructions concerning their practice, are as Methodical as the other, and are either their Duties as Members of the Church, in chap. 12. or as Members of the Common-wealth, chap. 13. and both in a like method. 1. What the Duty's of Members and Officers are in that Church, to ver. 9. 2. What the Duties of them as Saints towards their Brethren, and alſo all Saints in the following verſes of chap. 12. as the like, chap. 13. Firſt, Their Duty unto Officers in the Common-wealth, from the 1*ſt verſe* to the 8*th*, then towards all Men from the 8*th verſe* to the end, and then chap. 14, 15. how to behave themſelves in the ſpecial controverſie of thoſe times about the Ceremonies, &c. 1. In that chap. 12. wherein he ſets Rules to them in their Church, and Saint Relation, and doth it moſt compleatly. I begin 1. With their Service and Worſhip they offer up in publick, and he exhorts that it be Holy and Spiritual, and λογικὴ λατρεία, that is, word-Service, ſquared wholly by the Rules of the word: For ſo the word is uſed, 1 *Pet.*2.2. λογικὸν ἄδολον γάλα, The ſincere Milk of the word, oppoſed to the fatal corruption of worſhip lying in addition and carnal rites, and ceremonies; or λόγικὴ may ſignifie Spiritual Worſhip in the mind, oppoſed to bodily Service. As the beſt preſervative of their Worſhip Spiritual, and prevention of Formality and Human addition: He exhorts them not to be conformed to the World, &c. The Holy Ghoſt foreſaw that the Worſhip and Service in the Church, and that eſpecially of Rome would be corrupted, by the conforming of it to the Rites and Ordinances of the World, Heatheniſh and Jewiſh: And the Government of the Church ſhaped and configured to that of the Empire, in all their Officers and Members, as many have excellently ſhewn in all particulars, and was foretold, *Rev.*13 15. The Holy Ghoſt foreſaw that the Pope ſhould ſet up the Image of the firſt Beaſt, that is of Rome Heatheniſh, a Religion like theirs, and a Government like theirs. Item, The Apoſtle exhorts them negatively alſo, not to conform themſelves to the World, μη συσχήματιζεσθε, ne vos configurate, do not ſhape your ſelves, as noteing an outward conforming; ſhaping themſelves to their external Worſhip, &c. to that external form in Worſhip or Government, as thinking it to be but uſed among the Heathens and Jews in Externals, in which they might take a liberty. And becauſe the Spiritual Government of a Church, and the Spiritual Worſhip of it, requires as much as any other Truths whatever, a Spiritual Heart which they are moſt ſuitable unto, and that Carnal Mind or Wiſdom which is in all Men, is moſt oppoſite thereto, and would frame it its own way: Therefore he exhorts them to be Transformed by the renewing of their minds, μεταμορφέσθε, &c, as the other word notes out an external configuration, which he forbad; ſo this an internal formation in the mind or judgment (for that is the difference between forma and figura) which might ſquare with the word, and ſuit with it: Having their minds caſt in the mould of Doctrine, as Rom. 6. 17. that ſo they might approve and diſcern that will, τὸ θέλημα το ἀγαθὸν, that is in this particular, with an Emphaſis, which is not only good in it ſelf to you, as the only means to build you up, and only acceptable unto God, but ſo perfect in it ſelf, as it hath been committed to you, that it needs not much wiſdom at all to add any thing unto it, neither in Ceremonies nor Offices.

Then he comes to the particular Duties; 1. Of Governours and Officers, ver. 3. 2. Of every Believer in common, ver. 9, &c. 1. To the Officers who had received gifts and functions for the edification of the whole, and who were the principal Members of the Body, and more eminently unto them his Exhortation, *ver.*3. is principally directed, as appears by the inſtances brought, ver. 6, 7. where he applies, and brings home that Rule in particular unto all, and every one; and tho' the words might ſeem to be general to every one in that Church, *ver.*3. I ſay to every Man, &c. yet the Phraſe there uſed οντι εν υμιν, exiſtenti, points at thoſe eminenter, and in place amongſt you. He ſays not ſimply τινὶ ὑμῶν, but οντι εν υμίν, that is, to thoſe eminent amongſt you in place and Authority. Who, becauſe they were ſome body, were apt to think too highly of themſelves. And now when he comes to give Officers their charge, obſerve his Preface, I ſay, through the grace given to me, he ſpeaks modeſtly, yet lays a command from his Apoſtolical Authority, which he averreth and alledgeth; for ſo grace is uſed by him to expreſs his Apoſtolical Office, Rom. 1.5. And makes it Sanctione Apoſtolicâ, but to put the more weight upon the exhortation, and alſo to own and warrant their Inſtitutions and Rules about Church-Government, to be Apoſtolical and perpetual. Now, the Rule it ſelf which he gives in general, and then appoints and brings home to all the Officers of the Church in particular, is, as we Tranſlate it; Not to think more highly of himſelf, than he ought to think, but to think ſoberly, according as God hath dealt to every Man a meaſure of faith, which of all Rules elſe, in the Latitude of its meaning that could be given, is to Church Officers the moſt pertinent and fit, the moſt full and comprehenſive, both tying them to the diligent performance of their ſeveral Duties, and confirming them within the proper bounds of their Function: And it is the beſt prevention of all confuſion, innovation, or addition, and exorbitancy in Church-Offices, and likelieſt preſervative of that primitive purity which was eſtabliſhed, and wherein alſo, the Holy Ghoſt (as in the former about Worſhip) ſtrikes at the Root of that corruption of Pride and Ambition, and ſtretching themſelves beyond their Line and Authority, which was that true main reaſon of all Tranſcendent Uſurpation, which in future times, Officers of the Roman Church eſpecially took upon them, and after their Example all other Churches. So as both this Rule, and that exact Platform and Enumeration of all Offices, with their bounds and diſtinction, was the moſt ſeaſonable and neceſſary for this Church (which was foreſeen to be the Mother of Abominations) of any other, which is the reaſon (haply) why the Apoſtle is more diſtinct in it, than in any other Epiſtle. We have firſt the Rule, ver. 3. and then, 2. An Illuſtration and Demonſtration of the equity of it, by a Similitude between a Natural Body, and the Members thereof; and a Spiritual Body, and the Members thereof. And 3. Application of that Rule and Form of that Similitude to all Church-Officers in particular, which to that end we on purpoſe mention, with their diſtinction and diverſity.

We will, Firſt, enquire into the true and proper Scope and meaning of the Rule, which we ſhall find to fall full and cloſe with the particular Duties of Church-Officers. It hath two parts we ſee. 1. Forbidding Vice, that we ſhould not think too highly above what we ought.

2. Commanding of a Vertue, but to Rule our ſelves with Solriety in ſuch thoughts. The word is φρονεῖν, which we Tranſlate here to think of a Man's ſelf: Upon the opening of which word, which is uſed thrice in compoſition, in this ſhort Sentence, doth the whole depend, it is of a larger annexion, then any one word either in Latin or Engliſh is able to expreſs, and that which is Tranſlated, is the leaſt thing intended.

1. It hath Relation to Knowledge, and ſapere, not to be wiſe about what is meet, which is a moſt pertinent direction to the chiefeſt of Church Officers, not to affect curioſities of Knowledge, falſly ſo called, above what is written, as thoſe, 1 Col. 2. ver. 18. that intruded into things they had not ſeen, or above the reach of their own Gifts, but to keep both to the meaſure of their own Faith and Knowledge, and alſo to the Analogy of that Faith once delivered to the Saints; and the like alſo is required in thoſe that Rule, in whom as Godly Wiſdom is as requiſite as any other Grace, ſo affected Wiſdom, and to ſhew themſelves more wiſe, to controul and meddle in every thing, is as unſuitable.

But I think it hath not mainly a Relation to Knowledge; for he ſays not, be wiſe not above what, Licet, is lawfull, as having Relation to unlawful objects forbidden to be known; but not above what oportet, is meet for his place, or becomes a Man's place and gifts.

Therefore 2: φρονεῖν ſignifies alſo Curare, carefully and heedfully to mind and regard what belongs to him: Whence φρόντη, cura, and is all one with that Phraſe of ours, He minds his buſineſs, it ſignifies intention, and what the mind is taken up about, ſo Rom. 8. 5. We Tranſlate it, thoſe that after the Fleſh, do mind the things of the Fleſh; the word is the ſame: So as it hath ſpecial Relation to what is a Man's Duty, and place which is given him to mind and to regard: And then the firſt part of the exhortation is μὴ ὑπερφρονεῖν, not to mind or take upon him, what is above him, or as David ſpeaks, not to exerciſe a Man's ſelf in things too high for him, (as Pſal. 131. 1.) For his place, calling, function, gifts, or as Paul ſaith, (2 Cor. 10.1.) not to ſtretch a Man's ſelf beyond his own meaſure, not into another Man's line, nor to thruſt his ſickle into another Man's harveſt.

And

Cha.VII.

And then 2. That other particular commanding a vertue, which we have here Tranſlated, to think of himſelf ſoberly, ſhould be Tranſlated, ſoberly to keep himſelf and his intention too within his calling, and function, and duty, [as he ought] παροδεί φρονεῖν, is to do what is his proper duty in his place, and to keep to it, and to ſpend all his intention thereupon, and not ἀλλοτριεπισκοπεῖν not meddle with other Men's or Officers matters, as the Apoſtle elſewhere forbids, 1 Pet. 4. 15. He therefore is overwiſe above what he ought, that exceeds the meaſure of his place; and to be wiſe to Sobriety, is to keep within a Man's compaſs. So that it is not a meer Repetition: But implies that as he ought not to exceed, ſo alſo that he ought to mind his own place and duty; and then the word εἰς τὸ σωφρονεῖν, is an exhortation to both, it is to have a ſound mind, a compariſon taken from the Body, which is then ſaid to be ſound, and a Member ſound, when it is kept in its natural equal and due temper, and every part performs its own office, ſwells not above its compaſs, exceeds not in heat and humours, nor is defective in what belongs to it; ſo when a Member of the Church ſwells not above his rank and place, but executes what belongs to him, then he is ſaid to be ſober, and of a right temper in his place. And ſo then that which follows according as God hath dealt to every Man the meaſure of Faith, directs and ſhews Men what it was every Man was to put forth in his place, viz. that meaſure of Spiritual gifts which God had parted diverſly among Men, which gifts are to be ſuited to Offices, as we ſhall ſee anon. For by Faith here he means not primarily, juſtifying Faith, but Spiritual gifts for the good of the Church, ſuperadded to Faith, which yet he calls Faith, becauſe they are not natural, but had ſome work of Faith as their Foundation, whether ſaving or temporary, as 1 Cor. 12. 12. This the Apoſtle plainly intimates, when he ſhews that thoſe Spiritual gifts they had not among them, till they were converted to the Faith; but then were endued with them. When you were led after dumb Idols, you had none of theſe gifts but you had them by a work of the Holy Ghoſt, enabling you to ſay and aſſert, and believe that Jeſus was the Lord which aſſertion was the foundation of all thoſe Spiritual gifts that follows, and ſo here called Faith; as alſo becauſe that in the exerciſe of them, Faith ſhould be the director of them to the good of others.

And then 3. The words may withal be interpreted as they are Tranſlated, as aimed againſt pride and overvaluing a Man's gifts, which the Apoſtle alſo aims and ſtrives at, as the root of all that ambition and affectation of preheminence in Church-Officers; and ſo ὑπερφρονεῖν will alſo bear that Senſe; and ſo to be wiſe to Sobriety, is for a Man to give a due eſtimate to his gifts, and put them forth accordingly; and hence Humility is fully defined (as here.) A Sobriety or Moderation of Spirit, which only keeps a Man within his compaſs; and the contrary ſwells him to matters above a Man's calling and compaſs, and therefore David joyns them both together, Pſal. 131. My Heart is not haughty, neither did I exerciſe my ſelf in things too high for me. And the drift of the reaſon implyed in the following words, argue this to be his Scope.

1. It is God that guides thoſe gifts, and that of Grace, ver. 3, and 6. and why ſhould thou boaſt of what is received.

2. Thou haſt not all the gifts, ἐμήρισε, he doth part them: We have gifts differing.

3. Of that very gift which thou haſt received, thou haſt but a meaſure, a portion, nor that in the fulneſs of it.

4. Others have gifts as well as thou; yea, every Member hath gifts, God hath dealt to every Man, ſo as thou cannot ſay thou haſt no need of others. So as his Scope is at once to beat down Pride and Ambition, as the cauſe and affection of preeminence, the ſin of Abiram, Dathan, and of Corah; who, being Children, affected the Prieſthood, and alſo he meant to keep every Man to his own calling and place, diligently to execute it to the good of others, wherein, how did the Holy Ghoſt (in Writing to the Church of Rome) ſtrike at the very ſin which he ſaw then working in that Church, which corrupted and perverted all the Officers in the Chruches of Chriſt, even as he foreſaw Superſtition would corrupt the Worſhip, as was obſerved in the former verſes.

The Root of that Myſtery of Iniquity, and foundation of it, was laid in Church-Officers aſſerting of preheminence, the lower Officers aſſuming what belonged to the higher, as the Deacons did; and then the higher taking upon them all the power of the Inferior; yea, and of the whole Church it ſelf, as to admit Members to Excommunicate, to Ordain, to Rule and Govern, and ſo to thruſt out Deacons and Ruling Elders as unneceſſary; neceſſary ; and thoſe it left continuing to make them ſhadows, and then theſe greatened Officers preſumed further to extend their power over other Congregations beſides their own.

The Biſhops of Rome began to be from thence, to challenge Univerſal power over all Churches, and from being an ordinary Officer, to challenge that extraordinary power of Apoſtles themſelves, and to ſit in the Temple of God as Gods, and not to be content with Spiritual power neither, but to challenge Temporal alſo ; to diſpoſe of Crowns, curb, reſtrain, and cut ſhort the Spirit of Princes ; and his Biſhops alſo began, and have continued to intermeddle in affairs of State. That ever of ſo ſmall an Egg, as a poor Paſtor of that Church, ſo foul and monſtrous a Crocodile ſhould ariſe ſo, great a Prince, is that great Myſtery which all the World may wonder at; as it did indeed admire his greatneſs.

How ſeaſonably therefore was this Rule given to prevent enſuing miſchief, and how neceſſary was it alſo in the Application of this Rule, to give a complicate and exact platform of Church-Officers, and their true bounds and diſtinction of their places to this Church above all other, who was to become the Mother of abominations. How ſeaſonable was it to leave this Apoſtolical Canon in her Archivi, in her Records, to diſcover the falſhood of thoſe which ſhe boaſts, and to ſhew all the World in after times, how much ſhe was ſwerved from her Original, and likewiſe to enjoyn the obſervance of theſe Inſtitutions, with an Apoſtolical charge as his Preface ſhews, Rom. 12.3. I ſay, through the grace given me.

The Scope therefore of that which follows, is to illuſtrate this Rule, and to ſhew the equity of it from a Similitude drawn from the Body ; and then to apply and bring it home to every Officer amongſt them, that as his charge was to every Man, he ſays not omnibus, but cuique in particular, ver. 3. ſo his Application is to every one of them in particular, ver. 6, 7. I will not much inſiſt in opening the Similitude, only obſerve for a Foundation to what follows, that this compariſon here, as it is between the Body and ſuch Members, as have general Offices for the whole, ſo the Church, he here compares the Body unto, is an inſtituted Church, whether among them, or where-ever elſe. 1. It is a Church (he ſpeaks of) for it is a Body in Chriſt, Non in Cæſare, not a civil Body, that is put as a note of difference, for as not only many are requiſite : So they are conſidered not as ſcattered Saints, but as making one Body, and ſo knit ; and then the Members of this Body, to whom the Similitude is after applyed, are Officers of a Church, and thoſe ordinary Officers alſo, for thoſe that follow, ver. 6, 7. are the Members. He ſpeaks of eminently gifted Members here in general, there particularly, and with application : Now we may take this for a Rule, that where-ever the ordinary Officers that are the proper ordinants of a Church, as inſtituted as ordinary Officers are, there the Church or Body ſpoken of is principally meant a Church inſtituted, and of the Officers of it, he ſpeaks indefinitely and univerſally, we being many, &c. not particularly only, (you) becauſe his Scope was to lay down indefinitely, a general platform of all other, as well as of this, unto which they were already moulded, and always to be framed. Now then the fundamental Terms of the compariſon being thus ſuited, his Similitude hath two main parts, fitted to infer thoſe two parts of that Rule delivered.

1. That as in the Body, many Members make one Body, and ſo become Members to the whole, and alſo one to another, for one another's good, ver. 4. ſo in this Inſtituted Body, every one the eminenteſt, and moſt gifted is a Member of another, v. 5. that is, are ordained for their beſt profit and good, and ſafety, as of themſelves and the whole, ſo of every Member, to intend the good of the whole, and of every Member in particular, they are to uſe their Gifts with conſideration of Co-members ; and therefore Co-memberſhip ſhould oblige Church-Officers of whom he ſpeaks here, eſpecially to have a care to uſe and improve their gifts with diligence in their places, for the good of the whole ; and not only ſo, but alſo to conſider every part in particular, and perform a duty to it, which by their Office they are to do diligently : The eye ſees not for it ſelf, but for the whole ; yea, for the foot, the hand, and every Member in particular as occaſion is, ſo as diligence in their Office, which is one part of his Rule and Cannon, is hence inferred and argued :

But yet 2. They are to conſider withal, that every Member hath not the ſame Office ; yea, ſo far from having the ſame Office that they have not the ſame action: So as tho' every Officer and principal Member is to be diligent the good of the whole; yet not to uſurp over the Offices of another, not to do that which is proper for another to do; one Member is not to invade the room of another; the foot is not to undertake to ſee, nor the Hand to walk.

Thus to do would be for the confuſion of the whole, and an injury to that Member whoſe Office is aſſumed; and to whom it is proper, and its Honour to perform it, and the Member who uſurps another's Office, would be leſs uſefull to the whole, and injurious to its ſelf, in perverting its proper Gift and Office to what it is not fit, and ſo to do it untowardly; and this is the Second part of that Rule given clearly, proven from this Similitude. Now then in the 6th and 7th verſes, he goes on at once, both to amplifie that laſt part of the compariſon, that as in the Body, every Member hath not the ſame Office, ſo that in this Inſtituted Body, we are Members having gifts differing (Enumerating all the particular Offices) and alſo he in the ſtrength of that Similitude, urgeth and applies, and brings home both parts of the Rule in each particular Officer, which he Enumerates. I ſay, firſt he goes on to amplifie and inlarge that laſt part of the Similitude, by a diſtinct enumeration of all particular ordinary Officers, needfull to ſuch a Church for ever. And ſo the Co-herence of the words moſt fitly joynts this verſe with the former, for ἔχοντες, we are having, &c. refer to ἐσμεν in the former verſe; the Apoſtle not beginning a new entire Sentence, as uſually it is read; but continuing theſe words to the former, as not having made up his compariſon compleat: That as he had ſaid, ſo we being many are one Body, &c. ſo we are withal, having differing gifts alſo, &c. which anſwers to that part of the compariſon, ver. 4. as all Members have not the ſame Office. And yet withal they are a ſtrange inference, wherein the Apoſtle brings home and applies both thoſe Duties in his Rule, ver. 3. to every Officer which he Enumerates, and that in the ſtrength and force of the Similitude; ſo as that Rule given afore, ſhould be put into every particular, and therefore in the Original, there is an ἔλλειψις a chink and void ſpace left for the Reader to put it in, as in thoſe firſt words, whether Propheſie [Let us Propheſie] thoſe words, Let us Propheſie, are not in the Original; but applyed by the Tranſlators to make up the Senſe, whereas that which in General the Apoſtle had ſaid, ver 3. is to be inſerted in that, and all the other particulars; and therefore doth beſt make up the Senſe, as whether Propheſie, let us ſoberly mind our Duty therein, and not be overwiſe or beyond what is above us, or not ours to meddle in; but keep to the bounds of that office and duty, which is the ἀναλογία of Faith, and ſo in that other Miniſtry (let us wait on, is not in the Original) but that which he ſaid is to be ſupplyed; let us ſoberly mind our Duty in Miniſtring, and not be overwiſe to meddle with what is not our office, but keep to Miniſtring, and ſo of the reſt. So as he doth at once both exhort every one to diligence in their particular office, ſet him for the good of all, and alſo dehort him from medling with what belongs not to him, ſends a Man to his own Body to learn theſe Leſſons. All which conſiderdered, gives a moſt juſt and full account, and Reaſon why the Apoſtle doth here more diſtinctly, exactly, and compleatly reckon up all particular offices in this Epiſtle, which we find not ſo fully in any other; for it agreed with, and was more requiſite every way to this Scope in hand.

For 1. The making up the Similitude entire in the Reddition of it, required it. He had ſaid, ver. 4. that in the Natural Body, every Member had not the ſame office (and what are the offices of each Member, nature taught.) Then in the Reddition, and making up of this Similitude he ſhews, in this Inſtituted Body, all had not the ſame offices, by Enumerating all the particular offices themſelves and their diverſities, which was proper to do, and alſo was neceſſary to do, becauſe they wholly depend upon Apoſtolical Inſtitution and God's Will, and otherwiſe were not known.

And 2. His Scope was to bring home that Rule delivered in general, ver. 3. by way of application, as in an uſe of Exhortation or Reproof, a Man doth a general Doctrine by naming all and every of thoſe ſorts of Men he would apply it unto, and ver. 3. He in laying down that Exhortation, in his Preface to it he had ſaid: This I ſay to every Man, not omnibus, or to all definitely, but every Man particularly, as Muſculus obſerves, as intending to bring it home particularly to every ſort of Men which he meant and ſpake unto.

And 3. One and the main part of his Exhortation, being that officers ſhould keep to their bounds; ſo it was peculiarly neceſſary, as to apply it to particulars, ſo to enumerate all and every particular, ſo to diſtinguiſh them, and ſet them their ſeveral bounds, that every one might for ever know his Duty, and not Tranſgreſs.

And 4. The Epiſtle containing matter of Doctrine, wherein he had handled a perfect Platform of all other Epiſtles Methodically compoſed, it ſuited with his Scope, that in mentioning the Officers of the Church alſo, he ſhould be as compleat and diſtinct, and ſet down the exact Catalogue and Table of them.

And 5. Being written to the Romans, whoſe eminent ſin, in after days, was the corrupting of all Offices in the Church, and introducing new, which God never inſtituted, and excluding thoſe he had ordained or perverting them: The compleat Catalogue of all Offices, their bounds and terms of their Duties and Diſtinction, was moſt ſeaſonable and proper to them, as to prevent aforehand, ſo to that whore of her Abominations and Uſurpations herein in after Ages.

And 6. To add weight to all, and to confirm theſe Canons of his to all Ages inviolably, it was requiſite he ſhould ſet to his Apoſtolical Authority and Seal; which in the Preface he doth; this I ſay by the grace given me: And this (as it were) in oppoſition unto, and to weigh down, in after Ages, that falſe counterfeit Apoſtolical Authority uſurped, in that See which would make other Canons and Conſtitutions clean differing and oppoſite to theſe. His Scope therefore being to enumerate all Officers, and to diſtinguiſh them and their Duties, which is the thing we ſeek, let us go on to obſerve how Artiſt like, exactly and fully and methodically, he doth it every way, as he had done all elſe in this Epiſtle. He proceeds,

1. By a διχοτομία, or general diviſion of all Officers into two general Ranks and Orders.

2. By a Subdiviſion, containing all the particulars of that general Diviſion, and to prevent miſtakes, leſt that becauſe ſeven are mentioned, that therefore ſo many particular Offices ſhould be meant, as ſome have underſtood them, whereas he intends but five: Therefore the firſt two, to ſhew they are but a general Diviſion of theſe five that follow, are expreſſed in the Abſtract, Prophecy, Miniſtry, but the five particulars in the Concret, he that Teacheth; he that Exhorteth, &c. varying his expreſſion, to make evident the difference.

1. There is a general Diviſion of all Officers, into two Ranks or Orders.

1. Such whoſe Duty and the exerciſe of their Office, lyeth in ſimple Miniſtration, in inſtruction in the word, the other of Diſcipline, is that whoſe work lies in Ruling Mens Lives and Bodies; Propheſie hath Relation by Knowledge to inſtruct the Mind, διακονία, to ruling and ordering the outward Man; and although there were in the Primitive times Prophets of extraordinary gifts, both in foretelling perſecutions to befall the Church, as Agabus, and others; who alſo by extraordinary Revelation opened difficult Scriptures: And who are in other places, ranked among the extraordinary Officers as Epheſ. 4. 11. and 1 Cor. 12. 28. Yet here Prophets of ordinary gifts are meant; becauſe he preſcribes for their Rule the ἀναλογία of Faith to bound them with. Which Rule, the extraordinary aſſiſted infallibly by the Holy Ghoſt in their Prophecyings, need not to be Regulated by no more then Apoſtles themſelves, The Revelation of the Spirit, being an infallible Guide and Rule unto them; and alſo he commands them to abide in that calling, and confine themſelves unto it.

By Prophecying therefore is meant, that ſpeaking out of the word to Mens inſtruction, as (1 Cor. 14. 3.) Prophecy is taken in oppoſition to gifts extraordinary, ver. 1, 2, 3. compared where he defines it to be a ſpeaking unto Men to edification, and exhortation and comfort; and is put for the ordinary expounding of the Scriptures, which 2 Pet. 1. 20. is called a word of Prophecy, and ſo is taken often in Scripture, as Matth. 13. 57. A Prophet hath Honour but in his own Country; and ſo in that Speech, he that receiveth a Prophet, in the Name of a Prophet; Matth. 10 41. that is, any Teacher or Inſtructer out of the Word, to Propheſie; not being always taken to foretell; but declare, as Exod. 7. 1. God tells Moſes that Aaron ſhould be his Prophet; that is, a declarer of his mind for him, ſo to open the Revealed Will of God is Prophecying: So as by Prophecy here, their Office is underſtood whoſe Office it is, to open and apply the word according to the ἀναλογία of the Doctrine of Faith, and the proportion of their own gifts, and ſo is diſtinguiſhed from διακονία, which includes all external ordering and watching over Men, but without labouring in the word, διακονια which comparatively is a more miniſterial and external work, this more internal and noble.

And ſo now under that general Head of Prophecy, is contained theſe two firſt Offices mentioned, Teaching and Exhorting, and under the other διακονία, is comprehended the other three more external and miniſterial Functions. Giving is the Deacon's Office, Ruling, the Elders, ſhewing Mercy is the Widows: So as tho' διακονια is ſometimes taken more largely for all Offices whatſoever, as 1 Cor. 3. 5. what is Paul? What is Apollo, διακονοι, Miniſters, by whom ye believed. And alſo more ſtrictly; for that moſt Miniſterial inferior office of taking care of the poor, as Acts 5. 3, 4. and 1 Cor. 16, 15. yet here it being made a contra-diſtinct Member, it is judged, to be taken in a middle ſenſe between both. For all thoſe are Miniſterial Functions which meddle not with the word and prayer, not ex officio, ſo as Prophets expreſs a higher Rank of Officers, that Acts 6. give themſelves to the word and prayer eſpecially; and Miniſtry expreſſeth that lower Rank of External Government, either over the Lives or Livelihoods of Men; as the Ruling Elder and the Deacon. The office even of Ruling Elders, when compared with that of Prophecy, takes place rather with Deacons, and is reckoned with that inferior claſſis, rather than with the Prophets: And unto this diviſion other Scriptures ſeems to give light and warrant, as that (1 Pet. 4. 11.) maketh it alſo clear. Let him that ſpeaketh, ſpeak as the Oracle of God, which is all one with Prophecying here, by the Analogy of Faith, there is prophecy mentioned; then follows, if any Man Miniſter (the word is the ſame that here) let him do it as God giveth a liberty. There their Deacons are a contra-diſtinct diviſion to Prophecy: The like I take the meaning of, (1 Tim: 1. 3.) where mention is only made of two Officers, Biſhops and Deacons; the queſtion hath been, under which of theſe two the Ruling Elders comes? I anſwer, under Deacon, in that Diviſion; for Biſhops there muſt be διδακτικοί, apt to Teach, which in an Elder is not ſo neceſſarily required; many having Ruling Gifts in private, that have not Teaching Gifts in publick; and that alſo which ſways me ſo to think, is because the qualifications of Deacons here, are ſuch as qualifie a Ruling Elder, as gravity and ruling their own Houſe well, &c.

And according to the ἀναλογία of theſe places, that of (Phil. 1. 1.) may in like manner be underſtood. To the Biſhops, that is, the Paſtors and Teachers, and Deacons: That is, both Elders and Deacons (ſtrictly ſo called.)

This differing Rank of Officers, ſeemeth to me alſo, to have been Typified out by thoſe two orders of Church Officers under the Law of Prieſts and Levites, which Type I would not have thus applyed, had I not found it by way of Prophecy foretold.

As 1. It is prophecyed that two ſorts of officers anſwering to both theſe, ſhould be under the New Teſtament Iſa 66. 20, 21. I ſhall be mindful of that Rule, which in the Application of Types, we are ever to follow, that no Types are to be applyed to any thing under the New Teſtament, but by a ſpecial warrant from the Holy Ghoſt, ſo applying it in ſome place of the New Teſtament, or in ſome Prophecy of the times of the Goſpel in the Old Teſtament, becauſe (Heb. 9. 8.) the Holy Ghoſt is alone ſaid to give ſignification to thoſe Types. Yet ſo, as when we have a General Type, applyed to deſign out ſuch a thing; then by thoſe ordinary gifts of Interpretation, we may fetch out the particular Reſemblances, as we do in Parables and Similitudes of Scripture, when we know their main Scope and aim, theſe being alſo called παραβολαί, (Heb. 9. 9.) But to return to (Iſa. 66. 21.) He Prophecies there of the times of the Goſpel, and the State of the Church of the Jews when converted, for (ver. 20.) he ſpeaks of the bringing in of their Brethren the Jews out of all Nations, as an offering to God, into the Holy Mountain and Houſe of God; (the converſion of a People, being called an offering up to God, Rom. 15. 16.) and (ver. 22.) he makes mention of the New Heavens, and New Earth, &c. Now as he ſays, he will bring their Brethren the Jews to the Holy Mountain, and the Houſe of God, which is a Church-Eſtate, (as I have formerly ſhewed) ſo he ſays, he will take of them for Prieſts and Levites, which deſign out in the Language of thoſe Types, the Officers of thoſe Churches, all not being meant; for he will take of them, and it being alſo ſpoken of ſome of them, by way of diſtinction, to the reſt and multitude of their Brethren, (ver. 20.) it Tipifies out two general Ranks of Officers in the New Teſtament, into which all then Inſtituted, are to be Referred. And ſo in the Old Teſtament, I find elſewhere that diviſion made of all the Jews, into theſe three Heads and Ranks, the Houſe of Iſrael, the Multitude of Believers; the Houſe of Aaron, the Houſe of Levi, as comprehending all of the Church as ſo conſidered, when he calls upon them ſeverally to praiſe the Lord, (Iſa. 13. ver. 19, 20.) even as when, (Phil. 1. 1.) He writing to the whole Church mentions three; 1. The Saints, 2. The Biſhops, which anſwer to their Prieſts, Paſtors and Teachers: And 3. Deacons, the Levites which comprehended all the reſt.

I will add as the concluſion of this difference and diſtinction of officers, ſome obſervations which ſuit with theſe differences upon the Types of theſe officers mentioned out of (Iſa. 66. 20.) and for ſuiting the particular Reſemblances in thoſe Types, I will take that liberty mentioned before, which is, having found out the General Notion as Prieſts, to Typifie out Preachers of the word, and Levites, thoſe three other officers I will ſee what ſtamps of Reſemblance there are in thoſe Types of theſe offices, which will further clear the difference, and anſwer a main Argument for the Paſtor's Superiorities over Teachers, as it hath been urged by ſome. Under Levites I Rank all inferior offices, finding a Reſemblance in the Type of Deacons over the poor. For there were thoſe that diſpoſed of the Treaſury of the Church among theſe Levites, who (1 Chron. 26.20.) were over the Treaſury of the Houſe of God, and the Dedicated things, and there were alſo Ruling Elders among thoſe Levites who were Porters to keep out, and let in to the Aſſemblies, and the Gate of the Tabernacle, 2 Chron. 9. 18, 19, 20. as theſe Goſpel Elders alſo are to watch over, and eſpecially to regard with the Teachers concerning Admiſſion, or keeping out of Members to examine and try, &c. They aſſiſt in opening and ſhutting the Doors of God's Houſe. There were alſo Ruling Elders among thoſe Levites, who watched the Temple Day and Night, and ſtood before it, Numb. 18.2. and kept the charge of it, ver. 5. ſo theſe are to watch over the Spiritual Temple, the Church, and have their Souls committed to their charge to give an account, Heb. 13.17. And then there are an higher Rank of Officers to whom theſe Levites are given in aſſiſtance, (as the Deacons were ordained, Acts 6.3,4. that the Teachers might more fully give themſelves to the Word and Prayer, and 1 Cor. 12.28,29. are called Helps) even as the Levites were given to Aaron, Numb. 3.9, 10. and Numb. 18.6. The Septuagint ſays, added, in Alluſion to the Name of Levi, which ſignifies joyned, (Gen. 29. 34.) and theſe Officers are theſe Prophets, anſwering to the Prieſts, the Prieſts being to do many things the Levites were not to do; for Application of that Type.

1. The Prieſts had the charge of the inward part of the Temple, and Numb. 4.19. they had the charge only of the moſt Holy things, and the Levites were not to go in, when they were ſet and covered, and ſo the cleanſing the inward part of the Temple, (2 Chron. 29.16.) belonged to the Prieſts, the cleanſing of the outward Court to the Levites, ſo anſwerably the outward lives and converſations, and the filthineſs that appears therein, is the proper Sphere and Juriſdiction of the Rule of a Ruling Elder; but to inſtruct and comfort the Conſcience, to purge out inward corruption by the word taught and applyed, and inform the underſtanding, &c. is moſt proper to theſe Prophets, the Paſtor and Teacher.

So alſo 2. The Prieſts did only burn the incenſe, 1 Cor. 6. 48, 49. and only did bleſs in the Name of the Lord; and Sanctifie the moſt Holy things, 1 Cor. 23. 13. ſo theſe Prophets meddle ex officio only, with the moſt Holy things of the New Teſtament; being Stewards of the Myſteries of God, 1 Cor. 4.1. and put up the publick Prayers of the Church, ex officio, and are the ordinary mouth of the whole, and ſo giving themſelves to the word and prayer, are joyned, Acts 6.4. as belonging ex officio, unto them. And ſo to diſmiſs the Church with a bleſſing, and to Adminiſter and to bleſs the Cup of Bleſſing, &c. belongs only to them.

And although the Levites alſo did Teach, (2 Chron. 35. 3.) and ſo it might ſeem that Teachers are Levites alſo, and that there was no ſuch diſtinction intended between Teachers and them.

Yet 1. To the Prieſts of Levi, that charge was in a more eſpecial manner given, Deut. 24.8. do as the Prieſts and Levites ſhall Teach, and the Prieſts Lips were an eſpecial Ordinance to preſerve Knowledge; and ſo though Elders may now alſo Teach and Prophecy, as alſo other Members, (and ſo alſo other Tribes might Teach, as Druſius proves, and 2 Chron. 17.7. the Princes alſo are ſaid to Teach, as well as the Levites, as the Phariſees did whom Chriſt bad his Diſciples hear) Yet the Prieſts Teaching was that eſpecial Ordinance to preſerve knowledge, as now alſo the Paſtors and Deacon's Office is to preſerve the unity of the Faith, and to prevent being toſſed as Children; Eph. 4. 12, 13.

And 2. The Elders alſo have a Teaching, which belongs to them, ex officio, yet of a lower kind then that of theſe Paſtors and Teachers; and ſo ſome extending that of Biſhops, (1 Tim. 3.2.) to Elders alſo apply that property διδακτικοί unto them, and therefore in Common, they are exhorted to feed the Flock, 1 Pet. 5. 1. not by a word of Exhortation or Doctrine, but by a word of Admonition, for any ſin committed, or Duty omitted, or Error held, he muſt be able to convince out of the word, that this is lawful or unlawful; to lay open the ſinfulneſs of it 1 Theſſ. 5.12. He not only mentions them that labour; that is, in Word and Doctrine; but them that are over you, and Admoniſh you: That is, Ruling Elders.

And 3. Though Levites did then Teach as well, and with the ſame Authority that Prieſts; yet Teaching now is one of the moſt Holy Ordinances amongſt us, which among them it was not; but Sacrifices, &c. above it, which therefore did fully enough keep up the Diſtinctions, and made the Prieſthood an High Office; but what was an inferior Ordinance then, being in the New Teſtament one of the Supream Ordinances now: Therefore that is it that now muſt make the difference and diſtinction; and that it is the higheſt Ordinance appears in this, that Paul ſays of it comparatively to the Sacrament, I was not ſent to Baptize, but to Preach, 1 Cor. 1. 17.

CHAP. VIII.

Wherein the Diſtinction of the Officers in a Church conſiſts, and what are the due and proper bounds of their ſeveral Offices and Duties; the difference between Paſtor, Elder, and Teacher, ſtated. That they are co-ordinate, and that one hath not an Authority and Power Superior to the other, what are their Diſtinct Offices and Adminiſtrations.

NOW then I come to ſearch and find out the proper Genuine Diſtinction of theſe Offices, which is the principal thing which I aim at; and is principally intended by the Apoſtle, (in this Rom. 12.) to the end to ſet bounds to Officers not to entrench upon one another's Duties and Callings, as alſo to ſet them more diligently about their proper work; for the clearing of theſe Diſtinctions here given by the Apoſtle, I muſt premiſe this neceſſary Diſtinction of theſe Offices. That ſome of them are, as was obſerved, Subordinate one to the other, others co-ordinate; that is, ſome are inferior and ſuperior, more or leſs authorized, ſome are of equal power in the Adminiſtration of Holy things.

The co-ordinate as I ſhall ſhew anon, are the Prophets here, viz. Paſtor's and Teacher's Office of an equal Rank and Power, and their difference is to be ſought only in the differing manner of Adminiſtration or Miniſtry of the word. But unto both theſe Offices, there is a Subordination of the Elder's and Deacon's Office; as alſo of the Deacon's Office to the Elders. Which Subordination, when found out, will help us to ſee wherein the true difference lies: This their Subordination may be exemplified by the inſtance of Subalternate Species, that is, the ſeveral Kinds and Ranks of Creatures in the Old Creation, as theſe Officers are in the New, (God having made the one as the other, in order weight and meaſure) for inſtance, as there is Subordination between Man and Beaſt, and Plants, ſo among theſe three ſorts of Officers, Deacons and Widdows are the loweſt, Elders the middle; and Teachers or Prophets the Higheſt: Which Subordination that I may explain it, is not in reſpect of dependence or derivation of power, as the power of inferior Officers Civil, is dependent upon the Supream as the King, &c. no, but all hold immediately from Chriſt. As Man, tho' a more noble Creature, yet gives not Life to Plants, nor ſenſe to Beaſts, but all hold of God as in capite, ſo here too the Tenure is immediate; tho' Antichriſt and Biſhops would Subordinate Officers, yet it is not ſo in God's Inſtitution.

Neither 2. Is this Subordination in reſpect of Subjection to any Juriſdiction of the Superior, ſo as the Superior might reſtrain the inferior of the Exerciſe of their power, er, as the Biſhops take on them to Silence inferior Miniſters; no, but every Man hath, as his power, ſo the free exerciſe of it, is dependent only on Chriſt and his Church he is placed in, and that ſo as in his place and office, a Ruling-Elder may with authority admoniſh a Paſtor, as well as a Paſtor him, like as Fee-Servants in an Houſe, all know and are beholden, and ſubject to each other in their place and offices.

Neither 3. Is it only in reſpect of a greater or leſs excellency in their Functions, that the work of the one is more Noble and Honourable, and deſerves double or treble Honour; though that be true as appears, by 1 Tim. 5. 17. which might have been, though that work the one doth, the more excellent could no way have done.

But 4. It is in reſpect of a larger Commiſſion that the one hath; then the other in the Adminiſtration of Holy things, ſo as the Superior Rank; Paſtors and Teachers have ex officio, all the power that the other hath, and more; and ſo the Elders all that the Deacons have, and more: That there is ſuch a gradual Subordination in theſe Offices may appear; becauſe the Apoſtle ſpeaking of a Deacon's Office (1 Tim. 3. 13.) ſays, he that hath Adminiſtred it well, hath purchaſed to himſelf a good Degree,&c ſo in that place alſo, (1 Cor. 12. 28.) he Ranks them in Superior and Inferior Claſſes: Firſt, Apoſtles, Secondly, Prophets, extraordinary, namely, (as Eph. 4. 11.) under whom alſo Evangeliſts are comprehended: And Thirdly, Teachers that is ordinary Teachers, under whom by a Synecdoche alſo paſtors are comprehended, as being of the ſame Rank; and then after that as inferior to theſe, among others are promiſcuouſly reckoned up Helps; that is, Deacons and Governours, which are Ruling Elders. That as Apoſtles had a larger Commiſſion than Evangeliſts, being the planters of Churches, and had power over all the Evangeliſts (being but their Aſſiſtants) in Setling and Eſtabliſhing them, and as Prophets and Evangeliſts had a greater power and gifts then Paſtors and Deacons, (all which they had and more; for Evangeliſts had the gifts and offices both of Paſtors and Teachers, ſince the Apoſtle chargeth Timothy to attend to Doctrine and exhortation, 1 Tim 4. 13. but here his Admonition is, he that Teacheth on Teaching only, and he that Exhorteth on Exhortation;) ſo likewiſe have the Paſtors all the power that the Elders have; as the Elders all that the Deacons, and what is the work of either, the Paſtors or Teachers may do as their leaſure ſerves, as in Acts 6. 1, 2, 3. Originally the Apoſtles themſelves, (as may be gathered from ver. 4. and 1. compared, did perform that daily Adminiſtration, but through the burthen of it appointed a ſpecial office, that they might attend to their principal and more proper work; yet ſo as occaſionally they might overlook and joyn with them (as they had leaſure) in their Adminiſtrations.

2. Rule and Government is alſo common to the Paſtor and Teacher with the Elders, as by this Place, 1 Tim. 5. 17. expreſly doth appear, in that he ſays in common, the Elders that Rule are worthy of double Honour; but eſpecially thoſe that labour in the Word and Doctrine: Therefore they that Labour in Word and Doctrine, are alſo Ruling Elders; and it is ſuch a Speech, as when it is ſaid God is the Saviour of all Men, but eſpecially of them that believe, whence any Man would gather, that Believers were Men; only further, ſome ſpecial Rank of Men, or as if it be ſaid, Honour all Fellows in a Colledge, in the Univerſity, but eſpecially thoſe that labour in Divinity. There is another place which proves the ſame thing, Heb. 13. 7. ſo as their Office is to do both, but yet they are in common with another ſort of Officers, eſpecially deſigned to that work mentioned, ver. 17.

Now this being premiſed to find out the proper diſtinctions of each of theſe Subordinate Offices, theſe enſuing Axioms, which fully agree with the Apoſtle's intentions here, and elſewhere may give us light:

The 1. Axiom is, That what is common to a Superior Officer, with the inferior may yet be made a proper difference of that inferior Officer; as for example. To Rule is an office common to Paſtors and Elders; and yet, to Rule, is made the ſpecial difference of ſuch an Officer in this, Rom. 12. 6, 7. as he is diſtinguiſhed from Deacons and Prophets; For it is in this, as it is in other Species and kinds of Creatures, who have ſomething common, ſomething proper, ſo as Men have all that Beaſts and Plants have, and yet when we would expreſs the difference of a Plant from a Beaſt; we ſay it is a Creature that hath life in it, when we would expreſs the proper difference of a Beaſt, we ſay, it is a Creature that hath Senſe, a Senſitive Soul, and ſo of a Man, we expreſs his proper difference; a Creature Reaſonable, tho he hath Senſe alſo, and ſo the Apoſtle, in this diſtinction of Offices, diſtinguiſheth a Deacon by his Office of giving, becauſe this is all that the power of his Office reacheth to, an Elder by one that Ruleth, becauſe that is the higheſt that his Office extends unto, and the Paſtor and Doctor by Prophecying, as that which alone is proper to them, though they Rule, &c. alſo.

2. The Second Axiom is, That when that, which is common to a Superior Officer, with an Inferior, is made the difference of the Inferior Office, it is in reſpect of ſome peculiarity in that his work, which makes a true difference between them.

1. Thus though to Rule is a Paſtor's Office as well as an Elder's; yet the Elder is more eſpecially ſaid to Rule, becauſe he is wholly ſet apart to it: It is his proper calling which he is wholy appointed to mind, and in a ſpecial manner; and ſo the Deacon's Office is to mind the poor; they are ſeparated to this work, ſo as to none elſe: That as I ſaid, all Officers in common differ from private Members, as being ſeparated to ſome work, tho' withal they do beſides retain in common with the reſt of the Members the exerciſe of all Priviledges and Duties that belong to Members: So it is in this reſpect in the compariſon between Inferior and Superior Officers, though the Superior in common performs the ſame works with the Inferior; yet the Inferior is ſet apart to it wholly, which the other is not, but to ſome other of an higher kind; by reaſon of intending which, he cannot ſo fully and wholy intend the other. And therefore it is obſerveable, that ſpeaking of a Ruler's Office in Ruling, he ſays, let him do it with diligence; for that is his work which he is to mind, and there will be enough of it to fill his hand.

Or 2. There may be a peculiar duty to be exerciſed by one more than another in the way of Adminiſtration, and more peculiar bounds of Juriſdiction in Ruling. Thus the Elders Ruling and Inſpection and Watching, is only principally over Men's Lives, their outward Man, the infirmities thereof in converſation, but the Paſtors and Teachers care is over the inward principally, as their Errors, Temptations, Doubts, Scruples, &c. and the Teacher alſo is more eſpecially to Admoniſh of Errors, and pluck up ſuch ill weeds as are contrary to ſound Doctrine; and the Paſtor to watch over the doubts about their Eſtates, and ſlackneſs and deadneſs any way in Holy Duties, and accordingly the People are to make uſe of them; as they thus have in Ruling their more ſpecial walks and works.

Or 3. Sometimes there is a difference in reſpect of eminency, that as a Ruler's work is to Admoniſh and watch over the Life, ſo he may have a more ſpecial gift that way, than a Paſtor or Teacher.

3. The Third Axiom is, That in like manner the Superior Officers, Paſtor and Teacher, have beſides thoſe Offices common with Ruling Elders a ſpecial work, in which they are more Eminent, and attend more upon it than Ruling, or on the Deacon's Office; (though they are to mind them alſo) which is to Prophecy and open the word, and accordingly therefore that gives them their diſtinction from the other.

1. Thus they are diſtinguiſhed from Deacons expreſly, Acts 6. 1. The Apoſtles whoſe ordinary Succeſſors theſe are gave over much of the buſineſs of looking to the poor, and eſtabliſht an Office for it, to the end, they might continually give themſelves to Prayer, and the Miniſtry of the word; they being to be in publick the Mouth of God to the People, and of the People unto God.

Thus 2. Alſo they are moſt properly diſtinguiſhed from Ruling Elders, 1 Tim. 5. *v.*17. Thoſe Elders are ſuch whoſe Office it is to Rule well, but theſe are they that labour in the Word and Doctrine: That is, that ex officio are to give themſelves wholy up to it. To this purpoſe alſo may be obſerved that difference, in Heb. 13.1. in the 7th verſe ſpeaking of Preaching Elders or Prophets, he ſays, Remember them who have the Rule over you, who have ſpoken to you the word of God; that is, that are openers of the word among you; and therefore he adds whoſe Faith follow, and then at the 17th, comes in, as a new exhortation, ſo another Sort of Elders (or elſe I ſuppoſe he would have ſhut up all in that other) of whom he mentions that they Rule, but leaves, out as a note of difference, that which in the former he added; [that have ſpoken the word to you.] So as this is proper to theſe Officers, and not communicated to the reſt, (not ex officio) to labour in the Word and Prophecy: And therefore in Epheſ. 4 11, 12. mentioning ſuch Officers as were appointed to gather the Saints, and build them up in Faith and the knowledge of Chriſt by Preaching, he mentions only Paſtors and Doctors, and is ſilent of the other, as being the proper work of them, not of the other, As I have ſhewed the proper difference of ſubordinate Officers, it now remains that I ſhould do the like, concerning theſe two in the Superior Rank, Paſtor and Teacher, which are co-ordinate; of which we muſt ſhew the difference alſo.

1. Some would have made the ſame difference of Subordination, between the Paſtor and Teacher, that hath been ſhewn between them and the others; ſo as the Paſtor ſhould be alone the Supream Officer, and all the reſt his Aſſiſtants; and he ſhould have alſo a larger power of Adminiſtration and Government, both in the Sacraments and Cenſures, from which they would exclude the Teacher, from meddling in them: But in any ſuch reſpect, I cannot find in Scripture any ſo vaſt a difference, but every way an equality given to them, only a difference in the manner of Adminiſtration.

1. There is only a difference as to the Adminiſtration of Holy things, not any thing as to power. For then the Scripture would mention alſo, that the Paſtor hath all the gifts the Teacher hath, and more; for it is a Law will not fail us, that eminency of power hath eminency of gifts; that fullneſs of power, hath a fullneſs of gifts anſwerable: But God hath ſhared and divided gifts of prophecying between them, to one, a word of Wiſdom, to another the word of Knowledge, 1 Cor. 12. Not to the Paſtor ſolely, but ſo as the Teacher is not his aſſiſtant, but his com-peer in it; and as their gifts, ſo their duties here (in Rom. 12.) are bounded gifts differing, ver. 6. ſo as the exhorter is to attend on exhorting, as the Teacher on Teaching, and not to entrench on one anothers Office and Duty; and ſo both to Prophecy, κατά αναλογίαν πιςεως, as the Syriak Tranſlation hath it, fidei ſuæ, of his own Faith; and then the meaning is not according only to the meaſure of his gift, more or leſs, for ἀναλογία reſpects quality rather than quantity; a likeneſs, a ſuitableneſs, and proportion therein, according to the kind of his gifts; ſo as the meaning is, that all his Sermons and Prophecying, ſhould be Analogical to his Gifts and Office. As he hath Gifts and an Office of Exhortation, ſo let him accordingly frame his Sermons ſuitably: As we ſay of words (when proper) they are according to the Analogy of a Tongue; ſo here his Miniſtry is according to the Analogy of his gifts, when ſuitable thereunto. A day of Thankſgiving and Humiliation differs tho' there is no pre-eminence of Holineſs in the one afore the other, only ſome Duties do eminere in the one, more than in the other; as Humiliation in the one, and Thankſgiving in the other. And therefore as a Man may in a day of Thankſgiving think of his ſins, in order to raiſe up his Heart to thankfullneſs; and in a day of Humiliation, mentions God's Mercies to break his Heart for his ſins: Yet ſo, as the eminent Duty is to be Thankſgiving in the one, and Humiliation in the other; ſo it is here in the Adminiſtration of your gifts.

Neither 2. Is it that there are any Holy things that a Paſtor may Adminiſter, that not a Teacher, as to inſtance in the Sacraments, wherein the difference muſt lie, if in any thing.

1. The Sacraments are committed promiſcuouſly to the Apoſtles and their Succeſſors, in teaching ex officio, Matth. 28. 19. Go and teach and Baptize.

2. Both are alike Stewards of the Miniſtries of God, which Elders are not, 1 Cor. 4. 1.

3. Both may bleſs and do, as in praying afore Sermons, ſo in Preaching the Goſpel, and it is called the fullneſs of the Bleſſing of the Goſpel, which a teacher in teaching brings, (Rom. 16.) as well as the Sacrament is called the Cup of bleſſing.

And 4. Though the Sacraments are the Seals of the Covenant that apply Chriſt, and ſo might ſeem peculiar to the Paſtor's Office: Yet they are ſigns alſo for Teaching, and belong therefore to the Teachers to Adminiſter. As therefore ſuch truths as are mixt, belong to them both to Preach, ſo the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments too. For they ſhew forth Chriſt's Death till he come, as well as the word, (Gal. 3. 1, 2.) And they Preach to the Eye, that which the Goſpel doth to the Ear.

5. Teaching is a higher Ordinance than the Sacrament, (1 Cor. 1. 7.) I was not ſent to Preach, but Baptize: Therefore he that ex officio, doth the greater and more important, may perform the leſſer.

3. They are equal in reſpect of Honour due to them, (1 Tim. 5. 17) where his Scope is to give every Office its due Honour. Therefore of Widdows, and ſo of Deacons, who are of the ſame Rank, he had ſaid, Honour them who are Widows indeed. Of Ruling Elders, a Superior Office, he hath doubled it, appointing double Honour to him that Rules well. But to thoſe that labour in the Word (of Wiſdom or Exhortation) the Paſtor, or in Doctrine, the Teacher he eſpecially aſſigns double Honour, and to both the ſame, whereas if the Paſtor had been ſo Superior, (his Scope being to ſhew, what Honour was due to each, according to their Adminiſtration) he would have ſaid, give to your Paſtor more eſpecial Honour of all the reſt. He doth not intend any precedency, for he promiſcuouſly Ranks the one afore the other, and è contra, ſometimes the one, ſometimes the other, as (*Eph.*4.12.) Paſtors afore Teachers, ſo here Teachers afore Paſtors ; and ſometimes Teacher for to expreſs both, and that more ordinarily than the other, as (*Gal.*6.6. 1 *Cor.*12.28. 1 *Tim.*3. and *Tit.*1.) Nor doth he mean that there is an excellency in the Miniſtries of one above the other, that as all Ordinances excell other in ſomething, ſo it is here : for when all is in order, both come to one. The one is the Tutor of the underſtanding, the other of the Will : Theſe are their two Pupils committed to them: And when that controverſy in Philoſophy is decided, which is Nobleſt of thoſe two Faculties ? Then may this of theſe two Offices.

But they differ.

1. In reſpect of an eminency of Gift, inclining one way rather than another. It is ſaid of all Prophecying Elders, (1 *Tit.*9.) that they are to be able both to exhort and convince Gain-ſayers by ſound Doctrine, ſo as the Paſtor is to uſe a word of Doctrine, and ſo a Teacher a word of Exhortation, but that which is eminere, or to ſhine forth in their Preachings, is their ſpecial gift. It is not to be thought that a Paſtor is to ſpeak only in a way of Application and Uſe; for he ſhould have a Doctrine as a ground to plant his great Ordinance upon, which he diſchargeth. Nor is it that the Teacher is to leave his Doctrines altogether without Application; but that his gift is ſuited to his office, and ſo his Labour is to be moſt ſpent in Doctrine, and ſo the words of the Text are to be underſtood, Let him that Teacheth, be as in Teaching, that is, moſt employed about it.

2. They differ but modaliter, in the manner of handling their Miniſtry. The one turns all his Sermons into Application, by way of Comfort and Exhortation ; the other endeavours to inform the Judgment ; they differ but as Logick and Rhetorick, which are compared to a ſhut hand, and one opened, the ſame Arguments are uſed in both ; but the one ſo ordered, as to convince the Judgment, the other ſo as to perſwade the affection.

More particularly they differ.

1. In the ſeveral Subjects they are to deal with, both look to the inward Man ; ſo they differ from the Elders who look to the outward : but thoſe ſhare the two Noble Faculties between them. The one the Underſtanding, the other the Will and Conſcience. The one hath more peculiarly the underſtanding to deal with, the other, the Will and Affections. Theſe are their Pupils committed to their charge, Men are ignorant and apt to err, and need to be built up in Knowledge. This the Teacher takes care of, to feed with knowledge and underſtanding, (as *Jer.*3.16. and 23. 3,4. and 6. *ch.*8.) And Men are ſlow of Heart to do, and need quickning and ſtirring up: For this the Paſtor's office ſerves, (*Eccl.*12.11.) there is need of Nails to Rivet and faſten Truths on their underſtanding, and eſtabliſh them in them ; and there is need of Goads to provoke them unto good works, (*Heb.*10.23:) And there are feeble Arms and hands that hang down, that are to be ſtrengthned ; inward evils, diſcouragements which are to be removed, &c. which to do is the Paſtor's office.

2. They differ in the object matter. The one ſpeaks words of knowledge, and conſiders truths, and ſhews the ſtory and harmony of them, teacheth in Faith and Verity, (as 1 Tim. 2.7. or as Rom. 2.20.) is an Inſtructer of the Fooliſh, a Teacher o Babes, and has a Form of Knowledge, and of the Truth in the Law : The other i to conſider Men, and ſpeak words of Wiſdom pertinently to them. The one hath the Bible, and the Syſtem or Form of wholſom words for his Text : The other ſtudies Men more, and ſeeks to fit the word to them. And the Paſtor is one able to diſcer what is peculiarly fit for Men's Spirits, and ſo ſpeaks wiſely to Men, whereas the other ſpeaks pertinently to truths. The one brings Scripture to Scripture, and compares each with each ; the other deals and divides the word, and brings Scripture an Men's Conſciences together. You may diſcern this difference in Men's Conferences ſome when they ſpeak, conſider the occaſion of the party : Some follow ſtill th occaſion the diſcourſe giveth.

3. They differ in reſpect of truths, the Paſtor deals with points of practice more with things to be done ; the other with points of Faith, with things to be believed

Some truths are mixt, and in thoſe both are alike to deal, as in caſes of Conſcience, and ſcruples of Conſcience.

4. To expreſs it by the method of Preaching in uſe with us, whereas Sermons conſiſt of Doctrines and uſes, ſo the gifts of the one lies more in explaining the words and phraſes, and to bring Reaſons to confirm and to ſolve doubts, and reſolve miſteries; and ſo ſucceed theſe Prophets under the New Teſtament, who opened harder places and difficulties. The other is more fit to enlarge into uſes, and to digeſt all truths into practical thoughts, which with power he can ſet home on the Heart.

5. The Paſtor deals with Mens ſins more, the Teacher with Mens Errors more; the one in Information, the other in Mortification. The one hath more of Chriſt's Prieſtly Office in ſlaying the Old Man, and offering up Believers as a Sacrifice to Chriſt, (Rom 15. 16.) the other hath Chriſt's Prophetical Office more imported, in opening truths, as the Elder hath more of Chriſt's Kingly Office, in Ruling over Mens Conſciences.

Uſe 1. See the goodneſs of God, who hath made ſuch abundant proviſion for all defects; as he hath fitted gifts to Offices, ſo both to the needs of Men, (1 Cor. 12.21.) which implies, that God, in placing the Members, reſpected the need of the whole, as Natura non deficit in neceſſariis neque gratia. Look what the inward Man wants, preaching Officers are to provide for, and all the ſeveral parts of it; and what is defective in the outward Man, the Elders are to watch over. And accordingly we ſee, as Miniſters are thus eminently gifted, ſo people are eminently fitted to them: Some are quickened more by an affectionate way, and cleave to ſuch a Miniſtry; ſome by a Doctrinal way, and are built up by Notions and Knowledge, that ſo all taſts may be ſuited, and all have their portion.

2. Uſe, There is a Rule for Churches in their choice, to Rank Men into offices, according to their gifts. This you are to heed, for you chuſe not for your ſelves, but for the Lord (as he ſaid, you Judge for the Lord.) The Apoſtle ſays, (Acts 14.23.) the Holy Ghoſt made them Over-ſeers; yet they were called by Men, & ſet over his Church purchaſed by his Blood, over a Flock which God accounts ſo precious. You are not therefore to chuſe, out of any ends of common prudence, but for Spiritual ends, meerly comparing Spiritual things with Spiritual, to ſuit Men and places accordingly: There is Simony in by ends. In other choiſes they uſe to give Oaths, as in Colledges, and in Corporations, but here there is none but conſcience to be a tye upon you.

That which now remains, is to eſtabliſh the truth of theſe ſeveral Offices here mentioned, becauſe it is denyed by many (as you know) that there are ſuch, or ſo many differing officers to be in Churches, denying that there is ſuch a difference between the office of Paſtor and Teacher, and that under thoſe two Names, one only kind of officer is meant, in reſpect of a differing action to be performed by him; and ſo that there are ſeveral Works, not Perſons: And then again wholly taking away the office of the Ruling Elder, as neither neceſſary, nor any way the Inſtitution of Chriſt.

I will Firſt therefore, in general, argue out of this place, of Rom. 12. ver. 6, 7, 8.

1. That in this place officers and not actions or duties of Members are ſpoken of, is evident, 1. In that he mentions, διακονία, or Miniſtry, which is a name of an office, not of an action of any private Member.

2. In that he ſays, He that Ruleth, it muſt needs note out an Office; for otherwiſe, one Brother is not to Rule over another, or to take upon him to do it.

3. In that he ſpeaks of them, as of ſuch callings as Men are to exerciſe themſelves in. which is proper for Officers ſo to do. Now ſo he ſpeaks of them; for that he calls for diligence of a Ruler, it is ἐν σπουδῇ, which, as Boetius defines it, is Vehemens animi intentio ad id quod ſuſcipitur; a Vehement intention of Mind, to that which is undertaken: So as to mind it, and employ one's ſelf in it, as in a Calling and Employment deſigned there, which alſo that Phraſe, ἐν διακονίᾳ, implies: He that Miniſtreth in Miniſtring, that Teacheth on Teaching; that Phraſe, to be in, notes out making it one's calling; for ſo, (1 Tim. 4.15, 16.) ſpeaking to Timothy to perform the work of an Evangeliſt; he ſays, give thy ſelf wholy to them, and be in them, v. 16. as the word is in the Original, and in that alſo he uſeth ſuch participles to expreſs it, as Exhortations, In docendo, in exhortando, it implies a Calling, and not an Action, for otherwiſe it were a Tautology: For if he meant an Action only, then to ſay, He

Ch. IX. that Teacheth, Teach, were a Tautology: So as the one notes out Jus & nomen officij, the other, the exerciſe of his Office: To ſay, let him that ſeeth, ſee, is a Tautology. But to ſay, let the ſeer ſee, he whoſe Office it is; is to call upon him to do his Duty, by reaſon of his Office, ſo as the one, he that Teacheth, notes out, Jus & potentiam, the other, in Teaching, notes praxin, the exerciſe of it.

4. Thoſe who oppoſe this Congregational way, have none to teach or exhort, but thoſe that are in Office, or Orders, as they call it.

5. Though he call them Gifts, yet ſo Officers are called, (Epheſ.4.3.) the Apoſtles office he calls χάρις, I ſay, ſays he, through the grace given me; that is, my Apoſtolical power and office, as was ſhewed afore.

And 2. Ordinary officers are meant.

1. Becauſe the Gifts and Actions he ſpeaks of are ordinary, ſuch as no extraordinary Gifts are required for the performance of: As to teach or exhort, to give, &c. which Actions and Gifts remain ſtill in the Church.

And 2. Becauſe even the Prophets here (which if any, might ſeem extraordinary) are limited to the Analogy of Faith; and all exhorted not to entrench upon other's Callings or Actions, which bounds, if they had been extraordinary Officers, they could not have ſet to them.

Now then 3. If officers, and officers ordinary, be here meant, then look how many ſeveral Enumerations there are, ſo many ſeveral offices are there too. For elſe,

1. The Scope of his former General Exhortation, that they ſhould not entrench upon one another's Functions, had been made utterly void, if ſeveral offices and actions had not been intended.

And 2. Becauſe he had ſpoken of diverſity, ver.4 6. therefore theſe Enumerations muſt be underſtood as inſtances of that diverſity.

And 4. If Paſtors and Deacons are differing, then, why not all: There is the ſame reaſon for the one, as for the other. And therefore, why ſhould not he that teacheth, be differing from him that exhorteth; as well as from him that giveth or Ruleth. And in that, (Epheſ. 4.) Paſtor and Doctor, and (1 Cor. 12.) teachers and helpers and Governours, are reckoned up amongſt the extraordinary: It argues, that in an ordinary way there is the like neceſſity of them, that in an extraordinary there was of the other. I ſhall ſpeak more particularly of the difference and diſtinction of the offices of Paſtor and Teacher.

1. It appears that theſe offices are diſtinct in that place, (Epheſ.4.11.) we find Paſtors and Deacons enumerated.

Obj. Againſt this place is objected, that it is ſpoken exegetically, Paſtors and Teachers, as making up all one office.

1. But then he would have ſaid rather Paſtors or Teachers, not and Teachers.

2. But Kαὶ, doth not always lock together, but ſometimes differenceth two things it is ſet betwixt, as in the like caſe, (Acts 13 1.) Prophets and Teachers: By Prophets he means, in the Language of the primitive times, extraordinary Gifts, but teachers were ordinary: And Barnabas and Saul, who were extraordinary Men, are there reckoned.

And 3. In all Exegetical Speeches, the latter explains the former, and uſeth to be more clear; but after Paſtors in that Senſe that's held (this being the proper name of the office) to ſay, i. e. Teachers is to explain the more proper by the Improper.

Obj. But to all the reſt, there is a note of difference affixed, as when he ſays, ſome Apoſtles, ſome Evangeliſts, but of theſe Paſtors and Tecahers there is none, ſo as it ſeems, they were intended as one.

Anſw. But it is the manner of the Grecians to bring in the word [Kαὶ, and] in the end of a disjunctive Enumeration, in a disjunctive Senſe, as in that, (Gal. 3.21.) after he had ſaid, there is neither Jew nor Greek, neither bound nor free, he ends that laſt disjunction, neither Male or Female; in Greek it is, neither Male and Female, ſo in the Original, and the Syriak ſo reads it.

And 2. As their offices are thus here, and in that place thus diſtinct; ſo their gifts alſo are diſtinct: And this is a Rule infallible, that according to diverſity of gifts hath God appointed diverſity of offices: He ſuited gifts and offices together, ſo

1 Cor. 12. 45. There are diverſities of Gifts, and diverſities of Adminiſtrations, ſo as they are commenſurable; now in the ſame place, when (*ver.*8.) He enumerates the variety of Gifts: To one, ſays he, is given the word of Wiſdom, to another the word of Knowledge.

Book, VI.

1. He ſpeaks of Preachers that ſpeak the word, which differenceth them from Elders; for he calls it a word of Knowledge, and a word of Wiſdom.

2. He ſpeaks of ordinary Officers, for as Beza obſerves, when he begins to ſpeak of extraordinary Gifts, in the next word he varies the Phraſe, ετέρω πίστις, ver. 9. And they differ, as prudentia & ſcientia in Philoſophy many Men knowing things in the notion, that are not ſo wiſe to diſcern of Men and things, and to apply accordingly. And according to what the Holy Ghoſt hath ſaid here of the variety of Men's Gifts, we find nothing more evident in experience, even in a Church, where there is a confuſion of Offices: Yet God ſtill kept to his Rule, and diſtributed Gifts accordingly: Some apt to open things more largely, others to apply them; yea, the Papiſts did obſerve this difference of Gifts, as is evident in their comparing Thomas Aquinas, and Bonaventure together: Thomas intellectu eminuit, Bonaventura affectu ſplenduit: The one was a more underſtanding Judicious Divine, the other more Affectionate and Eminent to ſtir up affection: And even in the Natural parts of Men, there is that difference, ſome are fit poſitively to explain and convince, but cannot perſwade; others are more fit to perſwade and prevail with Men. And thereby do ordinary Officers differ from thoſe extraordinary, that both meet in theſe: (So in Timothy) but are differing in thoſe other.

3. As there are differing Gifts, ſo differing Works, to a differing end. Prophecying Elders are diſtinguiſhed from Ruling, by labouring in the Word and Doctrine, (1 *Tim.*5.17.) for the great labour is that of the Mind. By word, ſome Particularly underſtand a word of Exhortation, as here diſtinct from Doctrine or Teaching. So *Heb.*13.22. ſuffer the word of Exhortation, and Acts 13.15. If any have a word of Exhortation, &c. And Doctrine, on the contrary, is taken for the form of truth and wholſom words, which is taught eſpecially by the teacher, as (1 *Cor.*14.26.) Doctrine is taken. And as here they are called both Prophets, ſo according to thoſe ends of Prophecying mentioned, (as 14.3.) may their diſtinction here be illuſtrated. Prophecying he ſays is a ſpeaking to Edification, to Exhortation, to Comfort; if Edification be taken in a ſtrict Senſe as diſtinct from comfort and exhortation (though I confeſs elſewhere, and in the next Verſes, it is taken largely) then it notes out Building up in knowledge, which is the Teachers work, and Exhortation and Comfort the Paſtor's: The Teacher Prophecyeth to Edification, and the Exhorter, to Exhortation and Comfort. And therefore it is obſervable that the word uſed here, παρακαλεῖν, is either to Comfort or to Exhort.

4. By this diſtribution of Officers, there is a Communication of all the Offices of Chriſt.

1. The Paſtor Repreſents the Prieſtly Office of Chriſt. For he by the word applyed, ſlays the Old Man, and preſents the New Creature to God.

2. The Teacher Repreſents the Prophetical Office of Chriſt.

3. The Kingly Office of Chriſt, is more eminently ſeen in the Ruling Elder.

4. This ſuits with all the needs of a Church, their underſtandings are the Teacher's Pupils, their Wills, the Paſtor's, their Lives, the charge of the Elders: And accordingly we ſee Believers Appeal ſome to Doctrinal Preaching, ſome to Exhortation. And thus Ranked were the Miniſters in the Primitive times: There were two Prophecying Elders (at leſt) in a Church, (*Col.*4.18.) Archippus had a Miniſtry he was to fulfill, and that ſurely a Teaching one; for their other Miniſter Epaphras, who was alſo their Miniſter, *Col.*1.1. was then abſent, *Col.*4 12. more beſides they might have, and a Church may have, (as Acts 13. 1.) they had many teachers in one Church, and as Muſculus obſerves, on Rom. 12. he ſays, all have not the ſame Office, not that none have the ſame. The Body to which the compariſon is, hath two Eyes, two Hands, &c. there was ſomething in it, that Chriſt in ſending forth the Apoſtles, ſent them two by two. So Cyprian in his time ſays, you that are Paſtors with the Elders, Doctors and Readers, &c. ſo in the Church of Alexendria, Origen was a Doctor.

The German Divines make this Office proper to Univerſities,and profeſſors there,but the Apoſtle makes the Officer a Member of the Church,and for all Saints, Epheſ.4. and Rom.12. So in our Cathedrals,there remains a Veſtigium,a Footſtep of this diſtinction,in that we have, as Biſhops, ſo alſo Readers in Cathedrals, and in the ſame Church there are Vicars and Paſtors.

CHAP. IX.

That a Paſtor and Teacher, and many other Officers of a particular Church, have the promiſe of a ſpecial Bleſſing from God. That accordingly they do receive ſuch a ſpecial Bleſſing ſuited to the Rank, and order of their Office, to give Succeſs in the Execution of it, beyond what a meer Preacher can expect.

Pſal. 133. 1, 2, 3. Keep not thou ſilence O God: Hold not thy peace, and be not ſtill, O God. For lo, thine Enemies make a Tumult, and they that hate thee, have lift up the Head. They have taken crafty counſel againſt thy People, and conſulted againſt thy hidden ones.

THere is one thing which I cannot pretermit, but muſt urge and preſs it, viz. that every Inſtitution and Office, and order appointed by God, hath anſwerably to accompany it, and ſucceed it, a ſpecial bleſſing ſuited to the nature of it. This is evident from this, Pſal. 133. 1, 2, 3. It is common to the New Teſtament, though ſpoken of the Aſſemblies of the Old Teſtament, either of the leſſer Synagogues, or of the General Aſſemblies at their Feaſts, for they were under their High Prieſts, to whom he does allude, ver. 2. It is like the pretious Oyntment upon the Head, that ran down upon the Beard, even Aaron's Beard, that went down to the skirts of his Garments: Every Member partook of ſome benefit of the Holy Oyl poured upon Aaron's Head, the chief Officer of thoſe General Aſſemblies; and it is expreſly added of them there, that God commands the Bleſſing. And this,though an Old Teſtament inſtance, may fitly ſerve for the New, mutatis mutandis. For a particular Church, where the Brethren meet in one επὶ τὸ αυτο, and ομωθυμαδὸν, with one conſent, one heart, one worſhip, is in it ſelf alone a diſtinct ſpecial Ordinance and Inſtitution of Chriſt, and he hath promiſed that where two or three are gathered together in his Name, he will be in the midſt amongſt them, Matth. 18. 20. And his preſence brings all ſorts of bleſſings with it, and there 'tis that God commands a bleſſing. For that company are the Houſe of God, 1 Tim. 3. 15. The Church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the Truth. Ἐδραίωμα, the Seat of Truth,a Pillar of Truth, not Architectonically, that ſupported the Truth,but Phorendically as pillars uſe to be,with papers paſted on them to declare the Truth. It is an Ordinance to preſerve Truth in the World, to hold it forth, as on pillars they uſed to place their Writings. God is uſed to bleſs the ſmall deſpiſed Aſſemblies of Saints gathered together in unity, more then great Councils conſiſting of Popes and Biſhops, and Cardinals. Theſe ſmall Aſſemblies have been the little creepers in the Chimney,that keep up the fires,which the great Andirons,do not as was Prince Henry's Speech. And a Church, though very ſmall, is yet a Church of the Living God, and (as Mr. Nye once well ſaid) A Church is a thing, that lives, becauſe it has the Living God to dwell in it.

And as God bleſſeth the Churches that are the Casket, the Sheath, ſo he bleſſeth their Officers too that are proper to them (though among Men accounted the loweſt) that is, they are Paſtors and Teachers in particular Congregations, who are their Preaching Elders.

The Papiſts plead that it is their Church that keep the Faith and the Truth, and that God has made a promiſe to lead them into all Truth. But it is the ordinary Officers of the Church, Paſtors and Teachers, which the Apoſtle Paul ſays do build up the Church, till they come to the unity of the Faith, Epheſ.4. 11, 12, 13. And it is among you he has commanded the bleſſing, which is demonſtrated thus, that Chriſt when he aſcended, gave Gifts unto Men, and ſcattered them among the Saints, tanquam miſſilia, ſilia, As the Roman Emperors did their Donatives among the People, as their Chariots went along. Now what were thoſe Gifts, but the Offices which God Inſtituted in the Church Univerſal; Firſt the extraordinary, that ceaſed before Tertullian's time, as Apoſtles, Prophets, Evangeliſt's, and there are no more of them to be found on Earth, only their Writings continue, and make up the New Teſtament. But who are the laſting Officers of continuance to preſerve the Truths, when they were gone, none but Paſtors and Teachers, and unto theſe it has been, that the Faith hath been committed, and by them preſerved, and Truth hath been taught, and how long do they laſt? Till all come to the unity of the Faith of the Son of God: If any point of Faith be erred in, that is not Fundamental; theſe Paſtors and Teachers do reſtore it unto its primitive Native Splendour. 'Tis there God appoints the Bleſſing, what ever Men pretend of General Councils; and the reaſon is, becauſe God ſtill follows his own Inſtitutions with his own Bleſſing, and there God commands a Bleſſing. As Chriſt himſelf did aſcend from the lower parts of the Earth unto that hight, which he has in Heaven, ſo doth all Truths ariſe from the lower ſort of Miniſters; and if General Councils have any Truth among them, it is becauſe it hath aſcended firſt unto unto them, from the inferior lower ſort of Miniſters, as they in Debaſement call them.

That in general, a ſpecial bleſſing from God is promiſed to all Aſſemblies and Inſtitutions, whether of the Old or New Teſtament is evinced from this one place which I have mentioned, Pſal. 133. 1, 2, 3. where a bleſſing is ſo emphatically declared, There God commands a bleſſing, which denotes the intention of God's mind in it. Now to whom and to what is this Superexcellent bleſſing even eternal life, which is the ſum and quinteſſence of bleſſings commanded to be beſtowed? Under the Old Teſtament the promiſe of Eternal Life was then given, Witneſs, that one Scripture ſpeaking of the Old Teſtament worſhip by the twelve Tribes, to which promiſe (ſays the Apoſtle) the twelve Tribes, meaning the Nation of the Godly Jews, hoping to come, ſerved God Day and Night. Their Aſſemblies were either the General Aſſemblies or Feaſts, at which the High Prieſt, the greateſt Officer of the Old Teſtament, and the Type of Chriſt was preſent, or elſe the leſſer Aſſemblies of the Synagogues, and all the Order and Inſtitutions belonging to them, and all this bleſſing was promiſed to each and every of them. And their Holy Communion together in the General Aſſemblies, the Pſalmiſt compares unto the pouring down the Holy Oyl upon the Head of the High Prieſt, and as the Oyl dropt down upon all his Garments, the Skirts, &c. So every particular Member likewiſe they exhorted to keep the unity of the Spirit in the Bond of Peace. Theſe are the unities of the New Teſtament, that the Saints are exhorted to live in alſo, and above all to avoid diviſions, they are called to peace in one Body, and every particular Church is called the Houſe of the living God, dwelling together with them to keep them in unity. And Chriſt's firſt Inſtitution of a particular Church under the New Teſtament expreſſes it on this wiſe again: I ſay unto you, that if two of you ſhall agree upon Earth, &c. Matth. 18. 19. There is unity, and as touching any thing they ſhall ask of my Father which is in Heaven (ſays Chriſt) it ſhall be done unto them; and then adds the words of Inſtitution, For where two or three are gathered together in my Name, I am in the midſt of them. They therefore who are preſent, receive a participation of the bleſſings promiſed, of ſome of the Holy Oyl poured upon Chriſt the Head.

2. Secondly, This Scripture though written under the Old Teſtament, is yet, Mutatis Mutandis, readily Aplicable to the New conſtituted Aſſemblies of the Saints under the Goſpel, and even the Terms and the Language uſed in the Pſalm is fitted to thoſe of the New Teſtament. As for inſtance, the word Brethren dwelling together, is the proper cognizance of the community of the Saints Aſſembled under the New. Thoſe words [dwelling together in unity] is well nigh the ſame: For they dwell in Churches under Paſtors and Teachers, and are inſtructed till they all come to the unity of Faith and Knowledge of the Son of God. And where Chriſt's preſence is, there is always a bleſſing; and 'tis alſo a deſcription of a New Teſtament Church, (1 Cor. 14. 23.) That 'tis a whole Church, conſiſting of all its Members met together in one place. There is unity of place. And then, Acts 1. 14. we have an account that they met with one conſent, (ὁμοθυμαδὸν) to perform the Duties of Worſhip. And whoever will read the ſtory of the firſt New Teſtament Church that God reared in Jeruſalem, will find abundantly enough in the ſtory of the firſt Chapter of the Acts, and in the ſecond Chapter concerning their continuing together in one place, they were all with one accord in one place, (Chap. 2. 1.) and there was fullfilled the Prophecies of Joel, in pouring out the Spirit of God upon them, which inwardly united them together, and Jeſus Chriſt his preſence was amongſt them, and he being by the Right Hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promiſe of the Holy Ghoſt was in the midſt of them: And he being the High Prieſt of the New Teſtament, (Heb. 3. 1.) God hath anointed him, of which anointing we have all participated, Acts 4. ver. 27. nor did they only continue together in the Apoſtles Fellowſhip in the Temple, and in Solomon's Porch, in Preaching, in Prayers, and in breaking Bread (as in thoſe Chapters is mentioned) but it grew to ſuch a unity, that the multitude of them that believed, were of one Heart and of one Soul, neither ſaid any one that ought of the things he poſſeſſed was his own, but they had all things common, and with great power gave the Apoſtle witneſſe of the Reſurrection of the Lord Jeſus, and great grace was upon them all, Acts 4 32, 33. For that time they keep as a day of Thankſgiving, and continual feaſting unto the Lord for the Joy they had, that their New King was alive and riſen. So as thoſe other words of the Pſalmiſt, -Behold how good and how pleaſant a thing it is, for Brethren to dwell together in unity, were then verified in ſuch a manner, and with ſuch a joy, as had never been ſeen afore in the World at any time. Inſomuch, as the common Jews that were not Believers, nor of their company beheld and magnified them praiſing God, and having favour with all the People, Acts 2. 47. Ecce quam invicem diligunt, Behold how they love one another, was the common cry of the Multitude, thus plauſibly and happily did this Church begin, and great grace was upon them all, Acts 3. 33. they were joyned or glued together, as the word is. And thus bleſſed from God, was the firſt Seat and Pillar of Truth not Architectonical, or a pillar that bore up the Truth, but Phoreneical whereby according to the cuſtom of thoſe times, the Holy Myſteries of God and Chriſt, were poſted to be ſeen and read of all, and thus much in general to prove that there is a bleſſing from God in a Goſpel Church, truly gathered and conſtituted by God where Chriſt is preſent.

2. And if the caſe, the Sheath, the Cabinet be thus precious to God; then the Gifts which God places in his Cabinet, I mean the Inſtituted Officers of this Church, which are the Furniture and Ornament of it, are alſo precious unto God, and ought to be unto us; and that which I inſiſt on, is that each of them have a ſpecial bleſſing from God to accompany them as a Gift from God, and ſpecial bleſſing. And indeed the Officers duly placed and fixed in this Seat of Truth, have been in all Ages ſince Chriſt the great Preſervers and Reſtorers of Goſpel Truth, and to whom we owe the Glorious Reformation of our Religion.

The Papiſts make a great plea of the Churches Infallibility and Authority through God's bleſſing, as they pretend, but when we come to examine what that Church is, that is, the preſerver of Truth, they cry up the Higher Clergy (as they call it) of Popes, Patriarks, Biſhops, and ſuch like Doctors of the Higher Rank. But it is reported to have been Prince Henry's Speech and Similitude (Eldeſt Son to King James the firſt) that being invited to a Merchants Houſe, where a great pair of braſs Andirons were; theſe gaudy appearances of ſhining braſs (ſays he) are not the pillars that hold up the fire, as your Biſhops and Doctors are not, but they are the little creepers of Iron, which bear up the fire: So it is not your Prelates which uphold the Church, but it is your inferior Miniſters which take pains in their places that uphold it, and not General Councils, nor the Dignified Clergy. In Eph. 4. 11, 12. it is ſaid of Paſtors and Teachers, that they are the only ſtanding Officers of the Church, whom Jeſus Chriſt hath continued in the Miniſtry, for the edifying the Body of Chriſt through every Age, which their Succeſſion does run through, till we all come in the Unity of Faith and Knowledge of the Son of God, every ſuch Age by the inſtructions of theſe ordinary Miniſters preſerving the knowledge of Chriſt, and unity of Faith. Now what is the reaſon that the People of God ſhould be built up by theſe means, rather then by pompous Oſtentation of Knowledge, but only becauſe indeed God's bleſſing follows his own Ordination; and Apoſtles and Evangeliſts being ceaſed and gone of the Stage, and only their Writings in the New Teſtament left, God produces an oral propagating down of theſe Truths among his Elect, by theſe ordinary Paſtors.

And theſe and the like bleſſings, Jeſus Chriſt hath freely beſtowed as ſpecial Gifts and Donatives of Grace, ſo as the Gift of them is in it ſelf a ſingular bleſſing to any People that enjoys them, and beſides God follows the Perſon with a ſpecial bleſſing and endowment, together with his Gift and Ability, according to the Rank and Order of the Office it ſelf, which is alſo the gift in that, Eph. 4. before quoted. He rehearſeth all ſorts of inſtituted Officers in the Church, whether ordinary or extraordinary, as for Preaching the extraordinary, ver. 11. He gave ſome Apoſtles, ſome Prophets, ſome Evangeliſts; Theſe are the twelve Stars about the Church's Head, Rev: 12. 1. wherewith the firſt Primitive Age was crowned; but they have ever ſince diſappeared, only leaving their Writings, and they ceaſing in reſpect of living, the Chriſtian World began anew, were Children rather then Fathers, there being few Preaching Elders that had Gifts of ability, as may be diſcerned by their Writings they have left: But the ordinary ſtanding Miniſters were Paſtors and Teachers, and to them Chriſt committed the inſtitution of the Church. Now concerning them you may obſerve two things for our preſent purpoſe.

1. They were ſpecial gifts of Jeſus Chriſt, and ſuperadded graces out of grace were beſtowed on Men, and ſuch as might ſomewhat exceed the common ſort of Believers, being firſt inſtructed from the extraordinary, 2 Tim. 2. 2. And the things thou haſt heard of me before many Witneſſes, the ſame commit thou to Faithful Men, who ſhall be able to teach others alſo.

2. Chriſt having all power committed unto him in Heaven and Earth, appointed two diſtinct Offices of Preaching Elders, inveſting them with his Authority, and in his name, ſuitably.

3. He, by ſpecial Solemnities of his appointment, ſet and ſeparated them to thoſe Offices with Faſting and Prayer.

4. He gave a ſpecial bleſſing to each office and officer, in the execution of his office, for the People's ſake over whom he is placed.

And when he had made up and compounded an Office and Officer, with all theſe particulars, he then gave them, as a Gift and Donative of meer grace, and has ſcattered them as Miſſilia among the People, according to his good pleaſure. I call them ſo, alluding to the name which the Romans gave to the pieces of Gold and Silver which their Emperors ordered to be caſt amongſt the People. This our Lord Jeſus doth from Heaven himſelf, withal bleſſing them; for our Lord and Saviour Chriſt, when he was to aſcend to Heaven, in the ſight of the five Hundred that were preſent, (1 Cor. 15. 6.) he then ſingled out his Apoſtles and other Miniſters, whom he had appointed in his Life-time, and had ſent them two and two, Matth. 28. 18, 19, 20. All power is given unto me in Heaven and on Earth, and upon that he founds their Commiſſions; Go ye therefore and Teach all Nations, Baptizing them in the Name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt. For that was ſpoken only of Miniſters, Go and Baptize, &c. which was only proper for Miniſters, who are the only Stewards of the Miniſtries of God, and ſo of Baptiſm being a Sacrament and Seal of the Covenant. And Chriſt alſo adds this for them, Teaching them to obſerve all things whatſoever I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you always even to the end of the World, Amen. And when he had given them this Authority and Gifts to Teach all Nations, he promiſes to be with them to the end of the World, and the laſt thing he did was to bleſs them, Luke 24. ver. 50, 51. And he lift up his Hands and Bleſſed them; and it came to paſs, whilſt he Bleſſed them, he was parted from them and carried up into Heaven. And this he did in Analogy to what God did in the firſt Creation, when he had made the firſt Man and Woman, Gen. 1. 28. And God bleſſed them, and God ſaid unto them, be fruitfull and multiply. And thus Chriſt did in his New Creation of Miniſters, whether extraordinary, as in the firſt times, or ordinary, which are to endure to the end of the World; and upon all inferior or lower Miniſters, and on all Officers of his Church, to come; in their ſeveral degrees he commands the bleſſing, which ſtill continues, and we Act, and are Acted in the vertue of it.

Thus I have proved, that Jeſus Chriſt hath himſelf ſolemnly bleſſed theſe Inſtitutions of the Offices of Preaching Miniſters, and that he did it juſt as he was going to Heaven.

2. I ſhall now Demonſtrate more expreſly, that every Miniſterial Office hath a bleſſing to accompany it, according to its Order and Inſtitution, which will yet more confirm, that theſe two particular Offices we have inſtanced, of Paſtor and Teacher, have certainly the bleſſing commanded to them, for if every Officer elſe hath it, then much more theſe which are very Noble, (Rom. 15. 29.) in their employment and uſefulneſs to Man. If we want this compleatneſs we ſhall find we ſhall fall ſo much ſhort of the Bleſſing; but the Apoſtle ſays, that he came to the Romans in the fullneſs of the bleſſing of the Goſpel, ſo we are to take care that we do not miſs of ſome degree of that bleſſing, which the fullneſs of the Inſtitution will bring with it.

I proceed to Demonſtrate this Truth by a view of particular Offices which God has Inſtituted, and with them each hath appointed a particular bleſſing or benefit, or iſſue, and event thereof.

As for the Old Teſtament, I will give but one inſtance, (but to me it is a great one) to evidence the thing in hand, Levit. 9. 23. And Moſes and Aaron went into the Tabernacle of the Congregation, and came out, and bleſſed the People, and the Glory of the Lord appeared unto all the People. Yea, when the ordinary Levites and Prieſts bleſſed the People, their Voice was heard, 2 Chron. 30. 27. Then the Prieſts and the Levites aroſe and bleſſed the People, and their Voice was heard, and their Prayer came up to his Holy dwelling place, even unto Heaven. And as it had its effect in the Heart of God, ſo the bleſſing of the High Prieſt had a ſtrange and miraculous effect in the Heart of a poor Woman. How much was poor Hannahs Heart loaded, and made unquiet by her fellow-partner Peninnah, Elhanah's other Wife? the ſtory doth pittifully and mournfully ſet it out, 1 Sam. 1. 6. And her Adverſary provoked her ſore for to make her fret, and then poor Hannah, (ver. 10:) was in bitterneſs of Soul, and prayed unto the Lord and wept ſore; but when Eli bleſſed her (ſaying, (ver. 17.) Go in peace, and the Lord God of Iſrael grant thee thy Petition, that thou haſt asked of him, ver. 18.) then the Woman went her way, and her countenance was no more ſad.

In the New Teſtament (if we examine from the loweſt Office of the Church to the higheſt) there is a peculiar bleſſing promiſed according to its Degree, Rank or Order of the Inſtitution.

1. A Deacon is eſteemed the loweſt Office, but the diſcharging of it well hath a ſpecial incouragement, in compariſon of what other common Chriſtians have, 1 Tim. 3. 13. For they that have uſed the Office of a Deacon well, purchaſe to themſelves a good degree, and great boldneſs in the Faith that is in Chriſt Jeſus. A good degree, that is, they obtain, as a reward to themſelves, an Eſtimation above the Rank of ordinary Believers in the Faith, and great boldneſs thereupon. And in ver. 11. Likewiſe the Women γυναῖκας, viz. Deaconeſſes (ſo Grotius renders it, and not Wives) who were to tend the Sick, muſt be Grave, Sober, Faithful in all things, and Chriſt will be faithful to them to Reward them according to their deſervings. Thus it is in the loweſt Offices in the Church: If we aſcend to the higheſt, which was the order of Apoſtles in the Church, there were ſeveral things concurred in an Apoſtle, as to have been converſant with Chriſt during the time of his walking upon Earth, and then to have been eye-witneſſes of his Reſurrection after his Death, but the principal eminent thing that had the bleſſing to convert Souls whereever they came, and had the great ſucceſs in that their Miniſtry, was, by vertue of the very office it ſelf. For when our Saviour Chriſt ſent out his Twelve Apoſtles, he furniſhed them with two things.

1. With the matter which they ſhould Preach. They were directed to Preach the Kingdom of God, and ſo to work upon Mens Souls.

2. Chriſt furniſhed them with Authority and Power extraordinary, (Matth. 10. 1.) to Heal the Sick, cleanſe the Leper, &c. Now this is my aſſertion, that it twas not only the Gift of Ability to Preach, but the Authority and Power which they were inveſted with, wherein lay their Apoſtleſhip and their univerſal commiſſion to go over all, or to any Nation, and Preach the Goſpel with Succeſs. In the vertue of this Office it was, that the bleſſing did accompany them where-ever they went, and from thence it was, that God wrought ſo with them as he did. It was by vertue of the Office it ſelf which he had placed them in, and invironed them about with the power of God. What ſays Paul, (Gal. 2. 6, 7.) concerning his own and Peter's Apoſtleſhip? That when they ſaw, by different experiences, and by conference of us together, the various working of God in the Miniſtry by me and by them, they knew that the Goſpel of uncircumciſion was committed to me, as the Goſpel of Circumciſion was to Peter. Now this aroſe not from the different Abilities of Peter and Paul, but from the various Commiſſion and Succeſs that their Office and Apoſtleſhip had in it from God: It was not that Paul was more abundantly laborious in the Miniſtry then them all. That his Goſpel ran like Wildfire upon ſeared Trees in a torrid Zone, Rom. c. 15. ver. 19. Through mighty Signs and Wonders by the power of the Spirit of God, ſo that from Jeruſalem and round about to Illyricum (that is all along as far as Hungary) I have fully preached the Goſpel. And it was not the knowledge of his own Ability he preſumed on; but the Authority God had put him into by his Office, and he, in a Holy kind of Ambition in doing this, ſcorned to build upon another's Foundation, as in ver. 20. Yea, ſo have I ſtrived to preach the Goſpel, not where Chriſt was named, leaſt I ſhould build upon another Man's Foundation.

And it was chiefly the conſcience of that Office of Apoſtleſhip which God had placed him in, and that Succeſs to an Admiration that God accompanyed him with, which did thruſt out that Holy Beaſt of his, 1 Cor. 15. 10. But I laboured more abundantly then they all, yet not I, but the Grace of God that was with me. And this I boldly interpret, that he ſpeaks it not of the Grace of God that was in himſelf, but of the Grace of God that was with him, and ſo ſpeaks of his Office which God had put him into, as in ver. 9. For I am the leaſt of the Apoſtles, that am not worthy to be called an Apoſtle, becauſe I perſecuted the Church of Chriſt. But by the Grace of God, I am what I am. He ſpeaks not of the Grace he received at his converſion to Chriſtianity, but of that of his Apoſtleſhip, which I ſpeak not to provoke to pains, that is unreaſonable, but to ſhew that the Succeſs ever he had from God in it, provoked him unto it. It was not the Grace of his converſion he thanked God for, but that of his Apoſtleſhip, as in 1 Tim. from ver. 12. to 18. I was a perſecutor and a blaſphemer, and yet he put me into the Miniſtry, &c. He ſeems to thank God for that, in the firſt and chief place, and Rom. 11. 13. For I ſpeak to you Gentiles, in as much as I am an Apoſtle of the Gentiles, I magnifie mine Office.

By the way, Mr. Parker, in his Eccleſiaſtical policy, has a controverſy with the Biſhops about this, viz. to which of Chriſt's Offices Miniſters owe their Original for the Miniſtry. They ſay they hold it from him as Prieſt, chiefly for their Honour, but the Apoſtle Paul Attributes it to his being King. He is the great Soveraign that works all things, and does all things, and yet he is inviſible, which is his glory, and ſo Jeſus Chriſt founds it on his Kingly Office; All power in Heaven and on Earth is given to me, (ſays he) and ſo go and Teach all Nations, &c. Matth. 28. 18, 19, 20. But here, the wonder may be, that the priviledge of being put into the Miniſtry, ſhould be called by him Grace, but the Apoſtle has prevented us in our wonder at it, in Rom. 1. 5. By whom we have received Grace and Apoſtleſhip for obedience to the Faith among all Nations, for his Name. Which he accordingly urges them unto, upon every occaſion, according as we have received Grace (ſays he) we exhort you, &c. Now, would you think it, he ſtiles every ſtanding Office in the Church a Grace, or the Grace of God, in like manner as he had done the Apoſtleſhip, Eph. 3. 7. Whereof I was made a Miniſter according to the Gift of the Grace of God given unto me, by the effectual working of his power. In like manner he calls every particular Office, in the Church inſtituted, a Grace from God, Rom. 12. 4, 6. For as we have many Members in one Body, and all Members have not the ſame Office. Having Gifts differing according to the Grace that is given to us. And then he Enumerates the ſtanding Inſtituted Offices as Paſtor, and ſo downwards to the very Tenders of the Sick. He that ſheweth Mercy (ſays he) let him do it with chearfulneſs. And as he calls theſe Offices Gifts, ſo he calls it Grace to be ſo called into ſuch Offices, even as he had called the Apoſtleſhip the Gift of Grace unto himſelf, and ſo there is in their proportion the like bleſſing and obligation.

It is ſtrange that all that perfect Holineſs, that Adam had afore his fall, ſhould be called the Image of God; and yet it aroſe not to the Dignity and Stile of being called Grace, which denotes ſomething Supernatural above the due of Creation.

Becauſe in Rom. 12. 6, 7. two ſtanding Offices are in common named Prophecying and Teaching, in diſtinction from the lower Offices, I ſhall upon the occaſion thereof argue the point in hand; namely, that the two Preaching Elders being made Officers, and their calling being to Prophecy that they have a ſpecial bleſſing promiſed anſwerably to their Inſtitution. To explain which more diſtinctly, we may and muſt know, that Prophecying in the Language of Paul's Epiſtles, is uſed to expreſs the Preaching of Members who are not Officers, and yet have Gifts fit to Edifie the Church, which the Apoſtle therefore allows, (1 Cor. 14.) but ſo as this kind of Prophecying was not to hinder the Church from having ſtanding Elders of Preaching, for that other kind of exerciſe of Prophecying from the Members is to be voluntary, and occaſional as the Spirit of God ſupplies them with new matter. But Jeſus Chriſt Head of the Church, thought not fit to leave his Church to ſuch an uncertain ſlender proviſion only. But as he is Rich in Mercy, ſo he would have his Word to dwell richly and plentifully in his Houſe, and has therefore appointed Officers that ſhould Preach, in Seaſon, and out of Seaſon, that ſhould give themſelves wholy up to theſe things, to make it their work and buſineſs to ſeek to find out pleaſant words, as of Solomon it's ſaid, Eccleſ. 12. 10. Now our Lord Jeſus Chriſt our Founder is a great King, and will have his Children Nobly Educated by Men, whoſe Office it is to tend them as Princes have; yea, he has appointed and ſet Tutors over every Faculty of his People, Teachers to inform their underſtandings, Paſtors and Exhorters to deal with their Wills and Affections, and thoſe lower than they, to take care about their Bodies for Sickneſs or Poverty. This is a Faithful ſaying, he that deſires the Office of a Biſhop, deſireth a good Work: And of theſe the Apoſtle ſays, They are worthy of double Honour, 1 *Tim.*5.17. To whom doth he ſpeak it? But to theſe other mentioned that are out of Office, who are to have but ſingle Honour in compariſon of thoſe other, who are the Stars in Chriſt's right Hand, firm and fixed in their Orbs.

And here it will not be improper, nor impertinent to ſhew the procedure and degrees, but eſpecially the outward courſe and means, that God took to bring the Apoſtle Paul's Apoſtleſhip to this perfection and height of conſummation. But eſpecially it is for us to conſider the outward means and courſe God took therein.

Firſt, The Foundation of his Apoſtleſhip was founded upon Chriſt's calling him in ſo extraordinary a manner, who Prophecyed of him aforehand, that he was a choſen Veſſel, and that he would ſend him as a Witneſs of him among the Gentiles, ſo at his converſion. Then for three years he lived in Arabia, during which time (as Biſhop Uſher happily conjectures) God took an occaſion to make known his whole Goſpel to him, both in the Center and Circumference of all the Truths of it, and their coherence one with another. And tho' God was able ſpeedily to Reveal, yet Paul was to take all in, and that required time. Now after God had filled and furniſhed Paul's Heart and Head, with all kind of matter to inable him to Preach, after this you read of his Preaching up and down to the Jews, but unknown by face to them, Gal. 1.22. and then he went to Tarſhiſh his own City, from whence Barnabas fetched him, and brought him to Antioch. And there it was that Paul received an outward Miſſion and Commiſſion, to be an Apoſtle to the Gentiles. And it was by the ordinary courſe and means of laying on of Hands, with Faſting and Prayer, for him, which is an Example for our Encouragement in our being put into rhe Miniſtry, to receive a bleſſing in the uſe of that ordinary means. The Story is, Acts 13. The Elders of the Church at Antioch being met, and having faſted, the Holy Ghoſt ſaid, ſeparate me Barnabas and Saul for the work, whereunto I have called them: And when they had faſted and prayed, and laid their Hands on them, they ſent them away.

Now Paul Writing to the Romans, Citizens of the Head City of the Gentiles, refers, (Rom. 1. 1.) to the words of this Story, and to that miſſion of him Recorded in that Story in uſing the very words, as glorying in that Stile which he counted the Foundation of his Apoſtleſhip among the Gentiles. Separate me Barnabas and Saul, for the work whereunto I have called them, ſays the Holy Ghoſt, Acts 13. ſeparated unto the Goſpel of God (ſays the Apoſtle, Rom. 1. 1.) We have received grace and apoſtleſhip, for obedience to the Faith among all Nations for his Name. And from thence in the reſt of the Epiſtle, and in this Epiſtle to the Corinths, he urgeth obedience to his Apoſtolical Authority, in ſuch words as thoſe, according as we have received Grace, viz. Grace of Apoſtleſhip, as he interprets it, do ſo and ſo, as we have commanded. This is frequent too in the Epiſtles to the Corinthians, and in this to the Romans, Rom. 11. 13. For I ſpeak to you Gentiles, in as much as I am the Apoſtle of the Gentiles, I magnifie mine Office, Eph. 3. 3. whereof, viz. of the Goſpel I was made a Miniſter, according to the Gift of the Grace of God given unto me, by the effectual working of his power. It was to the Authority of his Office he aſcribed the Efficacy and Succeſs of his Miniſtry. And tho' the Offices of Paſtor and Teacher hath not the Authority, as that of an Apoſtle, nor the call ſo extraordinary, yet deſpiſe not the day of ſmall things; for they are the bleſſed Ordinances of God, and ſhall have their due Efficacy upon the Hearts and Heads of thoſe exerciſed therein, and it is there God commands the bleſſing.

And by the way the Separation to the work of the Miniſtry is aſcribed to the Holy Ghoſt, who is the executive power of the Trinity: And therefore it is ſaid, Acts 20. Feed the Flock, over whom the Holy Ghoſt has made you Overſeers; and the Apoſtle ſays, 1 Cor. 12. 1, 2, 3. Now concerning Spiritual Gifts, Brethren, I would not have you ignorant, ye know that ye were Gentiles, carryed away unto theſe dumb Idols, even as ye were led; wherefore I give you to underſtand, that no Man ſpeaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jeſus accurſed, and that no Man can ſay that Jeſus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghoſt. The Apoſtle convinces them, that thoſe Spiritual Gifts and Offices which were among them, were meerly Gifts out of Grace, tho' a common Grace to ungodly Men, to the Rebellious alſo. He convinces them by this, that they were Supernatural, for till my Miniſtry and the Goſpel came among you (ſays he) you were far enough from ſuch Gifis. Ye know that you were Gentiles carryed away unto theſe dumb Idols, even as you were led. And therefore if you have any knowledge of Chriſt, it muſt be from the Spirit, as an Heavenly Agent, that is come upon you all. The knowledge of, and aſſent to Jeſus as the Lord, muſt be from the Holy Ghoſt, you have it not by Nature, you were led after dumb Idols. Theſe Gifts are all Supernatural, and from a Divine Agent, and in that reſpect they are called Graces, and a Gift. But then the making a Man a Miniſter, and putting him into the Divine Office, whether of Paſtor or Teacher, is no leſs then a work of all the three Perſons, and not of the Holy Ghoſt only. There is a conjunction of all three Perſons, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, bleſſing, and laying on of Hands, as it were, upon a Miniſter ordained, 1 Cor. 12. 4, 5, 6. Now there are diverſities of Gifts; but the ſame Spirit. And there are differences of Adminiſtrations, but the ſame Lord, And there are diverſities of Operations, but it is the ſame God which worketh all in all. There you have all the three Perſons, the Gifts of a Miniſter are from the Spirit, the Adminiſtration, i.e. the Offices wherein a Man Adminiſters, as from Chriſt as a Lord, the Operations, the powerfull Succeſs that works upon Mens Hearts by them, is from God the Father; you ſee your calling, Brethren, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks in another caſe, I mean you Brethren of the Miniſtry, learn to follow your callings and your Authority. When Chriſt laid his Hand upon John, Rev. 1. how did it revive him, and put life into him. All three Perſons in the Work, do lay on their Hands. We count it a great concurrent diſpenſation of God, that each Perſon in the Trinity ſhould ſhare the works of our Salvation among them, and it is a wonderful thing to bleſs them for it: But ſeldom have the three Perſons concurred in one Action. When Chriſt was Baptized, and God himſelf Proclaimed, thou art my Son, there were all the three Perſons. The Father was heard by ſpeaking himſelf immediately, the Holy Ghoſt was deſcending as a dove upon Chriſt, and the Son of God was himſelf in the water. And here is another θεοφανία an appearance of God, three in Perſons at the Ordination of a Miniſter.

Which notion is confirmed and backed by our Apoſtle, in naming two of the Perſons, the Father, and the Son, as Authors of the Inſtituted Officers of a Church, Gal. 1. 1. Paul an Apoſtle not of Men, neither by Man, but by Jeſus Chriſt, and God the Father, who raiſed him from the Dead. There is two of them, the Will of the Father, and Jeſus Chriſt, and the Holy Ghoſt, the third Perſon, you have in Acts 13. as expreſly named, to be a Founder of this Work; Separate me Paul, for the Work I have appointed.

And from hence you may learn, what Holy, Holy, Holy, Ground it is, that an Inſtituted Officer of the New Teſtament ſtands upon, which Mr. Baynes in his Dioceſan Tryal hath firmly aſſerted, and it ſets right, and corrects the browniſt Error at their firſt ſetting out, who looked on their Miniſters but as Servants of the Church, and Inſtituted by the Church only, which is but of Human Inſtitution, (Gal. 1. 1.) and ſo they choſe them anew, to officiate in their ſeveral turns, remaining but Brethren ſtill. But Mr. Baynes makes them the immediate Servants of Chriſt, who is the Inſtitutor of them.

And from hence I aſſert, that a Miniſter is a Servant of Chriſt to the Church, to do his work to the Church as occaſion is. Before his call unto the Miniſtry, he was as Gold in the Bulloyn fit for, and capable of the Miniſtry; and the Church in Chriſt's Name chooſes him, and Sets upon him the Seal of a Sacred Separation of him unto Chriſt. And in Chriſt's Name he acts toward them, Independently on

Ch. IX. them, till he ſhall forfeit himſelf and his calling, by deſerving to be Excommunicated.

And hence I aſſert alſo, that they are not only Miniſters to that Church which calls them, but Preach as Miniſters, and with a Miniſterial bleſſing accompanying them, whereever they are called to Preach. And herein doth A ſingly called, though Gifted Man, fall ſhort of that bleſſing which accompanies a Miniſter, rightly ſeparated unto an Office of Miniſtery in a Church. There were ſome in the Church either of Antioch or Jeruſalem, that were called principal Brethren, yet only Brethren, tho' the word Principal is annexed. And it is an ordinary Stile in the Epiſtles, when the Apoſtle ſpeaks of the Brethren in a Church, who are chiefly ſuch, he Stiles them one of you; yea, tho' they be acknowledged by the Apoſtles to have been helpful to them: Whereas when they have been ſeparated to the Miniſtry, either as Paſtor or Teacher of the Church, Paul gives the Honourable Title of unto you (ſpeaking of that Church.) A Faithful Miniſter, and under that Title he ſets out Epaphras to the Coloſſians, who was Miniſter to their Church; yea, and hence it comes to paſs, that when ever they Preach to any either called or to be called, they may be ſaid to Preach as Miniſters to them. When (Epheſ. 4. 12.) their ordinary Paſtors and Teachers are ſaid to be in the work of the Miniſtry, they are ſaid to be in it not only for the edifying the Body of Chriſt, that is already his Body; but πρὸς τὸν καταρτισμὸν, for the joynting in, as Members of the Body, ſuch as are yet unconverted and out of joynt, and looſe from them, tho' Elect, and if they be Miniſters (as 'tis there expreſly ſaid) to the joynting of them in, then they are Miniſters before converſion, to them, whom to convert, bleſſes them as Miniſters. And what other is the reaſon, why thoſe who have been fixed Miniſters to a People, and by Perſecution are driven out, have that allowance too given to them by Chriſt, who ſays, Mat. 10. 23. If they perſecute you in one City, fly unto another. For Jeſus Chriſt is not a loſer thereby; but he follows on his bleſſing of them for Converſion unto a new People: For why? They carry their Miniſtry along with them, and Preach as Miniſters to whomever they Preach, for they Preach πρὸς καταρτισμὸν, for the joynting of them in. Know therefore that your Miniſtry or being Miniſters, doth not ſtand on your own feet, but on Chriſt's feet, in whoſe Hand theſe Stars are for their further Motion, Guidance, and Protection, and Bleſſing on them.

CHAP. X.

Of the Communion of Saints, which the Members of a Church ought to have one with another.

HAving proved that Chriſt hath inſtituted divers ſorts of Officers to be in a Church, and having deſcribed the diſtinction of their Offices: The thing next to be conſidered is, what communion the Members of ſuch a Church ought to have one with another (beſides the Communion which they publickly enjoy in Ordinances) for their mutual edification and increaſe of their Graces.

The Communion which I intend, is not by way of exerciſing Gifts, but of Grace: A Communion not in the way of a ſet Inſtitution or Ordinance; but in the way of a fit means, and help to encreaſe that love which ought to be between one Member and another. The queſtion in ſum is, whether every Member is not bound to ſeek the knowledge of every Member's Spirit and Graces, and that not only by occaſional converſe; but by fixed meetings appointed on purpoſe for ſuch Spiritual converſe, to know one another's caſes and ſpirits, and to provoke one another to love, and to good works, Heb. 10. 24. There are two things which muſt be ſuppoſed as unavoidably to be granted.

1. That every Member of a Church cannot in publick edifie the others, for Women muſt not ſpeak in the Church, 1 Cor. 14. 34, 35. And beſides, publick meetings are for exerciſe of Gifts, which even all the Men have not.

2. In private occaſional converſe, one Member may not have opportunity to diſcourſe with another once in ſeven years: For when will occaſion offer for a godly Servant, to diſcourſe with the Maſter of another Family? There ſeems then to be a neceſſi-ty of a fixed meeting to this very end, that ſuch opportunities may be afforded to them.

And 3. It may be demanded whether for theſe Members, who occaſionally perhaps meet every day, ſuch appointed meetings are not neceſſary, that there may be a ſet time for this Spiritual Converſation? It is not meant that herein there ſhould be Preaching or Praying; but a Spiritual Conference to gain experience of each others improvements in Grace.

1. I ſhall conſider whether this be a Duty, and what in a Church-Fellowſhip ſhould bind the Members of it to ſuch a Duty.

1. This is certain, that one Member ſhould make known his Spiritual caſe and condition to another, of known Faithfulneſs, (Iſa. 5. 16.) And that he ſhould make known too his needs or wants of any kind, not to the Miniſter only; but to any of the Members of the Church, who is in a ſpecial manner known to be Faithful, that he may pray for him, confeſs your faults (ſays the Apoſtle) and Pray one for another, that you may be healed. The effectual Fervent Prayer of a Righteous Man availeth much. That Phraſe, confeſs your faults one to another, is not general, as if it were to be done to every one; but the Apoſtles deſign is to ſhew, that there are occaſions upon which this Duty is to be done to ſome.

But 2. That place in, Heb. 10. 24. ſeems to call for, and require a more ſpecial Animadverſion to know one another's caſes and experiences, and that not only as they may be made known occaſionally, but to enquire, of ones own accord, and to take occaſion to do it. Let us conſider one another (ſays the Apoſtle) to provoke unto love and to good works, The word is κατανοῶμεν, the ſame which is uſed to exqreſs, (Mat. 7. 4.) The diligent enquiry, and exact Animadverſion which we ought to make upon our ſelves.

3. This alſo ſeems to call for ſuch a ſtated converſe of Church-Members together to enquire into, and know one another's caſes and experiences; becauſe otherwiſe every Member would not have an equal benefit in Church-Communion. For ſome that are Rich, and have time to converſe much together, may indeed reap the fruits of a bleſſed Fellowſhip. But others that are poor, or Servants, &c. will be abridged, and ſo the ſame inconveniences will ariſe, as were in the Corinthians Love Feaſts, 1 Cor. 11. 22.

1. Then, it is evident from Scripture, that it is the Duty of every Member to obſerve, and to take care of another's Spiritual Wellfare. This appears from the Duty enjoyned, Heb. 10. 24. And it is a Duty diſtinct from Aſſembling together, which follows in the next verſe. The ſame thing is alſo manifeſt from that Text, 1 Theſſ. 5. 11. Wherefore comfort your ſelves together, and edifie one another, even as ye do. The Greek word is παρακαλεῖτε exhort and edifie one another, εἷς τὸν ἕνα. i. e. every one of you, do this Duty to every one. And the Apoſtle commends them, that it was their practice ſo to do, even as alſo (ſays he) you do: So that a Primitive Apoſtolical Church, did practiſe this Duty: And this was diſtinct from the work of theſe Officers, for of them he ſpeaks afterwards, verſe 12. And then he tells them the ſeveral ways wherein they ſhould exerciſe this Duty one towards another, verſe 14. Now we exhort you Brethren, warn them that are unruly, comfort the feeble-minded, ſupport the weak, be patient toward all Men.

But the queſtion is, whether this Duty is only to be exerciſed occaſionally, as the providence of God gives opportunities and occaſions of converſe, and according to the Relations wherein he hath ſet Men, of Man and Wife, Maſter and Servant, &c. That as we ought to give to poor Saints, when there is occaſion, ſo it is Duty alſo to Exhort, Admoniſh, &c. when an opportunity is offered.

1. It is evident that this Duty is to be diſcharged between Perſons who live in theſe Relations, and as Man and Wife have more occaſion of converſe, ſo more of this Duty is incumbent upon them. They not only as Members of a Church, but, as being in ſuch Relations, ought to ſerve the ends of Church-fellowſhip: And the greater the occaſion is, the more are they obliged to this Duty, tho he ows it as a Member, yet he is bound the more to exerciſe it in this occaſional way of Relation, Eph. 4. 16. From whom the whole Body fitly joyned together, and compacted by that which every joynt ſupplieth, according to the effectual working in the meaſure of every part, maketh increaſe of the Body unto the edifying of it ſelf in love. The word πᾶν τὸ σῶμα, (which is Tranſlated the whole Body) may be Tranſlated every Body, or particular

Ch. X. lar Church, for he ſpeaks of particular Churches there, for the whole Myſtical Body of Chriſt is not edified by every particular Perſon.

2: He mentions here the Edification of the Members, by the Members, as conſidered diſtinct from their Officers.

3. The word συναρμολογῦμενον fitly joyned evinceth as much: It ſignifies being joyned as with Sinews and Bones, for ſo ὁ ἁρμὸς is taken, Heb. 4. 12. And ſo here is it to be underſtood; for the Apoſtle ſpeaks of a Body which every joynt ſupplyeth, διὰ πάσης ἁφῆς, as he alſo uſeth the word, Col. 2. 19. The Body is knit by Joynts, and the nouriſhment is ſupplyed from Chriſt. And it is knit together not only by Joynts, but by Sinews, (συνδέσμων, Col. 2. 12.) which run between every one. So then there are Joints by which Chriſt ſupplyeth Nouriſhment to the Body, and there are Sinews by which the Members of that Body are joyned together, and thoſe are the ſeveral Relations which the Members have one to another, either as in a Family, or in the Offices of the Church. For if there were no other Relation, yet this of Memberſhip in a Church is one ſufficient, ſince all the Members have from Chriſt a meaſure of Supplies for the Nouriſhment, and ſtrengthening of the whole Body. And the Laws of Life and Motion are as natural here, as they are in Bodies of Fleſh and Blood. For as the ſeveral parts of them receive Spirits from the Head to enliven and move them, ſo, to all the Members of Chriſt's Body the Church, the Spirit is conveyed from him the Head, to give Spiritual Life and Motion to them all, and ſo to the whole Body. So that if there were no other Relation between the Saints, but this of their being ſet and joyned in one Body the Church, and not in a Family, &c. only: yet this is enough for their mutual Life, Strength, and Edification, 1 Cor. 12. 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21. 22. For the Body is not one Member, but many. If the foot ſhall ſay, becauſe I am not the hand, I am not of the Body: Is it therefore not of the Body? And if the ear ſhall ſay, becauſe I am not the eye, I am not of the Body; is it therefore not of the Body? If the whole Body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the ſmelling? But now hath God ſet the Members, every one of them in the Body, as it hath pleaſed him. And if they were all one Member, where were the Body? But now are they many Members, yet but one Body. And the eye cannot ſay unto the hand, I have no need of thee: Nor again, the Head to the feet, I have no need of you. Nay, much more thoſe Members of the Body, which ſeem to be more feeble, are neceſſary. And indeed every Member hath ſome Grace, or ſome Experiences wherein it differs from another, and is helpful to it. As the Members of the Natural Body, tho' conſiſting of the ſame Fleſh and Blood, yet differ in ſome properties wherein they excell, and wherein they are uſeful to the other: So every Member in a Church hath ſome peculiar Grace by which the other may profit. So Paul ſays of himſelf, writing to the Church of the Romans, that he was comforted by their mutual Faith, not by their Gifts, Rom. 1. 12. That is, that I may be comforted together with you, by the mutual Faith both of you and me. In like manner he ſays, that when in conference with the other Apoſtles, there was nothing added to him, yet their diſcerning the Grace of God which was in him, had the deſired effect, Gal. 2. 6. 9. There is then no Member in a Church, but what is neceſſary and helpful, and no one can ſay, that he hath no need of another. Thus the Apoſtle tells us, that they who are feeble are neceſſary, 1 Cor. 12. 22. And therefore he argues, (ver. 25.) that all ſhould have the ſame care one of another, tho' never ſo mean an object. And (ver. 27.) ſays he, you are the Body of Chriſt, and Members in particular, not only Members for the uſe of the whole Body, but for the uſe of every one Member conſidered apart.

There are three expreſſions uſed by the Apoſtle, which ſhew that the care which the Saints in Church-Fellowſhip together ought to have over one another, ſhould not only be exerciſed as occaſion offers; but that it is a conſtant Duty, and that we ought to ſeek all occaſions of acting it.

1. The Apoſtle ſays, Heb. 10. 24. And let us conſider one another to provoke unto love, and to good works. The Greek words are, Κατανοῶμεν ἀλλήλους, let us accurately conſider one another, that our care over one another may be anſwerable.

2. The ſame Apoſtle ſpeaks in like manner, 1 Cor. 12. 25. That there ſhould be no Schiſm in the Body; but that the Members ſhould have the ſame care one for another. The Greek word, μεριμνῶσι, ſignifies, that we ſhould have an eſpecial and ſolicitous care of one another's Souls.

3. What the Apoſtle ſays in another place, is to the ſame purpoſe, 1 Theſſ. 5. 11. Wherefore comfort your ſelves together, and edifie one another, even as alſo ye do. The Greek words, παρακαλεῖτε ἀλλήλυς ϗ οἰκοδομεῖτε εἰς τὸν ἕνα, import not a General, but a particular care, not only occaſional, but ſuch as we ſhould ſtudy, and endeavour to exerciſe for the edification particularly of every one: But beſides there are theſe further Reaſons of the thing.

1. Becauſe there is this difference between the Members of the Church Univerſal, and the Members of a particular Church, that the former are obliged to thoſe Duties of taking care to help and edifie one another, as occaſion ſerves; but the other are bound by a more eſpecial covenant to perform this Duty, one to another in a conſtant manner, and therefore ought to ſeek occaſion for it.

2. The ſame thing is evident from this, that every Member hath in him ſomething that is needful for another (1 Cor. 12. 22.) tho' not in Gifts, yet in Graces, by which the ſtrongeſt may profit; as Paul increaſed in Faith, by the mutual Faith in the Romans, (Rom. 1, 12.) tho' in the Gifts nothing could be added to him.

3. There would not otherwiſe be the ſame care taken of all, that there is of ſome, which is contrary to what the Apoſtle enjoyns, 1 Cor. 12. 25. And Reaſon ſhews, that care ſhould rather be taken of the weak, 1 Cor. 12. 22, 23. 1 Theſſ. 5. 14. And the neglect and deſpiſing of the poor and weak, was the fault of the Loue-Feaſts, which the Apoſtle reproves, 1 Cor. 11. 22.

4. Becauſe otherwiſe the Relation of being a Member in a particular Church, would add nothing to the Perſon, as proper to ſuch a Relation, if one Member was not thereby bound to be helpful to another, not only occaſionally, but on ſet purpoſe, and on appointed times, when occaſions are not offered.

But the queſtion will be, how this care which every Member is to have of another, will differ from the care which is incumbent upon the Officers to take of the Church.

Anſw. 1. The Officers are bound to their care in a more eſpecial manner, and the exerciſe of it is incumbent on them, ex officio, by vertue of their Office. And beſides, their care reacheth to the whole Church, but every Member's care to another, Rom. 12. 4, 5. For as we have many Members in one Body, and all Members have not the ſame Office: So we being many, are one Body in Chriſt, and every one Members one of another. The Greek word is πρᾶξιν Activeneſs, working, ſo, that it is evident from this Text of Scripture, that every Member hath its peculiar working, as we ſay, that the Eye hath not only its Office; but the Ear alſo hath an Office proper to it.

2. The Officers are wholy in this work, and entirely devoted to it.

3. The Officers have the charge of the whole, and of every part, which is not incumbent on the private Brethren. Tho' in Rom. 12. The Apoſtle mentions the Authority and work of the Officers; yet withal he inſinuates the activeneſs and working of each Member as needful, Rom. 12. 4, 5. For as we have many Members in one Body, and all Members have not the ſame Office: So we being many, are one Body in Chriſt, and every one Members one of another. And ſo, in 1 Cor. 12. he ſpeaks of works and duties, which are incumbent on more Perſons then the Officers of the Church. And the Apoſtle Peter alſo ſpeaks of private Members, and their Duty and Work, 1 Pet. 4. 5. For he ſpeaks of the Elders and their Office, in the 5*th* Chapter which follows.

3. It is made a ſign of Grace, for Saints to viſit each other. It diſcovered the Truth of Grace, and Faith in Moſes's Heart, that he viſited his Brethren. James makes it alſo a Trial of the Sincerity of our Grace. Iſa. 1. 27. Zion ſhall be Redeemed with Judgment, and her Converts with Righteouſneſs. And our Lord Jeſus makes it the Touchſtone and Teſt of his choſen Sheep, when he ſeparates them from the Goats, that they viſited the poor little ones among his Saints, Matth. 25. 36, 40. And if there is the like Reaſon to viſit the Members of a Church, then certainly it is to be done. We are to ſhow our love to their Souls, to viſit and refreſh them; for Souls have need, as well as Bodies; and require ſuitable ſupplies.

4. The Prophet mentions it as the Duty and Practice of Saints under the Goſpel, to ſpeak often one to another, Mal. 3. 16. What he ſpeaks of thoſe times, hath reference to ours.

5. There ought to be ſo great and peculiar a love between the Members of a Church, as cannot be diſcharged but in the performance of this ſpecial Office and Duty, Rom. 12. 10. Be kindly affectioned one to another, with Brotherly love, in Honour preferring one another. It is φιλοϛοργία A Natural inſtinct of Affection φιλαδελφία, a Natural Love, ſuch as Parents bear to their Children, and Brethren to Brethren. And in this they are to increaſe and abound, 1 Theſſ. 3. 12. And the Lord make you to increaſe and abound in love one towards another, and towards all Men, even as we do towards you. 1 Pet.4.8. And above all things have fervent Charity among your ſelves, for Charity ſhall cover a multitude of ſins. The word is ἐκτεινῆ, , ſuch a Fervency as preſſeth to a mark. It is pure Love, all inordinacy of Love, of ſelf, of Wiſe, &c. is removed, any inordinacy would take too much, that there would not be love enough for all the Brotherhood. As it is ſuch a love, ſo it is a growing Love; and therefore what is neceſſary for the feeding it, is neceſſary to put forth towards the Members of the Church, which how can it be done without a Communion maintained among them.

6. Whatever other Relations binds us to, we are engaged to the ſame Duties by our Relation of Brethren in a Church. If obligations of Civility, or tyes of Nature, and Kindred engage Men to viſit one another; then,much more the Relation of Members in a Church, obligeth us to the ſame Duty. And the pooreſt, meaneſt Saint, is as worthy of it as any; for otherwiſe we ſhould have the Faith of our Lord Jeſus with reſpect of Perſons, which the Apoſtle forbids, Jam. 2.1.

Object. But the Work and Buſineſs of the Officers in a Church, take off this care from the private Members, and render it unneceſſary: And beſides, they have other Callings, as being Merchants, &c. which they ought to mind and attend.

Anſw. 'Tis true,but yet theſe are Duties which occaſionally they ought to perform. As if offence be given them, they are enjoyned to ſpeak and admoniſh the Perſon, *Mat.*18.15. They are required alſo to do good,as opportunity ſerves,*Rom.*14.19. 1 Cor. 10.24. If any thing be Revealed to a Perſon, it is proper for him to tell it, if there be leiſure or opportunity, whereas an Officer ought always to have ſomething ready for Edification.

The main queſtion to be diſcourſed,is, wherein this Duty lies.

1. It doth not properly conſiſt in the communication of ſuch Gifts, whereby the Church is edified in the publick Worſhip of God: It doth not properly conſiſt in expounding, nor in Praying together, tho' this may be done occaſionally. There are two ſorts of Gifts.

1. Such as are Superadded to Graces, and are Sanctified to a publick uſe, as the Gift of expreſſion in Prayer, of Prophecying, &c.

2. There are ſuch Gifts as are neceſſary to communicate, and make known our Graces one to another; as to be able to expreſs what experiences of God's love,&c. we have had; for,as the thoughts of our minds cannot be known,unleſs we have a Tongue to expreſs them, ſo neither can our Graces be known without ſuch a Gift: Now the end of this communion of Saints, whereof I now Diſcourſe, is not to make known ſuch Gifts; but to communicate experiences, not to Repeat Sermons, (which is a Duty proper to Families) but to declare what it was in a Sermon that God bleſſed to them, and that affected their Hearts, what promiſes they have found to be made good to them, &c.

2. This Duty of communion of Saints, doth not conſiſt in giving an account of their Graces in that ſet way, as they gave an account of their converſion, when they were firſt admitted into the Church. But it is a communication of their experiences, as to the growth of their Graces, and as to the exerciſe of them. The Graces of a Believer, the τὸ γνωϛὸν τȣ̃ Θεȣ̃, may be known of God in him, may rather appear thus, by way of conference, than in a Set Narration. The Reaſon of it, is, becauſe an account of the Perſon's Grace is not now given; for a Judgment to be made of his ſtate thereupon, as it was at his Admiſſion into the Church. There is not in this caſe any Autoritative Act, for none have power to call for an account. But the Duty incumbent on the Perſon, is, to conſider whether the Declaration of his Experiences may be for the edifying and comforting of others,and what good fruits may ariſe out of ſuch a Manifeſtation, and accordingly to do it. 'Tis to be minded, what God leads a Man's Spirit to confer about. There is ſuch a thing as a Manifeſtation of Spirits in a ſeveral way, whereby is not meant, that a perſon is obliged to lay open all that is in his Heart; but that by a mutual conference concerning Spiritual things, there ſhould be a taſt given what is in one another'sSpirits.

3. This communion doth not conſiſt in a confeſſion of all ſins, or in diſcovery of every thing that burthens us. For to that end, a Believer will make choice of ſome particular, in whoſe Wiſdom and Faithfulneſs he can confide as occaſion is, Iſa. 5. 16. As for extraordinary caſes, wherein there is need of help, as in caſe of Feeble-mindedneſs, (1 Theſſ. 5. 4.) Temptations, &c. There is no need for any Believer to tell his caſe to all the Members of the Church particularly, that they may all pray for him, for upon his making it known to the Paſtor or Officers, he may be prayed for publickly.

4. But yet that love which the Members of a Church bear one to another, will move them, and put them upon a Sollicitouſneſs, and a ſtudy, and care for each others Souls.

5. Let us conſider that Subjection, in which all the Members ought to be one, toward another, whereof the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 1 Pet. 5. 5. Likewiſe ye younger, ſubmit your ſelves unto the elder; yea, all of you be Subject to one another, and be cloathed with Humility: For God Reſiſteth the proud, and giveth Grace to the Humble. I cannot conceive otherwiſe, but that by this Subjection, (the word is ὑποτασσόμενοι) is meant, that they ſhould be content to receive inſtruction one from another.

6. It is to be conſidered, that Chriſt puts an Honour on the weakeſt Members, 1 Cor. 12. 18. to 24. And that there may be no Schiſm in the Body, application muſt be made to one, as well as to another; and there muſt not be a total neglect of any, 1 Cor. 12. 25. That there ſhould be no Schiſm in the Body; but that the Members ſhould have the ſame care one for another. And ſo likewiſe the Apoſtle tells us, that there are diverſities of Gifts, and Adminiſtrations, and Operations, 1 Cor. 12. 4, 5, 6, 7. Now there are diverſities of Gifts, but the ſame Spirit; And there are differences of Adminiſtrations, but the ſame Lord, and there are diverſities of Operations, but it is the ſame God which worketh all in all; but the manifeſtation of the Spirit, is given to every Man to profit withal. Theſe diverſities of gifts, and adminiſtrations, do not relate to Officers only, but to the whole Body; ſo that a courſe ſhould be taken to receive the benefit of every Member's gift. For otherwiſe there will be a neglect of God, the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, who are the Fountain of theſe diverſe gifts and adminiſtrations.

The Government OF THE Churches of Chriſt.

BOOK VII.

That the Preaching of the Goſpel is an Ordinance of Jeſus Chriſt, Inſtituted for the Converſion of Sinners, and for the Edification of the Saints. Of the uſe and neceſſity of Miniſters wholy ſet apart to Preach. That Chriſt by his Inſtitution, hath appointed a due Maintenance for Miniſters. Concerning the time for the Adminiſtration of Ordinances, and whether the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper ought to be Adminiſtred on every Lord's Day. Whether, in caſe of neceſſity, a Church may by common conſent divide themſelves, to meet in ſeveral parts, and receive the Lord's Supper in ſuch diſtinct meetings, rather then omit that Ordinance wholy, whether in caſe of apparent Danger of Life, loſs of Eſtate Rationally foreſeen, or in caſe of force and violence, cauſing Ordinances to ceaſe, there may not be a prudent forbearance, or ſecret avoidance. Whether one who is not a Church-Member, may be the Subject of Baptiſm. Whether one who is not a Paſtor, may Adminiſter Baptiſm. Whether a Church may Depoſe an Officer for a fault, which doth not deſerve Excommunication. Of anointing with Oyl. Of Toleration, and liberty of Conſcience to be granted to particular Churches, tho' differing from the National Conſtitution.

CHAP. I.

That the Preaching of the Goſpel is an Ordinance Inſtituted by Chriſt, for the Converſion of Sinners, and Edification of the Saints. The Reaſon why he hath choſen the Preaching of the Word by Men, to be the means of Salvation, rather than any other. The pleas, which Men make againſt their conſtant attendance on the Preaching of the word as needleſs, Anſwered, Rom. 10. 14, 15, 16. 17. How then ſhall they call on him in whom they have not believed? And how ſhall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how ſhall they hear without a Preacher? and how ſhall they preach, except they be ſent? as it is written, how beautiful are the feet of them that preach the Goſpel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things: But they have not all obeyed the Goſpel; for Eſaias ſaith, Lord, who hath believed our report? So then, Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God.

THE Apoſtle having proved at large in the former part of his chapter, and the whole Epiſtle, that the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt apprehended by Faith, was the only true Righteouſneſs whereby Men are to be Saved; he begins here at the 14*th* verſe of this Chapter, to lay down the outward inſtrumental means of attaining to this Righteouſneſs and Salvation; and this by a gradation or chain of cauſes: All which he ſhews to hang upon Preaching of the word of Faith, as the firſt Link of that whole chain of outward means. And as (in Rom. 8. 29, 30.) he makes a chain of the Principal cauſes of our Salvation: Whom he fore knew, thoſe he prediſtinated, and whom he prediſtinated, thoſe he alſo called, &c. ſo here he makes a chain of the means outward, praying and worſhipping God, (that is the firſt ſtep) *whoſoever ſhall call upon the Name of the Lord, ſhall be ſaved, ver.*13. without prayer there is no Salvation; it is here (by a Synecdoche) put for all Obedience. But then *how ſhall they call on God without Faith, and how Believe without hearing, and how ſhall they hear without a Preacher? ver.*4. For it is ſuch a hearing, as is by Preaching; neither is this Preaching (the Hearing whereof is bleſſed to work Faith) by any but by Men ſent; *ver.*15. And the concluſion of all this is, that *Faith cometh by Hearing, ver.*17.

And Experience alſo helps to maniſeſt and confirm this. For ſtill, where God meant to have a Church called, thither he ſtill ſends, and there he maintains the Preaching of the Goſpel. For this, compare Acts 16. 6, 8. with the 9*th* and 10*th* verſes of the 18*th* chapter: In that firſt cited place it is ſaid, that God forbad Paul to Preach in Bithinia, but in this other, that he bad him ſtay and Preach at Corinth, giving this Reaſon; for I have much People in this City. So alſo, ſays the Apoſtle, Col. 1. 1, 4, 5. Knowing the Election of God, our Goſpel came unto you, not in word only, &c. And therefore we ſee that thoſe places that want it, lie like Deſarts and Wilderneſſes, full of rudeneſs and ignorance; and the Inhabitants living rather like Beaſts than Men. And this is the reaſon why the light of the Goſpel, and the Preaching thereof ſhifts ſo from place to place; (in the Eaſt once, now in the Weſt) for ſtill where God hath a good ſhole and fry of Fiſh, thither he ſends his Fiſhers with their Dragg-Nets: It being good Fiſhing ſometimes in one Coaſt, ſometimes in another. Where God intends to Plant a Church, thither he ſends the Goſpel, *to make known by it the Myſtery of his Will, that in the Diſpenſation of the fullneſs of times, he might gather together, in one, all his Elect, Epheſ.*1. 9, 10. what is the reaſon of this?

1. Take that which the Apoſtle intimates in this, Rom. 10. 17. Faith comes by Hearing: And how ſo? Hearing is by the word of God. So that if the Reaſon be askt, why this way rather than any other? the anſwer is, it is ſo appointed and ordained by God: For that is meant by Word here, his Word being all one with his Commandment and Appointment. So ſays Chriſt, Luke 4. 4. Man lives not by Bread alone, but by every word of God; that is, by this Ordinance of God, that Bread ſhould Nouriſh; it is not ſaid Hearing [of] the Word, but [by] the Word. What is the reaſon the Rain that falls down upon the Earth from theſe Bottles of Heaven, the Clouds, drops ſuch fatneſs with it? and Crowns the year with encreaſe, Pſal. 65. 11. It is only this; God at the beginning did ſo appoint it; as we read in Gen. 2. 5. Now Iſa. 55. 10, 11. it is ſaid, As the Rain cometh down and watereth the Earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, &c. ſo ſhall my Word go forth and proſper in the thing whereto I appointed and ſent it. It ſhall proſper, becauſe God ſo appointed it; and it ſhall cauſe the Earth both to bring forth and bud; that is, it ſhall work both beginnings and encreaſe. Yea, it doth that which other Rain doth not: For other Rain falling on a Briar, it remaineth a Briar ſtill; but where this Rain falls, God accompanying it with a bleſſing, in ſtead of a Thorn, comes up a Fir; and, of Fuel for Hell, it makes Men fruitful Trees to God, and fit for his Building; for it fully alters the Nature of them. And though watering the Earth with water-pots is good and uſeful in the time of Drought, and ſo is Reading of good Books, and conferring of things Holy: Yet Preaching is the kindly Ordinance, when Doctrine drops as the Rain, and ſpeech diſtills as the Dew, and as ſmall Rain upon the tender Herb; as in Preaching it ſtill doth, *Deut.*32.2.

2. As God appointed it, ſo Jeſus Chriſt prayed for it, in John 17. Chriſt conſecrates his Death, and prays for the Application of it, namely, that the Apoſtles might be Sanctified, and how! through thy Truth (ſays Chriſt) that is, the Goſpel called the word of Truth, Epheſ. 1.13. and then he goes on to pray, not only for thoſe, but for all that ſhould believe, and how ſhould they come to believe? through their word: So, *ver.*19, & 20. And certain it is, that Chriſt's Interceſſion puts a force into this means unto this Day. For doth Chriſt mean only the Apoſtles Preaching, as that which he then Prayed for? No, this Prayer reacheth unto the ends of the World: For it is their word that we do and ſhall Preach, and we are their Succeſſors. Therefore (*Matth.*28. 20.) Chriſt ſays (though he ſpeak only to his Diſciples) I am with you unto the end of the World.

3. As God the Father appointed it, and God the Son prayed for it; ſo God the Holy Spirit is by promiſe and covenant engaged to accompany it with his bleſſing unto the Seed of Chriſt for ever, Iſa. 59. 21. My Spirit who is upon thee, and my words which I have put into thy Mouth, ſhall not depart out of thy Mouth, nor out of the Mouth of thy Seeds Seed for ever. It is ſpoken of the word as Preacht unto the People, and therefore we find (Acts 10. 44.) Whilſt Peter ſpake, the Holy Ghoſt fell on all them who heard the word. And therefore it is, that (1 Cor. 2. 4.) the Preaching of the Goſpel is called the Demonſtration of the Spirit; and (2 Cor. 3. 8.) the Miniſtration of the Spirit: Now if any demand the reaſon why God ordained it, and Chriſt prayed for it, rather than any other means; I ſhall for the Explanation of this, propound certain queries, in the anſwers to which, I will give the reaſon of it, and I ſhall proceed herein by degrees:

Queſt. 1. Why did not God work immediately by his own power, and rather uſe no means at all?

Anſw. 1. He doth this to ſhew his diverſe manner of working, for he ſtill loves to vary his Diſpenſations towards Man. At the firſt Creation he uſed no means, but made Man in his own Image; even as when he gave the Law, he both made the Stone-Tables immediately, and alſo writ it with his own Finger. But now in this Recreation and Renewing of the Image, becauſe he will not go the ſame way to work, he will take a Pen in his Hand to do it withal. Ye are, (ſays the Apoſtle, 2 Cor. 3. 3.) the Epiſtle of Chriſt Miniſtred by us. And tho' God made the World without the help of Angels, or any other Creature; yet now in this New Creation, he is pleaſed to ſhew his diverſe ways of working, and takes Creatures to work by; whom therefore he calls Co-workers with him, 1 Cor. 3. 9.

Anſw. 2. He now uſeth means, as to ſhew his various kinds of working, ſo to hide it from the eyes of the undiſcerning World, who contemn the means to their Deſtruction. For this work of Converſion, being the only ſtanding Miracle in the Church (and indeed the greateſt, and therefore all is ſummed up in it) Chriſt therefore hides his power in working it, The blind (ſays he) receive their ſight, the deaf hear, and the poor receive the Goſpel; but he lets them not ſee from whom all this comes, and by whom it is wrought: That ſo that might come upon the fooliſh World, which was fore-propheceyed, Hab. 1. 5. and alledged by the Apoſtle, Acts 13. 41. Behold! ye Deſpiſers, and Wonder, and Periſh; for I work a work among you, which you will in no wiſe believe, though it be declared unto you. Becauſe the means are ſo ſmall, and ſo unlikely, therefore it is that the World deſpiſes God's Word and People; and they wonder at this, that ſuch weak means ſhould have ſuch power on mens Hearts, and yet they believe it not; they feel no ſuch thing in their own Hearts, and ſo falling to deſpiſe it, they periſh in their own ways. You have it, Prov. 25. 2. that 'tis the glory of God to conceal a thing, to carry his greateſt Counſels and Works covertly and cloſely; and therefore he hides them under means, becauſe all ſhould not ſee them. So, when he ſent his Son, how did he befool the Devil and the World, in ſending the Prince of glory, clad and concealed in infirmities, to be Crucified, and ſo to bring about God's greateſt work? 1 Cor. 2. 6, 7, 8.

Queſt. 2. But why, of all things elſe, hath he choſen his Word to do this?

Anſw. 1. He hath choſen Preaching of the Word, becauſe it is the weakeſt means of all other; and therefore his power would the more appear unto his own glory in it. What is weaker then a word? And yet God Created the World by it; for he only ſaid, Let there be Light, and there was Light, &c. But you will ſay; that was his own word ſpoken by himſelf. I anſwer, that now to manifeſt his power the more, he will take the voice of a frail Man ſpeaking his Word for him; and what is weaker then a Man's Breath? Indeed, In the word of a King there is power, (as Solomon ſpeaks) but what power is there in the words of a mean and weak Man? Yes, there is a great power; and the reaſon why God choſe this means is given, 1 Cor. 1. 18. to ver. 28. It is to ſhew his power and wiſdom unto his own, and to confound the World. They know not God in his Wiſdom, by reaſon of their own Wiſdom, which they are ſo full of, and by reaſon of their High Eſteem of Worldly Learning and Eloquence, accounting the plain, naked, and low Stile of the Word, to be but fooliſhneſs; that is, a fooliſh and an empty Doctrine, contrary to their Reaſon, and utterly unlike to work any great matter (as the Athenians thought.) But God choſe it the rather; it pleaſed him, by the fooliſhneſs of Preaching, to ſave them that Believe, ver. 21. to ſhew that his Fooliſhneſs is wiſer than Mens Wiſdom: And if his Fooliſhneſs be ſo, then, what is his Wiſdom? He ſent his Apoſtles forth, a company of poor Fiſhermen; and were they likely Men to conquer the World, by commanding living Men to believe on one Crucified? Eſpecially when the conditions were ſuch as theſe, that Men Rich and Learned, and Great, ſhould wholy deny themſelves and their own Wiſdom, and become fools; was this ever likely? Well, but ſee, (ver. 20.) how the Apoſtle Triumphs upon this occaſion. Where is the Wiſe? Where is the Scribe? Where is the Diſputer? They are clear put down; they have loſt ground both among Jews and Gentiles, by this fooliſh and weak means, this Preaching of Chriſt Crucified. All their Wit, and Carnal Arguments, could not prevail ſo much as one of the Apoſtles Sermons. And ſo when Luther, Calvin, and thoſe other Divines came once to Preach, where were the School-men and Learned of the World? Popery fell down before Preaching, like Dagon before the Ark of God. And God appointed this way, that his Wiſdom might appear to the confuſion of the Wiſe; that ſo his power might the more appear to the praiſe of his grace towards them that are called, and to the confuſion of Satan, and (ver. 25.) to ſhew that the weakneſs of God is ſtronger then Men. If God can by a word work ſuch effects, as all Creatures are not able to work; then what would his ſtrength do, if put to it? What will that power do for his Elect in another World? And this means did God appoint, thereby also to confound the power of Satan, as the ſtrength of Jericho was ſubdued by the blaſts of Rams Horns. Thus Pſal. 8. ver. 2, it is ſaid, Out of the Mouths of Babes and Sucklings, haſt thou ordained ſtrength: Through the weakeſt means, God hath ordained the greateſt ſtrength; and why? to ſtill the Enemy; to confound Satan, that he ſhould not boaſt of his Conqueſt. God therefore choſe Preaching, that it might be his own power unto Salvation.

Anſw. 2. The Second Reaſon why, of all means elſe, God hath choſen his Word, as the means whereby to work grace, and to Reveal himſelf unto us, rather then any other viſible Repreſentation, whereby he might have made himſelf known; yea, rather than by his Works (tho' they are ſaid to Preach alſo, as Rom. 10. compared with Pſal. 8. implies) was becauſe the word was leſs apt to be abuſed to Idolatry, by corrupt Nature, of all things elſe. This was the moſt naked and ſimple Repreſentation, and moſt ſuitable to Reaſonable Creatures that could be, to Repreſent things by words. God made himſelf known by Creatures, Rom. 1. 20. and what was the iſſue of it? ver. 23. & 25. Men fell to Worſhip the Creature, in ſtead of God the Creator, and changed the glory of the Incorruptible God, into an Image made like to corruptible Man, &c. The Sun and other glorious Creatures Repreſented God, and they Worſhipt thoſe Creatures more than God, and aſcribed all unto them. Thus alſo in the time of Popery, when Preaching was Baniſht, they Repreſented all Religion to the Eye; the Objects of which, Man is more apt to Idolize, then the inſtructions which he barely receives by the Ear. An evident inſtance whereof we have in this; that whereas God ordained but two means to convey the Goſpel to us, one by the word Preached to the Ear; the other to the Eye in Sacraments; which are viſible ſigns (and as Chriſt is Preached in the one, ſo in the other; and indeed no more in the one, than in the other) yet corrupt Nature made an Idol of the Sacrament, and never of Preaching, and this Men did, tho God choſe the meaneſt things to theſe Signs, even Bread and Wine. And for this cauſe eſpecially God Sanctified his word, as a means to convey himſelf unto us; as appears by Deut. 4. 12. The Lord ſpake unto you, and ye heard the voice of his words; but ſaw no Similitude, &c.

Queſt. 3. The third query is, why Hearing of the Word ſhould be by God appointed rather than Reading of it alone by our ſelves?

Anſw. 1. God hath appointed the hearing of the word; becauſe he would confounds Satan, and untwiſts and diſſolve the works of the Devil in the ſame way that they were woven. Our firſt Parents took their infidelity in by the Ear; and therefore God thought good to let Faith in the ſame way.

Anſw. 2. Becauſe God had many ſimple People to be called; and indeed, not many wiſe, nor book-learned are of that number; and if Reading were the ordinary means, how ſhould they do? But the ſimpleſt can ordinarily hear, (as well as the wiſeſt: And ſo the poor do come to receive the Goſpel, who otherwiſe would want it.

Queſt. 4. The fourth Query is, why hath God ordained hearing the word expounded, rather than hearing it read? So we find it, Nehem. 8. 7, 8. It is ſaid, The Levites read in the Book of God's Law diſtinctly, giving the Senſe, and cauſing them to underſtand the Reading; that is, the word read. The ſame we have, 2 Chron. 17. 9. The Levites went about with the Book of the Law, and taught the People, and the reaſons of this are:

Anſw. 1. Becauſe of the dullneſs that is in many People, Acts 8. 30. underſtandeſt thou what thou readeſt? (ſaid Phillip to the Eunuch) how can I, (ſays he) except ſome Man ſhould guide me? It was therefore neceſſary, that there ſhould be Men whoſe calling and buſineſs it ſhould be, to ſtudy out the meaning of the word, and ſo to Reveal it unto others; and who might (as Ezrah did, chap. 7. 10.) prepare their Hearts, (and ſet themſelves apart) to ſeek the Law (or the meaning of it) and to Teach in Iſrael, Statutes and Judgments; and (as Timothy) wholy give themſelves to attend on Reading, &c.

2. Becauſe Jeſus Chriſt, when he aſcended, gave Gifts unto Men; Epheſ. 4. 8. And 1. The Treaſures of Wiſdom and Knowledge being in him, (Col. 2. 3.) leaſt when he went to Heaven, he ſhould have carryed all Wiſdom away with him; therefore, as he left the word written behind him, ſo he gave Gifts to Men to expound it, both for the begetting and perfecting of the Saints. Now as for ſimply Reading the word, every one can do that; but an Interpreter is one of a Thouſand, Job. 33. 23. And it were a Derogation from Chriſt, to make a faculty of bare Reading, to be one of the utmoſt fruits of his Aſcenſion. And for this Reaſon alſo it is, that the Gifts of Men are reckoned among the chiefeſt Goods and Riches in a Chriſtian's Inventory, 1 Cor. 3. 22. All are yours, Paul and Apollo, &c.

Anſw. 3. It is not the Letter of the word, that ordinarily doth convert; but the Spiritual meaning of it, as Revealed and Expounded. Paul who had the Letter of the Law; yet ſays of himſelf, Rom. 7. 9. that he was without the Law, until the Spiritual meaning of it was Revealed to him. There is the Letter, the Husk, and there is the Spirit, the Kernel; and when we by Expounding the word, do open the Husk, [out] drops the Kernel. It is the meaning of the word, which is the word indeed, it is the Senſe of it which is its Soul. The Devil quoting Scripture, uſed the Letter of it; but the Apoſtles, when they quote it, alledge not ſo much the words as the meaning. And therefore (1 Cor. 2. 16.) we are ſaid to have the mind of Chriſt; that is, what he meant in his word, when he Revealed it. Now Preaching, in a more ſpecial manner, Reveals God's word. When an Ointment-Box is once opened, then it caſts its Savour about; and when the Juice of a Medicinal Herb is once ſtrained out and applyed, then it heals. And ſo it is the Spiritual meaning of the word let into the Heart, which converts it, and turns it to God.

Queſt. 5. The fifth Query is, If we are to be Saved rather by Hearing the word Expounded, than by it as Read; yet ſtill, why by it only as Preacht by Men like our ſelves? Why not by God's immediate Voice from Heaven, or why not by the Preaching of Angels? The Reaſons of it are.

Anſw. 1. Becauſe Men themſelves firſt choſe this way, as moſt agreeable and ſuitable unto themſelves, and unto their Natures and Conditions, Deut. 5. 25, 26. If we hear the Voice of the Lord our God, we ſhall die; Go thou therefore near, and hear all that the Lord our God ſhall ſay, and come and ſpeak thou it unto us, and we will hear it, &c. ver. 27. and God hearing the People ſay thus, ſaid unto Moſes, they have well ſpoken, &c. Stand thou therefore here, and I will ſpeak to thee all the Statutes and Judgments which thou ſhalt teach them, &c.

Anſw. 2. God betruſted this Treaſure in Earthen Veſſels, not Heavenly, (as it is, 2 Cor. 4. 7.) becauſe we are not able to behold the Angels. You ſee how the Sons of Men have always trembled when they appeared. And further, we ſhou'd have been apt to Worſhip them, as John would have done, Revel. 22. 8. And therefore God appointed Men like our ſelves to be the Inſtruments.

Uſe 1. See here the neceſſity of this Ordinance, ſo as to attend upon it, waiting upon God in the Diſpenſation of it, for the Converſion of thy Soul. A neceſſity lies on me, (ſays Paul) to Preach the Goſpel. Now that neceſſity of his Duty was founded upon another neceſſity; Namely, That it was a means to ſave the Souls of Men, whom God had committed unto him. As for ſuch as are already Converted, I ſhall not need to urge upon them the neceſſity of this Ordinance; they have one within, who will do it. If they ſhould but want a few Meals of their appointed Food, there is a New Creature within them would cry for Bread. In the firſt of Pet. 1. 23. the Apoſtle having ſaid, they were begotten by the word, in the next Chapter he exhorts them, as Newborn Babes to deſire the ſincere Milk of the word, that they might grow thereby: As if he had ſaid; if you be but Babes of a day old, you will deſire this word by which you were begotten. Now for ſuch as are not yet Converted, let me ask them but this one queſtion: Do you think Salvation neceſſary? Yes, then ſo is this, (Neceſſitate Medii) for (ſays the Apoſtle) it is the power of God unto Salvation. But you will ſay, God's power can ſave me by other means, if he will. I deny it not; but ſee what James ſays, (Jam. 1.18.) Of his own will begat he us, with the word of Truth. He that out of his good pleaſure begets us, out of the ſame free will hath choſen this means, even the word of Truth to do it by. You ſee the power of God engaged in it; (it is his power unto Salvation:) And you ſee his Will alſo in it; of his own Will begat he us with the word of Truth. But you will yet ſay (as Rom. 10.) Have we not all heard? I have heard Sermons enough already, if they would do me any good: Yes; (God be thanked) their Sound is gone out into all the World. But let me ask you another queſtion, which the Apoſtle asks in the former words; have all you that have heard, obeyed the Goſpel? Haſt thou had Faith wrought, has thy Heart and Life been changed, as yet, by this word heard? the Apoſtles who were better Preachers than we, yet, cry out (as Iſaiah once.) who hath believed our Report? And if thou be one of the Members yet unchanged, thou haſt as much need to attend to the word, as if thou hadſt never heard it; that ſo thou mayſt eſcape that Damnation, and fiery vengance that will befall them who obey not the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt, 2 Theſſ. 1. 8. But you may haply ſay, I have knowledge enough already, and as much as the Preacher can teach me; and may not that work ſufficiently in me to put me upon practice? Suppoſe this, that thou couldeſt not encreaſe in knowledge, yet thou maiſt as yet not know any thing as thou ought to know; and this plea is a ſign of it, and ſo made by the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 8. 2. And tho' thou maiſt have knowledge in Salvation, and the matters of it, yet not to Salvation, as the Apoſtle diſtinguiſheth it, 2 Tim. 3. 15. for ſuch a knowledge muſt be by a New work of the Holy Ghoſt, whom we receive by Preaching of the word; Galat. 3. 2. Received ye not the Spirit, by the hearing of Faith? All thy Notions may lie as dry Gunpowder Barrell'd up in thee; but what ſhall give fire to them, and enflame thy Heart by them; but a being a-new Baptized with the Holy Ghoſt, as with Fire, and by his ſtriking ſome ſpark and good Motion in? Now the Holy Ghoſt falls on Men at theſe Ordinances. Preaching is therefore called The Miniſtration of the Spirit, 2 Cor. 3. When a Pill lies dead in a Man's Body, and works not; then Phyſitians uſe to preſcribe another, which often ſets all a working. So after all the Sermons thou haſt heard, thou haſt need hear again, to make all effectual to thee. Again: When ſaving knowledge is once begun in thee, it receiveth daily encreaſe by the Preaching of the Word, even then when Notional knowledge doth not. That is, ſuppoſe thou heareſt no new Truths diſcovered, but the ſame again and again; yet in the things Repreſented by thoſe Notions, thou maiſt get a further and more clear and diſtinct inſight every time thou heareſt them. Thou maiſt grow up into more Riches of aſſurance of the knowledge of thoſe Truths thou knoweſt, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Col. 2. 2. and thou mayeſt grow up to more comfort, and joy in thoſe Truths. Paul deſired ſtill to Preach to them (although converted) for the furtherance of the joy of their Faith. Tho' many promiſes belong to thee, and thou already knoweſt them, and diſtinctly remembereſt them, and daily vieweſt them; yet thou mayeſt haply not have much peace from them: But when thou heareſt them again, delivered in this Ordinance, thou may'ſt have ſuch peace from them: For God Creates the fruit of the Lips; peace, &c. Iſa. 57. 19. And this is a thing to be added to thy knowledge, and therefore is ſaid to be Created: And how, but by the Lips of Men uttering it? It is therefore called the fruit of the Lips. As for Example; thou knoweſt that thou art to be juſtified only by Chriſt's Righteouſneſs; and thou knoweſt all that can be ſaid to manifeſt the Truth of it, and nothing more can be added to thy Notion about it. Yet, for all this, the Apoſtle ſays, that this Righteouſneſs is Revealed in the Preaching of the Goſpel, from Faith to Faith; (Rom. 1. 17.) that is, from one degree of Faith to another. This may be Revealed with more evidence to Faith, to draw thy Heart to truſt more perfectly in it. Again: Thou knoweſt all the particular Branches of the Law; thou haſt

Ch. II. haſt a form of Truth, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 2 Rom. 20. that is, a Platform and Table of all the ſins which the Law forbids, and Duties which the Law commands: Yet when this is again taught thee out of the word, a new light may come in, to diſcover to thee thoſe ſins which thou never as yet ſaweſt before; a light which may divide between the Marrow and the Bones, and Anatomize thy Heart unto thee, and ſhew thee ſome new Vein or Artery, which thou never yet ſaweſt. In and through Prophecying the Secrets of Mens Hearts uſe to be diſcovered, 1 Cor. 14:25. So that thy experimental applying, and ſaving knowledge of the things themſelves may be encreaſed, although thy Notions be not. For tho' the Glaſs thou ſtill lookeſt in be the ſame, yet thy light may be new and different; and ſo thou mayeſt come to ſee the Beauty or Deformity of the things Repreſented in it; which is the difference between ſaving knowledge, and that which is not ſuch.

CHAP. II.

Of the end and deſign of the Miniſtry, and of the uſe and neceſſity of Miniſters ſet apart to Preach, and Devoting themſelves wholy to that Work.

Epheſ. 4. 8. Wherefore ſaith he, when he aſcended up on High, he led Captivity Captive, and gave Gifts unto Men.

THE Apoſtle having mentioned in the 7*th* verſe, the variety of Gifts given by Chriſt under the New Teſtament, enlargeth himſelf about them.

1. By ſhewing the Author of thoſe Gifts, Chriſt, according as was Prophecyed, *Pſal.*68.18. ver. 8,9,10.

2. By Enumerating the variety of thoſe gifts, ver. 11.

3. The ends of thoſe Gifts, ver. 12, 13, 14.

1. The Author of thoſe gifts ſet forth, that his Perſon is God, Pſal. 68. 17, 18, 19. Thou the Lord God; for none but God could have given them.

2. Then it is declared, what he did for the beſtowing them. 1. He Deſcended. 2. He Aſcended. He Deſcended and Aſcended. The Apoſtle argues his Deſcending from that word Aſcending: So ver. 9. Now that he Aſcended, what is it but that he alſo Deſcended into the lower parts of the Earth? Pſal. 139.15. He improves that Scripture againſt the Jews to Demonſtrate, that the Meſſiah muſt be humbled and laid low. He gathers a Doctrine from a word, as we uſe to do.

And from this obſerves. 1. That before God Exalts, he Humbleth. The Text ſays, firſt he Deſcended. Thus did God with his own Son, and ſo with us, as with David, Joſeph, and any other whom he employs. And therefore humble your ſelves under the mighty Hand of God, that he may lift you up.

2. Obſerve, That Chriſt Deſcended to the loweſt, and Aſcended to the higheſt place, as thoſe two Phraſes import. ἐις κατωτερα to the lower parts of the Earth: And his Aſcenſion is an high, far above all Heavens, ὑπεράνω, is Super Supra, above all beings above. The Deſcending was into the lower parts of the Earth, the aſcending far above the Heavens. By his Deſcending, is meant that emptying himſelf ſpoken of, Phil. 2. For oppoſitely the fruit of it is made the filling all things, Chriſt was full of all, and God emptyed him. He condeſcends to behold things here below, Pſal. 113. but to come down below is more. And in that Phraſe, the lower parts of the Earth, he Names the firſt and laſt ſtep of his Deſcending: Not from Heaven to Earth only, nor to live on Earth only.

1. It imports to be encloſed in the dark Dungeon of the Womb, Pſal. 139. 15. ſo the Womb is called, and there to be hid nine Months: 'Tis an Alluſion to curious Workmen, that work within doors their moſt curious works.

2. It imports to be laid in the Grave, to be killed and buried, Matth. 12.40. The Son of Man ſhall lie in the Heart of the Earth three days: Not in Hell, the place of the Damned, as the Papiſts would have it, but in the Grave which is called the Heart of the Earth. As Tyre is ſaid to be in the Heart of the Sea, Ezek. 24. 27. which yet was a City near the Sea-ſide, from both theſe places, the Womb and Grave, Chriſt was raiſed, and the ſame Body that had lain in theſe two places and Dungegeons, the ſame, ſays the Text, aſcends far above the Heavens, ὑπερανω ἀνω is above, but ὑπερ is added, that is, above above, above all Heavens; that is, Angels who are called Heavens (as the Devils are called the Gates of Hell, that is, the powers of Hell, for Magiſtrates Sat in the Gates) ſo Heb. 7.26. He is ſaid to be made higher than the Heavens, that is in his Perſon excelling all Creatures, (ſo *Epheſ.*21. His Aſcending is interpreted to be far above all principalities and powers, &c.) Tho' 'tis true alſo, he is above all Heavens for place; for tho' in Heaven, yet his Throne is Conſpicuous there eminently.

Uſe You ſee that to be much abaſed by God, is the way to greateſt glory. Fear it not, the lower the Soul is laid in Diſtreſs, the more Comfort at laſt. The lower the Ebb, the greater the Flood.

3. His Deſcent was ſo low, as none would ever think, that had ſeen him in his Abaſement, it were the ſame Man who is now exalted. He Deſcended ſo low into ſo mean a condition, that when you ſhall ſee him ſo glorious, you would never think that That Man ſhould have been on the Croſs. Therefore verſe 10. the Apoſtle ſays, it is the ſame Perſon, and that he who Deſcended, is the ſame that Aſcended. And ſo the ſame Bodies that were miſerable here, ſhall Riſe again and be glorified. 'Twill be ſuch an infinite glory, that Men will hardly believe they are the ſame Men. Know, ſays Peter, That this ſame Jeſus, whom ye have Crucified, God hath made both Lord and Chriſt.

4. Obſerve the manner of his Aſcending, 'tis in a way of Triumph: He leads Captivity Captive. Enemies being conquered, Princes uſe to go in their Chariots Triumphantly, when from a great Journey they come again to their own City or Country, Pſal. 7.6, 7, 8. Awake (ſays he) in thine anger, ſo ſhall the Congregation encompaſs thee about (that as a Conqueror, for he alludes to the manner of Soldiers in the Field, that encompaſs their Lord General) for their ſake return then on High, as a Conqueror: Aſcend gloriouſly. And the leading Captivity Captive is but to lead the Enemies Captive, for the Abſtract is put for the Concrete; for ſo 'tis uſed, *Jud. c.*5. v. 12. *Numb.*21.1.

Now then, 5. His end in aſcending, as in deſcending was, 1. General, 2. Special.

1. General: That he might fill all things: 1. All places, Heaven and Earth, and therefore he comes into both; as a King that takes poſſeſſion of all his Dominions. 2. That he might fill all Perſons he hath aſcended, as the Sun to fill all with Light to the top of Honour. 3: This is made the fruit of Chriſt's deſcending, as well as his aſcending. He became poor, that we might be Rich, he became empty, that we might be filled.

2. The Second end of his Aſcenſion is ſpecial, viz. the beſtowing Gifts. To this end both this Aſcending and Deſcending is here brought in, for both theſe were neceſſary for the beſtowing theſe Gifts on Men; he muſt both Deſcend and Aſcend. 'Ere Chriſt could give Gifts to Men, he muſt purchaſe them. Your Church Officers coſt Chriſt his Death, and Chriſt gave away himſelf firſt, to give theſe to you, and emptyed himſelf to fill you. And to anſwer to both theſe, the Phraſe the Pſalmiſt uſeth concerning the Gifts beſtowed, ſignifies both his buying of them, and giving of them; and it is beſides Tranſlated there by our Tranſlators, Received Gifts. 1. It ſignifies to buy or purchaſe Emere, ſo לקח ſignifies, and is ſo uſed. *Prov.*31.16: And 2. It ſignifies to give or beſtow: So uſually in the Hebrew, (*Gen.*32.13. *Gen.*25.2.) It is meant to take and bring an Offering. So then Chriſt's Deſcending was to buy theſe Gifts, his Aſcending to receive and give them.

2. We may conſider the variety of theſe Gifts. 1. Extraordinary. 2. Ordinary; they are here jumbled together, (alſo 1 Cor. 12.28. and ver. 8, 9, 10.) And the Reaſon is, becauſe the Miniſtry in reſpect of the eſſential things, is the ſame now that it was then, (2 *Tim.*2.2.) Therefore Chriſt bleſſed them, (Matth. 28.20.) as God bleſſed all Men at firſt in Adam and Eve. Now if we know which Gifts are extraordinary, and which are not; by this we ſhall know:

1. What ordinary Gifts remain, what ordinary neceſſities are ſtill in the Church? We find Gifts of Teaching, &c. and Governing, and Bowels of Mercy ſtill: But no Gifts of Apoſtles, Evangeliſts, &c. remain. Miracles, Infallibility, and foretelling things as Prophets, (ſo as Agabus was) are ceaſed; but Gifts of Teaching and Feeding remain. Now God continues no Gifts in vain.

Ch. III.

1. The power of Apoſtles ceaſeth, Acts 12. 2. When James was Slain, there was none appointed in his room, but Elders were appointed in each Church, Acts 14. 23. The Election of one in Judas his place, was in conformity to the Patriarchs.

2. Prophets are Extraordinary, for ſo they are Ranked, Acts 13. 1. Paul and Barnabas were ſeparated. So 1 Cor. 12. 28. Agabus, Acts 11. 28, 29. and Acts 21. 9, 10, 11.

3. Evangeliſts they had their Calling not immediate, but from the Apoſtles, as they from Chriſt, by laying on of Hands. Theſe were to perfect the work that was begun, and to ſettle the Churches, Tit. 1. 5. 1 Tim. 1. 3. nor were they confined to any place, Titus 1. 5. In every City, &c.

3. The ends of theſe Gifts are two. 1. General, Epheſ. 4. 12. For the perfecting of the Saints. For the work of the Miniſtry, for the edifying of the Body of Chriſt.

2. More Special, ver. 13, 14.

The General Ends are three,

1. Converſion, πρὸς καταρτισμὸν, for joynting in the Members. He had compared, (ver. 4.) the whole Church to a Body, (as alſo ver. 16.) and every Saint that belongs to that Body unto a Member. The Members of which Body are looſened, cut off, ſcattered one from another, and from the Head, whilſt they remain unconverted to God, and ſeparated from Chriſt. And the Fruit and Succeſs of Miniſters labour, is to bring all theſe ſcattered Members into the right place in the Body, fore-ordained to them by God. By Saints, here he means the Elect uncalled: For he ſpeaks of Converſion, as in diſtinction from growth. Joynting in, is bringing in the Members to the Body, Edification is building them up. Who becauſe they are choſen to be holy before him in love, afore the World was, (Epheſ. 1. 4.) they are by Anticipation called Saints, and aforehand entituled by what they ſhall be, as young, great Heirs are Stiled Lords of the places they ſhall have. They are called alſo Chriſt's Sheep, John 10. 16. Sheep, not yet brought into the Fold, are Tearmed Sheep. So the Corinthians, not yet Converted, and ſo not God's People, (1 Pet. 2. 10.) are tearmed by Election and Anticipation, the People of God, Acts 18. 10. I have much People in this City, yet to be called. Thus the Elect of God in an Age afterwards to come unborn, are called our Brethren, and Fellow-Servants, Rev. 6. 11. And white Robes were given unto every one of them, and it was ſaid unto them, that they ſhould reſt yet for a little Seaſon, untill their Fellow-Servants alſo, and their Brethren that ſhould be killed as they were, ſhould be fulfilled. He ſpeaks to the Saints in Heaven in one Age, and of a perſecution to come in an after Age, viz. Of the Saints to be killed by the Arrian or Anti-Chriſtian perſecution, that was long after to come. Thus alſo Chriſt calls his whole Body of Elect, to whom the benefit of his Death ſhould extend, whether Converted, or yet to be Converted: He calls them the Saints on Earth, Pſal. 16. 2, 3. John 12. 19, 20. I pray not for theſe Apoſtles alone (ſays Chriſt) but for them that ſhall believe through their word, namely in all Ages. And the thing prayed for, was Sanctifie them through thy Truth. So then ſince the Elect though unconverted, yet by Converſion are made Saints; he therefore Tearms their Converſion here, the joynting in of the Saints. Take it thus.

1. God had given from everlaſting to Jeſus Chriſt as an Head, a Company of Perſons of Mankind ordained to make a Body to him, and ſuch are their Names and Perſons Repreſented to him. They were, and are in God's and Chriſt's account viewed, as ſet all together in one, as they ſhall be at the laſt day. But by the fall of Man into ſin, the Members of all this Body are actually and in themſelves looſened and diſſolved from Chriſt; and every Joynt and Member of that Body, that by fore-ordination was ſet in its proper Place, Seat, and Socket in the Body, is now rent and torn from the Body, and one from another. Even as the Bones of Men dead are in a charnel Houſe. Now then Miniſters are appointed by God to be in their Miniſtry, the means of Converting Men, and to gather them into one, and to ſet each Elect Saint in his Right Seat and Socket of this Body. Which, (Acts 2. 47.) is called adding to the Church, ſuch as ſhould be ſaved. Even as the Angels Miniſtry at the Reſurrection, ſhall be to gather the Elect from all the four winds, ſuch is the work of Miniſters now. Neither is this ſpoken of gathering Members to a particular Church, but is meant of the Church Univerſal, ver. 4. 16.

Uſe. Hence then learn, that Miniſters are to employ their Gifts and Miniſtry for Converſion of them without, as well as to build up the Saints of their particular charge, even Paſtors and Teachers are to mind this; for you ſee, they are thereunto appointed. Neither can, or ſhould any particular Church engroſs the Gifts of their Miniſters to their own uſe only, Acts 5. 19. The Angel of the Lord that ſet them at liberty, ſaid to them; Go and ſtand, and ſpeak in the Temple to the People, all the words of this Life. To the People, i.e. The common ſort unconverted, and choſe out the moſt publick place wherein to do it, viz. That of the Temple, the place where the Jews met. And Chriſt uſed to Preach there, John 18. 20. And they were bidden to Preach to them, not ſuch Truths only, that may ſerve to build up the Converted; but all the words of this Life, that tend to Converſion, as well as Edification. And they practiſed accordingly, ver. 42. And therefore Saints Converted and gathered into a Church, ſhould not think thoſe Truths dead and dry that tend to Convert, to diſcover to Men their natural Eſtate, &c. For they tend to quicken Men dead, to enlighten the Elect ordained to be Saints, and to joynt them into Chriſt.

Uſe 2. And 2. Learn that Miniſters are in a true and proper Senſe, and for ſome ends Miniſters to them without, as well as to them within. You ſee here Paſtors and Teachers are as ſuch, as well as πρὸς καταρτισμὸν, as for edifying: The Apoſtles when they Preacht to Cities unconverted, as Athens, Corinth, &c. were they not Apoſtles to them, tho' the People owned them not as ſuch, nor knew of it? Yet in the Tendency and Ordination of their Office, they were ſuch to them, whenever and where-ever they Preached; and if they Converted them, they were much more ſo to them. Yea, and when they Preacht, the power and preſence of God went with them as ſuch, as well to thoſe that were to be Converted, as to thoſe that were Unconverted to turn them, 1 Cor. 9. 2. If I be not an Apoſtle unto others; yet doubtleſs I am to you: For the Seal of mine Apoſtleſhip are ye in the Lord. And God owned me, and lookt at me as your Apoſtle, when his power accompanied me as ſuch, in turning you to God. Now what is there ſaid of an Apoſtle (who was ſent to Preach in ſeveral places) is true of Paſtors and Teachers in their Circle, Sphere and place where they are called to Preach. They Preach as Miniſters to them without (whether they acknowledge them or not) as well as to their own Flock. And God looking upon them as Men ſet apart to the Goſpel, he accompanies them with the bleſſing of a Miniſter, and uſeth them rather than others, to Convert more generally and more frequently. And tho' they have not that obligation for watching, or power to Cenſure, Admoniſh, &c. yet as to Preaching, which is an Ordinance of Converſion, they have. Paul as an Apoſtle, had not power of Cenſure over thoſe that were without, 1 Cor. 5. 12. What have I to do to judge them that are without? No, not as an Apoſtle, had he ſuch a power, yet to Preach to them he had, and that as an Apoſtle. And therefore it is neither on the one hand a right Aſſertion to ſay, that Miniſters, when they Preach to others than their own Church; are therein, and as to them to be conſidered, but as private Men, Gifted Brethren, for God conſiders them as more, and bleſſeth them as Miniſters; and hath as well ordained them as Paſtors, to joynt in the Elect Saints, as to build up. Neither is it on the other ſide a true Aſſertion; That becauſe they are Miniſters in Preaching to other Congregations that hear them; that therefore they may challenge power of Cenſure and Excommunication over many Congregations. The Truth lies in the midſt.

2. The other end of the Miniſtry is, as to joynt in the Perſons Elect, and to make the number compleat Extenſive: So to build up, and to be a means of growth unto them that are within; and ſo Intenſive to increaſe their Graces, Acts 20. 32. When Men are Converted, they yet want building up to an appointed meaſure (which yet they know not, but God) without which they ſhould not be ſaved, no more than if not Converted they ſhould not. Except ye be Converted, (ſays Chriſt) and become as little Children, ye ſhall not enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, Matth. 18. 3. He ſpeaks to Men Converted. Now he hath appointed the Word of his Grace to bring them to that meaſure, as well as to Convert; it is for building up of the Body. That word is added, as in Diſtinction from that former; Firſt, Men muſt be brought into the Body by a καταρτισμὸν, then built up. The Natural Body after it hath all its Members formed, then 'tis nurſed. The Miniſtry ſerves for both, the 13 verſes tells us, that the Members are to grow up to a meaſure of Stature, which is Chriſt's fulneſs, Epheſ. 1. 23. Now unto a perfection, a fulneſs of Body.

1. There muſt be a fulneſs, a compleatneſs of all Members or Parts; ſo as none may be wanting; and to this ſerves Converſion to joynt in the Members, and for this the Miniſtry is appointed.

2. There muſt be a fulneſs of Degrees, and proportionable growth. There muſt be no Writhen Member; and tho' one be ſmaller than the other, as the little finger is to the reſt; yet it muſt arrive to it's Stature; and the Stature of each is appointed by God. And when the whole Workmanſhip appears, and all is ſet together, there is an infinite Beauty. And to cauſe them each to grow up, thereto the Miniſtry ſerves. Or if you will take the other Metaphor of building, as an Alluſion to an Houſe ſuppoſed to be made up of Living Stones, as thoſe are, 1 Pet. 2. 5. Te alſo as lively Stones, are built up a Spiritual Houſe, an Holy Prieſthood to offer up Spiritual Sacrifices acceptable to God by Jeſus Chriſt. As ſuppoſe there were an Houſe built of ſuch Stones, having life and growth as the Body of Man hath, which being laid on a Foundation, did of themſelves grow up into an Houſe, there would be in ſuch a caſe; 1. The plaining of the Stone in the Foundation, as in it's proper place, and 2. The growth of the Stones to ſuch a proportion, as ſhould make a comely building. Now ſuch an Houſe are the Saints, Epheſ. 2. 20, 21. And are built upon the Foundation of the Apoſtles and Prophets, Jeſus Chriſt himſelf being the chief corner Stone. In whom all the building fitly framed together, groweth unto an Holy Temple in the Lord. Now then, Converſion is a building us on the Foundation, a laying us in the building: And growth in Grace is our growing up together into that comely Structure of the whole, and both are accompliſht by the Miniſtry.

3. The Third general end or uſe of Paſtors and Teachers, is the work of the Miniſtry: This is uſually taken, as brought in between both to ſhew; 1. That it is a work or calling of Labour ἔργον, as 1 Tim. 3. 13. And 2. Of Service, not Lordſhip. But I take it rather as noting out the whole work of their Calling, and the whole work of their Miniſtration, which is the immediate end of their Office, as their Duty, and which tends to thoſe two other ends that follow thereon, through God's bleſſing thereupon, viz. that Men are Converted and Edified. And ſo all particulars of it, as Preaching, Adminiſtration of Sacraments, Prayer, are included, Acts 6. 4. And thus it imports certain works to be performed by them, that make up the proper ſpecial calling of a Man ſet apart to it. It is διακονίας, 'tis the work of Service, as the word ſignifies. When James, Paul, and other Apoſtles, ſtile themſelves Servants of Chriſt, they intend it not in that Senſe, wherein all Chriſtans are Servants, but they intend their being, as Menial Houſhold-Servants, that have a proper conſtant work every day aſſigned them. As Officers and Courtiers write themſelves Servants to the King in a ſpecial manner; and not as other Subjects. Therefore a Miniſter is ſtiled by this, as a Name more proper to him, The Servant of God, 2 Tim. 2. 24. Set apart to this work, Gal. 1. 16. Rom. 1. 1, 2. An Apoſtle ſeparated, and therefore, 1 Tim. 3. 2. He calls the very Office a work, becauſe it ſhould be his whole work: He that deſires the Office of a Biſhop, deſires a worthy work; and Chap. 4. 15. Give thy ſelf wholy to them. It requires the whole Man, let him that Exhorts, be in Exhortation, &c. Rom. 12. 8. Totus in illo, Let him make it his calling, and Meditate on theſe things, and make them his Study. He muſt be a Scribe inſtructed, (Matth. 13. 52.) that by long uſe and exerciſe, and experience of himſelf and others, hath a Treaſure of old Coin and of new, a Stock of Coin laid up, and an importation of new Bullion, Ezra 7. 6. He was a ready Scribe in the Law of Moſes, which the Lord God of Iſrael had given; and the King granted him all his Requeſts, according to the Hand of the Lord his God upon him. He was a ready Scribe verſt in't; and ver. 10. Ezra had prepared his Heart, to ſeek the Law of the Lord, and to do it; and to Teach in Iſrael, Statutes and Judgments. He prepared his Heart to ſtudy it; and to ſeek out the meaning, and to Teach it, and he did nothing elſe in compariſon. And (ver. 9.) The good Hand of God was with him. You will e're long, come to find that bleſſing in Men ſet apart to it, as to a Calling; that is not in all the Gifts of Brethren, that occaſionally perform it.

2. The more eſpecial ends of the Miniſtry are;

1. Poſitive. 2. Preventive.

1. Poſitive, the preſerving them in, and growing up to the unity of the Faith, &c.
2. Preventive, ver. 14.

1. Poſitive growth in Knowledge and Faith, which is the cauſe of all other growth, and which Paſtors and Teachers ſhould take care of, Jer. 3. 15. And I will give you Paſtors according to mine Heart, which ſhall feed you with knowledge and underſtanding; that is, Wiſdom Practical and Spiritual. God hath taken care, and made proviſion for the Inſtruction of his People in the Faith and Knowledge, and ſet apart Men, whoſe Callings ſhould be to perfect them therein; for which private Prophecying is not ſufficient. As in Univerſities and Colledges; 'tis an ample proviſion, that young Students have not only publick Acts which themſelves perform, and what by private Study and Conference they get; but they have Tutors, and Profeſſors ſet apart to make it their Employment to Read to them. God hath taken the ſame care, he would not have his Children Read to ex tempore; but they have Men that are as Scribes inſtructed in the Law; and in a Church, Paſtors and Teachers are as Tutors to their Underſtanding and Affections, to Read conſtantly, and on purpoſe to both theſe ends, and to improve them in knowledge ſpecially; which is therefore alone mentioned; becauſe if it be Spiritual, it works upon the Affections. For if you grow in true Spiritual Knowledge, you will grow in Grace, 2 Pet. 3. 18. But grow in Grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, to him be Glory, &c. The Church is under Age, Children, as ver. 13. not yet come to Stature. And as Great Men have Tutors for their Children in their Travel to perfect their underſtandings, and obſerve their Manners: So hath God betruſted his Church in their Pilgrimage with Miniſters, whoſe work and calling it is to Read to you. God accounts the Training up of his Children, as great a matter as you do yours; and therefore hath not left them to the common care one of another.

2. Thoſe words, until, &c. Eph. 4. 13. Which notes out the Duration, have a double Senſe: 1. It means, Age after Age. The Church is inſtructed more and more in Truths, and their Judgments by the Miniſtry of all Ages are ſo cleared, that in the end, through the help of their Miniſters, all differences will be ended; and they will have one Faith, &c. and be one Man of one Mind. 2. Or it ſignifies there, being one Foundation of Faith neceſſary to Salvation, even as one Body (as ver. 4.) And theſe Saints being to come forth in ſeveral Ages Succeſſively, which Ages are to laſt till the day of Judgment; the uſe and duration of the Miniſtry, is to laſt and continue until all thoſe Saints in every Age, come and arrive at this unity of the Fundamentals of Faith, and in the true knowledge of the Son of God, which as neceſſary to Salvation, God hath ordained; ſo as it ſhall be found true of all the Saints at the latter Day, that they all had the ſame unity of Faith. And the Miniſtry is to laſt therefore, until this be performed. And truly, if we look over all Stories, we find down all along, that God hath performed this promiſe in Rome it ſelf, which is ſtill Truth enough to ſave Men, though the light indeed in theſe latter days in other things is ſo cleared, that in denying and gainſaying, ſin againſt light, and ſo are loſt, though otherwiſe they had Truth enough to ſave them. So that this word until, doth not ſimply note out that one full Terminus or Period of perfection, that ſhall be at the latter Day, and not until then be accompliſht. (For it cannot well be judged, how at the Day of Judgment and in Heaven, there is the unity of the Faith, where Faith ceaſeth) but it ſerves to note out what was to be a-doing all the time along in every Age. The Emphaſis being put upon the word [all] who coming in a Succeſſion into the World, the Miniſtry muſt, as a means hereof, continue until [all] come to the ſame unity. And ſo the meaning is, that the Miniſtry is needful, that they all might Arrive and be found to have the ſame Faith, and to have arrived to that Stature here, who appearing together at the latter day, make up Chriſt's fulneſs. There are common principles and foundations of all Saints in all Ages; as to inſtance in that one, 1 Pet. 1. 1. Simon Peter a Servant and an Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, to them that have obtained like pretious Faith with us, through the Righteouſneſs of God, and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. There is an unity in the Faith, and that would we have made the Standard for Liberty and Conſcience, not to diſpenſe therein. And we may acknowledge this to the Honour of Counſels and Synods, that this we ſhould have loſt, if it had not been for Miniſters and Counſels.

2. The Miniſtry is neceſſary to prevent Errors and Miſchiefs, to that purpoſe.

1. He ſhews the danger of Saints without Officers. 1. They are as Children, the ordinary ſort of them, who are eaſie to be deceived, to take Counters for Gold.

2. They are as Ships at Sea, either riding at Anchor, or ſuch whoſe Anchor is apt to be broken, and they expoſed to be toſt in both caſes.

1. If they lye at Anchor in the main Sea; yet if a Storm come, they are expoſed to the fury of the Waves, and to be toſt this way and that way, and to a being unſteady, not knowing what to hold. This the word περιφερεῖν imports, to be carried round about.

Or 2. If their Anchor break, then they are liable to float, and be driven any way on Rocks, Hereſies and the like, and ſo to make Shipwrack of Faith and a good Conſcience. Do you uſe to commit your Ships you have but Merchandize in, unto ordinary Saylors? No, but to Men ſpecially Skilled, to Pilot them, to direct them in a Storm?

2. He ſhews the advantage which evil Teachers have to do miſchief.

1. Many of them are Men, which is ſpoken oppoſitely to the generality of Saints, who are but Children, and theſe as Men, can wind and cheat Children as they pleaſe. There had need therefore be thoſe that are Men too, and Men of God to encounter them, that have their Senſes exerciſed to diſcern good and evil, as Heb. 6. 13, 14. For every one that uſeth Milk, is unskilful in the word of Righteouſneſs; for he is a Babe. But ſtrong Meat belongeth to them that are of full Age, even thoſe who by reaſon of uſe, have their Senſes exerciſed to diſcern both good and evil. Such are neceſſary, who are able to convince Gain-ſayers, that have depths of knowledge to anſwer the depths of Satan.

2. He ſays, they are Maſters of their Art, which is Jugling, and caſting falſe Dice, who can cheat, as Men at Dice and Cards. They can pack Scriptures, ſo as they ſhall appear for their cauſe; they have that ſlight of Hand, as to deceive your Eye; and you have need of them that ſhould diſcover them, and their Jugling Tricks, which being once diſcovered, are the moſt plain and eaſie to be avoided.

3. They are High-way-ſide-Men, that come ſtealing on you by degrees; and then with Violence Surpriſe (as having Judgment in an Ambuſhment) one Opinion ſhall draw on another cunningly, till being wound in, and encompaſſed about, you muſt needs yield. Now if the uſe and end of the Miniſtry is to be as a preſervative from a Bank and Wall of oppoſition againſt theſe: Then whilſt you ſee ſuch as theſe Deceivers to continue in the Church (as in theſe times you do, and they have abounded) and perceive the Saints ſtill as apt to be deceived; there muſt needs be acknowledged, the remaining and continuance of this Miniſtry, and the neceſſity thereof, as there will be to the end of the World.

Uſe 1. See and conſider the greatneſs of the Benefit and Favour of God, vouchſafed in theſe Donations of Miniſters and Officers to his Church. Which is diſcovered out of the Text in three things.

1. It is a Gift, and pretious Gift every way. A Gift not for Jehovah only, or his Worſhip, (although in that reſpect, they are ſaid to be a Gift for the Lord, Numb. 18. 6.) But it is withal added, To you they are given as a Gift; ſo here ſays the Apoſtle, they are Gifts to Men; and conſider the particulars. 1. The Gifts or inward abilities the Men have: How Rich and Pretious are they? It is a Rich Treaſure, tho' in Earthen Veſſels. 2. To ordain the Officers ſuited to theſe Gifts, the Adminiſtrations as well as the Gifts; theſe are from the Lord, 1 Cor. 12. As Numb. 18. 7. I have given the Prieſts Office, as a Service of Gift. God looks upon the Ordination of the Office it ſelf, as a Gift. 3. That he ſhould in his providence to our days, through the vertue of his Aſcenſion raiſe up Men thus Gifted, to ſupply his Church withal; this is more than that Covenant made to Noah of, that Harveſt and Spring ſhall not ceaſe for ever. And 4. God gives them his Holy Spirit, inclining their Spirits to undertake this Service (ſo contemned in the World) ſo willingly.

2. They are the Gifts bequeathed us at Chriſt's Aſcenſion. And ſo they his laſt Gifts, whereby he would expreſs his love; as Eliah at his Aſcending, let fall his Mantle; which with a double portion of his Spirit went. Yea, they are the Fruits, not only of Chriſt's Aſcenſion, but of his Deſcending alſo; and that muſt be a matter of infinite Moment; for the effecting which, Chriſt muſt take ſuch a Journey backward and forward, from Heaven to Earth, and then to Heaven again.

3. The Donative is great, in reſpect of the Bleſſing which God follows all theſe with. Indeed the Apoſtle mentions it not; but in citing it, referreth to all that the Pſalm ſpeaks of it. Now (Pſal. 68. 19.) It is there added, he Aſcended to give or receive Gifts for Men, that he might dwell among them. It fills up the Alluſion to an Houſe, when Chriſt Aſcended, he became abſent, going into a far Country; but to the end he might viſit them with his Spirit, and Spiritual Preſence. He firſt builds himſelf an Houſe on Earth. (I will build my Church, ſays Chriſt) and then he furniſheth it with all ſorts of Officers and Furniture; and when 'tis thus compleated, he comes down into it, and dwells in it, and delights to do ſo; and he there keeps open Houſe for all comers. That Exhortation (Coloſ. 3. 16.) Let the word of God dwell richly in you, is ſpoken to them as a Church, (ver. 15.) 'Tis an Alluſion to God's keeping Houſe among his Saints, and he loves they ſhould fare richly and deliciouſly, and feaſt all that would come in among them, which is done by Gifts of Officers ſpecially. This invites him to come and Sup and dwell with them. For ſo it runs, He gave or received Gifts, that he might dwell. Not but that he dwelt in theſe Saints afore: But much more now, when he finds all his Houſhold-Servants about him to attend him.

4. The Donative appears to be great from the ends thereof, which are every way full; for both extenſively they ſerve to bring into him all his Members, and to make his Body compleat; and to add to his Church, ſuch as ſhall be ſaved; and ſo to bring in Honour to God, which conſiſts as a King's, in the multitude of his Subjects. And it is the Church's Honour to Encreaſe and Multiply, and the means of each Perſon's growth, is by what every one ſupplies. And intenſively, theſe Officers and Miniſters do alſo ſerve to build up, and cauſe to grow to a full Stature (as here) every Member alſo, Acts 20. 32. Paul committed to the word of God's Grace, to build them up, &c. And it is as if he he had ſaid, now you have Miniſters among you, I make account you are ſetled; you want nothing but building up, until you come to Heaven, and for that I have ſeen you provided; And ſo I leave and commit you to the word of Grace.

CHAP. III.

The Character and Duty of a True, Faithful Miniſter of the Goſpel.

1 Tim. 4. 16. For in doing this, thou ſhalt both ſave thy ſelf, and them that hear thee.

THeſe words are the Cloſe or Concluſion of a Set and Solemn Exhortation made to Timothy; and in his Perſon, to all that are or intend the Miniſtry. The Exhortation it ſelf is continued along from the eleventh verſe, to this laſt Period of it. The matter thereof wholy concerns that part of a Miniſter's Office; Preaching or Teaching, (ver. 11.) And this in diſtinction from Ruling the Church; of which in the next Chapter he Treats at large. And the deſign of the Apoſtle, is to give ſeveral directions and inſtructions to him, how to render himſelf a powerful and profitable Preacher unto the Salvation of himſelf and others, intermixt with ſtimulations to care and diligence in the obſervation of thoſe Directions. The Directions and Inſtructions are reduced into two Heads; as appears both by the entrance into that part of his Diſcourſe, (ver. 12, 13.) and then again in the concluſion of it in this verſe.

1. He directs him to have a ſpecial care of his own Perſonal Converſe, verſe 12. Be thou an Example of the Believers in word, or good Conference or Diſcourſe in Converſation, or Deeds anſwerable, &c. Chriſt Taught with Authority, and not as the Scribes. For they ſay, and do not, ſays Chriſt.

2. He directs him to furniſh himſelf with meet Abilities for Preaching it ſelf, v. 13. Till I come, give attendance to Reading, to Exhortation, to Doctrine, Till I come: As if he ſhould have ſaid, until when I ſhall afford thee other helps by conference, and the like; I think meet to give theſe Inſtructions, which is all I can do by an Epiſtle. Here is firſt, the Preparatory part, that he muſt furniſh him with Materials, give attendance to Reading, with Meditation and Study, (ver. 15.) Now this Reading muſt

Ch. III. have an Object: And what that is Paul's Parallel Exhortation to the ſame, Timothy reſolves us, 2 Tim. 3. 16. All Scripture is given by inſpiration of God, and is profitable for Doctrine. 2. As for that which is here in one word Tearmed Exhortation; there he brancheth it forth into the particulars of it, Profitable for Reproof, Correction, Inſtruction in Righteouſneſs. That the Man of God may be perfect; as you ſay he is a perfect Artiſt; a perfect Phyſitian; that is, skill'd in all theſe parts of Learning, Requiſite to that Function; in Anatomy, in Simples, in the Nature and Symptoms of Diſeaſes, and in the cures of them. And thus he Subjoyns, explaining himſelf; and it is Exegetical when he ſays, Throughly furniſhed to every good work, viz. of the Miniſtry. As in general he Tearms it, (Eph 4.12.) The work of the Miniſtry, ſo here he expreſſeth his inſtructions, that to every good work, that Timothy ſhould be furniſhed, that is, to every buſineſs which belongs to that Function. For ſo in his intention here, it is to be Reſtrained, viz. to ſuch particular work, as Doctrine Reproof, &c. which he had mentioned, and what ever elſe there may be ſuppoſed.

3. We have the Executive part, wherein he reduceth the work of Preaching to two Heads. 1. Exhortation, which we call Application, provoking and ſtirring Men up to practice. 2. Doctrine, Teaching, Explaining, Confirming Divine Truths out of the Scriptures, in a Dogmatical way. Solomon ſpeaking Summarily of Preaching in the Synagogues (which he calls their Aſſemblies, which had Maſters or Rulers over them; or rather (as others think) Interpreters of Sacred Scriptures, then written by himſelf and others, infallibly guided by one Shepherd) Thus Eccleſ. 12. 9. And moreover becauſe the Preacher was Wiſe, he ſtill taught the People Knowledge; yea, he gave good heed, and ſought out, and ſet in order many Proverbs. He makes the ſame Diviſion of the work of Preaching. The words of the Wiſe (ſays he) are as Goads pricking on to Holineſs: And as Nails which rivet and faſten Truths in Men's minds, or which are as Nails to hold up and ſupport leſſer chains of Truth, that are Conſequential from thoſe that are more fundamental, and hang upon them.

Now Paul's Scope is, as to exhort Timothy to a Diligence in theſe two parts of Preaching; ſo in his Reading the Scriptures, to have theſe two parts in his Eye and Deſign. And therefore it is, he joyns theſe two with that of Reading in one continued Speech; becauſe the uſe he would have him make of Reading, ſhould be ſtill, to ſort and adjuſt what materially in Scripture he found ſerving unto theſe two parts of Preaching, either to ſtrengthen and thicken all ſorts of Exhortation, as there ſhould be occaſion, with Teſtimonies of Scriptures: Or if he were to explain and confirm any Truths, to have in a readineſs Scriptures to do it by: That in what he ſpeaks, though out of never ſo freſh and full experience, he might not ſeem to ſpeak barely as a Man; but ſhould ſtill produce the Scripture, ſpeaking the ſame thing, as Paul tells us that he did, (1 Cor. 9. 8.) Say I theſe things as a Man? Saith not the Law the ſame alſo? And as you have it, Acts 26. 22. Saying none other things then what the Prophets and Moſes did ſay, ſhould come to paſs. And the Scriptures are an abundary, for all ſorts of Truths and Experiences Spiritual; for Exhortations, Doctrines and Confirmations of all ſorts. And when a Man ſpeaks his own Faith and Experience in the very meaning and ſenſe of the Holy Ghoſt, it hath power in it; yea, his power to accompany it. If any Man ſpeak, let him ſpeak as the Oracles of God, 1 *Pet.*4.11.

4. And again at the 15*th verſe*, he calls upon him to Meditate on theſe things. Which Speech refers (as Chryſoſtom ſays) to the things ſpoken, ver. 13. And therein (ſay I) it refers not barely or ſo much to the Precepts or Inſtructions themſelves, as to the things propounded in them; Namely, the Scriptures read by him, that by Meditation and Study, he ſhould ſearch forth the mind of God in them; and by Induſtry and Intention of Mind, ſort what he finds therein unto Exhortation and Doctrine; yea, and make this his Calling, ἐν τοῦτοις ἐσθω, Sis totus in illis, Give thy ſelf wholy to them. He was not to Read or Study the Scriptures, as a private Chriſtian is bound to do, (which is his Duty and Character, Pſal. 1. 2. In the Law of God, he Meditates Day and Night) but as one that is to make Proviſion for the Comfort, Direction, and Inſtruction of others, as one who is to Read to the end, he may be able to Teach, Exhort, &c. (as was obſerved) He is to do theſe things, as a Man that is ſeparated to the Goſpel, Rom. 1. 1. who is as a publick Steward or Provider to a great Family, as both Chriſt and Paul compares the Miniſters of the Goſpel, Chriſt in Matth. 13. 52. Paul in 2 Cor. 4. 1. A Miniſter therefore is to be furniſhed with a Treaſure and a Stock, as Chriſt there ſpeaks and compares it. And it is not his Duty to do this for a time, and then to think himſelf furniſhed enough ; but he is to continue, to perſevere in them. So in this verſe, the Apoſtle ſtill carrying theſe things in his Eye, enjoyns him ſo to continue in this Study, as his profiting might appear to all, verſe 15. his profiting in knowledge in the Scriptures, [Gal. 1. 14. I profited ſays Paul, in the Jews Religion, in the knowledge of it, and zeal for it) as well as his profiting in Piety. And all this concerns thoſe who in their own intentions, have ſet their Hearts upon the Miniſtry, as the mark of their Calling, and are in preparation to it, as well as it doth concern thoſe that actually are in the Calling of the Miniſtry.

Now then conſider, that Paul ſhould give theſe Directions and Counſels to Timothy, who had ſomething extraordinary in his Call, it was by Prophetical Deſignment, (1 Tim. 1. 18.) The Holy Ghoſt ſetting him forth unto it by Name. Even as (Acts 13. 2.) You read that Paul and Barnabas were by Name at a Faſt ; and as it ſhould ſeem, this our Timothy, was at a like Church-meeting at Epheſus, ver. 14. of this Chapter ; at which Paul was preſent, 2 Tim. 1. 6. And therefore he may be ſuppoſed to have had a participation of Gifts extraordinary, which was common in thoſe times. He alſo had from a Child, been trained up in the Knowledge of the Scriptures, 2 Tim. 3. 15. and had now, (when this was wrote) as a Preacher, been experienced long in them. Yet he calls a-freſh upon Timothy, to give attendance to Reading, Meditation or Study ; and to give himſelf together with Preaching wholy unto theſe things. What pretence then can there be, either that the Miniſtry, or the Preparation to the Miniſtry, is not now in our days as a Calling, with Labour and Study, as other Callings, to be attained ?

There is a Generation of Men, that are againſt acquired knowledge, or that which is ſought out by Study, or received from others, and would have all infuſed. Now conſider that Timothy had the main and chief of his knowledge this way, 2 Tim. 3. 14. Continue in the things thou haſt learned, and haſt been aſſured of, knowing of whom thou haſt learned them, he had learned them of Paul. Paul indeed himſelf, had it by Revelation, Gal. 1. 14. I indeed, (ſays Paul) had the Goſpel by Revelation : I neither received it of Man, neither was I taught it, but by the Revelation of Jeſus Chriſt, which was my ſpecial priviledge. Revelation is there oppoſed unto two other ways of knowing Divine Truth. 1. By Tradition, which is receiving it from Man ; as moſt do their Religion. 2. By inſtruction, and Teaching as Paul Taught Timothy, and this is the way of ordinary Chriſtians and Profeſſors, and hinders not the knowing things, by Faith or Experience. For ſo Paul there tells us, that Timothy had been aſſured of them, and yet Taught ; and Timothy was by Teaching, to propagate them to other Teachers, 2 Tim. 2. 2. And the things that thou haſt heard of me among many Witneſſes, the ſame commit thou to faithful Men, who ſhall be able to teach others alſo. And this may be had from Men's Writings, as well as ore tenus, by word of Mouth, witneſs Paul's both Books and Parchments, 2 Tim. 4. 13. The Cloak that I left at Troos with Carpus, when thou comeſt bring with thee, and the Books, but eſpecially the Parchments. Books were thoſe of other Mens Writings, and Parchments his own (which he therefore put a mark eſpecially upon) his own excerpta, or notes gathered out of others : Or becauſe, if he had a Revelation, he might forget it, he had therefore his Memorials in Writing. Yea, that word τὸν φελόνην (which we Tranſlate Cloak) as Eſtius and others ſay, was a Caſe for Books, librorum repoſitorium from φέλλος, which ſignifies a Book, or the Bark of Trees, on which then Books were written. Daniel alſo tho' a Prophet, underſtood by Books the Period of the Captivity, Dan. 9. 2. I Daniel, underſtood by Books the number of the years, whereof the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah the Prophet. Jeremiah had the Prophecy by Revelation ; but the accompliſhment Daniel underſtood by Records, and ſo ſet himſelf to Faſt : And God Recompenſed his Diligence in the ſearch of this with a Revelation of a more happy Period, the coming of Chriſt in the Fleſh, at the Cloſe of that day's Faſt. And what ſays our Saviour Chriſt alſo? Mat. 13. 52. Every Scribe which is inſtructed unto the Kingdom of Heaven, is like a Man that is an Houſholder, which bringeth forth out of his Treaſure, things new and old. 1. He ſpeaks of Miniſters of the New Teſtament, who are inſtructed or furniſhed for the Kingdom of Heaven. And yet, 2. He gives them the ſame Title which they had under the Old, viz. Scribes. For in this reſpect, their calling and work is much alike, as alſo the means of attaining knowledge, Matth. 23. 34. I ſend unto you Prophets, Wiſe Men and Scribes, (ſays Chriſt) ſpeaking of the Preaching of the Goſpel. Of Ezra it is ſaid, Ezra 7. 6. He was a ready Scribe in the Law of Moſes, which the Lord had given. Ready, ſome read it diligent, as that which had made him ready, ſo you have it, Prov. 22. 29. A Man diligent in his buſineſs. And Ezra 7. 10. it was added, That Ezra had prepared his Heart, to ſeek the Law of the Lord; that is, had ſet himſelf with all his might, to find out the meaning of it, and to do it, and to Teach in Iſrael Statutes and Judgments. 3. Chriſt in that Text, Matth. 13. 52. means, that they are to be furniſhed with a ſtore and Treaſure of knowledge, laid up aforehand, and ready at hand; and 4. That they ſhould have the knowledge of former Ages, and ſo bring forth things old, as well as new Truths obſerved in preſent times. And therefore Decreta Prudentum, the Decrees and Interpretations of other Ages and Perſons are to be conſulted. For though Chriſt hath promiſed, that what ever Secret is in the Scriptures, ſhall be uttered and known openly, and upon the Houſe tops, (Mark 4. 21, 22.) yet his promiſe is not, that every one ſhall be in any one Age only; but he doth this Succeſſively, and in one Age one Secret is diſcovered, that was not afore. One Age Sows, and another Reaps, (John 4. 36, 37.) and day inſtructs night, and night day, Pſal. 19. Which paſſages in that Pſalm, the Apoſtle interprets of the Teachings and Writings of Apoſtles and Miniſters, that go forth into all the World, Rom. 10. 18. The darkeſt night in Popery, as it received and retained much light from Auguſtine, whoſe Writings preſerved the Foundations in the Romiſh Church, and his light as the day of the Primitive Times, hath Tranſmitted and Taught us this in this day of the Goſpel, many Truths which otherwiſe we ſhould have been to ſeek in. And anſwerably the Apoſtle, (Eph. 4.) tells us; that from the time of Chriſt's Aſcenſion, Paſtors and Teachers ſhould Teach the whole Univerſal Church to come, to the end of the World, ver. 13. which could not be, did not the Miniſtry of one Age, afford and traduce down light unto another. Thruth's are Chriſt's currant Mony, for one Age as well as another; and ſome of them are ſtampt in one Kings Reign, others in another. If we ſhould have had no more Silver in this Kingdom, then what was brought in our Age, how poor ſhould we be? That is Revealed to one, that is not to another; It was ſo even in thoſe times, when knowledge by Revelation was moſt frequent, 1 Cor. 14. 30. And how doth the Apoſtle take ſuch Men up? What (ſays he) came the word of God out from you? Or came it only to you? ver. 36. as if he ſhould have ſaid, God hath Taught other Ages and Churches, as well as you. And you cannot ſay of any one, we have no need of you; that is, of your light or help, as (1 Cor. 12.) the Apoſtle, to another, though like purpoſe, infers.

Whereas ſome Men are for Preaching only Extempore, and without Study, Paul bids Timothy Meditate, and Study, and give his mind wholy to theſe things. Even in writing ſome Scriptures, the Pen-men, though guided infallibly by the Holy Ghoſt, yet uſed Study and Meditation and Art in the contriving of them. That Pſalm of Pſalms, Pſal. 45. that Song of Songs about Chriſt's Kingdom, is an evidence of this. It was a Poem, and of all other the Maſter-piece, and the firſt rude Draught of that Song of Songs, which Solomon after wrote, and the very Epitome of it. Now what is his Preface to it? My Heart is boyling up a good matter, ver. 1. (ſo in your Margents) it was boyled in his thoughts (as the Meat-offering in the Law with Oyl, Lev. 7. 9.) and ſo it was prepared by Study, to be offered up to God. I ſpeak the things which I have made, touching the King (ſays the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 45: 1.) i. e. I ſpeak my works to the King. He calls it, as Men do their Writings, his Works; and Dedicates it as Men do works to the King. And again, Solomon that wrote the Canticles and Eccleſiaſtes, profeſſeth that in Teaching the People, he gave good heed, and ſought out, and ſet in order many Proverbs; he weighed things as in Scales, as ſome read it, ſought them out, and ſet them in order; yea, and he ſought to find out words that might take, Eccleſiaſt. 12. 9, 10. All which imports, that it did coſt Study.

Yea, if it be conſidered, theſe Men who decry Learning and Study, yet do not themſelves, keep to this their Law; for that ſound knowledge which they have, or retain, hath been from the miniſtry of this Age, which hath diffuſed it, and lighted the whole Houſe; and yet unthankfully they ſet up againſt them, with that light they have had by Retail from them. Neither can they be ſaid to Preach Extempore, or what is at that preſent Revealed; for they Preach thoſe things which their thoughts and ſpeeches have been exerciſed in before. So as ordinarily the Extemporarineſs is in reſpect of memory; for it is what comes to their memories of notions again and again Meditated upon. The Holy Ghoſt may be ſuppoſed to bring to remembrance, things before conſidered in Study and Meditation; or reading in order to Doctrine and Exhortation in publick. And that place of Chriſt's, Luke 21. 14. Meditate not aforehand what to ſay, is ſpoken in caſe of Perſecution, (ver. 12.) and of being brought to the Bar; which is in an extraordinary ſeaſon, and ſo hath uſually extraordinary aſſiſtance: It is not ſpoken of ordinary Sermons in the Pulpit. And again they were ordinarily taken on the ſuddain; and haled away to anſwer preſently, as Chriſt himſelf was; and ſo could not Premeditate, to comfort them therefore, he gives forth that promiſe. And again, it excludes not Premeditation; for the Chriſtians ſtudyed, and Studyed Apologies: But it is ſpoken againſt Anxiety, and Solicited that way, and to provoke them rather to a dependency on the Spirit to help them, though they had prepared never ſo much.

I ſhall only cloſe this, with the very concluſion of Solomon's Eccleſiaſt. which hath an Admonition in it full of weight, Eccleſ. 12. 12. And further by theſe, My Son, be Admoniſhed: Of making many Books there is no end, and much Study is a wearineſs of the Fleſh. Concerning the Scope and Coherence of this; I obſerve, 1. That he having commended the Writings of Sacred Scriptures (wrote by himſelf and the Prophets inſpired by God immediately) unto every Man's Study and Search, he gives a Caveat and an Admonition concerning Reading and Studying too many other Books. Thoſe words, And further by theſe be Admoniſhed, ſeems to import only a ſuperadded Admonition: As we uſe to ſay, over and above, and in fine, take this Admonition. Others read it thus, Magis or potius ex bis Admonitus, that is, Rather ſeek Knowledge and Inſtruction ex his, out of theſe Books, than others that are of Men's Writings, and Forraign to a Chriſtian. Exerciſe thy ſelf in the Study of the Scriptures, and what doth beſt ſerve to open and explain them. Others (which comes all to one) Paraphraſe it thus, Amplius his, Cave quæras, Take heed of ſeeking too inordinately, other Knowledge then what is in theſe: Or then that tendeth to explain theſe. Or if you will have my mind ſays Solomon more plainly, take heed of making or reading many other Books; for there is no end, no ſatisfaction in them. And beſides much Study is wearisom to the Fleſh, and preys upon the beſt of the Spirits. I obſerve, he doth not altogether Condemn reading other Books, or making of them, only preferring others to theſe, or not counting theſe moſt excellent: And 2. He condemns reading too many; and 3. He finds fault with it, when it tends to decay of Health and Spirits. And this is to be reckoned among theſe Vanities, which we had cryed down as vain, and not ſimply unlawful, as Gardens, Orchards, &c. are not. 2. He did this in his times, when the Holy Scriptures were but few, in compariſon of that acceſs which we have had ſince; for David had but Moſes's Law: Yet you ſee how he Studyed it day and night. 3. He propounds in the Coherence of theſe words with the former his own example, as he had done in other things, throughout this Book. He was a Writer and Reader of many Books, perhaps the greateſt in the World; and many of them were not Scriptures; but of other things; and he found it Vanity, as he had found the reſt. It had took up too much of his time, and had ſhortned his Days. And therefore (ſays he) I commend to you rather my Sacred Writings, than all the other Books of mine or others in the World. And indeed the Holy Scriptures wrote by him only have remained, when the other are loſt. Yea, 4. By the next words; Fear God, and keep his Commandments, he would inſinuate, that even Study had took up too much of the Man from Piety, and keeping up Communion with God. Therefore ſo we ſhould Study, as that the whole and main of our Souls, may be in the Worſhip of God, and doing his Will, which theſe Books teach you, ſays he, and none other. And laſt of all, I obſerve it is his laſt Admonition, and he reſerved it to bring it in laſt. For 1. Learning is of all other, the beſt Vanity this World hath. Wiſdom (ſays he) is better than folly, and ſo is apter to draw the Heart away from God, and his Holy Scriptures; and yet even this is a Vanity, ſays Solomon, as well as the reſt. He had before concluded in general, and made an end of reckoning up any more Vanities, (ver. 8. Vanity of Vanities, all is Vanity, ſays the Preacher) only as having forgotten one as neceſſary to be mentioned, as any other; he brings it in with a Furthermore (as our Tranſlators read it) as if he had ſaid laſt of all, I gave you this Admonition, to the end it may the more ſtick with you, Further my Son, be Admoniſhed. And he doth it, as you have heard upon occaſion of commending the Scripture too, as alone ſufficient to make one wiſe in the fear of God, and all this is done to make the admonition more weighty and ſolemn.

CHAP. IV.

Of the Miniſters Maintenance. Of the Right, & Tenure, by which he hath a claim to it: Of the ways, and means, by which it is to be ſetled and raiſed.

IN diſcourſing of the maintence which is due to a Miniſter of the Goſpel we muſt firſt conſider upon what a Tenure he holds his right to it, and that conſideration will guide us to find out by what Rule this Maintenance is to be proportioned.

1. The Miniſters of Chriſt under the new Teſtament hold their Tenure of Right to a due Maintenance, by vertue of the Laws of common Juſtice as are practiſed between Men and Men in like affairs. By the ſame right; on which all other ſtipends of Places, Offices and Callings in Kindgoms, or common wealths, are founded, theſe ſacred Officers may challenge a Maintenance due, and proper for them. As both Civil and Military Offices, as that of a Captain in war, or of a Judge, Chancellor, &c. have a ſtipend from the ſtate propotion'd according to the Rules of common Juſtice current among Men, ſo a Miniſter ought to have a Maintenance from the Church, by the ſame Rule of Juſtice, ſuited to the dignity and Labour of his place and calling.

The Stipends of Offices in humane Governments are meaſured out by theſe Rules:

1. The dignity of the place is conſidered, and due proviſion is made, that the perſon may have an allowance ſufficient to uphold the honour of his Function.

2. The expences of the Office are alſo rated, that the perſon may be furniſh'd to diſcharge all that his being in ſuch a place requires.

3. The Hazard which he may undergo in his Office comes alſo into Conſideration.

4. The Labour and pains of the places and Calling are weigh'd, and a due Conſideration had of them.

5. The breeding, and Education of the perſons before they can be fitted for ſuch an Office is alſo put into the Balance.

6. An account is made how beneficial and uſeful a Perſon in ſuch an Office is to the Government.

All theſe things in all ſorts of Offices are valued among Men, by the common rate that Juſtice currant among men doth put upon them. And all theſe conſiderations ſo far as they are found in this ſacred Office of the Miniſtry (as they are all) are by that ſtandard of common Juſtice, and Cuſtoms of Men in like Callings, to be regarded and this Office is to have its ſtipend anſwerably proportion'd. Now that this Calling holds upon theſe Tenures of Common Juſtice is evident, becauſe the pleas us'd in the New Teſtament for the Maintenance of Chriſt's Miniſters are founded upon this claim, and this right and Tenures are pleaded therein.

1. Let us conſider the Text, 1 Cor. 9. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14. Who goeth a warfare any time at his own charges? who planteth a Vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock? Say I theſe things as a Man? or ſaith not the Law the ſame alſo? For it is written in the Law of Moſes, Thou ſhalt not muzzle the mouth of the Ox that treadeth out the Corn: Doth God take care for Oxen? Or ſaith he it altogether for our ſakes? for our ſakes, no doubt, this is written: that he that ploweth ſhould plow in hope: and he that threſheth in hope ſhould be partaker of his hope. If we have ſown unto you ſpiritual things, is it a great thing if we ſhould reap your carnal things? If others be partakers of this power over you, are not we rather? Nevertheleſs, we have not uſed this power: but ſuffer all things, leſt we ſhould hinder the Goſpel of Chriſt. Do ye not know that they which Miniſter about holy things, live of the things of the Temple? and they which wait at the Altar, are partakers with the Altar? Even ſo hath the Lord ordained, that they which preach the Goſpel, ſhould live of the Goſpel. Mark the inſtances which he brings. 1. Of Souldiers, and their places in War. 2. Of Planters of a Vineyard. 3. Of a Shepherd. And he adds this expreſſion, Say I theſe things as a man? He inſiſts on the examples and cuſtoms of Men, in the like caſes, the ſame common Rules of Juſtice holding in this caſe, as there. And (as Pareus obſerves) he alſo pleads all ſorts of Titles of Juſtice, which ſerve to ſtrengthen the Fundamental Title. 1: He mentions the cuſtoms of men in like callings, as in that of Souldiers, &c. 2. He takes notice what natural Juſtice it is, to plow and ſow in hope of a crop, and to reap in hope of eating the fruits of the labour. 3. He remarks marks the moral equity of the Judical Law, which forbids to muzzle the mouth of the Ox which treadeth out the Corn, and tho' it would be lawful to do ſo under the Goſpel, yet God thereby taught a Rule of common Juſtice to be obſerved among all callings of Men, (for this was not a Type) and this among other things God taught by it, that in Juſtice a reward is due to a Labourer, ſince it is ſo to a Beaſt, and the Apoſtle herein pleads the Juſtice, not the Type of the thing. 4. The Apoſtle conſiders the Equality of commutative Juſtice, and what the Laws of Exchange require that value ſhould be given for value (verſe 11.) and tho', indeed, he doth not ſay, Our ſpiritual things, as he ſays Your carnal, yet he plainly expreſſeth that it is we who ſow them. He, in juſtice, requires only parva pro Magnis, ſmall things for great. For the fruits, and benefits of this calling, are to be conſidered, which exceed in proportion all carnal things whatever. 5. The Apoſtle takes notice of the Equity of the Ceremonial Law, verſe 13, 14.

2. The other Text of Scripture to be conſidered is, 1 Tim. 5. 17, 18. Let the Elders that Rule well be counted worthy of double honour, eſpecially they who labour in the Word and Doctrine. For the Scripture ſaith, Thou ſhalt not muzzle the Ox that treadeth out the Corn: and the labourer is worthy of his reward. 1. He ſpeaks of honour to be paid to them, now Honour was a due as well as Tribute, which was exacted, Rom. 13. 7. And it was due in juſtice. 2. He tells us that the labourer is worthy of his hire; Every word which he uſeth, expreſſeth matter of Juſtice, 1. Labourer, This ſhews that, to the work, in juſtice the reward is to be proportioned, Rom. 4. 4. 2. The Apoſtle expreſſeth a worthineſs of his work, that it deſerves a valuable conſideration, That a Labourer is worthy of his hire. 3. The Apoſtle mentions hire, whereby he intends a Covenanted reward, ſuch as is ſet by mutual agreement, ſo μισθος ſignifies. 4. The words are, τȣ͂ μισθȣ͂ ἀυτȣ͂, of his hire, i. e. which he in juſtice may call his

3. This was alſo the firſt inſtitution of Chriſt, Mat. 10. 9, 10. Provide neither Gold nor Silver, nor Braſs in your purſes: Nor ſcrip for your Journey, neither two Coats, neither ſhooes, nor yet ſtaves: (for the workman is worthy of his meat.) And to this inſtitution of Chriſt the Apoſtle plainly refers in both theſe fore-cited Texts, 1 Cor. 9. 1 Tim. 5. From all this there flows theſe Corollaries.

1. In the eſtimate of Chriſt in his inſtitutions there is a great difference between the duty of relieving the neceſſities of our poor Brethren, and this duty of maintaining the Miniſters of the Goſpel. For tho' the relief of the poor be an act of ſpiritual juſtice, unto which, by ſpiritual obligations, in relation to God, and Chriſt, we are bound: yet the Maintenance of Miniſters is farther due, by the Rules of all humane common Juſtice that are found among men: So as Rules of humane juſtice exact it, and Rules of humane Juſtice proportion it according to the deſert and merit of the thing. But the poor have not power to claim relief by ſuch a Title, for their Tenure is meerly from the obligation which the Goſpel lays upon us. I find, indeed, a Collection for the Saints at Jeruſalem to be called a debt, Rom. 15. 27. but it was a peculiar caſe, for from this Church of Jeruſalem came the word of the Goſpel, and the bleſſings of Spiritual things, to the Romans and other Gentiles, but this word did not come ſo from Corinth (Cor. 14. 36.) or any other Church. And again, all communication of benefits to the poor is matter of meer ſervice to God (2 Cor. 9. 12.) nay, it is called Acts of grace (2 Cor. 8. 19.) But this is not meerly ſo, for it is both a gift, and a Sacrifice. And then beſides, the Object of this communication to the poor is a certain condition of men, which wiſdom muſt diſcern, and judge of, and proportion ſuccors accordingly: but the Object of this act of Miniſters Maintenance is a ſettled calling, and labour of men, in rewarding which juſtice muſt be ſhewn. The Rule of meaſuring out Collections for the poor is as God had bleſt men (1 Cor. 16. 2.) and that inſtance is only concerning ſuch a Collection, but now in all caſes, and reſpects, as the Labourer is worthy of his hire, ſo a Miniſter deſerves a due ſubſiſtence.

2. If the Maintenance of a Miniſter is thus to be regulated by the common rules of Juſtice in uſe, and cuſtom, and which are found in like caſes; then it is alſo to be rated according to all theſe conſiderations, to which a regard is had in all like Callings. 1. It is to be conſider'd that honour is due to Miniſters on account of the Dignity of their Office and work, 1 Tim. 5. 17. Let the Elders that Rule well be counted worthy of double honour, eſpecially they who labour in Word and Doctrine. 2. The neceſſary charges of their Office are to be conſidered, for by it they are bound to be charitable and hoſpitable unto others. 3. The hazard to which by their calling they are expos'd, is to be had in conſideration. As it is a Spiritual warfare, ſo as Souldiers who ſtand in the fore-front of the Battle are moſt open to wounds or death, ſo Miniſters in times of Perſecution are moſt obnoxious to danger. 4. The labour of their Calling is conſiderable. It is inward eſpecially, 1 Tim. 5. 17. It is the labour of the mind which ſpends the beſt Spirits, and preys on the vitals, and therefore it is the greateſt labour of all other. 5. Their Education, and breeding for this Calling is long, and expenſive. And Mens penſions in other places, and callings, are valued in the conſideration of what is requiſite to them. 6. The more, and greater benefits any calling brings, the more it is priz'd, and valued. If Miniſters bring in Spiritual bleſſings to you (as they do) it is but equal that they ſhould partake in thoſe carnal bleſſings which you enjoy. We may, in juſtice plead all theſe conſiderations, and require as Good and equal juſtice, as is found to be diſtributed with reſpect to any other the like callings among Men. The Rule of Juſtice is not what the cuſtom of men is to give to Miniſters but it is to be taken from the meaſures of proportion which Men obſerve in reſpect to other Callings, which have the fore-mention'd reſemblances to this of the Miniſtry. 3. The party himſelf who is this ſacred Officer of Chriſt hath a right, and power to ſet a value on the merits of his office, as well as the people, who are the other party, in all like callings it is ſo. Therefore neither the deacon, nor the people can oblige the Miniſter to accept of what proportion of allowance they pleaſe to ſet him: But he himſelf hath a right, and power to plead for, and claim a juſt valuable ſtipend, and accordingly to rate what his Office deſerves. It is not left therefore to the wiſdom of either the Deacons, or the people, to adjuſt the value of it. Therefore the Apoſtle in reference to, . this maketh uſe of the word ἐξουσία, which implies not only power, but authority. He uſeth the word three or four times on this occaſion, 1 Cor. 9. 4, 5, 6. And he expreſſeth a right, a title, and dominion, which they had over them in this reſpect, 1 Cor. 9. 12. whereby it is plainly aſſerted that the people have not a power over the Miniſter to oblige him to take whatever they are pleas'd to give, but that he hath authority to claim what is juſtly due to his calling. For not only Apoſtles had this power here ſpoken of (v. 12.) but ordinary Officers, for his words are, If others be partakers of this power over you, and by others he means ordinary Miniſters, for the falſe Apoſtles preach'd Gratis, not requiring any conſideration. 4 Unleſs there were ſomething peculiar found in this calling of the Miniſtry, which is not to be found in any calling elſe; unleſs there were found ſome Goſpel-duty obliging, and requiring Miniſters to forego their Right (which, in juſtice, is to be inſiſted on by them) and to give themſelves up to the free arbitary diſcretion of the Church and her Deacons; or unleſs there were ſome certain proportion ſet by God under the new Teſtament, as there was under the Old; A mutual Covenant between Miniſter and People is the beſt & moſt effectual courſe to adjuſt this affair. This is evident from the inſtances, of which the Apoſtle makes uſe, 1 Cor. 9. 7. Unto a Labourer in a Vineyard a ſet penny is due, Mat. 20. v. 2. Souldiers alſo have their fixed pay. The word us'd by the Apoſtle, which is ὀψωνίοις ſignifies a Souldiers ſtipend, as Beza obſerves: And when the Apoſtle ſays (1 Tim 5. 18. That the labourer is worthy of his hire, that which he is worthy of is called his hire. The word μίσθος ſignifies merces pacta, a reward fixed by mutual Agreement, and therefore they were not to ſtand to the Courteſy of thoſe who were to give it them. Nor doth the Apoſtle uſe this expreſſion as a proverb only, but as a Rule, which is to be obſerved. what is ſaid (Jam. 5. 4.) of the hire of the labourers, hath reſpect to Deut. 24. 15. The inſtance of Shepherds alſo hath a regard to what was the uſage in Laban's time, when great men had others under them to look after their flocks, and agreed to reward them for their labour by giving them ſome of the Sheep which they kept, Gen. 30. 31. And to this cuſtom the Apoſtle alludes, when he ſays, Who feedeth a flock, &c. From all this it neceſſarily follows that the Miniſter's ſtipend is not to be left to arbitary determinations, but as the Miniſter and the Church which calls him are joyn'd together by a mutual Covenant, ſo his ſtipend is to be ſettled by a like Covenant according to the dictates of nature's equaleſt Rule. By this way all complaints will be avoided, all things will be preſerv'd in peace between all parties, whether people, or officers, & the one will be tyed to the other moſt faſtly by their own Cords. I ſhall now examine what is pleaded for leaving the Miniſter's Maintenance unto the free, & voluntary contribution of the People. 1. Any inſtances out of the old Teſtament, to this purpoſe, do not ſeem to me convincing: what is moral, indeed, in them holds, and accordingly the Apoſtle brings them, not to be meaſures of proportioning a Maintenance for Miniſters in like manner, but he only refers to the Moral juſtice of them: That as the Levites lived wholly on the Altar, ſo it was but juſt that Miniſters ſhould live wholy on the Goſpel, i. e. that they ſhould not live on their own charges, but on what they have for preaching the Goſpel, that they ſhould not live on their own means, but upon that which comes in by the Goſpel, 1 Cor. 9. 13, 14. But the particle ſo doth not mean that that they ſhould live after the ſame way and manner, but only that there was juſtice, and equity for one as well as the other. And ſo our Lord Jeſus Chriſt ordain'd, *Mat.*10.9.10. So that according to that common Rule of Juſtice, The labourer is worthy, &c. Chriſt form'd his inſtitution with reſpect to the Miniſtry of the Goſpel. They were indeed extraordinary Diſciples,& there what he ſays to them as ſuch(*Ma,*10.8.is not a rule of perpetual obligation but he afterward alters this rule with reſpect to ordinary Miniſters in ſaying that the workman is worthy of his meat,Mat.10.10.And he adds theſe further,*Lu.*10.7,8.Thus as Chriſt, in*Mat.*18.ordains the inſtitution of a Church,ſo here,he ordains a rule for the Maintenance of Miniſters.But to anſwer any Objections that may be brought from inſtances under the Old Teſtament,it is to be conſidered that there is not the ſame way now for the maintenance of the Miniſters of God,as there was then, but there are many differences between one and the other. 1. The Levites then were a Tribe ſet apart from their birth by God himſelf,and accordingly God ſays that he would be their portion, *Num.*18.20. All theſe dues therefore which the people paid to them were firſt paid to God,and he gave them to the Levites : So that they held them not by any Law of humane Juſtice, but by Tenure from God, for as theſe dues were paid to God, ſo he gave them unto them.But maintenance is due in juſtice to Miniſters,as they are labourers,by the ſame Rule which Chriſt gives that the labourer is worthy of his hire:And yet too becauſe Miniſters are an ordinance of God, and they ſerve to the worſhip of God, therefore offerings made to them, are ſacrifices to God, and thus they are a gift alſo, as well as a due: But yet ſo as the firſt Object,to whom the due is pay'd, is the Miniſter, not God, tho' they communicate to him for God's ſake,*Gal,*6.6. i.e. that you may have an ordinance to ſerve to God's worſhip, be ſure to maintain it,and therefore this giving to a Miniſter is called ſowing to the Spirit, when all other expences are called ſowing to the fleſh,*Gal.*6.8. 2. This chief Maintenance of the Levites under the Law was not left to the freedom of the givers, nor did God truſt men to aſſign the proportions of their Maintenance but he did it himſelf,ſince he appointed not only free Offerings, but Tithes.There was a portion ſet for them,and a fifth part of every Man's Eſtate went one way or other for the Maintenance of the Levites To leave all therefore only to free offerings now, and to cut off ſet Stipends, or Tithes, is to put us Miniſters into a worſe condition than the Levites were. And ſurely God hath not bound us to theſe hard Terms: what peculiar bond hath God laid upon us more than upon Men in any other callings? that we, who have both the faith of ordinary Men, and the Spirits, and neceſſities of Men, ſhould yet depend meerly on free-will-offerings. I am ſure as this anſwers uot our Type,ſo neither doth it take in the Rules of Juſtice whereon a Miniſter's maintenance is founded. 3. The Miniſter's Maintenance is not left to the wiſdom of the Deacon. For the diſtribution of the free-well-offerings of the people among the Prieſts, was by Rules of Juſtice, and according to equality ofproportion, reſpect, and meaſure, being had to their labours, 2 Chron:31. 14, 15, 16. And now then to make us wholy to depend on the peoples free-will-offerings,and that the Deacon ſhould diſpenſe them according to his wiſdom, would be to make our condition worſe than that of the Levites was then, who had treaſurers that were faithful to their charge, Neh. 13. 12, 13. 4. It was neceſſary in thoſe times that ſome ſhould diſtribute the Church's Treaſure, becauſe the Tithes that were needful for the ſervices of the Temple were brought into a common Bank, and therefore it was neceſſary that ſome ſhould be ordained to diſtribute it. There was a neceſſity of doing it, and it was not left to diſcretion. So here now in the times of the Goſpel the ſame ground holds ſtill, that ſo far as any thing comes in by common Collection for a particular appointed uſe, the Deacons ought accordingly to gather it for ſuch an uſe, and as the Church's hands, to convey and diſtribute it. This Office, mention'd in that fore-cited text,was matter of needful order,not of Type, or ſignificancy only, as many things were in the Ceremonial Law; which,the reaſon of them ceaſing, the uſe of them is aboliſhed. For (as Zepperus ſays) Ratio Legis ſi ceſſet ipſa Lex ceſſat, nonſecus atq; animâ expirante, homo moritur, Ratio enim Anima Legis eſſe dicitur. If the Reaſon of the Law ceaſeth the law it ſelf ceaſeth, as the Soul expiring the Man dyes. For Reaſon is ſaid to be the Soul of the Law.

Nor doth any place, or argument out of the New Teſtament, evince any thing contrary to my fore-going aſſertions. There is mention,indeed, of Sacrifices to God (Heb. 13. 16.) But yet it is a Queſtion whether Miniſters maintenance be ſpoken of there,or if it is, it hath that name, becauſe it is a maintenance given to uphold God's worſhip. And yet ſtill it is given by way of humane Juſtice to the Miniſter, who is the perſon which performs that worſhip.It is not given firſt to the Lord,and then to the Miniſter or Church, but to the Miniſter for the Lord's ſake,and ſo it is an honouring God with our ſubſtance, and a ſowing to the Spirit, and to ſpiritual ends. For tho' it be given to God firſt,yet that is not inconſiſtent with its being given to the Miniſter,but both may ſtand together,and it is ſtill a debt in humane Juſtice to the perſon, the Officer. Paul calls it a gift(*Phil.*4.16,17.)But this doth not import that he had no power to claim it, or that it was not due to him, but he calls their offerings, made to him, a gift comparatively to the omiſſion of other Churches, who owing the ſame duty,yet had not done it: Or he calls it a gift with reſpect to their free doing it. And I think the nature of the thing hath a mixture both of debt, and of a Gift,and, as the way of ſaving us in the Goſpel, is compounded both of Mercy and Juſtice ; ſo this maintenance of a Miniſter is an act of Juſtice, and free love too,yet ſo as that the free love of the perſons both in the contribution, and diſtribution of it, muſt come up to the Rules of Juſtice, and we our ſelves may claim it, and ſet the due rate and value of it, and fix its right proportion:Have we not power, &c. 1 Cor. 9 6, 7, 8. 2 Theſ. 3.8,9. Thus to give to the Maintenance of a Miniſter is a mixt duty,for the Apoſtle gives the Rules and urgeth the grounds, and reaſons both of common Juſtice, and alſo of love. He urgeth the Goſpel conſideration that it is, a ſacrifice to God, and a ſowing to the Spirit, Heb.13.16. Phil.4.17,18. And ſo he calls it likewiſe a ſowing to the Spirit, Gal.6.6,7,8. And yet likewiſe he aſſerts a power to claim it as a due,2 *Theſ.*3.8,9. He urgeth both arguments, that if Goſpel-conſiderations did not move them, the plain Reaſons of common juſtice might prevail. That they might conſider the Juſt right and claim that Miniſters have to it, and might be influenc'd thereby. Have I not power,&c. ſays he. He urgeth the duty upon them from the Rules of common juſtice. We are called by Men , and if we are not juſtly dealt with by them, we have power to leave them. The Apoſtle's caſe was otherwiſe, who was called by God,and ſo was to truſt God for means of liveli-hood,and to work with his hands,and on all accounts whatever to preach the Goſpel,1 *Cor.*9.16.

2. The contribution of maintenance to a Miniſter is left free, and it is fit it ſhould be ſo, 1. That it may be an exerciſe of grace in the people, and an offering of Sacrifice to God.And ſuch a freedom agrees with the Genius of the Goſpel, and is ſuited to the nature of its ſervices which requires a willing people. 2. This act is left to the freedom of the people that they may have an opportunity of exerciſing their love to the increaſe of the grace of love in them, whilſt the Miniſter inlargeth their hearts, they ſtretch their purſes for him. 3. Hereby Miniſters avoid the reproach of preaching for Lucre.Hereby the calling of the Miniſtry becomes more honourable in the eyes of Men, when they ſee that it is not Mercenary, and that a Miniſter hath not ſet fees, as others have.5.The performance of this act is left to the liberality of the people,that they might have an opportunity of ſowing more plentifully to the Spirit, *Gal.*6. Even as men,when they would have more, they uſe to leave it to the liberty of the giver.6.It is free, that the duty might come under a more tranſcendent rule than that of meer Juſtice, tho' ſtill the act is to be regulated by Juſtice. Thus that Children ſhould maintain their Parents when poor, is a duty which nature and juſtice requires, and the relief and ſupplies ſhould be in proportion to their abilities, yet Juſtice ordinarily ſets not the rate, and proportion, becauſe the duty is alſo farther an act of Piety,and ſo left to the good nature and diſpoſition of the Perſon,1*Tim.*5.4. 7.In this duty you are yet to have a diſtinct view of Juſtice in your eye. You muſt pay it in a juſt proportion,not only to the neceſſities of your Officers, but ſuitably to the dignity of their place, and the greatneſs of their labour. Tho' you are free in communicating it, yet a law of Common Juſtice muſt run along in the diſtribution. For if it be due by rules of Juſtice, the proportion in diſtribution is to be regulated by Juſtice. For the proportion is Juſt as well as the thing. As the maintenance is due to the Miniſter, ſo you ought to give ſo much or ſo much, as by Rules of Juſtice his Office and Work are valuable : So that, what you ſhould give as to the proportion of it is not left to your wiſdom,or the diſcretion of your Spirits, but muſt go by a juſt Rule. A double maintenance therefore is due to Elders that labour in the word,on account of the honour of their place, as the Prieſts had more than the Levites, and the proportion ſtill muſt be with reſpect to the Labour, *Gal.*6.6. He ſpeakes of proportioning out what they gave to Teacher, as well as Paſtor, and to one Teacher as well as to another, by a Rule of juſtice. Thus, tho' Paul leſs needed maintenance than Peter, who was married, and the Apoſtle could, and did earn his living, yet, he ſays, he had as much power to exact the ſame ſtipend in Juſtice that Peter had, 1 Cor. 9. 4. 5. Paul's meaning is not that he would marry or purpoſe to ſhew that he had power to put the Church to more charges: But his intent is to ſhew that tho ſingle and unmarried he had power to require what might maintain a wife, for he had the ſame right to the thing, as Peter had. And ſuppoſe Paul could live without it, yet his right and claim to it was not leſſen'd thereby, for no Souldier goes to war at his own charges. His deſign then was not to tell them of his being in a ſingle condition, but to urge to them the dignity of his place, and to lay before them the merits of it, and to remind them of the good which he had done them, and what he had deſerv'd at their hands and to draw up an account of his labours, as a thing in juſtice, which they ought to reſpect in proportioning a maintenance accordingly, and to convince them, that if they did it for other ordinary Officers, they ought rather to do it for him, 1 Cor. 9. 11, 12. If others have this power, &c. So that he meaſures it by Juſtice; And tho' he had no wife, and ſo had not the ſame urgent neceſſities of a Family as others had, yet he had a power to require the Maintenance that was due to his Office and Work, and might exact the ſame which others did, whatever his condition was, 1 Cor. 9. 6. So that it is not only the neceſſities of the Miniſters condition that is the Rule by which his maintenance is to be meaſur'd, and proportion'd, but the Rule of Juſtice takes place here alſo as a Rule of proportion, and it is to be conſider'd what his Office, and labour deſerves. The meaſure of the maintenance is not therefore to be varyed by mens neceſſities, No, the Maintenance of the Miniſter is not thus to be determin'd by the wiſdom of the people, but they are to be regulated by a rule of Juſtice in this caſe, and the calling, the work, & the benefit are to be conſider'd by them, as theſe things are conſidered in all callings elſe. Let us take but the inſtance which the Apoſtle gives (1 Cor. 9. 7.) what Souldier ever was there, tho' he had a great eſtate, who would not require his pay, and when he ventures his life for the publick good, expect to live upon the publick charge. And the Apoſtle tells us it is but juſt that Miniſters ſhould live of the Goſpel, 1 Cor. 9. 14. They may if they pleaſe generouſly remit, and forego their right (as Paul did) and perhaps in ſome caſes it may be their duty to do it, but this their right is no more ſubjected to any Man's diſcretion to determine concerning it, than their Eſtate in the world (whether perſonal or real) is. For after that rate a Miniſter, who hath wordly means, might be oblig'd to give more than other men, and yet beſides to labour for nothing. But yet ſtill a Miniſter may, upon Evangelical ground and reaſons, forget his right as Paul did. Now, the proper way and means, of raiſing a due and competent maintenance for a Miniſter is next to be conſider'd, and I ſhall deliver my thoughts about it in few words.

1. There ought to be ſet means of a Competent maintainance eſtabliſhed by mutual Covenant and Agreement, that the Paſtor and the People may be mutually ingag'd And this will take place in a way of Juſtice.

2. There ought likewiſe to be an enlargment of his maintenance by free-will-offerings. This is a natural way, and ſince the Apoſtle urgeth this duty both from reaſons of Nature, and Juſtice (1 Cor. 9. 7. to 12.) why ſhould not both of them be obſerv'd? Both theſe ways of maintenance were appointed for the Levites, who, as they had Cities for their ſettled inheritance, and fixed Tithes, ſo they had free-will-offerings from the people. And indeed theſe two methods joyn'd together are advantagious to both parties, for as the firſt ſecures a certainty of Maintenance for the Miniſter, ſo the other makes him to have a dependance on the love and affections of the people, and as by the one, proviſion is made that the Miniſter may have no cauſe to complain; So by the other opportunity is given to the people of exerciſing their Graces, and of ſhewing their love, and thankfulneſs.

CHAP. V.

Whether the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper ought to be Adminiſtred on every Lord's Day.

Acts 2. 42. And they continued ſtedfaſtly in the Apoſtles Doctrine, and Fellowſhip, and in breaking of Bread, and in Prayers. Compared with Chapter 20. 7. And upon the firſt day of the week, when the Diſciples came together to break Bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow, and continued his Speech until mid-night.

I Will now but open the words ſo far as to give a hint to that Point which I mean to diſcourſe of out of them: Which is this; Whether the Lord's Supper be to be Adminiſtred every Lord's day: For which theſe places uſe to be alledged.

When Chriſt aſcended, he bid his Diſciples teach thoſe whom they converted, to do whatſoever he commanded them; Matth. 28. 20. Now this Book of the Acts records what practices the Apoſtles taught the Churches, and into what forms they ſet them. And therefore what we find the Churches to have practiſed, upon ordinary grounds, that we take for a command of Chriſt. Therefore is this preface on purpoſe made to this Book, Acts 1. 2. How that after his Reſurrection, Chriſt had given Commandments to his Apoſtles, on purpoſe to credit the Practices or Acts of theſe Apoſtles (as the Title is) as conformed to theſe Commandments. And in this 42. verſe of Chapter 2. you have the ſolemn ſtanding Worſhip which the firſt Church continued in, as a pattern to all that ſhould follow. Which ſtanding worſhip conſiſts of four Ordinances (which are together reckoned up no where but here (as all Church-Officers no where but Rom. 12.) As 1. Apoſtles Doctrine. 2. Fellowſhip. 3. Breaking of Bread. And 4. Prayers.) That by Apoſtles Doctrine is meant Preaching, all do agree; and that by Prayers are meant the publick Prayers (which 1 Tim. 2. The Apoſtles gives order for) not occaſional, but ſtanding; is not queſtioned: but only what is meant by κοινωνία (tranſlated Fellowſhip) and breaking of Bread is in Queſtion. For the clearing of this;

1. It is certain, that all the practices mentioned here, are ordinances; For three of them being ſo, it had been Heterogenal to mention a fourth thing with them, which was not ſo. And 2. They are Ordinances of a ſort; that is, of which for their continual practice, there is like reaſon: For it is ſaid, They all continued in them.

Now for a more particular Explication of theſe two words.

1. The word κοινωνία, Fellowſhip, refers not to Apoſtles more than κλάσις τοῦ ἄρτου Breaking of Bread doth, and therefore it is ill tranſlated Apoſtles Fellowſhip. I find the Sacrament called κοινωνία, Communion, 1 Cor: 10. 16. And Diſtrubution to poor Brethren is called κοινωνία alſo, or Communication; ſo ſome render it, 2 Cor. 9. 13. ἁπλότητι τῆς κοινωνίας, Liberality in Communicating.

2. We find giving to the poor, called Breaking of bread to the Hungry, Iſaiah 58. And the Sacrament alſo is ſo called, 1 Cor. 10. 16. The bread we break, &c. Now what muſt determine which is which? Surely the manner of the uſe of the phraſe. Now though the Lord's Supper be called Communion; yet it is cum hoc adjecto, ſtill with this addition, of the Body of Chriſt to diſtinguiſh it. But I find κοινωνία when only and alone uſed, as here you ſee it is, to be ſtill put for Diſtrubution, and for that alone; thus in three places, as, 2 Cor. 9. 13. For your liberal diſtribution unto them, Rom. 15. 26. κοινωνίαν τινα ποιήσασθαι to make a certain contribution, and Heb. 13. 16. To Communicate forget not. On the other ſide I find breaking of Bread (when ſimply and barely ſo expreſſed) put for the Sacrament (1 Cor. 10. 16.) but never uſed for giving to the poor, but cum adjecto, with an addition; as break thy bread to the hungry. Hence therefore κοινωνία (here tranſlated Fellowſhip) is certainly to be underſtood of diſtribution, and ſo to be tranſlated. And this fitly explains all: for then breaking of Bread is the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper: And if phraſes muſt determine it, the Syriack interpreter thus tranſlates it the Lord's Supper, and he beſt knew the uſe of the Phraſes: And ſo you have all the four ſtanding Ordinances in the Church enumrated together and no more; whereas elſe you muſt want one, as not mentioned.

Object. But the Phraſe, breaking of Bread, as ſimply ſpoken, is uſed for common eating together?

Anſw. It is True; but it is not ſo here; for that eating is not a Church-Ordinance, and all the reſt here, are; and where the Phraſe Breaking of Bread, ſimply taken, is uſed; it is not uſed for diſtribution to the Poor: and therefore even that breaking of bread, which is mentioned (verſe 46.) cannot be ſo underſtood of Diſtributing Bread to the Poor.

And if it be further ſaid, that their Love-Feaſts are there meant, and ſo here in this verſe, and ſo it may be taken ſtill in diſtinction from breaking of Bread to the poor; The Anſwer is.

1. That their Love-Feaſts were for poor and rich together, and taken up, and uſed as common ſigns of Chriſtian love, and therefore ſo called; and not in order or reſpect to the poor only or chiefly.

2. Their Love-Feaſts were no Church-Ordinance, and ſo not reckoned up here among Church-Ordinances. Chriſtians might privately feaſt, and providentially, as they met, eat together, as a ſign of love; as in the Primitive times they often did, but not in the way of an Ordinance, or a ſtanding Ordinance, as the breaking of bread here certainly is; When they came to make an Ordinance of their Love-Feaſts the Apoſtle rejects them, 1 Cor. 11. 22. Have you not houſes to eat and drink in? and, verſe 23. ; I have received no ſuch thing, and verſe 34. he infers ; If any Man hunger let him eat at home. And verſe 33. He calls the Lord's Supper eating together; When you come together to eat, tarry one for another. He ſpeaks of it as the only eating that was to be in a Church as a Church-Ordinance; and ſo excludes common eating to ſlack hunger, from being an Ordinance, bidding them in the next verſe to do it at home. And therefore, ſays he, (1 Cor. 10. 16.) The Bread which we break, is it not the Body of Chriſt? which is ſpoken by way of Eminency and Singularity τόν ἄρτον as being that Bread, and only that, which we break as a Church: as in like manner he had, in the eleventh Chapter, call'd the Lord's Supper eating together, namely as they were a Church. And therefore here, Acts 2. There is alſo an Article put, breaking τȣ͂ ἄρτȣ of that bread, ſo 1 Cor. 11. 26. Now then, come to Acts 20. 7. The breaking of Bread there is uſed in the ſame ſenſe, namely, of the Sacrament alſo;

1. Not of Alms; that is never called breaking of Bread, but with diſtinction [to the hungry, &c.]

2. Not of common eating; For that not being an Ordinance, no meeting on the Lord's day could be denominated from that; on which day, all Church meetings are for Ordinances only, as principally to hear the word. And to have ſay'd, the Diſciples met to break bread, meaning common bread, is all one as for us to ſay, the Church meets to Salute and ſee each other, when principally we meet to hear the word, &c.

Now then, breaking of bread being not here to be underſtood of Alms, nor of ordinary eating; it muſt needs be meant of the Sacrament: ſeeing there is no other breaking of Bread, eſpecially as an Ordinance of a Church aſſembly, ſpoken of in Scripture.

And 3. This is there ſpoken, to ſhew what their cuſtom was to do continually, ex more; and therefore it is all one, as if he had ſaid, they met every Lord's day. For,

1. It is ſpoken of as a ground of Paul's ſtay ſeven days, that he might preach to them, as knowing that they would meet on the Lord's day, for this occaſion, as they were wont.

2. It being cuſtomary to meet on that day for other Ordinances, as preaching the word, &c. (for ſo it was in Primitive times) he would rather have mentioned that for which Paul knew they were of neceſſity to meet than what was uſed but one Lord's day extraordinarily; if this had not been as cuſtomary an Ordinance on that day practiſed, as any other.

3. This is written, and mentioned, though but in an hint, to ſhew their practice, and ſo the Apoſtles Inſtitution; For they taught them to do whatever Chriſt Commanded. And this we ſee they did on that Day, and no other.

The Queſtion which I ſhall diſcuſs and handle upon occaſion of theſe words, is this ; Whether every Lord's Day, the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper is to be adminiſtred ? My method ſhall be ;

1. To prove by reaſon ; that there is ſomewhere an inſtitution for it to be found.

2. Further to enquire into theſe Scriptures , and ſee whether they do not hold it forth. But, Firſt let us ſee, what may be done by reaſon, in the point.

Before I come to thoſe aſſertions which I would by reaſon eſtabliſh ; I will, for Explication ſake, premiſe ſomething about the differing Rules and Ways that God hath ordered about the determining ſuch Circumſtances of his worſhip, as this is; the conſideration whereof will be uſeful to this and other like points.

It is agreed upon by all here, that no ſuch Circumſtance is to be determined by the meer will of any Man or Men ; and that God hath left no circumſtance of worſhip ſo to be determined : eſpecially not any ſo conducible to edification as this muſt needs be, How often the Lord's Supper is to be adminiſtred : And therefore the preſcriptions and laws of Church-Governours, from will and authority, or of a whole Church in determining ſuch Circumſtances, we reject ; as that for which the word gives no commiſſion, or allowance, namely, not in ſuch a manner to command a determination. And in that ſenſe only it is, that we ſay, no circumſtance of an ordinance is left unto man ; that is, not to Mens wills, or the Authority of others. Hence it is, that for all ſuch Circumſtances, we do enquire into other rules, either preſcribed in the word ; or the light of Nature, and right Reaſon from the word : and we find two ſorts of Rules given us to determine them by.

1. A direct word of Inſtitution, or Example, which we are obliged to follow; as in the Old Teſtament, to Sacrifice twice a day. This Circumſtance was an inſtitution. So for us to pray twice a day , I conceive, an inſtitution ; and this Circumſtance is ſet by God himſelf. Now all ſuch Rules do properly belong to the Second Commandment , wherein God tookupon him, to give us Rules , by way of Inſtitution, which are by Men unalterable.

2. The ſecond ſort of Rules to determine Circumſtances, of the times, &c. of an Ordinance, are ſuch as depend meerly upon occaſions and other circumſtances, according as the various conditions of Churches, and the cuſtoms of Places do require: which therefore for the particularity of them are undetermined by God, and left to the Wiſdom of every Church, to determine them as occaſions ſhall alter or vary ; yet ſtill, not by their meer will, but by other more general Rules given in the word, or the light of Nature , to order ſuch Circumſtances, in all that variety of occaſions, that ſhall happen, and fall out. As for example ; That this Congregation ſhould meet in the day time, is more for the good and benefit of it, than to meet in the Night : which yet for the Primitive Chriſtians in regard of the Circumſtance of Perſecution, might be more convenient : as haply, that Meeting , Acts 20. 6, 7, 8. when Paul preached ſo late, as he continued his Speech until mid-night) was, (as ſome think) in that reſpect.

Now the Scripture hath not determined the night of the Sabbath, for publick Aſſemblies, or the day-time, peremptorily : becauſe, according to variety of Circumſtances, Churches might meet on either, as their wiſdom ſhould judge beſt : yet ſo, as their wiſdom is to be guided by ſome general Rule of Nature, or of the word in determining this : ſuch as is that Rule, 1 Cor. 14. 26. Let all be done for Edification : that is, Let all be done with ſuch Circumſtances, as with which the Ordinances being accompanied, ſhall ſerve beſt to edifie the Church. Now as our caſe ſtands, the day-time ſeems beſt for our edification by the ordinances; becauſe our Spirits are more freſh in the day than in the night ; but to them whoſe meeting in the day coſts them their lives, and the loſs of Ordinances, and all ; though the night was, in other reſpects, inconvenient, yet, better then, than not all, or than in the day, wherein to have often met, would have been for deſtruction, not for edification.

So now for us, as to what hour of the day we ſhould meet : About nine a Clock is the beſt time, conſidering the time of preparation before, and the weakneſs of many, and the due times of repaſt and meales to come after : and that the Church ſhould not meet in the afternoon preſently after Meales, is the beſt alſo, for edification, to prevent dullneſs, or hurt by indigeſtion, &c. Now to theſe hours (as Circumſtances ſtand with us) we are determined, not by an unvariable inſtitution, but by a general ral Rule; Let all be done for the moſt edifying; which falls out with us to be theſe individual hours, which haply to an other Church would not: and ſo the determining it to this hour, is not wholy humane; for Men are bound to determine by Rules; yet not wholy or meerly Divine (as particularly pointing them out, as by an inſtitution other circumſtances are) but Divine in reſpect of a general Rule; and alſo humane, in reſpect of the particular application; Man's wiſdom being left to conſider theſe circumſtances,and ſo to apply theſeRules.

Now all ſuch Rules about ſuch circumſtances do belong to the third Commandment, which meerly takes order for the manner of worſhip, and the inward and outward Circumſtances of it: that all be done (in reſpect of ſuch Circumſtances) for the beſt advantage, ſo that God's Name be not taken in vain, in the leaſt degree. To give an inſtance or two in the ſame kind, one in an occaſional Ordinance; and an other in a continued:

1. For the time of Adminiſtration of Circumciſion, under the Old Law, which was an occaſional Ordinance; there were two Rules given by inſtitution:

1. How oft it was to be adminiſtred; but once, and never to be re-iterated.

2. There was the fixing alſo of a particular day, whereon it was to be adminiſtred, namely, the eigth day. But now,

3. If the Query were made, on what hour of the eighth day; that was left to Rules of the third Commandment which preſcribe what was moſt convenient in reſpect of outward circumſtances: It was left to ſuch *R*ules as the third Commandment preſcribes, and left to wiſdom to apply.

So for Preaching the word, which is a continual Ordinance; the Circumſtance of time was fixed by inſtitution, that it ſhould be uſed every Sabbath day, Acts 15. 26. But how much, or how often on that day; That the particular occaſion was to decide: as there were more or fewer men of gifts to ſpeak and prophecy: or as the need of the hearers variouſly required.

Now that you may yet further underſtand,with what difference theſe two commands proceed, in the differing rules which they give, about ſuch Circumſtances of Time; I will, by way of Further Explication, give you it, in theſe two particulars.

1. Concerning all ſuch rules which come under the ſecond head, and appertain to the third Command; Take this general Rule for certain, about them, to the end you may diſcern them from inſtitutions, which belong to the ſecond Command. (I ſpeak not now of ſuch circumſtances, as the light of Nature dictates, which alſo belong to this third Command) The Rule is this;

That only ſuch Circumſtances of the times of worſhip, which would neceſſarily vary through new and differing occaſions, or various and ſeveral ſorts of outward circumſtances which Mens conditions are caſt into; and ſo were neceſſarily (as occaſion ſhould fall out) to be left to Churches by wiſdom, and conſideration of ſuch circumſtances to determine;that theſe,and theſe only,are left to be determined by thoſe general Rules belonging to the third Command.

Thus, 1. The time of all occaſional Ordinances is (for ought I know) left unto Men to determine by thoſe general Rules. And there is no Rule given for them under the Goſpel, but this, when an occaſion calls for them, that is, their ſeaſon, and that individual time which is the fitteſt in all circumſtances, for the Ordinance to be adminiſtred in. Thus, when to have a Baptiſm, and to fix the time: it is not now, as in the Old Law, fixed to the eighth day, which was in a Type; but is left to the Church to determine. Only, it is not to be deferred longer than Circumſtances do in wiſdom require. Thus,in Admonition and excommunication, what the fitteſt ſeaſon is, doth depend on Circumſtances; and the Church is to judge.

2. This alſo is the Rule, for ſet Ordinances themſelves, ſo far as they are occaſional, and ſetting aſide their neceſſary fixed Station. The Word Preached is a ſet Ordinance, inſtituted for every Lord's day: yet, if the Queſtion be, How much, How long, or How often on the day, or How often on the week beſides! No Rule can determine it, but as occaſion, and need of the hearers require and call for, and their vacancy will permit. So that ſuch times for any Ordinances do only come under thoſe general Rules, which are capable of new and freſh occaſions, that ſhall call for them, and make them ſeaſonable at one time, more than at another; and are not capable of a ſet Rule.

I add unto this, this other Diſtinction alſo, For explication.

That whereas Regula generaliſſima, the moſt general Rule and Command belonging to the third Commandment, about the ordering ſuch various Circumſtances, is, that famous Apoſtolical Canon, 1 Cor. 14. 26. Let all things be done to edifying; and whereas thoſe other Rules whereby God hath by an inſtitution fixed ſet times for worſhip, in the ſecond or the fourth Command, are ſaid to be for edification alſo: Yet between that edification which flows from God's inſtitution of a Circumſtance, and that which follows upon a prudent ordering outward Circumſtances, there is an anſwerable broad difference. The edification which follows upon God's inſtitution of a Circumſtance, is ſuch as is through God's appointment intrinſecally conjunct with, and inſeparable from the Ordinance it ſelf, and immediately accompanying it, from which we are to expect a ſpecial bleſſing, together with the bleſſing of the Ordinance; and ſo it affords ſuch a kind of edification as the Ordinance it ſelf does, in its meaſure, being as directly ſanctified to edifie, as the Ordinance it ſelf. But that edification which follows upon the right ordering of outward Circumſtances, which are left to Men to determine by thoſe general Rules; is but an edification extrinſecal to the Ordinance, and but ſecondary and ſubſerving to it. Theſe Circumſtances being ſo to be ordered, that the Ordinance may give forth that edification which God hath appointed it unto, with the moſt advantage in all outward reſpects. And this is that edification which the Apoſtle means, when he ſays, Let all be done to edifying.

Hence by the way of Corrolary, I would have it conſidered, whether this Circumſtance, to adminiſter the Supper every Lord's day, be a circumſtance of that Nature and rank, that if there be not a warrant from practice and inſtitution by God for it; yet any Church may at all appoint, or determine it for a ſtanding Rule, for edification ſake. The reaſon of my Query herein is this; becauſe this is a Circumſtance which for the Adminiſtration of other Ordinances God once made an inſtitution of: And therefore for the Church to determine or appoint their Circumſtances for this Ordinance without an inſtitution, were to make an image of thoſe inſtitutions of God. That God made an inſtitution of this Circumſtance in other Ordinances, is evident in the Sacrifices every Sabbath day; and in Reading and Preaching the Law (Acts Chapter 15.) every Sabbath day: and under the Goſpel, in the laying up for the neceſſities of the Saints, the firſt day of the week, 1 Cor. 16. 2. But now to make an image or the likeneſs of God's inſtitution, is that which is forbidden in the ſecond Command; and the prohibition of it is indeed, the full ſcope, and ſpeaks the utmoſt extent of that Command; and holds true in all inſtitutions, from the greateſt to the leaſt. We may not make Sacraments like to his; nor days like to his (which was Jeroboams ſin, 1 Kings 12. 32.) nor a Temple like his, which the Samaritants did; nor ſet our Poſts by his (Ezek. 43. 8.) nor make the like Oil, that he ordained for Aaron. And as it holds in greater, ſo in leſſer inſtitutions of Circumſtances as well; for they differ but in degrees; and when God hath once ſtampt his inſtitution on a thing, about his Worſhip, Man is not to ſtamp his; for it were falſe Coinage, which is againſt God's prerogative, as it is unlawful to Coin Farthings as well as Shillings: ſo electively to make Circumſtances, in worſhip every way like to thoſe which God doth, or hath made, as well as to make inſtitutions like to his greater Ordinances. Any thing, an inſtitution once ſet upon it, is for ever after, Royal, and not to be imitated ſelectively in worſhip, by Man, or by his inſtitution. We are not, I ſay, to inſtitute any thing formally like to God's inſtitution, nor for the ſame holy end, for which God inſtituted any Circumſtance; and therefore we muſt appoint any Ceremonies to teach, or ſignifie, or to put us in mind of our Duty; becauſe God ordained the Phylacteries, that they might remember the Commandments to do them, Numb. 15. 39, 40. So therefore, if God once ordained this Circumſtance in other Ordinances, for edification ſake, for the Church to appoint the ſame Circumſtance for this Ordinance for Edification ſake, is to make the ſame Image formally, which God once made.

Anſw. This being a Circumſtance upon which an inſtitution is paſt for edification ſake, in other ordinances; it is thereby made uncapable of being ſubjected to the Rules of the third Command; which gives general Rules to men, to order meer outward Circumſtances. Now to ſubject it to ſuch Rules, were to debaſe it. It is of an higher rank, and thereby made free (as I may ſo ſpeak) of the Rules by which Men determine, God only by inſtitution of his own, can now meddle with it. As a Noble Man is of an higher rank, and ſo not ſubject to impriſonment for Debts, &c. except by a Warrant from the King himſelf.

Object. But you will Object, and ſay; To have a Sacrament (being a good and holy Ordinance of God in it ſelf) adminiſtred every Lord's Day is more for edification; for the oftner the more edifying.

Anſw. 1. If the ground of this Opinion be, that becauſe the oftner an Ordinance is adminiſtred, the more may be the edification; I Anſwer, there may be a deceit in that; for there may be an often, which may be too much. So in private prayer one may pray too often in reſpect of other occaſions. But the goodneſs of this Circumſtance, how often, depends upon a due ſeaſon, which either an inſtitution deſigns, or ſpecial Circumſtances and occaſions: which indeed if they fall out to be every Lord's day; then I yield: but to do it ſetly, electively, and as a ſtanding Rule; That I Queſtion. So as, the edification that muſt anſwer to this ſo often receiving muſt either be from an inſtitution, or ſpecial Circumſtance and occaſion leading to it, and calling for it; which varying (as they uſe to do) cannot infallibly be fixt to every Lord's day as beſt. However,

2. That edification which would ariſe from ſuch outward Circumſtances and occaſions, to make moſt and beſt for the edification of the Church, to have it every Lord's day, is but a Circumſtantial edification, and not ſuch an edification as flows from, and accompanies this circumſtance, when it is an inſtitution: And ſo it is an edification that comes in upon this ground, that becauſe the Ordinance is good, therefore the oftner adminiſtred, the more edification.

3. If this Circumſtance, to have this Ordinance every Lord's Day, had been an Inſtitution of God, for more edification ſake, he beſt knowing how often any Ordinance would be moſt edifying that way, would have appointed it himſelf, if it would be more for edification in ſuch a reſpect. For he takes as much care for the edification of his Church, in one ordinance, as in another; elſe he ſhould have been defective in his care in ſome things, or have took unneceſſary care in others.

Object. 2. But it may fall out in reſpect of meer outward Circumſtances and occaſions that ſome Church ſhould have the Sacrament every Lord's day.

I Anſwer 1. That then it is not an image of God's inſtitution; for if occaſions call for an ordinance every Lord's day (as ſuppoſe a Baptiſm to be adminiſtred) yet ſtill becauſe this is not made a ſet ſtanding rule, whither there be occaſion or no (which is the Obligation of a ſet inſtitution) therefore ſuch a Providence, that an Ordinance ſhould come to be adminiſtred, is not an image of God's inſtitution; which is only when in a ſtanding way men ſo appoint it.

2. That Rule depending upon varying Circumſtances, can be made and kept but from Lord's to Lord's day; but we cannot make a ſtanding Rule and Canon of it. This aſſertion or conſideration paſt would have this Circumſtance in the adminiſtration of an Ordinance every Lord's day, to be ſuch, as is not determinable by humane Prudence, or appointment. But I come unto two other Aſſertions (which I more mainly intend) which do concern this Ordinance, and the Queſtion more nearly.

1. The firſt Aſſertion is, that the nature, and ſort, and kind of this Ordinance of the Lord's Supper, is ſuch, as there muſt of neceſſity be an inſtitution, either expreſly, or by neceſſary conſequence, ſettled by God, and left for the time of its adminiſtration.

The 2. Aſſertion is, that according to the way, and preſcriptions of the New Teſtament, that time can be no other than every Lord's day.

1. The firſt of theſe two I ſhall prove in general; that there is, and muſt be, an inſtitution for the time of its adminiſtration, and then I ſhall prove that time to be every Lord's day.

I begin with the 1. That for the time of the adminiſtration of this Ordinance of the Lord's Supper, namely, how often it ſhould be; there muſt neceſſarily be an inſtitution ſomewhere in Scripture left, and to be found; or one, at leaſt, that may be drawn from Scripture, by good Conſequence (for it is an ordinance of that Nature and ſort, as that Reaſon tells us, there muſt be an inſtitution left and found in Scripture, about ſome ſet time for its adminiſtring) This I would evince by ſuch Reaſon, as if there were as yet no Scriptures that we knew of, to be found for it, and to fix our thoughts; yet they might ſet us all a work to find out one. Now this Aſſertion I prove by theſe 3 main Propoſitions laid together.

1. That there are, and ever were, two ſorts, and but two ſorts of Ordinances appointed by God in the Church: and they are either continual, or occaſional. This propoſition contains two things in it.

1. That there are Ordinances both Occaſional, and Continual.

2. That there are, and ever were, but theſe two ſorts.

1. I prove that are two ſuch kind of Ordinances. I will here firſt explain the Terms.

1. By Occaſional Ordinances, I mean ſuch,as though they are in themſelves to continue for ever in the Church, upon continual occaſions; yet in reſpect of their uſe, they depend upon a particular occaſion in Providence, to call for the practice of them. Some Ordinances were ordained for a ſingle occaſion extraordinary; as the extraordinary Sacrament of Manna in the Wilderneſs, and the Cloud, and the Baptizing in the Sea, &c. mentioned 1 Cor. 10. 11. but ſuch occaſional Ordinances I mean not; but only ſuch as are for their uſe in the Church, or their Eſſence in the Church, continual; yet ſtill the particular, preciſe Time when they ſhall be Adminiſtred is occaſional. Thus in Philoſophy, we diſtinguiſh of Eſſence and Exiſtence; and ſay of ſeveral kinds or ſpecies of Creatures, that their Eſſence is always in Rerum Natura. So Roſes (and many other Fruits and Plants) being a ſort or kind of Creatures, that have a ſtation and rank among the number of others, that help to the making up of the World's Perfection; we,in that reſpect ſay, The Eſſence of a Roſe always is, Nature having ordained ſuch a Creature always to belong unto the World, to make up the perfection of it: But yet ſo, as we ſay, that the Exiſtence, or individual putting forth of ſuch Flowers, is but in ſome one ſpecial ſeaſon of the Year, and not always. Thus in like manner, ſome Ordinances always belong unto a Church, as parts of its Perfections and Priviledges;and ſo the Inſtitution of them is for ever and for all times; and yet their Uſe and Exiſtence is meerly occaſional, even as Providence ſhall put them forth, and call them to ſtand up in their ſeaſon. Such was Circumciſion of old, which, though it was an Ordinance for ever, and ſo, continual in the Eſſence and Being of it; yet the Uſe thereof was to be but as Children were born, which made the Exiſtence meerly occaſional; ſo, offering Perſonal Sacrifices,or performing a Vow, were as occaſion fell out; as upon occaſion of Uncleanneſs, &c. And ſo Baptiſm is now, the uſe which depends upon new occaſions. So likewiſe are Excommunication, and Admonition, which are Church Cenſures, and ſo likewiſe Admiſſion of Members; all which are to be uſed, but as fit matter in Providence comes to be preſented.

2. When I ſay Occaſional, the meaning is not, that they are ordained for occaſions Negative or Permiſſive (as I may ſo call them) that is, when the occaſions of the Church will permit, and ſo a fit ſpare time falls out for an Ordinance: But when in this Diſtinction and Oppoſition to continual Ordinances, we uſe the word Occaſional, the meaning is intended of ſuch as have a poſitive, peculiar, and ſpecial Occaſion, directly and properly calling for them; which Occaſion is Affirmative. As when a Child is born in the Church; this is an Affirmative Occaſion for Baptiſm, and the like.

Now having explained what Occaſional Ordinances are; I come to explain that other ſort of Ordinances, which are Continual. Such were the Publick Sacrifices of the Temple, which were called a Continual Sacrifice, (Jer. 33. 18.) and *Ezek.*46. 14.) becauſe offered Morning and Evening in a ſet and ſtanding courſe, not at all waiting upon occaſions. And it is not only ſaid there to be a Perpetual Ordinance, that is, which was to laſt and endure in the Church (and ſuch, even Occaſional Ordinances may be ſtiled) but it is beſides called a Continual Ordinance, becauſe appointed to be every Morning by a ſet Ordinance of courſe; ſo verſe 14. and 15. it is ſaid to be every Morning for a continual Burnt-Offering. So Prayer now is a Continual Ordinance, pray continually, which is not meant of continual occaſions; but that a continual courſe of Prayer, or a ſet courſe every day (I do not ſay at ſet hours) is of God's Inſtitution, as Paul ſays, (2 Tim. 1. 3.) that he ſerved God from his Fore-fathers; that is, according to the manner of the godly of old, who anſwerably to the continual Sacrifice in the Temple, offered up where-ever they were, either in Private, or in their Families, the Sacrifice of Prayer, twice a day, and were bound to do ſo; elſe the Practice had not been general, nor binding unto Paul. But, ſays he to Timothy, I have thee in remembrance in my Prayers day and night, that is, twice a day, every Morning and Evening. Thus alſo, the very entring into the Holy of Holies once a year, becauſe it was of courſe and ſetly, is ſaid to be done continually, Heb. 10. 1. And ſo the Paſſover, though but once a year, yet becauſe of ſet courſe, it may be called continual. Thus all Church-Ordinances which are of ſet courſe in the Church, and depend not upon occaſions, may be called Continual Ordinances, though not every week-day to be adminiſtred. Such Publick Prayer is by all confeſſed to be; and ſuch I take the Word Preached to be alſo. And ſo this Diſtinction of Ordinances Occaſional and Continual, if it be not in Terminis, in the ſame Tearms ſet forth in the Scripture, as to both the Parts of it, yet for the one Part it is: For the Term Continual is expreſſed in the places before cited, and that, in oppoſition to Occaſional; for there being two ſorts of Sacrifices; ſome ordained by Inſtitution to be at ſet times; others as occaſion of Sin and Uncleanneſs fell out; thoſe which were ſet were called Continual, in a way of diſtinction from that other (as alſo thoſe four Ordinances here, in this, Acts 2. 42.) and ſo muſt have another branch to anſwer to them, which is this of Occaſional. However, if the Scripture uſeth not the very Terms, yet the Diſtinction ariſeth from the thing it ſelf, namely, from the different uſe and end of Ordinances, which are neceſſarily ſuch: Only I add this Caution, that ſolemn ſet Ordinances, though by Divine Appointment confined to a time, may yet occaſionally be commanded at other times beſides; and then upon all ſuch occaſions, they become occaſional for that time. Thus, though the Sacrifices Publick were a ſet Ordinance; yet Sacrifice was an Occaſional Ordinance alſo: For when a Man had Perſonally ſinned, he was to bring an Offering to the Prieſt, &c. And ſo is the Word Preached, and Prayer now, which though ſet of courſe on the Lord's Day, yet as occaſion is, they may be uſed on the week days alſo. And this is hinted to prevent a miſtake, leaſt upon this Doctrine any ſhould think, the obligation to adminiſter this ordinance on the Lord's day to be excluſive, as if upon no other day beſides the Church may have this Sacrament, or the word. For this celebration of the Sacrament on the Lord's day is ſo to be underſtood, as that it may likewiſe be adminiſtred upon any day beſides, though that day be the more proper ſeaſon of it, and no day to be choſen rather than it. The Goſpel's priviledge is in this more large then that of the Law: ſome Ordinances, then, they could not have, but upon certain ſet times, and times were ſo appointed, as all times beſides were excluded. The Paſſover could not be at other times eaten (but only in caſe of uncleanneſs, or a journey) but at that ſet time appointed, the fourteenth day of the firſt Month. So likewiſe Circumciſion was by inſtitution confined to the eighth day; and they might not do it before, nor defer it till after that preciſe time. And ſo many other ſolemn Ordinances are appropriated to their Solemn Feaſts. But it is not ſo now under the Goſpel, when though God hath appointed a ſpecial time for publick worſhip, yet any worſhip may be performed at any time, and as in every place we may lift up pure hands and celebrate Church-Aſſemblies, ſo at any time. As the word is to be Preached in ſeaſon and out of ſeaſon, ſo the Sacrament may be adminiſtred in ſeaſon and out of ſeaſon. The Primitive Churches are therefore ſuppoſed in that firſt Church of the Jews (whoſe very calling for a while at firſt, was only to hold forth all ordinances of the Goſpel) to have met (as for the Place) κατ' οἶκον, at Home; That is, in private Houſes: for it is ſpoken in diſtinction from their meetings, in the Temple: So for the time of their Meetings καθ' ἡμέραν every day (Acts 2. 46.) and ſo to have celebrated this Sacrament every day even as Acts 5. 41. they are ſaid to preach every day in the Temple.

This being premiſed, and proved; I now come to prove the other part of the propoſition in hand, That there are but theſe two kinds of ordinances in the Church, occaſional and continual. This I might prove, by an enumeration of all ordinances in the Old Teſtament; which may all be reduced to theſe two heads. For as for vows and free-will offerings (which ſeem moſt free in Man's liberty) they were occaſional; and ſuch, as when a juſt occaſion fell out, that called for them, they were not to be omitted; nor yet were they made, and offered, but when a juſt occaſion invited them. And, indeed, it were a wonder, if there ſhould be a middle kind of Vagous Ordinances, which were indefinitely inſtituted and at randome; not fixed in the main ground of their inſtitution, unto proper Occaſions, or to ſet times by inſtitution deſigned under the New-Teſtament. Let any man inſtance in any other ſuch, and it were ſtrange this Ordinance ſhould be ſuch alone. Indeed, Reaſon tells us, that there is not, and cannot be any ſuch middle Ordinance; for if there be, the main ground of its inſtitution muſt be, to ſerve a vacancy from all other occaſions of humane buſineſs and ordinances; and to be in uſe when ever ſuch a vacancy ſhould happen, that is, (as I explained in my diſtinction) that they would be inſtituted for Negative occaſions, as not being affixed to any ſet time of courſe, as continual ordinances are; nor to ſerve a ſpecial occaſion that calls for it upon one day more than another: but for ſuch a time it muſt be, when there is an opportune vacancy or empty ſpace of time, that may fall out free from all other occaſions, and all other ordinances, both which in this ſuppoſition are to be ſerved firſt. Now I inſtance in this, as a ſuppoſed middle between the two other: for I cannot ſee how the wit of Man can invent any other. I grant, indeed, that ſuch vacancys of time may fall out, and alſo, that thoſe Ordinances which God hath already, by a primary intent, inſtituted for ſet times, and by Rule affixed to them, he hath, as an over-plus, and an additional edification of his Church, commanded to be uſed at all ſuch times of vacancy from humane occaſions and refreſhments. For example; he hath appointed the preaching of the word a ſet ordinance for every Lord's day (as was ſaid) and ſo it is a continual ordinance of courſe; He hath alſo appointed this word to be diſperſed and preached upon all ſpecial affirmative occaſions that ſhould require it; As a word in ſeaſon to the weary, &c. And theſe being the main foundations and gronnds of its inſtitution; he hath enlarged the uſe of it unto all ſuch Negative occaſions, when all other occaſions will permit, and there happens a vacant time to hear Sermons Preached, and that when no ſpecial occaſion or time inſtituted doth require it. But this was but a ſecondary enlarged ground of this Ordinance, for which alone it ſhould never have been inſtituted, nor any elſe. This (as I take it) may be the moſt probable meaning of that text, Preach the word in ſeaſon, either inſtituted by God, as the Lord's day, or occaſional, as ſpecial need requires; and not only ſo, but out of ſeaſon, in a meer vacancy.

Now to prove that there is no ſuch Ordinance inſtituted meerly for Negative occaſions, or vacancy from other hindrances, I urge thoſe inconveniences and Reaſons againſt it.

1. Such an ordinance would depend for its being and exiſtance, upon too many uncertainties. But now as a Father would not venture any Child to an utter uncertain breeding; So, neither can I believe that God hath done ſo by any of his Ordinances. Now ſee the ſeveral uncertainties in this caſe.

1. There is not an abſolute neceſſity that ſuch an ordinance ſhould ever be adminiſtred at all; for it might be ſuppoſed never to come to have any turn or vacancy ſpare from all other occaſions for it to be adminiſtred in: for it is not of abſolute certainty that there ſhould be ſuch a vacancy, or at leaſt, not often; as this Ordinance of the Sacrament (if this ſhould be ſaid to be ſuch) is commanded to be adminiſtred.

2. Beſides this, if ſuch times ſhould fall out, yet the Celebration of the Ordinance would depend too much upon Man's arbitr'ment, and that for its only exiſtence and being; which muſt be at ſuch times, not only when a whole Church ſhall have no impediments by reaſon of other occaſions: but when they ſhall judge ſo, and call upon one another for it: and how apt our Nature is, to find out impediments, or at leaſt in ſuch Caſes to forget the Ordinances, God well knew. And this our obnoxiouſneſs to forget our Duty makes it yet more uncertain; for how apt is ſuch an ordinance to be forgotten, which hath no poſitive occaſion to call for it, nor any fixt inſtituted time to ſay to us, now it ought to be adminiſtred?

It is one reaſon, and it is a good one, which our Divines give, why it was neceſſary that the Lord's day, ſhould be fixed by God to a certain day, even to the ſeventh, and with a Memento in the Command; becauſe if it had been left to Men to judge when their vacancy would have permitted it, the Publick worſhip of God would ſoon have permitted it, the publick worſhip of God would ſoon have fallen to the ground. And by the like reaſon any particular Ordinance would have been eaſily forgotten and diſcontiuned, as many have been, that yet were fixed, as the feaſt of Tabernacles was (Nehem. 8. 17.) from Joſhua's time till Nehemiah's. You may make an Obſervation, how great the neglective forgetfulneſs of Man would be of any ſuch Ordinance, by the difference which was put in the adminiſtration of this ordinance, and the obſervation of the Lord's day (which are the Ordinances we have laſt inſtanced in) by the Papiſts, who alone bore the face of the Church many hundred years. As for the Lord's day, becauſe they thought the inſtitution thereof every week, to be Apoſtolical (being ſounder in the point, then many of our Divines) therefore they have tranſmitted the obſervation of it every week, down unto our times: But as for the time of Celebrating the Lord's Supper, becauſe they thought it to be left indefinite, they therefore kept not to it, but thought once a year enough for the receiving of it by the people; ſo rarely would men uſe an Ordinance which they thought was left to their liberty.

Yea 3*dly*. This Ordinance of the Lord's Supper would be made yet more uncertain; ſeeing there is an allowance to fill up ſuch vacancies with other Ordinances that are ſettled to fixed Times by Inſtitution: As to have the Word Preached, or Prayer, when there is a vacancy; and ſo that vacancy might be as well filled up with them, as with this; and ſo it might ſtill wait for a place, as that Man did at the Pool, and another Ordinance might ſtep in before it: And if we might ſuppoſe any other Ordinances to be left unto Man's ſole liberty, yet this leaſt of all; for it being inſtituted to remember us of Chriſt's Death, ſurely it ſelf hath either ſome ſpecial Occaſion or fixt Inſtitution, to put us in mind of it.

2*d Reaſ.* As ſuch an Ordinance would be left to too great uncertainties, for its exiſtence; ſo it would be caſt too far below all other Ordinances; for not having a Brother's ſettled Portion allotted it to live upon, it muſt wait upon all other Ordinances, till they were all ſerved, and live upon their leavings of Time; which is not beſeeming nor compatible with the honour of an Ordinance. This muſt neceſſarily follow; for Ordinances fixed in a ſet way to the Lord's Day, muſt be ſerved every Lord's Day; for they are of the Foundation, and challenge it originally. And Occaſional Ordinances that fall out, which have a proper eſpecial occaſion to call for them, muſt be alſo firſt performed. And certainly God hath not debaſed any Ordinances ſo low, as thus to attend all others; eſpecially not ſo great an Ordinance, as this of the Lord's Supper is.

3*dly*. It ſtands with Reaſon, that every Ordinance might have its proper root for it to grow up upon, and ſo come to have its exiſtence; it was meet that it ſhould have a ſtation, and ſeaſon poſitive, as the main fundamental ground of its Inſtitution, that ſo it might exiſt of it ſelf, and be able to challenge it ſelf a Place that cannot be denied it. And thus Continued Ordinances have ſuch a ſeaſon, by God's primary Inſtitution of them; which having an Exiſtence given them at fixt Times, God in a ſecondary intention enlarged the uſe of them to Negative occaſions (as I term them) as he hath that of Publick Prayer, and the Preaching of the Word; which are continual Ordinances (in their proper root) for every Lord's Day; which yet God hath further commanded to be ingrafted upon occaſions; but ſtill ſo, as, this is the root they naturally firſt grow upon: and the Lord's day and every Lord's day is their Seat, and their Station by Inſtitution; and that ſet time their inheritance, which they may make claim to. Thus Occaſional Ordinances likewiſe have a proper root peculiar to them, like Flowers, that, though they put not forth continually, yet have their ſeaſon which neceſſarily gives them exiſtence; and when thir ſeaſon is, they may challenge it (but whether their ſeaſon be neceſſarily and electively only the Lord's day, that I ſhall afterwards diſcuſſe;) ſurely God hath took as good order, and made no worſe proviſion, for the exiſtence of his Creatures of the new World (his Ordinances) than for the Creatures of the old, Now every ſpecies or kind of Creature in the old world hath a root; a ſeaſon, either continual and fixed, or ſpecial and proper. God made no Vagabond Creatures, then only to have a place and to exiſt, when and where there ſhould be a Vacuum, a void emptineſs of other Creatures. And ſurely God hath acted by the like meaſure in the new World, wherein the Ordinances are the Creatures; and either ſome proper time and poſitive occaſion, or elſe ſome fixed time all the year long, is their root of being.

II. The ſecond main Propoſition is this; That for all Ordinances, which are not Occaſional, but ſtanding and continual, there muſt neceſſarily be a ſet time by Inſtitution appointed for them.

This Propoſition is a neceſſary Corollary of the former, and follows upon thoſe particulars, which I have brought to confirm the former.

Reaſ. 1. For every Ordinance that hath an Eſſence, Conſtitution, or being in the Church, muſt alſo have ſome exiſtence, and therefore a time. All Creatures of the Old world have two things allotted them;

1. A Conſtituted Eſſence, by which they are, and differ from other Creatures: As the Eſſence of a Man is, that he is reaſonable; and a Beaſt, that it hath a Senſitive being.

2. An Exiſtence, by which ſome individuals of each kind do exiſt, and ſtand forth in the world, at ſuch or ſuch times and ſeaſons. And there is no Eſſence nor kind of Being, but is appointed to have an exiſtence at ſome time or other, in the world: For elſe that being might be ordained in vain, and have no being, and ſo it had as good continue

tinue nothing ſtill. Therefore Solomon ſays, Eccleſiaſtes 3. 1. That there is a time to every thing, and a time to every purpoſe under the Sun; As to every purpoſe of Man's heart, which is a thing moſt contingent; So to every kind of thing or being, Natural and Artificial, to all ſorts of things under the Sun (for he inſtanceth in things Natural, Artificial and Voluntary) and he ſays, there is a ſet time, ſo the word ſignifies, Tempus determinatum. Time is a neceſſary Circumſtance of Being, and therefore was Created when other things were, and is ordained to be, when things are ordained; ſo as nothing was in God's purpoſe, that ſhould have a being, but hath a time for it alſo, which alſo, as Solomon ſays there, Gives it a beauty and a comlineſs. Now as it was with Creatures of the Old World, ſo is it with thoſe of the New World, and amongſt thoſe, with Ordinances which are parts of it. If God hath given to any of them an Eſſence and Being to be Ordinances, you muſt ſuppoſe them to have a time appointed them, to come forth into exiſtence. As no Creature could come to have an Eſſence, a Rank among Creatures, but it muſt have a time to exiſt, ſo, nor Ordinances could ever come to have had an inſtituted being given them, but in Relation to an exiſtence, and a proper time for them to flouriſh in. Now ſuch Ordinances which are not occaſional, and ſo have no ſpecial occaſions allotted in providence to call for their exiſtence, that they may ſtand forth and call for a place, and be beautiful in that their ſeaſon, they muſt neceſſarily have an inſtituted time, a ſet time appointed them. And if providence and occaſion do not ſet out this time, then neceſſarily Inſtitution muſt.

2. The very purport or meaning of this Name of diſtinction given it, when it is called a Continual Ordinance (as in Scripture that phraſe is uſed) doth neceſſarily intimate thus much; that, that diſtinction is given it from its having a ſet time, fixt by Inſtitution for its exiſtence. The word, Continual, as it doth reſpect time in all Men's apprehenſions; ſo in the Scripture acception, it reſpects a ſet, fixed, appointed time, that in the Courſe of time comes about again and again continually, whether it be every day, or every Month, or every year. That was called Continual (as was ſaid before) not only which is done at all times, or every day, but of ſet courſe; ſo (2 Sam. 9. 7.) Mephiboſheth is ſaid to ſit at David's Table continually, that is, not as a ſtranger, coming in upon occaſion, but at the ſet times of Meals. And ſo, Pray continually in the New Teſtament, is taken, not ſimply, for praying always, or upon all occaſions, or continuing in prayer with fervency only; but to pray ſettly, Morning and Evening (as I ſhewed out of 2 Tim. 1. 3.) even as it is called the Continual Sacrifice, becauſe it came about every day by Inſtitution, and if any were ſeldomer, yet if Ordinances, they had a ſet time for them. Thus the High Prieſts going into the Holy of Holies, becauſe it came about every year once, at a ſet inſtituted time, is ſaid to be continually, Heb. 10. 1. Thoſe ſacrifices which they offered year by year Continually. As therefore we ſay, that time is concreated with all things, ſo I may ſay of ſuch Ordinances, that their time is Inſtituted together with their Inſtitution, and by the ſame Authority.

And 3*dly*. If any Continual Ordinance had not a Time fixed for it, obliging the Conſcience by Inſtitution, that might call upon Men Now to practiſe it, and challenge an intereſt in ſome time allotted it; it were caſt below an Occaſional Ordinance, and made of an inferiour nature to it, in its Inſtitution: For it would not have ſo much as a proper occaſion to call for it, as thoſe Occaſional Ordinances have.

4*thly*. This Propoſition is backt with this, that in the Old Teſtament all Ordinances, not occaſional, had a fixed Time by Inſtitution. It is true, that ſome occaſional ones alſo, had a fixt Time when once an occaſion required them; as Circumciſion the Eight Day, but it was becauſe of ſome Typicalneſs annexed to it. But now under the Goſpel, all Occaſional Ordinances are left to their proper ſeaſons, as Providence calls for them, and ſo not affixed, as it became the Goſpel wherein ſuch Types ceaſe. But yet Continual Ordinances are to be affixed to a ſet Time by Inſtitution; elſe Chriſt were not ſo compleat in his Inſtitutions, as Moſes, but ſhould leave things to Man's will, which being as corrupt and negligent now, as before, needed the fixing of ſuch Ordinances to a ſet Time, as much as then.

III. The third Propoſition which I lay down is this; That this Ordinance of the Lord's Supper, is a continual ſtanding Ordinance: It is of that Rank, and can be of no other;

And the Reaſon thereof (which to me is undeniable) is this; becauſe that it is not an Occaſional Ordinance, that is, it is not an Ordinance, that hath, or can have any poſitive, ſpecial, proper, peculiar occaſion to call for it, and require it one day or time more than another: And therefore it muſt be a Continual Ordinance; and ſo by conſequence, a ſet, and fixed Ordinance to a Time by Inſtitution; as the ſecond Propoſition declared. Now the Reaſon is founded upon this, that there is no Rank of Middle Ordinances, but every Ordinance muſt (as I ſhewed) be either the one or the other: And therefore to prove that it is not occaſional, taking occaſional in that ſenſe before explained, is enough to prove that it is continual.

1. It is not occaſional in its firſt fundamental Inſtitution. Indeed ſome of the Popiſh Divines would put it into occaſional ſeaſons; for they allowing a Private Communion at home, when Men are ſick, and alſo allowing in Publick, that the Church ſhould receive not always neceſſarily together, but that every day when Maſs is ſaid, any one or two (though no more who have a mind to Communicate be preſent) may Receive, if they pleaſe. For (ſay they) ſome perſons may have more ſpecial need of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, than others (in reſpect of Tentations) to be comforted by it: And ſome have a more ſpecial mind to that Ordinance, and are more peculiarly affected unto it, than unto any other; and ſo may occaſionally be called to it. They do hereby evidently ſhew, that they reckon this Ordinance to be occaſional. But we know no ſuch Divinity; for we ſay,

1. This Ordinance, of all others, is an Act of the whole Church It is the only proper Badge of the Church's Communion; and in this reſpect Church-Members are called One Bread, as well as One Body (1 Cor. 10. 17.) and therefore they are to take it together, when their Meeting hath the full number of all that can come, and this rather than any other Ordinance is in this manner to be celebrated. And therefore (1 Cor. 11. 33.) in this caſe, and for this Ordinance, if any come late, others are to ſtay for them; Tarry one for another, which in other Ordinances they are not ſo ſtrictly tyed unto. And if thus it be the Ordinance of the whole Church; then variety of ſuch occaſions, as Perſonal Tentations, &c. cannot come to be any ſuch peculiar, ſpecial occaſion to the Adminiſtring of it to one Man more than another; for it is alike the Act of the whole.

2. Indeed, and in truth, there can never be invented, or ſuppoſed, any ſuch proper, ſpecial occaſion, requiring this Ordinance to be adminiſtred upon this Lord's day, or that, rather than upon another, which might, more eſpecially call upon the Church for the practice of it. As for other Ordinances, there are ſuch proper occaſions, thus prayer for the Sick, Baptizings, and Excommunication: and even the propheſying of private Members is but an Occaſional Ordinance, as God ſtirs up their hearts, and reveals ſomething to them; as the Apoſtle ſpeaks. There is nothing in the ordinance it ſelf to vary it, or make it more ſeaſonable at one time than at another, but it is fitted to all believers alike, whether grown Chriſtians or young. It is Milk and Strong Meat too; For it is the Common Chriſt of all: neither was it inſtituted in any ſuch more ſpecial manner for Tentations, or victory over Luſts; not peculiarly or ſpecially; ſo as that you can ſay, it is good for one thing more than another: or that it hath a ſpecial vertue for ſomething, which one Chriſtian needs more than another. But it is an ordained Καθόλικον, compoſed of Qualities to work upon all Tempers, and in all ſeaſons upon all conſtitutions of Souls. If Faith be never ſo weak, it ſtrengthens it; if ſtrong, a man is as much neceſſitated to take it, to grow in ſtrength. Even as Church-Fellowſhip the cauſe of ordinances, is alike neceſſary for all, in all ſeaſons, ſo is this. Yea it is ſo uniform in its nature and working, that all Churches in the world taken together, have as much need of it as one Church, and one Church as all and no more.

3. Neither can there be any variation in reſpect of any Circumſtance a Church can be in at one time, which it is not in at another. There may fall out impediments; as if the not having an Officer to adminiſter it (but ſo there may be alſo of ſuch Ordinances as are affixed to the Lord's day) but there can be no proper occaſions or circumſtances, that may vary it, ſo as to have it adminiſtred one day, and not another. No Man or Church can ſay, we cannot prepare to receive every Lord's day; nor that any occaſions on the week days do unfit us: For they are bound to be in ſuch a Frame as always to be prepared: and if they be not prepared according to the preparation of the ſanctuary; yet they ought not to omit it, as the Iſraelites did not the Paſſover. Yea, let me add this; it is leſs ſubject to variation by occaſions, than the Word, or Publick Prayers of the Church, or laying up for the Neceſſities of others are; for which you have Inſtitutions for every Lord's Day. For the Matter of the Word, the Subject of our Sermons do vary with occaſions: And our Sermons are longer or ſhorter, and they are compoſed for Comfort one day, and for Reproof another day; for as your needs are, ſo they vary; yea, ſometimes as a particular Member's need is they vary. A word in ſeaſon is to be ſpoken to the weary. But here in the Lord's Supper there is no ſuch variation. The Word, like the Moon, though it be a ſtanding Ordinance in Heaven, yet appears in ſeveral ſhapes, and ſo the Word too: But this, as the Sun, is uniform; for the Perſon of Chriſt (the Sun of Righteouſneſs) Crucified, is wholly and entirely the Matter of it; and as he is the ſame to morrow, and to day, and yeſterday, ſo is this Ordinance. So the Duty of Alms varies: As God hath bleſt a Man; ſo let him lay up, as the Church, or other Churches have need. But it is not ſo with this Ordinance: And therefore this is capable of a more uniform Rule, and fixed Obligation, and Inſtitution, than any other.

I might in the laſt place ſhew, that it is a Continual Ordinance, from this Acts 2.42. where all Ordinances Continual are reckoned up, which are four in number: And this, in the Firſt Church, as the Meaſure of ſolemn ſet Worſhip for ever: But I leave that now, intending to argue it out in Reaſons.

Object. But there is this Objection grounded on that ſpeech of the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 11. 26. As oft as you eat, you ſhew forth, &c. The Apoſtle ſeems there to ſpeak of it, but as an Indefinite Ordinance, and not as a Continual; in that he ſays, Toties quoties, ſo oft as.

Anſw. 1. His ſcope there is not at all to ſpeak of the Time of this Supper; but only to inform them of the high end and nature and intention of this Ordinance: That when they took it, they might know what they did (as we uſe to ſay) and what they were about. You know they ſlighted it, and took it in vain, and diſcerned not the Lord's body. He therefore minds them of the Inſtitution, that they might know what they did. Know what you do (ſays he) for as oft as you receive this, you ſhew forth the Lord's Death. It is a manner of Speech, uſed to ſhew what is the ſcope of an action that is cuſtomary; when we would inſinuate the great danger of ſome Action frequent, yet out of ignorance ſlighted. Thus, if we hear one ignorantly and ordinarily ſwear, as not knowing what it is to take an Oath; we uſe to ſay, Do you know what you do in ſo doing? As often as you ſwear, you give your Soul to the Devil. So here (ſays the Apoſtle) as oft as you receive unworthily, you eat your own damnation. And becauſe they were to receive frequently by Chriſt's Inſtitution, therefore he minds them the more of it, that they might know what it was to receive. As often as you receive (ſays he) you ſhew forth Chriſt's Death, and therefore tells them, that if they receive unworthily, They eat Damnation to themſelves.

2. This phraſe of Speech was to ſhew the unvarying, conſtant, uniform End, and intent of this Sacrament; which is conſtantly at all times to ſhew forth Chriſt's Death. So oft as you do it, it is ſtill for this principal end. The word ſometimes ſhews one thing, ſometimes another, but this conſtantly preacheth Chriſt's Death. As oft as you receive, you ſhew forth Chriſt's Death.

The third General Aſſertion is as the Concluſion of the two former, and inferred from them both; and it is this, That,

This being a continual Ordinance (as hath been ſhewed in the firſt propoſition) and continual Ordinances neceſſarily requiring a time Inſtituted, or fixt ſomewhere (as was ſhewn in the ſecond) The fixed time therefore for every Ordinance neither is, nor can be other, than the Lord's day, according to the ordinary Courſe and Tenour of the New Teſtament, which imports that every Lord's day is the Inſtituted time for them.

I ſhall demonſtrate this by Reaſon firſt; and then examine Scriptures afterwards. It is proved by Reaſon thus; or by theſe ſteps.

1. Under the Goſpel you have no other Inſtituted Time ſet and fixed, for any Ordinance, but the Lord's Day. I do not ſay, you are to have no other times for Ordinances, but you have no other times fixed by Inſtitution. Occaſional times there may, and ought to be upon other days, by vertue of the Command, that bids us ſerve the ſeaſon, &c. (Rom. 12.) and take the fitteſt occaſion for every Work and Ordinance Occaſional. But you have no other Inſtituted Time appointed fixedly by God, beſides the Lord's Day: Which indeed is one of the Differences between the Times of the Law and of the Goſpel. Under the Law, God made ſpecial Sabbaths by Inſtitution fixed to ſet Days, for ſpecial Ordinances to be adminiſtred upon, viz. for the Paſſover, and for the Firſt Fruits: But now, there is no Inſtituted Time except this. Now then, if this Ordinance, being not occaſional (as was ſaid) muſt therefore have an Inſtituted Time appointed it by God, ſet, and fixed; this Time can be no other than the Lord's Day: For there is no other Time appointed by Inſtitution, under the Goſpel, except the Lord's Day.

But it may be ſaid, that this gains but only thus much, that the Lord's Day is the Time Inſtituted for it: And ſo alſo it may be ſaid of Occaſional Ordinances, that the Lord's Day is an Inſtituted Time for them too; in as much as it is ſuch for all Ordinances in common.

Therefore 2. I go a ſtep further, and ſay, That Continual Ordinances, and among them the Lord's Supper, are not only to have a Time that is Inſtituted, for them to be adminiſtred upon; but further, there muſt be an Inſtitution to appoint a Time for them, even a fixt, determined Time ſet apart for them by vertue of an Inſtitution, which may determine the Conſcience to them, and by vertue of a Command call for them. And ſo it is not enough to ſay, That the Lord's Day is the Time Inſtituted indeterminately, indefinitely and at random for this Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, as for all other Ordinances it is: But when it is ſaid, that the Lord's Day is Inſtituted for it, the ſenſe muſt neceſſarily be, that it is the Time fixedly and determinately ſet by Inſtitution, for this Ordinance: And ſo it differs from the relation that this Inſtituted Time hath unto Ordinances occaſional. It may be ſaid, that the Lord's Day is the only Time, that we find Inſtituted, wherein they, or any Ordinance may be adminiſtred upon: But for other occaſional Times in the Week Days, though there be a general Rule that will oblige the Conſcience to them, as occaſions are; yet they cannot be called Inſtituted Times. And therefore in that ſenſe it may be truly ſaid, that when Occaſional Ordinances are to be adminiſtred, the Lord's Day is the only Inſtituted Time of the New Teſtament for them. But ſomething more muſt be ſaid of Continual Ordinances; namely, that there is a Time Inſtituted that calls for them, and obligeth the Conſcience by an Inſtitution to them. And ſo theſe two Ordinances differ in their Intereſt in this Day. That Occaſional Ordinances have, by vertue of the Inſtitution of this Day, but a remote, indefinite, undetermined Intereſt therein; and for their determinate Exiſtence on this or that Lord's Day, there muſt come over and above, ſome ſpecial occaſion, that calls for it, on this or that week, more than on another; only the Lord's Day preſents it ſelf ſtill, as a Time bleſſed, and Inſtituted for ſuch Ordinances in common and at random. But if this Ordinance of the Lord's Supper be a Continual Ordinance (as it is) and This the only Time we find Inſtituted; then this Ordinance muſt have by an Inſtitution ſome fixed determinate Intereſt in it; and that by a defining by appointment, what Lord's Days it muſt be adminiſtred upon. And the Reaſon, for this, is out of the former grounds evident; of which now, I urge only this, that otherwiſe this Ordinance ſhould have no determinate Exiſtence allotted it; but were in that reſpect, caſt below all Occaſional Ordinances. For if its Intereſt in the Lord's Day be thus unlimited, and but in a common relation; that it is only a Time Inſtituted for it, no otherwiſe than it is for all Ordinances in general, and as a common Hall is for all Commers: And withal, that it hath no ſpecial ſet occaſion to call for it, and require its Exiſtence; then it is ſtill left in far worſe caſe and hazard for exiſting, than Occaſional Ordinances are: For they (as Providence gives occaſions) do call for Time, and oblige the Conſcience unto a ſet Time for them: But this would be left like an Individuum Vagum, that has nothing to ſhew for it, why it ſhould challenge a place or room in this Inſtituted Time, more than Vagrant Perſons have in Common Town-houſes. Yea, ſeeing other Ordinances can ſtill challenge ſome peculiar, determinate Intereſt, either by Occaſion, or Inſtitution; this might ever be extruded, having nothing but an indefinite, common, Vagrant Intereſt to ſhew for it ſelf. Therefore certainly, if the Lord's Day be the only Time Inſtituted under the New Teſtament; then muſt be found an Inſtitution to determine and fix on what Lord's Day this is to be adminiſtred. And this, not to be left to the wide World for its ſubſiſting and exiſtence ; but ſuch, as by Law, or inheritance, it may call for, as its Portion.

Now 3. Therefore add to this then, That if there muſt be found an inſtitution for it on ſet Lord's days (they being the only time Inſtituted) then either the Inſtitution ſets apart, every Lord's day, or ſome ſpecial Lord's days (which the word ſets out and appoints for it, rather than others) I would ſee a Warrant for, however, ſome Churches perſume to ſingle out ſome ſpecial days; becauſe their Congregations be too vaſt (and ſo not according to Rule, which is, that Churches ſhould conſiſt of no more, than can meet together in one place) to adminiſter it to all, every Lord's day. And others by preferring one Lord's day before another, as Eaſter day, Whitſonday, &c. do appoint it to be only or ſpecially then adminiſtred : Yet there is no word for it, nor Reaſon by conſequence from the word.

Now, if there be no warrant of inſtitution for ſpecial Lord's days ; then neceſſarily, the Inſtitution muſt fall upon every Lord's day.

Yea, 4. Let it be but granted in general, that there is no other Rule to determine this Inſtitution, but this common Maxim ; That all Ordinances both Continual and Occaſional are ordained for the Lord's day ; and that the Lord's day is the only Inſtituted time for all Ordinances in this common general way : let that be all that the word ſays for it : ſo as no ſpecial Charter or Intereſt be pro duced, by Inſtitution ; yet this very common Charter will carry it ; and this general, indefinite inſtitution will ſerve its turn. For when each Ordinance ſhall come to claim its right, and particular allotment, and portion, in theſe Lord's days ; It muſt neceſſarily be ſet forth according to the Nature and kind of each Ordinance. And then, look how Occaſional Ordinances will juſtly put in, and call for an Occaſional allotment for their adminiſtration, as occaſion is offered, and requires ; ſo continual Ordinances will challenge a continual ſet allowance, every Lord's day. For they muſt have maintenance and ſubſiſtence according to their Rank and Quality, and end of being ordained. The common Law and Dictate of Reaſon would, and muſt thus ſet out their Portions. Continual Ordinances muſt be continually on the Lord's day ; and what is that, but to be every Lord's day ? We ſay in the Deciſion of another point of Controverſy, and difficulty, between the Arminiaus and Us : about the exiſtence of things Contingent, and the Voluntary Acts of Man's will ; That in reſpect of God's decree, all things do exiſt neceſſarily, and by his determinate Council ; yet in reſpect of ſecond cauſes, and their coming forth into actual exiſting or being, we ſay, that they all exiſt according to their kind. Which is, that Free agents, as, namely, Man's will ſhould in reſpect of its own motion work freely : And Contingent or caſual things that fall out by chance, ſhould in reſpect of ſecond cauſes fall out Contingently, according to their kind : But neceſſary and natural actions, as, namely, the motion of the Sun, ſhould fall out neceſſarily and conſtantly, according to its kind, and yet all act in their ſeveral kinds, by the determinate Counſel of God, that rules all their cauſes according to their kinds. Thus we illuſtrate alſo the ſeveral exiſtences of Ordinances, for their time and ſeaſon, by ſaying, That they are varied according to their ſeveral Natures and Kinds. God hath took order in his word, for the exiſtence of them all : but for Occaſional Ordinances, he hath not given ſet Rules of Inſtitution for the time of their exiſtence, to bring them forth in : for that had not been according to their kind, but, indeed, clean contrary to it : For they being in their Inſtitution intended for occaſions, accordingly muſt exiſt, but as occaſions are. Yet by a neceſſary command, when occaſion is offered ; Therefore as neceſſarily (when ſuch occaſions fall out) as continual Ordinances to be adminiſtred. But Ordinances of Continual and not Occaſional uſe he hath ordained to exiſt, according to their kind, Continually, and not Occaſionally ; and therefore a Rule of Inſtitution muſt determine their exiſtence. And he having declared that the Lord's day is the only time that is inſtituted by him for all Ordinances : Suppoſe he had given no other Rule ; yet Occaſional Odinances are to exiſt occaſionally on that day : that is, as occaſion calls for any of them ; But continual Ordinances are to exiſt, and be adminiſtred continually on that day ; and what is that, but that every Lord's day they ſhould be adminiſtred !

I will now in the laſt place, as the Coronis and Concluſion of all, and for the Confirmation of both theſe Aſſertions, add only this, which ſhall concern both, that it ſtands with the greateſt Reaſon, both that there ſhould be an Inſtituted Time for continual ſtanding Ordinances : and alſo that there ſhould be continual Ordinances purpoſely appointed for that inſtituted time ; and as much Reaſon for the one, as for the other. So as there is a proper, peculiar mutual Relation, between ſuch Ordinances, and ſuch an inſtituted time, they are mutually ordained for each other ; theſe Ordinances for that time, and that time for theſe Ordinances. It ſtands with the greateſt Reaſon that may be.

1. That God ſhould inſtitute continual ſtanding Ordinances, for his Church to meet together, to celebrate ; and ſo to conſtitute his publick viſible worſhip ; Beſides ſuch Ordinances as ſhould be for occaſions, that yet uncertainly would fall out. For it became him, who is the great God, the ever-living ſtanding God of the World, who upholds all continually, by a conſtant hand of power and wiſdom ; to have a ſtanding ſet worſhip, whereby he ſhould be ſet up, and acknowledged in the World ; and not be like the Gods of the Heathen, nor the Saints of the Papiſts, who were Gods for occaſions, and are Saints for ſpecial occaſions ; and as they had Sacrifices, ſo theſe have Prayers, upon particular occaſions. But the ſtanding God muſt have ſtanding Ordinances. It was not fit for God the great King, to ſtay and wait upon occaſions, for all the publick worſhip he was to have; which might have fallen out, or perhaps not have fallen out. No, it had been too too little for him.

And 2. That he ſhould inſtitute and appoint a ſet and ſolemn Time for ſuch Continual Ordinances, out of his own will ; did become him alſo ; and was as neceſſary as the former ; For otherwiſe (beſides other Reaſons proper to that Argument) he had waited upon a greater uncertainty for the celebration of ſuch Ordinances, than that which doth attend upon Ordinances Occaſional, even on Mens wills and their occaſions and pretences to put off ſuch worſhip; For occaſions ſtill as they had riſen, would have called for ſuch ordinances as were occaſional.

But if God himſelf does not ſet a time, and fix it, there would be nothing to determine and call for ordinances, ſo as to oblige the Conſcience. And ſo, ſuch ordinances, in ſtead of being the ſtanding, continual ordinances of his worſhip, ſhould have become the moſt uncertain, and (through Man's Corruption) the ſeldomeſt adminiſtred of all other. And indeed, fixedly to appoint, how oft they ſhould be adminiſtred, and when, is that which makes them to be continual ordinances, and the worſhip of God to be ſolemn and ſtanding in the world. And the determination of the Circumſtance of time, how oft, and on what day, was a matter of more moment, and more intrinſecally conjunct with the worſhip of God, than the deſignation of a particular place. For though a place be as neceſſary as a time ; yet from a ſet time appointed, doth ariſe a ſolemnity of worſhip : and it is as Royal a property and attribute of God's worſhip, as any other ; and ſerves to ſet it out, and greaten it. And the iteration of a time in a ſet courſe thus or thus, adds to the worſhip a greatneſs, both in Multiplication of it, that it is ſo oft ; and alſo a ſolemnity and a reſtraint upon Men; and ſo bears an impreſs of God's Authority ; But thus it is not in the deſignation of a ſet place. Therefore, often in Scripture when there is an inſtitution of a ſet day for an Ordinance, or mention of ſuch a day ; it is called a ſolemn Aſſembly, as the Prophet calls the new Moon's Feaſts and Sabbaths that were ſet, The Solemnities of the Houſe of Iſrael, Ezek. 45. 17. and 46. 11. And (Levit. 23. 36.) the eighth day of the Feaſt of Tabernacles is Tranſlated a Solemn Aſſembly ; which accordingly is by Chriſt called the great day of the Feaſt, John 7. 37. Solemn they were, by being ſet, and thereby greatned. And every ſuch day had its ſet Ordinances by inſtitution appointed to fill up the worſhip of the day, and (as the Phraſe is, verſe 37. of Lev. 23.) God ſpeaking unto Moſes concerning the Ordinances to be upon ſuch Feaſts, ſays, that they muſt perform every thing upon his day. For every ſuch ſet time had its ſet Offerings and Ordinances; and the days were appointed for them, and they for the days. And therefore a ſtanding day muſt have ſtanding Ordinances, that have a proper referrence to the day, and the day to them ; they being made for the day, and the day for them. And this difference for God's inſtituting a ſet time for worſhip, under the Goſpel, rather than a ſet place ; They who are againſt the Inſtitution of the Sabbath, have not conſidered ; when they argue, that there is like Reaſon of Place and Time, between which, is this Relation to worſhip, there is a broad and manifeſt difference.

Now then, if under the Goſpel it was meet there ſhould be Continual Ordinances for a ſtanding Worſhip ; that God might ſtill be ſure of being worſhipt (whatever occaſions were) and that there ſhould be a ſet Inſtituted Time in theſe Ordinances :

Then marry theſe two together, as being made one for another; theſe holy things, for this holy Day; ſtanding continual Ordinances, for this ſet, and ſtanding Day, according to the proportion of that Rule, out of Leviticus, Every thing upon his Day; Opus Diei in ſuo Die; the Day and the Ordinance thereof being mutually made for each other. And thus a ſolemn and ſtanding Worſhip ſhall be kept up in the World, under the Goſpel, as well as under the Law, which alſo was propheſied of (Ezek. 46. 13, 14, 15.) That there ſhould be a continual Worſhip now, as there had been a continual Sacrifice then. For there Ezekiel propheſies of the Worſhip of the Goſpel, and that, under the Type and Notion of the continual Sacrifices and Sabbaths.

Uſe 1. See the gracious Proviſion that God hath made in the World for his Worſhip, and alſo for to feed his Church.

1. He being a great King, for his own glory reſerves a ſtanding Revenue of Glory to come in by Worſhip of Men, to himſelf, as it became him, beſides that which comes in by occaſions. You know, Princes have Crown-Lands, which bring in a ſtanding Rent, that cannot be ſold, or alienated (in a Legal way) and they have Cuſtoms and Tributes, which come in other ways; but the other are their Royalty. So God hath ſtanding Ordinances, as Crown-Lands, to give him a ſet Revenue of Old Rents, which muſt never be left unimproved; as well as he has occaſional Cuſtoms from other Ordinances.

2. See here the gracious Proviſion made for the Church; the Family and Houſhold of God. Here is a conſtant Proviſion, of no leſs than four Ordinances, the Word, Prayer, Communication, and the Lord's Supper. We are not like to ſtarve then. God hath kept to his own Rule, to provide for his Family. As good Houſe keepers have ſome conſtant proviſion of ſtore, as Corn, Beef, and the like; beſides all occaſional Dainties, that, like Fowl and Fiſh, come in to their Tables; ſo God hath laid up all ſpiritual proviſions for us: And to be ſure you have Chriſt himſelf for one ſtanding Diſh continually ſerved up to you, as ſome Rarity uſeth to be ſerved up, again, and again, and goes round at laſt. A Diſh that fills all, and ſerves all Taſts (as they ſay Manna did) which is Milk to Babes, and to grown Men ſtrong Meat; all in all, and unto all. Many things in a Sermon thou underſtandeſt not, and haply, not many Sermons; or if thou doeſt, yet findeſt not thy Portion in them; but here, to be ſure, thou maiſt. Of Sermons, ſome are for comfort ſome to inform, and ſome to excite; but here in the Sacrament, is all thou canſt expect. Chriſt is here Light, and Wiſdom, and Comfort, and all to thee; he is here, an Eye to the Blind, a Foot to the Lame; yea, every thing, to every one.

Uſe 3. Hath God himſelf inſtituted both a Time, and alſo ſtanding Ordinances for that Time, to keep up a conſtant Worſhip? what arrogancy is it then in ſuch Church-Governours (whether Popiſh, or Reformed) as aſſume this power to themſelves? ſaying, that Chriſt hath inſtituted no ſet Day for his Worſhip, but has left it unto them; it becoming the Liberty of the Goſpel, not to be ſubject to Days and Times, as under the Old Law: And that God hath not defined out what ſet Times ſhould be for the Lord's Supper; and ſo it falls under their Juriſdiction to appoint it; and they do all this, to enlarge their power. I will never believe that God would truſt Officers with ſettling ſuch Circumſtances of Worſhip, as he truſted not his own High Prieſt with, under the Law, but ſettled them himſelf: No, God would have never have left matters of ſo great importance, at uncertainties: He would never have left even the Revenues of his Crown-Lands to thoſe Landlords, of whom many would have the Vineyard to be theirs. And the fruit of their aſſuming this power, you may ſee in the Lord's Supper; which is abſolutely by them commanded to be received at ſome certain times of the Year, no oftner neceſſary to be received; which is their poor Allowance for that Ordinance. And if God had left the Time of all Worſhip to their appointment, and not more clearly fixt it, it would have come to the ſame paſs in proceſs of Time; and a Sabbath once a Month would have been well, which haply might have been but once a Year. And yet all this was for the Churches Liberty; to free them from God's Yoke, and to bring the Conſciences of Men into a worſe Bondage of their own. As if God had made Chriſtians free now, from the like Inſtitution of a Sabbath to that of the Jews of old, and which himſelf then enjoyned; to leave room to Men, and their Power, to determine the very ſame. Thus they exclude God, that themſelves may Rule. But bleſſed be thy Name, O God! that tho' other Lords beſides thee have Ruled over Us, and would appoint us when to have Sabbaths, and Sacraments; yet thou haſt wrought all our works for us: Thy ſelf haſt appointed our Works, and Times of ſerving Thee: Thy Service is perfect Freedom, but theirs is Bondage, which thou in mercy haſt freed us from.

That you may clearly ſee the goodneſs of God in it, I will add this, that I find the Papiſts themſelves, and the beſt of their School, acknowledge, That the Lord's Supper being a Sacrament given, often to be adminiſtred; there muſt neceſſarily be a defining by ſome Divine Authority, how many times at leaſt, we are to receive it, elſe, ſays Vaſques, the Affirmative Precept binding no Man ſo to any preciſe Time to receive this Sacrament; but that he might omit it, a Man might forbear to receive it, all his Life-time, (as well as any time) without ſin. The like ſaith Suarez. Therefore they ſay, that Chriſt indeed left it indefinite; becauſe he left power in the Church, to fix a ſet Time how often; which the Pope by Divine Authority (ſay they) hath done; which if he had not, this Precept, if indefinitely given, would not have neceſſarily obliged a Man all his Life-time. And therefore they ſay, it is a ſin not to Receive once a Year, becauſe the Pope (in whom is Divine Authority) hath ſo fixt it; but not oftner to Receive is no ſin. But now we, if we were left thus indefinitely (whoſe Conſciences cannot acknowledge any ſuch Power in the Church) were left in a miſerable uncertainty, how oft, at leaſt, we muſt Receive or we ſin. We have no help in this caſe, but the Word it ſelf to decide it. And this is neceſſary. For, as we ſay of a Church, that the ſet Number, how many it ſhould conſiſt of, cannot be determined; yet there muſt ad minimum, be two or three gathered together in God's Name (as it is ſet down, Matth. 18.) or elſe it is no Church; one Saint alone not ſufficing to make up a Church: So I ſay of this Sacrament; though How often at moſt it may be adminiſtred, cannot be determined (for it may be adminiſtred every day, as it was in the Primitive Times) yet how oft at leaſt it muſt be adminiſtred, was to be determined ſo, to ſet bounds unto Man's neglect, and fix the Inſtitution.

Uſe 4. If the Lord's Day be thus primarily appointed for theſe Ordinances, and they for it; you ſee then the Errour in appointing any other day electively for the Lord's Supper; as Chriſtmas-Day, &c. Beſides their miſſing of that Bleſſing which attends the Inſtituted Day of this Ordinance, they furthermore ſet up Days like God's, and prefer them to his; and yet thereby do afford this evident Beam of Light to us, that ſuch an Ordinance honours a Day; for to that end was the Sacrament appointed by them to be on thoſe Days celebrated; and ſo does this Ordinance, and the like, honour the Sabbath, which is ſanctified by them.

CHAP. VI.

Some Caſes concerning the Time of the Adminiſtration of Ordinances Reſolv'd.

UPON what hath been hitherto treated of concerning the Adminiſtration of the Lord's Supper every Lord's day and the grounds thereof, there is a juſt occaſion, or perhaps a neceſſity of Propounding and of Anſwering ſome Queries about other Ordinances. Some Caſes of difficulty are to be diſcuſſed, and which are indeed the greateſt difficulties and knots in this Queſtion.

1. It is to be conſidered What intereſt this Ordinance of the Lords Supper hath in the Lord's day comparatively to other Ordinances? and whether by inſtitution this Ordinance is to be adminiſtred, whatever be done about others?

And 2. If all have an intereſt alſo, then if the Caſe ſhould be that the time and ſtate of the Congregation cannot permit that all ſhould be adminiſtred, it is to be conſidered which of them ſhould rather be cut ſhort or give way?

To Reſolve theſe Caſes; Firſt in General, to prevent miſtakes, I premiſe theſe two propoſitions.

1. That there is no ſuch inſtitution of any Ordinance, that all other Ordinances ſhould give way to it, or that by inſtitution this or that of neceſſity you muſt have, whatever become of others. 'Tis true, indeed, there is a general Ordinance that Sanctifies all Ordinances, as every Creature is ſanctified by Prayer; as Paul to Timothy ſpeaks. We are to pray afore the Adminiſtration of every Ordinance as occaſion is; But ſuch prayers came in but as appendixes and handmaids waiting and attending upon thoſe Ordinances. They come to have a room not upon their own Title or Intereſt primarily and ex ſe, of themſelves by a ſpecial proper inſtitution that gives them this ſubſiſtence; but as adjuncts and attendants of thoſe Ordinances, that when any of them is to be adminiſtred, then prayer neceſſarily muſt be before to Sanctifie it. But this is but a dependent ſecundary Title and Intereſt that ſuch prayers come to have in the vertue of thoſe other Ordinances; as where the Lady goes, the Gentleman-Uſher goes alſo, but for her ſake only. Thus although Prayers go before, yet in the right of that Ordinance that follows.

whatever

But otherwiſe take theſe kind of publique ſervices (which you have here, Acts 2.42. and which are commanded, 1 Tim. 2. 1.) as they make up an Ordinance inſtituted as diſtinct from all the reſt and that ſtands alone and is a Subſtantive Ordinance. And ſo know that this Ordinance ſo taken is not of that abſolute ſingular tranſcendent inſtitution, that this muſt be, whatever be done with the reſt. They are all ſecond Commandment Inſtitutions, and muſt have alike their turn. They are Children all of one Father and of one Rank; The Eldeſt, which is prayer, is not enobled above the reſt, that it muſt have a Subſiſtence, whatever becomes of the Younger Brethren.

2. The Intereſt, which by Inſtitution any Ordinance hath is not ſuch but that in Caſes that may fall out, any of them may give way to another; or all of them may give way to one. For beſides the neceſſity of the Inſtitution, there may be a Superadded neceſſity by Circumſtances, that either now a particular Ordinance muſt be adminiſtred, or it cannot at all, or not to that full purpoſe be adminiſtred as is meet, and ſo God's name would be taken in vain. So it may fall out in the Admiſſion of, or excommunication of a Member. And ſo it may ſeem to have fallen out in that caſe, Acts 20. That Paul preacht out the time of the Lord's day and adminiſtred the Sacrament at night when the Sabbath was ended.

For as he was an extraordinary Officer, ſo therefore his preaching was more than an ordinary Ordinance. It had a Superadded power of infallibility went with it. And though it was ſtill but an Ordinance of the 2d. command; yet it was an Ordinance extraordinary and which they could enjoy but once; and at that once receive a foundation to build their Faith upon, and raiſe other Sermons upon that foundation all their lives. Yea, and it is to be conſidered that they could ſeldom enjoy him in that way of God's Inſtitution, for their Office was to go up and down. And it is to be conſidered too that he was in the heat of Preaching, and though he broke off in a caſe of abſolute neceſſity to reſtore a man to life, yet he would not break off for another ordinary Ordinance, for that work as in his hand it was performed was greater.

And ſo that place (wherein he ſays, I was not ſent to baptize; but to preach) is to be underſtood, for his preaching was an Apoſtles, his baptizing was but as an act of another man, the one was as an extraordinary Ordinance in his hand, the other was but as ordinary; yet it doth not follow from hence that ordinary preaching is to be preferr'd to baptizing.

Now there may (I ſuppoſe) fall out Caſes, wherein there may a circumſtanial neceſſity fall out ſuperadded beſides that of ſimple Inſtitution; and then an Ordinance that hath place meerly by Inſtitution may give way; as Ordinances Inſtituted do to works of neceſſity, as well as mercy. And there may be a neceſſity of mercy come to be annexed to the Adminiſtration of an Ordinance by ſome ſpecial Circumſtances; and then an Ordinance that hath but the meer neceſſity of an Inſtitution, muſt needs give way, as it doth to other works of neceſſity, but ſtill not by vertue of any tranſcendent ſingular inſtitution.

The Rule of no Inſtitution is ſuch, but an impediment may come in; and no Ordinance is ſo inſtituted but it may give way to another.

But to come nearer to the Caſe, the queſtion may either be made of this Ordinance in Compariſon with the Continual Ordinanes, Prayer, Preaching, &c.

Or, 2. The Queſtion may be of Occaſional Ordinances as Baptiſm Admiſſions, &c.

1. If the Queſtion be limited to Continual Ordinances, which of them hath more Intereſt?

I Anſwer, They have, by Inſtitution, Intereſt alike: But yet ſo as one may have in Order the priority afore the other; As, Let firſt of all Prayers, theſe publique prayers be made, &c. 1 Tim. 2. 1. He ſpeaks of Ordinary Church-meetings, as appears throughout that Chapter; So that prayer hath the firſt place, by inſtitution. And then the preaching of the word ſeems to challenge the next place, and the Adminiſtration of the Lord's Supper the laſt; But whether after all other, or no, I yet know not.

2. Some Ordinances may for the meet Adminiſtration of them require more time, or elſe they are lamely Adminſtred. So preaching may be oftner and require more time. I obſerve the phraſe uſed, Acts 20. 11. When Paul had talked, a long while, as we tranſlate it, but in the Greek it is ἐφ' ἱκανὸν. When he had ſaid what was fit throughly to inſtruct them in what their neceſſities required; when he had ſaid enough.

It is certain that there is time enough for all ſtanding ordinances and continual ordinances upon this day: and ſo as none of them will take up time ſo as to cauſe one to give way to another; and their Intereſt by Inſtitution is alike.

But 2. The Queſtion will moſt fall upon occaſional ordinances, & if ſo ſtated; I deliver my Judgment with ſubmiſſion herein.

1. That the Intereſt which continual ordinances have in the Lord's day is (as I take it) more direct, immediate, proper and conſtant; ſo as it is a more native primary intereſt compared with that which occaſional have.

I call it more direct, and immediate, for there is no third thing that comes between them to bring theſe two, viz. the Lord's day and theſe Ordinances together, but according to the ground formerly delivered, both being ſet and ſtanding, they were made on purpoſe one for another, theſe for the day, and the day for them; that ſo to be ſure God might have a ſolemn ſtanding worſhip, and not occaſional only. So as the time, the Lord's day it ſelf by inſtitution calls for their adminiſtration and their exiſting. But as for occaſional Ordinances the day doth not thus immediately call for them, but only as an occaſion intervenes, thus Baptiſm is required when a Child is to be Baptized.

Therefore the allyance between the Lord's day & continual Ordinances is, as that of a man's own kindred, immediate and direct, and of themſelves, but that of it and the other Ordinances but as of affinity by marriage, through ſome middle thing coming between, that cauſeth it. And as it is thus more near, ſo more conſtant; and the conſtancy of any Relattion and tye mutual makes a greater nearneſs, than that converſe that is by fits and times.

Men that ſtand in ſuch a relation one to another, that they muſt conſtantly meet together out of Office or a ſet Conſtitution, are & ought to be nearer one to the other in intereſt & reſpect, than thoſe that uſe to meet but occaſionally and by fits when ſuch or ſuch a buſineſs falls out. Now the Lord's day and other occaſional Ordinances meet but occaſionally, but thoſe that are contiual are ſtandingly yoked together with it, and meet by mere Inſtitution; And ſo their Intereſt comes to be primary and native, and in the firſt place, for that God might have a ſtanding worſhip at ſet times, both this day and ordinances were ordained. But the day being thus ordained for this ſtanding worſhip, and ſo founded, occaſional ordinances are adminiſtred alſo, and the Church then meeting by Inſtitution, they are fitly adminiſtred then. It is as in founding Colledges where the founders build Chambers and places of publique reſort for Scholars indefinitely, but between the Scholars the Statutes do put this difference, that ſome are Scholars of the houſe as we call them, and of the foundation, which, that the Colledge might be ſure to be upheld as a ſociety, have a ſet penſion and places of maintainance, that the Colledge may not be diſſolved: and others are Pentioners, for whom the Statutes provide that ſuch ſhould be admitted alſo; but yet the primary, native, original foundation & intereſt, is that of Scholars of the houſe who are therefore preferred to Chambers, &c. before others; and the other is but the Intereſt of Strangers that are added to them, and have room amongſt them by the founder's will. And hence (as I take it) is the denomination of your Meeting and Aſſemblies more frequently given to theſe continual Ordinances, even by reaſon of their primary original Native & Conſtant intereſt, as the ground of it. Thus here it is ſaid, Acts 20. When they meet to break bread, And (1 Cor. 11. 20.) Their coming together in all thoſe places is mentioned as if only it were for the Sacrament. Now the Reaſon is, becauſe they are primarily and conſtantly to meet together for theſe Ordinances, and the Lord's day being firſt ordained for theſe, other Ordinances came to have a fit ſeaſon alſo: by reaſon it is a ſanctified time and the Church is then to meet. This ſeems to be the way made for the Adminiſtration of an occaſional Ordinance, as (1 Cor. 5. 4.) for Excommunication, when ye are gathered together, then to deliver ſuch an one to Satan: but for the Sacrament they meet, to eat, and the meeting is denominated from it. Now as an houſe is denominated theirs rather, who are the ſtanding dwellers than occaſional Incomers, that for an occaſion have a room in it, ſo 'tis here: As the Goſpel and Ordinances of it are called the Heavens in Scriptures, as (Pſalm 19. 1. Rom. 10. compared) So theſe ſtanding Ordinances are apointed as the Sun and Moon that divide and conſtantly Rule this day; and other Occaſional Ordinances are as the Stars that have their influences in their ſeaſons, Job 38. 32.

2. The ſecond thing whereby I expreſs my ſelf in the Compariſon of theſe two Ordinances Intereſt in this day is, That anſwerable to this more direct and primary inſtitution of theſe, each for other, it comes to paſs that a more ſpecial bleſſing doth mutually ariſe from the adminiſtration of continual Ordinances. God, when he ſanctified and inſtituted this day, bleſt it alſo; which bleſſing is actually derived to us through thoſe Ordinances adminiſtred upon it, as thoſe whereby the day is ſanctified; and he in like manner ſanctifying theſe continual Ordinances for this day bleſt them by ordaining a ſpecial bleſſing from their adminiſtration by this day. The day bleſſeth the Ordinances more and the Ordinances convey the bleſſings put upon the day, which, I ſay, ariſeth from this primary fundamental inſtitution. So that though you may have a Sacrament of the Lord's Supper on the week day, and ſo likewiſe the preaching of the word (as was ſaid) yet there is a further bleſſing on them may be expected on this day than any other.

So as, put the caſe you could meet conveniently enough for your occaſions for a Sacrament on the week day, and therefore would defer and put off the Lord's Supper from the Lord's day; yet you ſhould chooſe rather to have it on the Lord's day, for there is a ſpecial bleſſing on it that day, which through the mutual ordination of one for the other is beſtowed upon it; ſo as that very reaſon ſhould ſway it rather to the Lord's day.

But now for an occaſional ordinance I do Queſtion, and do but propound it, whether there be ſuch a ſpecial bleſſing that ariſeth upon it, from this day rather than another day: So as a Congregation ſhould rather put themſelves to ſome inconveniences to have all ſuch Ordinances adminiſtred on the Lord's day than on the week day, meerly for the Bleſſing ſake which the day brings upon them. And my reaſon is becauſe, they being Occaſional Ordinances, and occaſions calling for them, receive their ſpecial bleſſing (if any there be) from time or ſeaſon or from their occaſions, and ſo as their occaſions give them exiſtence, an Eſſe, ſo alſo the fitteſt ſeaſon that is ſuited to ſuch occaſions in reſpect of occaſional circumſtances, gives them their bene eſſe or melius eſſe, their better being. So for baptizing a Child; as when a Child is born to any of you an occaſion calls for the being of this Ordinance: So thoſe Circumſtances of time whether on the week day, or the Lord's day, as ſhall ſuit beſt with the good, or avoiding the hurt of the Child; the Conveniency of the parents, who may be to go a Journey, and the occaſions of the Congregation, do give the preheminence to the adminiſtration of this Ordinance. And the ſame may be ſaid as to admiſſion of Members, &c. we are not ſimply for the Lord's day's bleſſing, to affect to have theſe Ordinances on the Lord's day, notwithſtanding other inconveniences. But we ought to inſiſt on it to have the Lord's ſupper on the Lord's day, for it is the work of the day, and the day is appointed for it.

But Though baptiſm is an ordinance to be adminiſtred but once and ſo (if a greater bleſſing could be ſuppoſed to accompany it on the Lord's day) it were much rather to be deſired upon it, than any other day, yet we ſee the Apoſtles in the Acts, did baptize preſently upon any day, as Philip baptized the Eunuch in his Journey, and Paul baptized the Jaylor's Family, &c. For the deferring it was not worth any ſpecial bleſſing conveyed by the Lord's day upon it; when all things elſe fell out to call for the adminiſtration of it. And therefore we are not bound to adminiſter it on the Lord's day meerly for the bleſſing ſake.

Now then to ſum up the Solution of the caſe.

1. If all ordinances, both continual and occaſional, can be adminiſtred on the Lord's day, as conveniently every way as on the week day they ſhould. The Reaſon is becauſe it is ſanctified time inſtituted for Ordinances; neither is any other time inſtituted.

2. If all Ordinances cannot be adminiſtred on that day, then, I ſuppoſe no one continual Ordinance is in the frequency of it,ſo for to be preferred,as that it ſhould be continually on this day,and another ſhould give way:There is here to be obſerved the ſame Rule which the Apoſtle gives for propheſying of all. If many be in a Church, and all cannot prophecy at once, the Rule is, that two or three ſhould do it at one time,and two or three at another and that by courſe, So,ſay I,let Ordinances take their courſe in their omiſſions, and no one be preferred to the reſt, but let it go by a ſeries one by one, as the Apoſtle there ſays that all may prophecy.

Theſe are Rules given by command for ordering Ordinances,and ſuit with right reaſon (ſo v. 37.) when ordinances have a like intereſt.

3. Or thirdly, That all may be adminiſtred every Lord's day, there muſt be the leſs time given to every one. For that alſo is a rule to order prophecying of Brethrn by, which have a like right and intereſt (ſo *v.*30.) let the firſt hold his place, that is, ſo contract himſelf that another may ſpeak,to whom God may have given a Revelation as well as to him, and therefore he muſt not take up all the time. The like, I ſay, is to be obſerved with reſpect to ordinances.

Or 4. The aſſemblies may begin ſooner; and though ſome cannot come ſo ſoon yet when the moſt may, let them begin and the reſt come after. For though for a ſpecial reaſon ye are to ſtay each for other for the Sacrament (as 1 *Cor.*11.) becauſe it is a badg of the Communion of the whole: yet I know not whether we ſhould allways thus ſtay for all other Ordinances for it is better that ſome few ſhould want part and the beginning of the worſhip, that the whole may enjoy all.

Now theſe things I ſpeak in caſe the Church cannot meet on other (as it ſeemed theſe in Troas, Acts 20. could not; for Paul ſtayed ſeven days for an opportunity to preach) which may alſo be the caſe of ſome Churches that are poor and numerous.

But in caſe the Church meet upon other days, and occaſional Ordinances ſo encreaſe, as you cannot have all upon the Lord's day: or the inconvenience otherwiſe is ſuch you cannot. Then,

1. For the reaſons above given you ſhould defer occaſional Ordinances (as you uſe to do) to other days, and keep up the ſolemn ſtanding worſhip by theſe Continual Ordinances.

As I apprehend it, the Lord's day is electively to be taken, for breaking bread but; not ſo for admiſſion excommunication,&c. And in that caſe you are to deferr Occaſional Ordinances rather for this Reaſon alſo. For being to be done but once for all, it is all one on what day,; it is no loſs to defer any of them to the week day, or another Lord's day: But if you omit a Lord's Supper upon this day, it is an irreparable loſs: There is one Lord's Supper leſs in the Courſe of Sabbaths in your lives, and the loſs cannot be made up: 'tis as the loſs of a good thought in it's ſeaſon: But in the other caſe,omittitur non ammittitur,there is a delay but not a loſs.

And 2. There may be ſuch Circumſtances in Occaſional Ordinances, as will make their adminiſtration much better on a week day than on the Lord's day. And admiſſion may require haſte,through ſome journey to be taken by the party,or the like. So, a man's ſin may be ſo ripe and high,as I would not have his excommunication deferred an hour longer that ſo the Church may clear it ſelf.

Object. But here comes in the Objection,that there is no time under the New Teſtament,for which out of duty Chriſtians are bound to meet,but the Lord's day. There is no other time inſtituted, and therefore it is to be ſuppoſed that the general rule that binds all Churches is that all Ordinances ſhould be on the Lord's day only.

Anſw. I Anſwer, That, indeed there is no other time ſingled out by inſtitution to oblige them to Aſſemblings together but the Lord's day. But yet there is a command to meet upon other days when preſſing Circumſtances urge to it, and their occaſions will permit. The ſame command that lyes on Timothy to preach the word out of ſeaſon, lyes upon Churches to hear out of the proper ſeaſon aſſigned by inſtitution. Other Circumſtances may preſs to a neceſſity of a duty as well as an inſtitution may; and ſo may oblige to meet on the week days, as well as Inſtitution obligeth us to meet on the Lord's days. And if ſtill the condition of any Church be ſuch (which yet ordinarily we ſee by weekly Lectures general in City and Country it is not) that they cannot meet on week days; but Occaſional Ordinances multiply ſo as that they, and all continual ones cannot be adminiſtred on the Lord's day; then, ſay I, let ſome of the Continual give way at ſuch a time, for if the caſe be that an Occaſional Ordinance may not be adminiſtred at all, if not on that Lord's day or that it will otherwiſe be deferred too long, then, rather omit the practice of a Continual Ordinance rather than that occaſional one ſhould be ſo hazarded. And the Reaſon is becauſe that Occaſional Ordinance is a thing to be done but once: And rather than not have a Child baptized at all and dye ere baptized; it were better to looſe a Lord's Supper which you may have every Lord's day. The Lord's Supper you have always with you, but not the other.

Ch. VII

CHAP. VII.

Whether a Church of Chriſt may lawfully make an Agreement among themſelves to to divide themſelves into ſeveral parts, and to have the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper Adminiſtred to one of theſe Parts one Lord's day, and ſo ſucceſſively to every part of the Church.

I Need not prove the firſt principle of a Congregational Church, and its being appointed by God as the ſeat of his publick worſhip and ordinances. I have already proved it, and may take it for granted by theſe, who profeſs Congregational principles with difference from others.

The Papiſts profeſſing a viſible Church Catholick, &c. do allow the diſpenſation of this ordinance of the Lord's Supper Vage and unlimitedly; Hence they have private Maſſes, and they think a Prieſt, and one more, to be enough for the performance of them and alſo for the giving and receiving the Sacrament.

Our Epiſcopal Divines, profeſſing a National Church, allow a private communion to a party that is ſick in caſe of that neceſſity.

Our Presbyterian Brethren that profeſs a National principle and that every ordained Miniſter is a Miniſter to the whole Church, do aſſert, that if ſeveral Chriſtians meet and one ſuch Miniſter be with them, he may (eſpecially in difficult Times) adminiſter the ordinance to them, though he hath no ſpecial Relation of being a Miniſter to them as a Congregational Church, and tho' thoſe Chriſtians have no particular Relation of members one to another.

In Scotland, alſo, a good and holy Miniſter, in repute, cometh to a place, and when thouſands of people gather about him from far and near to hear him preach, ordinarily ſuch a Miniſter uſeth to adminiſter to them the Sacrament alſo.

That which is my deſign is to find out what of a Church is the true and proper ſeat of this ordinance of the Lord's Supper.

The Seat impowered for this, or any ordinance, is a matter of great moment, and it is not a Circumſtance ſuch as a local place is, and as houſes to eat and drink in are. This is but a meer Circumſtance of place, but (as the Apoſtle ſpeaks) of this Ordinance the Church of God is unalterably the ſeat, as the oppoſition there ſhews, 1 Cor. 11. 22. Such Circumſtances the Church may and doth appoint but the proper ſeat of an Ordinance inſtituted is another manner of thing.

The Paſſover (which this ordinance doth ſucceed) had an whole family appointed for the ſeat of it, Exod. 12. 46. In one houſe ſhall it be eaten, thou ſhalt not carry forth ought of the Fleſh abroad out of the houſe, &c. Afterwards it muſt not be celebrated in any City but in a Family in Jeruſalem, Deut. 16. 5. 6. Thou mayſt not Sacrifice the paſſover within any of thy gates which the Lord thy God giveth thee. But at the place which the Lord thy God ſhall chooſe to place his name in there thou ſhalt Sacrifice the Paſſover at even at the going down of the Sun, at the ſeaſon that thou cameſt forth out of Egypt. Unto which (as holy Ainſworth ſays in his diſcourſe of the communion of Saints) a new Teſtament Church anſwers as the ſeat of ordinances.

Now that which I ſhall firſt do, is, to find out whether this ordinance of the Lord's Supper hath not a proper ſeat for it, with difference from other ordinances of worſhip that may be adminiſtred every where. I mean not as to the Circumſtance of place, for of that the Apoſtle hath determined, 1 Tim. 2. 8. I will men pray every where, as to place, and ſo the Sacrament may be adminiſtred any where for place. But as the ordinances of diſcipline have, beſide the circumſtance of place for meeting, a proper ſeat of a Church (Do not you judge them within, 1 Cor. 5. that is within your ſelves and that are of you?) So the enquiry is whether this Ordinance alſo hath not a ſedes propria, A ſeat proper to it with difference from other Ordinances, and what that may be?

This enquiry I ſhall manage by conſidering.

1. Our own commonly received principles hitherto, & ſee what they do neceſſarily (if retained) drive us up unto.

2. I ſhall conſider how the Scriptures will fall in, to confirm and ſuit with that, which by thoſe principles ſhall be found to be the Propria ſedes of this Ordinance.

We uſe to make a Statue by cutting away of matter, as in carving a Statue out of free-ſtone, and ſo in what is left a form ariſeth and it bears the image of what we intend (as well as we do it by adding to of matter as in making a ſtatua of Playſter, &c.) and ſo here Præſcindendo or by cutting away what will not ſerve for a ſedes; the true form in ſuch and ſuch a matter will diſcover it ſelf.

Now according to our Congregational principles received I believe we will agree in theſe particulars that follow, and if not, let the breach be made where any one thinks meet to make it upon them.

I ſhall in the firſt place ſet them down by way of Narration; the uſe and benefit of which Narrative will be to help us to diſcern the ſpecial value and tendency of this Ordinance of the Lord's Supper, which, when all is done, muſt regulate this caſe. And alſo by degrees each of thoſe particulars added to others coming up ſo far to the concluſion, thereby both the ſtate of the Queſtion will be ſeen, yea and perhaps ſome demonſtration of it ſpring out of all at leaſt to convince your judgments of the final concluſion which is this.

A Congregational body to Chriſt, or Church, conſidered as ſuch, and met as ſuch, is the proper ſole ſeat of this Ordinance of the Lord's Supper, with difference from other Ordinances of worſhip and other meetings. Now towards the proof of this I advance by theſe ſteps.

1. That if the whole Congregational Church were met it muſt be a Miniſter who muſt diſpenſe this ordinance, let the neceſſity of the Ordinance be what it will. Obſerve this that in caſes of the moſt abſolute neceſſity none will admit any other than a Miniſter to adminiſter it; and your beſt ground for that is (which I ſhall own) that we read not that any other but ſuch adminiſtred it, or baptiſm in the New Teſtament, and every where we read that where the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was adminiſtred it was by an whole Church, and ſo the argument for the negative is for this cauſe as good as for that other, viz. that Miniſters only ſhould adminiſter it: Nay, we have more inſtances for the one than the other. And this alſo ſhews a manifeſt difference of the Lord's Supper from other ordinances. For if we conſider publique prayers or preaching, gifted Brethren in caſes of neceſſity may adminiſter them, and yet you will not ſay this is common to the Lord's Supper which none but a Miniſter may adminiſter. However for this firſt difference betwixt this and other Ordinances there muſt be ſome reaſon in the nature of the Ordinances themſelves (for that it is the thing which in the firſt place I enquire) that ſhould require and admit ſuch a difference.

2. The qualification of being a Church-member, or of being in the order (as I may call it, Col. 2. 5.) of that ſtate, is alſo as requiſite as to a perſons receiving the Lord's Supper; as that the perſon adminiſtring it ſhould be in the order of preaching Elderſhip. This is acknowledged alſo, inſomuch that the holyeſt man in the world (and who is known to all that ſociety to be ſuch, and to be utterly remote from the leaſt jealouſy of Scandal) who owneth not a Relation to ſome Church-memberſhip, would not be admitted to this Sacrament by any of our Churches when met together.

3. The third caſe is this, If ſome Members out of each or all Congregational Churches in England were met together in a Town, and a Miniſter of that Town were met with them (where ſome one Congregational Church reſides, but yet, where at that time that Church he belongs unto as Miniſter are not met, but yet there is ſuch a full Congregation of ſuch Saints mentioned with teſtimonials from their reſpective Churches) he, according to our principles could not adminiſter the Lord's Supper to them, and yet they are all qualified for it in this reſpect, that they are in the order of a Church, and in a Church-ſtate as Church-members, ſo as the defect that it was in, in the former caſe, is taken away alſo hereby.

And if it be ſaid they cannot be adminiſtred unto, becauſe he that is the Miniſter is not their proper Miniſter, but not becauſe they are not capacitated themſelves for it, I add theſe ſteps more ſtill by putting further Caſes in the way of anſwer to this, and to ſhew that this defect is ultimately reſolved into this, that, indeed, they are not a Church, for that is the ground of any Man's being their proper Miniſter.

4. If any Apoſtle were preſent he could not adminiſter this Ordinance to them. We may make this ſuppoſition, for in the primitive times it might de facto have fallen out: Therefore, the above-mentioned defects doth not lye in their not having a proper Miniſter, for an Apoſtle, having an univerſal Relation of Office to all Churches and Saints, would be (ſo far as being a Miniſter of all parts therein lyes) ſufficiently qualified.

5. But ſtill there is a defect why this company of men could not have the Lord's Supper adminiſtred to them, and that, although qualified in being each a member of ſome Church; and where lyes the obſtacle but in this, that they are not one particular Church, or members of one and the ſame Church amongſt themſelves? ſo that an Apoſtle's preſence and power doth not extend to ſupply that defect, any more than to make a company of Diſciples a Church without their Co-alition firſt ſo to be. We uſe to ſay that a company of Elders met in a Synod cannot have the Sacrament together, if Paul were with them, although they each do repreſent particular Churches. So as ſtill (according to us) the Adminiſtration of the Sacrament farther depends upon theſe being one in the ſame, individual, particular Church-fellowſhip, which can be ſaid of no ordinance elſe whatever.

6. If two or three of that Church were met, and a teaching Elder with them, he might pray with them, preach to them, &c. but not adminiſter this ordinance. The Evangeliſt Philip and the Eunuch alone went together, and he could baptize him, but he could not have adminiſtred the Lord's Supper to him, ſo as ſtill it is not ſufficient that members of the ſame individual Church be met with a Teaching Elder. Thus ſtill the adminiſtration of this Ordinance advanceth it ſelf and climbeth up further and further towards its having for its ſeat that company of believers which ought to be accounted an whole particular Church.

7. It is not a number of the Members of the ſame Church met with a teaching Elder which your priniples will allow capacitated for the Adminiſtration of this Ordinance. Yea, tho' it be ſuppoſed a number of ſo many and of ſuch perſons, that if there were a Church to be begun, there were a ſufficient number for to make a Church (be it the minimum quod ſic of ſeven (as Mr. Cotton ſays) or of ten, as in a Synagogue, or of eleven, as Chriſt's Diſciples were when Judas was gone forth.) Yet your principles will not allow it. For,

1. Then any ſuch number met with a teaching Elder for other Religious worſhip might in the end ſay, Let us have the Sacrament alſo in the cloſe, ſince God hath been with us in the other ordinances, and we are ſufficient for number. But this you would not allow.

2. If there be a Church of five hundred, and as many teaching Officers as were in the Church of Antioch, Acts 13. 1. who would accordingly meet in ſo many ſeveral parcels as they had Teaching-Elders over them (one teaching Elder meeting with one parcel of many of them, another with a ſecond many, a third with a third many, and ſo on) and would multiply their meetings according to the number of their Elders, this you would not allow neither, eſpecially you would not admit ſuch ſeveral Meetings for the Lord's upper at one and the ſame time. This yet is a caſe ſuppoſable and it may be put. S

Now by caſes put, we having brought the matter thus high, and thus near, it is to be conſidered what is here yet wanting or to be ſuperadded to capacitate and endow them with power for this that the Lord's Supper may be adminiſtred in this caſe? Let any man of us either make a breach upon ſome or all of theſe principles, or aſſign wherein the defect lyes, and as Peter ſaid, what ſhould forbid, that theſe ſhould not be baptized? ſo let us enquire what doth forbid or hinder why theſe ſhould not be the Seat of the Lord's Supper when ſo met; and when there are all requiſites materially for it.

1. Saints in the Order of Church-fellowſhip.

2. In the ſame individual Church-fellowſhip, and Members one of another in that reſpect.

3. A Teaching-Elder in proper Relation unto them.

4. A need (perhaps) of Edification of many of them, yea,and an earneſt, ſpiritual and ſpecial longing after it at the meeting, and a great preparation made by other Ordinances unto it.

5. The common Warrant (as for time) to receive this Ordinance oft (as oft as ye receive, &c. 1 Cor. 11. 26.) and ſo, both ſeaſon and time do meet alſo. There is,

6. A ſufficient number as to the Matter of a Church to make an whole Church according unto that, to which any principles of any profeſſion amongſt us Epiſcopalian, Presbyterian, or Anabaptiſts will ſay is required for a Church, and ſo it is in that reſpect equivalent unto an whole Church. Wherein ſhould the impediment lye? I preſs any man to aſſign it; but he that doth it muſt aſſign ſuch a Ratio or Condition of this company to be ſuperadded yet to them, as (taking into his eye all the fore-mentioned caſes) ſhall carry with it a difference and diſtinct ground founded in the nature of the things, and he muſt compare them together.

1. With the Caſe of many Members of ſeveral other Churches ſo met with an Apoſtle, who yet may not receive the Lord's Supper.

2. With the caſes of two or three (but not ariſing to many) of their own Church met with their own Elder, &c, who yet may not.

And yet 3. All theſe may enjoy any other Ordinance of worſhip, prayer, &c. but not this.

And 4. He muſt conſider all theſe meetings to be of a diſtinct nature from a Church meeting of the whole Church, that is ſo acknowledged, in which, not the Lord's Supper only, but any or all other Ordinances of Diſcipline, Excommunication, &c. may be adminiſtred, which cannot be in any of the other Companies. Let any, I ſay, whoever, weighing the premiſes, aſſign what Notio, conceptus, or Ratio (taking Ratio for the Modus, Relation or reſpect put upon a thing) is a-new or farther requiſite to this Company of many, &c. ſpecified, and ſuch a Notio alſo as will bear warrant and afford a true ground of difference of ſuch a Church, both from the other Aſſemblies mentioned, and will alſo ſtate a difference of this ordinance of the Lord's Supper from the other Ordinances, according to the variation of the caſes put, and he will find himſelf driven up to what I ſhall by and by aſſign.

For, bring me two Half-crown-pieces, the one ſtampt the other unſtampt (which yet for matter and all ſuch requiſites belonging to the matter, &c. is, in valore, in value, equivalent unto an half crown that is ſtamped) yet the unſtampt piece is not conſtituted currant as Money to that purpoſe of payment as the other is; ſo it is in the preſent caſe.

The 7th. caſe propounded preſents you with a many of Members of one and the ſame Church enough to begin a Church, &c. and yet you would not (out of times of perſecution) in the modes of them propounded allow them capacitated for this adminiſtration, and yet they are, in valore, in value every way equivalent unto a Church which is immediately capable of this Adminiſtration. Let any Man now ſay what is the ſtamp that is to be ſuperadded unto ſuch a Company or Companies? Till others aſſign theirs I ſhall preſent what I conceive in abſtracto this formal reaſon to be, viz. that a company of Saints, &c. met, muſt be indued with this ſuperadded Formality, with this Nova ratio formalis inſtituta; That it is a diſtinct body unto Chriſt, wherein the Members are united to one another as ſuch, with diſtinction from other Churches that are alſo Inſtituted bodies to Chriſt. And this is that company which having an Officer or Teaching Elder over them are the propria ſedes, the proper ſeat, for the Adminiſtration of this Sacrament, and unleſs this conſideration is, or can be juſtified to be in ſuch, or in any company, they are not capacitated for this Ordinance of the Lord's Supper. For otherwiſe it is not their Number, and their being members of one and the ſame Church and their meeting with an Elder, who is their own Elder, that will impower them for this Ordinance.

1. In General, that there muſt be ſome farther formalis Ratio, ſome conceptus, or notion ſuperadded unto the materials of former inſtances (eſpecially that laſt put) is evident.

1. Becauſe all things that go to compleat the matter do meet in that laſt inſtance. There is, 1. A many. 2. Many of the ſame Church. 3. They are met with their own teaching Elder, and yet they are defective, and are not the proper ſeat of the Lord's Supper.

2. Becauſe there muſt ſome difference and diſtinction ariſe(beſides what ariſeth from theſe perſons as the matter in this company) whereby they do and may become Propria ſedes of this Ordinance with difference from all the former inſtances. Now differences ariſe properly from the form,and ſo it muſt be Nova Ratio formalis.

2. It muſt be ſomething inſtituted, a Ratio formalis inſtituta, (as I ſaid.)

1. Becauſe it is that which muſt make a difference and diſtinction from,

1. A Company of Saints in no Church-Fellowſhip.
2. A Company of Saints in ſeveral Church-Fellowſhips.
3. From two or three of the ſame Church-Fellowſhip.
4. From a many of the ſame.
5. And ſo as that whereas any ſuch Company of the former may partake of any other Ordinance of worſhip, yet not of this. That which muſt be,to put the difference, muſt be Ratio formalis, inſtituta, as take as many men for number and (every way qualified and enabled,&c.)as are ſufficient to make a Corporation fit to enjoy ſuch or ſuch priviledges, yet they muſt over and above be empowred by Charter, and over and above have ſuperadded the ſeat of their being a Corporation by a Civil Inſtitution; So it is here.

2. Now ſecondly, for the demonſtration of that particular formalis ratio inſtituta aſſigned, viz. That an inſtituted body to Chriſt conſidered as ſuch is the only proper ſeat for this Ordinance, I ſhall proceed.

1. By removing all ſuppoſitions I can think of or that have been ſuggeſted; or what may be pretended to give the ſtamp or inſtitution, ſo as it will ſtill remain that nothing elſe but ſuch a company as I have before defin'd, may aſſume and take on them to be an inſtituted body to Chriſt.

1. It is not a Par Ratio a parity of Reaſon. The Church is ſaid to have prayed for Peter, Acts 12. 5. Peter therefore was kept in priſon, but prayer was made without ceaſing of the Church unto God for him; and this was done by two ſeveral meetings at leaſt and ſo by parts of the Church, v. 12. He came to an houſe where many were gathered together praying; and another company was elſewhere, as appears from what Peter ſays v. 17. Go tell theſe things unto James and to the Brethren; and the words that follow are, And he departed and went into another place. But yet all this will no way come up to evince the matter we are upon, nor warrant that the ſtamp of being a Church may be put upon every aſſembly of many,nor will it follow that the Church may meet in parts for the Lord's Supper.

1. Becauſe prayer is ſuch an ordinance as may be exerciſed by a Church by parcels; and thoſe parcells may be fewer or more, whether their Office is met with them or not, as in one of the former inſtances was alledged that one Elder meeting with one ſick perſon may pray with him, whereas if all the Elders met with that perſon they would not be capacitated to adminiſter the Lord's Supper to that ſick perſon. For if this had been the manner then,or an apoſtolical Practice, the Apoſtle James had as fit an occaſion to have made mention of it and to have enjoyned it to be adminiſtred alſo by them,as well as to prayer over them, &c. For the Sacrament is as needful for the Soul of ſuch a Perſon as prayer, &c. is for their body.

It may alſo be ſaid that any two of the Church and the whole Church by two and two may meet to pray for any buſineſs of importance, but you will not ſay they may do ſo for this Ordinance; Yea they may do ſo without any Officer, as, two or three may meet for prayer, but not ſo for this Sacrament. And one reaſon is becauſe this Ordinance is a Communion of Chriſt's body, and of one with another therein; but it is not ſo in the other Ordinance of Prayer, ſo as there is diſparitas, a diſparity of Reaſon. For it would be a ſtrange Aſſertion to ſay that two may meet for a Communion of Chriſt's body as well as to pray, and thereby exerciſe the Communion of Saints, which cannot be done apart, as well as by all, or many together.

Object. But the Phraſe of Acts 12. 5. is urged, that prayer was made of the Church unto God for Peter (which how it was done the 12th. and 17th. verſes ſhew, viz.

That it was by parcels) and therefore the Church may be ſaid to meet in ſeveral parcels; The reply is,

Anſw. 1. A Queſtion may juſtly be made whether that phraſe of Prayer being made of the Church without ceaſing, refers us unto thoſe Prayers that are afterward inſtanced to have been made by parcels of the Church, or whether that phraſe is not intended to ſhew how the whole Church had during his being in priſon met and made prayers for him; for unto the former whole time of his having been in priſon doth that ſpeech reſer (view the words and compare, verſe 4.) and thoſe after-paſſages (v. 12, 17.) are but what fell out to be that night afore he was to appear next morning, verſe 6. But I will not at all inſiſt on this but will ſuppoſe that during this time of perſecution all their meetings were by parcels as well as that night; though I believe that the aſſertion in the Anſwer given can never be diſproved. But,

2. Prayer may be ſaid to be made by the Church in parcels, and yet it may be affirmed that none of them were meetings of the Church as a Church. Tho', yet, if two by two had in ſuch minute parcels met, yea if privately only one had earneſtly prayed it might have been ſaid, That prayer had been made by the Church thus diſtributed.

For, 1. The word Church in ſuch a way of ſpeech is taken materially for the members of the Church, whether ſingly or otherwiſe, and when a thing is done by them generally either one way or another it may be ſaid, The Church prayed, and it cannot be inferr'd that they prayed as met together, no more than to ſay, Prayer was made by the Churches, would argue they all met together for one prayer. And that the phraſe of Church is ſo uſed in this Book of the Acts is evident, for when 'tis ſaid (Acts 8. 1.) that there was a great perſecution againſt the Church. The word Church is materially taken. So as the phraſe (v. 5.) and thoſe compared with it (v. 12. and 17.) will no way evidence that theſe meetings were Church-meetings or that they met qua Church, and ſo they had not the ſtamp which we ſeek: They were barely meetings of ſeveral members of that Church, and ſo the whole Church, indeed, might be materially in the one and in the other, but ſtill it was not there qua Church.

2. The nature of the duty of prayer is unqueſtionably ſuch, as will admit a Church to perform it by parcels greater or leſſer, yea in its members ſingly. And how then can we interpret this phraſeology, in Acts 12. to ſerve that purpoſe for which it is urg'd.

3. Nay 3. The Holy Ghoſt hath warily penned it to preſent ſuch an interpretation, for he ſtyles the meeting of thoſe in verſe 12. (where it is ſaid, Many were gathered together praying) in diſtinction from being a Church, or the Church, or a Church-meeting, and ſo it in reality comes up but to that ſeventh or laſt inſtance we gave of many of the ſame Church-meeting, to whom yet you would not give the Supper. And as for the other company, who are called James and the Brethren, we will ſuppoſe them met as theſe Many (v. 12.) were, and yet ſo much is not ſaid there, but the meaning may be that Peter bid them to go to their ſeveral houſes. They are but the Brethren with James, not the Church, though James, their chief Elder, had been met with them.

Yea, 4. There will fall out this contradiction to what is ſaid in the 5th. v. if you ſay that theſe were each formal Church-meetings. For then it muſt have been ſaid that they met in diſtinct Churches, and not that that Church, in ſingulari met in each of theſe meetings, v. 5.

2 It is not the will or conſent of that which we muſt call the whole Church (the πανηγυρὶς) that can have authority to ſet this new ſtamp of a Church upon ſuch partial Meetings of its own Members.

For 1. Tho' in Law Eſtates or Titles are convey'd, both by the will of man in making his will, and by inheritance, yet here, the adopting any or all of theſe meetings apart, into the priviledge of a Church, goes not by the will of Man. But look what Company is ſo met as by the will, and inſtitution of God, the inheritance falls upon, they only are the Church. The Church's will gives not the ſtamp, but it muſt be ſuch in the reality afore God.

2. If the will of the Church had this pretended authority, then the whole Church may ſay of any ſuch few or many of the members at any time met, that they are a Church, and that others, tho' many, are not ſo. Yea,

3. Then it may be ſaid of as many ſeveral Companys that have each an elder with them, that they are ſo many Churches; and if all theſe receive at the ſame time the Sacrament, they would be ſo many Churches made by that one whole Church and belonging to that one Church; whereas an inſtituted Church conſiſts in Indiviſibili.

4. It is not conſidered enough that the authority of being a Church is not Poteſtas vicaria nor deputata, A vicarious, or deputed power. Therefore the whole Church cannot ſay, This ſhall be your Church at ſuch or ſuch a time, for ſuch or ſuch an end.

5. It is not a caſe of neceſſity for the Ordinance, that will be argument ſufficient for the adminiſtration of it to any ſuch divided parcels of a Church. For put this caſe that many of the ſame Church are in caſe of great diſconſolation and therefore need this ordinance, or that they have not had this Ordinance of a long time adminiſtred to them, and one of their proper Miniſters were with them. Yea, put the caſe of neceſſity which the Papiſts and our Epiſcopal Divines put, that two or three or more are ſick and weak in a great Family belonging to one Church, and being near death in all view, they as greatly long for, yea, more need this ordinance, in agone mortis, in an agony of death, than any other company of Church-Members in caſe of perſecution: neither of theſe caſes will be allowed to be ſuch a neceſſity as would make or conſtitute ſuch a meeting to be a Body unto Chriſt, inſtituted with difference from another part of that Church.

CHAP. VIII.

Whether, in caſe of apparent danger of Life, loſs of Eſtate rationally foreſeen, or in caſe of violence and force, cauſing Ordinances to ceaſe, there may not be a prudent forbearance or ſecret avoidance?

THE Rule our Saviour gives, I will have Mercy and not Sacrifice, is our meaſure and ſtandard to forbear Ordinances in the Caſe mentioned; for it is Mercy which God would rather have. Sacrifice was the eminent Ordinance of the old Teſtament in all the ages of it, yet, it being but a duty of the ſecond Commandment or Inſtituted worſhip and not of the firſt, it yields unto mercy, as alſo the duties of the Sabbath do, as our Saviour Chriſt hath alſo declared and paralell'd that with the duties of the ſecond Commanded, Luke 6. 1, 2, 3, 4.

But I ſhall give inſtances of ſuch a Forbearance which confirm this, and ſhew the extent of this Rule.

1. I ſhall produce Inſtances out of the old Teſtament.

1. Jacob fled from his Fathers houſe when Eſau had but ſpoken words of threatning, Gen. 27. 41. And Eſau ſaid in his heart the days of mourning for my Father are at hand, then will I ſlay my Brother Jacob; And theſe words of Eſau, his elder Son, were told Rebecca, and ſhe ſent and called Jacob her younger Son, and ſaid to him, Behold, thy Brother Eſau as touching thee doth comfort himſelf, purpoſing to kill thee. Here was but a hearſay and report of Eſau's intention, and yet thereupon his Mother adviſes him to flee to Laban to Haran, verſe 43. but to do it only to avoid the preſent diſtreſs, hoping his Brothers fury would be over as the word is, verſe 44, 45. And tarry thou with him a few days until thy Brother's fury turn away; until thy Brothers anger turn away from thee (that is, the fury of his anger be over) and he forget that which thou haſt done to him, then will I ſend and fetch thee from thence. And he did accordingly and had Iſacc's bleſſing with him alſo (Gen. 28. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.) and was ſent away by his Authority; and yet, conſider the Caſe how it ſtood; He went away from his Fathers houſe where God was worſhipt, and where Sacrifices were offered; for ſo in the Patriarchs Families they were, and had been from the beginning, from Adam, Abel, and Cain, and ſo on. Yet, to avoid this fury he fled to a Family, where a ſtrange God was worſhipt (for we read that Laban did ſwear to another God than Jacob did, Gen. 31. 53. viz. The God which Abraham and Nahor had worſhipt before Abraham's Converſion, Joſh. 24. 15. The Gods which your Fathers ſerved that were on the other ſide of the flood: That Laban was an Idolater alſo appears by the ſaid, Gen. 31. 30. Wherefore haſt thou ſtollen my Gods? compared with verſe 34.) and his flying was but a matter of prudence, it was but for a danger threatned: He was not yet ſurprized, but it ſeemed rationally impendent. And alſo it was but for a time, but not for always, and his Mother (as Ainſworth ſays) counſell'd him in Faith ; yea, and farther Iſaac ſent him away with a bleſſing as from God. And there was this farther in the caſe, that he having bought the birth-right of his Brother Eſau, if his Father (who was ſo old, that he was ſtriken with blindneſs, and Eſau, in his ſpeech, had implyed that it would not be long to his death) had dyed, it was he that ſhould have Officiated in the Prieſt's Office in the Family, and have performed the worſhip of the Family, as having bought the birth-right ; and ſo was the head thereof in that reſpect. How ſoon his Father might dye he knew not, and yet he fled, and fled upon this occaſion and with this reſerve, till his Brother's fury ſhould be over.

I might from hence urge an argument againſt what is ordinarily alledged by people in our times, who, in the caſe of eminent danger, tell their teachers and one another, You muſt truſt God, and not avoid or forbear.

I reply, why ſhould not he have truſted God againſt ſuch fears as theſe, which were indeed but from flying ſpeeches of his brother? but becauſe it was rationally probable that his Brother would indeed have killed him, he therefore flyes to avoid it, but when indeed God really did call him to truſt him, as when his brother Eſau came with 400 men againſt him, he then truſted God, and prayed it out ; but in this caſe, he was not called to do it, but wholly to avoid it rather.

2. To Sacrifice, and to worſhip God together in Aſſemblies had been the Religion of their fore-fathers tranſmitted to them from before the flood, as appears from the firſt, in the caſe of Cain and Abel, Gen. 4. and from the 26. v. of that Chap. Then men began to call upon the name of the Lord, that is, to call upon him together. But while they were in Egypt, the people did forbear Sacrifices and publique worſhip, Exod. 8. 25, 26, 27. Pharaoh called for Moſes and for Aaron and ſaid, Go ye, ſacrifice to your God in the Land. And Moſes ſaid, It is not meet ſo to do; for we ſhall Sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians to the Lord our God: Lo! ſhall we ſacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes, and will they not ſtone us? we will go three day's journey into the willderneſs, and ſacrifice to the Lord our God, as he ſhall command us. videtur colligi non fuiſſe liberum; it ſeems to be inferr'd, that it was not free, Sacrificia offerre, no not in their own dwellings for them to offer Sacrifices, no not in their own dwellings in Goſhen, or if they did it, they did it but ſecretly. And it is for certain that publick Sacrifices and meetings were not uſed; for it is but now granted as a ſpecial favour by Pharaoh, Go, Sacrifice in the Land, as that which they had not done afore, and they forbore upon a prudential ground (when yet according to the principles of truſting God in any caſe, &c. and if they were true, they ought not to have foreborn) they knew not infallibly and certainly, that the people would ſtone them, and yet thereupon Moſes ſays, It is not meet ſo to do, verſe 26. for we ſhall Sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes, and will they not ſtone us? we will go three days journey into the wilderneſs, and Sacrifice to the Lord our God. Which argues further that they knew their Fathers had offered up Sheep and Oxen ; and ſo it was not out of Ignorance that they forebore, as if they knew not what God would accept.

Rivettus in Locum.

From the tranſactions of Moſes, this may clearly alſo be argued, that if, in caſe any perſon be to enter into a ſtate of Church-Ordinances (which Sacrifice was then more eminently in the room of) or to joyn with a ſet company and with a Paſtor ſuitable to them, &c. which hitherto they have not done, they may warrantably forbear and wait a due and fit ſeaſon for it in a ſetled way. Or if a man intended to remove for ordinances to another Country he were not bound (perhaps for ſome good ſpace of time) to enter preſently into them in the place where he is, or upon the next opportunity, which will preſent it ſelf. Alſo in that caſe of a dangerous oppoſition from their Relations, ſuch as, by reaſon of their Spirits and Principles, do threaten to break all between them ; we do uſe rightly in ſuch a caſe to adviſe, that Wives and Children are not ſo bound up to do it, but they may forbear to gain the conſent of ſuch Relations. And our Argument we account ſtrong, becauſe, for preſent enjoyment, we are not to hazard or prejudice a future more ſettled and quiet enjoyment, which yet truly hath much of the caſe afore us : For we only profeſs to forbear at particular times, wherein there appears, rationally, a more certain danger, to preſerve our ſelves and our Eſtates to enable us to enjoy them more frequently at other times, and not to expend all your future enjoyments upon one preſent, and ſpend (as it were) the whole of all at once. And this is truly Mercy and is the ſame kind of Sacrifice too, viz. for the future inſtead of Sacrifice at preſent.

Now all this is juſtifiably inferred from the Caſe of the Iſraelites in Egypt, eſpecially from the time that Moſes preſented himſelf as a deliverer unto them, for ſeeing deliverance was at hand, why did they not preſently fall upon Sacrificing? Why doth Moſes defer the time, and not ſet upon it preſently? It was not that the duty of Sacrifice was not inforce, for it had been (as Chriſt ſays of Circumciſion) from the Fathers, and obliged them as well as their fore-fathers, eſpecially when Pharaoh had given liberty, ſaying, Go Sacrifice in the Land. No, but he defers it, to work about another thing, viz. a total deliverance, and ſacrifizeth the preſent enjoyment they might have had unto the attainment of a future ſettled enjoyment. He forbears at preſent, that the preſent performing it for once might not hinder the future for a continuance.

3. During Saul's wicked Reign, there was no frequenting the Ark, which yet was the Ordinance of God, 1 Chron. 13. 3. Let us bring again the Ark of our God, for we enquired not at it in the days of Saul. I omit David's flying from Saul, and complaining of his dwelling in Meſhech, and his ſaying, O that I were a Sparrow, a Door-keeper! in the houſe of God, Pſa. 84. 3, 10.

4. We have another inſtance in the Caſe of the ten Tribes all the days of the Kings of Iſrael: There was in Elia's Time 7000 had not bowed to Baal, but they kept themſelves from the defilement of Idols conſcientiouſly (1 Kings 19. 18.) and yet they went not unto ordinances at Jeruſalem to Temple-worſhip, nor did not during all thoſe times, which were well nigh 250 years, nor do we find them any where blamed for it. Yea, and ſurely, had they been obſervant thereof, it would have been here remembred by God for the evidence of their ſincerity, as well as that Negative of not bowing unto Baal.

If the Objection be, that of Jeroboam and the reſt of the Kings, it is indigitated, that he made Iſrael to ſin, namely, in their not going up to Jeruſalem as well as in worſhipping his Calves.

I Anſwer, 1. That the ſin of Jeroboam, and the Kings that impoſed both, did lye in both, viz. in reſtraying them from their going to Jeruſalem as well as in requiring their worſhipping his Calves, & the ultimate aim on his part was to keep them from going to Jeruſalem, If this people go up to Sacrifice in the houſe of the Lord at Jeruſalem, then ſhall the heart of this people turn again unto their Lord, even unto Rehoboam King of Judah, and they ſhall kill me, and go again to Rehoboam King of Judah: Yet the ſin imputed to the people is eminently if not limitedly ſaid to be their worſhipping of the Calves, 1 Kin. 12. 29, 30. And he ſet the one in Bethel, and the other put he in Dan. And this thing became a ſin; for the people went to worſhip before the one even unto Dan.

Anſw. 2. The Nation generally incurred the guilt of both, becauſe they walked willingly after Jeroboam's Commandment, Hoſea 5. 11.

But 3. Still thoſe Godly people who kept themſelves from the worſhip of his Calves (as certainly they did, as the prophets alſo did) and being under this hard reſtraint which hath been ſpoken of, and Mourners for it, to them ſimply their forbearance to go up to Jeruſalem was not imputed as a ſin, nor is any where found to have been ſo charged on them.

And that the greateſt of the Prophets themſelves did in that as well as in other Caſes of danger betake themſelves to ways of prudence to ſecure and ſave themſelves after the moſt Heroick darings, and durſt not abide by it; you have Elias for an example. Elias, indeed, once daringly offered a great Sacrifice, and gained thereupon the people to kill 800 of Baal's Prieſts, in the midſt of Ahab's and Jezebel's Reign, 1 Kings 18. But when he had done, he ſtayed not by it, but to ſave himſelf he betook himſelf to his heels and run away and went as far as his Legs could carry him, clear out of all Ahab's Dominions and reach, 40 days Journey, even to Mount Horeb, where the Law was given, 1 Kings 19. 8.

Some further Objections may ariſe from the Adventures and ſeeming Hazards of utter ruine, that many godly of the 10 Tribes at ſeveral times made to come to Jeruſalem to Sacrifice. There were three ſpecial times in which we read that many of that people after the beginning of Jeroboam's Reign went up to Jeruſalem to worſhip.

1. Then when the Diviſion had been firſt made by Jeroboam during the ſpace of 3 years.

2. In the days of Aſa of Judah, and Baaſha King of thoſe ten Tribes, ſome 15 years after Jeroboam's death, another irruption out of ſome of the 10 Tribes came unto Jeruſalem, 2 Chron. 15. 9.

3. The third was juſt at the laſt, even but 5 years afore the final ruine of the Nation.

Of any other times we read not (that I know of) of any one's going up unleſs you will credit that which old Tobit ſays of himſelf, Tobit 1. 6. I went often alone unto Jeruſalem to the feaſts; and what the Angel is brought in to ſay (Chap. 5.) of two more that accompanied him at ſome of thoſe times. Yet there it is not he always went when it was duty as well to do ſo, but only often, and that he alone did it, not others of the godly of that Nation in his days.

Now the Circumſtances of thoſe three times ſpecified and the Condition of that people are to be enquired into that it may appear why then it was done by the godly, and not at other times (that are recorded) as that which will give a difference in the caſe, and give light to us in the point in hand, when to adventure and when not, for 'twill be found that none of theſe three Inſtances in the Circumſtances of them will riſe up to prove ſuch an abſolute obligation unto inſtituted Ordinances, but as may ſtand with mercy ſhewn to our ſelves in our lives, preſervation of our lives, and of our Families from ruine. I ſhall therefore make a particular enquiry into the Circumſtances of all theſe three.

1. As touching that firſt fluſh or breaking forth of goers to Jeruſalem, when it was but young-tide with Jeroboam and his Government, we read, 2 Chro. 11. 13, 14, 15, 16. And the Prieſts and Levites that were in all Iſrael reſorted to Rehoboam out of all their coaſts (for the Levites left their ſuburbs, and their poſſeſſions, and came to Judah and Jeruſalem: for Jeroboam and his Sons had caſt them off from executing the Prieſt's Office unto the Lord; and he ordained him Prieſts for the high places, and for the Devils, and for the Calves which he had made) and after them out of all the Tribes of Iſrael ſuch as ſet their hearts to ſeek the Lord God of Iſrael came to Jeruſalem to Sacrifice unto the Lord God of their fathers. But the Circumſtances of the times and condition of the perſons muſt be therein conſidered.

As, 1. That this was done at that time when this alteration together with the government was firſt made, and (which alſo is to be taken along) was practiſed by the people; but the three firſt years, as v. 17. hath it: and although Jeroboam was thus rigid from the firſt towards the Prieſts and Levites (of which by and by) yet it being the beginning of his Government (when Politique Princes proceed by degrees) it may well be ſuppoſed that his being King depending much upon the people, he was a while more ſlack and conniving at the people; and indeed his firſt Declaration (I call it ſo rather then Edict) concerning the Calves and their going up to Jeruſalem was (as to them) publiſhed in ſofter and milder and but exhortatory terms, and without penalties that we read of at firſt annexed, as appears, 1 Kings 12. 28. Whereupon the King took counſel, and made two Calves of Gold, and ſaid unto them, It is too much for you to go up to Jeruſalem, behold thy Gods, O Iſrael, &c. It was but a preſenting to them another worſhip and trying firſt how it would take with them.

2. The condition both of Prieſts and People is to be conſidered, to put the difference, between this and after times.

1. Conſider the condition of the Prieſts and Levites who began firſt, as v. 13. 14. It is apparent that their Removal was Total and forced and abſolutely neceſſitated. They could not chooſe, unleſs they would become Prieſts to ſerve Jeroboam's Calves, for refuſing which it was Jeroboam began with them. 'Twas he and his Sons had caſt them off from executing the Prieſt's Office, 2 Chron. 14. and ſo their livelyhood and maintenance utterly ceaſed, for their portion always had been to live upon Jura templi, upon the revenues due by God's law to the Prieſts as ſerving the Temple, as you read, Num. 18. Deut. 18. and Joſh. 18. all which ceaſed in Iſrael then with their Non-execution of the Prieſt's Office. Only, it ſeems he left it yet free to them to continue in their dwellings, for 'tis ſaid, thoſe they left, their ſuburbs, as v. 14. for, alas! what would that have conduced to their Maintenance, they having no inheritance or Lot of Lands? but on the contrary, if they would remove to Judah and Jeruſalem (which at this dawn of his Government it ſeems Jeroboam yet hindred them not from but permitted them) there they had a ſervice at the Temple waited for them; for in their Courts they were there to ſerve. They had alſo a maintenance by God's appointment ſet out for them, and the Prieſt's ſelf-denyal in this was but as that of Prieſts and Jeſuites now with us in England, who, if they be baniſhed from thence have yet Colledges and Monaſteries and Univerſities to retire unto, where they have employments and other ſervice to do and maintenance ready for them; which different caſe of theirs from others, who, if baniſhed, have meer nothing to betake themſelves to, is not enough conſidered and laid to heart. Yea, as things ſtood, it was every way their intereſt and advantage in this diſtreſs to take this courſe of reſorting to Rehoboam out of all Iſrael.

Then 2. For the People who after them (as 'tis ſaid) both after that time, and after their example, came to Jeruſalem alſo; beſides that (as was ſaid) they as yet had no poſitive prohibition to the contrary (that we read of) further, it is not apparent at al that they did for theſe three years remove their Stations from out of Iſrael, but keeping their houſes and their Lands ſtill did only go up to Jeruſalem to Sacrifice at the uſual times, and ſo it is only ſaid of them, 2 Chron. 11. 16. They came to Jeruſalem to Sacrifice unto the Lord God of their Fathers; and becauſe this is ſpoken with an obſervable difference from what had been ſaid of the removal of the Prieſts (verſe 13, 14.) that they alſo left their dwellings, &c. and that the people here are barely ſaid to go to Sacrifice. Hence therefore it ſeems more than probable that theſe peoples going was only at the feaſts for Sacrifice, but they returned again to their own dwellings and lively-hoods in Iſrael as in former times they had been wont to do. And if ſo, then this clearly argues that Jeroboam's Laws (if any concerning them were yet made) were not as then ſo ſevere againſt the peoples going up (that is, not for theſe three firſt years) as afterwards they were, when by the experience of their going up during thoſe three years he ſaw that the Kingdom of Judah was ſtrengthened thereby, v. 17. And that but three years are mentioned argues that then they ceaſed any more ſo to go up.

On the other hand if the caſe of this people had not ſtood thus free in this reſpect for thoſe three firſt years (as hath been argued) but that they ſhould be thought utterly to have quitted their Station, it had been far harder with them than with the Prieſts and Levites, and indeed unſuportable. And the vaſt difference between the caſe of the Prieſts and the People (if thus ſtated) is very apparent. For the Prieſts and Levites left but meer dwelling-houſes, but had a proviſion for them though perhaps leſs in J*udah* upon their removal, but the people, if they removed were to leave inheritances in Lands, Vineyards, Orchards, &c. which they already poſſeſſed in Iſrael, and that alloted them by God, which if J*eroboam* had been ſo ſevere with them at firſt, as is ſuppoſed, they could not have ſold them neither, for he would have prevented them in that alſo, and if they had liberty to have ſold them, it had been but for the time till the year of the next Jubilee by the Law, which to many, would have been but little profit, for it was but 20 years at the utmoſt, as the Biſhop of Ardmach reckons them, others but 14 between J*eroboam*'s very beginning of his Reign unto the next Jubilee which was the 10. And when they ſhould have come unto Judah they could not have brought any other lands of inheritance there, for thoſe that were that time dwellers allready had their inheritances fixt to them by Divine right, they were, Bona immobilia, immovable Goods, which they could not ſell longer than the next Jubilee, when they muſt have returned, and ſo theſe poor Iſraelites ſhould have had nothing to have lived upon, no, nor to employ themſelves in, in the Land of J*udah*, if thither they had removed.

Neither had they any ground (for ought I know that may be gathered out of the ſtory) to hope for any ſupport or encouragement either from that people of J*udah* or Rehoboam who was not a godly Prince nor ſincerely hearty to the cauſe of Religion, but (2 Chron. 12. 1.) After he had eſtabliſhed the Kingdom (once) and had ſtrengthened himſelf he forſook the Law of the Lord and all Iſrael with him. And in that former place alledged 'twas but thoſe three firſt years that he and they walkt in the ways of David and Solomon, upon which it may therefore well be ſuppoſed that the Godly people of theſe ten tribes ceaſed to go up to worſhip, though in the end he humbled himſelf, and things went well again in Judah, 2 Chron. 12. 12.

But then that after thoſe three firſt years J*eroboam*'s ſeverity interrupted any from going up (as we read of that none did) is very likely and moſt probable, for of J*eroboam* it is particularly ſaid that he began to uſe force and violence to keep the people from going up to Jeruſalem, as the ſummary account which God gives why he removed that nation wholly, at the laſt ſhews, 2 Kings 17. 21. Jeroboam drave the people from following the Lord, that is, from their going up to Jeruſalem, for, indeed, in that did his main interreſt lye, and his Calves was but a device to divert them to another worſhip; and that word, drave from, imports violence to have been uſed. And his way of ſeverity begun by Jeroboam, was continued by other of their Kings both by ſevere Laws, as the ſtatutes of Omri, mentioned (*Mic.*6. 16.) ſhew whoſe Statutes are therefore mentioned, becauſe he was under more ſtrict penalties than ever had enacted the obſervation of the things which Jeroboam had firſt brought in. For unto the level of what Jeroboam had done Omri's wickedneſs is limited, 1 Kings 16. 26. For he walked in all the way of Jeroboam the Son of a Nebat, and in his ſin wherewith he made Iſrael to ſin, to provoke the Lord God of Iſrael to anger with their vanities. And therefore thoſe his Statutes in Micab are to be underſtood as more ſeverely backing what Jeroboam had begun, and this Omri, who made theſe Laws, began his Reign not paſt 30 years after Jeroboams death; ſo that it did riſe up to the higheſt ſeverities very ſoon. And as he was ſevere by Laws, ſo alſo, by way-laying any that ſhould go up to Jeruſalem, which the Jewiſh writers do affirm their Kings did, and how they ſet guards and built watch-towers, on purpoſe, at the paſſages and ways to take and kill them that attempted to go to Jeruſalem, and confiſcated their Goods, and they do ſay that, that place, Hoſea 5. 1. is an alluſion to that practice which their former Kings had uſed upon Mount Tabor and Miſpeh, whereon (ſays the Jewiſh writers) they had placed watch-towers and centinels as gins and ſnares to catch any that ſhould attempt to go up to Jeruſalem; theſe two places being out-lets into the dominion of Judah from ſome part of Iſrael. And that this was one way and courſe taken up & continued by theſe Kings, thoſe Scriptures, do expreſly relate. For of Baaſha that ſucceeded but two years after Jeroboam, it is there ſaid, Baaſha King of Iſrael went up againſt Judah and built Ramah, that he might not ſuffer any to go out or come in to Aſa King of Judah. Now Ramah was on the borders of Benjamin in the way to Jeruſalem, and one freſh occaſion of this deſign had been that (as 2 Chr. 15. 9. relates it) Many in abundance out of Ephraim and Manaſſes and Simeon had fallen to Aſa, and came out from thoſe Tribes to Jeruſalem for the worſhip of God's ſake. And Ramah which he attempted to build was the direct paſſage for thoſe particular Tribes to go into Judah by.

this

See Rivet. on Hoſ. 5. 1.

Jeroboam ut aſſeritur ſatis rationabiliter poſuit cuſtodes in terminis regni, ne quis de reguo ſuo aſcenderet in Jeruſalem, et qui aſcenderent caperentur & occiderentur et confiſcarentur opera eorum. Toſtatus on 2 Chr. 11. quæſt 17.

The Second out breaking over the banks which the Kings of Iſrael had raiſed up to reſtrain their Subjects from inundations into Judah, is recorded, 2 Chr. 15.9, 10, 11, 12, 13. He (viz. Aſa) gathered all Judah and Benjamin and the ſtrangers with them out of Ephraim and Manaſſeth and out of Simeon (for they fell to him out of Iſrael in abundance, when they ſaw that the Lord his God was with him) ſo they gathered themſelves together at Jeruſalem in the third Month, in the 15th. year of the Reign of Aſa. And they offered unto the Lord, the ſame time, of the ſpoil which they had brought, ſeven hundred Oxen and ſeven thouſand ſheep. And they entred into a Covenant to ſeek the Lord God of their Fathers with all their hearts and with all their Soul, that whoſoever would not ſeek the Lord God of Iſrael ſhould be put to death whether ſmall or great, whether Man or Woman.

We ſee this was a Flowing in abundance, and there were two perſuaſives of them to it, 1 God's proſpering Aſa. 2. Their deſires to worſhip God. Yet here in like manner the Circumſtances of that juncture of time, as alſo of the perſons (who and what Tribes theſe were) are to be duly weighed, and will ſtill ſerve to contribute light to us in this great point, both as under what rationally probable apprehenſions men are called to adventure for the enjoyment of Ordinances in the times of ſuch diſtreſs; as alſo in what caſes and Circumſtances, they are to do it.

1. As to the perſons (who and of what Tribes) although the number of them was in a great abundance yet but three Tribes only are ſpecified; and ſo interpreters do much narrow it unto the Godly of theſe Tribes, Ephraim, Manaſſeth and Simeon. To clear which it muſt be further conſidered,

1. That a good part of Ephraim (called elſewhere in this Story Mount Ephraim, 2 Chron. 15. 8. that is the Mountainous part of that Country) had been already brought under the Dominion of the King of Judah ſince Jeroboam's Revolt; firſt ſome by Abijah this Aſa's Father, 2 Chron. 13. 19. Abijah perſued after Jeroboam and took Cities from him, Bethel with the Towns thereof, and Jeſhanah with the Towns thereof, and Ephraim with the Towns thereof. And thoſe Cities were not recovered again by Jeroboam or their Kings, as verſe 20. ſhews. Then again, more and other Cities had been taken by this King Aſa himſelf, 2 Chron. 15. 8.

Other Cities were taken by him, beſides the former by his Father, for it would not have been firſt there, and then again ſo expreſly over and again ſaid that Aſa had taken Cities if they had been no other than thoſe Cities his Father Abijah had taken afore him; and all theſe Jehoſhaphat poſſeſt in his time alſo, as that 2 Chro. 17. ſhews. Now this part of Ephraim bordered upon Benjamin, which was in the Tribe of Judah's Lot, as in Joſh. c. 16. and c. 18. appears.

Then 2. The Tribe of Simeon here ſpecified, lay ſo near the Tribe of Judah, as it had been antiently a part thereof, and reckoned within it, Joſh. 19. 1. And then the three Tribes, viz. Manaſſes, Ephraim and Benjamin, were adjoyning to one another, Joſh. ch. 16. and 17.

So all theſe being immediate Borderers, and ſome of the Cities being already become the dominion of Judah, no wonder if many of thoſe Tribes alſo fell in with Aſa (eſpecially if withal you take in the Circumſtances that follow) and perhaps further many whole Cities of theſe Tribes, beſides thoſe formerly taken by them fell in, and not only particular perſons out of them. And the way lying ſo open and fair to go forth out of theſe three Tribes unto Jeruſalem, it is the leſs wonder that they ſhould in ſuch abundance come up thither, whereas others of the Godly Tribes, among them lying further off and remote, were cooped up and utterly debarred, diſabled, and invincibly hindred from ſo falling in with him as theſe did, and therefore none of them are mentioned.

2. The Circumſtances of the time were exceeding promiſing & inviting of them thus to fall in. And they were ſuch, as I believe that every man will ſay, that if any Godly Zealous Chriſtians were environed with the ſame in the like caſe, they would, and ought to do the like in any age for the enjoyment of the Ordinances of God. Let but the face of the Sky and of the times be conſidered with their difference from other times as both by the Prophecies of the prophets of that age and providence concurring they lay afore them then, and it muſt be ſaid that it was in its ſelf the beſt choice they could make for themſelves (according as was meet for them to judge) to fall in to Aſa, as things lay afore them, and to have done this, tho' there had not been this ſuperadded invitement (the greateſt of all other) that they ſhould have the Ordinances of God to boot. And this we may not aſſert, although we ſuppoſe withal that many of them had quitted their poſſeſſions, for all needed not to do ſo in coming to Jeruſalem, from which City, and the worſhip of God there, their Brethren in other Tribes were utterly debarred.

The Circumſtances of theſe perſons who thus came to Jeruſalem, were theſe;

In general, they had had many demonſtrations and convictions from God of his wrath againſt their Kings of Iſrael, and againſt the People, who willingly continued to cleave to them, and who declared for this very thing of their Calves, and for the driving of Iſrael from the true worſhip.

1. They ſaw an inſtance of this wrath of God by prophecy and a Miracle accompanying it at the very Altar of Bethel one of the new Chapels, whilſt Jeroboam ſtood there to offer incenſe, the Altar cleaving in two, and the aſhes falling out, and the prophet crying out againſt it, Jeroboam's hand dryed up whilſt he ſtretcht it out to lay hold on the prophet for ſo crying. You read the ſtory of this, 1 Kings 13. and this fell out within the memory of theſe Iſraelites.

Then 2. It would have amazed any man to have ſeen Jeroboam for ever after ſo unfortunate, to have obſerved that fatal ſlaughter of five hundered thouſand Men (a ſlaughter ſo great as was never read of afore or ſince any where in the world) out of an army of eight hundred thouſand, and that but by half the number of the King of Judah's men; and this was done when the iſſue and tryal of the battle was in an appeal to God put upon this very gage and cauſe of Judah's retaining the true worſhip, and Jeroboam's having ſet up a falſe (2 Chron. 14. from the 4. v. to the end) To ſee theſe Cities taken from him, yea and his Bethel too, and himſelf ſo weakened as never to recover ſtrength again.

Then, 3. It was an aſtoniſhing ſight to ſee Jeroboam himſelf at laſt ſtruck to death by ſome extraordinary immediate ſtroke of God The Lord ſtruck him that he died, ſays the text, in the 1 Kings 13. 19, 20.

Then, 4. It was an affrighting conſideration to have prophecy upon prophecy iſſued forth againſt his houſe, and one of the loudeſt of them as it were drawn upon himſelf whilſt he himſelf of his own motion would needs ſend his wife Incognitio and diſguiſed to Abijah the prophet, 1 Kings 14. 10, 11, 12. Behold I will bring evil upon the houſe of Jeroboam, and will cut off from Jeroboam him that piſſeth againſt the wall, and him that is ſhut up and left in Iſrael, and will take away the remnant of the houſe of Jeroboam, as a man taketh away dung till it be all gone. Him that dyeth of Jeroboam in the City ſhall the Dogs eat, and him that dyeth in the field ſhall the fowls of the air eat; for the Lord hath ſpoken it. Ariſe thou therefore, get thee to thine own houſes, and when thy feet enter into the City the Child ſhall die: Of the certainty of the fulfilling of all which the prophets gave him a preſent and as ſad a ſign. The Child ſhall die (ſays he) and he names the very time and hour of his Sons death, verſe 12. When thy foot enters the City; and in the 14. v. he declares how it would be that God would raiſe up a King, viz. Baaſha, that ſhould execute and perform all this, and do it within a very ſmall ſpace. And when was it to be done? Even now, ſays God, v. 14. that is, I will not ſtay long, but make quick work with them, I will do it preſently; and he performed all this accordingly on Jeroboam's ſon, and all his poſterity within leſs than two years, ſome ſay, leſs than one after Jeroboam's own death; and of this thing this people (we are ſpeaking of who here fell in with Aſa) knew; for theſe things, viz. both the prophecies and theſe events thereof newly fulfilled afore their eyes, were not done in a Corner, and the people knew this very ſin to be the Cauſe of all this.

Then, 5. It muſt needs have a great influence on theſe perſons, to have heard (which came more home to touch them) the ſame prophets with the ſame breath to have denounced a fatal Captivity and deſtruction of that whole Nation of the ten Tribes as that which ſhould be the end & iſſue of theſe ſins, v. 14, 15. Moreover, the Lord ſhall raiſe him up a King over Iſrael, who ſhall cut off the houſe of Jeroboam that day; but when? even now. For the Lord ſhall ſmite Iſrael as a reed is ſhaken in the water, and ſhall root up Iſrael out of this good Land which he gave to their Fathers, and ſhall ſcatter them beyond the River, becauſe they have made their groves, provoking the Lord to anger. And this is uttered indefinitely for time, for no time is ſet or named when it ſhould be, for ought they knew, it might be that or the next year; and they having had ſo ſignally ſeen the former part of that prophecy, Even now, fulfilled, they might well tremble to think that this Captivity and Deſtruction threatned of the whole Tribes might, they knew not how ſoon, come upon them and their poſterity together with the whole Nation in common if they were found in the ſame ſin.

Then 6. Another thing which had an influence upon them was, To behold the Kings of Judah (theſe two laſt of them eſpecially) one after the other to be holy, good men, and every way to proſper; yea even the Grand-father of theſe two, Rehoboam, (from whom God rent the Kingdom) ſo to be favour'd, that in his laſt times things went well in Judah, and after him his Son Abijah, a godly Prince, to have ſo great a victory, as was mentioned, and to grow mighty thereupon (as in an oppoſition to Jeroboam's decay, it is ſpoken of him, 2 Chron. 13. 21.) And then to ſee this Aſa now Reigning, the third King, an holier man, to ſee how he ſtill to be ſo proſpered, as to have with a few ſo great a Victory againſt the Cuſhites, as to rout an Army of a Milion of men and more, (2 Chron. 14.) and to take all the ſpoil of them, together with the ſpoil of all the Cities about G*erar* from their Confederates THE PHILISTINES.

And then 7. It moved them, when they ſaw, hereupon, a new Prophet ſent from God to Aſa and all his Subjects and Compliants with him to revive the memory afreſh, and their ears to rehearſe the ſum of theſe things to them, and ſo ſpread afore them the infinite vaſt difference God had put between him with them of Judah, and the others, the people of the ten Tribes; and this done on purpoſe to hearten and encourage them that God would ſtill be with them and reward their work, ſetting afore them what and how great miſeries had followed one upon the neck of another unto thoſe of the Ten Tribes.

Thus in the beginning of this 15. chap. ver. 3. Now for a long ſeaſon, ſaith he, (namely, from Jeroboam's ſetting up) hath Iſrael been, v. 3, 4, 5, 6. without the true God and without a teaching Prieſt, and without Law. But when they, in their trouble, did turn unto the Lord God of Iſrael, and ſought him, he was found of them. And in thoſe times there was no peace to him that went out, nor to him that came in, but great vexations were upon all the inhabitants of the Country: Nation was deſtroyed of Nation, and City of City; for God did vex them with all adverſity.

The fourth verſe Piſcator Renders, interpreting the whole round about it of the time paſt, that if ſo be Iſrael (namely the ten Tribes) had turned, when trouble was upon them, unto the Lord God of Iſrael, he had been found of them ſeeking of him. The Vulgar Tranſlation reads all this in the future, as if the Prophet laid afore them what for time to come would certainly be the condition of thoſe Tribes, as thus, Iſrael ſhall be for a long ſeaſon (yet to come) without God, &c. And in thoſe times there ſhall be no peace to him that comes out or in, but great vexation ſhall be, &c. verſe 5, 6. And the Original admitting either interpretation I ſhould take both to be intended; and I am ſure that in the event and matter of fact, both had been the Condition of theſe ten Tribes and had continued to be ſo more or leſs until their final Captivity. But whether it be a Narrative either of what had befallen them, or ſhould hereafter befal them, or both, it ſerves all fully to the mainpurpoſe I cite the Prophet for, which was to move and hearten them of Judah (who both had had, and he promiſeth ſhould have for the moſt part clean contrary diſpenſations from God) to ſet up a reformation of the publique worſhip of God, and together with them to hearten alſo the godly of the ten Tribes (that poſſibly any way could do it) to come over unto them (as v 9. we read they did) and to leave their intereſt amongſt thoſe ten Tribes, and to give themſelves up unto the Lord and his worſhip as the moſt ſafe and ſecure allotment, they, in thoſe times, could any way betake themſelves unto. And that the prophet ſpeaks all this as of a different condition of Iſrael from Judah, is evident, both, 1. In that his ſpeech was directed unto Judah and Benjamin, and that Iſrael are the perſons ſpoken of; Neither, 2. Was it true that Judah had been for a long time without God, &c. but the contrary. And, 3. The ten Tribes were after their ſeparation from Judah ὀνομαστικῶς termed Iſrael; as alſo, 4. He tells them that Judah had enjoyed a clean contrary diſpenſation to this; The Lord (ſays he) is with you, v. 2. and will be whilſt you are with him: And ſo indeed he had been from that firſt ſeparation and rent made by Jeroboam from them until now. And that ſpeech alſo you may put either in the time paſt, He hath been with you, or in time to come, He will be with you; the Original hath left it free for either, or for both, in ſaying only; The Lord with you, only the following words do carry it to the time to come.

Theſe were the Circumſtances of this Juncture of time, and after all theſe things thus related and urged by this prophet, thereupon that followed immediatly in the ſtory, which alſo had followed as the conſequent (at leaſt) of this his exhortation; which ſurely was divulged by Aſa in his gathering them together, verſe 9. And he gathered all Judah and Benjamin, and the ſtrangers with them out of Ephraim and Manaſſeh, and out of Simeon, for they fell to him out of Iſrael in abundance when they ſaw that the Lord his God was with him. So as this ſecond Ebullition and inundation of theſe three Tribes in ſuch abundance was effected in the view and intuition of all thoſe things that have been mentioned; yea and alſo in the vertue and ſtrength of them it was that Aſa did gather ſuch numbers, which muſt have been by ſending unto all Judah and Benjamin, and theſe Tribes, inviting them to come in and to worſhip God at Pentecoſt at Jeruſalem (verſe 10.) and to enter into a Covenant ſo to do, &c.

Now if we look round about the Coaſt and face of theſe times and view the poſture of affairs it will not be much material to enquire whether all theſe of the three Tribes or others of the ten that could remove had quitted their own poſſeſſions of Lands, &c. in their reſpective Tribes, and removed to Judah and Jeruſalem to dwell therein.

It is moſt likely that many of theſe perſons were neceſſitated to abandon their preſent poſſeſſions by reaſon that the people of their reſpective Cities that continued ſtill under the King of Iſrael's dominon, would ſee to it, that thoſe who went out from them ſhould no more return to poſſeſs what they had amongſt them, eſpecially ſeeing thoſe that went are ſaid to fall in to the King of Judah as unto their Prince, and not only to have come to him for the preſent, yea and to have entred into an Oath and Covenant to continue to worſhip God, &c. v. 12, 13, 14.

It muſt ſtill be withal remembred and carried along with us, that theſe three Tribes were near borderers upon Judah; and ſo although they had been inhabitants in ſome of the Cities and Towns under the King of Iſrael's Dominion, yet, being borderers, they had a fairer and ſhorter paſſage to ſlip into Judah, or any of the Cities in theſe Tribes in the poſſeſſion of Judah. 'Twas but a day, or a day and a half's Journey. Yea and that a paſſage was at this time ſomewhat open for them ſo to do, may be argued from this, that Baaſha the preſent King of Iſrael afterwards upon this very occaſion did attempt to build Ramah to obſtruct this paſſage (as the 1. verſe of the next Chapter hath it) which paſſage for theſe Tribes therefore afore (and ſo at this time) lay more free for them to paſs.

But this was not the preſent condition of the Godly, their Brethren in the other ten Tribes, who were diſtant many days Journeys, and who if they would remove muſt adventure far greater perſonal dangers of being taken and intercepted. Would not (think we) thoſe hundred Prophets, whom Obadiah hid in Ahab's Reign, have much rather run away unto Judah, unto the good King Jehoſaphat, then Reigning there, than to have lain hid in a Cave and live barely on bread and water, 1 Kings 18. 4. As the times were harder ſo the diſtance made the difficulty to have eſcaped far greater. Theſe in the heart of thoſe Dominions, or utmoſt parts thereof, were more ſtrictly watcht and encompaſſed and hedged in, and utterly diſ-enabled to remove whole Families.

And the Conſideration of this difference between theſe three Tribes and thoſe others doth afford a great light unto the Caſe in hand, viz. What hazards we are to venture and what not.

But that which I urge and inſiſt on in the caſe of thoſe three Tribes (that did remove and had opportunity without ſuch dangers to do it) as to the ſolving any ſeeming Objection that may ariſe therefrom, is; That, ſuppoſing the loſs of their Eſtates at home (for that we will ſuppoſe) yet ſuch a removal was ſimply and abſolutely in it ſelf beſt for them, and the beſt choice that poſſibly could be made by men conſidering all thoſe Circumſtances fore-mentioned, and they needed not to have much debate, or heſitance what to do.

The experience of ſo many former miſeries which they and their Country-men had run through like one wave treading on the neck of another; the fore-telling that the ſame, or worſe, would continue for a long ſeaſon (as indeed they did) and then the certain prophecies of a final Captivity at laſt to diſpoſſeſs them of all and remove them to Heatheniſh Countries, which continueth even unto theſe our days were, conſiderations ſufficient to make them change their abode, when they ſaw ſuch changes of Princes, Uſurpers over them made and like to be made, as the curſe of their revolt from the houſe of David, when they ſaw ſo unſtable a government, unhinged, and like a reed in the water toſſed this way and that upon every alteration, ſo as they muſt needs make account to hold nothing that was their own in any certain way, but to tire out a dying life in fears and expectations of they knew not what calamities, nor how ſoon to come upon them, and when in the mean time they knew this to be certain, that the oppreſſion of their Conſciences in matters of Religion would continue as long as the Nation.

Theſe thoughts were enough to make them weary of their dwelling, and it was beſt for theſe men in this caſe to quit all, and come into a ſettled ſtable Government, ſecured by a ſucceſſion of Kings of the ſeed of David to which the promiſes were made for after times, whom God afore their own eyes had proſpered hitherto unto wonderment, and to whom the promiſe was, that he would continue ſtill to do great things for them. It was beſt for theſe men to remove into a place where a defence was upon all the glory. Yea, and they had this farther encouragement, that they had ſeen two ſuch Kings farther and ſon, one after the other, ſo truly godly and Zealous of God's true worſhip, and lovers of their Brethren, the godly Iſraelites, whereof the latter now Reigning was holy to an Eminency; and farther they were encourag'd to caſt themſelves upon the brotherly aid and aſſiſtance of their Brethren of Judah and Benjamin, &c. and upon the bounty of ſo holy and large-hearted a Prince as this Aſa was, and who, through the bleſſing of God was newly enriched with ſo great ſpoils (unto a conſecrated part of which they came to joyn in the Sacrifice, v. 10.) and ſo was abundantly enabled to provide for them out of this abundance that fell to him, beſides the other ordinary ways of doing it; who alſo had lately won Cities to put them into (if need were) eſpecially conſidering that this King and this people had invited them to come and gathered them together upon the Sermon of a Prophet ſent from God to that end to worſhip God and propoſed unto them to joyn in a ſolemn Oath and Covenant afore God mutually, and alſo unto God ſo to do. For, by their acceſs the Kingdom of Judah would be (as it was) greatly ſtrengthened and grow in reputation and honour thereby, yea, and finally God had by that laſt Prophet promiſed this King and thoſe of Judah, that their work ſhould be rewarded, v. 7. and to unite and gather together, and ſo to ſupport theſe ſtrangers, their perſecuted brethren in their ſufferings, or to help any others who had afore voluntarily come into them, was one and a great part of that work the promiſe was made unto, that it ſhould be rewarded. Now upon all theſe grounds. Theſe perſons had reaſon to judge that this King and this people were in the higheſt meaſure engaged and obliged hereunto. Since therefore they were in theſe Circumſtances, and were rationally poſſeſſt with theſe and ſuch like apprehenſions, it was moſt eligible for them to leave their dwellings, &c. Though indeed in it ſelf it was an hard and difficult tryal, yet when they were ſo neceſſitated on the one hand and their way on the other ſide was ſo promiſing and ſweet'ned, and on both hands rendred the only way to ſecure and preſerve themſelves and their poſterity, an appeal might be made unto all men to judge if theſe alone were not ſimply motives ſufficient to render it every way moſt eligible, yea and to make them ſo to rejoyce in the good providence of God that had ſo wiſely and ſo graciouſly contrived ſuch a juncture and opportunity and ſeaſon of advantage for them. And indeed their removal is put upon this very thing as part of the ſeaſon of it in the text, v. 9. They fell to him (viz. Aſa) in abundance when they ſaw that the Lord his God was with him, ſo wonderfully with him as hath been related, ſo as the outward proſperous condition of him moved them.

Sir Walter Rawleigh hath ſhewen himſelf as deep-ſighted, and apprehenſive to ſpy out of the Stories and imperfect Narrations of Times, what the face or Scheme of things in any age was, as any Hiſtorian whatever that hath undertaken to ſet forth matters of that Nature. And he gives this Judgment of that juncture of time during Aſa's Reign and puts not only this Remark upon it, that it was the eminent ſole time of advantage (for he could find no ſuch other during the whole 250 years) for the whole people of Iſrael to have tcken the opportunity to have ſet themſelves free from that Idolatry, &c. and to have united themſelves to this Aſa King of Judah their natural Prince, and the people of Judah their Brethren; and he ſpends two whole ſections upon the debate thereof, and that chiefly upon politique and prudent conſiderations. He begins his fifth Section thus, In the Reign of Aſa the Kingdom of Iſrael felt great and violent Commotions which might have reduced the ten Tribes unto their former allegeance unto the houſe of David if the wiſdom of God had not otherwiſe determined. And the ſixth Section begins thus: Any man that ſhall conſider the ſtate of Iſrael in thoſe times may juſtly wonder how it came to paſs either that the whole nation wearyed with the Calamities already ſuffered under theſe unfortunate Princes (from Jeroboam until now) did not return to their ancient Kings and re-unite themſelves with the mighty Tribes of Judah and Benjamin.

And therefore give me leave, not to wonder, if, at ſuch a ſeaſon, multitudes of particular godly perſons of thoſe three bordering tribes, Zealous of the true Religion did thus chooſe to break from that Yoke for a time, when withal, this courſe was preſented unto them to be the only probable way of ſafety, and ſo invited them thereto, and the opportunity lay ſo fairly open for it, eſpecially when the enjoyment of the Ordinances of God was connext with it, and caſt into the bargain to their preſent ſecurity.

3. There was a third going up of theſe Tribes in Hezekiah's time but five years afore the final ruine of that people as a Nation; which was occaſioned and drawn in by an invitation of Hezekiah (as that of Aſa's had alſo been) upon which it is ſaid that Divers of Aſher, and Manaſſes, and Zebulon humbled themſelves and came to Jeruſalem, 2 Chron. 30. 11. when the generality of that people laughed at the meſſage and meſſengers, v. 10.

But then, withal, let the caſe and condition of this people at that juncture of time be conſidered alſo, and it will be found, the people then had a far greater freedom than any formerly had.

Their Condition at that time, in 2 Chron. 30. (not to inſiſt on that which was before-mentioned in the caſe of that ſecond removal) was this, that there were many Cities of the ten Tribes that had continued all along ſubject to the Kings of Jeruſalem from Abijah's, and Aſa's days even to Hezekiah's, whom Hezekiah could command as well as invite to come; Read for this, 2 Chron. 13: 10. and ch: 15. 8. Yea, and it would ſeem that the Cities of Manaſſeh and others of Ephraim had upon the commotions and Miſeries that had fallen out in Iſrael given up themſelves unto Hezekiah, or formerly unto ſome of the Kings of Judah; For 'tis evident Hezekiah had dominion therein what is ſaid (2 Chron. 31. 1.) that after that paſſover the people went and brake down the Images in all Judah, in Ephraim alſo, and Manaſſeh, which being done by Hezekiah's Subjects and with his authority, theſe Cities alſo muſt have been under his dominion.

But that which I principally conſider and urge in the caſe, and which will carry all afore it and defend it from objections is this, That God, in his gracious providence had ſo diſpoſed of this nick and juncture of time that all of the ten Tribes that would, had liberty to go to Jeruſalem to worſhip by the permiſſion of their King who was over them; which was a mercy and priveledge never afore vouchſafed for almoſt two hundred and fifty years. Hoſea was then their King (and the laſt King of their own over them) when Hezekiah ſent this invitation to the ten Tribes, and the power of their Kings had been afore (as appears by 2 Kings 15. 19. and v. 29.) and was (as it remained in this Kings time) much broken; inſomuch that the firſt nine years of the time from the vacancy of the former King whereinto this Hoſea ſucceeded is reckoned by interpreters as a time of confuſion and anarchy of the people, after thoſe nine years when he is reckoned to have become a ſettled King, it was by his having been made but as a Tributary unto Salmaneſer King of Aſſyria (as in 2 Kings 17. 3. expreſly tells us) and who, as many think had ſet him up King, and by reaſon of this dependance, on a foreign Prince, his intereſt was changed from that of thoſe former Kings who had prohibited the going of People to Jeruſalem, out of a fear which they had of their making a party among them for the Kings of Judah, and hence, as for other reaſons which the Circumſtances, wherein he was, led him unto, he, of all the other Kings, gave this liberty unto the people to worſhip as they pleaſed, and this that paſſage (which the Holy Ghoſt, as on purpoſe, hath inſerted) 2 Kings 17. 2. ſeems to ſignifie and point to us, And he did that that was evil in the ſight of the Lord, but not as the Kings of Iſrael that were before him: Thoſe latter words, but not as the Kings of Iſrael that were before him do notanter, remarkably, give a different character of this King from all the foregoing Kings and that in reſpect of that ſin which had been common and univerſal to them all afore, and not of ſome particular perſonal ſins only. Now what had that been but that ſin which is noted all along to have been Jeroboam's ſin firſt, who was the Father of that abomination, and who led the round to all that ſucceeded, and which ſin is heedfully all along from Jeroboam downward affixed to them all that they made Iſrael to ſin as Jeroboam had in worſhipping the Calves at Bethel, and who withal ſeverely prohibited any of their Subjects to go up unto Jeruſalem to worſhip; for that was the main intent that the Calves were ſet up for. This was general to them all whereas Heatheniſh Idolatry (which ſome would have to be the difference) was but the ſin of ſome of them.

Many Interpreters, from hence, do plainly collect and, in terminis, in expreſs Terms, affirm, that this Hoſhea did give liberty to this people, his ſubjects, to go up to Jeruſalem to offer there. The true reaſon whereof was, that the proper intereſt of thoſe former Kings was broken, and he holding of a foreign Prince, ſtrong enough to uphold him, ſcrupled not to quit this ſo long-continued a Law, viz. that prohibition about going to Jeruſalem; and thus Jewiſh writers themſelves have underſtood it: Say they, though Hoſhea himſelf did worſhip the Calves, yet permitted he his ſubjects that would, to go up to Jeruſalem to worſhip in the Temple, which the reſt of the Kings of Iſrael had not permitted, nay did uſe to ſet Watch-men and Gaurds at all ways whereby their people ſhould go to Jeruſalem, to ſtop and hinder them from going to worſhip.

And there is this further evidence for that in 2 Chron. 30. 6. where that ſerious and ſolemn invitation of Hezekiah's is made by Letters and Poſts unto the Cities of the ten Tribes in theſe words, So the Poſts went with the letters from the King and his Princes throughout all Iſrael and Judah, and according to the commandment of the King, ſaying, Ye Children of Iſrael, turn again unto the Lord God of Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, and he will return to the remnant of you that are eſcaped out of the hand of the Kings of Aſſyria. Where you ſee the King is twice mentioned, and the firſt mention doth evidently refer unto Hezekiah and his Princes, who were the writers, and ſenders of the Letters together with the Poſts, and who were at the charge of it; but the ſecond mention in theſe words, And according to the Commandment of the King, do refer (ſays Deodati) unto the Command or permiſſion of the King of Aſſyria himſelf to them who was the ſupream over them, and had aſſented to give them liberty. But I ſhould ſay, thoſe words refer rather unto this Hoſhea himſelf, who though a Tributary King, under the Aſſyrian; was yet left to rule them as to their Religion, &c. as he ſhould order, or elſe ſuppoſe him a King made by the people, and independent on any other, yet ſtill ſo it fell out, that to gratifie all ſorts among the people he had given allowance by an edict that they who would,ſhould go up to worſhip, ; and ſo it was according to their own King's Commandment,that this was done as well as by Hezekiah's invitation and Letters. And truly it cannot be rationally thought that the Letters as written in Hezekiah's name ſhould run in the ſtyle of a Commandment from him, as ſent unto the ten Tribes of Iſrael (whom what follows there doth particularly concern) for they were no way under his Command or Juriſdiction, but ſubjects of another King ; and therefore I take the whole of it up thus, That Hezekiah, the King of Judah, indeed wrote and ſent the Letters, the contents whereof are ſpecified, ſaying, Ye children of Iſrael, &c. But yet withal there had been an edict of granting freedom by their own King promulged, which is termed his Command,and whereas that word ſaying,immediately following the word Commandment, ſeems according to our Tranſlation to carry the contents that follow, as if commanded by that King, we muſt know that in the Hebrew this word, being in the place of a gerund, may and doth refer to the Letters Hezekiah ſent,and ſhews what they contained, and not unto the Command; for, indeed, theſe words, according to the command of the King, are beſt read by way of Parentheſis, as ſignifying a coincident matter with the Letters, as if he had ſaid, that theſe things were done by Hezekiah not againſt, but with an edict of their own King himſelf concurring, and declaring for leave to his people, which Hezekiah took the advantage of.

Indeed, if this Hoſhea their own King had not thus far afore-hand ſomeway declared this, it may well be thought that the entertainment of them that went with the Letters into his Dominion would not have been a mockage in word by the common people, but would have ended in blows rather,or in their having been intecepted at leaſt, ſeeing the people were ſo highly and generally ſpirited againſt them for their Meſſage (which their mocking ſhewed) and for their coming into their Kingdom under the Juriſdiction of another King, and that boldly to invite them unto what in former times had been accounted Treaſon and Rebellion. Certainly, unleſs King Hoſhea had ſome way promulged and made publickly known ſo much as might quiet and hold the hands of this people off from violence unto theſe ſingle perſons the Meſſengers,they would have fallen upon them: But in that they only mocked and went not about ſo much as to excuſe themſelves for their refuſal, which excuſe had been eaſie and ready, if ſo be,they had been under the old wonted reſtraint in this King's days,which had been in force, all this put together would argue that they were indeed really at a liberty to have taken Hezekiah's invitation if they had pleaſed, but that out of their own innate prophanneſs of heart they contemned it (having been for a long time diſuſed thereto)which frame of heart (where it was let thus free to their arbitr'ment)God ſuffered to fore-run and make way for the filling up their own and their fore-fathers iniquity in this particular ſin, and for juſtifying that fatal final Captivity that followed upon the whole Nation ſpecially, and to this purpoſe further the Lord guided Hezekiah in his Letters to write in this manner to them, verſe 7,8, 9. And be not ye like your Fathers and like your Brethren which treſpaſſed againſt the Lord God of their Fathers who therefore gave them up to deſolation, as ye ſee. Now be ye not ſtiff-necked as your Fathers were, but yield your ſelves unto the Lord, and enter into his ſanctuary which he hath ſanctified for ever ; and ſerve the Lord your God, that the fierceneſs of his wrath may turn away from you. For if ye turn again unto the Lord,your Brethren and your Children ſhall find compaſſion before them that lead them Captive, ſo that they ſhall come again into this Land: for the Lord your God is gracious and merciful, and will not turn away his face from you, if ye return unto him: Whereinhe prompted to them , that their Captivity threatned might hereby be prevented, and not only ſo but that their Brethren that had already been led Captive might yet come to have that compaſſion from the Kings of Aſſyria, who had led many of them away, and that God would encline their hearts ſo, as even they alſo ſhould come again into their own land; ſo good and gracious is our God as for the repentance of ſome part of a Nation to be moved to ſhew mercy unto others of that Nation thereupon; which is a very great inſtance to encourage the people of God in a Nation to turn to him and ſeek to him for themſelves and their Brethren.

One thing by the way I muſt here note, That whereas of theſe preſent inhabitants (to whom thoſe Letters were ſent) 'tis ſaid, v. 6. They were a remnant that had eſcaped ſcaped out of the hand of the King of Aſſyria, this paſſage is not to be underſtood as if the preſent King of Aſſyria had not been at this time ſupreme over them and they and their King Hoſhea Tributary unto him, as was noted ; but it is only to be underſtood that by God's gooodneſs this ſmall remnant had eſcaped from being carried Captives as the reſt had been by Pul, and Tilgath-Pilneſer, 1 Chron. 5. 26. 2 Kings 15. 29. and that theſe words (v. 26.) are ſpoken in relation unto Captivity, the comparing of v. 8. and v. 9. ſhews.

There is one appearance more of an argument that they had ſuch a freedom granted them by their King Hoſhea in that the Paſſover having been ended (2 Chr. 31. 1.) All Iſrael that was preſent brake down the images, &c. and after all was done, Then all the Children of Iſrael returned every man to his own poſſeſſion into their own Cities. This being ſo indigitatively ſaid [All the Children of Iſrael] carries this with it, that thoſe of the ten Tribes that had come out of all Iſrael, returned every man to his own City from whence he had come, and where his own poſſeſſion lay, which (if they had not liberty from their King Hoſhea to have come up, ſuch as in former times had not been granted) they could not peaceably have preſumed to have done or to have again enjoyed their poſſeſſions, which alſo that paſſage in Chron. 30. 25. confirms And all the Congregation of Judah with the Prieſts and Levites and all the Congregation that came out of Iſrael, and the ſtrangers that came out of the Land of Iſrael, and that dwelt in Judah, rejoyced. Where we ſee, that, The Congregation, who came out of Iſrael, are diſtinguiſhed from the ſtrangers that formerly came out of the Land of Iſrael, and then dwelt in Jeruſalem: So as the moſt of that Congregation that had at that preſent come, returned to their own homes. And yet I cannot but think that God did perſuade and guide many of their hearts, either at that paſſover or ſome of the next (that for five years followed) to ſtay at Jeruſalem, and ſo they eſcaped that lamentable Captivity, which, after thoſe years ended, fell upon thoſe fore-mentioned mockers in that Nation.

You have ſeen how many inſtances the old Teſtament holds out either for forbearance, or a prudent management of injoying Ordinances, or avoiding the Caſe of Danger.

Object. There's no Objection of moment in the Old Teſtament to the contrary, that I know of, but that of Daniel, Chap. 6. v. 7, 10. Where all the preſidents of the Kingdom, the Governors and the Princes, the Councellors and the Captains having conſulted together to eſtabliſh a royal Statute and to make a firm Decree, That whoſoever ſhall ask a petition of any God or Man, for thirty days, ſave of the King, he ſhall be caſt into the den of Lions: Now when Daniel knew that the writing was ſigned, he went into his houſe, and his windows being open in his Chamber towards Jeruſalem, he kneeled upon his knees three times a day and prayed and gave thanks before his God, as he did afore time. And this indeed is a great Objection ; in appearance, for he neither forebore altogether the practice of the duty, nor uſed any avoidance, or ſo much as a concealment. For if he would have pray'd he might have prayed ſecretly and performed the inward worſhip of prayer which God regards, or he might have performed the outward privately, as for time, he might have done it in the night; as for place, he might have done it in another place, in a privater room; he needed not to have opened his windows ; but yet we ſee that he chooſeth to uſe an open and an avowed profeſſion, ſays the 10th. v. Now when Daniel knew that the writing was ſign'd, that is, knew full well the nature of the Decree, that it was irreverſible, knew his Enemies manner of getting it and their deſign in it, knew full well the danger that he ſhould incur, viz. that the inſtant after he ſhould have done it death muſt follow ; for he knew the King, though he favoured him, could not pardon him ; yet, he never ſo much as deliberates at all whether he ſhould or he ſhould not, but went immediately into his houſe and down upon his knees with his window open, and as ſome read it, did every way do as he had wont.

The argument from hence is this, that when the ſupreme Magiſtrate forbids any part of worſhip of God publick or private, every Chriſtian is bound after Daniel's example to continue to practiſe it with boldneſs, openneſs, yea, in all Circumſtances as he had wont ; there being the like reaſon of all worſhip elſe as there is of prayer.

Anſ. 1. This is perfectly contradictory to all the former inſtances. And in a ſpecial manner unto that laſt, Ezra. 4. 23, 24. They made them ceaſe by force and power, then ceaſt the work of building the Temple.

Anſw. 2. That this example of Daniel ſhould extend unto all duties of Religious worſhip when prohibited by the Magiſtrate, whatever the caſe be, cannot be. For neither were all theſe former inſtances ſinfully acted, nor was Daniel the only valiant man in the old Teſtament, whoſe example ſhould reprove all the reſt. The Scriptures (as our Saviour Chriſt ſays) cannot be broken, and therefore of neceſſity there muſt be found out a reconciliation.

And thoſe that are of that opinion of an abſolute obligation in caſe of ſuch prohibitionsin any part of publick worſhip, without any relaxation,ought not to run away with one part (as yet men uſe to do) but are obliged ſoberly to ſeek to reconcile theſe things as well as we of this other oppinion,and to do otherwiſe is a great contempt unto Scripture;and this Reconciliation is no way done but by finding out the clear ground of the difference from the nature of the duties and the caſes. Our Non-conformiſts in the caſe of the Oath.Ex Officio, in which a man was put upon it to accuſe himſelf in matter of fact, had Chriſt's inſtance was urged upon them, that Caiaphas the High Prieſt by an Oath did adjure him, I adjure thee by the living God that thou tell us whether thou be Chriſt the Son of God, Jeſus ſaid unto him, thou haſt ſaid; And it was inferred from thence that therefore every man was bound to anſwer by Oath unto what he ſhould by theEccleſiaſtical power be put upon.TheNon-conſequence of this did eaſily appear from a contrary practice of our Lord,as that when falſe witneſſes came and ſaid in the words afore, This man ſaid I am able to deſtroy the Temple of God and to build it in three days (which yet in the ſubſtance of it was what he himſelf had, indeed, ſpoken in relation to the Temple of his Body, yet unto this he anſwers nothing. Was it that he had an oath put upon him in the one caſe, which put the difference? No, he might have choſen whether he would have accepted of that Oath or no; yet, he thought himſelf bound to anſwer to the one,but not to the other.

There was therefore in this caſe this ground of difference ſuggeſted by thoſe good men, between the one caſeand the other,that the ſubject matter whereabout he was askt was differing. The one was matter of fact, but the other was matter of confeſſion. A point of abſolute neceſſity to declare himſelf the Son of God, which was neceſſary at that time, or elſe for ever his Teſtimony ceaſed. For his Enemies were reſolved to put him to death, it was neceſſary, eſpecially for the matter of it, it being that great point both of his concernment, and our faith, That he was the Son of God. And the difference of theſe two doth give a rational ground why he anſwered to the one and not to the other. The like may be obſerved when they askt him Concerning his Doctrine, he refuſes to anſwer (John 18. 20.) becauſe it was matter of fact in what he had preached, of which afterward.

Things that are thus like in all appearance have yet in the foundation of them a vaſt difference, and ſo will this Caſe of Daniel's be found to have from the former Inſtances.

1. There have been ſome who have denyed that it was well done of him, but that he was ſimple and fooliſh in it, and needleſly expoſed himſelf to Death; for he might have prayed, ſay they, 1. Inwardly, and ſo have performed his Duty, At leaſt, 2. If he would pray with bodily worſhip,he might have done it privately,or at night,and in another place.

But this opinion is confuted not only becauſe the Holy Ghoſt hath recorded this great act of his, and alſo that it is witneſſed unto, by ſo great a deliverance from God, which ſhewed God's acceptance of it, and alſo that Darius, a Heathen, did witneſs upon it to Daniel's integrity in thoſe words,Thy God whom thou ſerveſt continually he will deliver thee (v. 16.) But alſo becauſe Daniel himſelf (verſe 22.) puts it upon this reaſon, For as much as before God innocency was found in me, and (*v.*23.) No manner of hurt was found upon him, becauſe he believed in his God.

2. Others ſay it was an Heroick extraordinary act that is not to be drawn into Ordinary Example. But we have no Warrant to think ſo, and I ſhall not have recourſe to extraordinaries whereby to difference it from the former Inſtances.

3. It yet muſt be acknowledged to be a ſpecial act in a ſpecial caſe, whereof perhaps ſuch another inſtance is not, in all points, to be again found in the Old Teſtament.

4. I will tell you what the good old Non-conformiſts principles were in this caſe. Their practice is known, that when they were ſilenced from preaching by the Magiſtrate,or Biſhops, they forbare preaching all their days,and afterwards when the way of going to New-England had been ſtarted, ſome that were but in danger of the High Commiſſion removed unto New-England, and ſo avoided the ſtorm (as Mr. Cotton did, leaving the bulk of his Church here) and when this Inſtance of Daniel was urged Mr. Cotton gave this account of it.

He uſed to produce that example of Ezra's ceaſing the building of the Temple conſtrain'd by force, for juſtification of the Non-Conformiſts forbearance, and ſuffering themſelves to be ſilenced and then being ſilent: ſo, in anſwer to this place of Daniel and reconciliation of both, and for the clearing of either, he put this ſubſtantial difference between the one and the other, That Daniel's caſe came under an immediate duty of the firſt Commandment, which was perſonal prayer unto God, as alſo under a duty of Confeſſion to be made of the true God, in which caſe there is no room for mercy or preſervation of a man's ſelf; but he is called to lay down his life in that caſe. But that other Inſtance in Ezra, and the like, was the forbearance of an outward inſtituted worſhip, and ſuch an one Temple-worſhip was, Sacrifice, and the like, parallel to our Ordinances of preaching by Miniſters, and to our Churches, Sacraments, &c. and that of theſe latter with difference from the other Chriſt's rule holds true, I will have mercy rather than Sacrifice (which was the Temple-worſhip) Sacrifice being the higheſt Inſtances of inſtituted worſhip.

I ſhall enlarge this Notion and proſecute it farther.

I ſhall, 1. Conſider the Nature of this fact of Daniel's, in the Subſtance of it. And,

2. Inſiſt on the differences of other caſes.

3. I ſhall remove Objections that may be made from his retaining of outward Circumſtances, kneeling openly and toward Jeruſalem, as he had wont every day to do.

1. The ſubſtance of the act is a Complex of many things which, when ſtated, and firſt conſidered apart and then put again together, will aford a clear difference from the Caſe of other outward Ordinances. Calvin inſiſts on two things, as I obſerve out of his Comment, as Mr. Cotton alſo hath done.

1. That the Object of the prohibition was, that none ſhould pray to God for a Month together; and then he further adds that it came under the nature of the Caſe of a Confeſſion of God. Now I will not lay all the ſtreſs of the whole weight upon each of theſe apart ſingly (though each would bear a rational ground of difference from the former inſtances) but on the whole Complexion of all together.

1. The Object of the Edict was, that none ſhould pray at all unto God; for it runs thus, To eſtabliſh a Royal Statute and to make a firm Decree, that whoſoever ſhall ask a Petition of any God or man for thirty days, ſave of the thee, O King, he ſhall be caſt into the den of Lions. * Calvin firſt makes a great matter of this that prayer ſhould be thus forbidden, becauſe that in the worſhip of God Prayer is the top and the chief worſhip, and the higheſt Sacrifice of all other; and it is at large urged by him that it is that we own ſimply to God in all conditions; a duty whereby we are to witneſs God to be the Author of all good to us, to acknowledge our dependance upon him for all benefits, either to come which we obtain by Prayer, or paſt and preſent; and therefore, in Daniel's practice here (v. 10.) as he prayed ſo he gave thanks before his God. It is by prayer that we offer up our Deſires and Vows unto God and caſt all our cares upon him, which if we forbear we ſhew we can be without God, without His help, His aid; whereas if he withdraw, we periſh every moment; and this we are to do every day. Now, to make a Decree that whatſoever a man's diſtreſs be, if he be ſick he muſt not pray, if under luſts, if he were near unto death (as a man might think) he muſt not pray or call upon God for a moment together, would be to make an edict againſt all Religion: † And others alſo urge it unto ſuch a purpoſe as this; we further put it, it was againſt Nature, the Law of Nature (as the Dutch Annotations ſay) For, the Heathen Marriners in Jonah's Ship, when in danger of death, called every man upon his God.

1. Hence then, there is this difference between Daniel's Caſe and that of Inſtituted worſhip; That, in this caſe of Daniel, Prayer in the general Univerſal Nature of it was prohibited, not Family-Worſhip or Aſſembly-Worſhip, but all; and Prayer thus

---

* Cum in adoratione et cultu dei primas partes obtineat precatio—— ne quiſquam oraret erat manifeſta et craſſa nimis abnegatio pietatis —— and again that it being præcipuum Sacrificium— taken is immediately Natural, and needed no ſuper-added Inſtitution, but it is Eſſentially Worſhip, it is Cultus Eſſentialis, and not Medium Cultûs, as to pray in a Congregation, and the like, are, and ſo it doth differ wholly from Inſtituted prayers in a Church, &as put up by one man as the Mouth of the reſt; ſuch were Temple-Sacrifices, Synagogue-Prayers and Preaching, which are parallel to ours.

† Hence, ſays Calvin, Cum Rex vetaret uſque ad totum menſem ullam precationem concipere, hoc erat exigere a ſingulis ut Deum abnegarent. Edictum Darij pugnat cum jure naturæ. Quod enim quemq; docet et convincet eſſe Deum ac proinde colendum Polanus. Again he ſays, Infringeret Daniel jus omnibus Hominibus innatum. Alſo, Willet on Daniel, Cap. 6. quæſt. 16.

2. Add unto this that it was not only Commanded that thus prayer, in the general nature of it, and then ſimply conſidered ſhould be forborn (though that had been an horrible impiety againſt the immediate Law of Nature, the higheſt Law of Nature that is for the worſhip of God) but further, this Act of Daniel's, in the Circumſtances he ſtood in, roſe up to be a Confeſſion and Profeſſion of the true God as God, which he muſt have renounced if he had forborn; and Calvin makes that a ſecond ground of this act of *Daniel'sſome interpreters puts it upon that though they extend that profeſſion unto too great a Latitude, and leave the reader at an uncertainty about it. † Calvin himſelf makes a diſtinction of two ſorts of profeſſion, excluding the one as not binding us, and in the other he ſpeaks limitedly, and uncertainly, in ſaying, Quantum neceſſe eſt in cultu Dei, as much as is neceſſary, he doth not ſay what is abſolutely neceſſary, but that in the worſhip of God we ſhould not give any ſign of a perverſe and preſidious diſſembling, as if we caſt off godlineſs; which I would ſay too.

* Quod ad profeſſionem ſpectat neceſſe fuit, &c Calvin.

Externus jus cultuſetum fuit loco confeſſionis veri dei. Polanus.

† Duplex eſt profeſſio, ne que; enim dico, ſays he, quicquid ſentimus paſſim vulgandum eſſe, ita ut ſtatim rapiamur ab hoſtibus, ad Mortem.— and ſecondly Quantum neceſſe eſt and therupon he ſpeaks uncertainly, limitedly, Sic nos contineamus in cultu Dei, ut nequod ſignum perverſæ & perfidæ ſimulationis dem macſi abjiceremus pietatis ſtudium.

To explain this head, I ſhall diſtinguiſh thus: Confeſſion is taken indeed;

1. Largely for the manifeſtation or holding out of any particular practice or duty, point or truth of Religion, of any or every Command of God whatſoever; for in holding forth of theſe, their is a profeſſion (as we call it) runs alongs with all theſe. Now there is no man will ſay, that a man is bound to hold forth every truth he believes, although he is prohibited to ſpeak it; Haſt thou faith? (ſays the Apoſtle) have it for thy ſelf; which is alſo the thing that Calvin aſſerts, that as there are many truths which a man may forbear to ſpeak, as not being bound to do ſo, ſo many practices in which it is meet to forbear; and yet in all theſe there is a profeſſion runs along; for in theſe Caſes their not profeſſing is not a denying ſuch a truth or practice, but a concealing it, and forbearing to hold it forth at ſuch and ſuch a time, which at other times and in other caſes we would do and were bound to do. Therefore the prudent ſhall keep ſilence in that time, for it is an evil time, Amos 5. 13. And this holding forth of duties or truths or practices in this general nature is rather profeſſion than confeſſion; And here there muſt be found a right joint or rational ground of difference, to Judge what we be bound to profeſs and what not, and at what Times and Seaſons.

2. There is Confeſſion ſtrictly and properly taken: which is not at large a profeſſion only, but an abſolute Confeſſion of God, wherein we muſt deny God, if we don't affirm him, if we conceal our ſelves, and our Faith. And Confeſſion ſo taken is a tranſcendent thing, and comes up into the firſt Commandment, and is all one as to avouch God to be a man's God, and to love God or to fear him.

This called in Scripture Confeſſion, with this additament, and a not-denying of him, John 1: 10. when the Jews ſent Prieſts and Levites from Jeruſalem to ask John the Baptiſt, who art thou? as ſuppoſing he might be the Chriſt, it is ſaid, He confeſſed and denied not, but confeſt, I am not the Chriſt; and (ſays he, v. 27.) He it is, who coming after me, is preferred afore me, whom afterwards he pointed unto.

This muſt not be extended to every forbearance of a truth, or of an Ordinance, though prohibited by a Magiſtrate's Command. When therefore the point of abſolute Confeſſion is urged, as abſolutely neceſſary, the Queſtion ſtill muſt be, and conſideration muſt be had, of the Nature of the duty, and of the truth, which, in ſuch and ſuch caſes to forbear or conceal, would be truly and plainly and really a declining it.

It is not barely, and hand over head that every man is bound, by the Law of Confeſſion, preſently to perform any or every practice, or any or every truth that the Magiſtrate ſhall interdict for the preſent; for concerning things of ſuch a degree there may be ſome other Rule from God, who may warrant me to the contrary, as that which hath been inſtanced in of mercy and not ſacrifice. Our Saviour Chriſt would not tell the Jews by what Authority he did theſe things; but he made a poſitive anſwer when he came and was put to it whether he was the Son of God, or no, by Caiaphas the High-Prieſt (and as it is ſaid) by all the Aſſembly, Luke 22. 70. Art thou then the Son of God? and he ſaid unto him, Te ſay that I am; and they ſaid, What need we any further witneſſes? for we our ſelves have heard it out of his own Mouth. When they askt him of his Doctrine, as preacht by him, he would not directly anſwer, John 18. 19, 20, 21. The High-Prieſt asked Jeſus of his Diſciples, and of his Doctrine, Jeſus anſwered him, I ſpake openly to the World, I ever taught in the Synagogues, and Temple, whither the Jews reſort, and in ſecret have I ſaid nothing: Why askeſt thou me? ask them which heard me, what I ſaid unto them; behold they know what I ſaid. If any honeſt godly preacher were Queſtioned, by an Adverſary that had power, what he had preacht at ſuch a time and ſhould refuſe to give in a Coppy of his Sermon, and the like, they would be apt to cry out upon him, and upon others alſo perhaps, who are godly, Are you aſhamed of what you have preacht? do you go from your Doctrine? which if you don't confeſs openly, or forbear to tell it, you do, would they ſay. Yet, but take it as it had been preacht and then it is matter of fact, and he is not bound to confeſs it. Our Saviour Chriſt's example warrants it, referring them unto witneſſes; but when they askt our Saviour Chriſt, whether he was the Son of God, or no? and what his Faith and Conſcience in that point was, he anſwers roundly, and without heſitation, though he knew his life lay upon it; and this is that good Confeſſion which he witneſſed that Paul ſpeaks of to Timothy (1 Tim. 6. 13.) which, whether it include not alſo that Confeſsion of his to Pilate himſelf, That he was a King, and that for this end he came into the world, may be a Queſtion, for the words will bear either ſenſe, that he witneſſed before Pontius Pilate or under Pontius Pilate as Governour.

I come now to the Point of Daniel's act of his praying in theſe Circumſtances and in this manner, and to conſider it, as it was a point of the higheſt ſort of Confeſsion ſtrictly and properly taken, ſo that if he had not ſo confeſt, he muſt have denyed God, and if he had forborn he muſt have renounced Religion.

1. The Command (as was ſaid) was to ſuſpend all prayer to any God for a whole month's ſpace, which was to bring in total Atheiſm for ſo long a time, and to take away all worſhip that Daniel had left him, or was capable of performing. For there is no Worſhip can be performed without invocation of God. Prayer was by their Synecdoche ſignally all worſhip; yea and it was ſo according to their own principles that procured this Law; for themſelves worſhipt ſome God or other, which they did under the common notion and acknowledgement of a Deity and a God-head, and therefore to ſuſpend prayer to him for that time was to make a Law that there ſhould be no acknowledgement of God in the World during that time, according to their own principles; and therefore I ſee moſt interpreters do ſtate it upon the whole of Religion, that forbearance of prayer would have been the abnegation of it, and therefore Daniel, by ſuch a Total and viſible forbearance (having been accuſtomed to ſuch a Confeſsion) muſt thereby have given by a viſible withdrawing and concealment a viſible profeſsion there was no God extant to be worſhipt. And his opening of the Window toward Jeruſalem in this caſe, became a viſible profeſsion that the God that he Worſhipt was the God that dwelt at Jeruſalem and had ſeated himſelf there between the Cherubims formerly, and kept the ſame place ſtill.

And 2. In this Decree not only God and all his worſhip is taken away, but a King, and a mortal Man was ſet directly up in the room of God and unto the denyal of this God, for ſo the Decree runs, not to ask a Petition of any God or man for thirty days, ſave of the King.

This King was exalted above all that was called God, the true God and all God's elſe (in oppinion ſuch) by this injunction to pray to none other God but unto him. For this was to ordain that during that time he ſhould have all the reſpect and homage and reverence to be brought in to him inſtead of worſhip to God; and ſo though ſuch Petitions put up to the King in the mean time, were but in Civil things for the matter of them, and ſuch uſually, were preſented at other times, and ſo the Petitioning was in it ſelf but a Civil act, as petitioning to a King is; yet in this caſe That all petitions to any God or Man muſt be forborn and none put up but unto the King, this was interpretatively a Worſhip of that Man becauſe he was addreſſed unto, in lieu and ſtead of all addreſſes, or worſhipping of God, and becauſe it was to be to him with excluſion of God as thereby acknowledging no other God but him all that while. In this caſe therefore further, for Daniel to have concealed himſelf, inviſibly worſhipping the true God,had been a Manifeſt Denyal of God, and in a viſible manner.

Theſe Corollaries may be drawn from the former Examples.

1. We may admire the good and gracious providence of God, that in the times wherein his wrath was ſo high and great upon the generality of the ten Tribes during 254 years, and in the times of ſuch great diſtreſſes as theſe were upon their Conſciences; he ſhould yet work out a liberty for any of them through a ſpecial providence at ſuch ſeveral ſeaſons. Yea, and the advantage which God did caſt into the ſecond, as alſo the third ſeaſon of liberty, upon their removals, for the Ordinances, is very remarkable in the Event and ſucceſs thereof.

1. As for the Second Company that removed in Aſa's time; They firſt came to live under the proſperous Reign of Aſa, who reigned after this their falling in to him many years, and Jehoſhophat his Son, a godly man, ſucceeded him and reigned many years; ſo as theſe, in the Event and Succeſs by coming into Judah, enjoyed an age of reſt and proſperity and a fulneſs of Ordinances with it.

Then, 2. They eſcaped very great miſeries, which the ten Tribes fell into, as Benhadad's invaſion and the change of Government, and Governours, Zimri, and Omri, and Tibni (Sir Walter Raleigh reckons ſeven of their Kings in Aſa's Time) and beſides that they eſcaped the Heatheniſh Tyranny in Ahab's Time, which was the worſt time the ten Tribes had.

Then for the third Company, who removed in Hoſhea's time, if it fell out that they removed their Stations altogether (as ſome think they did, becauſe of that, 2 Chr. 30.25. where it is ſaid, All the Congregation that came out of Iſrael, and the ſtrangers that came out of the Land of Iſrael, and that dwelt in Judah, rejoiced, ſo there was great joy in Jeruſalem; for ſince the time of Solomon the ſon of David, King of Iſrael, there was not the like in Jeruſalem) or if any of theſe ſtrangers were of thoſe that came up unto the paſſover upon Hezekiah's invitation, in the former part of the Chapter, and placed their dwellings in Judah, then God in his providence did graciouſly guide them unto a great preſervation of themſelves and their poſterity; for five years after Sennacherib came and carried the generality of the Nation away Captive, and the eſcape of this Calamity was the good which they got by removing for Ordinances according to Abijah's prophecy given in Jeroboam's Time; and beſide that theſe Strangers are twice ſaid to be thoſe that came out of the Land of Iſrael, which argues that they were of the ten Tribes.

Further, if you compare the Style that is given the former ſecond Company that came out in Aſa's Time, (2 Chron. 15. 9.) you will find, that they are ſaid to be the Strangers out of Ephraim, and Manaſſes, and Simeon, ſo as God owned and highly rewarded this their practice of a removal for the enjoyment of the Ordinances of God in a continuance.

2. Theſe things were written for our example that we thereby might have light to guide us, and all theſe inſtances ſhew that as for any abſolute obligation to inſtituted Ordinances (that fall back, fall edg, we ſhould be bound to them) that aſſertion (whoever would maintain it) will come to nothing afore theſe Examples.

1. They fall ſhort, and no ways riſe up to any ſuch proof; For,

1. All theſe three Inſtances ſhew that thoſe godly Iſraelites came up to Jeruſalem upon opportunites and advantages afforded them in the providence of God, and not ſimply upon the abſolute obligation unto theſe ordinances. For you read of no more ſuch coming up in the interims, but only theſe three times, which, how they were Circumſtantiated, you have ſeen.

And, 2. Thouſands of others out of other Tribes, as godly as they, did not remove when theſe did and yet are blameleſs, and this becauſe of the difference of the caſe as hath been explained. I will allude to what James ſays, Go take ye all, the Prophets of thoſe Tribes for an enſample (the enumeration of whom that were during thoſe 250. years doth ariſe to a great number) take alſo the 7000 that had not bowed to Baal, and the 100 prophets hide in the cauſes; take alſo Obadiah and his caſe, who is ſaid to fear the Lord greatly, who being Governour of Ahab's houſe, could not be ſuppoſed to have removed to Jeruſalem for Ordinances in thoſe times, though no man had more opportunities to get away than he, if he could have removed once for all;

for he had the liberty to go through one part of the Land by Ahab's appointment, 1 Kings 18.6. and at other times could by the authority he had at Court, have taken the liberty to have gone out at any time, but being in a great calling of truſt to Ahab, and doing ſervice to the people of God in hiding ſo many Prophets, &c. he forbare. And Elijah that met him, reproves him not at all for it; yea he hath the commendation of the Holy Ghoſt himſelf, that he feared God greatly. And for Eliah himſelf, the Lord Commands him expreſly to hide himſelf, and names a ſafe place, 1 Kings ch. 17. verſe 23.

3. We read not of any in the Interims of theſe three times and ſeaſons that did remove; which is to be put upon this ſuppoſition, that the oppreſſions of the times hindred them, as it did the former, and that there ſhould be but theſe three times mentioned only, and a ſilence in all times elſe for ſo many years, argues that they caſed in the Interims between.

4. The Rule and Meaſure given at firſt, I will have mercy and not ſacrifice; was the ground of all this, and cuts off any alledged abſolute obligation; for if they were bound at all times and in all caſes, then they were not to forbear at any time for mercy ſake, for then there were no room at all for it: The equity of which rule was then extant, as it had been in all ages, and muſt be to the end of the world; and one of the prophets of theſe ten Tribes of thoſe times did firſt utter it, Hoſea 6. 6. and Jeſus Chriſt applies it unto the breaking of the Sabbath, in caſe of mercy, by plucking the ears of Corn; as alſo in the caſe of eating the Shew-Bread, which David did, and then of the Prieſt's toiling, as much as men in any calling do, which Chriſt calls a prophaning the Sabbath, and yet ſays that they are blameleſs, Mat. 12.

5. Nay, the omitting of an Inſtituted Ordinance, for mercy ſake, is far leſs than the breaking of it, and this is but a forbearance, for Mercy's ſake, of which we ſpeak.

Object. But you will ſay, that Mercy to our Souls is to be conſidered, and it is mercy to our Souls to enjoy Ordinances, and they are to be preferred to all things elſe.

Anſ. 1. I anſwer, it is true, this will go a great way, and weigh againſt many difficulties but yet we are to conſider this; That mercy to our ſouls by Ordinances, depends upon our Edification by them, and what that will prove to be, and that edification depends upon God, as he will make them to be profiting; and ſo now if God comes in between and ſays, I will have mercy, he can make ſuch means as we have (in the want of theſe other means) edifying to us, when as thus he calls us, to ſhew mercy to our ſelves. And he that hath given us this rule, out of his mercy and grace, will be ſure to perform the other part of edifying us when he thus calls us out of the ſame grace.

2. Inſtituted Ordinances, though they have power of Obligation over us, for our edification, yet not when it is to apparent deſtruction, as the Apoſtles themſelves had power for edification, but not for deſtruction.

3. There is ſome mercy to be ſhewed to the Magiſtrate, that we ought not daringly to meet in ſo open a way, as we know before-hand will provoke and irritate them to perſecute us.

4. The Ordinances in the performance of them require quietneſs and reſt, in mens Spirits at leaſt, we cannot pray when we are alone without diſtraction, much leſs can we worſhip God, when we are rationally under certain fears, Deut. 12. 9, 10, 11. Ye are not yet come to the reſt and to the inheritance which the Lord your God giveth you: But when ye go over Jordan and dwell in the land which the Lord your God giveth you to inherit, and when he giveth you reſt from all your enemies round about, ſo that ye dwell in ſafety: Then there ſhall be a place which the Lord your God ſhall chooſe to cauſe his Name to dwell there, thither ſhall you bring all that I command you, your Burnt offerings and your Sacrifices, your Tithes and the Heave-Offering of your hand, and all your choice Vows which ye vow unto the Lord. And they forbare many Ordinances in the mean time (as in verſe 8.) Ye ſhall not do after all the things which we do here this day, every man whatſoever is right in his own eyes. The equity of which may be drawn from the Apoſtles Example. Paul, though he had an open door, yet, having no reſt in his Spirit, left Troas. And it will in a great meaſure hold, that men ſhould not meet in the midſt of fears and terrours, when they are full of fears within and terrours without. It being alſo a diſhonour to the Ordinance when the Aſſemblies are by force broken up, and the like: Therefore men ſhould ſo meet both as to time, and place, as it is rationally probable that their preſent meeting may be in ſome ſafety, through ſecrecy and privacy. And God did, by his ſpecial promiſe, ſecure his people under the Old Teſtament, that when they went up to appear before the Lord thrice in the year, that no man ſhould deſire their Land at thoſe times, (Exod. 34. 24.) which he hath not done to us in the like caſe.

2. But you will ſay, yea, but the glory of God is intereſted in our uſe of theſe Ordinances.

Anſ. I anſwer, That if God will be ſo gracious to us as to quit that conſideration of his own glory for mercy to our ſelves, as we have cauſe to be thankful to him for it, ſo to conform our ſelves unto this exception which himſelf hath made.

2. Men yet are to put themſelves to much loſs, inconvenience, and difficulties to enjoy the Ordinances, as this people of the ten Tribes did.

1. In the beſt times it was a wearineſs to the people of the ten Tribes, ſo remote, to go up to J*eruſalem* three times a year; though to the next Tribes it was not much labour: and J*eroboam* uſed this as an argument upon the experience which the people had had, as what he thought would move them the more readily to forbear; 'Tis too much for you (ſays he) to go up to Jeruſalem, 1 King. 12. 28. It was an Argument ad populum, he ſpake their hearts, and that which was like to take their hearts, and as what had been a burden to carnal Spirits among them. And truly, do you meaſure it now, you that have Country-houſes, how do you excuſe your ſelves from coming up to Ordinances, and if you had been put to it ſo much as they were to travel ſo far, you would grudge at it much more. It was alſo grievous to ſuffer great reproaches, to be made gazing ſtocks (which, thoſe that went in the firſt three years of Jeroboam, muſt needs be ſuppoſed expoſed unto from the generality of the people) and to be accounted next door to Traitors in going unto the Quarters of a Prince, whoſe yoke they had caſt off.

But more expreſly it is ſaid in that third remove in Hoſea's time, that the meſſengers and meſſage of invitation by Hezekiah was mocked at, and laught to ſcorn by thoſe Tribes ſent to, 2 Chron 30. 10, 11. The Poſts paſſed from City to City through the Country of Epraim and Manaſſeth even unto Zebulon; but they laughed them to ſcorn and mockt them. Nevertheleſs divers of Aſher and Manaſſes and Zebulon humbled themſelves and came to Jeruſalem. Of theſe it muſt needs be judged that they were mockt and laught to ſcorn to purpoſe as they went out, or went along, and the word nevertheleſs imports that they went Maugre thoſe reproaches, and deſpiſed the ſhame diſpiſings and ſcorns.

Then, 2. The Prieſts in that firſt of Jeroboams times removed unto their great loſs as to their outward eſtate, for the revenues and perquiſites of the Temple which the Prieſts lived much upon, were (as Sir Walter Raleigh ſays) very ſmall. And as for the people, thoſe of them that came up and loſt their inheritances of Lands, muſt needs ſuffer much more loſs, as hath been argued, and enjoy a mean livelyhood in compariſon to what they had in their own Country. Yet we ſee in what caſes they did remove for Ordinances, an much therefore is to be allowed of loſs of this way to enjoy the means for our Souls, yet ſo as to look as nature is the foundation of grace and the exerciſes of it, and if that ſhould fail, the exerciſes of Religion would fail alſo, as we ſee in ſickneſs, &c. ſo it is here, that there muſt be a ſubſiſtence laid as a foundation for the enjoyment of Ordinances, which, when there is, though it be with much loſs and abatement, we are to rejoyce in that as in a great portion, Iſa. 30. 20. The people ſhall dwell at Zion in J*eruſalem.* To dwell in Zion at Jeruſalem is to enjoy the Ordinances at J*eruſalem*; for Zion was the ſeat of them, and unto ſuch it is ſaid, v. 20. Though the L*ord give you the bread of adverſity and the water of affliction, yet ſhall not thy Teachers be removed.* Bread and Cheeſe and the Goſpel was ſaid (in time of Old) to be good fare.

* Sir W. R. p. 452. The poverty of the Tribes of Levi muſt needs have bin exceeding great at this time, all their lands and poſſeſſions in the ten Tribes being utterly loſt, and the oblations and other perquiſits from thoſe ten Tribes by which they lived being now cut off.

3. The conſideration of the Circumſtances theſe ſtood in, both thoſe that went up to Jeruſalem, and thoſe that forbore, may inſtruct us, and give us light into our duty, and practice.

1. It inſtructs us, what proportion of mercy to our outward condition is to be weigh'd with Ordinances upon which we are to forbear, or not to forbear.

2. It directs us that upon the rational fore-ſight of the ſame or like extremities, we ſhould know how to guide our ſelves in our adventures to enjoy Ordinances where the like hazards are run, and the like vigilances to hinder them are uſed, and ſoberly and conſcientiouſly to conſider of every opportunity we adventure to take, how probably ſecure it is, and not raſhly, hand over head, ruſh upon and adventure upon all or any dangers, come what will.

4. As for the Caſe of the removal altogether to enjoy them elſewhere, if it be ſaid that this we ought to do as they did, Go take the ſame ſtate and Circumſtances, and ſo it ought to be. I Anſwer,

1. When it is to the ruine of Families we are not obliged, as theſe were not, that could not remove themſelves and Families without ruine.

2. Parallel, put our caſe with theirs in thoſe times, and it will appear far different, as will appear eſpecially in the ſecond inſtance when many of them removed for altogether, 1. They removed out of a Land over which the wrath of God hung, and was denounced againſt it, unto a Land where they ſaw that God was with them, and that is made one ground of their Remove, 2 Chron. 15.9. 2. They removed to ſtrengthen the Cauſe of God, which needed them in the Land they removed to. And 3. They were invited by a potent and able Prince and his people, who thereby were obliged to provide for them. 4. There was a final Captivity threatned in the end, by God, unto that Land from which they removed. And in this caſe for men to remove for Ordinances, was as if Proteſtant Borderers upon any Popiſh Country where the inquiſition reigns, which Country they alſo knew was deſign'd to ruine, ſhould remove, being invited unto a Neighbouring Nation where the cauſe of God is, and all the advantages Mentioned. But to remove,

1. From a Nation where there is a bulk and body of Saints that need the ſtrengthning of their Brethren; which is made one argument in the caſe of them that went in Jeroboam's time that they ſtrengthned Rehoboam.

2. Where there is hope of a Reſurrection of a good cauſe, which was no way their caſe but the contrary;

And 3. To remove from Ordinances to a place where the wrath of God is more impendent, or at leaſt, no leſs.

And 4. Where they can promiſe themſelves no proviſion for their Families, but muſt put themſelves out of their Calling and ſerve God with diſtraction, and are like to ſtarve with their Families; In that Caſe they are not obliged to a remove elſewhere, meerly for the Ordinances ſake, but to a forbearance rather and waiting upon God.

I ſhall now give Inſtances out of the New Teſtament, and here firſt: Let the Prudence, which our Saviour Chriſt uſed in caſe of appearance of danger, be conſidered.

Before I give you the particular inſtances, I premiſe theſe few things.

1. Our Lord was wholly free of any the leaſt tincture of ſinful fears, therefore what he did is to be reſolved into Prudence, applying it ſelf to the providence of God; and he, being God as well as Man, could have preſerv'd himſelf until his hour came without any hidings or withdrawings: therefore his example herein muſt needs be for our inſtruction to guide us in the like caſes.

2. When his hour to ſuffer was come, as himſelf ſpeaks (which had been by a ſet compact and agreement between the Father and him, made known to the Son; for, John 18.4 it is ſaid, he knew all things he ſhould ſuffer, and elſewhere, that ſo it was appointed) then indeed he avoided not.

Theſe things premiſed, I come unto the particular Inſtances of his avoiding danger, and the occaſions of them, which we ſhall find to have been but prudential fore-ſeeings and warineſſes to preſerve himſelf till indeed the hour appointed by his Father, and conſented to by himſelf ſhould come. Go tell that Fox (ſaid he) I do cures to day and to Morrow, and the third day I ſhall be perfected. But before that time he was managed by the Ordinary providence of God, as to what would befal him, and accordingly applied himſelf thereto. And hence he becomes an example unto us in two things.

1. How we are to manage our ſelves under the Ordinary Providence of God, which we are alway under, not knowing what will be the Event of things.

But 2 When we are called to ſuffer, then we ſhould, after his Example, not withdraw, as in caſe we are neceſſitated to ſuffer by Providence we ſhould then arm our ſelves with the ſame mind as he did.

Object. An Objection is and hath been made by ſome, that the reaſon of his avoiding was, that he was to go and preach over all the Cities of Judah, and therefore it was all one to him when, and whither he did with-draw, ſince he ſtill was not out of his way; which is not the caſe of Ordinary Miniſters that are bound to a certain place.

CVI II. Anſ. 1. The Anſwer is, 1. That be it ſo, that whither ever he went he ſtill had an employment to wait upon him; yet ſtill it is evident, that the cauſe of his remove from that place where he was afore, was matter of prudence and avoidence, and that the Inſtances will ſhew; and therefore that remains ſtill as an Example for us.

Anſ. 2. Miniſters, who are by the like Providences (as Chriſt was) taken off, may wait, that in ſome other places unto which they may remove they may have ſuch employments as the providence of God ſhall call them to, for the Exerciſe of their Miniſtry; as the Diſciples that were ſcattered by Perſecution, in Acts 8. went up and down preaching, Acts 11.

Anſ. 3. That was not the ground why Chriſt did remove, who had not yet gone over the Cities of Judah; for we read it expreſly ſaid, that he went again to the ſame place that he was at afore.

1. The firſt Inſtance that we have of Chriſt's avoiding danger, is in Mat. 4.12,13. Now when Jeſus had heard that John was caſt into priſon, he departed into Galilee. And leaving Nazareth he came and dwelt in Capernaum which is upon the ſea coaſt in the Borders of Zebulon and Naphtali. That Galilee, that he went into, was not that part of Galilee which Herod had who was of a perſecuting Nature, but which Philip had (as Grotius out of Joſephus ſhews) and the occoſion of his avoiding was but only when Jeſus heard that John was caſt into priſon, namely, by Herod, and ſo it was time for him to look to himſelf, and thereupon he ſecured himſelf. It was but upon hearing that John was caſt into priſon, no more; only rationally thinking his turn might be next. Grotius in locum.

2. In like manner we have an account, John 4. 1, 2, 3. When therefore the Lord knew how the Phariſees had heard that Jeſus made and baptized more Diſciples than John (though Jeſus baptized not but his Diſciples) He left Judea and departed again into Galilee. Here again, though Chriſt knew only that the Phariſees had heard (which is remote enough from this, that Jeſus made and baptized more Diſciples than John) and although he had a plea for himſelf that he baptized none, yet upon this occaſion he left Judea and departed again into Galilee. It was that he knew that ſuch a report of him would contract an envy upon himſelf, and an Odium from the Phariſees, and ſo he avoided it, and breaks off, when he was in the midſt of an Employment, with as much ſucceſs as any he had at any time elſewhere afore or after.

3. We have another Inſtance, Mat. 12. 14, 15. Then the Phariſees went out and held a Council againſt him how they might deſtroy him: But when Jeſus knew it he withdrew himſelf from thence, &c.

4. There is another Inſtance, Luke 4. 29, 30, 31. And they roſe up and thruſt him out of the City, and led him unto the brow of the hill (whereon their City was built) that they might caſt him down headlong. But he paſſing through the midſt of them went his way; and came down to Capernaum, a City of Galilee, &c. and not only went his way for the preſent, but removed to another place.

5. We have another Inſtance, John 8. 59. Then took they up ſtones to caſt at him, but Jeſus hid himſelf, and went out of the Temple, going through the midſt of them, and ſo paſſed by.

6. There is another Inſtance, John 10. 39, 40. They ſought again to take him, but he eſcaped out of their hand. And went away again beyond Jordan into the place where John at firſt baptized, and there he abode.

2. We have alſo Inſtances of the Apoſtles.

1. Who after Chriſt's Death until his Aſcenſion, met ſecretly with the doors ſhut and in the night, John 20. 19. Then the ſame day at evening, being the firſt day of the week, when the doors were ſhut where the Diſciples were aſſembled for fear of the Jews, came Jeſus and ſtood in the midſt, and ſaith, Peace be unto you. And again a Second time after eight days, v. 26. The doors being ſhut. And after eight days, again his Diſciples were within, and Thomas with them: then came Jeſus, the doors being ſhut, and ſtood in the midſt, and ſaid, Peace be unto you.

2. After Chriſt's Aſcenſion, the Church by flying avoided perſecution, Acts 8. 1. And at that time there was a great perſecution again the Church which was at Jeruſalem, and they were all ſcattered abroad throughout the Regions of Judah except the Apoſtles. And although the Apoſtles ſtaid becauſe they were extraordinary Officers, and had not a Commiſſion yet from God to depart from Jeruſalem, which afterward they had, yet the Church was ſo leſſened by the Diſciples ſcattering abroad (for which the Diſciples had warrant by reaſon of perſcution) That the Apoſtles might the ſafelier ſtay; and we read that for praying and preaching in the like caſes they met in the night, and by parts, Acts 12,12. And when he had conſidered the thing, he came to the houſe of Mary the Mother of John, whoſe Surname was Mark, where many were gathered together praying, James and others of the Brethren being in another place, v. 17.

CHAP. IX.

Two Caſes reſolved, whither a perſon who, is not a Church-member may be the ſubject of Baptiſm. Whether a Miniſter who is not a Paſtor, may Adminiſter Baptiſm.

I Reſolve the caſes propounded into theſe two Queſtions.

1. Whether one that is not a Church-member may be the Subject of Baptiſm ?

2. Whether one that is not a Paſtor in a particular Relation to perſons that offer themſelves to be baptized may baptize them ? And if he Adminiſters it,under what conſideration he doth it, whether as a Miniſter,or otherwiſe as a private perſon ?

Queſt. 1. Unto the firſt Queſtion I ſay theſe two Things :

1. The examples in Scripture do clearly hold forth, that perſons that were not in Church-Fellowſhip were yet baptized.

1. The firſt Inſtance is of the Eunuch, baptiz'd by Philip, Acts 8. If it be ſaid,that he was a Proſelyte, and ſo of the Jewiſh Church, and upon that ground a ſubject capable of Baptiſm. The reply is, that his being of the Jewiſh Church did not make him capable of the Goſpel-Baptiſm, of the Ordinance under the Goſpel which we call Baptiſm.

1. For when John Baptiſt baptized, he bid them ſay not, they had Abraham for their Father, which yet was a ground for Circumciſion, as under the old Covenant Adminiſtred, but he requires Repentance and Regeneration, which is the Goſpel-Initiation into the Kingdom of Heaven.

2. Again Peter (Acts 2.) being to baptize Jews, baptizeth them, not upon the account they were the Seed of Abraham, but upon Faith and Repentance, which he calls them to. He only tells them, that if they would turn to God, then God would renew the promiſes unto them and their Children, yet in a Goſpel way, namely, by vertue of their being call'd, as the 39 verſe hath it; So as the ground upon which men were Members of the Jewiſh Church, and Circumciſed, was not the ground upon which they were baptized ; And therefore the Eunuch was not baptiz'd upon any ſuch account. The diſpenſation of the Covenant was altered,and the application of the Ordinances had accordingly an alteration. So then, if he were not baptized as a Member of the Jewiſh Church, and when he was baptized, was a Member of no Goſpel-Church Inſtituted, then it neceſſarily follows, that a perſon who is not a Member of an Inſtituted Church,or a particular Congregation, may be the ſubject of Baptiſm.

2. The ſecond Inſtance (which alſo is an anſwer to the former Objection) is of the Jaylor, and his houſhold, and of thoſe baptized by Paul, 1 Cor. 1. 14. They to be ſure were not of the Jewiſh Church, for the Jaylor was a perfect Heathen before, to the inſtant of his Converſion, yet he and his Houſhold were baptized before Morning.

If it be ſaid that Philip and the Apoſtles were perſons extraordinary. I Anſwer, That ſtill the extraordinaries of their Office, did only enable them with an extraordinary power over all Churches, and over all perſons with an extraordinary Authority, but could not convey a requiſite qualification unto an ordinary perſon, which was ſtill required however in the ſubject that was to be baptized. They could not adminiſter the Lord's Supper out of a Church, nor never did; and although they had extraordinary power over all Churches,yet that did not make all Churches one Church, but there remained Churches diſtinct according to that ordinary Capacity of them as Chriſt had inſtituted. And ſo it muſt be ſuppoſed in this Caſe.

2. The apparent difference that is between Baptiſm and theLord'sSupper in their ſe-veral intentions, doth ſhew that the one is properly the Ordinance of a particular Church, and the other of the Univerſal.

1. Becauſe Baptiſm is a baptizing of a ſingle perſon into Chriſt, and conſequently into the body of Chriſt (as 1 Cor. 12. 13. imports) and is but an act of a ſingle perſon unto a ſingle perſon (as the Inſtance of Philip and the Eunuch, being alone ſhews) and it belonging not unto a particular Church, as the former Inſtances declared, it muſt neceſſarily belong unto the Univerſal Church, as Eph. 4. 4. ſeems to hold forth, One Lord, One God, One Baptiſm, One Body.

2. As for the Lord's Supper, it is as evident that it was properly the Ordinance of a particular Church embodied together, 1 Cor. 10. The bread which we break, is it not the Communion of the body of Chriſt? It is the bread which we break, ſo that there muſt be a number of perſons to celebrate it. For theſe we muſt be many, for, ſays he, We, being many, are one Bread and one Body, verſe 17. It doth not hold forth the Union of ſingle perſons with Chriſt, or any ingrafting into him, as Baptiſm doth in the firſt Initiation; but it holds forth a joynt and a common participation. 'Tis the Nature of the Ordinance it ſelf, for the Inſtitution is, Eat ye all of this, and drink ye all of this. Inſomuch as the Apoſtle ſays, Tarry one for another, 1 Cor. 11. 33. Inſomuch alſo as it had the Denomination from the meeting or gathering together of many, and therefore was called Σύναξις. Therefore to come together into one place, and to eat the Lord's Supper, are put, as it were, mutually one for the other.

Queſt. 2. I come now to conſider the ſecond Queſtion, whether the Child of a perſon truly godly, not in fellowſhip with you, may be baptized by one who is not a Paſtor, and under what notion, whether as a Miniſter or no?

1. I ſuppoſe that Infant-baptiſm of Parents godly is warrantably in its ſelf required.

2. I ſuppoſe that the Judgment, whether the perſon is godly, yea or no, whoſe Child is baptized, properly belongs to him that baptizes it. There is this difference between Baptiſm and the Adminiſtration of the Lord's Supper; That it is a ſingle act of him that baptizeth to the perſon baptized: but the act of bleſſing the Bread and Wine (which we bleſs) it is a joynt act together with the Church, and the Miniſter doth give it to the whole as Chriſt did. And therefore the Judgment of the Church, that a man is godly, may ſatisfie the Miniſter's Conſcience for his adminiſtring the Lord's Supper among them; he not applying it to this or that perſon, but in the point of Baptiſm 'tis otherwiſe, as is clear.

3. If it be (as by reviewing the firſt queſtion it appears) the right of men out of Church-fellowſhip, as well as in Church-fellowſhip to be baptized: This muſt be done by ſome body; and the Judgment that is to be paſt concerning the perſon is not incumbent upon a whole Church only or chiefly, but upon the ſingle perſon that is to baptize. So as for a warrant of his Judging ſuch a perſon to be godly, and the Child to be godly, it is not abſolutely neceſſary that he have the Judgment of a Church for it. And if there were not a lawful way or means by which, after the Apoſtles times thoſe out of Church-fellowſhip, which were converted might be baptized; Then Jeſus Chriſt had not made proviſion for all times of the Goſpel as well as for the firſt, in ſo great an Ordinance. If therefore it does lye upon ſome, thoſe muſt either be Miniſters or others, if it lyes upon others, you know the inconveniency that will follow upon that. If it lyes on the Miniſter, the Queſtion is, whether as a Miniſter or no? To that I ſhall give this clear anſwer, That a man that is ſet apart by his own vow to God profeſſed by his acceptance of that Calling, when he was called to be a Miniſter in a Church (and it hath the Nature of a vow on his part, and is ſo accepted of him by God) by vertue of that publique conſecration and dedication of himſelf unto the ſervice of Chriſt as a Miniſter; he is to be lookt upon as a Miniſter, not only unto them of his own Church, but occaſionally alſo as he ſhall be call'd to ſuch an act of the Miniſtry as he ſingly may perform, as to preach or to baptize, which when he does, he does it as a Miniſter, and with the bleſſing of a Miniſter, and with the promiſe made to a Miniſter. If one come to him with a caſe of Conſcience, as to a Miniſter of Chriſt, he hath the bleſſing of a Miniſter, and the promiſe of a Miniſter and the guidance of a Miniſter to reſolve it, and by like reaſon, if any one come to him and call him to baptize, he hath authority to do it. And this does no way prejudice our Congregational principles: for it is a ſingle Act of the Miniſtry, and but occaſionally put forth as he ſhall be call'd thereto: But the Matter of Ordination and of governing the Church or ruling, it is not a ſingle act, but is to be performed with others; for 'tis an act of authority or power over others, but it is not an act of power above others, or which others have not. Our Presbyterian brethren fail in their practice, and in their argument, in that, they, becauſe they are Miniſters, therefore aſſociate themſelves together, and take power over the Churches to rule them and govern them whether the Churches do call them or no. And call them to it as Churches they cannot, unleſs they give away thereby and prejudice that power which is ſeated within themſelves, as in a body, and ought to be exerciſed among themſelves; and not without themſelves in a Judicature that is without them. If I were ſeated in a Pariſh that had a Church in it gathered out of it, and the reſt of the Pariſh came to hear me, I ſhould not look upon my ſelf to preach as a private man to all theſe that are not in my Church, and as a Miniſter only to them that are of the Church, but as one ſet apart to the work of the Miniſtry; to preach as a Miniſter to both, as to the matter of preaching: And that (as I take it) by vertue of what is ſaid, Eph: 4. 12. He gave Paſtors and Teachers as well πρὸς τὸν καταρτισμὸν τῶν ἁγίων, for the joynting in of the Saints, which is Converſion, as well as for the edifying of the body of Chriſt.

CHAP. X.

Whether a Church may depoſe an Officer for a Crime which deſerves not Excommunication.

THat a Church may not diſclaim an Officer for an offence which is not worthy of Excommunication appears to me evident from this Reaſon, becauſe you are to exerciſe the ſame patience towards an Officer, as an Officer, in matter of Crime, that you are to uſe to a private Member, and ſo you are not to diſclaim him from being an Officer, on a leſſer account than you would excommunicate him. According to that Rule (which nature dictates) to entreat an Elder as a Father. (And this in caſe of cenſure.) This is a main duty of a Church to a Miniſter, and by a Rule of equity grounded on Nature, in the duty of Children to a Father, not to renounce him for that fault for which they would not renounce a Brother.

Object. All this runs upon a falſe Suppoſition, (viz.) that an Officer may not be diſplaced for a crime cleaving to the Adminiſtration of his Office.

1. Becauſe, what crime may be cured by a leſſer cenſure, needs not a greater; but crimes that cleave to the Adminiſtration of an Office, may be cured by the diſplacing of the Officer, which is a leſſer cenſure, therefore there is no need of Excommunication, which is a greater.

2. As an Officer cannot be choſen out of the Body, being guilty of ſome crimes; ſo the ſame crimes may be juſt matter of his diſplacing after his being choſen.

Anſw. The Objection ſeems to intimate a diſtinction between ſins cleaving to the Adminiſtration of his Office, and ſuch as are otherwiſe common to him as a Brother, and that for ſuch he may be diſclaimed as an Officer, when he could not have been ſo as a Brother.

But 1. I do not ſee that the Scripture putteth any ſuch diſtinction between theſe two ſorts of ſins, that for the one an Officer ſhould be diſplaced, when not for the other. I am ſure that other ſins than ſuch as cleave to the Adminiſtration of his Office, are promiſcuouſly put together with the other, and alike forbidden in him, 1 Tim. 3. 2. A Biſhop then muſt be blameleſs, the husband of one wife, vigilant, ſober, of good behaviour, given to hoſpitality, apt to teach. And ſo it Titus 2. 2. That the aged men be ſober, grave, temperate, ſound in faith, in charity, in patience. So as the caſe of any ſuch crimes is all one with thoſe cleaving to the Adminiſtration of his Office.

Ubi Scriptura non diſtinguie, ibi nec nos diſtinguere debemus.

2. This your diſtinction doth run upon a falſe Suppoſition; as if the Subject to be conſidered in your treating with an Officer in matter of crime, were not the perſon, and that as he is a Saint and Brother, as well in ſins of his Office, as in other ſins; for though he is inveſted with a relation of Office (by vertue of his Gifts, and your choice) Yet the diſcharge of his Office faithfully is from his Grace; and the neglect of it (for which in ſuch a caſe you would diſclaim him) is but a fruit of his ſin, from contrary corruption, and a failing as he is a Saint, ſo as in matter of ſin you cannot diſtinguiſh his being a Saint and his being an Officer. Surely it is in this as in other Relations: a Brother being an husband as well as a brother, a Brother being a Maſter as well as a Brother, and he being an Officer as well as a Brother all theſe Relations do oblige them to ſeveral Duties) which, if they fail to diſcharge, you are to deal with them all as Saints failing in duty, ſeeing they are defects of Grace, and you have not in Church-fellowſhip one way of dealing with an Husband, if he ſins againſt his Relation, another with a Maſter of a Family if againſt his; and ſo neither a peculiar one for an Officer if he ſin againſt his. All the duties of the diſpenſation and of his Office, are but the duties of his particular Calling, and Relation, wherein, if he fail, (through corruption) he is to be dealt with as another brother who fails in his Relation, or neglects the duties of his Calling and no otherwiſe than the ſame Officer ſhould be, If he ſins in any other State: And though it be a ſin againſt the Church more immediatly; yet it being but a ſin, God's Ordinance is to have it reclaimed, the ſame way that all ſins are, Mat. 18.15,16,17. you cannot ſhew a Warrant that God hath given this peculiar power in this caſe over an Officer to diſclaim him as an Officer, in way of an Ordinance, till he grow ſo hardned as he deſerves Excommunication.

Your firſt Reaſon for it is, becauſe ſuch Crimes may be cured by this as a leſſer cenſure, and ſo needs not a greater.

In this your Reaſon, if you view the expreſſion, you will find that you again ſpeak upon a falſe ſuppoſition, as if we had affirmed, that crimes in the diſpenſation of his Office did always need the Excommunication of the Officer. But our exception lies in this, that when his Crime needed not Excommunication in your own Judgment: but you thought that to be too great a cenſure, You ſhould diſclaim him as an Officer, when as on an Officer there is no ſuch cenſure to be inflicted for matter of Crime in his Office, until it comes to that height as it deſerves Excommunication. And that therefore it was violence in you to be ſo haſty to proceed ſo ſeverely till he had deſerved it.

1. 'Tis true, that ſimply diſclaiming an Officer (if for inſufficiency) is leſs than Excommunication: But then 'tis not a cenſure, for that reſpects Crime, But to diſclaim an Officer, in caſe of Crime and Sin, is interpretative as much as Excommunication. For if diſpenſed according to the word, it ſhould not be done till he were paſt cure; and ſo ſhould be joyned, or rather included, in Excommunication.

2. The fault we find lies in this, that you make this invention of diſclaiming an Officer, a Church cenſure, and ſo an Ordinance of God coming between Admonition and Excommunication to cure a man, which we affirm you have no warrant for: So that though it be a leſs puniſhment than Excommunication (if he had deſerved it) would be, that being a delivering up to Satan, yet you muſt not take on you to invent other puniſhments, as you are a Church, than God hath ordained; you have your power, your honour, your lives from Chriſt & your puniſhment (as 2 Cor. 2. 6. excommunication is called) from him alſo. In a Colledge you might invent twenty leſs puniſhments than expulſion: But in a Church you muſt invent none that God hath not ordained: And you have not the power that mens Courts have of varying their puniſhments who having Law to warrant them, uſe leſs violence under that conſideration than you, who have neither God's Law nor man's to juſtifie your proceeding herein: And whereas you think becauſe 'tis a leſs puniſhment, it may cure him, and ſo he ſhould not need Excommunications. I anſwer

1. That which muſt cure muſt have God's bleſſing and promiſe of bleſſing annexed, and ſo be his Inſtitution: but that this is ſuch, we deſire a warrant. It may cure him as a Croſs (as an injuſtice done in a Civil Court may, and an unlawful ſuſpenſion may do the man much good) but that is an accident, and no warrant for you to inflict it.

Yea, 2. What is it in him you would cure? would you cure him as an Officer? or cure him as a Saint and Brother? if as an Officer (as would ſeem by inflicting puniſhment anſwerable to his ſin, he ſinning in his Office you would puniſh him in his Office to cure him) how improper a remedy is this for his cure? which caſts him off, deſtroys him as an Officer, Lames him for uſe and exerciſe of his Office puts him out of it for ever? Doth that Surgeon cure a hand, that in going about to make it ſound, makes it as an hand forever unuſeful, though he leaves it a member ſtill? Doth any man puniſh his Members ſo for failing in their Office? Will they cut off till there be no hope? Would you cure

him as a Saint or Brother when you muſt forgoe that diſtinction of puniſhing him as an Officer for Crimes in his Office, when not as a Brother, ſeeing he is conſidered by you as a Brother in the time of his Office.

And therefore ye are to proceed with him for ſins in his Office, as with a Brother, if he have committed ſins, and uſe the ſame means for his cure that you would do to a Brother for his ſins, you muſt uſe admonition and patience, till his ſin comes to that height that it deſerves caſting off as a Brother by Excommunicating of him. Yea, you ought to treat him with more patience in this kind than you would do to Brother, for he is more. Entreat him as a Father.

2 Reaſ. Your ſecond Reaſon drawn from the inſtance of Abiaſhar, who remained a member of the Jewiſh Church, when put from his Prieſt-hood, the only warrant from Scripture you alledge, how remote is it from the caſe in hand?

For 1. It was not an act of Eccleſiaſtical, but Civil power, The text ſays, Solomon thruſt out Abiathar from the Prieſt-hood; it was the King did it, 1 Kings 2. 27.

And 2. Not for a ſin in the diſpenſation of his Office, but for High Treaſon: So it ſerves not your purpoſe at all.

3. For which Treaſon he was a man of Death, verſe 26. and that he remained alive and ſo in their Jewiſh Church, was from the King's pardon, I will not at this time put thee to death, verſe 26. He only thruſt him from the Prieſthood, which he forfeited in forfeiting his life: And ſo was part of the puniſhment included in that other Death.

Yea, 4. It was done to fulfil a particular word of Prophecy; and no way as a ſtanding Ordinance to cure him, ſo, v. 27. That he might fulfil the word of the Lord, which he ſpake concerning the houſe of Eli.

And 5. In reſpect to his Office, Solomon was ſo far from heightening his puniſhment more than to another Brother, that he therefore ſpared his life, becauſe he had born the Ark of the Lord. Whereas he put Adonijah and Joab to death, being in the ſame Treaſon with him.

Object. 2. "As an Officer cannot be choſen out of the body, being guilty of ſome "Crimes, ſo the ſame Crimes may be juſt matter of diſplacing after his choſing.

Anſw. 1. If you have thoſe Crimes, mentioned, 1 Tim. 3. in your Eye take them but as eminent infirmities that ſtand with ſincerity, as there the Apoſtle ſpeaks of them, yet if eminent, ſuch an one (if other ſupply may be had) is not to be choſen; yet conſider,

1. That thoſe ſins and infirmities there mentioned are not only ſuch as are found in the diſpenſation of his Office; but others alſo, as was ſaid afore. So that you muſt ſay, that, not only for ſins cleaving to his adminiſtration, but of any other kind he is to be diſclaimed.

And 2. Thoſe infirmities are mentioned as Rules for the choice of Officers, not of caſting out one choſen, as alſo to ſhew what an one a Biſhop ought to be after choice, ſo v. 1. If a man deſires the Office of a Biſhop: And ſo is to be choſen, let him be blameleſs, and it reſpects choice. So of a Decon, v. 10. Let him firſt be proved, then let him uſe the Office of a Deacon. The Rule therefore reſpects choice, Chap. 5. 9. Let not a widow be taken into the number under threeſcore years, &c. ſtill thoſe Rules were intended to direct choice. But, if after choice, theſe as infirmities were found in them, he ſays not, they are to be caſt out unleſs obſtinate, and ſo it proves more than an infirmity; ſo as thoſe places will no way afford a ground for this.

And for your inference thence; That if he may not be choſen, being guilty of ſuch Crimes as are there mentioned; that therefore after choice, when guilty, they are juſt matter to caſt him out.

The Anſwer is, 1. We grant it, if obſtinacy be joined to them, and ſo he deſerve Excommunication: but ſimply, the guilt of them as infirmities (and they are no more till obſtinacy and impenitency be added to them) is not juſt matter to caſt out after choice and Ordination.

2. If you mean otherwiſe, that the ſole guilt of them ſhould require it: There is not the ſame Reaſon for not choſing at firſt and diſclaiming afterwards. There is a vaſt difference to be put.

For, 1 In and before Choice there is an arbitrarineſs and freedom, and no obligation to chuſe this or that man: But after he is choſen and ordained, there is an obligation by a ſolemn Covenant, the Covenant of God; and by Ordination the ſeparation tion of him unto the ſervice of Chriſt in that Church. Hence therefore, becauſe their choice is an act, wherein they are free, and wherein they give ſo great a Teſtimony to the Man, to be qualified according to the Apoſtles Rules; they become partakers of his ſins, if they choſe him with thoſe Infirmities, and ſo ought not to chuſe him, becauſe it is a ſin.

But when he is once choſen, and ſo great a Covenant paſſed, and ſo great an Ordinance as Separation paſſed upon him, then thoſe his Infirmities (though ſins in him) are not approved of by you, though you diſclaim him not; if you uſe the means God hath appointed for the cure of him, which is Admonition with patience; yea and by vertue of your Covenant you are to bear with them (if they be but Infirmities) though in his Adminiſtration of his Office, becauſe that Covenant cannot be ſo arbitrarily broken as it was made (as your Rule would make it) but binds, as all other Covenants do, till ſome other Rule warrants a diſclaim. The ſame Rule for chooſing and diſclaiming, is not commenſurable each to other:

Which 2. Appears in this, that not only thoſe crimes here mentioned, but ſome circumſtances alſo, though no crimes, are given as Rules to divert from a Choice, which yet by reaſon of the Covenant paſſed, ought not to procure a diſclaiming after Choice. For v. 6. He is not to be one newly come to the Faith; (though never ſo well Gifted, for that he ſuppoſeth, and ſo in thoſe days it ſometimes fell out through the effuſion of the Holy Ghoſt at firſt) leſt he fall into Pride, but if choſen once, ſhould that have put him out? Or if he is one againſt whom after he was choſen, thoſe without had raiſed ill reports, ſhould this neceſſitate a diſclaiming, becauſe this, if it had fallen out afore, ſhould have diverted his Choice? v. 7.

3. See this in other Covenants that paſs: Marriage is a Covenant of God, which until made, many infirmities and circumſtances, &c. may and ought to divert one from chuſing ſuch or ſuch a perſon, which after cannot be a warrant for a divorce: for it is the Covenant of God. You muſt divorce in no caſe, but ſuch as God in his Word gives power and warrant for.

4: See it in another Inſtance more near the caſe. A private Chriſtian, that ſeeks admiſſion, being found guilty of any crime, without Repentance: The Rule for his admiſſion is, that he muſt teſtifie Repentance, and ſo ſatisfie the Church of the truth of his Grace and Repentance of thoſe ſins: But if he be once admitted, and in Covenant with you, you ought not preſently to diſclaim him as a Brother, till he doth repent, but to admoniſh him as a Brother, 2 Theſ. 13. 15. and with patience bear with him, uſing not only one admonition, but a ſecond alſo, ere you reject him, Titus 3. 10. and this in caſe of Hereſie; the moſt dangerous of ſins to Church-fellowſhip, and not indeed to reject, till it comes to obſtinacy; becauſe now he is in Covenant with you; now the proportion as ſtrongly holds between the Choice of an Officer, and his caſting out as an Officer; and the admiſſion of a Brother, and his caſting out as a Brother; the Covenant that binds to the Officer, being as ſtrong as that which binds unto a Brother.

5. Upon commiſſion of ſuch crimes, he is made uncapable for the preſent of Choice (until Repentance) but not ſo, for the ſame ſins after Choice, unleſs you would make him fall in his Office, ipſo facto, and make him uncapable of admonition, &c. Therefore there is no way par ratio, before and after chuſing.

Again 6. If a man had been guilty of ſuch crimes, yet if he had repented, he might be choſen: Then eſpecially after Choice, if he be guilty of them, upon Repentance he might be continued in his Place; why otherwiſe would you have received him in again? and for his Repentance, why ſhould not all the ſame means and patience be firſt uſed, as is uſed for a Brother's, and ſo not a caſting off, as there is not the caſting off a Brother.

Yea 7. If an Officer ſhould be thus diſclaimed, he would not be under all thoſe Ordinances that a Brother as a Brother is under, but in a worſe caſe far: For towards a Brother, Chriſt hath appointed admonition upon admonition with patience (till ſuch obſtinacy be added, as it juſtly calls for Excommunication, which as it were unwillingly they pronounce upon him) as means to reclaim him ere he be renounced as a Brother; and ſhould it not be thus to an Officer? An Officer is capable of ſin in his Office, as well as a Brother; (for he that is moſt ſpiritual may be tempted, Gal. 6. 1, 2.) and ſo is capable of reproof in his Office, as well as a Brother, Coll. 4. 17. Say to Archippus, fulfil thy Miniſtry; and alſo of publick rebuke for ſins proved by two or three Witneſſes that are publick, 1 Tim. 5. 19, 20. For, as appears by the coherence, thoſe Rules concern Elders, yet ſo as in theſe proceedings they are to exerciſe not only the ſame, but more reſpect and patience than to a Brother.

For, v. 1. They are gentle unto him as a Father; and v. 19. They are ſo far from cenſuring him haſtily, that they are not to receive an accuſation, or liſten to it but upon the Teſtimony of two or three approved ones. Surely then the caſe is evident, they are, as v. 20. to rebuke them openly, but no more: Till it comes to Excommunication, you find not a tittle for diſclaiming.

Object. 3. "That leſs admonition ripens an Officers ſin ſooner than a Brother's, for "diſplacing him as an Officer.

Anſw. 1. The Rules by which you muſt judge of the ripeneſs of his ſin, muſt be in the Word; now ſhew that the Limits of proceeding againſt an Officer, are more ſtrict than againſt a Brother.

2. 'Tis true, his ſin, is aggravated more, but ſtill not ripe for rejection, until ſuch impenitency and obſtinacy be added to it, as would procure Excommunication.

Laſt of all, we add this, That if he were obſtinate and impenitent in his ſin, and deſerved Excommunication, yet it doth not appear that thereby he fell from all future right to his Office, ſo as that you are free inſtantly to ſend for another. From the Scripture we have not learned, that the Relation is utterly broken and made void, as that of a Brother is not by Excommunication: But if upon that Ordinance he repented, as you are bound to receive him as a Brother, ſo as your Officer again, for you cannot ſhew a ground that the one Relation ſhould be more evacuated than the other. Excommunication is not a caſting off but in order to Repentance, which reſtores him ad priſtinum ſtatum, to his former ſtate.

CHAP. XI.

Of Anointing with Oyl.

James 5. 14, 15. Is any ſick among you? let him call for the Elders of the Church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with Oyl in the name of the LORD: And the Prayer of Faith ſhall ſave the ſick, and the Lord ſhall raiſe him up: And if he have comitted ſins they ſhall be forgiven him.

THE Anointing ſpoken of in this Text, is not the Anointing ſpoken of, Mark 6. 13. by which the Apoſtles healed thoſe that were ſick through a miraculous Gift: But it is a ſtanding Ordinance to confirm the promiſe of Healing unto Church Members; as will appear from the following Arguments.

1. The firſt Argument is taken from what anointing with Oyl is here joyned with, viz. The Elders Prayers, which are a ſtanding Ordinance to this purpoſe even for the cure of the ſick.

2. All the Precepts beſides in this Epiſtle are about things which concern the Church for ever. And that which this Anointing is joyned with (namely, the prayer of the Elders) is ſuch alſo. It were ſtrange therefore if this alone ſhould be extraordinary.

The third Argument may be taken from the Perſons that are to be ſent for, who have the power to Adminiſter it; namely, the Elders of the Church.

1. It is not ſaid, Send for Men who have healing Gifts, but for Elders.
2. Who were ſtanding Officers, and that, of a Church which was to continue.
3. The Elders in every Church had not then ſuch miraculous Healing-Gifts.
4. The Gifts of Healing and thoſe of prophecy, by Wiſdom and Knowledge, which enable Men for Eldership, were in thoſe times variouſly diſpenſed; and not both to the ſame Perſons (excepting Extraordinary Officers, as Apoſtles and Evangeliſts) but to one was given the Gift of Healing, to others a Word of Wiſdom and Knowledge, that enabled them to be Elders, 1 Cor. 12. 8, 9, 11.

The third Argument is drawn from the Perſons to whom it was to be Adminiſtred.

1. They were ſick Perſons, or infirm. If it had been extraordinary Healing, it would have extended further, even to the blind, the deaf and the dumb: but this Healing reacheth only to theſe who were ſick of Diſeaſes curable, it being no miraculous Ordinance. 2. They were members of the Church, not unbelievers; for the expreſſion is, If any be ſick among you: And therefore the Elders of that Church are to be ſent for.

Now Miraculous Healing did,

1. Extend to all ſorts, Unbelievers as well as Believers.

Yea, 2. To them chiefly, as all miracles did, as 1 Cor. 14. 22. it is ſaid of Tongues.

Therefore, 3. The Apoſtles themſelves who had Gifts of Healing, ſeldom wrought any cure upon Believers that were ſick: So Paul did not heal Epaphroditus, Philem. 1. 2.

The fourth Argument may be taken from the generality of the extent of this Ordinance, even to all perſons in a Church. (If any among you be ſick) which argues it not to be extraordinary, For when any was healed by an extraordinary Gift, it was by a Faith of Miracles concurring; which was never general, to heal any, or all, but particular, reaching only to ſuch a Perſon as God would heal, and who was preſented, and his Faith ſtirred up. There was no Univerſal Rule given for extraordinary Healings.

The fifth Argument is taken from the Means commanded upon all ſuch occaſions, which generally is Oyl. Now the extraordinary Gift of Healing was not confined to Oyl, but might be applied without means. It had been enough to have ſaid, Riſe and walk. So likewiſe ſome were extraordinarily healed by other means, as Napkins, the Apoſtles ſhadow, &c.

6. Another Argument may be taken from the generality of the Command, which enjoins every one that is ſick to ſend and ſeek out for this cure. Now if extraordinary Gifts were meant, then in thoſe times Men ſhould not have died; For extraordinary Gifts of Healing failed not to effect the cure where there was a Warrant to apply them, as here there is unto any. Every one is to ſend, and they are to come and anoint every one.

It is therefore intended as an Ordinance to confirm the promiſe of Health unto Church-Members, for the words of the text are, They ſhall be healed. And becauſe his promiſe to diſpenſe this outward mercy is not abſolute, but indefinite, therefore the Seal is to be taken as ſuch alſo. For this Seal is to confirm Faith, and Faith is to be anſwerable to the promiſe, and the Seal to both. And yet it is of uſe; for though this Seal aſſures not the party unto whom it is applied, that he ſhall be healed; yet it gives a more certain evidence of God's ſeriouſneſs and faithful care over the Bodies of his Saints, to preſerve them in Sickneſs, than to confer on them any other outward Mercy: their bodies being moſt dear to him, next their Souls, and their lives precious in his ſight, and it being one of his attributes, to be the God that heals them; he therefore hath ſhewn and confirmed that this is ſo, by a Seal annexed to the Promiſe of Healing, when he hath annexed a Seal to no other outward Mercy: So that it Seals up to our Faith, the certainty and faithfulneſs of that promiſe it ſelf in its indefiniteneſs, though not of the infallible fulfilling it unto this or that party, yet ſo as to raiſe the heart of every one.

Object. 1. This is to make more Sacraments than two.

Anſw. There are no more than two Seals of the Covenant of Grace: But for other ends, and to ſeal other Promiſes, there may be more. As that of the Rainbow is in force unto this day, to confirm the not deſtroying the World by Water.

Object. 2. But this Seal is for remiſſion of ſins, as it was then uſed; for it follows in the Text, They have committed ſins, they ſhall be forgiven, and ſo there was an extraordinary Healing, at which their Souls were often converted.

Anſw. The Remiſſion of ſins there ſpoken of, is not that general and eternal forgiveneſs of all ſins promiſed in the Covenant of Grace; nor is this the Sacrament of ſuch a Remiſſion; but of the Remiſſion and taking off of that Temporary guilt which might be in any particular ſins committed by the perſons provoking God to lay that ſickneſs upon them. Which is evident from the Apoſtles ſpeaking Hypothetically, If he have committed ſins; which argues it not meant of the general forgiveneſs; for then there were no if to come in: it being certain, that all ſick perſons whatever have in that ſenſe ſinned. All have ſinned; and he that ſays he hath no ſin, deceiveth himſelf. The meaning therefore is, That if there be any ſpecial ſin, the Temporal Guilt whereof hath, in a particular manner, provoked God to lay this ſickneſs on him, it ſhall be remitted. And ſo forgiveneſs here is but the removal of that guilt conſidered as in order to this Puniſhment. And thus it is taken, Pſa. 78. 38. He forgave their Iniquity, and deſtroyed them not. And ſo, that it ſhould be a Seal of ſuch a forgiveneſs, and of the promiſe of being reſtored, is but to be a Seal of an outward temporary mercy, and ſo, not at all of the Covenant of Grace.

Object. 3. But all Sacraments, being Seals, are annexed to abſolute Promiſes; and when rightly uſed in Faith, have certainly their effect: But ſo this hath not; for then none ſhould die that in Faith do uſe it.

Anſw. True; All Sacraments of the Covenant of Grace are ſuch, and the Promiſes to which they are annexed are ſuch; and God hath annexed a Seal to aſſure our Faith, and hope of the fulfilling of Spiritual Promiſes, rather than of any other outward Mercy, but yet he may have appointed a Seal for the confirmation of our Faith as to the Performance of them too. And of this nature is that other Ordinance, namely, Impoſition of hands, for encreaſe of Gifts; Not that always, when rightly uſed in Faith, it hath its effect infallibly; But it is a Means appointed to convey the bleſſing and confirms the Promiſe of giving Gifts to Men, which yet is but indefinitely performed, as being of God's good pleaſure. Yea, one end of this Ordinance of anointing with Oyl (when ever in uſe) is here made but indefinite, and with a ſuppoſition, If he hath committed ſins: That is, in caſe he hath. And ſo it may be adminiſtred to this or that perſon with a ſuppoſition, if he be one of thoſe (as he may be) unto whom the Promiſe belongs.

Object. 4. That anointing, Mark 6. and ſo, healing, was extraordinary: and how can this here be then an Ordinary Ordinance, unleſs the ſame gift were continued now?

Anſw. So Impoſition of hands did in the Primitive Times ſerve extraordinarily to convey extraordinary Gifts of the Holy Ghoſt: Yet was it ordained to ſerve as an Ordinance of Encreaſing Gifts, unto the Worlds end; And why may not this be ſo converted alſo?

Object. 5. This gives countenance unto the Papiſts Extreme Unction, and condemns the Reformed Churches for rejecting it.

Anſ. 1. The Church of Rome retains almoſt all Ordinances; only ſhe hath perverted them. As ſhe hath perverted this from being an Ordinance of reſtoring Health, and forgiving the Temporary Guilt of particular ſins provoking God to that Judgment, to become a Sacrament of Juſtification and forgiveneſs of all ſins, and ſo, a Seal of the Covenant of Grace; and that not for the ſick, but for all dying perſons, when paſt recovery, in which caſe it ſhould not be uſed.

Now, 2. The Reformed Churches, ſeeing that ſuch a Sacrament could not be, and that this muſt needs be a perverſion of it, did juſtly reject it as they uſed it: Only in rejecting it (as in ſome other things) they went too far, even denying it to have that uſe of reſtoring the ſick, as a Seal of the promiſe, and an indefinite means to convey that bleſſing, which God in mercy hath appointed it to be.

Uſe 1. We ſee here God's care over our Bodies, as well as over our Souls, in Inſtituting an Ordinance for Sickneſs and reſtoring to Health; and his full proviſion by Ordinances for every Thing, and every Condition.

Uſe 2. See alſo God's eſpecial Hand in that Mercy of reſtoring his Children unto Health, and of bleſſing Phyſick and Means unto them, rather than to Unbelievers; though it be but a common Mercy. And therefore believers ſhould exerciſe a ſpecial Faith and dependance in the uſe of the means for recovery, beyond what ordinarily they uſe in other means for other outward Mercies.

Uſe 3. We ſhould raiſe our Faith up to God with more hope as to this mercy, than about any other outward Mercies; for the promiſe of this hath a ſpecial Seal.

Uſe 4. We may infer, that God doth afflict with ſickneſs for particular ſins.

Uſe 5. We may infer, that yet he doth not always do ſo, therefore an if is put in, If he have committed ſins.

Uſe 6. From hence a proof may be fetcht, that Elders only ſhould adminiſter Sacraments; as here they only are to anoint. And if the leſſer Sacrament be appropriated to them, then the greater much more.

Uſe 7. It ſhould be one ground of further honouring Elders, that God hath made them means of conveying health, as well to our Bodies as our Souls. So that if Phyſicians be to be honoured (as you have it in Eccleſ.) then they much more, even with a double honour.

Uſe 8. We may infer, that it is not neceſſary that all the Church ſhould be preſent. The Elders only are to be ſent for, ſince ſuch Rules are given by the Apoſtle, as may ſuit all Churches in all Circumſtances; But now the Church may conſiſt of ſo many, that all the members cannot meet without inconvenience to the ſick Party; And the Perſons ſick may be ſo many, that the Church cannot meet ſo often; The Elders therefore are ſet apart for the purpoſe, and may, and ought, to attend all ſuch occaſions.

Uſe 9. Yet the Elders muſt be ſent for by the Parties; and that whilſt there is hope of recovery, and not when they are a dying.

Uſe 10. Take notice here of the Priviledge of Church Members above other Believers. If any among you, that is, of a Church: and therefore it follows, ſend for the Elders of the Church. If thou beeſt out of Church-Fellowſhip, and falleſt ſick, thou wanteſt one Ordinance of recovery which a Church-member hath, and unto which there is both a Promiſe and a Seal annexed.

The Toleration and Liberty of Conſcience which we deſire is, that we may not be forced to communicate as Members in theſe Pariſhes where we dwell, but may have liberty to have Congregations of ſuch perſons who give good teſtimony of their godlineſs and peaceableneſs, and yet out of tenderneſs of Conſcience, cannot communicate in their Pariſhes, but do voluntarily offer themſelves to joyn in ſuch Congregations; which how it may beſt ſtand with the peace of the Kingdom, we humbly leave to the conſideration of the Magiſtrate.

This is our requeſt; The firſt part whereof, viz. That we may not be forced to communicate as Members in thoſe Pariſhes where we dwell, was in effect granted by the Sub-Committee of Divines, and therefore we diſpute it not. The other part, That we may have liberty to have Congregations, being denied us as unlawful for the Magiſtrate to grant, we humbly offer the conſiderations which follow.

CHAP. XII.

Of the lawfulneſs of Gathering Churches out of other Churches. How if rightly ſtated it is not a Separation. That the Chriſtian Magiſtrate may lawfully tolerate ſuch Churches.

THAT the lawfulneſs of this our deſire to be indulged us by the State, may appear, we humbly preſent theſe two things.

1. The Principles upon which our ſelves do go in this deſire.
2. The Reaſons upon which the State may indulge it unto us.

1. It is not a ſeparation as from no Churches, but a ſeceſſion as from ſuch Churches as we cannot, as our Judgment ſtands, with a good Conſcience continue Members in, and wherein by reaſon thereof, we ſhould want the enjoyment of the Lord's Supper and other Ordinances. And we deſire that this profeſſion of ours not to continue Members, may be but as charitably interpreted, as our Presbyterian Brethren would deſire that their profeſſion in one of their Petitions ſhould be, wherein they profeſs that they cannot with a good Conſcience continue to officiate in the Adminiſtration of the Lord's Supper as Paſtors in their Congregations, whilſt no further power for Suſpenſion of perſons who appear unto them ſcandalous, from the Sacrament, is given them; and that they ſhall in Conſcience be enforced to lay down their Miniſtries; and many of them in private and in publick have ſaid, that they muſt turn Independents. Now as to them and their Conſciences as Miniſters, ſuch an evil doth ariſe as would make them lay down their Miniſtries; ſo to us, as Members, there ariſeth ſo much as cauſeth us not to renounce, but to withdraw from preſent Communion. The ſame kind of Principle that they now go upon, did we go upon, in withdrawing from our Pariſhes, which Principle they now hold forth, to perſuade a yielding by this State unto that Rule they have preſented to them.

2. It is not a gathering of Churches out of Churches, as it hath been interpreted; which imports, 1. An activeneſs to perſuade men from their Churches, and to gain Proſelites by all ways of induſtry, which the State may put reſtraint upon. 2. It imports a rending them from thoſe Churches, whilſt there yet remains an obligation to continue in them, and to remain Members of thoſe Churches; but ſuch a rending we acknowledge to be unlawful. But we deſire in the behalf of thoſe that are ſcrupled in Communion with their Churches, and whoſe Conſciences their Miniſters cannot ſatisfie, and whom in that caſe they ought not for ever to retain among them without Ordinances, nor upon whom in ſuch a caſe an indiſſoluble obligation lieth; we deſire that theſe, rather than they, that remain out of Ordinances, may be gathered into new Churches; and ſuch Churches, wherein they may enjoy for ſubſtance the ſame Ordinances, and the ſame means of Edification, as will ſave them, and build them up to life eternal, as well as in the Pariſh Churches, others of the Saints of God, who can and do communicate therein, do enjoy them; we may as well build up ſuch Congregational Churches, as the Reformed Churches have built up their ſeveral Members amongſt them, though differing each from other; as in England under Epiſcopacy, and without power given to Miniſters to caſt out the ſcandalous; and as thoſe in Scotland, or Holland, or the Lutheran Churches.

3. This is not to ſet up one Church againſt another, Altare verſus, Altar againſt Altar, but one Siſter-Church by another, as the Dutch and French Churches in England are and have been unto the Churches of England, and the Pariſhes thereof; and this for the common edification of all ſorts of Saints, and the whole Myſtical Body of Chriſt, who otherwiſe are kept divided from Chriſt in his greateſt Ordinances, and exaſperated more one againſt another.

Now that this forbearance or indulgence of liberty from the common Rule eſtabliſht, and hitherto continued in this Church of England, may without ſin by the Magiſtrate (of whom we humbly ſeek it) be granted to us, we humbly preſent this general Reaſon. That which is not unlawful, nor contrary to the Word of God for the Magiſtrates of this Kingdom (who have put this Caſe to us) to allow; nor deſtructive to the Peace of the Kingdom, this the Magiſtrates of this Kingdom may allow to us without ſin. But this Requeſt of ours is ſuch.

The Propoſition in it ſelf is clear, and the Parliaments willingneſs to do it, they have expreſſed in their own Ordinance.

1. I ſhall prove that it is not unlawful, nor contrary to the Word of God, for the Magiſtrates of this Kingdom to allow the Liberty which we requeſt. The contrariety to the Word of God for the Magiſtrate to grant this, muſt neceſſarily lie in one of theſe two things, or both; either that it is ſo as to the Magiſtrate's Judgment, who hath eſtabliſhed the Rule of Communion, or elſe that in the verity and truth of the thing it ſelf, the nature of the Rule by him eſtabliſh'd, is ſuch as is immutably commanded by God in his Word, and a command alſo of that high nature, as that it is not lawful for him to grant this Indulgence of ſwerving from it. That in either of theſe caſes it would be unlawful to him, we do acknowledge. And look by how many degrees this Requeſt of ours falls ſhort of ſuch an height of contrariety as this is, either in the Magiſtrate's Conſcience, or in the thing it ſelf, ſo many grounds and degrees of ſafety, as well as ſimple lawfulneſs there is as to the Magiſtrate's Conſcience herein to grant it.

1. If to the Magiſtrate's Conſcience and Judgment, the Rule ſhould in that wherein we deſire a Liberty, be prudential and humani juris, of humane right, though about ſpiritual things, which himſelf may vary and alter as may ſuit beſt for the Subjects of this Kingdom; then he may lawfully grant us this Liberty; for Quicunq; poteſt Legem condere, poteſt etiam Privilegium concedere, Whoever may make a Law, may alſo grant a Priviledge, whereof this reaſon is given, Privilegium eſt Lex privata quædam, ergo ab eo maxime dari poteſt, qui poteſt Legem univerſalem condere. A Priviledge is a certain private Law, and therefore it may chiefly be given by him, who can make the Univerſal Law. This (as becomes us) we humbly leave to the Judgment and Conſcience of the Magiſtrate himſelf; yet withal humbly propound theſe conſiderations. The unlawfulneſs of granting this (as to the Magiſtrate's Conſcience) muſt be either in reſpect to the Terminus a quo, or ad quem; that is, either in regard of the leaving the Pariſh-Churches wherein men ſcrupled do live, or in the ſetting up diſtinct Churches from them: For of theſe two parts only is what we deſire made up of.

1. As to the firſt; The obligation for men that dwell in the Precincts of a Pariſh cannot be ſuch, as that it ſhould be unlawful for the Magiſtrate to give allowance, for men dwelling in Pariſhes, to be of another Church than that in that Pariſh: For the bounding of Pariſhes in this Kingdom, after the manner that now they are, was by a prudential Law, and therefore being the Magiſtrate's own Ordinance, it may be by him diſpenſed with. And although that now de facto, and thorough long continuance, Churches by this Ordinance have been formed up in Pariſhes, and that thoſe men that deſire this Liberty, have been Members of ſome Church therein; yet it is not unlawful for the Magiſtrate to give them leave to ceaſe to be Members of thoſe Churches, and retain their dwellings, and to become Members of ſome diſtinct Church collected out of many Pariſhes. For, 1. The Magiſtrate might permit the People of this Kingdom to be caſt generally into Churches otherwiſe bounded, without ſin, and therefore may allow and permit particular Members who are ſcrupled, to ceaſe to be Members of the Pariſh-Churches they are and were in: For otherwiſe this form of Pariſhes, now there is a Church-State in them, is by reaſon of that State, as it were conſecrated, and ſo exempted from all alteration by the Magiſtrate or themſelves.

2. The late Ordinance ſeems to permit as much as we have ſaid to the Servants and Retinue of the King, his Children, and Noblemen.

3. Nor is this unlawful to the Magiſtrates Conſcience in reſpect of the Terminus ad quem, viz. to permit ſetting up new Churches of men having left the Churches they were in; For, 1. If it were ſo, then they cannot Erect by their Authority in this Kingdom any new Church: But this they have done; as for inſtance, Covent Garden, and the Inns of Court, authorizing them for all Ordinances of Worſhip and Government, though the moſt, or many of the Members came up out of ſeveral other Pariſhes throughout the whole Kingdom: And ſuch is the caſe likewiſe of the King's Houſhold and Noblemens Families, inſtanced in before: Beſides, might not the Magiſtrate give leave to any company of true Worſhippers of God to ſet up a new Church, if they removed their dwellings and made a new Pariſh, even as lawfully as to grant a new Corporation?

Obj. 1. But it may be objected, That the ſin lies in neither of theſe, but in permitting men to ſet up Churches of another Conſtitution and Government from what is Eſtabliſhed by the Rule.

Anſ. 1. We reply, That we do not ſet up Churches of another Conſtitution, having the ſame Ordinances for ſubſtance as the Churches have which we leave, and not taking in any Members but whom our Brethren may, or will acknowledge meet to be Members of Churches, ſuch as are Saints and truly godly, though of differing Judgment from them. And as for Presbyterial Government, there are none, nay not thoſe that hold it to be by Divine Right, who judge that it is of the Eſſence and Conſtitution of a Church, though a neceſſary Ordinance therein, for the preſerving of it pure.

Anſ. 2. But 2 If you will ſuppoſe that Differences in the framing of Churches ſhould make them of another Conſtitution, yet the Magiſtrate might permit them: For, 1. This State did permit the Dutch and French Churches, when of a differing, if not of as differing a Conſtitution (in theſe reſpects) from the Churches amongſt us then, as theſe of ours, which we deſire, are now, who yet in continuance of time were become as Natives, and underſtood our Tongue. The Biſhops, when they would have reduced them unto their Government, urged this very thing, and yet prevailed not in it, in the worſt times. Again, 2. If a company of Scotch-men inhabiting among us, ſcrupling kneeling, and the Government by Biſhops, &c. had then petitioned our State, as was in Conſultation, to have Churches according to their Order and Conſtitution; might not our State then have permitted them?

Obj. 2. It may be objected, That though it were lawful for the Magiſtrate to permit leaving or removing from theſe Churches, and to ſet up new and diſtinct Churches ſimply conſidered; yet the ground and principle upon which we do it is unlawful, becauſe we leave thoſe Churches upon an Errour, viz. that we cannot without ſin communicate in them, &c. and ſo to permit them upon this Errour is unlawful for the Magiſtrate to do.

Anſ. 1. We reply, 1. The Magiſtrates Conſcience need not be ſcrupled to permit what is in it ſelf in the outward Act, warrantable, to them that yet do it out of an erring Conſcience. We have all in the Aſſembly profeſſed, that if we could agree in the ſame practices, though upon differing Principles, which were openly profeſſed (whereof the one or the other muſt be an Errour) yet we would not only permit this, but rejoyce in it. Magiſtrates in ſuch caſes when the outward Act is lawful, and diſturbs not the outward Peace, enquire not into Principles: The Apoſtles themſelves rejoyced in Chriſt Preached, though they allowed not the Principles of all that Preached him; If Chriſt be Preached out of envy, yet I will rejoyce, ſays the Apoſtle; yea perhaps it will appear if it ſhall come to be debated, that the Magiſtrate may tollerate an outward Act, which is evil as to his Conſcience, as well as an Act, which outwardly may be good, only the Principle being erroneous: And that he may do this, when there is not only an erroneous Principle, but an hardneſs of heart in men that deſire it of the Magiſtrate; for ſo Moſes did in the caſe of Polygamy, and that for the hardneſs of the Jews hearts.

2. This ground would utterly make void the Ordinance of Parliament concerning us, in that laſt part of it: For when the Honourable Houſes did put it to our conſideration, how far tender Conſciences that come not up to the Rule, may be born withal, they judging their own Rule to be lawful, muſt needs ſuppoſe all thoſe tender Conſciences that could not come up to it, to be in an errour; and ſo far judge their practice to be unlawful, and yet are willing to indulge ſome practices to them, notwithſtanding this erring Conſcience. And therefore the Magiſtrate in Conſcience may indulge this to us, unleſs it can be demonſtrated by our Brethren, that there is ſuch a peculiar ſinfulneſs in this Principle in its contrariety to the Rule, as the Magiſtrate cannot indulge it of all other.

3. This ground will put an impoſſibility upon the Magiſtrate (if differing in Judgment about Church-Government, &c. from our Brethrens Principles) ever to grant them by way of Indulgence, much leſs to Eſtabliſh by a Law what they have ſo earneſtly ſought: Nor indeed can our Brethren (if they be of this Opinion) petition the Magiſtrate for this. For inſtance, our Brethren have deſired power of judging of ſcandal for Suſpenſion, to be lodged in the Elderſhips, as that which belongs to them Jure Divino; if the Honourable Houſes be never convinced in their Conſciences, but do judge thoſe that requeſt it, upon this ground, to be in an errour, then they can never ſo much as indulge this to them, much leſs by an Authoritative Law give forth this Juriſdiction to them over the Subjects of this Kingdom. This Principle, beſides what other Reaſons the Honourable Houſes have had, will teach them to deny it. And then becauſe ſome, or perhaps moſt of our Brethren hold National and Provincial Aſſemblies, to be Divino Juro, and thereby do challenge a power of Judicature and Juriſdiction over all mens Conſciences, yea, over that of the Supreme Magiſtrates, in matters which they ſhall diſcern to be ſcandalous and unchriſtian, and the Magiſtrate withal, thinks this Principle to be, not only an Errour, but of as much danger to his Authority, as what this of ours can be pretended to be in the Church, the Magiſtrate hereby will be conſtrained to undo (upon the diſcovery of this Principle) what he hath ſet up. Yea and further, it is a Principle of many of our Brethren, that the Church Univerſal is a Politique Body in the whole, and the parts of it Jure Divino, and that every Elder is an Elder of the Church Univerſal, and ſo may and ought to unite into general Councils with the ſame right of Juriſdiction that National or Congregational Aſſemblies have. The Supreme Magiſtrates of Europe judging this an Errour (as they well may, and yet theſe are the Principles of many of our Presbyterian Brethren, if not of the moſt) they are taught hereby, not to grant the Presbyterial Government, the Principles whereof tend to this, even the ſetting up a Body of Elders inveſted with Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, unto which Divino Jure all Churches and Chriſtian Subjects and Kingdoms muſt be ſubject, and ſo a Forreign Power Eccleſiaſtical is ſet over all Kingdoms, in an Ariſtocratical way of Government, as was the Pope in a Monarchical way, though with this difference, that there is a renouncing of Infallibility in the one, but a requiring ſubjection upon pain of Excommunication in both.

This may ſuffice touching the Magiſtrates Conſcience in relation to what may be ſuppoſed his Principles and Practices. Next we come to the Nature of the Rule of Inſtitution it ſelf, which Chriſt hath laid upon Members of Churches in reſpect of departing from other Churches, and ſetting up new. The obligation (ſay we) laid by Chriſt in this reſpect, is not ſuch, but that the Magiſtrate may permit it with a good Conſcience. The lawfulneſs or unlawfulneſs hereof (if it be ſaid to lie in reſpect to Chriſt's Rule of Inſtitution) muſt accordingly be meaſured by what in the Rule given by Chriſt is by Inſtitution and alſo by conſidering what ſort of Inſtitution and Obligation it is, whether it be ſuch as the Magiſtrate cannot diſpenſe withal without ſin. Let us therefore conſider the Nature of the Rule.

1. It may be taken for granted by the Magiſtrate (as it is acknowledged by us) that Church-Fellowſhip is by the Inſtitution of Chriſt; ſo as both every Believer is obliged to be of ſome Church, where he may enjoy Ordinances; as alſo that the Churches themſelves, the Seat of Ordinances are ſetled by a Divine Right authorizing of them; and further, that whilſt any one doth continue a Member of any particular Church, he is ſo long obliged to the Duties to be performed by Members therein.

Yet 2. The unlawfulneſs of leaving this or that Church, and gathering new (which is the thing controverted) depends upon a further thing, namely, what, and how great (and that by Inſtitution) the obligation of Members is to particular Churches, whereof they are Members; As if the Queſtion were, Whether it were lawful for the Magiſtrate to tollerate Divorces and a Marriage with another; the meaſure and proportion of the unlawfulneſs or lawfulneſs hereof to him, muſt be fetcht from the nature of the Obligation and Tye which in Marriages God hath made to ariſe not ſimply from this, that Marriage is God's Ordinance (for ſo the Relation of Servant and Maſter, of Subject and Magiſtrate alſo is, and the Duties, whilſt that Relation continues, are by God's Ordinance, ſuch or ſuch.) But further, it is from the ſtrictneſs of the Obligation or Bond of the Relation by God's ſpecial Inſtitution: For though the Relation of Maſter and Servant, or Servant and Family, be (as was ſaid) God's Ordinance, yet there is not that Obligation upon men for not leaving it and entring into a new. Let therefore the Obligation of Churches and Members (ſo far as from Chriſt's ſpecial Command and ſpecial Inſtitution it may any way be made appear) be impartially weighed; for thereupon do the proportions and degrees of unlawfulneſs depend; both how far it is lawful or unlawful to the perſons that leave the Churches, or to the Churches that permit them ſo to do, or to the Magiſtrate in whoſe Dominions they are. For a right eſtimating of the firmneſs or looſeneſs of this Knot in which the ſtrength of this Controverſie lies, we propound theſe things to conſideration.

1. The Obligation of Members to this or that individual Church under the Goſpel, is far leſs than under the Old Teſtament the Obligation of Members was to that National Church: So that to take a Judgment of it, or an Argument from the Jewiſh Church againſt removing from Churches now, and gathering new, would (as it hath done many) much deceive us. And the difference herein is manifeſt, and alſo the ground of it; for the Church under the Old Teſtament was but one by God's Inſtitution, and ſo one, as there were to be no more ſet up, and therefore (though it proved Idolatrous) there was no ſetting up a new one. It was Jeroboam's ſin, and the ſin of the Ten Tribes, to ſet up Altare verſus Altare, Altar againſt Altar, as they did. But now every where pure hands are, and may be lift up to God, and Spiritual Sacrifices be offered every where as well as in the Holy Mount; only we are now bound unto Church-Fellowſhip, and the enjoyment of Publick Ordinances as well as they, and ſo if we cannot have it in one Church, we are to ſeek it in another.

2. Hence it will be (we ſuppoſe) granted by our Brethren, that it is a matter of much liberty (ſo it be done with peaceableneſs and ſobriety) to remove from one Church to another for civil conveniences; yea out of many Churches, to ſet up a new Church for civil conveniences ſake (as for Trade and the like, when a place is not well inhabited) much more for ſpiritual advantages.

3. Take the outward matter of fact (in this thing controverted) namely, to remove and leave our Memberſhip with theſe individual Churches now extant, and to gather new, if you take the fact barely out of ſome ſuppoſed erroneous Principle as the ground of it, or ſcandal and diſturbance annexed thereto, it is a matter of Liberty: At leaſt it is ſuch as needs not a warrant by a new Inſtitution or Example which is called for: Neither as ſuch doth the evil and unlawfulneſs of it lie in croſſing or thwarting an Obligation by Inſtitution indiſſoluble; but only it lies in the manner, ground, or the ill conſequents of it, which are extrinſecal to it: It hath been laid upon our Opinions and Practices, that we held Members of our Churches under ſo hard and ſtrict an Obligation, and to that end do bind them by a Covenant (yea it hath been affirmed by ſome, that we bind them by an Oath) as that they muſt remove when we remove, and by Divine Right are ſo bound up to Memberſhip, to that individual Church they are of, as not to depart from it. This as we utterly renounce, ſo it will rather fall upon our Brethrens Principles, who would hold their Members under ſo great a bond, that though they are ſcrupled in Communion with them, and cannot ſatisfie their Conſciences, they, though ariſing to multitudes, muſt rather want theſe Ordinances, than leave their Churches and gather themſelves into new; This hard Impoſition will eſpecially follow, if they ſhould put this unlawfulneſs upon the Obligation of Members unto their Churches, or Churches of ſuch or ſuch a form.

Theſe things premiſed, we argue the lawfulneſs of this permiſſion to be granted to Members; and it is lawful both as to the Magiſtrates Conſcience, and to the Churches they are Members of to permit them.

1. It is lawful to the Churches and Magiſtrates Conſcience, to permit us our deſire of being free of the Churches (which is the caſe we in this debate have to do with) notwithſtanding any Obligation to continue therein Divino Jure. If this Obligation of Members to their Churches were by Divine Inſtitution, yet the Magiſtrates might permit men ſcrupled, to leave them, and be free therein. For, 1. Your ſelves have granted a liberty to Conſciences, ſcrupling, receiving the Lord's Supper in the Pariſhes, which yet is a duty lies on them by Divine Commandment, Do this in remembrance of me, &c. 2. Our Brethren, whereof ſome yet hold Claſſical and Synodical Aſſemblies to be Divino Jure, have granted alſo a freedom for ſuch Members as ſcruple the lawfulneſs of being ſubject thereto. Yea, 3. If any one that is now of a Pariſh Church, remove his dwelling to another Pariſh (which is permitted him) and conſents not to be of the Church in that Pariſh he removes unto, we believe, that as the Law of the Land frees him from being a Member of the Pariſh Church he came from, ſo our Brethrens Principles will free him from being a Member of that Pariſh Church he comes unto, until he doth give his conſent ſo to be. Thus eaſie a looſe is there for freedom of Members in reſpect of this Obligation, and ſo for the Magiſtrates Conſcience to permit it.

But 2. If this Obligation were by a ſpecial Divine Inſtitution indiſſoluble, as that of Marriage was (and as this is not) yet the Magiſtrates Conſcience might permit a ſeceſſion from it without ſin. For ſo notwithſtanding God's Inſtitution was, that in Marriage the knot between two perſons was ſuch as man could not ſever or put aſunder, yet Moſes without ſin, not only permitted Divorces, and ſo a freedom from this ſo indiſſoluble Obligation, but ſecond Marriages alſo, and this all the Kings afterwards alſo permitted, and ſo by like reaſon it may be here in this caſe. And this Inſtance evinceth not only the permiſſion of the privative part of omiſſion of Communion with ſuch Churches, but the poſitive too, viz. the gathering of Churches alſo, though both were in the Judgment of the Magiſtrate againſt an Inſtituted Obligation.

2. As for the poſitive part, To permit new Churches to be gathered, of Members out of theſe Churches, the like Practices and Principles of our Brethren will not only warrant the lawfulneſs of the Magiſtrate to permit it, but make it warrantable for us according to our Principles to do it.

For, 1. Some of themſelves have gathered a Congregational Church out of many Churches, receiving and admitting upon their reformation, and forming up a Church in their Pariſh anew, an addition of Members out of divers other Pariſhes in City and Country unto the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and to Preaching, &c. in a conſtant way. If it be ſaid they had not Sacraments in their own Churches, we reply, yet they had Preaching, and they ſhould have remained Hearers in their own Pariſh Churches, till God opened a way for Sacraments there; for to this or the like Law would our Brethren oblige us unto. And again, conſtancy of Communion for Preaching and Sacrament doth conſtitute them a Member of that Church they thus communicate with, more than dwelling in the Pariſh, and occaſional coming to that Church doth conſtitute them a Member of their own Pariſh Church. If it be ſaid that this is pro tempore, for the time, and until ſuch time as their own Churches are reformed, when they will reſtore them again. We reply, that ſo alſo when the Pariſh Churches ſhall be reformed to our Principles, we will be willing to reſtore all their Members alſo, and will but relieve them with Ordinances according to their Conſciences until that time; and will our ſelves then become Members of them. We only add this, that this ſome of our Brethren have done before any Authority of Parliament did warrant it, which may ſtop their mouths at leaſt in this ſo inculcated clamour (in our Brethrens late reply preſented to this Committee) againſt us, who went out of the Kingdom to gather new Churches without offence to the Magiſtrate.

2. Many of themſelves have gathered a Church out of a Church in a Pariſh, and that of the leſſer out of the greater number. Our Brethren do account all that have formerly received the Sacrament with them to be of their Church, and Members thereof; for elſe they make wholly a new Church; and why elſe do they claim power over all, and proceed by way of Suſpenſion, which is a Cenſure (the Objects whereof are only Church Members) and not by way of Admiſſion? Now for the Miniſter, and a few in the Pariſh whom he ſhall chuſe, to begin to make up a new Body diſtinct from the reſt, this act of theirs is either by way of ſeparation and gathering a Church out of a Church (as they are pleaſed to call ours) or by way of Church Power and Authority towards its own Members. If the former, then we have our own Brethrens practices warranting ours: If the latter (which our Brethren by calling it Suſpenſion ſeem rather to put it upon) we ask and demand, what Power Chriſt hath put into the leſſer part of a Church, to take on them to ſuſpend the greater part? And further, we deſire our Brethren to reſolve this Committee, whether they think not themſelves bound according to the Principles of Church-proceedings, to proceed to Excommunicate (after two or three admonitions) all they do ſuſpend, and ſo engage themſelves to deliver to Satan, more than half this Kingdom in a month, if upon their admonitions they repent not; If they anſwer that they do thus take a few in a Pariſh to the Sacrament, and ſuſpend the greater part by vertue of the Authority of the Magiſtrate: We reply, 1. That many have done this afore the Ordinance of Parliament came forth; And, 2. That then the Magiſtrate may not only permit, but Authorize us together a Church out of Churches, or at leaſt out of a Church as well as our Brethren have done.

But, 3. As our Brethren have gathered Congregational Churches out of a Church, yea Churches: So their Claſſical Churches are electively by picking and chooſing made up now at firſt not of all the Miniſters in the Pariſh Churches, but of ſome choſen out from the reſt: Whereas according to the principles of their Eccleſiaſtical Obligation, the Miniſters of all Churches ſhould be taken in, but that would ſpoil Reformation. And yet if they will tye us to the Obligation of Members, according to the Law of particular Churches, that becauſe all in the Pariſhes have Univerſally been Members of Churches, and ſo are theirs already; and therefore we muſt wait a Reformation of theſe Churches, and take them as Churches, and not make new; then ſhould they by the like Law take theſe all as Miniſters of Churches into their Claſſes, and truſt God with his own Ordinance, as they account it.

If in the next place it may be Objected, That it is not ſimply the breaking of the bond of Obligation to the Churches of which we are Members, that the unlawfulneſs of this conſiſts in, but in the erroneous ground which we leave our Churches upon, as if you cannot enjoy Communion with them without ſin, which errour therefore binds ye, as an erring conſcience doth, and not to remove, and alſo binds the Magiſtrate and the Churches not to permit this freedom from our Churches, but to continue in them till they recal that error.

We reply, Suppoſe this an errour in the perſon (as the Magiſtrate who hath propounded this Caſe doth ſuppoſe this Scruple of ours to be, and upon this ſuppoſition to reſolve what forbearance he may permit) yet it is not unlawful for the Magiſtrate to permit them this freedom whom he judgeth to be in this errour. Beſides the Reaſons mentioned before, your ſelves alſo would permit us to forbear the Lord's Supper without your Cenſure, and to be free from the power of the Aſſemblies, which forbearance yet you judge to be upon an unlawful ground in us.

But more particularly, to reduce this Plea of our Brethren againſt us to its right State.

1. We ſay, if the Queſtion be about the Magiſtrates or Churches Conſcience, whether they may permit it or no, (as the Queſtion is) then it is not, whether this be an errour in theſe Members, according to the Magiſtrates or Churches Judgment, but whether it be ſuch an errour, as they have warrant from Chriſt, ſo to bind it upon the Conſcience of the parties erring, as not to ſuffer them to practiſe it upon their own peril and account betwixt God and them, after due means be uſed to reclaim them. Our meaning in Stating it thus will be cleared.

If the Caſe be put as in foro Eccleſiaſtico, in the Eccleſiaſtical Court, if this errour come before the Church, theſe Members are of (and we hope our Brethren will not oblige the Magiſtrates Conſcience to more ſtrictneſs herein than of the Church it ſelf.) The Queſtion will not be whether theſe parties do err in their Judgment, or whether doctrinally the Church may not lay before them this errour; and their grounds why they judge it to be ſo, and ſo preſs it upon them as a good means to reclaim them from this erroneous ground; But the Queſtion is, Whether they are judicially to bind the Conſciences of them that are in this errour of ſcrupling Communion, &c. So as this ſentence, according to the Law of Chriſt, ſhould bind them up from practizing accordingly by vertue of this Ordinance and Power given the Church over them, though in the particular ſo judged their private Conſciences remain as afore. And again, the Queſtion is, whether it be ſuch an errour as the Church is obliged not to permit them to remain in, or to practiſe accordingly, but is bound to retain them, and if they do otherwiſe to excommunicate them. In a word, the Queſtion is, Whether there lye an Eccleſiaſtical Obligation both upon the Church to bind this errour judicially upon Conſcience, and to retain theſe perſons ever, and alſo an Obligation upon the perſons, the Church ſo judging to continue ſtill as Members.

Now this we take for granted, That Churches will not take on them to bind thus judicially upon the Conſciences of their Members, whatever they account an erroneous principle, nor bind them up from the practice of what ever they ſhall Doctrinally declare to be upon an erroneous ground, eſpecially when otherwiſe the outward fact ſimply conſidered is Lawful, which is the Caſe in hand. And that this alledged is ſuch an erroneous principle as they ought judicially to bind upon the Conſciences of their Members, it remains upon our Brethren to prove; for when they ſhall take on them to prohibit a practice otherwiſe Lawful upon this errour, the burthen lyes on them to make it forth, to be of that nature as that they that dare bind it upon the Conſciences of others to ſo great a prejudice to them, as to deprive them of the Ordinances of Chriſt.

But beſides the expectation of our Brethrens making this forth, We humbly preſent theſe Reaſons why the Churches are not bound thus to bind this errour upon their Brethren who are Members of them, nor their Members thus ſcrupled, to be bound up thereby.

1. Becauſe it is not an errour of that degree of erroneouſneſs, as ſhould be the Object of ſuch a judicial binding it upon their Conſciences, it being but ſuch an errour as comes under that Rule which the Aſſembly hath voted, that may ſtand with Piety, wherein godly and learned men poſſibly may and do differ, and ſuch errours the Aſſembly diſchargeth from judicial binding by Cenſures.

2. Again, Our Brethren having granted that after due means uſed, they will not conſtrain (that is, by cenſures or otherwiſe) any that ſcruple Communion with them, and ſo run that principle, which is the foundation of what we deſire, and do thereby grant that this errour is not the Object of Church Cenſures.

3. Therefore they are not to cenſure this practice, neither which we deſire upon this ſuppoſed errour.

1. For if the unlawfulneſs of removing from theſe Churches and gathering New, be founded upon this ſuppoſed erroneous ground of it, and not upon the Law of the Obligation of Church-Memberſhip; and if it is ſimply conſidered in the outward Act lawful, then if the errour it ſelf be not worthy of an Eccleſiaſtical binding, the practice founded hereupon is not, and if it be not, then may the Churches tolerate it.

2. Otherwiſe if any Members of a Church remove from his Church to another upon a miſtaken ground; as for example, his not edifying under that Miniſtry or the like, which the Church he is in, judgeth an errour, hath that Church power ever to retain him, becauſe his going away is upon an erroneous principle, ſo as they may not diſmiſs him, or have they power from Chriſt to bind his Conſcience not to remove, becauſe they judge him to do this upon an erring principle?

3. Yea, we humbly offer it to conſideration, if after due means uſed to convince men of this errour, when they ſhall find they cannot perſuade them, they ſhould not ſay as they to Paul, The Will of the Lord be done. Though the thing be againſt their own Judgment (as that was) and not only permit them to go from them, but aſſiſt them in gathering a new Church, according to the principles of their own Conſciences, whilſt they therein ſet up the ſubſtance of God's worſhip, and profeſs to hold all Communion in other Ordinances with them as far as poſſible they can? For,

1. For the general Obligation by Chriſt's command and appointment to all ſorts of Believers to be in Church-Fellowſhip wherein to enjoy all Ordinances, eſpecially the Sacraments, is a greater Obligation, than the Obligation that Members can have to any particular Churches. We are all ſure that this general Law is an Inſtitution of Chriſt, and abſolute; and the Obligation to particular Churches is far leſs, as hath been ſhewn. Now as the Law of leſſer Obligations uſeth to yield to the more univerſal, ſo ſhould this; yea in this caſe men keep more to the Law of Communion with the whole univerſal Church, for they partake of all the ſame Ordinances with them, by which the Communion of the Church Catholick with Chriſt their head and one with another is more obſerved, than if in being deprived of this Communion, they held Communion but in ſome things with a particular Church.

2. We humbly offer, that as for ſuch errours for which Members ſhould not be Excommunicated out of their own Church, and deprived of the Ordinances therein; For ſuch errours, Chriſt's mind is, that they ſhould not be deprived of them where elſe they may have them. If there were Churches extant of their Judgment any where in the world, why might they not be permitted to remove to them? as put the Caſe, when our Non-conformiſts were ſcrupled in kneeling at the Sacrament, or to have been preſent at the Liturgy, and ſo were deprived of the Ordinances; ſuppoſe this to have been an errour in them, to have ſcrupled the Lawfulneſs hereof (as we may well ſuppoſe, it may be the judgment of ſome of our Brethren, that it was an errour in them) might not theſe have removed into Scotland to thoſe Churches where the pure Ordinances might be had? And then again, ſuppoſe there were no ſuch Churches extant, were it not a lawful way of attaining to enjoyment of the Ordinances by making a new Church, ſuch at leaſt as the Magiſtrate in tenderneſs to them might permit?

3. If the Primitive Condition and Differences among the Saints in the firſt Erecting Churches give not an Example, yet they do afford a principle of Equity for this. The differences between the Circumciſion and Uncircumciſion were ſuch, as the circumciſed Jewiſh Chriſtian would not eat together with the Uncircumciſed, tho' profeſſing Chriſtianity: How many years this continued, we know not, nor how long it remained in many mens conſciences after the deciſion of the Apoſtles about the Non-neceſſity of Circumciſion, Acts 15. But ſuppoſe it did remain in many for a long while, as appears by the Epiſtles to the Galatians, Coloſſians, &c. Yet ſurely Jeſus Chriſt did alike provide a way of enjoyment for Church Fellowſhip and Communion in Ordinances for the one as well as the other, though the difference in Judgment was ſuch as the one could not eat with another. And that Chriſt's mind was, that both ſhould have the Ordinances, though thus differing, is clear, becauſe in Chriſt neither Circumciſion nor Uncircumciſion availed; and notwithſtanding this difference (becauſe it might ſtand with Piety in either) they all were baptized into one body, the Church Univerſal, and did drink (which alludes to their having the Lord's Supper) into one Spirit, 1 Cor. 12. 13. The Apoſtles did labour all they could to allay this difference, but did they forbid either to make Churches apart if they could not be reconciled in one? As Peter ſaid in the like caſe, Can any man forbid water to them that have received the Holy Ghoſt as well as we Jews? So, have the Apoſtles any where forbidden; or can any man forbid thoſe to have the Sacrament in Churches truly Conſtituted, that cannot thorough an invincible ſcruple receive the Sacrament in the Churches they have been born in? Would not, and ought not general Counſels, if now called, if they could not reduce the Churches to one Rule, to permit each their way according to their ſeveral principles? And there are as great differences in the Reformed Churches as amongſt us and our Brethren.

4. Yea, doth not God profeſs to accept practices for the ſubſtance good, though upon erroneous grounds? Rom. 14. He that eateth, eateth to the Lord, and he that eateth not (out of ſcruple of Conſcience, which was an errour) his not eating was to the Lord alſo; and upon that very ground he commands us not to judge them in ſo doing, becauſe he accepted them.

5. Is not charity more ſeen in allowing to ſuch tender Conſciences thoſe Ordinances which are of ſo general influence to build them up to life, though with the practice of ſome errour or upon ſome erroneous principle (which God will pardon, and Men ſhould indulge to them) than for that errour for which they cannot juſtly be puniſhed with Civil or Eccleſiaſtical Cenſure, to detain them from thoſe Ordinances, by which they may be recovered and healed. This is as if one who had ſome Diſeaſe of ſmaller moment in probability incurable, and yet not mortal in the iſſue, ſhould yet be denied ſuch food as would make him more vigorous and fitter for all duties to God and Men, when in this caſe 'tis more charity to allow it him.

CHAP. XIII.

What Liberty of Conſcience is to be indulged. That Peace and Love is the great Law of Chriſt that is to be obſerved among Chriſtians, who ought therefore to bear with one another. What Principles and Practices are contrary to this Law.

Rom. 15. 1, 2, 3, 4. We then that are ſtrong, ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to pleaſe our ſelves. Let every one of us pleaſe his neighbour, for his good to edification. For even Chriſt pleaſed not himſelf, but as it is written, The reproaches of them that reproached thee, fell on me. For whatſoever things were written aforetime, were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope.

Gal. 6. 2. Bear ye one anothers burthens, and ſo fulfil the Law of Chriſt.

I intend in this Diſcourſe to ſtrengthen our Faith, as to the having Liberty of our Conſciences in Times of Difficulty. One great Foundation of our Faith is, that Chriſt died to take away that Enmity which is in the hearts of his People one towards another, which I have ſhewed in another Diſcourſe. My deſign is now to ſtate the Caſe of Liberty of Conſcience, and to ſhew how agreeable it is to the Laws and Rules of Chriſt.

Diſcourſe of Chriſt the Univerſal Peace-maker In Vol. 1. of his works.

The courſe which I will ſteer is this; Firſt, To ſtate the buſineſs; As,

1. It is not the general Liberty of all of what Religion or kind ſoever, which we proſecute. For if you obſerve it, in both theſe Texts (as there are abundance of other Scriptures to like purpoſe) the conſideration is of what is the Duty between Chriſtians profeſſing Jeſus Chriſt, by vertue of Chriſt and his Blood. Thoſe that would make this Liberty of Conſcience to be extended to all men, weaken our prayers wonderfully, and do weaken our Arguments; for the hold we have upon the men, among whom we live, is, that we all profeſs our ſelves Chriſtians; and we do not plead for Liberty to be given to Atheiſts, Infidels or Mahumetans, but we plead for Chriſt, and you will find the ſtrength lies there.

This Diſcourſe was written in 1646. when there were thoſe heats againſt the Diſſenting Brethren, who aſſerted the Congregational way of Churches, & therefore all muſt be underſtood as relating to thoſe times.

2. We profeſs this Principle, That all Saints ſhould be of one mind, as in 1 Cor. 1. 10. That ye be all of one mind, of one judgment; I beſeech you Brethren by the Name of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt (he urgeth Chriſt too) that ye all ſpeak the ſame thing, that ye be perfectly joyned together in the ſame mind, and in the ſame judgment, that you being of the ſame mind and judgment, may acknowledge this. It is this that all Saints ſhould ſeek; and the Name of Jeſus Chriſt ſhould cauſe a Reverence to the Judgment of Chriſtians.

3. But if this cannot be effected, (if that be the caſe) you have the Rule, Phil. 3. 15, 16. If men be otherwiſe minded, what then is to be done? The Rule is both there and here, Forbearance. When we ſay Forbearance, and cry out for Liberty, our meaning is not, that we ſhould therefore remain indifferent whether this Truth or that Truth prevail; no, we are to contend earneſtly for that Faith we think to be the Faith, and once given to the Saints, but it muſt be by Goſpel means.

4. While

Ch.XII. 4. While we plead for Liberty unto perſons that are godly, and profeſs Chriſt, we do not favour the Errour that is laid upon us, of pleading for a Toleration of all Hereſies. It was long ago ſaid by the Biſhop of Lincoln, that was Lord-Keeper, That it is an Argument out of the Devil's Logick, to argue from the Concreet to the Abſtract. A man is ſick of ſuch a Diſeaſe, inſomuch as that the humour of the Diſeaſe requires food that is in it ſelf hurtful, and yet the man muſt live, and he cannot live without food. In this caſe what is to be done? you muſt preſerve the Life of the man. Phyſicians in that caſe do ſo, and allow that which otherwiſe they would not allow. Suppoſe men mingle with the Ordinances of Chriſt Superſtition, the diſeaſed humour of their Spirits run out that way, you muſt for Chriſt's ſake bear with them (for the man is in Chriſt, and the man muſt be fed and nouriſht) you muſt allow him what is mingled with Superſtition, without which he cannot partake of the Ordinances, and God will pardon the Errour, and bleſs the Ordinance. And in this caſe, it is not the Errour we indulge, but Chriſt in this Perſon, and Conſcience in him, and we do it for Chriſt's ſake; and if you go by outward force, and keep him from what would edifie him, you endanger his Salvation, Rom. 14. 4. Who art thou that jndgeſt another mans Servant? to his own Maſter he ſtandeth or falleth. Yea, he ſhall be holden up: for God is able to make him ſtand.

5. The Apoſtle's Rule is, Though a man be in an Errour, you ſhould be more earneſt to regard the general End of his glorifying God in the ſubſtance of what he doth, than to puniſh his Errour. It is clearly the meaning of Rom. 14. v. 6, 7, 8. He that regardeth a day, regardeth it to the Lord, &c. He that eateth, eateth to the Lord, for he giveth God thanks; and he that eateth not, to the Lord he eateth not, and giveth God thanks. Whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord, &c. What is the meaning? You are to regard the common Principle of Chriſtians: There is a ſubſtance of Worſhip, and though the man err, yet you are to regard more what he doth to God, than you are to regard his Errour, and you are to nouriſh that more, than to go and beat out his Errour by a violent courſe. This is certainly the Apoſtle's meaning. The riſe of what the Apoſtle ſaith in the Text, Rom. 15. is clearly this, that it was not a matter indifferent, but was about things wherein one ſide were in a great Errour, and was in the wrong very much, (and I think Calvin acknowledgeth it) the Caſe here was concerning the whole of the Jewiſh Worſhip, though he gives Inſtances only of Days, and concerning their Sabbaths, and New Moons, and Meats that were forbidden. Now let all the World judge, if he that did abſtain, did it as thinking it indifferent, and ſo would be at liberty; no, but in conſcience I ought not, (ſaith a Chriſtian Jew) to neglect thoſe Ordinances; they were given by God, and we ought all to be ſubject to them; they were not things indifferent; the Worſhip of God was ſtated in the one, and in the other, ſo that it was not a thing indifferent, as they ſtated it, yet in this caſe, and upon this occaſion, when matters did ſtand thus, doth the Apoſtle plead his Argument, as he does in Rom. 14. and chap. 15. The true intent of their meeting, Acts 15. was to compoſe the difference, by letting the Jews alone, to go on in their way, though they were in an Errour: And as for the Gentiles, to let them be free, only to warn them to take heed of offending the Jew; of all Scriptures, I know it is moſt abuſed; it is alledged for uſing an Authority, when as the thing is for an Accommodation. But as to the ſtating the Queſtion, you find the Apoſtle Paul flies upon the Galatians, and over-runs them, and that becauſe they kept Days and Times, &c. You find here, he pleads otherwiſe, what is the difference? In Acts 15. he tells you, there was two Opinions on foot; there were ſome of them wretched men, that ſaid, a man could not be ſaved, unleſs he were circumciſed, and kept the whole Law, verſe 5.

What do I gather hence? If a Doctrine come to be ſtated as in the Foundation of Religion, & urg'd ſo, as it comes to a point of Salvation or Damnation, ſays Paul there, I will not bear with you, no not for a moment. He falls upon them in his Epiſtle to the Galatians to the height, ſtays not a moment: But come to the Epiſtle to the Romans, there we find that thoſe Judaizing Chriſtians did not urge it by way of Salvation and Damnation, but went the moderate way, that it ought to be commanded, and that it was vi Præcepti to be done, and he here pleads for Liberty, and that there ſhould be Forbearance, and it is a great Argument; I will not ſay what the Magiſtrate hath to do, but this I will ſay, the Magiſtrate is not to be more ſevere than the Church, unleſs it be in his own concernment of the Civil Peace; this is the ſtate of it. So now I come to the Argument, the thing it ſelf.

1. And the firſt head of Arguments I run upon is this, That in ſuch caſes of Differences thus ſtated, Chriſtians ought to be equally minded one towards another, Rom. 15. 5. Now the God of patience grant you to be like-minded one towards another, according to Chriſt Jeſus.

1. This being like-minded, is not oneneſs of Judgment (which our Brethren would carry all theſe places to) but equality of mind, or like-mindedneſs in affection one towards another notwithſtanding Differences, Rom. 16. 12. Be of the ſame mind one towards another. (It is the ſame word in the Original) that is, let the ſame equality of Love and Affection be kept up mutually one to another; let Affections continue to one another, upon the ſame terms. It is not ſpoken of Oneneſs of Judgment and Opinion, but of Affection; it is ſpoken ſo, Rom. 12. 15. Rejoyce with them that rejoyce, and weep with them that weep; that is, have like ſympathy and feeling of one anothers Afflictions, and then Be of the ſame mind one towards another, v. 16. and Have peace among your ſelves, Phil. 4. 2. There be other Scriptures where it is uſed for mutual Comfort, Agreement and Affections, equal Affections, and equal dealings upon it. That we ought to be ſo affected, notwithſtanding Differences, and that this is here intended, is clear enough. It is not only clear from the 14th Chapter, which comes in upon occaſion of thoſe Differences, but the Text clears it, that they ſhould be equally minded in caſe of Difference. Take the 5th verſe, it ſays, The God of patience and conſolation grant you to be equally minded one towards another according to Chriſt Jeſus. Here is prayer, and every prayer is uſually fram'd according to the matter, and the thing that is required. If he prays that they ſhould be all of one mind, why ſhould he ſay, The God of patience, God that is the God of patience, the Author and God of patience and conſolation, work ſuch a like-mindedneſs in you. If his meaning were, that all ſhould be of one mind and judgment, there were no need to ſay, The Lord give you patience. If his ſcope were, that they ſhould be of one mind, there needed no patience. Truly they that impoſe need not patience, but thoſe that were impoſed upon; but he ſpeaks of patience of one to another, and one is to be patient as much as the other: And truly there needs patience to bear with Differences, v. 1. You that are ſtrong, pleaſe not your ſelves, but bear the infirmities (as Porters do) Epheſ. 4. 2. You ſhould tollerate and ſuffer with all lowlineſs and meekneſs, with long-ſuffering, forbearing one another in love. It's plain it is meant in point of Difference, that they ſhould be equally minded to keep the Bond of Union in the Bond of Peace. The meaning is, while you agree in ſuch things in which the common and great concernments of Chriſtianity, and of the Spirit's working upon all ſorts of Chriſtians are found; this is the Bond of the Difference in externals, and therefore bear that Difference with patience.

2. A ſecond conſideration is from verſe 5. According to Chriſt Jeſus. There is a great deal lies in this; Take heed of caſting your caſe of Tolleration into the common caſe of Turks & Mahumetans, you then weaken your ſelves; for the tolleration muſt be according to Chriſt. We have a great ſtrength and hank upon them that profeſs Chriſtianity to urge Chriſt upon them. Let them look to themſelves, for tho' the univerſal Tolleration muſt have other Principles, yet that Tolleration which we ſeek, and which is according to Chriſt, and ſo is to move them from ſuch a conſideration ſuppoſing men to be in Chriſt; that Tolleration hath a great, a mighty, a ſtrong Foundation, which the Apoſtle here brings upon them. The meaning is, all ſorts of Obligations drawn from Chriſt, which either Chriſt's Example, or our common Intereſt in him, or Relation to him, or the Nature and Law of having him to be our Head, and our Redeemer afford, are a compleat Topick for our Liberty. And let them come with all their Arguments out of the Old Teſtament, I will but only Preach Jeſus Chriſt, and ſay, What ſay you to Jeſus Chriſt? According to Jeſus Chriſt, ſays the Apoſtle. He firſt urgeth what Chriſt had done upon Earth; Let every one pleaſe his Neighbour according to Chriſt. Secondly, What was his carriage ſince he went to Heaven? v. 7. Receive ye one another, as Chriſt alſo received us to the glory of God, both Jews and Gentiles, with all their Differences. Thirdly, He urgeth the like intent Jeſus Chriſt had in dying; Did he die for you of the Circumciſion only? He died for the Uncircumciſion alſo; Did he die for you of the Uncircumciſion only? No, he died for you of the Circumciſion alſo, v. 8. One would think it ſhould end the Controverſie, but that men have a Zeal not according to knowledge: Now then out of all this being opened, take only that Argument, According to Chriſt, and you are compleat in him for liberty of Conſcience; and methinks all the World muſt vaniſh before it.

My Aſſertion is this, That Saints, or Perſons profeſſing Chriſt, tho' they differ, yet being in Chriſt, they ought not to judge or deſpiſe, but forbear one another according to Chriſt.

In proving this Aſſertion, I ſhall keep my ſelf to Chriſt, and uſe ſuch Arguments, as the conſiderations of Relation of Chriſt to us, and of us to him will afford.

1. And I begin firſt with the Example of Chriſt; Let us, ſays the Apoſtle, bear the infirmities of the weak, and not pleaſe our ſelves, for even Chriſt pleaſed not himſelf. Do you know what he bare when he was upon Earth? Do you know what his Light was (for all the buſineſs is, men have Light for this or that which they would impoſe, and they think much others ſhould not yield to it) who had Light? He that had Life, hath Light; Could all the Earth come up to his Light, if they were now on Earth? How did he ſhew his condeſcenſion to his Apoſtles, to his Diſciples, who had great differences, great fallings ſhort? He pleaſed not himſelf; for a perſon who had all that knowledge, comes and lives amongſt a company of poor ignorant people, ſo that he was forc'd to leave the half of his Light unmanifeſted; and when he comes to part from them, John 17. he was forc'd to pray, that God would teach them to know that he came from him. Thus Chriſt did bear with them, when he lived on Earth.

I may ſhew it alſo, how he hath born with his Saints ſince he went to Heaven: He found the Saints (and ſo in all Ages) differing; ſome would have Circumciſion, and others not; whom doth Chriſt take part with? neither with the one, nor the other, but receives all to the glory of God.

I paſs now from the Example of Chriſt, Rom. 15. and I come to the Law of Chriſt, Bear ye one anothers burdens, and ſo fulfil the Law of Chriſt, Gal. 6. 2.

When Jeſus Chriſt had given us his Example, he left it with a Law, 1 John 2. 8. A new Commandment I write unto you, which thing is true in him and in you, becauſe the darkneſs is paſt, and the true light now ſhineth. What is this Commandment? He that ſays he is in the light, and hateth his Brother, is in darkneſs even till now. This was true in him firſt, that is, it had its real exiſtence in him; firſt, he made it good in his Example, and then in you, it becoming a Law from him to you; he performs it for you, and he hath given the Law to you. Now I ſhall but add this premiſe for the interpretation of this place. It is true, this place in the Galatians, comes in upon the occaſion of the ſpiritual reſtoring and ſetting in joynt with meekneſs, one that was overtaken in a fault. Says the Apoſtle, Bear ye one anothers burdens. But let me ſay this to you, this is not a particular Maxim reſtrain'd to that thing, for it is a general Maxim, as the Apoſtle in abundance of places brings a great general Maxim for a particular occaſion: Now it is clear in that Rom. 15. there is a general Maxim; we that are ſtrong, ought to bear the infirmities of the weak; and there it is ſpoken of a Chriſtian forbearing, of a conſcientious forbearing; and here it is ſpoken in a ſpiritual ſenſe. Thoſe that are ſpiritual ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, in ſeveral ways, in Reſtoring, if one falls for want of Light, &c. But the equity of the Maxim is one and the ſame, ſo that this Rule here, Gal. 6. 2. falls in, and is as applicable to that Rom. 15. as to the particular purpoſe he brings it for, in Gal. 6. This premiſed, let us conſider the explication of this his ſaying, Bear one anothers burdens; what is the meaning?

1. It is to bear the burden we have from another, that is his meaning; What is burdenſom from another to thee or me, this we are to bear.

2. Being applied to be all one in the general, and the occaſion being but a branch of it, in Rom. 15. the meaning muſt be, that one Party is to bear, and bear the burden indifferently, as well as the other, for it runs upon equal and mutual terms; and if any of the two ſhould bear moſt, it ſhould be the ſtrong; they are to bear as Porters do; who are to be Porters? thoſe that are ſtrong certainly, and if need be, they are not only to carry their burdens for them, but to carry the weak themſelves, as Chriſt doth his poor Lambs in his Arms. Now thoſe that get Eccleſiaſtical Power in their hands, take upon themſelves to be ſtrong, and call themſelves ſtrong. Do they do ſo? Truly then they are bound by this, Rom. 15. and Gal. 6. to bear. They are to be the Bearers, and the more they take themſelves to be ſtrong, the more doth the Law of Chriſt come upon them to bear the infirmities of the weak. You ſee this place doth exhort indifferently to an equal bearing. Now then how unſuitable is it for thoſe that are ſtrong to run into ſo unequal a practice, as to go and lay the burden upon the weak, with all their Authority? And, that they may eaſe their ſpirits of the burden, they feeling the infirmities of the weak, will not come up to them and bear with them. In this caſe they eaſe their ſpirits by impoſing thoſe heavy burdens upon the weak; as it is plainly implied in Rom. 15. Pleaſe not your ſelves: Bear one anothers burdens, and pleaſe not your ſelves; it imports, it is the greateſt pleaſing a man's ſelf that can be, to make others of my mind in point of Religion, and to ſee others ſubject to my underſtanding. They conſtrain you to be circumciſed, ſays the Apoſtle, Gal. 6. 12, 13. and what is the riſe of it? verſe 13. That they may glory in your fleſh, when you out of weakneſs yield they glory in their Victory, and ſo eaſe themſelves. To be Lords of your Faith, is what the falſe Apoſtles ſought for: To be Lord of your Faith, and to ſee you practiſe as they do in point of Religion, is more than to be Lords of Mens Eſtates, or Lives. If thoſe men that are ſtrong do thus, how do they bear one another burdens? how do they bear the infirmities of the weak? how do they ſuffer, or at leaſt, how do they ſo ſuffer the weak, as the weak ought to ſuffer them? for they muſt bear one anothers burdens. Truly to ſee another differ, is both a burden to mens corruptions, that would pleaſe themſelves to ſee others of their mind: And it is alſo pleaſing to Grace (ſimply conſidered) to bring men off from their Errours, though to do it by force and violence, is a Sin and an Errour. It is a burden to Grace, and a burden to corrupt Nature, to ſee another diſſent; you all find it in part, thoſe that are ſtrong, and ſtrong in power too. In this caſe what doth Jeſus Chriſt and his Apoſtles call to, not to pleaſe our ſelves, and ſo to deny both the deſires of Grace in that caſe that would be inordinate, and of Corruption, that would put men upon it. So much for opening this; Bear one anothers burdens, applied, falling in with that Rom. 15.

2. Herein the force of the Argument muſt lye; that this is a ſpecial Law of Chriſt; And ſo fulfil the Law of Chriſt. Love one to another was the general Law Chriſt gave, but to bear the burdens one of another, which is the burdenſom part, this hath the Title of the whole Law, which chriſt hath given for Saints, to love one another is the ſpecial Law in reſpect of other Commandments of Chriſt; but for Saints to bear with the burdens of others (which is one branch of the Law) this is more the Law of Chriſt. If you would ſee the general Law of Chriſt, look into John 15. 12. This is my Commandmeut, that ye love one another, as I have loved you, verſe 17, 18. Theſe things I command you, that ye love one another. If the World hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you; which is, as if he had ſaid, You Saints need love one another all of you, for you will have enough of the World's hatred, you need not lay Load one upon another; you need not lay Burthens, Perſecutions, one upon another, therefore do you Saints ſee to this, that you love one another; I bring it for this, to ſhew that it is Chriſt's ſpecial Law; This is my Commandment, ſays Chriſt, of all the Duties of the Ten Commandments, Chriſt ſingles out this, to call it, His Commandment, as enforc'd from his Love; Theſe things I command, that ye love one another, John 13. 34. Take it thus, ſays Jeſus Chriſt here; I have died for you, and I leave this Commandment of all Commandments in ſpecial manner to you, and I have reaſon to do it, for I bear with you, and I muſt bear with you when I am in Heaven; and if there be any Commandment which is more peculiarly liarly mine, it is this, That you love one another. My Father loves you, and gave me to die for you; And, I have choſen you out of the World. But my Commandment is, That you love one another, John 15: 12. The Apoſtle (1 John 2. 7.) calls it a New Commandment, yet it was from the beginning: To love our Neighbour, that is, every Man, was a duty from the beginning from Adam. Cain was the firſt who broke this Command, and he hated his Brother for Religious reſpects; this was an Inſtance from the beginning of wickedneſs; nay, ſays God, I'll part you; and ſo from the beginning he ſuffered a ſeparation; Seth came, and when he had Poſterity, Gen. 4. Men began to worſhip God together, and they were ſever'd from the World, Cain's ſeed; how did they corrupt that ſeparation? They ſhould have loved one another, this was the Commandment; but this Commandment was clearly obliterated. Chriſt comes and enforces it anew, and, ſays he, I have loved you, and died for you, and this Commandment I give you; Chriſt revives it, which had been from the beginning, ſo that it is now enforc'd from Jeſus Chriſt's having renewed it, having died for his People, and having born with them, and having given them that Example; this Example paſt into a Law, a ſpecial Law; this Law of Love is enforc'd from Chriſt.

2. It is enforc'd from God the Father too, 1 John 4. 11. If God ſo loved us, we ought alſo to love one another. This was to confirm the general, yet ſpecial Law, what Perſon doth he ſpeak of? God the Father; look into the words before, He loved us, and ſent his Son to be the Propitiation for our ſins; You have both Jeſus Chriſt's Law, and God the Father's Law, in this giving his Son, that Saints ſhould thus love Saints; truly in the Old Law all the Ten Commandments had this, The Lord thy God that brought thee out of the Land of Egypt, to enforce them; but if you come to this Law of Saints, Men that profeſs themſelves Chriſtians, have both Father and Son, and the enforcement of the Love of either put with an edge upon this Commandment; This is my Commandment; (ſays Chriſt) this is the Law of Chriſt (ſtill remember) to bear one anothers burdens: This is a ſpecial Law of that ſpecial Law, becauſe it is the hardeſt of all the reſt.

3. Nay Thirdly, He tells us, the Love of the Father is perfected in us, if we love one another, 1 John 4.12. God gains nothing by it, but you are the gainers, for his Love is perfected when you love one another. I would but bring this ſpecial Law of Jeſus Chriſt to all Saints; this Love, which hath the Love of the Father in ſending the Son, and hath the Love of Jeſus Chriſt himſelf to put the weight and edge upon it, and this Law of Love is obligatory to all Saints, and that upon mutual terms in point of Forbearance, Epheſ. 1. 15.

3. There was another Commandment left, and what was that? Have peace amongſt your ſelves; it runs upon mutual terms, one towards another; he did leave it (you know) before he died; it is a ſtrain he runs much upon, John 14. 27. Peace I leave with you, my Peace I give unto you; after he died and roſe again, ſays he, Joh. 20. 19. Peace be with you, and among you; whilſt he was alive he ſpoke the ſame thing, Mark 9. ult. Have grace in your ſelves to ſave you; and next to that, Have Peace one with another. And the caſe was this; in the beginning of the Sermon they fell out, who ſhould be greateſt, verſe 34, 35. He ends the Sermon with this, Have Peace one with another: Have Peace; wherein doth Peace lye? Peace lies eſpecially in taking up caſes of difference, therein is Peace required; it reſpects differences, and all by this Rule, for Love and Peace; he foreſaw that differences would be in his Church to the end of the World, and he urgeth this thing becauſe ſo neceſſary both for the ordering and preſerving his Church, for he could never have built it elſe. So ſoon as he went to Heaven, they quarrell'd about Circumciſion and Uncircumciſion; had not the Apoſtles endeavoured Peace, they had never ſet up the Church of the Gentiles: For there was a pidling Principle, that a Jew muſt not Preach to a Gentile, and if Chriſt had not convinced them of the folly of it, where had his Church been?

Laſtly, It is a New Commandment, John 13. 34. A new Commandment give I unto you, that ye love one another, v. 35. By this ſhall all men know that ye are my Diſciples, if ye have love one to another, John 17.21. That they all may be one (that is, amongſt themſelves) as thou Father art in me, and I in thee, that the World may believe, that thou haſt ſent me. It's called a New Commandment, becauſe the moſt excellent of all the reſt, as a new Song, and new Wine is meant, when Chriſt ſays, that He would drink no more of the Vine, till he drank it new in the Kingdom of Heaven; that is more excellent Wine.

Theſe plain and tranſcendent Admonitions both for Love and Peace, have been given by Chriſt, becauſe he did foreſee all the differences that have ariſen in his Church, and which did ariſe in thoſe firſt Times, and therefore ſaw that theſe Rules of Peace and Love, were neceſſary to begin, and conſtitute, and then to keep up, and preſerve his Church. He could not have ſet up his Church of Jews and Gentiles, much leſs have kept them in Peace, unleſs theſe his Laws had taken place among them. And ſuch a mutual Love and Peace ſhewn in bearing one anothers burdens, (and this is to be exerciſed even toward all Saints, great and ſmall, weak and ſtrong, and this, tho' but a branch, is dignified with the Title of the whole Law) is ſo peculiar, and tranſcendent a duty, as was ſufficient to characterize them to be Chriſt's Diſciples, with a notorious difference from that Love and Peace which is to be found in the World one towards another: And this Love and Peace is to be ſhewed among the Saints one toward another, with a difference from what they are in any way to ſhew unto the World who doth, and will hate them: Yea, it is to riſe ſo high, as to be an Evidence to the World, that Chriſt is the Saviour of this World of Saints, and the Head, and Guide, and Inſpirer of them with ſuch a Peace, and Love. And this Rule of Love is to be exerciſed even toward all Saints, great and ſmall, weak and ſtrong; and tho' it is but a branch, yet it is dignified with the Title of the whole Law. It is paſt into a ſpecial Law above all other Laws; For this (ſaith Chriſt) is my Law. And it is the hardeſt part of that Law, to bear the burdens one of another, of Saints ſmall, and weak, and yet 'tis called by the name of that whole Law, tho' it be but a branch of it: You have heard it is ſuch a Law as Saints ſhould obſerve one to another, they are enforc'd from the Father, and from Chriſt to love ſo, as no company in the World ſhould love, and with difference from what love they bear to the World. They ought to be at ſuch Peace one with another; ſo to bear one with another, as no other men would bear with others in the World beſide; yea, it is ſuch a Love of Forbearance and Peace, that men may know by it that they are Diſciples of Chriſt, John 13. 34, 35. We are to ſhew ſuch Love to each other, as is not to be found amongſt any ſort of Men upon Earth, and ſuch a Peace, ſuch a Love, that it may manifeſt, That Jeſus Chriſt is the Saviour of the World, (John 17. 21.) And do this to Saints, and to all Saints. Now truly, Peace is a fruit of Love, Col. 3. 10, 14.

From whence I may infer, That the Principles, and Practices of our Presbyterian Brethren, tho' Perſons godly, do yet in this reſpect, not only fall ſhort of this Rule, in degrees of Love, for all are thus deficient, but run croſs to it.

1. For whereas Chriſt would have Saints, by vertue of their Chriſtianity, to love all thoſe whom they judge to be Saints, in a different reſpect from the World, our Preſbyterian Brethren, even in Religious matters, extend their Charity, & Rule in things of Worſhip to the generality of Men in a Nation. There muſt be a National Church made up of all, who are plainly the World. They will take in Men meerly Moral, and civil in their outward deportment, and make ſuch Rules, and Conſtitutions of Church-Fellowſhip, as ſhall take in theſe, and ſuit with them. And by this Rule multitudes of poor Saints in a Nation are excluded who cannot joyn in ſuch a looſe Conſtitution of a Church.

2. Men do it for the World's ſake, and to pleaſe them, that thereby they may ſtrengthen their Intereſt, while they make up their Party by joyning with the World in Ordinances: Whereas Chriſt ſays to his Diſciples, The World will hate you, but do you love one another. And now what then is the Quarrel between their Diſſenting Brethren, and them? Their Diſſenting Brethren ſay, We love you, and are very deſirous to joyn with you in the Ordinances of God, but you joyn herein with the World, which we cannot do. Upon this they cry out upon us as Schiſmaticks; what a terrible thing is this? They make up a Party in the World of thoſe who have only a Form of Godlineſs, contrary to the Rule which enjoyns us to turn away from ſuch, 2 Tim. 3. 5. And contrary to the Rule of loving all the Saints, they exclude a great many who cannot unite in the Laxneſs of their Diſcipline, and act oppoſitely to the Law of bearing the burdens of ſuch, and act thus in matters too, wherein they cannot convince them that they are in the wrong.

3. In framing an outward Adminiſtration of Religion for the World, as well as for the Saints of their Judgment, they greatly gratifie the World, and then it is no wonder if the World be at peace with them. For if they will own them, and their Children, and admit them to their Sacraments, they have in Religious reſpects what they did deſire, and for other things of Religion they are not much inquiſitive; for ſo they have but a Religion, they are not apt to be ſcrupulous in things of that nature, and ſo they are at peace. But what is the peace which they have with theſe? It is but a dull peace, ſuch as Rome hath amongſt her Children, who go by an Implicit Faith, inſomuch as there is little Religion, and little Enquiry about it among them. But a man whoſe mind God hath enlightened, and who knows Jeſus Chriſt to the purpoſe of Salvation, is an inquiſitive creature, and muſt be ſatisfied, and it is his burden if he is not, and this burden they ought to bear. But they gratifie the World rather to make up an Intereſt with them, that ſo they may have peace.

4. They do that which is worſe than all this, for when they have joyned with the World, they make uſe of worldly force, and compulſion, and employ and call in Aid and Strength from the World whereby to compel their poor Diſſenting Brethren to their way. How contrary is this to Chriſt's Advice and Counſel, who tells us, that the World will hate us ſufficiently, and therefore we need not lay Load upon one another. But they joyning with the World, it will afford them carnal weapons in this caſe, becauſe of its hatred to any who are godly. And yet all this muſt not be counted Perſecution. But I would ask, how doth the Antichriſt of Rome perſecute? Is it not by Impriſonment, and Death? And is not confiſcation of Goods, tho' not materially the ſame puniſhments, yet a ſort of Perſecution too?

5. They do this for Points of doubtful Diſputation (as the Apoſtles phraſe is) for both the things urged by them, and the Power which they challenge to impoſe them are ſuch. They are ſuch diſputable matters, as men may diſpute their hearts out about them, and yet not prevail to a conviction. But oh! how is this ſuch a Peace, ſuch a Love of Saints to all Saints as ſhould, and might diſtinguiſh them from all the World beſides? for it is ſuch a diſtinguiſhing Love, and Peace, which Chriſt enjoyns, as is not to be found in all the World beſides. It is ſo remarkable a Love, that by it it might be diſcerned even by the World, that theſe are Chriſt's Diſciples. How many differences far greater doth Rome the Antichriſtian World indulge to her Children in variety of Orders, Points of Doctrine, &c. And yet theſe men will not allow a Liberty in ſmaller things. They will not uſe the ſame Forbearance as the Men of the World commonly obſerve one towards another.

6. They farther herein go againſt as clear Rules, as any are in Chriſtianity, or the Scriptures, while they thus impoſe things of doubtful Diſputations. Is not that a clear Rule, Phil. 3. 15, 16. Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded: and if in any thing ye be otherwiſe minded, God ſhall reveal even this unto you. Nevertheleſs, whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the ſame Rule, let us mind the ſame thing. We are to leave the reſt to God to reveal when he pleaſeth. It is another clear Rule which we have, Rom. 15. 1, You that are ſtrong, bear the infirmities of thoſe who are weak. This we are to do to fulfil the Law of Chriſt. Is it not a clear Rule, That every one ſhould pleaſe his Neighbour for edification? Rom. 15. 2. We ſhould then follow things that make for peace, and whereby we may edifie one another: But when they act thus contrary to theſe Rules, they pretend that their deſign is to procure peace in the Churches, as if the only way to peace (which they take for granted too) were to impoſe the more common, and generally prevailing Opinions concerning Faith, and Worſhip, upon others who do diſſent; and if they do not ſubmit unto thoſe Impoſitions, to reſtrain them from holding any Religious Aſſemblies, or enjoying among themſelves thoſe Ordinances of the Goſpel, which may edifie them. If we look into Holland, we ſhall find a Toleration of Worſhip allowed to thoſe who diſſent from the Eſtabliſht Conſtitution. If we go to Turkey, the Eaſt-Indies, or to any Government of Mahometans, we ſhall ſee that Peace is granted even by them to Chriſtians, by a Toleration, and Forbearance of them. And what? muſt there be no way among Chriſtians for Peace, but to conſtrain all to be of one mind, and that in things of leſſer and doubtful moment?

7. They retain theſe Principles, and Reſolutions, even while themſelves are perſecuted by other Proteſtants, who profeſs to do it out of the ſame Conſcience, and Principles, upon which they themſelves do proceed (only mutatis mutandis) and think they ought to do ſo, and that they do God good ſervice in it. Our Presbyterian Brethren have been put by, and not ſuffered to Preach, as being thought not to be legally Ordained, or not to worſhip God as they ought. And while they cry out Perſecution, Perſecution, when it falls thus upon themſelves, how can they have any ſecret reſerve, or entertain any Principles to lead them unto a reſolution to do the like things unto others whom they judge to be godly perſons, and who differ leſs from them in Doctrines, and Subſtantials of Worſhip, than they do from other perſons? I will only ſay this in alluſion to that in Ezekiel, Wilt thou perſecute under the power of thoſe who perſecute the[illegible]?

8. The moſt Moderate of them condeſcended indeed ſo far, that Saints unſatiſfied to hold Communion with them, might continue in their Congregations without being preſſed to come to the Lord's Supper, but it would not be allowed that they ſhould enjoy this Ordinance in other Aſſemblies of their own. Thus it was debated in the Aſſembly, and the reaſon given for it was, ſuch an Allowance would be againſt the common Peace, and diſturb the common Eſtabliſh'd Rule. And ſo out of Reverence to their Opinion, and Way, others muſt ſtand out, and be excluded from this great Ordinance for ever, in Reverence to, and for the ſake of the pretended Peace of their Church. The great buſineſs pretended is Peace, the Peace of the Church, ay but let them yield things conducive to Peace too. For the Peace of the Church doth not lie in this, that none muſt be ſuffered in any thing to differ from it. Peace doth not conſiſt in this, that many perſons truly godly muſt ſtand out, and be deprived of Worſhip, and Ordinances, for fear of diſpleaſing them by entring into ſeparate Congregations, which they cannot endure to ſee. Peace doth not conſiſt in paying ſuch a Reverence to a Church, that all who diſſent from it muſt forbear meeting apart for Religious Worſhip. No, let us truly follow the Apoſtle's direction, Rom. 14. 19. Let us therefore follow after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith one may edifie another. And from hence theſe are the great things which may be complained of in the Caſe.

1. That ſome perſons think Peace to lie only in mens quietly not enjoying Ordinances in ſeparate Congregations, as if there were no way to Peace but this. But there is another way of Peace, in bearing with men notwithſtanding their different Practices, and Judgments. Tho' one man keeps a day which another doth not, yet peace may be preſerved between them both, and this is the peace to which Chriſt exhorts us. It is not as if there were no other way but this; if you cannot be of our mind, and if you will not enjoy the Ordinances in Communion with us, you muſt fly out of the Land for them.

2. While they are ſo urgent for peace, they forget what follows, Rom. 14. 19. that we ſhould mind ſuch things whereby one may edifie another. If their claims for peace would hold, yet they run away but with half the Apoſtle's Rule, whereas all of it ſhould be taken in. Theſe Diſſenting Chriſtians ſhould have the Lord's Supper (which they ſcruple to receive in your Pariſhes) for their Edification, for it is that whereby they are to be built up, and we are to pleaſe our Neighbour for his edification. Yea this is of far greater moment to each Saint, than that dull Tyrannical peace which is aimed at by a Coercive Power. If indeed thoſe to whom forbearance is uſed, diſturb the Publick Church Aſſemblies, and would hinder them in the Ordinances, let them have the due reward of their Turbulency, for ſuch behaviour is contrary unto peace indeed. But men might have peace, and others by them, and among them might have peace, true, everlaſting peace, if they could quiet themſelves in Chriſt's Rule for Forbearance.

All the Apoſtles when they were alive, could not perſwade one Jew, though a Believer, to diſclaim the continuance of the Jewiſh Ceremonies: Peter himſelf, and James, were of the mind that they ſhould ceaſe (as appears from Acts 15.) and yet they could not perſwade the Jews to relinquiſh them. This was a tryed buſineſs, and in the higheſt ſuppoſition of Apoſtolical Power, and Authority; and what Authority is there then now upon Earth ſufficient to perſwade Mens Conſciences, when the Apoſtles themſelves could not do it in a caſe of like nature? The Apoſtles profeſſed that they had power given only for Edification, and not for Deſtruction. And what greater deſtruction is there than by outward compulſion, and utterly ruining men to tempt them to break their Conſciences, or againſt their Conſciences to refrain Religious Aſſemblies for Worſhip, and Enjoyment of Ordinances in them, which is the food of their Souls. Is not this expreſly contrary to the Apoſtles direction, Rom. 15. 1, 2. We then that are ſtrong, ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to pleaſe our ſelves. Let every one of us pleaſe his Neighbour, for his good to edification. Truly, I will not now ask by what Authority they would do theſe things, but I would ask by what Charity do they theſe things? Why ſhould they lay any godly perſon under that neceſſity, that he ſhall not have the Sacrament unleſs he takes it in their way? Why ſhould they tempt a man to act againſt his Conſcience in one thing, to have the enjoyment of it in another? What a terrible thing is this? Rome bears with their Children more by ſuffering them to differ in a thouſand things.

3. If they proceed in making Laws againſt us, let us go to Law with them. Let us plead Chriſt's Law, and let us in prayer urge him, that he would put his own Law in execution. Let us pray to him, that he would cauſe his Law to ſtand, and take place. It is very ſeaſonable to do ſo: Why may we not thus in Appeals to Chriſt by prayer go to Law with them? We have a more Antient Law, a ſpecial Law of Jeſus Chriſt, who is the great Law-giver, and who hath the Executive Power, even all power in Heaven, and Earth; and hath he not laid it at ſtake for the maintaining of his Ordinances, and Worſhip to the end of the World? And he is our Advocate to plead his own Law, and our Cauſe; and Heaven, and Earth ſhall paſs away before the leaſt tittle of his Law ſhall fail. No, it ſhall all be accompliſhed in the World; and he will ſhake Heavens, and Earth, but he will do it. Methinks this ſhould afford a very great deal of ſtrength, and help to our Faith, that we may go to God, and Chriſt, and plead this Law, this his own Law unto him. Yea, it is not his Law only, but we have his Oath, and Covenant annext. He hath ſworn unto us to this purpoſe, Luke 1. 73. 74, 75. The Oath which he ſware to our Father Abraham, That he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hands of our Enemies, might ſerve him without fear, in holineſs and righteouſneſs before him, all the days of our life.

1. There is a Judgment acknowledged and confeſſed in the caſe, and (as you know) execution if ſued out, is to follow. In the year 1640. when ſome would bring in Bowing to the Altar, what was then pleaded in the Canon? It was this, Let not him that is ſtrong, deſpiſe him that is weak; and let not him that is weak, judge him that is ſtrong. This is a Judgment paſt to prove all that I have ſaid.

3 We muſt alſo bring them, and our Caſe to an Appeal in the day of Judgment, for thither the Apoſtle brings it, Rom. 14. 10. But why doeſt thou judge thy Brother? or why doeſt thou ſet at naught thy Brother? we ſhall all ſtand before the Judgment Seat of Chriſt. The Apoſtle urgeth upon them the obſervance of this Law of Love, and Peace, as they will anſwer it there.

FINIS.

THE GOVERNMENT AND DISCIPLINE OF THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

Set down by way of Queſtions and Anſwers, with an Explanation and Application of them.

By THOMAS GOODWIN, D.D.

LONDON,
Printed by John Darby for T. G. MDCXCVI.

The Government and Diſcipline of the Churches of Chriſt, ſet down by way of Queſtion and Anſwer.

Queſt. WHat is the Church of the New Teſtament?

Anſw. The Church of God is a Myſtical Body, whereof Chriſt is the Head.

Explicat. The Church is here deſcribed by four Arguments. 1ſt. By the Genus or Kind, it is a Myſtical Body. 2dly. By the Subject of it, that is the Head, the Members, Saints. 3dly. A Form and Eſſence by which it is a Church: There may be a Company of Saints which have Chriſt for their Head, and yet want Fellowſhip. Now that which makes them a Church, and diſtinguiſhes them from other Churches, is this, uniting into one Congregation by holy Covenant: The Form giveth Eſſence and Diſtinction. All Churches have Chriſt for their Head, and are Saints by calling, but that which makes us differ and makes us to be this Church, is this Covenant which we have made with God, to ſubmit our ſelves to God's Ordinance in this Company; this giveth the Life and Being to a particular Church. 4thly. The end why we are thus united and knit together, and that is, to worſhip God, and that concerneth God: another concerneth us, that he may bleſs us, and we may edify one another in all his holy Ordinances: This is the nature of a Church.

I. For the firſt, The Church is a Body: That is the proper kind of the Church; to ſay a Company or Number, is too general a word; but it is a Body that we are in, knit together to one kind of Employment, which every Company is not fit to do. The Church is a Body, *Eph.*1.22. the Church is Chriſt's Body, *Eph.*5.23. Chriſt is the Head of his Church, the Saviour of his Body, *Rom.*12.4. 1 *Cor.*12.27,28. Now this word Body doth imply in it three things which concur to the nature of a Body.

1ſt. A Body conſiſts of variety of Members of ſeveral Offices and Uſes, but ſufficient to ſerve to the Subſiſtence of the whole Perſon. There is no living Body but conſiſts of variety of Members; ſo it is with the Church, 1 Cor. 12. 14 to 20. the Members have ſeveral Offices, Rom. 12. 5, 6. every Member hath his different Gift, and by the uſe of them they are able to miniſter Supply to the whole Body.

2dly. A Body doth not imply only this, but a fit Communion and Combination of theſe Members together, they are joined together in Order, *Eph.*4. 15, 16. Therefore a Church is of ſuch Members that can fitly join and be joined, whoſe Spirits can well cloſe and make ſweet Conſort, yea can better ſute with thoſe of their own Body than of another, Col. 2.19. The Body is knit by Joints and Bands; for ſo the Church is compacted together in a proportionable Frame with Joints and Bands.

Q. What are thoſe Joints and Bands that make Members ſo knit together and firmly joined, that you may as well break a Bone in the midſt, as break them?

A. The Body is great, Chriſt is the Head, therefore the Bands muſt be ſuch as knit us to him, and one to another, Eph. 4. 4, 5. there the Apoſtle tells you what they be.

Firſt, One Body, one Spirit with Chriſt, and one Spirit one with another: not only that we have all a Spirit of Grace, of Faith and Love, for ſo have all the true Members of every Church; but a natural Diſpoſition of Heart that may fitly join together as much as may be, and this makes them one Body.

Secondly, One Faith, by which we all look to Chriſt for Grace to perform our Duties, and for Acceptance of them; this Faith knits to Chriſt, and alſo knits us together.

Thirdly, One Love, which is the Bond of Perfection, Col. 2. 14. ſome more Love which God calleth me to bear to the Members of my own Body than the Members of another.

Fourthly, One Covenant, and the Seals confirming that Covenant, 1 Cor. 10. 17. we are one Bread; one Bread combines us more to one Body, and ſo doth Baptiſm, 1 Cor. 12. 13. As for that Covenant which made a Gentile when he came on to Grace to partake with the Iſraelites in the Ordinance of God, it was entring into Covenant, and having a place in God's Houſe, Iſa. 56. 4, 6, 7. But now I ſpeak only of the Covenant, as that which makes them one Body; but more of them when I come to the formal part of the Church.

But this is not all, for the Apoſtle ſaith we are knit by Joints, not in Joints: the Spirit knits, and Faith knits; but what makes them fall into Joints? This is done by mutual Submiſſion. What makes the Thigh fall into the Knee? there is an Hollow in the Knee, into which the Thigh ſhoots it ſelf, and is there joined. That which joins us together in a Church is Submiſſion, Eph. 5. 31. They that cannot well ſubmit to one another are not well joined; ſo the Bands of the Church muſt be whole, of one Spirit, of one Faith, &c. Thus you ſee a Body muſt be joined together by Bands and Joints that they may cloſe one with another, and can fall down and yield one to another, either in Admonition or Reproof.

3dly. The third thing in a Body is the miniſtring of mutual Help and Supply from one Member to another, for the Health and Growth of the Body, ſo that we cannot be without one, 1 Cor. 12. 21, 22, 23. You will ſay, Hath Chriſt need of us? Yea, for he is the Head of the Body; and if he will be a King, he muſt have his Subjects, for this is the Glory of a King, and ſerveth much to his Supply. Tho Chriſt would be happy without us, yet if he will be the Head of the Church, as every Member receiveth ſomething from him, ſo it adds ſomething to him, to the Beauty of the Body: Eph. 1. 23. The Church is the Fulneſs of him that filleth all in all. Chriſt were empty were it not for the Church, as the Head without the Body. When you have a Church, then you have a full Saviour and Advocate; the Church fills up his Myſtical Body, his Divine and Human Nature need it not, but the Myſtical Body needs it: Therefore the Apoſtle calleth the Church Chriſt, becauſe Chriſt and the Church are one Body, 1 Cor. 12. 12. Chriſt is pleaſed to ſay he ſtands in need of us, yea of his pooreſt Servants to receive Grace from him, and that he might pour it out upon them, as a Woman with full Breaſts ſtands in need of a Child to ſuck them; ſo Chriſt is ſo full of Grace and Comfort, that if he have not his weak ones to ſuck Grace from him, his Bowels ake within him; therefore he called to the weak and thirſty, Mat. 11. 28. Iſa. 55. 1, 2. Of his Fulneſs we receive Grace for Grace: As the Head thus communicates to the Body, and the Body adds to the Head, ſo every Member adds Supply one toward another. We can want no kindly Member of the Body, but the Body will be ſenſible of it; Eph. 4. 16. every Part hath ſome meaſure of Spiritual Life, and ſo they can be helpful and uſeful one to another, and thereby they grow up according to the Increaſe of God, Col. 2. 19. One Member of the Body derives Nouriſhment from another till it comes to the loweſt Member of all: So the Members of Chriſt draw Grace from him, till it ſtretcheth to the loweſt, the loweſt Servant, the loweſt Skirt of his Garment. This is the third thing in a Body, the Members of it ſafe-guard and preſerve that Body. And thus you ſee why the Church is called a Body. The Church is not only a Body but a Myſtical Body, Eph. 5. 32. It is not the Natural but Myſtical Body of Chriſt, Chriſt is ſuch a Body as is ſecretly knit to him by one Spirit. This is a great Myſtery, ſaith the Apoſtle; Firſt, That the Church ſhould be framed out of the Side of Chriſt, as Eve out of Adam's Bone; for ſuch is the Church, ſo is his Compariſon. All that have been brought home to Chriſt, have been brought home by the preaching of Chriſt and his Death. 2dly. The Deſertion of a Man's Father and Mother and all outward Comforts, to cleave to Chriſt; this is a great Myſtery. 3dly. They ſhould be one Fleſh; and Union with Chriſt is a great Myſtery: there is a Shadow of it in Civil Marriage, but it is a great Myſtery; for this Body is a Spiritual Body.

II. Now to the Subject of this Church, Firſt, Chriſt is the Head of it, Eph. 5. 23. and 1. 22. Reaſons.

1. In regard of Eminency of Place therein: He is above all the Members in Place and Power.

2. As the Body receives from the Head Motion, Senſe and reaſonable Life; ſo have we all our Spiritual Life and Motion, all our Grace from Chriſt as our Head.

3. As the Head guides the Body which way it pleaſeth, and the Body is ready at its Command; ſo every Member of the Body of Chriſt is ready to move or go at his Appointment and Command.

Secondly, The Members be Saints, 1 Cor. 1. 2. Col. 1. 2. Acts 2. 47. ſuch as ſhall be ſaved: And the Reaſon is, becauſe it is meet the Head and the Body ſhould be proportionable: What Proportion is there between a Leaden Heel and Golden Head?

Uſe 1. If the Church of Chriſt be a Body, then it is neceſſary that in the Body of the Church the Members ſhould be of different Gifts and Growth: If the whole Body were an Eye, where were the Hearing? An hundred Apoſtles could not make a Church ſtanding as Apoſtles, 1 Cor. 12. 24, 29. The Church muſt be a Body, there muſt be ſome Diſtinction, as much as is requiſite to the Being of a Body; an hundred Hands will not make a Body, therefore conceive this neceſſary to a Church, as alſo how unweildy a Work the Fabrick of a Church is.

Uſe 2. If a Church be a Body, then you ſee what we ought to be, to be of one Spirit, of one Love, to be willing to ſubmit the one to the other in the Lord; that we be careful to grow up in all things, to the mutual Helpfulneſs of one another. The Name of a Body is of ſtrong Inſtruction to teach us what we ought to be: When ſaw you one Member of the Body fall out with another? but they are ſenſible of the Joy and Grief of each other: therefore be of one Spirit, and build up one another in Love.

Uſe 3. The Name of a Body binds us from eaſily ſtarting one from another: if a Member hang by a looſe Skin it is no trouble to cut it off, but if it be faſt on, it will be a great Grief to the Body: therefore there ſhould be weighty Reaſons for diſjointing one from another. May not a Man then remove himſelf, or may the Church keep a Man in the Body, or let him go at their pleaſure? I anſwer, Neither of both, 1 *Cor.*12.18. If they be Members, they muſt ſee that Chriſt diſmiſs them; but if they will fall off, it is a ſign they did hang but by a looſe Skin, and then the Church will be no great Loſers by the Departure of ſuch from them.

Uſe 4. Is Chriſt the Head of the Church? then the Pope is not the Head of the Church: An Headſhip is applied to Chriſt; for if the Pope be the Head of the Church, then the Church is the Body of the Pope, which no Papiſt durſt ever ſay to this day: Now theſe two ſtand relative. Princes are ſaid to be the Head of the Church, as Saul to be Head of the Tribes, that is only in regard of Eminency of Place, that they be to ſee all the Members of the Church do their Duty.

Uſe 5. Is Chriſt the Head of the Church? Then if any Man want Wiſdom, Direction or Comfort, where ſhould he have it but in our Head? the Head muſt ſupply all to the Members.

Uſe 6. Alſo it keepeth us to be ſubject unto Chriſt, as the Church is to Chriſt her Head; when the Head calleth for any thing, make no difficulty of it, be willing to be led and guided by him.

Uſe 7. It is Comfort to every poor Member of Chriſt, that ſurely Chriſt cannot but be ſenſible of my Eſtate. If Chriſt be our Head, then the leaſt Toe cannot be trodden on but the Head feels it. Acts 9. 4. Saul cannot perſecute a Member of Chriſt, but he perſecutes Chriſt. Iſa. 63. 9. He is merciful to us, and his Soul is grieved for the Miſeries that befal us, Judg 10. 16.

Uſe 8. If the Members of the Church be Saints, then you ſee what manner of Perſons they ought to be that offer themſelves to the Church, and whom the Church receiveth: They muſt be faithful Brethren, ſuch as ſhall be ſaved, ſuch as are knit to Chriſt by one Spirit: and when they have given themſelves to Chriſt, then let them give themſelves to the Church. To have a Golden Head and Wooden Leg is a Diſhonour to the Head.

Uſe 9. If Members be Saints, then you ſee what God calleth us to be. A Saint implies to be ſet apart from all unclean Uſes, they are devoted to God's Ways, to the building up of his Kingdom: this God calleth us to be, as to be Members of Chriſt, ſo to be Saints.

And now to the Form and Eſſence of the Church, to which alſo belongs the End, as the ſubject Matter doth to the Kind: the Form is that which diſtinguiſheth it from all other Aſſemblies and Churches; for when it is ſaid united into one Congregation, it diſtinguiſheth it from the Church of the Jews, which was a National Church; from the Catholick Church, which never in this World meets in one Congregation; as alſo from the Dioceſan-Church, and Family-Church: That they are knit into holy Covenant, diſtinguiſheth one Congregation from another; that they meet to worſhip God in all his holy Ordinances, this diſtinguiſheth them from all other Aſſemblies that may be. Godly Men may meet in one place for Civil Ends. The Church therefore to which God hath given Paſtors and Teachers, is united into one Congregation that meets in one place, 1 *Cor.*14.23. and 11.18,20. When they come together in one place, then they make up a Church-Aſſembly, it muſt be a place of no bigger Compaſs and Latitude than that all may hear and be edified, 1 Cor. 14. 26, 31. To this Church Paul commendeth the Excommunication of the Inceſtuous Corinthian, 1 *Cor.*3.4. To a Church that may meet in one place, Chriſt biddeth us tell the Church, that is, one Congregation. The Apoſtle never calls the Chriſtians of a whole Nation one Church, but when there are many Congregations in a Nation or Country, then he terms them many Churches, *Gal.*1.22. 1 Cor. 16.19. Gal. 1.2. therefore he ſtiles them Churches, becauſe they meet not all in one place, Rom. 16.4. 1 Cor. 14. 33. He doth not call them the Church of the Saints, but the Churches, and there is a double Reaſon of it.

1. It is taken from the Duty that lieth upon the Church in the New Teſtament, to take up Offences amongſt Brethren, Matth. 18. 17,18. Tell the Church, ſaith Chriſt. Now that is not a Family-Church; for what hath one Family to do to judg another? It is not the Catholick Church, for they never meet but repreſentatively, and they cannot hear all the Offences of private Brethren: neither can it be a National, Dioceſan or Provincial Church: For a whole Nation or Province cannot meet for one Brother's Offence: Therefore by the Church is meant the Congregation that meets every Lord's-day, and it is eaſy for them to hear and heal all the Offences that fall out in a Week: To that Church Chriſt ſpeaks, Whatſoever you bind on Earth, ſhall be bound in Heaven.

And from the ſilence of God in the New Teſtament touching all National Meetings, and Provincial and Dioceſan Meetings: for if God had appointed ſuch a Church, he would have appointed National and Provincial Meetings. In the Church of the Jews, which was a National Church, they were at the leaſt three times in the Year to meet all together, and there were National Offices and Sacrifices to be offered only at thoſe times. The High-Prieſt had a peculiar place; therefore Chriſt would have appointed National Officers and Meetings, and National and Provincial Worſhip, if he had appointed ſuch a Church. Some will ſay he hath left Primates and Metropolitans, &c. but he hath not ſet down the Offices and Duties of ſuch Men, there is a deep ſilence of all theſe things: Therefore the Church of the New Teſtament is a Congregational Church, that may meet in one place.

Vſe 1. A juſt Refutation of all that Platform of Churches that Antichriſt brought into the Church, and with the Church came in to make way for him: for if the Church be a Congregation it may meet in one place; then National, Provincial and Dioceſan Churches are ſuch that the Apoſtles never heard of in the New Teſtament, they are therefore the Inventions of Mens Brains, and ſo an Image ſet up, and contrary to the ſecond Commandment. If it ſhould be ſaid to us, You are a few ſcattered Churches, were it not fit to have tranſcendent Officers for Unity ſake to prevent Schiſm and Factions? I anſwer, It was intended for that end, but that which was intended for the benefit of the Church, hath brought Contentions into the Church, hath made way for Ambition and Secular Pomp, for ſhouldring out of God's Ordinances and Godly Men. Hath God therefore appointed no ſuch things as National Churches, National Meetings and Worſhip? then let us entertain no thoughts of them.

Vſe 2. From hence take the Limits of the Power of Church-Officers, how they may proceed as far as the Congregation reacheth; for the Church is a Congregation: therefore from hence will fall to the Ground Non-reſidence, that one Man ſhould have many Churches under him, one in one Country, another in another Country; ſuch walk beſide the Rule; for if God hath ordained more Officers to one Church than one, and not more Churches to one Officer; then one Man may have no more but one Church under him. The Apoſtle left more Officers in one Church than one, Phil. 1. 1. with the Biſhops, that is, the Paſtors, Teachers and Elders. No Paſtor or Teacher, but he is the Paſtor or Teacher of one Congregation, and no more, Acts 20.7,28. God hath many Overſeers to one Flock, not committed many Flocks to one Overſeer; therefore Non-reſidency is againſt the Rule of Chriſt.

Uſe 3. Hence ſee the irregular Proceedings of ſuch as take upon them Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction over many Churches, over a thouſand Congregations, over a whole Province or Nation, or the whole World, as the Pope doth: For Chriſt left every Church his own Officers to rule the ſame.

Uſe 4. Alſo this is for Refutation of thoſe that think Pariſhes are diſtinguiſhed, not by Divine Inſtitution but Human. Indeed that the Circuit of ſo much Land ſhall maintain the Miniſter, and all that live within ſuch a Compaſs of Ground ſhall be of ſuch a Congregation, this is of Human Invention, againſt the Commandment of God; but this is of Divine Inſtitution, that the Church exceedeth not the Bounds of one Congregation, of ſuch a Latitude that all may hear, and all may be edified: And as for thoſe that are admitted into the Church, this is Divine; for the Lord admitteth all into the Church, 1 Cor. 12. 18. they willingly offer themſelves to ſubject themſelves to the Ordinances of God; therefore the Church is of Divine Inſtitution.

III. Now the next thing is, that they are joined together in one Congregation by holy Covenant. Firſt, To prove this by Grounds out of Scripture, and then by Reaſons.

1. The firſt Direction and Inſtitution of a Church was by Covenant; the Iſraelites made a Covenant with the Lord, and he with them, Deut. 5. 2. and from that time they were called a Church, Acts 7. 38. there they promiſed they would do all the Lord had ſaid, and be obedient, Exod. 24. 3, 7. There was another Covenant made with them, Deut. 29. 12, &c. this was a Covenant of Graee, as the other was of Works, ver. 10, 11, 12. the Lord entred into Covenant with them that day, and with their Children: By a Covenant he takes them to be his People, and to be their God. Some of them were in Covenant with God before, as Moſes, Joſhua, &c. but when they became a National Church, then they made a popular Covenant with God and their own ſelves; and there is the ſame Reaſon of a National and Congregational Church. The Stranger that would be of that Church muſt lay hold of the Covenant with them, Iſa. 56. 47. Therefore when Abraham took Strangers into Fellowſhip with his Family, in which the Church was, they did it by Confederacy with him, which is a Covenant, Gen. 14. 13. He would not have done it if they had been Idolaters, that was the Sin of Aſa and Jehoſaphat, and with Ahab; therefore when he took them to War with him they were confederate in Religion with him, they muſt come in by Covenant; and then my Horſes are thy Horſes, thy Friends my Friends, and thus all one: thus all in the Church of Iſrael came in by way of Covenant.

2. The ſecond Ground of Scripture is taken from the Reſtitution of a Church when it is fallen, and there is the ſame Reaſon of Reſtitution as Inſtitution, by the ſame means it is reſtituted as inſtituted: Now when they had ever fallen from God, or had decayed, they entred into a new Covenant with God, ſo did they in the days of Aſa, 2 Chron. 23. 16. ſo did alſo Hezekiah, 2 Chron. 29. 9,10. ſo in the days of Joaſh, when it had been broken by Joram and Athaliah, 2 Chron. 13. 16. ſo did Joſiah, 2 Chron. 34. 31, 32. Thus a Church is reſtored to its Purity, by renewing of its Covenant, Ezra 10. 3,5, 12, 19. and Nehem. 10. 29. They all cleave to the Lord and to their Brethren, with their Nobles; and therefore there was a Regiſter kept of them that entred into Covenant, Iſa. 4. 3. they were written, &c. Pſal. 87. 6. therefore they that could not ſhew their Father's Houſe in the Genealogies were put out, unleſs they would make a new Covenant, Ezra 2. 59.

3. The third Ground from Scripture is taken from the Apoſtles Practice in the New Teſtament, Acts 2. 42. They continued, &c. the word ſignifies, they joined and cleaved together, and this you ſee more plain in Acts 5. 13. none durſt join themſelves, that is, glue themſelves to the Church; and it is the ſame word which Chriſt uſeth about Man and Wife, Matth. 19. 6. Now how doth a Man cleave to his Wife, but by mutual Covenant? no other ways: That being wanting or broken, breaks and diſſolves; that being maintain'd and kept, keeps a Church: but the Covenant being wanting or broken, breaks a Church; therefore the Covenant being made and kept, makes and keeps a Church in its Inſtitution. Ezek. 10. 10, 14. there is a Deſcription of the breaking of the Church of Iſrael. Chriſt had two Staves, and when he had broken the firſt, that was his Covenant he had made with his People, and they with him, and that was the Preſence of Chriſt in his Ordinances, which is his Beauty. When you may go and hear the Scribes and Phariſees and be never the better, then Chriſt is gone; their Souls loathed him, and his Soul loathed them: But the other Staff was afterwards broken Bands, and that was the Covenant between God's People and the Scribes and Phariſees; and thoſe that had a Name to be of Iſrael, and were not true Iſraelites, God broke Brotherhood between them: He broke it in the Death of Stephen and the Perſecution following, and thereby ſevered his faithful People from amongſt them, ſo that they were forced for to leave the Temple and the Worſhip, and then they turned to the Gentiles, Acts 13.46. and then they ceaſed to be a Church. Now then if the breaking of the Covenant break the Church, then the making of it conſtitutes a Church; break the Covenant with Chriſt, and you ſhake the Foundation of the Church. The poor of the Fold began to perceive that Chriſt had left them; and yet he ſpeaks not in the Scribes and Phariſees, but when he breaks the Brotherhood, then the Church is quite broken; therefore this being held, held and maintained a Church together. If this held in the Old Teſtament, it will in the New. Theſe things were ſo plain to the Jews in the Old Teſtament, that they made no queſtion but that in the New Teſtament the Children ſhould be admitted as the Parents were: Therefore you read little of the Baptiſm of the Infants, but it was clear, that if the Fathers and their Seed were Col. 2.11, 12. then received into the Covenant by the Seal of Circumciſion, then in the New Teſtament they were to be received by the Seal of Baptiſm; ſo that in the New Teſtament you read of nothing but of the joining and gluing to the Church; and as Man and Wife were joined by Marriage-Covenant, ſo were they joined together by Covenant in Church-Fellowſhip. Theſe be the Grounds from Scripture: Now to the Reaſons.

Reaſon 1. Firſt, it is taken from the Nature of a Church, as God ſtiles it in Scripture, it is called the Spouſe and Queen of Chriſt, Eph. 5. 23, 31, 32. Cant. 6. 8. Now wherein doth a Queen differ from a Concubine? a Queen enters into the Bed by Covenant, but a Concubine is taken in by Power, as Jacob took his Maid. Prov. 2. 17. the Wife is ſaid to forſake the Covenant; therefore if the Church be a Spouſe, ſhe muſt enter in by Covenant. Two things go to a Queen-like State. 1. She enters in by Covenant. 2. She hath the Keys of the Family, and rules the Affairs in it, but a Concubine hath neither; ſo a true Church hath both theſe. She is called the City of the living God, Heb. 12. 22. Eph. 2. 19. the Members of the Church are Citizens. Now Citizens enter into a Covenant together to keep the Laws and maintain the Liberty of the City, therefore the Church is a City, muſt enter in by Covenant.

2. From the Power of the Church to call her own Officers. Acts 1. ult. the Church called Matthias, he was numbred, the word ſignified by common Voice and Suffrage they accepted him, συγκατεψηφίσθη, ſo were the Deacons choſen by lifting up of Hands, Acts 6. 5. the word καὶ ἐξελέξαντο, ſignifies they are choſen by lifting up of Hands: Now the Church doth not call her Officers to an annual place but conſtant, Zech. 11. 17. Deut. 12. 19. they muſt not forſake the Levite, nor the Levite them; the very calling of a Miniſter to the Imployment of the Miniſtry is an eſſential Covenant, tho ſomething more implicite. An Officer ſhould not thruſt himſelf upon a Body, for then he maketh her a Concubine, not a Queen. Now then if he muſt be choſen by full Conſent, then he hath no Authority over them that will not ſubmit themſelves to him, and therefore cannot do any Act of Power, as adminiſter the Sacraments and Church-Cenſures, to thoſe that do not call him to the Work, therefore there muſt be a Covenant.

3. From the Power of the Church over her Members: ſhe hath Power to admoniſh them, and if they hear her not, then to exclude them. Now ſhe hath nothing to do to judg thoſe that are without the Church, but thoſe that are joined to the Church, 1 Cor. 5. 11, 12.

4. From the End and Uſe of the Sacraments; one End is to ſeal up Church-Fellowſhip, 1 Cor. 12.13. and 10.17. therefore Church-Fellowſhip ſtandeth by Church-Covenant, becauſe they are the Seal of the Covenant.

Uſe 1. Reproof of thoſe Spirits that look at Church-Covenants as a Human Invention: Abraham will not admit any to Fellowſhip with him, but by Covenant; the Church of Iſrael enters by Covenant, and is by Covenant reſtored; by Covenant the Church of the New Teſtament is the City and Spouſe of Chriſt, therefore there muſt be a Covenant.

Uſe 2. You ſee how we have cauſe to be humbled if we ſit down any where, and enjoy the Church-Privileges without Church-Fellowſhip by a Covenant.

Uſe 3. Learn we a true Eſtimation of Churches, and Diſcretion in judging of them: by how much any Church is more faithful in the Covenant, the truer and more pure the Church is. Hath any Church Power to chooſe her own Officers, and the Power to govern the Church? then ſuch are pure Churches, but elſe they are defiled, and are but Concubines: How ſhould we therefore be humbled for our Brethren, that are forced like Concubines, enter not into Covenant before the Lord and one with another, according to his Will?

Uſe 4. A juſt Apology for ſuch Miniſters and others, that dare not adminiſter any Ordinance of God to ſuch as offer not themſelves to enter into Covenant with the Church. A Miniſter may not obtrude himſelf upon any; if they call him not to be their Miniſter, he may not diſpenſe any Cenſure or Act of Power to them. Therefore it is not an Act of Schiſm in the Church or Miniſter, but in thoſe that ſo withdraw themſelves, they thereby make themſelves uncapable to have any Ordinance of Power to be diſpenſed to them. Miniſters have no Power but where they are called, and they are not but where there is a willing People: if Men will not have the Church to rule over them, God compels none, tho he commands it, and therefore neither may the Church: 2 Cor. 9.13. they thank God for their profeſſed Subjection.

Uſe 5. Hence ſee the eſſential Difference of one Congregation from another, the difference of the Covenant; they enter into Covenant with Officers and Members here, and this diſtinguiſheth them.

Uſe 6. This may teach the neceſſity of Conſtancy in Church-Fellowſhip; it is a Covenant of God, and God hath a part in all Covenants between Man and Wife, Prince and People, but eſpecially in all holy Covenants, therefore they may not depart the one from the other, but God muſt part them: God hath ſet us in the Church by virtue of a Covenant, therefore we muſt have God's leave, and the Church's leave to depart, if we will depart in God's Fear: Unleſs God diſpoſe of it, a Member may not depart, nor the Church diſmiſs him; there is a Tripartite Covenant, God is one Party, the Member another, the Church the third. Now as I have God's leave to come in, ſo I muſt have his leave to go out.

Uſe 7. To ſuch as deſire Fellowſhip with the Church, to exhort them, firſt, to enter into Covenant with the Lord, and then to make a Covenant with the Congregation. If any Man offer himſelf to the Church, and the Church defer his Entertainment, his very looking towards God's Temple is an Ordinance, and God will accordingly bleſs him; the deſire of an Ordinance before God is accepted as well as the Enjoyment. Every Stone was hewen before they came to be laid in Solomon's Temple. The chiefeſt Work, the Work of Regeneration, ſhould be wrought before he enters into the Church: the Converſion of Men is not proper to the Members of the Church, but to Children.

Uſe 8. Comfort to us that are knit together in holy Covenant, therefore ſtand faſt in this Liberty, Gal. 5. 1. It is an unſpeakable Mercy, and for ever to be acknowledged to God's Praiſe; therefore tho they do abandon us, we ſhould have a Care of them that are entred into Covenant with us.

IV. Now the End of this uniting together in Covenant, is, to worſhip the Lord, and to edify one another in all his holy Ordinances. 1 Cor. 5. 4. When you are met together in the Name of the Lord, 1 Cor. 14. 26. all muſt be done to Edification. This is the End of all Church-Meetings: but of this more hereafter.

Object. But then where doth Contribution take place? it is neither the Worſhip of God, nor Edification.

Anſw. It is both God's Worſhip and an Act of Edification; it is not only a Chriſtian Duty, but it tends to edify. Phil. 4. 18. the Succour of our Brethren is an acceptable Sacrifice to God, and that was Edification to Paul; for by this, ſaith he, I am full, and abound; and ſo he was quickned to his Work. Heb. 13. 16. With ſuch Sacrifices God is well pleaſed; and hereby the Bowels of the Saints are refreſhed, which is one part of Edification; Philem. 7. And, ſaith he, we have great Joy and Conſolation, which is alſo Edification; therefore it is not only a carnal Affection that is helped by Contribution, but ſpiritual Edification.

Reaſon. Herein the Church differs from other Aſſemblies that may be Godly Men, and may meet in one Place, and be in Covenant, for ſo may a Common-wealth; but a Church always meets for ſpiritual Works.

Uſe 1. To teach us to do all our outward Works in a ſpiritual manner, to give to our Brethren to refreſh their Bowels, to increaſe their Joy, to quicken them in the Work of the Lord.

Uſe 2. Learn what is the End of all our Meeting, and all our Confederacy, all is to worſhip the Lord, and to edify one another in God's holy Ways. Some think the Aſſembly of God's People to be factious; but ſaith Tertullian, Congreſſus piorum non factio dicendus eſt, ſed curia; let there therefore nothing be done in the Church but that which tendeth to the Honour of God, and the Edification of the Church.

Uſe 3. Comfort to us, that God affords us ſuch Liberties as theſe be, wherein we may meet to worſhip, and edify one another in God's Ways. It is an honourable Aſſembly wherein Chriſt is the Head, and every Member, if he be not an Hypocrite, is a younger Brother or Siſter to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; and they meet not for the Good of the Common-wealth directly, tho that be honourable, yet it is nothing to the Salvation of Souls, and the edifying of one another in God's Fear: how therefore ſhould all Matters be carried? there ſhould nothing appear but the Preſence of Chriſt, the Love of Chriſt, the Power of his Grace, and then they are the moſt honourable Meetings in the World.

Uſe 4. This is alſo Comfort to us, that Chriſt will be our Proviſion, Protection; he is our Head, and he will care for us: If we meet together and worſhip God, and edify one another, will he let us want and ſtarve? do you think Chriſt is ſo ill an Husband? Would you leave your Wives naked, and without Proviſion, if you had it for them? Now Chriſt hath it for us, and he will not leave us without Supply. Phil. 4. 19. when they had ſupplied him, then ſaith he, God ſhall ſupply all your Wants. And now this Church of Philippi was one of the pooreſt Churches of all, it was one of the Churches of Macedonia, that was in deep Poverty, 2 Cor. 8. 2. yet Paul bears thoſe Record, that they only had communicated unto him: Therefore, ſaith he, God ſhall do you good; walk as becometh the Spouſe of Chriſt, and he will care for us; God will not be wanting to pour out Bleſſings upon us, thoſe that enter into Covenant with him, and walk according to the Power of it. Now you ſee what a Church is.

Q. What ſort of Members hath God ſet in his Church?

Anſw. Some of them are Miniſters and Officers of the Church, others of them are called commonly by the general Name of the Members, Brethren and Saints: So that here are two ſorts of Members, and two ſorts of Names; the Name of the firſt, Miniſters and Officers, the other Brethren and Saints: Magiſtrates and Officers are all one, Brethren and Saints are all one. To prove all of them. Firſt, for Miniſters, 1 Cor. 4. 1. 1 Tim. 1. 12. Col. 4. 12. 2 Cor. 3. 6. Rom. 12. 7. by Miniſters he means Elders, and Deacons for Officers; 1 Tim. 3. 1, 10. Rom. 11. 14. Acts 1. 20. Pſal. 109. 8. Theſe two Titles expreſs one part of the Church's Body: the Brethren and Saints are diſtinguiſhed from the Miniſters and Officers. Acts 15. 22, 23. thoſe he calls the Church, ver. 22. he calls them Brethren, ver. 23. all the Members of the Church are uſually ſtiled Brethren, Rom. 16. 23. Phil. 1. 10. Thoſe Chriſtians that had no publick Offices in the Church he ſtileth Saints, Col. 1. 2. Now becauſe God would have us give our Children ſignificant Names, therefore it is likely for good reaſon the Holy Ghoſt gave theſe Names to the Members of the Church; ſome Officers and Miniſters, others Brethren and Saints: In their very Names you may read the Idea and Platform of the Church-Government, their very Name ſhould put them in mind of their Duties, that as readily as you know your Names when you are called, ſo you may hereby ſee the Duties that God calls for in our ſeveral places.

1*ſt.* For Miniſters, this is expreſſed by two words in Scripture, the firſt is ὑπηρέτας, 1 Cor. 4. 1. let Men eſteem of us as Under-rowers; the Miniſters carry an end the Ship of the Church. Now what doth this hold forth unto us? It holds forth thus much, that Miniſters are called to be Rowers and Under-rowers to Chriſt. This Text will lead Miniſters by the Hand to ſee what God requires of them, that they ſhould labour one way and look another way, and yet both without Hypocriſy. A Rower which way ſoever he rows he looks contrary; if he be for to row Weſtward, he looks Eaſtward. And did you ever hear a Miniſter preach Damnation in his Words, and ſee him look as tho he would carry all his Hearers to Hell? It is true, it may be he looks ſo, but now he rows a clean contrary way to that, and you would think he did reſpect the way to everlaſting Happineſs, that he would advance you to them when he delivers you all Delicacies and Comfort; you would think his Intent were to advance you to the higheſt Heavens, and ſo it is, but withal he labours a quite contrary thing; his Courſe is quite contrary to that he looks: When he doth moſt exalt you, then he doth but abaſe you, it is to make you the more humble, James 1. 9, 10. You will ſometimes think a Miniſter ſpeaks with much Authority and Sternneſs, and yet doth he ſerve you in all Meekneſs of Chriſtian Wiſdom, and Humility of Mind. Paul ſaith he did, Acts 20. 18, 19. when yet he charged them with all Authority, and when he beſeeches you to receive Grace; when he moves and perſwades to avoid any Evil, then doth he come with all Authority and rule over you with Power: Theſe are compact together, and that without Sin, and what is ſaid of one Miniſter is ſaid of all, that is, Paſtors and Teachers. This is the firſt thing implied in the word Miniſter, that is, an Under-rower.

2*dly*. The word Miniſter ſignifies a Servant. Joſhua was Moſes's Miniſter, his Servant that waited on him; ſo are all the Apoſtles, Elders and Deacons; the word Deacon ſignifies a Miniſter.

Firſt, They are Miniſters to Chriſt, Rom. 15. 16. Now they are his Servants; 1. Becauſe they deliver nothing, nor ſpeak nothing to the Church but the Commands of Chriſt; they do nothing, nor ſpeak nothing but what they have received from Chriſt, Matth. 28. 20. 2. They work for his End and for his Glory, and make it a Tranſgreſſion of their Miniſtry to do otherwiſe, Phil. 2. 21, 22. Gal. 1. 10. then they are Miniſters to Chriſt indeed.

Secondly, They are Miniſters and Servants of the Church. Rom. 16. 1. Phebe a Servant of the Church. 1 Cor. 4. 5. We preach our ſelves your Servants: and 1 Cor. 3. 22, 23. Wherein are the Miniſters the Churches Servants? Are they not called Rulers? Anſw. Not in the ſame reſpect they are Miniſters. The calling of a Miniſter is a Myſtery, they look one way and work another, and yet diſſemble neither way: But as they are Servants, their Service to the Church ſtands in theſe things. 1. They come at the Churches Call, this is one part of their Service to the Church. Acts 16. 9, 10. Come into Macedonia and help us: whence they gather'd the Lord called them. Hence God hath ordained the Church to call her own Officers, for the Man came in the Churches Name, Come and help us. It is a point of Service to come when a Man is called. 2. They go upon the Churches Errand, that is a point of Service, Matth. 8. 9. it is our Saviour's Rule, He that is ſent, is not greater than he that ſends: ſo then herein lies their Service, they come when the Church calls them, and go when the Church ſends them, John 13. 16. Paul ſaith he was ſent by the Church, and the Church choſe another to go with him. 3. They ſubmit themſelves to the Church's Cenſure, Col. 4. 17. and if they will not hear an Admonition, they may deal further with them. Peter himſelf muſt not judg others, but the Church, and they muſt alſo judg him; this is the Service of Miniſters to the Church.

Thirdly, The third thing wrapt up in the Name of Miniſter is, that he is a Diſpenſer, Gal. 3. 5, 11. Rom. 15. 16. He hath made us able Miniſters of the Goſpel, that is, Diſpenſers of it by the Spirit.

1. Therefore it lieth ſtrongly upon their Conſciences, to know and practiſe that which is a main part of their Calling: Never to think they have done this Miniſtry, till they have diſpenſed the Spirit. The new Teſtament and the Goſpel, 2 Cor. 3. 6. this makes the Work too heavy for Men and Angels, that they muſt miniſter the Spirit, not only the Word, but the Spirit, ſaving Knowledg; this is the main weight of Duty that lies upon a Miniſter, not to diſpenſe Ceremonies, Shadows, Rule and Pomp; but if we run without the Spirit, we run without our Errand, and we have not fulfilled it, except we leave the Spirit behind us in the Hearts of the People. I create the fruit of the Lips, Peace, Peace: Iſa. 57. 19. ſpeaking of the Miniſters of the New Teſtament: This is therefore their principal Work to be diſpenſing a Spirit of Peace, a Spirit of Power, a Spirit of Love, a Spirit of Meekneſs, and of Zeal, and of Humility, and whatſoever ſavours of Life: thus they are called to the Work, therefore they are called Stewards, 1 Cor. 4. 12.

2. This therefore teacheth us Miniſters to be faithful, for ſo muſt Diſpenſers be, they muſt tell all their Errand, and not only fill them with Words, but with the Characters of the Spirit alſo, if it be poſſible. 2 Cor. 2. 16. Who therefore is ſufficient for theſe things? to be a Savour of Life? therefore it is not all the Learning in the World that will make a Man ſufficient to diſpenſe a Spirit of Life and Darkneſs: Who is ſufficient? Are not you Paul? No, not Paul; for, for him to give the Holy Ghoſt is far from him, but he keeps his Heart in Frame, and is faithful, that Chriſt may breathe in his Miniſtry.

3. This will carry ſome Reſpect back again from the People to the Miniſter, in regard he is a Diſpenſer to them, 1 Cor. 9. 11. Now for this word Officer, it ſignifies two things, and that God ſtiles them. 1. It ſignifies a Charge, Acts 1. 20. Pſal. 109. 8. the word in the Original is properly Charge, and ſo it is tranſlated, Iſa. 60. 17. Neceſſity is laid upon me to preach: and 1 Cor. 9. 16. thou ſhalt give Joſhua a Charge, Numb. 27. 23. it implies Authority, Pſal. 109. 8. that word implies Authority, therefore the Officers are called Rulers, 1 Tim. 5. 17. God hath left Governours in his Church, 1 Cor. 12. 28. Obey them that have the Rule over you, Heb. 13. 17. But if they be Servants, how then can they be Rulers? this is the Myſtery. The Rulers of the Church are the Churches Servants, and the Servants of the Church are the Churches Rulers. Anſw. There are three things in which lies the Authority of their Office. 1. In diſpenſing of the Myſteries of the Kingdom of God, Tit. 2. 15. either in Exhortation, Doctrine or Admonition, they do it with all Authority. 1 Tim. 6. 17. Charge them that are rich, &c. 2. Tho they come not on to the Miniſtry till they are called, yet being called, they have Authority to call Church-Aſſemblies, and to diſmiſs them, Acts 6. 2. the Apoſtles called the Church together. Joel 1. 13, 14. Call a ſolemn Aſſembly. They moderate Matters in the Aſſembly, give leave to others to ſpeak, Acts 13. 9. and they diſmiſs the Aſſembly, Numb. 6. 23, 24, 25, 26, 27. 3. Theſe are the Mouth and Hands of the Church by which they execute the Power of the Cenſures; and therefore he ſaith he hath ſomewhat againſt the Angel of the Church of Epheſus, and againſt the Angel of Pergamus and Thyatira, Rev. 2. 4, 14, 20. By the Angel is meant the Presbytery, and they are taxed for lack of good Diſcipline in the Church, becauſe the Church having called Rulers, it lies upon them if there be any abuſe in it, for they have the Power to act and moderate all in it, and the Church only conſents to and approves what they do. If you ask then, What is the Power of the Church? It is this, 1ſt. She calls her own Officers and Members: And, 2dly. She ſends forth both for her Service; and if any fail ſhe may call them to account, and cenſure their Failings by the Hand of her Mouth, which are her Miniſters. The Miniſters have another Power to call the Church together, to charge her there with all Authority, to moderate things in it, and to diſmiſs it, and to execute her Cenſures, according to God's Word. The Deacons alſo being Officers, have the Charge of the Churches Treaſure, and they have Power and Authority to diſpenſe it according to the Rule of Chriſt; and except they go beſides the Rule, the Church breaks not in upon their Office.

Now for the word Brethren it argues three things. 1. That they are ſubject to Officers; which is not Service but Brotherhood, Rom. 14. 23. Quartus a Brother. 2. It is a Rule over Brethren, it implies a continuance in Brotherly Love, Heb. 13. 1. Break them, and you break the Covenant. 3. A continuance of Brotherly Communion and Fellowſhip, that it be not broken; except Chriſt break it, they may not break it, Zech. 11. 14.

That word Saints implies two things; 1. A Separation from all unclean and common Uſe: as Bread and Wine when they are ſet apart from common Uſe, are ſaid to be holy; ſo Men when they are ſet apart from Luſts and Paſſions, are then ſanctified. 2. A Devotion or Dedication of them to God's Service; as a Sabbath is ſanctified when it is dedicated to God.

Then let the mentioning of theſe Names keep this whole Work of Diſcipline freſh in your Hearts and Thoughts; as often as you are called Officers, Miniſters, Brethren and Saints, then read your Duty, and they will be a Commentary, whereby to know what God requires of you, your Duty to himſelf, to his Church, and one to another.

Q. What ſorts of Miniſters or Officers hath God ſet in his Church?

Anſw. They are ſome of them extraordinary, as Apoſtles, Prophets and Evangeliſts; ſome ordinary, as Biſhops and Deacons.

Firſt, For the extraordinary Officers, they are Apoſtles, Prophets, Evangeliſts: And theſe God ſet in his Church, Eph. 4. 11. 1 Cor. 11. 28. To open theſe. And,

1. For Apoſtles, they are firſt ſet in the Church, 1 Cor. 11. 28. An Apoſtle ſignifies as much as an Angel or Meſſenger, four Benefits or Privileges accompanying their Calling. 1. They were Meſſengers ſent immediately by Jeſus Chriſt; they had their Calling by lively Voice from him, John 20. 21. So alſo ſaith Paul of himſelf, that he was not of Man, nor by Man, but by Jeſus Chriſt. 2. They had an immediate Charge. Matth. 28. 19. Go, teach all Mations: Mark 16. 15, 16. 1 Cor. 11. 28. the Care of all the Churches lay upon him; yet where God bleſſed his Miniſtry, there he ſtayed longer, and departed from them that would not receive his Doctrine. Gal. 2. 7, 8. Peter was more mighty among the Jews, and Paul among the Gentiles: tho their Power were illimited, in regard of the Charge, yet there was a Limitation in reſpect of Effects and ſpiritual Directions by them. Paul would have gone to Bythinia, but the Spirit ſuffered him not. 3. They were guided by infallible Aſſiſtance of the Spirit: The Spirit led them into all Truth, Gal. 1. 11, 12. Paul doubts not to ſay that he had laid the Foundation; therefore good reaſon it was that they ſhould be kept from Errors, 1 Cor. 3. 10. Peter erred indeed, but his Error was not in Doctrine, but only in Matters of Fact. 4. They were indued with the Power of working Miracles, to confirm their Doctrine, Mark 16. 20. Theſe things made their Places extraordinary; other Miniſters of the Church have not the ſame Call, the ſame Charge, the ſame Aſſiſtance, nor the like Power. When Judas the Apoſtle hang'd himſelf they had a Church-meeting to elect another Apoſtle into his Office, Acts 1. 15, 16. But when Herod had ſlain James the Apoſtle, Acts 12. 2. you read not of any other Meeting to conſtitute another; when they ſlept, their Calling ſlept with them, and were not to continue in Succeſſion; for no Man was ſubſtituted in the room of James, as there was in the room of Judas, but inſtead thereof the Apoſtles conſtituted Elders in every Church, Acts 14. 23. As in the Old Teſtament there were twelve Patriarchs, and of Joſeph that was cut off from his Brethren there came two Tribes, and ſo they were thirteen in all: So when Judas fell from his Office, God ordained another in his room. And, laſtly, was Paul, as one born out of due time, ſent by Chriſt himſelf, for to make up the Number of the thirteen Patriarchs of the New Teſtament: This was the Work of the Apoſtles, even to plant Churches; the Church could not call them, for they were to bring in the Gentiles which were no Churches.

2. A ſecond ſort of Officers is Prophets, Eph. 4. 11. 1 Cor. 12. 28. this is the ſecond Office. There were three ſorts of Prophets in the New Teſtament: 1. Thoſe that were endued with an extraordinary Gift of foretelling things to come, needful to prevent the Churches Dangers, and give Direction for the Churches Safety; ſuch an one was Agabus, Acts 11. 28, 29. if that Danger had not been foretold, the Churches would not have been ready for to ſend Relief to the Saints in Judea, and ſo many poor Saints might have periſhed, but by that Prophecy it was prevented. Acts 21. 9, 10, 11. Agabus propheſied what ſhould betide Paul at Jeruſalem: this was of excellent uſe in thoſe times, that ſo the Churches might by their Prayers prevent ſuch like Calamities; or elſe if Paul could not prevent Bonds or Death, then he might be prepared for ſuch deſperate Diſcouragements, as he ſaith himſelf, I am ready to die: theſe Gifts ordinarily now are ceaſed; all is written in the Scriptures, whereof we ſtand in need for Help and Direction. 2. Prophets are taken for the preaching Elders of the Church: So it is taken, Rom. 12. 6, 7. The ordinary Preachers of the Goſpel are Paſtors and Teachers, and they are called Prophets. 3. Sometimes Prophets are taken to mean thoſe who have the Gift of Teaching and Prophecy, which may be found in any Member of the Church; and this is not an Office, 1 Cor. 14. 31. theſe are not ceaſed in the Church, but ſtill continue in the ſame.

For the Evangeliſts, Eph. 4. 11. who they were is much ſought after; but they were ſuch as had not their Call immediately from Chriſt, yet they had an immediate Call from the Apoſtles, who were extraordinary Men, and had extraordinary Gifts: They had their Calling from the Apoſtles, as the Apoſtles had theirs from Chriſt. 2 Tim. 4. 5. Do the Work of an Evangeliſt: and it is ſaid of him that Paul would have him go forth with him, Acts 16. 13. Another Evangeliſt was Mark, whom Paul would not accept of to go with him, Acts 15. 37, 38. and theſe were called to perfect the Work of the Apoſtles, that which the Apoſtles had begun. When they had begun to plant Churches, they left the finiſhing and perfecting of them to the Evangeliſts. Theſe were extraordinary in their Call, 1. That they were immediately called by the Apoſtles, tho the Church ſometimes joined with them, as in ordaining Timothy, 1 Tim. 4. 14. 2. They were not limited to any one Charge, but had many, and executed Authority in divers places, and herein they differed from Paſtors and Teachers: For the Paſtors are to look to the Flock, over which the Holy Ghoſt hath made them Overſeers; but Evangeliſts ſtayed no longer in a place than they were intreated, which Paſtors needed not to be. 1 Tim. 1. 3. He would not have beſought Timothy to have tarried, if he might not have gone away when he pleaſed. Tit. 1. 5. He left him for to ordain Elders in every City, therefore they were not limited to one Charge, or bound to ſtay in any one place. 2 Tim. 4. 11, 12. thus he leaves ſome in one place, and ſome in another, and diſpoſeth of them, for they were to perfect the Work of the Apoſtles, and not limited to any Charge. 3. Some of the Evangeliſts wrote the Goſpel, as Mark and Luke, but this was peculiar to ſome of them; the reſt of the Evangeliſts that wrote the Goſpel, were Apoſtles alſo. But ſince the Apoſtles and Evangeliſts went to Heaven, you never heard the Holy Ghoſt took care to ſubſtitute any Evangeliſts in their room; as they died, ſo their Places died with them. Further, you read that Philip, one of the Deacons, Acts 6. 5. was an Evangeliſt, Acts 21. 8. and then the Holy Ghoſt ſets him apart too, for he went down to Samaria and preached there, and the People gave heed unto his Miniſtry; Acts 8. 5, 6. alſo he baptized the Eunuch, which as a Deacon, he would not have done, but as an Evangeliſt called to preach the Goſpel: ſome therefore of the Evangeliſts were immediately called by the Holy Ghoſt, ſome immediately by the Apoſtles, ſome by the Apoſtles with the Church, 1 Tim. 4. 14. This Office is ceaſed, as the callings of the Apoſtles and Prophets are; God hath of latter days given to ſome extraordinary Gifts for the ſettling of Churches, as Luther, Calvin, &c. having great Wiſdom and Knowledg, but they did it not ſo much by virtue of Office as by Gifts; theſe are the extraordinary, Apoſtles, Prophets, Evangeliſts.

Two ſorts of Officers in the Church are ordinary, and they are Biſhops and Deacons, Phil. 1. 1. That theſe are ordinary, and that theſe are all, may appear by the Direction of the Apoſtle to Timothy, how to carry himſelf in the Church of God in conſtituting of Officers: He nameth theſe two, 1 Tim. 3. 1, 8. Biſhops and Deacons: Whom doth he name by the Biſhops? you may ſee, Acts 20. 17, with 28. the Flock over which God hath made you ἐπισκόπους, Overſeers; thoſe he calleth Elders, ver. 17. he calleth Biſhops, ver. 28. Tit. 1. 5. 7. and the ſame he calleth Elders, ver. 5. are called Biſhops, ver. 7. For Deacons, ſee Acts 6. 2, 3, 4. the Deacons for the Church at Jeruſalem; and Paul giveth Directions to Timothy about them, and it is a perpetual Charge to the Church. Compare 1 Tim. 3. 14, 15. with 1 Tim. 6. 13, 14. Biſhops and Deacons muſt be kept to the coming of Chriſt in the Church, not ſo Apoſtles, Prophets, Evangeliſts.

Queſt. What manner of Perſons hath God appointed to be called to the Office of Biſhops, or (which is all one) Elders in the Church?

Anſw. A Biſhop, or Elder in the Church, muſt be in himſelf blameleſs for Holineſs and Righteouſneſs, and for Freedom from Paſſions and Luſt, alſo a vigilant Man, and of good Behaviour: Moreover in his Family, a Man of Government, and good Hoſpitality; in his Name, of good Report, yea even of thoſe that are without: and in Profeſſion he may not be a young Plant, but holding faſt the Word of Truth, apt to teach it, and able to maintain it, 1 Tim. 3. 2—7, 11. Tit. 1. 6, to 9. To open all theſe Particulars from thoſe Texts. An Elder is all one with a Biſhop, and a Biſhop with an Elder. Tit. 1. 5, 7. I left thee to ordain Elders, if any be blameleſs: For a Biſhop muſt, &c. Acts 20. 17, 28. Therefore a Biſhop in the firſt place muſt be blameleſs, 1 Tim. 3. 2. Tit. 1. 6. For what is it to be blameleſs? He muſt be holy, and Tit. 1. 8. he muſt be known to be holy in his Service of God, juſt in his Dealings with Men, and not juſtly taxed for any Profaneneſs or Unrighteouſneſs: He muſt give God his own, Man his own, and not be blamed for the leaſt Offence; ſo alſo he muſt be blameleſs from Paſſion and Luſt: he muſt not be ſelf-willed, Tit. 1. 7. he muſt not be ſelf-conceited, ſelf-pleaſing, that pleaſeth himſelf in his Fancy, and will not be drawn from it; he muſt not be ſoon angry, he muſt not be a Striker, he muſt not be a Brawler, 1 Tim. 3. 3. He muſt be free from readineſs to be angry in his Speeches, nor muſt he be ready to ſtrike, a Thought and a Word, a Word and a Blow; thus muſt he not be, but blameleſs from them: He may not luſt after Wine, for that is a Luſt of Intemperance; nor greedy of filthy Lucre, for that is a Luſt of Covetouſneſs, 1 Tim. 3. 3. Tit. 1. 7, 8. He muſt be a ſober Man, and of temperate Behaviour. All thoſe vain worthleſs things are reckoned under theſe Heads, 1 John 2. 6, 7. The Luſt of the Fleſh, the Luſt of the Eyes, and the Pride of Life. Now when he is forbidden to be ſelf-willed, to be angry, to be a Brawler, then he is no proud Perſon; take away

Self-will, and down falleth Pride; through Pride Men make Contention, Prov. 13.10. He may not be blamed for Covetouſneſs, the Luſt of the Eye, nor the Luſt of the Fleſh, Intemperance and Incontinency: A Biſhop muſt alſo be a vigilant Man, and of good Behaviour, 1 Tim. 3. 2. vigilant, that is, watchful; a double Watchfulneſs is required of him: 1. In reſpect of his own Eſtate, that he may not put upon the Church unneceſſary Burdens; he muſt be prudent, not unthrifty. 2. In a diligent obſervance of the State of the Flock committed to him, that he may be able to apply a fit Word to them in ſeaſon: Alſo he muſt be of good Behaviour, comely, he muſt not be ſlovenly nor rude, nor neglective to others; ſuch a Man will bring his Calling into Contempt, eſpecially amongſt Carnal Men, this would make his People neglect his Counſel; therefore he muſt not be rude, whether it be through ill Nature or ill Nurture; they ſhould be comely-carriaged Men, that they expoſe not their Callings to Contempt through Rudeneſs, or Slovenlineſs, but that they may be fit for any Company. God taketh no pleaſure in Compliments; for God would not have a Man of a Mimick Behaviour, full of Geſticulations and Cringes, for they are not fit for Men of Gravity, as Elders muſt be; they muſt not be like Players and Courtiers, but of grave and comely Behaviour; this he muſt be in himſelf. Now in his Family he muſt be, firſt, a Man of good Government, he muſt have his Children and Servants in good Order, they muſt not be wild and unruly, not Pilferers nor riotous, nor ſturdy, nor prodigal, Tit. 1. 7. but faithful, but frugal, but teachable, and ingenuous; he muſt be the Husband of one Wife, he muſt not have two as the Jews had, nor have a ſecond when he had put away the firſt for any other Cauſe than Adultery; he muſt have but one, and her lawfully married. 1 Tim. 3.5. If a Man cannot rule his own Houſe, his own Servants, his own Children, how ſhall he rule other Mens Servants and Children, that are Members of the Church? He muſt alſo be of good Hoſpitality, 1 Tim. 3. 2. Tit. 1. 8. he muſt be a Lover of Hoſpitality, and given to it, the word in the Original ſignifies both, that a Man loveth he is given to; he taketh it for his Comfort to have Chriſtian Friends in his Houſe with him, it is his Joy, he doth not harbour his Brethren with grudging. 1 Pet. 4. 9. he muſt do it freely, frequently, according to the meaſure of his Eſtate God hath given him, Heb. 13. 1, 2. Now for his good Name, he muſt be a Man of good Report even of thoſe that are without, 1 Tim. 3. 7. that they that would ſlander him, and Religion by him, may not be able, leſt he fall into Reproach, which is a Diſhonour to his Name, and to the Church of God, and he falleth into the Snare of the Devil; while he may ſeek to clear himſelf, he may fall into Paſſion, and Brawling, and Contention; or elſe may let a Report lie upon him, and not ſeek to vindicate his Name, and ſo the Devil will have him on either ſide. He muſt have a good Report even of thoſe that are without, becauſe this will firſt cut off occaſion of Slander from Pagans, and alſo give them the better Opportunity and greater Encouragement to come into the Church; and for that end to confer with the Elders about it, for otherwiſe it would be a Stumbling-block unto them: and if they ſhould be well reported of by thoſe that are without, how much more by thoſe that are within? Finally, he may not be a new Plant, a Novice, one that is new come on to Grace, or newly in the Church, for ſuch an one is but raw, and unſettled, and of no great Experience: He muſt be a grave Chriſtian, and of ſome ſtanding and Conſtancy. Tit. 1. 9. he muſt hold faſt the faithful Word of God, which a young Plant cannot do; he muſt be a conſtant Chriſtian and Profeſſor, that muſt hold faſt the Doctrine of Truth and Grace, againſt his Adverſaries Satan and his Inſtruments; yea, he muſt be able to maintain that he ſaith, and to perſwade others to it: Apt to teach; for tho all Elders teach not, yet they muſt be apt for it, apt to admoniſh, and apt to teach, as they have occaſion: they muſt be able to give good reaſon of what they hold, and able to juſtify it againſt Gainſayers. A good Cauſe giveth a great Strength to him that believeth what he ſaith, and practiſeth what he believeth, ſuch a Man will be able to give a Reaſon and Account of his Faith and Government, which a Gain-ſayer cannot reſiſt: He muſt not be a young Plant, for he is not a hold-faſt; the reaſon of this is given, 1 Tim. 3. 6. Leſt being lifted up with Pride, he fall into the Condemnation of the Devil. This holds forth thus much; That a young Plant being called to the Miniſtry may be puffed up with the Pride of his Place, and Reſpect done unto him from others, and ſo fall into the Condemnation of the Devil, which was Pride upon the Excellency of his Miniſtry, that was the Devil's Fall, and the Sin whereby he fell out of Heaven and became a Devil: God made him an Angel of Light, and when God had made his Angels miniſtring

Spirits about his Throne, they were proud of it, and thought it reflected ſome Glory not upon God, but upon themſelves, and therefore God caſt them out, and they are reſerved in Chains of Darkneſs unto the Judgment of the great Day. The Devil was not capable of the Luſt of the Fleſh, nor the Luſt of the Eye, therefore his Sin was Pride, or the Fruits of it. Some have thought he offered to ſet his Throne equal with his Maker, Iſa. 14.12, 13, 14. but it is not ſpoken of him, but of the King of Babylon: and the Text ſaith, 1 Tim. 3.6. his Pride was in his Miniſtry; for Pride may ſhew it ſelf as in Envy of Superiours, ſo in Contempt of Inferiours, or Self-ſufficiency and Fulneſs in a Man's ſelf; for their envying of God we read not any footſteps of it in Scripture, but that they prided themſelves in their Miniſtry. Becauſe they ſaw Adam and Eve not ſo glorious Creatures as themſelves, but that they were more remote from God, therefore they prided themſelves in their Miniſtry above Adam, and were full of themſelves, and therefore would not ſerve and attend upon Adam, and this might be their Ruine: Therefore a Man may not be a Novice, leſt he fall into the Sin of the Devil, who prided himſelf in his Miniſtry about the Throne, and deſpiſed Adam, to pride himſelf in his Miniſtry.

Uſe 1. This ſerves to teach the Church of God, when you come to chooſe your Church-Officers, whom they are to chuſe into the Office of a Biſhop or Elder, even Men thus qualified, of ſuch Government in their Families, of ſuch a Growth as hath been deſcribed; for if you walk beſides the Rule, you walk beſides Peace.

Uſe 2. It teacheth Officers their Duty, and what God calleth them to, even to be blameleſs, &c. and this is your Copy, this is that you are ſo to expreſs, that you may not fail in any.

Uſe 3. To teach us what cauſe of due Thankfulneſs to God we have, when God giveth us ſuch as are in any meaſure conformable to this Rule laid down unto us.

Uſe 4. To teach the Children and Servants of Church-Elders to take heed of Riot, of Anger, of Impatience, Diſobedience, for thereby you diſable them from ruling the Church. He that cannot keep in order his own Family, how then ſhall he rule the Church of God?

Uſe 5. To teach thoſe whom God calleth to any publick Office, either in the Church or Common-wealth, to look to have their Hearts not puffed up with their Places; but be you humble in the Miniſtry God calleth you to, not to be exalted above your Brethren. A Man is not to be ſelf full, but careful to receive Supply from Chriſt, and ſo to go in and out amongſt your People, that you may be exemplary Patterns to them of Blameleſneſs, of freedom from Paſſions and Luſt, of good Behaviour, of good Government, that ſo God's Work may proſper in your Hands, and you may give God a comfortable Account at the day of your Appearance.

Queſt. What ſort of Biſhops hath God ſet in his Church?

Anſw. Two; ſome Paſtors and Teachers, ſome ruling Elders, under two Heads; ſome labour in Word and Doctrine, and of thoſe ſome are Paſtors, ſome Teachers, others rule only, and labour not in Word and Doctrine.

Queſt. What is the Work and Office of the Paſtors and Teachers?

Anſw. The Work of the Paſtors is to attend to Exhortation, and therein to diſpenſe a word of Wiſdom; but the Teacher's Office is to attend unto Doctrine, and therein to diſpenſe a word of Knowledg: Eph. 4. 11. God hath given ſome Paſtors, ſome Teachers. Now there be two Places which give clear Light to the difference of their Work and Office: The firſt place is Rom. 12. 7, 8. there is a Teacher which is to attend unto Teaching, and an Exhorter which is to wait upon Exhortation. If the Teacher be to attend unto Teaching, and there is beſides an Exhorter, then that is left for the Paſtor's Office and Work to exhort; for there are no other Officers in the Church now that labour in the Word and Doctrine but Paſtors and Teachers: The Apoſtle maketh them diſtinct Officers, and they have their ſeveral Works to attend unto, the Teacher is not to attend unto Exhortation, nor the Paſtor unto Doctrine. The ſecond place is 1 Cor. 12. 8. the Apoſtle ſpeaking of the ſeveral Gifts that God hath given to the Members of the Church; To one, ſaith he, is given by the Spirit, the word of Wiſdom, to another the word of Knowledg, by the ſame Spirit; and theſe he maketh to be given to diſtinct and different Perſons: As the Gifts are different, ſo the Perſons are different. Now to which is the word of Knowledg given? it's the proper

Object of the Teacher: So he is to teach Knowledg to the People, and then the Paſtor is with Wiſdom to diſpenſe a Word of Exhortation. Conſider what are the Objects of Knowledg and Wiſdom; the Object of Knowledg is Truth, and the difference between Truth and Falſhood, and contains in it all things that are to be known and believed by Chriſtian Men, tho they are not to be practiſed, as the Knowledg of God, the State of Innocency, Man's Fall, of the State of Glory, yea of Man's Sins, which are not to be practiſed. The Object of Wiſdom is Godlineſs, for Wiſdom ever directeth to a good end, and the means to attain it: Matters of Wiſdom muſt not only be known, but we muſt be ſtirred up and exhorted to the ſame; ſo that when he ſaith, To one is given a Word of Wiſdom; that is, to diſcern what is beſt for the People of God to do, and to ſtir them up accordingly to it by wiſe Motives, and Inducements, and Helps, as may make a Chriſtian wiſe unto Salvation; and for the Matters of Truth, and Faith, and Knowledg, they belong to the Teacher to diſpenſe unto God's Children and People: but there are four things which are both for Knowledg and Practice, as what is the Nature of Repentance and Faith, Matters to be known and practiſed alſo; and ſo the Nature of Obedience, what is a Vertue and what a Vice; and where both theſe concur together, there both is the Teacher to deal in Teaching, and the Paſtor to take them up in Application. Now the Reaſon why God is pleaſed thus to diſpenſe himſelf is, Firſt, Taken from the neceſſity of ſupplying the Defects of God's People: 1. Ignorance and Error lieth upon them; ſo God complains, My People periſh for want of Knowledg. Now the Teacher is to look that they be taught the Knowledg of the Lord. 2. Folly and Slowneſs of Heart. Folly to ſee what is beſt to be done, and when we know it, we are ſlow to put it into practice, Luke 24 25. Now here comes in the Paſtor's Work, he teacheth them what is beſt to be done, and ſtirs them up to it; he cometh to heal their Folly and Slowneſs of Heart, and that he doth by a wiſe and quick Exhortation. Secondly, From the Defect of Officers themſelves; for a Man may be abundant and rich in Knowledg, and yet cold in exhorting; and a Man may be quick and lively in Exhortation, and yet ſlow in Knowledg: and there is reaſon in Nature for it, for they require a ſeveral Temper of Body; a Man of Knowledg muſt be of a cold Temper, and an Exhorter of an hot Spirit; and therefore God for the good of his Church hath provided both. There may be little Light where there is much Heat, and much Light were there is little Heat. So God's Servants are ſome of them more full of Light, and ſome of Heat, and the Church hath need of both: And thus the Teacher may have need of the Paſtor, and the Paſtor of the Teacher, and ſo like two Hands they walk and help one another: 1 *Tim.*4.13. Give attendance to Exhortation, and to Doctrine: he chargeth them with both, all extraordinary Officers of the Church, as Apoſtles, Prophets and Evangeliſts, and a Timothy, that were to give Attendance to both; but he never ſaith ſo to any ordinary Officer: An Evangeliſt is as much worth as both Paſtor and Teacher; and therefore they that have Spirits for both come nigh an extraordinary Officer, an Evangeliſt; as God raiſed up ſome in the Reformation of his Church and People: But the Apoſtle ſaith, Rom. 12. 7. Let the Teacher wait on Teaching, &c. but the word wait is not in the Original.

Queſt. What is this the Apoſtle would have them do, when he would have them attend and wait?

Anſw. He would have this to be all their Work, there they ſet up, there reſt, they are to dwell upon them, that if you would have them, there you muſt have them; that tho they may have to deal in ſundry occaſions, yet all the Work of a Teacher is about Teaching, and of a Paſtor about Exhortation. Now this word applying or attending, implies four things.

1. They muſt attend to the raiſing of their Doctrine and Exhortation, and that will require their Attendance to reading: for a Man to raiſe a Doctrine and not underſtand his Text, he buildeth without a Foundation; therefore he muſt read the Scripture and learn the Senſe of it, and muſt withal attend to the State of the People which he is to teach and exhort. Prov. 27. 23. he would have them know the State of their Flocks, how much more ſhould a Paſtor and Teacher the State of their People? Ezek. 3. 17, 18, 19. therefore it is neceſſary for them to watch over them: Heb. 13. 17. that they may apply a Word to them according to their Eſtates. This is the firſt thing; if a Man either miſtake the State of his Text, or of his Flock, he will ſpeak very impertinently to them; they muſt not come off with a ſudden Doctrine or Exhortation; for that which is ſeaſonable at one time, may be unſeaſonable at another.

2. They muſt attend unto applying of their Doctrine for Refutation of Errors, for Reproof of any Corruption of Manners: The Teacher to the one of them, the Paſtor to the other, for there is a difference between theſe two; for, ſaith the Apoſtle, 2 Tim. 3 16. the Word is profitable for Reproof, for Correction, ἐλέγχος, that is, Reproof of Errors ἐπανόρθωσις, it is Reformation of Manners, and ſo they urge both; the Teacher preſſeth his Doctrine from manifold Scriptures, and Reaſons from Scripture, and the Paſtor preſſeth his Exhortation from ſundry Matters, and diſpenſeth ſundry Means by which the Duties he perſwadeth them to may be performed: As alſo it is the Duty of both of them (in ſpecial manner of the Paſtor) to comfort when either Doctrine is believed, or Duty performed.

3. They muſt attend to the ratifying and ſealing of the Doctrine they teach, partly by diſpenſing the Seals of the Covenant, in which are wrapped up the Counſel of God. Matth. 28. 19. they muſt baptize and teach; and therefore they that attend unto Doctrine, muſt attend unto the Sacraments, to ſeal unto the People the Doctrine they teach, partly by Diſpenſation of the Church-Cenſures, together with the Church; whatſoever is an Act of Rule they muſt have a hand in it, tho others join with them. 1 Tim. 1. 20. Whom I have delivered unto Satan: he had a principal ſtroke in it, to make the Church to do it, and he did it, that they might learn not to blaſpheme; and ſo he ratified his Doctrine; and ſo for the inceſtuous Corinthian doth wind about him, and ſend to the Church to excommunicate him, when they were met together with his Spirit, and as tho he was preſent with them, 1 Cor. 5. 3, 4. Both Paſtors and Teachers have a Power to join in the Church-Cenſures.

4. They muſt attend to the perfecting of the Work they have in hand; for what is their Exhortation, and Doctrine, and Sacraments, and Cenſures, unleſs God's Bleſſing be upon them? therefore they muſt attend unto that which will perfect their Work, and that is Prayer, Acts 6. 4. They muſt attend to the Miniſtry of the Word and to Prayer, that is their main Work; Phil. 1. 3. he never prayed, but he prayed for that Church, Col. 1. 3. 1 Theſſ. 1. 2, 3. 1 Sam. 12. 23. Amongſt theſe Prayers you muſt put in your Bleſſings, Numb. 6. 23, 24, 25. this perfects the Work, for Prayer opens the Treaſures of Heaven for a Bleſſing: They alſo perfect their Work by their exemplary Converſation, 1 Tim. 4. 12. Attendance to their own Rule perfects their Work they have in hand: Nay, morever Paſtors and Teachers muſt be willing to lay down their Lives for the Confirmation of the Doctrine and Exhortations they have given to their People, Philip. 2. 17. if God call they muſt be willing to ſeal it with their Blood; this perfects their Work.

Uſe 1. It is an Uſe of Refutation of a double Error: ſome think that the Offices of Paſtor and Teacher are all one; others think that the Paſtors and Teachers may be diſtinct Offices, yet not both of them needful in every Congregation: both of theſe are Errors, from that formerly delivered; for if God hath given ſome Paſtors, and ſome Teachers, and hath commanded the Teacher to attend unto Teaching, and the Exhorter unto Exhortation, then they are different Offices commited to ſeveral Perſons; they muſt attend to their ſeveral Works, the Paſtor to Exhortation, the Teacher to Doctrine: I may have a Gift for ſundry Matters, but I am not bound to attend to any but that which is the principal Work of my Calling: Some Man hath a Gift of Liberty, is he therefore bound to attend to that only? But when a Man is bound to attend to his Teaching, then that is a thing that will take up his whole Work, and is his peculiar Office, and ſo for the Exhorter. But what need both theſe in every Congregation? Doth not the Apoſtle ſay God hath ſet them in his Church? he means every particular Church. It is a maimed Body that wanteth an Eye, or ſome other Member; ſo is a Church unleſs it hath all the Officers, it may be a Church, but not a compleat Church: Hath not every Church need of Light and Heat, and need to be taught and exhorted? The Paſtor and Teacher hath need both to be in the Church.

Uſe 2. To teach the Officers of the Church, both Paſtors and Teachers, what is required of them in their ſeveral places, to teach, and exhort, and comfort the People of God.

Uſe 3. To teach the People of God, 1. Not to expect the like meaſure of Gifts from all your Officers; if God hath given different Gifts, you ſhould not then look that a Paſtor ſhould be ſo ready and ſtrong in Doctrine, nor from Teachers to be quick in Exhortations. 2. To teach us to be ſenſible of our own Defects: to what purpoſe ſhould God give us different Officers, if we ſtood not in need of them? What need Teachers, if we were not dark in our Underſtandings? If we were not ſlow to believe, what need we Exhorters to quicken, to exhort, and comfort thoſe that do well? therefore when you ſee your Officers, you may conſider your own Defects in them. 3. To conſider the marvellous Bounty of God to us, that hath ſent Officers according to all our Neceſſities. 4. To teach you what uſe to make of your Paſtors and Teachers, whom you are to chooſe to thoſe Places and Offices; repair to them for the Word of Truth and Goodneſs according to God, that they may direct and exhort you in the ways of his Grace.

Queſt. What is the Office and Work of the Ruling Elders?

Anſw. Seeing the Kingdom of God is not of this World, but Heavenly and Spiritual, and the Government of his Kingdom is not Lordly, but Stewardly and Miniſterial, and to labour in the Miniſtry of Exhortation and Doctrine is the proper Work of the Paſtors and Teachers, it remaineth therefore to be the Office and Work of the Ruling Elders to aſſiſt the Paſtors and Teachers, in diligent Attendance to all other Aids of Rule beſides Exhortation and Doctrine, as becometh good Stewards of the Houſhold of God. As, 1. To open and ſhut the Doors of God's Houſe, by Admiſſion of Members, by Ordination of Officers, by Excommunication of notorious and obſtinate Offenders. 2. To ſee none live in the Church inordinately without a Calling, or idle in their Calling. 3. To prevent and heal Offences whether in Life or Doctrine, that might corrupt their own Church, or other Churches alſo, if their Counſel be required. 4. To prepare Matters for the Churches Conſideration, and to moderate the Carriage of all Matters in the Church-Aſſemblies, as to propound Matters to the Church, and to order the ſeaſons of Speech and Silence in the Church. 5. Finally, to feed the Flock of God by a word of Admonition; and, as ſhe ſhall be called, to viſit and pray for their ſick Brethren.

The ground of all this is laid down in Rom. 12. 8. where the Apoſtle, beſides him that exhorteth and teacheth, maketh mention of another Officer that ruleth with Diligence, and he is diſtinct from the Paſtors and Teachers, and that is the Sum of his Work, to rule with Diligence. Now becauſe this is a general word, to rule and hear, it is not limited, and to bring in an illimited Rule into the Church might overthrow the Eſtate of the Church; it is therefore requiſite to enquire what manner of Rule this is. For opening of which you herein anſwer to the Queſtion, that the Kingdom of Chriſt is not of this World, but Heavenly and Spiritual: from whence it will follow, that the Rule commended to a Ruling Elder is not a Worldly Rule, not with State and Pomp, but a Rule that doth inflict Bodily Puniſhment; this is the Rule of Worldly Kingdoms. Now as Chriſt's Kingdom is not of this World, ſo is neither the Rule of his Kingdom, we ſay it is ſpiritual: Is it then in ſuch things as theſe Men may diſpenſe at their Pleaſure? Not ſo, for as his Kingdom is ſpiritual, ſo is his Government of his Kingdom, not Lordly, but Stewardly, Luke 12. 42. It is a Stewardly Office: and there the Officers in the Church are not ſaid to carry the Sword as Magiſtrates, Rom. 13. 4. But to thee will I give the Keys of the Kingdom, Matth. 16. 19. The Power of the Sword is Princely and Lordly, but the Power of the Keys is only Stewardly and Miniſterial; for ſo it was ſaid, the Keys of the Houſe of David were committed to Eliakim, Iſa. 22. 22. and he was over the Houſe, ver. 15. which Phraſe of being over the Houſe is tranſlated properly, Gen. 43. 19. Steward of the Houſe. So we ſee ground laid for clearing of the Office of the Ruling Elder: it is neither after a worldly manner, neither doth he rule with any illimited Power, but he is to rule as becometh a Steward in the Houſe, not by the Sword, nor by his own Light and Direction, but by the Direction given him by the Maſter of the Houſe, Matth. 28. 19, 20. they are to teach whatſoever Chriſt hath commanded them. Well then, what kind of Government is this? it is not Worldly but Miniſterial, diſpenſing the Will of Chriſt: Is it then to attend upon the Miniſtry of the Word? we hear that to labour in that Work is commended to the Paſtors and Teachers, Tit. 1. 5, 17. Therefore it doth remain that it belongeth unto the Office of this Ruling Elder to aſſiſt the Paſtor and Teacher in all other Acts beſides. Now the Rulers Office being miniſterial, look what things there be that Chriſt hath not made proper to the Paſtor and Teacher, they are communicable to thoſe Ruling Elders: It is with the Ruling Elders now as it was with the Levites, Numb. 8. 19. they are given to the Prieſts to aſſiſt them, but ſome things were reſerved to the Prieſts, and ſome things were communicated to the Levites; they had indeed the Care of the Doors of the Tabernacle, but for offering Sacrifice it was not communicated to them, but reſerved to the Prieſts only: ſo Attendance on teaching and exhorting is the proper Work of the Paſtor and Teacher, but other Acts of Rule are as well communicated to Ruling Elders.

the

1. The firſt Act of Rule is, to open and ſhut the Doors of God's Houſe; and of them to whom the Power of the Keys is committed, it is generally inferr'd that they have Power to open and ſhut, Matth. 16. 19. All the Members of the Church have ſome Intereſt in the Power of Keys, but it is ſpecially delegated to them that are Stewards by Office for admiſſion of Members into the Church, that is, to open the Doors of God's Houſe. We read that when Paul ſent for the Elders, he took his Leave of them in a moſt Heavenly Sermon as ever he preached; Acts 20. 28, 29. Take heed therefore to your ſelves, and to all the Flock God hath made you Overſeers of, &c. Wherein he doth lay a Caveat to them to take heed to the Doors of God's Houſe; grievous Wolves will be creeping in among you. This Charge lies upon all the Elders. And whereas it is ſaid, Let him rule with Diligence, it implieth, 1. Watchfulneſs, and then Induſtry and Fidelity to take heed; ſet not open the Doors of the broad Gates of the Kingdom to let in all that comes. As the Levites were to keep the Doors of the Tabernacle, that no unclean thing ſhould come in, no unclean Iſraelite, no not the King himſelf, if he were leprous and unclean: And this is the firſt part of the Elders Office, to open and ſhut the Doors of God's Houſe, not to admit hand over head, all Comers whatſoever; but take heed no Wolf, no Hypocrite, no Carnal Perſon may come in, till they be able to give an Account of their Faith, to the Edification of God's Church: for this we ſhall read, that thoſe are only Members fitted for the Church which are able to manifeſt their Faith, the Manifeſtation of the Spirit is given him to ſpeak withal; ſo thoſe that tender themſelves to have Fellowſhip with the Church, tho you find that they have Grace, it is not ſufficient preſently to let them in, but tarry a while, and they will have a Gift to manifeſt the Work of Grace in their Souls, tho ſuch ſhould not be too long delayed, leſt they be too much damped and diſcouraged. 2. They have Power to ordain Church-Officers, 1 Tim. 4. 14. The Hands of the Presbytery are the Hands of the Company of Elders, Acts 14. 23. thoſe Elders are called the Elderſhip, or Presbytery: ſo that by the ſame Hands that they admit ſome into Church-Fellowſhip, others they admit into Office in the Church. 3. They do ſhut the Doors of God's Houſe by Excommunication of notorious and obſtinate Offenders. *Matth.*18.17,18. If he neglect to hear the Church, let him be to thee as an Heathen, &c. They are to deliver them to Satan, as Paul determined concerning the inceſtuous Corinthian; now the Care of the whole Church is and ought to be, to ſee that they do not ſuffer amongſt them ſuch venomous Perſons as would corrupt the whole Body, but in ſpecial-wiſe this Care belongeth to the Elders, ſome ſingular Accompts lie upon them. Chriſt Jeſus writing an Epiſtle to the Churches of Aſia, he doth in ſpecial reprove the Angels of the Churches, and thoſe doth he blame for tolerating ſuch things as God hateth. Now if they be principally and properly reproved by Chriſt for ſuffering ſcandalous Offenders, Rev. 2. 14, 15, 16. it is therefore their Care to ſee that the Church be not ſcandalized with notoriouſly corrupted Members, it lies principally upon them that are to be Guides and Rulers in the Congregation of the Saints.

2. The Power of the Keys reacheth further; it doth belong to the Stewards Care to ſee that none in the Churches do live inordinately without a Calling, or idle in their Calling. It is the Elders Office to ſee that no Drone or unprofitable Servant be in the Church which may live of other Mens Labours. 2 Theſſ. 3. 10, 11. there the Apoſtle taxeth the Theſſalonians for a double Vice, ſome walked without Callings, others were idle in their Callings; and this belongeth to the Elders to ſee to the Amendment thereof: it is an Act of Rule.

3. A third Act of the Elders Office is to prevent and heal all Offences in Life or Doctrine in their own or other Churches, *Rev.*2.14,15,20. The Angels, the Officers of the Church, are to ſee that no Balaamite, no Nicholaitan, no Jezebel be in the Church, but ſuch they are to heal, either by Admonition, or elſe to caſt them out of the Church, 2 *Theſſ.*5.13,14. This is the proper Character of the Elders Office; if warning may heal a Vice, that Member ought not to be cut off: but they are to be cut off if Warning or Rebuke heal not. The Elders are to ſeek to heal it; for if it be not removed or reformed formed it lies upon their Heds: And I put it in that they are to help other Churches alſo if their Counſel be required. Churches may require the help of other Congregations to heal and remove the Offence that peſters the Body, if they cannot do it themſelves. When the Church at Antioch was troubled about the neceſſity of Circumciſion to Salvation, and they could not be ſatisfied in it, they ſent to the Church at Jeruſalem, and Apoſtles and Elders: The Apoſtles are not implied as extraordinary Officers, but they carry all things in an ordinary courſe, and meet together with the Church to debate the Matter with the Church Aſſembly, and there was ſuch diſputing amongſt them: if they had ſpoken by Divine Teſtimony, what needed their Diſputation? the Word of one Apoſtle might have quelled all Contradiction; but they ſend to them as to a Church, and it is a Precedent for other Churches, and therefore in that the Elders are named, it is their Care to look to ſuch Errors as ariſe in other Churches if they be required, and it is alſo their Duty according to the Rule of Chriſt to go to other Churches and deliver their Minds. Acts 15. 22. there you may ſee that ſuch ought to be the Care of the Elders, and of one Church over another, as that if any Church ſhould ſend to them for their Counſel, they are to do what they can for the redreſſing of Errors amongſt them, and they may ſet in order ſuch things, and ſend choſen Men from amongſt themſelves unto other Congregations, as to anſwer by word of Mouth what hath been agreed upon: this belongeth to the Elders Office; but in caſe other Churches ſhould be careleſs of enquiring after the Counſel of other Churches, it will be the part of one Church to admoniſh another, out of the Liberty that one Church hath in another, and the neceſſity that lies upon all to neglect no good Means to preſerve the Houſhold of God unſpotted. But how cometh it to paſs that all the Churches are called one Church? Mat. 18. 18. Doth it not ſhew thus much, that all Churches have alike Power, and that all Churches ſhould have alike Care over one anothers good? So this was propheſied of old of the Churches of the New Teſtament; Cant. 8. 8. We have a little Siſter, and ſhe hath no Breaſts, &c. What if a Church hath no Breaſts? and what if ſhe ſhould uſe means, and not be able to procure Breaſts? What if ſhe ſhould be content to live without Breaſts, ſhould other Churches let ſuch a Church alone? The Church doth complain we have a little Siſter, and ſhe hath no Breaſts; what ſhall we do for her? This is the mutual Care that one Church ſhould have of another: whatever Defects they ſee a Church lie under, they might labour to ſupply them. It was Cain's profane Spirit that ſaid, Am I my Brother's Keeper? and it ſavoureth of the Rancor of Cain's Spirit to ſay, What hath one Church to do with another? Is it nothing if one Church want Officers, Breaſts to give them Suck? if there be in you Spirits of Siſters, if the Blood of Chriſt run in your Veins, you may not put off the State of other Churches, as impertinent to you. It is therefore the Care of Elders that are Officers in the Churches, for to be ready to help other Churches if they do require them; and if they do not require them, yet by all means what they can to help them, and reform what is amiſs amongſt them.

4. The part of the Officers is to prepare Matters for the Churches Conſideration, and to moderate Matters in the Church-Aſſembly: Firſt, to prepare Matters for the Church's Conſideration, Acts 21. 18. They knew Paul muſt come before the Church, therefore they meet to prepare Matters for it, that he might not raiſe an Offenſiveneſs in the Church: When they meet together, the Elders are to take Care that things might be ſo carried that there might be no Diſturbance, they muſt ſo fit them that there may be little Noiſe, and that the Churches Anſwer may be without Exaggeration, Contention and Diſturbance, that things may be ordered with the moſt Care, with the leaſt Offence to Edification, and they are to order the ſeaſons of Speech and Silence in the Church. Acts 13. 15. The Rulers of the Synagogue ſent, &c. ſo that they open the Mouths of Men, and by the ſame Power do alſo ſhut them again: they who call for Speech may call for Silence; he that ſhutteth, he may alſo open; he that openeth, may alſo ſhut: They alſo propound Matters to the Congregation, Acts 6. 3. And what the Apoſtles did as Elders, the ſame may alſo Elders do. It is the Elders Office to feed the Flock of God with a Word of Admonition: For we heard before, that all the Elders were to be apt to teach, and able to convince an Adverſary. Now what Word doth remain for them? not a Word of Exhortation nor Doctrine, for that belongs to the Paſtors and Teachers; but the Apoſtle expreſſeth it, 1 Theſſ. 5. 12. Now we beſeech you Brethren, &c. where he diſtinguiſheth between them that labour and them that rule; know them that labour among you, that is, your Paſtors and Teachers; and know them that are over you, that is, your Ruling Elders: and what Work do they? they rule principally by a Word of Admonition, that is, ſuch a Word that warneth every Man in his place to take up ſome Calling, and to be diligent in his Calling, to be able to teach this or that to be lawful or unlawful, this is he both able and fit for to do, and this he ought to do according unto God, Acts 20. 31. Paul propounds his own Example to them, how he ceaſed not to warn them day nor night with Tears; and this Warning is a principal part of Rule: And therefore when good Lot did but ſadly admoniſh thoſe lewd Perſons, Gen. 18. 19. they ſaid, ſhall he judg and rule? ſo that this is the Work of the Elders to admoniſh the Church. Finally, when they are called for, they are to viſit the ſick Brethren, and to pray over them, James 5. 14, 15. being called for, they ought to ſpeak ſome Word of Edification to the Sick, and to pray over them, and God hath promiſed to heal them both in Soul and Body; the Prayer of Faith ſhall ſave the Sick. As for Anointments with Oil, it is ceaſed, as is the Gift of Miracles, but it is a marvellous ſtrong Promiſe that is given to the Prayers of the Elders of the Church; for the Lord did know that this Ordinance would be deſpiſed, and to prevent it, the Lord doth marvellouſly incourage them to the uſe of it by the Promiſe of this very Bleſſing, that the Prayer of Faith ſhall ſave the Sick; and if he hath committed Sins, they ſhall be forgiven him; ſo that it will be a wholeſome Medicine both to Soul and Body: Not that God doth promiſe that this ſhall ever be granted, for then Men ſhould never die, when they ſend for the Elders to pray over them; but they ſhall find it to be a uſual Bleſſing to the Honour of the Elders Office, that at their Prayer for the Sick, the Lord will raiſe up their Eſtate and Strength again, tho it ſeems deſperate. Thus you ſee the whole Duty of theſe Ruling Elders, and how they are to aſſiſt the Paſtors and Teachers in all other Acts of Rule beſides Word and Doctrine.

Uſe 1. From hence obſerve the great Bounty of God unto Paſtors and Teachers, that God hath not left them alone in the Church; as Martha complains to Chriſt, that Mary had left her alone to ſerve: the Miniſters of the Church have no ſuch Cauſe to complain; for as he gave the Levites to the Prieſts to help them in their Service, ſo hath he given ruling Elders to ſuch as labour in the Word and Doctrine, that they might have Aſſiſtance from them in ruling of the Church of God.

Uſe 2. It may ſerve to anſwer a Cavil that ſome have againſt this Office, who ſay, That if God hath given theſe Officers to the Church, he would have then ſet down the Limits of their Offices, and not have ſent them forth with illimited Power. To which it is anſwered, that their Power is ſtrongly limited, as a Stewardly or Miniſterial Power and Office. It is the Power of the Keys, which Chriſt hath expreſſed in his Word, and it conſiſteth in theſe things that have been ſpoken of God's Houſe, to open and ſhut the Doors of God's Houſe, by Admiſſion of Members, &c. (ut prius.) This is ſuch a Rule as is no ſmall help to the Spirits and Hearts of thoſe that labour in Doctrine, and no ſmall help it is alſo to the whole Church of God, and when they are wanting many Evils will grow, and thoſe without poſſibility of Redreſs and Amendment, much Idleneſs, much Confuſion, many Offences: tho other Miniſters have been in the Church, we may ſee how much in the want of theſe Officers, the Churches have been corrupted.

Uſe 3. This ſerveth for Inſtruction to the Elders, to ſhew them what Bounds God hath ſet them in their Calling, as hath been ſaid, that ſo they may walk according to God in them.

Uſe 4. It doth inforce a Duty lying upon all the Members of the Church to ſubmit themſelves to them in the Lord as becometh Saints: Members ought to ſubmit to their Trial; it is no Arrogancy for them to deal with thoſe that are to be admitted into the Church, to lay Hands upon Officers: And think it not a hard matter that they ſhould be thus careful of ſetting Men into their Callings: It is no Tranſgreſſion of their Bounds to prepare Matters for the Church, to moderate the Carriage of Matters in the Church-Aſſembly by their wiſe Direction, and it will be then the part and duty of the People to ſubmit to their Elders in theſe things. From this Ground it will appear to be a ſwerving from the Rule, for Men to give way to their Spirits and Tongues to ſpeak in the Congregation, tho their Matters be good, before the Door be opened by him that hath the Keys, otherwiſe it is out of order, they ought not for to ſpeak without the Conſent of the Elder; and if the Elder ſee that it tends to Confuſion and Diſturbance, he may as reaſonably put an end to it, as at firſt he opened a Door for it.

Object. But ſuppoſe that all the Elders be in the ſame Tranſgreſſion, and they will not hear any Admonition: If then before I can declare it to the Church, I muſt crave leave of them to ſpeak, they will not give it me, may not I then declare my Grievance to the Church without them?

Anſw. If all the Officers be in an Offence, and if they will not hear thy private Admonitions, then tell the Church of them. If Peter himſelf offend, and Peter will not hear thee, tell the Church of Peter: Chriſt alone and his Church is King and Judg in ſuch a Caſe, then doth their Power return to the Church from whence they firſt receiv'd it: but if the Elders be not delinquent, nor poſſeſſed with any ſinful Prejudice, then muſt they moderate the Carriage of all Matters in the Church-Aſſembly, otherwiſe there would be no end of Speaking and Confuſion, if every Man might open a Floodgate of Speech when he would. And when we ſee further what lieth as a Duty upon ſick Perſons, that they muſt not neglect to ſend for the Elders of the Church; for we ſee how ſtrong the Promiſe is, when they are ſent for in Faith with Expectation of a Bleſſing from an Ordinance, and they pray over them in the Name of the Lord; and, laſtly, as Brethren ought to receive Admonition from the Hand of any Brother, ſo ſurely they ought not to deſpiſe it from the Hand of an Elder. 1 Theſſ. 5. 12, 13, 14. there the Apoſtle ſhews them how willingly and ſurely they ſhould ſubmit to ſuch with due Attention and Reformation according to God.

Queſt. What manner of Men hath God appointed to be called to the Deacons Office?

Anſw. Men of Gravity and good Report, not given to Diſſimulation, nor to Wine, nor to Covetouſneſs, Men full of the Holy Ghoſt and Wiſdom, holding the Myſtery of Faith in a pure Conſcience, keeping their Houſhold in good Rule; having ſuch Wives as may neither diſhonour nor corrupt their Calling; not Slanderers, but grave, ſober, and faithful in all things.

Explicat. This full Deſcription of the State of the Deacons Spirit is expreſly laid down in two places of Scripture, 1 Tim. 3. 8—12. and Acts 6. 3. Firſt, They muſt be Men of Gravity; this word tranſlated grave, doth imply three things. 1. It is oppoſed to Lightneſs: A Deacon muſt not be light in his Geſtures, in his Speech and Apparel, but be grave. 2. It is oppoſed to Wantonneſs: they muſt be retired, and clean from all wanton Dalliance. 3. Comelineſs, the word ſignifies reverent and venerable: He muſt neither be light in his own Carriage, nor in the Hearts of other Men. The word cometh from a word that ſignifies to worſhip: He muſt not be light in his own Diſpoſition, nor in other Mens Apprehenſions. Him whom you would ſlight, is not venerable, (σέμνος) which is required of a Deacon. Secondly, He muſt be of honeſt Report, Acts 6.3. Men gravely born witneſs unto, ſo ſignifies the word (μαρτυρουμένους) they muſt carry a good Report with them where-ever they are known. Thirdly, They muſt not be given to Diſſimulation, not double-tongu'd. In Churches of great Multitudes, where many are to be maintained by their Hands, he may promiſe ſomething to ſome which he may forget, or not be able to perform: his Word muſt be as his Oath or Vow, if it be gone out of his Mouth it muſt ſtand inviolable: He muſt not pretend more Care for the Poor than there is need, nor promiſe that he is not able to perform. A Man is double-tongu'd two ways; 1. When his Heart differs from his Tongue. 2. When his Tongue differs from his Tongue at ſeveral times, when the firſt thing was right and true: He muſt not be given to Wine; for ſo he may come to waſte not only his own Eſtate, but the Stock of the Church, and that is contrary to the Spirit of a Steward. Nor to Covetouſneſs, for that will overwork his honeſt Heart to divert the Church's Stock from the Church's Service, and to imploy it for his own Ends: therefore this is carefully to be avoided, theſe are his moral Vertues. Now for his Spiritual Endowments, he muſt be full of the Holy Ghoſt, and Wiſdom, Acts 6. 3. He muſt be full of the Holy Ghoſt: which implies, 1. That a Man muſt be empty of his own Spirit, for elſe he cannot be full of the Spirit of God. A Veſſel cannot be full of Wine and Water too: Therefore he muſt be empty of every Luſt, and of himſelf. 2. He muſt abound in all the Gifts of God's Grace, and not only be full of Gifts, but of the Holy Ghoſt himſelf: For Gifts will grow ruſty, dead, powerleſs, and unprofitable, and we ſhall turn them to our own Ends: but he muſt be full of the Holy Ghoſt, not full of Faith, Patience, &c. but of the Spirit of Faith, and full of the Spirit of God, to put Life into all his Graces: 1 John 4. 4. Greater is he, &c. it is not his Gifts, but his Perſon: Rom. 8. 11. It is not Gifts that raiſed Chriſt from the dead, but the eternal Spirit. Now then the eternal Spirit of God muſt reſt in the Heart of a Deacon, a Deacon may be put to ſudden Expreſſions; and if he be not full of the Holy Ghoſt, he will not well rule his own Gifts: the more pure any Grace is, the ſooner it is wreckt, unleſs it be carefully handled and guided according to God. A Man is then full of the Holy Ghoſt, when he doth not content himſelf with Gifts, that he hath a Gift of Prayer and of Edification, and a Spirit of Diligence, but when he finds himſelf ſtill empty for all this, but as he continually deſcries freſh Supply from the Holy Ghoſt. If in abundance of Gifts I find my ſelf empty, and I am ſenſible of my own Unprofitableneſs, and Inability to do any good, then am I not only full of the Gifts of God, but of the Holy Ghoſt, to carry them an end with Strength. 3. And this implies ſuch a Strength of Grace and Spirit, that it carries him above the World, above all Luſts, above all Temptations, all Credit and Reputation, and whatſoever he meets withal, and he is carried with full Sail ſteadily and ſtrongly to God's Heavenly Kingdom; whatſoever is put into his Hand, he is carried an end with Speed and Strength above all Difficulties. 4. A Man is full of the Holy Ghoſt, when he is ready to utter ſpiritual things upon all occaſions; For out of the abundance of the Heart the Mouth ſpeaketh. When a Man is full of the Holy Ghoſt, there is a Law of Grace in his Lips: and there is reaſon that a Deacon ſhould be thus full of the Spirit, for many times the Miniſters may grow worldly with whom they are to deal, who then ſhould ſpeak a ſpiritual Word of quickning to them: and alſo they are to deal with the Poor and with the Sick, and therefore had need to deal with their Souls as well as with their Bodies. Job 32. 18. Elihu when he was full of the Holy Ghoſt could not hold his Peace, but muſt ſpeak. 5. A Man full of the Holy Ghoſt will not reſpect Perſons: a Deacon will be apt to reſpect his Kindred, or Friends, or Country-men if he be not full of the Holy Ghoſt. The Levites did not know their own Fathers when they had ſinned, and they were then full of the Holy Ghoſt. A Man with his own Stock may lawfully have Reſpect to Perſons, to his Kindred, &c. and ought ſo to do: but if it come to the Stock of the Church, that being in the Hand of a Man dedicated to God; now his Hands are the Hands of God, and the Hands of the Church, and therefore he diſtributes them according to God, as if the Holy Ghoſt did it, not reſpecting Perſons. (And full of Wiſdom.) There was in the Apoſtles time more need of Wiſdom, for they had the Charge of all the Members of the Church, they had the common Stock of all, and therefore were to provide for all they had Charge of, and therefore had need to have the Wiſdom of the whole Church that they might diſtribute an equal Proportion to all: But when the Church was not ſo poor, but Men might diſtribute to the Miniſters and Poor, and yet not ſell their whole Eſtates, yet then alſo was there need of Wiſdom to adminiſter the Churches Treaſure; they muſt ſee the Burdens of Men, and relieve them accordingly. Nay, in this Country, if the Deacons have not a publick Providence, the poor Company of the Church may much want; for it is ſome Mens ſinful Modeſty, that they will periſh almoſt rather than ask: Therefore they being the Churches Stewards, muſt ſee that every one hath ſuch a comfortable Proportion of Eſtate, that he may attend to the things of God, and to the Edification of his own Soul, and not be diſquieted in his Spirit; We muſt not ſerve Tables, ſaith the Apoſtle, but it is the Deacons Office: The Holy Ghoſt ſpeaketh more of the Deacons than of Paſtors and Teachers; for they have not ſo much need of this kind of Wiſdom as the Deacon hath; therefore they had need caſt an Eye to ſee what Mens Tables be, and ſo accordingly as they may comfortably provide for them, that ſo they may bleſs God, and attend to God's Ordinances (keeping the Myſtery of Faith in a pure Conſcience.) Muſt he be ſuch now will you ſay? The whole Doctrine of Religion is a Myſtery to Fleſh and Blood: his Conſcience being a pure and precious Veſſel, the Myſtery of Faith ſhould be ſo kept, that he may be as exemplary in his Place for this as for Wiſdom: and the reaſon is this, becauſe that in the Perſecution of the Churches the Deacons have been hunted after, partly to know what was the Churches Treaſure, that they might confiſcate it, and partly becauſe they think them more excellent than other Men, being called to publick Office; and therefore the Deacons have been put to exquiſite Torment, as Lawrence the Deacon, &c. Now if a Man be called to anſwer, he had need to be a Man of Knowledg and Faith, and that in a pure Conſcience, for ſo he will daſh his Enemies and honour his Profeſſion. 2. He muſt hold the Myſtery of Faith, that he may be able to ſpeak a word of Edification to his poor Brethren, as well as miniſter to their Bodies. Now for his Family-

Gifts: Firſt, He muſt keep his Houſe well in order; if his Children be riotous, his Servants diſorderly, it will weaken the Deacons Fidelity: and beſides, publick Perſons muſt be exemplary both in publick and private walking. For their Wives, they muſt be ſuch as may neither corrupt, nor diſhonour their Calling, nor Slanderers, grave, ſober and faithful in all things: [and not Slanderers] the word is, not Devils, not unjuſtly accuſing any Body, nor unſeaſonably doing of it: If one accuſe another unjuſtly, or without due Order, the Deacon may grow more remiſs in his Office to ſuch, and ſo a Woman may corrupt and diſhonour his Calling; ſhe muſt ſpeak well of her Brethren and Siſters: [grave] they muſt not be light in themſelves, nor in others Eſteem, but reverent and grave: [ſober] the word is the ſame with vigilant; 1 Tim. 3. 2. The Deacon's Wife therefore muſt be a good Houſewife, for elſe ſhe may corrupt his Calling; ſhe muſt alſo be ſober and moderate in Meats and Drinks, and humble and meek, not high, above Sobriety, above due Proportion and Meaſure: [and faithful in all things] faithful to God, he truſts her, faithful to Men, they dare truſt her; faithful to her Husband, faithful in Speech, in Carriage, not dealing unrighteouſly with any thing committed to her Hand, but helping forward her Husband in the place God hath ſet him.

Uſe 1. It may ſerve to teach the Church of God what manner of Men they are to chooſe into this Office. And,

2. It teacheth Deacons how they are to behave themſelves whom God calleth to this Office, and what their Qualifications ought to be, and what they are to grow up unto, that ſo they may faithfully diſcharge the Truſt that God and his Church have committed unto them.

Queſt. What is the Office of a Deacon?

Anſw. To receive the Offerings of the Church which are brought unto them and laid down before them, and therewith to ſerve Tables, diſtributing with Simplicity, not only to the Miniſters of the Church, but to any other of the Brethren, as their Need ſhall require; Acts 6. 3, 4. The occaſion of their Calling was this: the Apoſtles being ſent by Chriſt with fulneſs of Power, being Paſtors, Teachers, Elders and Deacons, finding themſelves burdened with the Deacons Office, which was the loweſt part of their ſpiritual Work, they disburdened themſelves of it, and ſaid it was not meet they ſhould go to ſerve Tables, therefore to ſerve Tables they laid down to the Deacons; what the Apoſtles did in that Office, they delegated to them, Acts 6. 34, 35. It ſeemeth they ſet higher than the People, and every one brought his Offering and laid it down at their Feet, and they therefore received; they went not to call upon the People for ſuch Benevolence, nor ſeek it where it is not to be had, but the Members freely offered it, and what they offered they took: Such was the manner of the old Temple. Luke 21. 1, 2, 3. They caſt Money into the Treaſury, where it was received by the Officers for that Service. Nehem. 13. 12, 13. there is ſet down what Officers they were the Gifts were brought and diſpoſed to, the Treaſurer, &c. and they faithfully diſtributed to their Brethren: ſo David appointed Men over the Treaſury, 1 Chron. 26.20,26. And he gave Solomon the Pattern of the Treaſury, 1 Chron. 28. 11. The People brought their Offerings, and the Levites received and diſtributed them, 2 Chron. 31. 11, 14. they were not exacted by the Levites, but brought and diſtributed as need required: So in the New Teſtament, Chriſt firſt appointed his Diſciples the Apoſtles for that Office, who received the Contributions of the Church, and therewith ſerved Tables; but when Neceſſity required, they laid down that Office to others. To ſerve Tables implies to miniſter to the Neceſſity of all their Brethren; for then they laid all upon the common Stock, and they had nothing peculiar, becauſe elſe they could not provide for the Congregation, tho a part had been received, as Peter told Ananias. This therefore was the Care of the Apoſtles to ſee that every Man's Table in the Congregation was ſpread: Now leſt it might be thought that the ſame courſe ſhould be taken all Ages in the Church, therefore it fell out otherwiſe whilſt the Apoſtles themſelves lived, that in the Churches of the Gentiles which were rich, and Men might keep a Propriety in their Eſtate, and yet maintain the Church, they were commanded to put it into a Stock every Lord's-day, what they laid aſide for the Neceſſity of the Church, 1 Cor. 16. 2. and out of that they did prepare the Lord's Table, the Table of the Officers and of their poor Brethren of their own Church, and other Churches, according to their Neceſſity. Now the

Deacon in ſerving of Tables muſt diſtribute in Simplicity. Rom. 12. 8. He that diſtributes, &c. which is the Deſcription of the Deacon. There is this difference between Diſtribution and Contribution: He that contributes gives his private Stock and Offering into a common Treaſury; but to diſtribute, is to turn a common Stock into Pieces and Parcels, as every one hath need. This muſt be done with Simplicity, which implies two things; (1.) It ſtandeth in oppoſition to Reſpect of Perſons, that a Deacon ſhould not reſpect any for Country ſake, for Kindred ſake, but diſtribute to every one as he hath need. (2.) 2 Cor. 8. 2. this word Simplicity is there tranſlated Liberality, and 2 Cor. 9. 11. the ſame word which is here tranſlated Simplicity, is there tranſlated Bountifulneſs. A Deacon therefore muſt not diſtribute with Reſpect of Perſons: and alſo with a free and willing Spirit, without any upbraiding of any Brother or Officer in the Church, but freely diſtributing, according to the Will of Chriſt and of his Church: The Chearfulneſs of the Giver, and the Readineſs of his Care in giving may expreſs much Simplicity. Now the Deacon is not only to diſtribute to the Miniſters, tho he doth to them: 2 Cor. 8. 15. and ſo they did in the New Teſtament; for if all the Church was ſupplied by the Treaſurers, then much more the Apoſtles and Officers of the Church.

Object. Gal. 6. 6. Let him that is taught in the Word, communicate to him that teacheth him in all good things.

Anſw. The word is not diſtribute but communicate, that is, put it into a common Treaſury, 1 Tim. 6. 17, 18. There is difference between diſtributing and communicating: to communicate is to lay a parcel of the Eſtate into a common Stock, be ready to communicate; but to diſtribute is another thing, which they may have occaſion to do here and there as they ſee any have need, of that which is put into the common Stock; and therefore the Apoſtle's meaning, Gal. 6. 6. is not to diſtribute, but to communicate according to a Man's Eſtate and the Churches Occaſions. 1 Tim. 5. 17. there is a Care to be had of the Officers of the Church; that which is given muſt be given as an Honour and due, not grudgingly, but freely and readily; thoſe that are Officers muſt live of their Labour: beſides, the Officers are to diſtribute to every one according to his Need and Uſe, not only Neceſſity, but according to his expedient Uſe, Acts 4. 35. This was never counted Alms in the Church, or Mercy, but a Mercy of Juſtice and Equity, whether to their own Church, or the Members of other Churches in their need, with Conſent of the Church, Rom. 15. 26, 27. The Apoſtle giveth this Contribution a Name far off from Alms or Charity, for he calleth it a Service and Grace of God to be able to communicate to the Neceſſities of the Church, 2 Cor. 9. 12. and 8. 19.

Uſe 1. To teach you a true diſcerning of the Corruptions that have been brought into the Office in time of Popery, wherein it hath been impoſed upon them to teach and baptize ſome to rule, yea over-rule the Officers of the Church, and the Church it ſelf, ſo that very few of them have a hand in ſerving of Tables, a Burden which the Apoſtles perceived they were not able to bear, that is beyond the Inſtitution of Chriſt, and therefore an Invention of Man's Brain, and will never do good to the Church of God.

Object. Philip preached and baptized, Acts 8. 5, 12, 13. and if ſo, why might he not alſo be a Ruler?

Anſw. He was not only a Deacon, but when the Office was laid aſide by reaſon of the Perſecution, then God called him forth to be an Evangeliſt, Acts 21. 8. and therefore he may not be a Pattern for Deacons in other Ages. It is a like Abuſe that in ſome Churches they have inſtead of theſe Collections for the Poor, who receive not the Contributions, but gather them and diſtrain for them, and that not for the Miniſters, but for the Poor only, this never doth good in the Church; but it falls out that all the Collections made by the Church will not maintain the Poor of the Church, but they are forced to beg abroad; God marvellouſly beareth Witneſs to his own Ordinance, that either there ſhall be no Poor, or if there be, God ſo bleſſeth his own Ordinance, that a little Church hath well provided for all her Poor, yea ſometimes to the Relief of Neighbour-Congregations.

Uſe 2. To teach Deacons to caſt about how all the Tables of the Congregation may be provided for; not only the Lord's Table, and the Officers Table, but alſo the Tables of the poor Brethren; who tho they make not known their Neceſſity, yet the Deacons Care ſhould be to ſee that they be provided for of things ſufficient for this natural Life, and therefore to provide that they may have Gardens, and planting Grounds, &c. by which they might live.

Uſe 3. It behoves all the Members of the Body that ought to have a Care one of another, to ſee that there may never want Proviſion in the Deacons Hands to provide for all the Tables in the Churches, and to ſee that there never want Bread in God's Houſe, and then God hath promiſed, Mal. 3. 9, 10, 11. that he will open the Windows of Heaven, and pour in a Bleſſing. It is for Brethren of higher degree to ſee to the Treaſury of the Churches, Gal. 6. 10. that ſo no Member of the Church may want convenient Supply; and where there is Meat in God's Houſe, there ſhall never want Meat in any Man's Houſe: He is a faithful God, and he hath ſaid it; Prove me now and ſee if I will not open the Windows of Heaven, &c.

Uſe 4. To provoke the Deacons when Strangers come over from other Churches, to ſee that none of them want convenient Harbour among our Congregations, eſpecially when there is only Care needful, no Charges required.

Queſt. But is it not the Deacons Office to ſhew Mercy with Chearfulneſs?

Anſw. Yes verily, to their Brethren in Miſery; but that part of their Office they chiefly perform by the Hand of the Widows choſen into the Number, who are therefore called the Deacons or Servants of the Church: The Deacon is to ſhew Mercy with Chearfulneſs, Rom. 12. 8. He muſt not ſtay till his Brethren be in extream Miſery, but before-hand prevent them with ſome ſeaſonable Relief as may ſave them out of the Hand of ſuch Extremity. A ſmall matter will ſtrengthen an Houſe when it is underſhooted, but when it is down, then a great matter will not do it: So it is with a poor Brother's Eſtate, therefore in ordinary courſe, Diſtribution in time ſhould prevent it; but the Members will be ſick, and ſometimes ſick of long Diſeaſes, and poor Brethren will be ſick as well as rich, and then there is room for ſhewing of Mercy; but where there is no Miſery there is no need of Mercy, but when Danger, long Sickneſs, danger of Death, extream Wants fall upon Brethren, then muſt the Deacon ſhew Mercy, and that with Chearfulneſs: that is, not grudgingly, nor of neceſſity. That word Chearfulneſs implies, that whereas the Brother ſtandeth in need of the Church's Love in way of Mercy; this Chearfulneſs diſtributes it readily, freely, joyfully, and not rejoycing in his Miſery, but in that he hath to relieve him withal: this Grace adorns a Chriſtian much. Mich. 7. 18. God deſcribes himſelf by it, that he delights in Mercy, when he hath occaſion to ſhew Mercy, that is the Work he delights in; tho the Sins of his People be many, and his Anger is provoked againſt them for the ſame, yet he ſheweth Mercy, and that with Delight in it. Luke 15. 20. The Father was moved with Compaſſion, and ran to meet his Son and kiſſes him. When the Soul is very unfit to receive Mercy, then he runs to his Son and kiſſes him: and that which God ſheweth to his Sons in Miſery, he calleth us to ſhew the like, that ſo we may be like him; and the Reaſon is great that the Church offers in ſhewing of Mercy, that they ſhould do it with Chearfulneſs. 1. God's Example requires it, as you ſee before. 2. The Brotherly Affection that ſhould be between the Members of the Lord Jeſus, requires the ſame. How buſy is every Member of the Body to procure Help and Mercy to any Member that ſtandeth in need? Now God calleth us to be Members of one Body, and commendeth this Work of Mercy to the Deacons, and they ſhould come readily and chearfully to this Work, to ſhew Mercy to thoſe that are in Miſery. 3. From the great Recompence that God poureth upon his Church and the Officers, when he ſeeth them doing of Works of Mercy with Chearfulneſs. Mich. 6. 7, 8. God careth not ſo much for a thouſand Sacrifices, but that he loveth that Men ſhould love Mercy, and be diligent to ſhew it. But this part of the Office, &c. 1 Tim. 5. 9. and theſe Widows are taken into the number of the Deacons. The Apoſtle ſpeaketh not of Widows to be relieved, for ſo a Widow of thirty or forty may ſtand in need by Sickneſs, or any other Miſery; but of ſuch Widows as are choſen into the number of thoſe that are to ſhew Mercy with Chearfulneſs, and theſe are the Widows or Servants of the Church. Rom. 16. 1. it is tranſlated Servants, but the word is Deacons; there was a Church at Cenchrea an Haven by Corinth, and Phebe was a Deacon there, and the Servant of the Church implies the thing: For a Woman may not teach nor rule in the Church, and therefore ſhe muſt be a Deaconeſs: And the Apoſtle giveth her this Teſtimony, that ſhe had been a Succourer of him and of others alſo. Now this ſuccouring is to thoſe that are caſt down by Sickneſs or Sores, to look to them, and to provide them Tables; and none are ſo fit for this as skilful, pitiful and compaſſionate Widows; they are fit to miniſter Succour to poor Brethren, to them that have none of their own Kindred to provide for them and relieve them: ſuch are to be taken into the number of the Deacons; this was the Practice of the Primitive Church long after the Apoſtles times.

Queſt. What manner of Widows hath God allowed to be choſen into this Number?

Anſw. Antient Widows of threeſcore Years of Age, well reported of for good Works, for nurſing of their Children, for lodging of Strangers, waſhing the Saints Feet, for relieving the Afflicted, for diligently following of every good Work, 1 Tim. 5. 9. Firſt, They muſt be threeſcore Years old, and the reaſon is, 1. Becauſe they muſt be dedicated to the Church's Service; for in thoſe hot Countries many were ſick of Peſtilential Fevers; again, they were often in Wars, and therefore many poor Members might come home maimed, as alſo many were called before Judgment-ſeats, and there beaten and diſmembred, and ſo need Succour. Now therefore he would not have her that is choſen into the Office to have an Husband, for ſuch have Families of their own to look unto: and ſhe muſt be one that is paſt Marriage; for when they are called to an Office, they ſhould not eaſily lay it down again: and this Reaſon the Apoſtle giveth; for the younger Women wax wanton againſt Chriſt, and will marry: they having many Pagans about them, the young Women taking Affection to them they would leave their Faith and their Office to marry them: therefore he would have them be paſt Marriage. 2. From the Vanity that would befal younger Women; if they had no Imployment of their own but only publick, they would then be fit for the Devil's Work, they would go about from Houſe to Houſe, and be Buſy-bodies; but elder Women would be graver than to talk of every thing they ſee, and therefore he would have them to be threeſcore Years old. Now there are four things required of theſe Widows. 1. Diligence. 2. Tenderneſs of Affection. 3. Lowlineſs in Mind. 4. That ſhe diligently follow every good Work.

1. Diligence. She muſt be a painful Woman, and take Pains about a ſick Body, and therefore the Apoſtle would know whether they had nurſed their own Children or no: for many Women will not, tho God give them Breaſts, they will not have their Sleeps broken, neither can they tarry ſo long at home; but if a Woman cannot endure to do ſervile Offices to her own Children, ſhe will never endure to do Service to elder Bodies; therefore ſhe muſt be one that hath nurſed her own Children.

2. Tenderneſs in Affection to thoſe that are in Miſery; ſhe ſhould be full of Courteſy to all, of Mercy to thoſe that are poor and in Miſery: therefore the Apoſtle would know whether ſhe had lodged Strangers or no. There is not the pooreſt Woman but, be ſhe loving, at one time or other ſhe ſhall have Strangers: and a Deaconeſs muſt not be churliſh nor covetous, for if ſo they that are ſuccoured by her will find but little Mercy, and ſlender Proviſion, ſhe will divert the Church's Portion, and which the Deacons commit to her, to her ſelf; therefore ſhe muſt be one that hath entertained and lodged Strangers. But the Apoſtle would further know whether ſhe relieved the Afflicted alſo or no; for a Man may lodg Strangers for his own Honour's ſake; but to relieve the Afflicted, argues not only Courteſy but Mercy alſo: and therefore when ſuch are in Office, they will do it with more Mercy. You will ſay, by this no poor Woman ſhall be called to this Office, for they can relieve but few. True, Poverty is a great hindrance unto it; but the poor Widow which caſt more into the Treaſury than all the rich Men did, ſhe may have her poor Mites: Suppoſe ſhe hath no Money, yet ſhe can tend them, provide their Diet, and do ſuch like things for them; and is a Woman ready to do this? Some may relieve with Money, ſome with Apparel, ſome with Counſel, and that the pooreſt may do. Courteſy and Mercy is the ſecond Property which is required in a Widow to be choſen into the number of the Deacons.

3. Lowlineſs of Mind: Therefore, ſaith the Apoſtle, if ſhe hath waſhed the Saints Feet, Gen. 19. 2. and 43. 42. and 24. 32. And this Chriſt charges upon Simon, Luke 7. 44. that he had not done unto him. In thoſe Countries they wore no Stockins and Shoes, but Sandals tied about the bottom of their Feet; and their firſt Entertainment was when they came to any place, to waſh their Feet: therefore the Widow muſt be ſuch an one that hath waſhed the Saints Feet, and muſt do any humble Service to them: this is not uſeful in this Country, but implies ſhe muſt not skue at any poor Service, or fulſome or mean Office that may concern the Comfort of a weak or ſick Brother.

4. She muſt be diligently following every good Work; this is not every good Woman's Care and Practice: There is not any Conference but ſhe will be one there, not any day of Humiliation but ſhe will be one at it; this is the main thing he commendeth, ſhe muſt be one of the foremoſt at every good Work, and ſhe follows it on till it comes to ſome Perfection: this Woman is fit for this Service, this is a Work of Fruitfulneſs and Godlineſs, nay, ſhe muſt be well reported of for all theſe: for many an one is given to theſe things, but is not known ſo to be; therefore ſhe muſt be known; that is, required of all Officers, of Elders and Deacons, and ſo of Widows. Publick Officers of the Church muſt be of good Report, of a good Name and Fame, for that is the Honour of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, this good Report is the Cognizance and Badg of a Godly Soul; ſo much Faith as there is in the Heart, ſo much good Report there is of a Man in the Mouths of Men. Heb. 11. 2. Faith and the Fruits of Faith brought the Elders unto a good Report; and the ground of this is, no Man liveth by Faith, but he liveth by Chriſt, and honoureth him; and the more a Man honoureth Chriſt, the more will Chriſt honour him; and therefore a faithful Chriſtian never wants a good Report, but he is a Crown of Glory where-ever he doth come: He walks in an humble Frame, for that is the Life of Faith, and fruitful unto Men, and thus he cometh to have a good Report, and then will Chriſt have no Diſhonour by Adminiſtrations: They that ſpeak Evil of ſuch a Man, their own Conſciences bear witneſs againſt them, and therefore theſe Widows that are to be choſen to this Office, are to be well reported of: They that ſpeak ill of ſuch Men as are humble and fruitful in their Courſe, and do all for the Glory of Chriſt, they are either brutiſhly ignorant, or ſuch as ſin maliciouſly againſt the Holy Ghoſt. Humility and Love never went without a good Name from the beginning of the World, nor never will to the latter end of the World.

Uſe 1. This doth reprove the Popiſh manner of their kind of Cloiſters; for this place of the Apoſtle was the Foundation of their Nunneries. When the Apoſtle ſaid they muſt be of threeſcore Years of Age, a Council afterwards decreed they ſhould be forty Years old: Afterwards becauſe the Apoſtle ſaith, ſhe muſt be one that hath been the Wife of one Man, therefore they thought Virgins would be better, for that State was more honourable than Marriage, and they back'd it with that of the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 7. 38. He that giveth not his Virgin in Marriage doth better, &c. But then theſe are not fit to tend ſick Perſons: And then that flew in their Conſciences how to make that good, ſhe muſt be threeſcore Years old, and therefore they ordained a Prioreſs, an antient Woman to be over all the reſt; and becauſe theſe could not tend to the ſick Perſons, therefore they ſhould help the Church with their continual Prayers, this is the order of their Cloiſter-Virgins, and this is the Deluſion which the Devil built upon this ſacred Ordinance, inſtead of Holineſs they have become Sinks of all Uncleanneſs and Abominations.

Uſe 2. Obſerve what is the Honour Chriſt reſerveth for the beſt Women: Suppoſe that ſhe which nurſed her Children and lodged Strangers, &c. ſay ſhe be well reported of for good Works; this is the Sum of her Preferment. Chriſt calleth her, when ſhe is threeſcore Years old, to work, and to miniſter to the Church in the homelieſt Office, to be the right-hand of the Deacon in ſhewing Mercy with chearfulneſs. Some that were high-ſpirited would think within themſelves, that ſhould they that have done thus and thus now come to this, how would their Spirits riſe in Indignation againſt God's Ordinance? but God thinketh he doth us the greateſt Honour when he putteth us into any Office; to be put into a Spittle to tend upon ſick Perſons, little do Men think what Honour God then putteth upon them: it is great Honour to be doing good: if you have been diligently following every good Work, you are at the laſt the fitter to be put into this Work, Luke 17. 7, 8, 9, 10. It is Chriſt that is to eat and drink in theſe poor Lazarus's; he is to be waſhed: ſhe that is wearied in the Field of Chriſtianity, for threeſcore Years together, let her betake her ſelf a little to God's Work, and then ſhe ſhall reſt for ever in God's Kingdom: And this trains up a Woman to Holineſs of Mind after many Years continuance in any Imployment, and God will reward it abundantly.

Uſe 3. To teach the Church what kind of Officers you yet want, you have yet none of theſe Widows, the Church hath ſometimes need of ſuch, and great need too, or elſe God would not have appointed the Office: Many come from the Ships ſick, and have no Servants, and we may have amongſt us many of our own Brethren ſick to be looked unto, therefore we are to deſire this of God, that he would ſupply us with ſuch in due time, of ſuch Years and Strength as may be fit for this Employment; and alſo you ſee whom and what manner of Perſons you are to chooſe unto this place in the Church.

Uſe 4. To teach Women what God calleth them to do: God looks whether a Woman nurſe her Children or no, it helps you to Preferment in God's Eye; they muſt not put out their Children, if God give Strength and Ability themſelves; love Hoſpitality, not only to Poor and Kindred, but to Strangers alſo: Help the Afflicted, relieve them with your Purſes, Counſel, Apparel, think not ſcorn to do a Work of Love, live by Faith, grow humble and diligent in good Works, ſo you ſhall have a good Report, and be called Mothers in Iſrael; ſo was Deborah called. If the Church have need of them, let them not ſcorn to be choſen in this Office. The Siſter of Theodoſius the Emperor did not diſdain it, and it was the faireſt Flower in her Garden, that in her old Age ſhe was fit to do the Church Service; this will add to their Comfort in this World, and to their Crown of Glory in the World to come. And this alſo may teach you, that if the loweſt Officers of the Church ſhould be thus qualified, what ſhould be the Spirit of other Officers, whom God calleth to higher Places in the Church? And whatever their Employments be, yet ſhould their Spirit be honourable. The Definition of the Church hath been laid open, and the Diſtribution of it into the Integral Parts, which are the Officers of the Church, and the Members of it. Of the Officers of the Church, their Qualifications, and ſeveral Duties, hath been ſpoken hitherto.

Queſt. What manner of Men are they whom God hath appointed for to be received as Brethren and Members of his Church?

Anſw. Such as are called of God out of the World unto the Fellowſhip of Jeſus Chriſt, and do willingly offer and join themſelves, firſt to the Lord, and then to the Church, by Confeſſion of their Sins, and Profeſſion of the Faith, and laying hold of his Covenant.

Here is a double Qualification: 1. They are ſuch as are called out of the World to the Fellowſhip of Jeſus Chriſt. 2. They that willingly offer and join themſelves, firſt to the Lord, and then to his Church. For the firſt, it appears from the ordinary Notion of the word Eccleſia uſed for a Church, which is a Company of Men called out: The Church is a Congregation as they are met together in a Body, but Eccleſia, as they are a Company called from God out of the World; ſo are they ſtiled Rom. 1. 6, 7. and he tells you to what you are called, to the Fellowſhip of his Son, 1 Cor. 1. 9. They are called out of the World, Acts 2. 40. When he calleth them to be Members of the Church, he ſaith, Save your ſelves out of the ignorant or malignant World, for ſo all the World lieth either in Ignorance or Malignancy, 1 John 5. 19. ſave your ſelves from ſuch: and they are called out by the Miniſtry of the Word and Spirit of God, and they are knit into the Fellowſhip of Jeſus Chriſt, as he is the Head of his Church, 1 Cor. 12. 12. Chriſt, to whoſe Fellowſhip we are knit, is not of one Member, but of many, and they are called one Chriſt; they are joined to Chriſt, not as the Hair to the Head, but ſo as to be knit alſo to the reſt of the Members. That they are ſo called out before they are Members appears by this, Saul was circumciſed and an Hebrew, and was called out, tho the Church knew it not; and when he aſſay'd to join himſelf to the Church, they were afraid of him, not knowing that he was a Diſciple. A Diſciple is not one that heareth one Leſſon only, but a Diſciple is a conſtant Hearer, and one that taketh himſelf bound to take out all the Leſſons that he heareth, and to ſubmit to the Diſcipline of the School. They doubted Paul was not ſuch a Diſciple that was a conſtant Hearer of God's Word, or if he were, yet that he was not one that ſubmitted himſelf to the Diſcipline of the School of Chriſt, therefore they were afraid of him. The Church may not receive any one that is circumciſed, if he be ignorant, or hath not been joined in Fellowſhip to Chriſt, and ſubmitted himſelf unto him; he muſt be a Diſciple, a conſtant Hearer, an obedient Learner, and one that ſubmits to the Diſcipline of the School of Chriſt, ſuch an one ſhould be received. But it may fall out Men may in Hypocriſy hear conſtantly, and practiſe what they hear, and profeſs Subjection to the Diſcipline of the Church; therefore tho this be enough for the Church to receive, yet it is not enough for him to offer himſelf, unleſs he can ſay that Chriſt is his Portion, or that he truly waits upon Chriſt for the Revelation of his Grace unto his Soul, ſuch a Soul is inveſted with Chriſt, and ſuch ſhould they be that offer themſelves. Matth. 22. 11, 12. If a Man be not found clothed with the Wedding-Garment of Chriſt's Righteouſneſs, of Juſtification, of Sanctification, then ſaith Chriſt, Friend, how cameſt thou in hither, not having thy Wedding-Garment? tho he fall not out with his Servants for bringing him in, yet he ſaith to him, Friend, how cameſt thou in? 2dly. They willingly join and offer themſelves, firſt to the Lord, and then to the Church. Firſt to the Lord, Iſa. 56. 6. they muſt join to the Lord before he brings them to his holy Mountain, and this they do willingly. Pſal. 110. 2, 3. God's People are a willing People. Acts 2. 41. They that gladly received the Word were baptized unto Chriſt, and ſo received into the Church. Barnabas tells the Church how Paul had ſeen the Lord by the way, and then he is received, after he is joined to the Lord, and then to the Church. Acts 2. 41, 47. tho they were before of the Church of Iſrael, yet they were not received into the Chriſtian Church before they repented and made a Covenant with God, and received the Seal of the Covenant, and then they were added to it; Acts 9. 26, 27. tho his Sins were pardoned in his Baptiſm, yet when he cometh to Jeruſalem he aſſay'd to join, it was his own voluntary Act; tho you read, Matth. 22. 9. that Chriſt ſaid, Compel them to come in, that my Houſe may be full, Luke 14. 23. Tho there be a Compulſion to be uſed for the filling of Chriſt's Church, yet this is not the Compulſion of the Civil Sword, for it is the Compulſion of the Servants that are ſent to call, and they are the Miniſters of Chriſt: And how muſt they compel? by convincing them of their Natural State, by driving them out of themſelves and driving them unto Chriſt, partly by the Law, partly by the Goſpel. It is a compulſive Perſwaſion, by Terrors, by Threatnings, and by Promiſes, &c. The Magiſtrate may compel Men to hear, but to compel them to come into the Church is not compatible to the Name of the Church: For they muſt be ſuch as are called out of the World, and when they are called, they will readily deſire it, and it is a ſign that they are not called, if when they have opportunity, they do not deſire it. Rom. 1. 15. God commandeth and requires it of them, and will charge it upon them for Sin if they do it not; but neither the Church, nor Civil Magiſtrates may compel them; for God's People are a willing People: and it is no more but Reaſon that no Man ſhould be compelled to ſubject himſelf to any Government that he is not willing to ſubmit unto.

Now to the manner how they muſt join: Three things they uſed in the Primitive Church, and long after. 1. Confeſſion of their Sins, Matth. 3. 6. they were Members of the Church of Iſrael before that, yet they were not admitted to Baptiſm, and to be his Diſciples, unleſs they confeſſed their Sins, and their Subjection to take out ſuch Leſſons as he ſhould teach them; therefore they ſaid unto him, Luke 3. 10, 11, 12. What ſhall we do? Acts 19. 18. they that believed, confeſſed their Witchcraft and Whoredoms before they were received into the Fellowſhip of the Church. 2. Profeſſion of their Faith. The Eunuch was a Proſelyte and Member of the Jewiſh Church, yet he muſt profeſs his Faith before he is baptized, and Acts 8. 37, 38. and thus he was made fit for Church-Fellowſhip. 3. By taking hold of the Covenant: What Covenant? read Iſa. 56. 6, 7. he requires that they be joined to the Lord, and love the Lord, and keep his Sabbaths, and then take hold of his Covenant: And what is the Covenant which God made with the Houſe of Iſrael? Deut. 29. 10, 11, 12, 13. you there ſee what it is, they come to be eſtabliſhed his People by entring into Covenant with him. Pſal. 50. 5. they are not his People till they enter into Covenant with him. It is God's Covenant, becauſe as in Marriage God is the third Party in the Covenant between Man and Woman, ſo in the Church-Covenant it is Tripartite between God and the Church, and the Member received. They may not receive into the Church but thoſe whom God receiveth in, nor diſmiſs thoſe but whom God diſmiſſeth: therefore a Man muſt take hold of the Covenant, and then God bringeth him to be joyful in the Houſe of his Ordinances; they ſhall then receive more Joy and Comfort than ever. God hath not promiſed any conſtant ſupply of Comfort and Bleſſing from his Ordinances, but to thoſe that not only join to the Lord, but alſo lay hold of his Covenant, that is, the Covenant he hath made with his Church. And thus you ſee the meaning of the Phraſes in the New Teſtament, they did join, and they were added to the Church: that is, the Gentiles, who were before joined to the Church of Iſrael, were joined to the Chriſtian Church by laying hold of this Covenant.

Uſe 1. This ſerveth to confirm and juſtify the Lawfulneſs, and in truth the Neceſſity of this Courſe that is taken in admitting your Church-Members: Look not at it as a Work of Supererrogation, as a thing uncomely to be done, or as deviſed by Men, but as an Ordinance of God for Preparation of Men for the Church, and Admiſſion of them into the Church, that hath its Inſtitution from the Holy Ghoſt. What need we be admitted, will you ſay, when we are Members of a Church before? Therefore conſider, Paul was a Member of a Church of Chriſt, yet they were afraid of him: a Man may not thruſt himſelf upon a Church whether they will or no; and they alſo may not receive him, unleſs they perſwade themſelves that he is a Diſciple, a Learner, a conſtant Hearer, and a Submitter to the Diſcipline of the Church. Barnabas muſt make that plain to the Church that he is a Diſciple, and then they receive him into the Church: Thoſe that are received, muſt either be ſuch as approve themſelves by their Converſation, or by the Teſtimony of ſome whom the Church dare truſt; you alſo compel none to be Members of the Church: Compel them by Conviction, by ſtrength of Argument, and bonds of Conſcience; but they muſt freely offer and join themſelves when they have been called, and have obeyed the Call: the Lord is the Head of the Church, and to be joined to the Head, or joined to the Members; and not to the Head, will not make a Man a living Member, but he will be a dead Member, that will rather be a Burden than any Help to the Church. You ſee alſo evident Practices of Confeſſion and Profeſſion; where there is little notice of any Man's Sins, there is not that need of large Confeſſion, but notwithſtanding they muſt make Profeſſion of their Faith in Chriſt.

Uſe 2. To direct ſuch as deſire Church-Fellowſhip, to teach you what Perſons you muſt grow up to be, ſuch as are called out of the World; you muſt confeſs your Sins as you have been known to live in, and profeſs your Faith, lay hold of the Covenant, come not in till you be clothed with the Garment of Chriſt's Righteouſneſs, to wait and truſt upon him for his Grace, or elſe God will ranſack you, and ſay, How came you in hither? All Profaneneſs, all Malignancy, all Ignorance muſt be laid aſide; give up your ſelves to God, and then to the Church.

Uſe 3. To comfort the People of God that do thus come into the Church: God ſaith that he will make their Souls joyful in the Houſe of Prayer, and that he will accept their Offerings, Iſa. 56. 6, 7. If we find our Hearts uncomfortable, conſider, have we not ſet looſe from God, or have we not ſat looſe from his Covenant ſince we laſt received Comfort from it? our joying was but for a fit, and we ſat looſe from God, from his Ordinances, from his Sabbaths, and from our Brethren, then no wonder that we are uncomfortable: But come thus, as you have heard, into God's Preſence, and then we may comfortably expect that he will make us joyful in the Houſe of Prayer.

Queſt. What is the Office or Duty which God calleth the Brethren unto, the Members of the Church?

Anſw. To Brotherly Love, and to the Fruits thereof, Brotherly Unity, Brotherly Equality, and Brotherly Communion. Firſt, Brotherly Love, this the Holy Ghoſt preſſeth upon the Brethren of the Church in divers places: 1 Pet. 3. 8. Love as Brethren, if you be Brethren. 1 Pet. 2. 17. Love the Brotherhood; in that whole Society in which God hath joined you, love them. 1 Theſſ. 4. 9. Ye your ſelves are taught of God to love one another. Heb. 13. 1. Love is ſuch an Affection of the Soul, whereby we offer Communion one with another, and Communication of Good one to another. On the other ſide, Hatred is that whereby one cannot endure to have Fellowſhip with another, nor communicate any Good to him: But when we love the Brethren, then are we in Heart with them, and deſire to do Good unto them, and to receive Good from them. Add to the Fruits thereof Brotherly Unity: Eph. 4. 3. Endeavouring to keep the Unity of the Spirit in the Bond of Peace. Pſal. 133. 1. Behold how pleaſant a thing it is for Brethren to dwell together in Unity. Col. 3. 15. Let the Peace of God rule in your Hearts, to the which you are called in one Body. Acts 7. 26. Sirs, you are Brethren, why do you wrong one another? It is againſt the Nature of Brethren for to harm one another: And this Chriſt beggeth of his Father for thoſe that ſhould believe on his Name, Joh. 17. 20, 21. that they may be one with the Father, and one with the Son, and one another: This is the main Petition in which he deſires the Fruit of his Suffering might break forth. There is no greater Teſtimony of Chriſt's coming to ſave his People than this, that all the Churches of God, and all Brethren are all of one Mind, of one Heart, and of one Judgment; this is that convinces the World that Chriſt came in the Name of the Father, when Brethren dwell together in Unity. The ſecond Fruit of Brotherly Love is Brotherly Equality, and this God hath reſpect unto in all the Members of the Church; tho there be a difference in outward Reſpects, yet in the Church-Privileges, as they are all Brethren, they are all equal. Deut. 17. 19, 20. The King, the chief Governour, muſt read in the Book of the Law all his days, that ſo his Heart may not be lifted up above his Brethren. And for the Miniſters of the Word, Chriſt ſays unto them, Be ye not called Rabbi, for one is your Maſter, even Chriſt, as ye are all Brethren: and therefore being all Brethren, they muſt not take up Maſterly Authority one over another. And the Apoſtle hath great regard to this, that there might be an Equality, ſo that the whole Burden may not lie upon ſome, while other go eaſed: And this is the Equality that God requires of the Members of the Church. The third Fruit of Brotherly Love, is Brotherly Communion or Fellowſhip, which is alſo the Fruit of both the other Fruits of Brotherly Unity, and Brotherly Equality. Acts 2. 42. They continued ſtedfaſtly in the Apoſtles Doctrine and Fellowſhip, and in Prayers: and ver. 46. They continued daily with one accord in the Temple, and breaking Bread from Houſe to Houſe; and they had conſtantly Fellowſhip together; and this alſo God requireth of Brethren that are knit in Covenant together in Church-Fellowſhip.

Queſt. Wherein ſtandeth that Brotherly Unity which Members are to hold one with another?

Anſw. To be perfectly joined together in one Mind, and one Judgment, and one Speech, in one Truth; and where we cannot be of one Judgment, ſtill to be of one Heart; not provoking or envying one another, but forgiving and forbearing one another; not judging or deſpiſing one another in difference of Weakneſs, but ſo far as we are come to walk by the ſame Rule, and teach and learn one of another the Way of God more perfectly, till we are grown up in the Unity of the Faith, unto a perfect Man in Chriſt Jeſus. Firſt, They muſt be perfectly joined together in one Mind, one Judgment, one Speech, in one Truth; 1 Cor. 1. 10. He would have them to be of the ſame Mind, and ſame Judgment, and that not in a common Error, but in one Truth: You may ſee what is the difference betwixt Mind and Judgment, therefore the Apoſtle doth exhort them to be of one Mind, to be of the ſame Judgment; for ſometimes Men are not of a contrary Judgment becauſe things are clear, yet they have a Mind to conceive and judg otherwiſe, and ſo to expreſs themſelves; but he would have them have a Mind to be all of one Judgment, ſo ſhould alſo their Speech be the ſame: for he knew that difference of Expreſſions might breed diverſity of Mind; he would not have Men expreſs them otherwiſe than as things commonly received: He would have them avoid Babyloniſh Confuſion, and to be all of one Speech; this alſo he earneſtly deſires of the Philippians, that they would mind, think and ſpeak one thing, Phil. 2. 1, 2. He would have them willingly frame their Hearts, and Judgments, and Speech like one to another; and ſee what Weight he lays upon it, If there be any Conſolation in Chriſt, &c. There is no Conſolation of Chriſt in their Hearts where there is a Willingneſs to be of a contrary Mind, there may be Truth, but no Conſolation; this will darken their Conſolations where there is not a mutual Conſolation in their Words, Speeches and Thoughts. He adds further, If any Comfort of Love, &c. Hath not this comforted your Hearts, the Love of God, and the Love of your Brethren? If you ever had Comfort from theſe, then be of one Accord. [If any Fellowſhip of the Spirit:] If you be all of one Spirit, then let the Spirit in all your Words, Minds, Judgments and Speeches be all one: [If any Bowels of Mercy:] If you have any Bowels to me, or your ſelves, to your Brethren, be of one Mind; and this it was that fulfilled Apoſtolical Joy, to ſee them all of one Mind. Eph. 4. 23. Be renewed in the Spirit of your Mind: that is the Inclination and Bent of their Minds, that they may be willing to ſee the Truth, and yield to the Truth, and to be of one Judgment. James 4. 5. There is a Spirit in Man that luſteth after Errors, there is a Spirit that luſteth to be of a contrary Mind to another Man's Mind; therefore ſaith the Apoſtle, Be ye renewed in the Spirit of your Minds: this is a Ground of much Affliction to any humble Soul when he is forced to be of a contrary Mind or Judgment. It calls to mind the Corruption of Nature; if it be Truth in me, then why ſhould not he ſee it as well as I? and it is a great Temptation, for it makes a Man to call into queſtion his own Judgment, and the Truth. But ſuppoſe we cannot be of one Judgment, ment, nor of one Speech (for a Man muſt ſpeak as he judgeth, if he muſt judg, he muſt not prevaricate) yet ſtill we muſt be of one Heart, we muſt be of a Bent to draw as cloſe one to another as may be, and to drive it as far as Truth will bear. Phil. 4. 1. He deſires they may be of one Mind, tho they judg differently, and ſpeak differently, yet that they be willing to cloſe one with another: they did not affect to be of one Mind and Heart, and therefore he beſeecheth the Paſtor to help them an end, that they might mind one thing in the Lord, mind Unity when it may be attained. But to help forward this Brotherly Love, the Apoſtle exhorts them not to provoke one another, not to envy one another, Gal. 5. 26. Let there be no Wrath to provoke, no Pride to envy, and this will maintain Brotherly Love: but becauſe Provocation will ariſe from thoſe that have attained leaſt degrees of Grace, therefore we ſhould forbear and forgive one another, Eph. 4. 2. If a Man ſeeth that if he ſhould ſpeak any further, it would break Love, then he forbeareth to ſpeak his Judgment in a thing: Men ſhould take their times to ſpeak, and not to exaſperate the Spirit of one another; ſo alſo muſt we forgive one another, Eph. 4. 32. When any one hath provoked another, let him forgive him, altho he is not bound to expreſs his Forgiveneſs till the other deſires it. Again, there is another Rule, not to judg nor deſpiſe one another in differences of Weakneſs, Rom. 14. 3. He doth not require that they ſhould be of one Judgment, but there as they ſhould not expreſs their Judgment unleſs they ſee it will hinder Edification, Rom. 14. 22. But the Rule is, let him not judg if the Differences be not fundamental; Let not him that eateth, &c. So great is the Moderation of the Apoſtle, he doth not bind them to be of one Judgment and Speech in ſuch things; and therefore to bind all Men to be of their own Judgment and Practice, be the things never ſo circumſtantial, is againſt the Nature of Brotherly Love, and not to be of an Apoſtolical Spirit. So far as we are come to walk by the ſame Rule, Phil. 3. 15, 16. he would have their Mind one, and their Rule one, and that will much help to Unity. And what is that Rule? Gal. 6. 16. It is in both places the Rule of a new Creature, that ſaith, Neither Circumciſion availeth any thing, nor Uncircumciſion, but Faith which works by Love: and the meaning is, he looks at all things as empty of true ſpiritual Comfort, but Faith in Chriſt; and then all Rents about Circumciſion and Uncircumciſion will in due time fall to nothing. Stick to this Rule, count Chriſt All in All, that his Name might be magnified, his Grace ſanctified, and then they that plead for Ceremonies will quickly come to be of one Heart, altho not of one Judgment: what maketh a Man to have a Mind to differ? is it to magnify the Name of Chriſt? No, but to walk by that Rule, ever preſerveth Unity of Mind (to teach and learn one another the Way of God more perfectly) this is another Means to maintain Unity of Mind. Acts 18. 26. Apollo and Aquila they both minded Chriſt, and that maketh him willing to learn, and them willing to teach him: Tho he was a Learned Man in the Scriptures, they took him unto them, and would not ſuffer him to be of another Mind, but they expounded the Way of God more fully unto him; they were not afraid of Suſpicion of Arrogancy, that they ſhould teach a learned Man, but knew that he being a good Man would be willing to learn of them, tho they were but Tent-makers. This that hath been ſpoken will not reach only to difference of Mind, but to different Practice alſo. If I know any thing will grieve and offend my Brother, and will be a Stumbling-block unto him, it is good not to do it, Rom. 14. 21. Whatſoever is offenſive in Judgment or Practice ſhould be removed, and therefore we ſhould covet to be of one Judgment; if we cannot, we may forbear the Practice of many things that may be offenſive; if there muſt needs be a difference, yet let there be one Heart, endeavouring to be of one Mind, not provoking, envying or deſpiſing one another, but to grow up to the State of Perfection that God calleth us unto, Eph. 4. 13. Till we all come in the Unity of the Faith, and of the Knowledg of the Son of God, unto a perfect Man, unto the meaſure of the Stature of the Fulneſs of Chriſt. This is the End that Miniſters look at, that Chriſtians in their edifying ſhould look at, until we come to that Unity we are not perfect; but when we are, then we are come to the full meaſure of the Stature of Chriſt: do but follow Faith and Love, and then when we come to believe, mind and practiſe one thing then are we perfect. It argues that Brethren ſhould have a care one of anothers Faith, Love, Knowledg, that we may be all fit to be preſented unto Chriſt. Numb. 11. 29. I would that all God's People could propheſy. If we deſire to help one another in the Ways of Grace, it is an evident ſign of the Work of Grace in our own Hearts: And till a Man come to this, his Work is not done.

Queſt. Wherein ſtandeth the Brotherly Equality which we are to hold one with another?

Anſw. In ſubmitting our ſelves alike to all God's Ordinances, in enjoying alike all Chriſtian Liberties, in preferring others before our ſelves, in ſeeking one anothers Welfare, and feeling their Eſtates as our own, in bearing the Burdens one of anothers Eſtates, and impoſing no Burdens but in equal Proportion. The Sum is, that Brotherly Equality ſtandeth in equal Submiſſion to all God's Ordinances, in equal Fruition of all Chriſtian Liberties, in giving equal Honour to all alike, to feel one anothers Eſtates as our own, and to bear an equal Proportion of Burdens. Firſt for Equality, in equal Submiſſion to all God's Ordinances, and equal Fruition of all Chriſtian Liberty. Gal. 3. 28. There is neither Jew nor Greek, Bond nor Free, there is neither Male nor Female; for they are all one in Chriſt Jeſus. There is no difference between Nations, nor between Maſters or Servants, nor between Male or Female in Chriſtian Liberties; one hath as much right to Chriſt, and the Means of enjoying Chriſt as the other, to the ſame Covenant, to the ſame Seals of the Covenant, to the ſame Admonitions and Exhortations; what is adminiſtred to one is free to another without reſpect of Perſons. Theſe words the Apoſtle uſeth alſo in another place, to ſhew Equality of Duty in Submiſſion to God's Ordinances. Col. 3. 10, 11, 12. He exhorteth them all to put on the New Man, and to put off Anger, Wrath, Malice, Blaſphemy, &c. and to put on Bowels of Mercies, and Kindneſs, and humbleneſs of Mind, &c. he calleth upon them all as one, all the Faithful alike every one to be clothed with theſe Duties, and to put off theſe Sins; for in Chriſt Jeſus there is neither Jew nor Greek, Circumciſion nor Uncircumciſion, &c. What Duty one Chriſtian owes, that another owes; what Grace one ſhould put on, that ſhould another put on: and this Equality is a ſpiritual Equality. Deut. 17. 19, 20. there it is ſaid that the King ſhould read the Book of the Law all the days of his Life, that his Heart be not lifted up above his Brethren, tho he be King. Solomon in all his Royalty muſt not be exalted above his Brethren; every Commandment of God is alike given to the King as to the meaneſt Man. It is ſaid of Kings, that they did Evil in the ſight of the Lord; Threatnings and Commandments belong alike to them; and the Conſideration that God putteth no difference between Kings and Peaſants, will make him not to count his Subjects like Dogs, but the ſame Inheritance is for them, the ſame Church-Privileges, they are all one in Privilege, all one in Duty, and this they are and ſhould be. Ezek. 46. 10. And the Prince in the midſt of them when they go in, ſhall go in, and when they go forth, ſhall go forth: They muſt not ſtay for him, neither muſt he be gone before them, but upon neceſſary occaſions, as any other Member of the Church may: This is the Rule, God by this means accommodating the Spirit of great Kings to frame themſelves to Brotherly Equality in the Houſe of God, with alike Reverence and Subjection, and alike to claim all the Privileges of God's Houſe: this is true ſpiritual Equality. Not but that they may ſit in a more eminent Place in the Houſe of God, that are of greater Authority in the Common-wealth. Joaſh by the Pillar, 2 Chron. 23. 13. which was the Place for the King to ſit in. It may be lawful in deference in that kind; not that Men ſhould be ambitious of the higheſt Places: for it is ſpoken of the Phariſees, Matth. 23. 6. and that with Diſlike, that they affected the chiefeſt Seats in the Synagogues; yet a Confuſion of Civil Deference is not comely. There are no other Meetings, but in ſpiritual Duties and Privileges they are all alike, there is Equality, they may not ſtay for him, nor he go out before them, but they ſhould come in and depart together.

TWO
LETTERS
Which paſſed between the Reverend
Mr. JOHN GOODWIN and the Author,
CONCERNING
A Church-Covenant.

To the Reverend Mr. Thomas Goodwin.

My dear Friend, whom I love and honour, if not enough, yet (certain I am) exceeding much in the Lord. I am ſorry, there being Differences between us otherwiſe, that in this we ſhould ſo long agree neither to ſend ſo much as the ſmalleſt Piece of his Mind to other in Writing for a Token. Upon which of us the Law of Love and Chriſtian Acquaintance rather impoſed it, to have firſt appeared in breaking this Agreement, the ſame Law prohibits to diſpute. Whether it will eaſe the Burden on my part, or no, I leave to your Ingenuity to conſider and determine; but this I may truly ſay unto you, that I have had many Thoughts from time to time ſince your departure from us, that have dearly longed after your Boſom, and would hardly have been kept from their longing till now, but by a ſtrong hand of indiſpenſable Occaſions and Employments otherwiſe. And if my Reſpects to you did not command me to entreat you the more gently in this behalf, I might truly charge upon your ſelf (in part) the occaſion of my ſilence hitherto. Your Authority, Grace, Learning, Parts, Judgment and Example have holpen to make the Stone of Separation ſo maſſy and heavy, that we are conſtrained to be at double Pains and Labour in removing and rolling it from off the Conſciences of our People. A great part of our Employment is to ſtanch the Iſſue of that Fountain of Blood, which you with ſome others of your Conformity, have opened in the Womb of our Churches here. We hoping again your Re-union with us, and return unto us, through the Power of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who is able to give you Light to comprehend your Darkneſs in thoſe things which yet lie under Diſpute between us, are willing to ſave you what Sorrow we can againſt your Return; and for this purpoſe endeavour our ſelves to make your Miſtakes as innocent as may be (in reſpect of Execution) by keeping as many as we can from ſtumbling or falling thereby. Dear Brother! that there were a Heart in us to lay our Heads together, for the finding out of ſome courſe (if poſſible) that the Sword may not always thus devour! Doubtleſs there are Waters to be digged, that would much aſſwage the Heat, if not wholly quench the Flames of theſe Contentions and Diviſions. How deeply is it to be lamented, that he by whom God hath reconciled the World unto himſelf, ſhould be made a means of dividing this reconciled World in it ſelf! The Heavens (I doubt not) will accord us; yet were it our greater Comfort and Glory, if the Earth herein might prevent the Heavens. I verily believe it would go far, and ſtrike a great Stroke in compromiſing between the Parties at variance, if the great Men and chief Leaders on both ſides could be perſwaded but to take faſt hold upon this ingenuous, free and noble Reſolution (which yet I ſuppoſe we all pretend to do) τῇ ἀληθείᾳ θύειν μᾶλλον, ἢ δουλεύειν ὑποθέσει, rather to do Sacrifice to the Truth, than to be ſervile to Suppoſitions. I know not how to open my Mouth wide enough, to ſhew you the whole Enlargement of my Heart unto you. If we ſaw the Truth clearly with you, you ſhould not reign alone; we would doubtleſs (at once) divide ſuch a Kingdom with you, and reign too. Many indeed of your Party are ready to ſay (in effect) that as it is Heaven that ſeparated you from us, ſo it is the World that ſeparates us from you: But if you have the Truth with you (which indeed if you have, at leaſt in many of your beſt-beloved Maxims, wo be to my Wits, Reaſon and Underſtanding; never poor Man ſo ſtrangely miſuſed by ſuch Friends in this World) it will never be a Debtor to ſuch Interpreters, or Agents for it. As for the World, if it be as little on that ſide the Sea, as it is on this, it will never be ſo much as a Mote in your Eye, to hinder you from ſeeing any Truth of God clearly. But as little as it is with us, we think it too great and too good to be ſacrificed upon the Service of an Error at any time (if yet thoſe that forſake us, do it not rather out of a deſire and intent to ſpare the World, than to ſacrifice it) otherwiſe, I doubt not but the Servants of God in England tread as light upon the Earth as you do in Holland; and are as ready to buy the Truth, and give as good Rates for it, as the beſt Merchants amongſt you. But however, I know that this left-handed Spirit rules much in Men of your Party, who, not content to make our Standing nought, labour much to make us worſe than our Standing: yet I make no queſtion, but your Anointing teacheth you more Chriſtian Thoughts concerning us: And if we judged it any advantage to the Truth or Cauſe we maintain againſt you, we durſt vie moral Imputations with you, and are confident that we could aſſign and ſuggeſt againſt you, both as many and as likely, indirect and fleſhly Grounds for your departure from us, as you can againſt us, for keeping our firſt Standing and Profeſſion. But the Truth will never be made great by ſuch Demonſtrations as theſe on either ſide: Sometimes the Truth is there where a Man, for many Reaſons, would think there were leaſt hope to find it: And again, many times the faireſt Overtures and pleaſingeſt Inducements will but deceive and diſappoint in this kind. And as for that kind of Truth which we enquire after, and toil in the Fire of Contention to find out, viz. Spiritual and Divine; there is no ſubſtantial or ſatisfying means for the Diſcovery of it, but by a holy, humble and impartial Conſultation with the Oracles of God about it. Yea if it be of that Species, or ſpecial kind of Divine Truth, which is not ſpread (as Manna was) upon the face of the Scriptures, but lieth low amongſt the deep things of God, 1 Cor. 2. 10. (as it ſeems the Truth in thoſe Queſtions depending between us doth) now it is not ſufficient ſimply to conſult, or ask the Scriptures concerning them; but they muſt be examined and re-examined again and again, both ſolitary and in conſort, they muſt be put home to it, and urged and preſſed cloſe together, before they will ſpeak their Mind plainly in this caſe, or deliver out any of this Treaſure: Yea in many Caſes a Man muſt be content to go to the one end of them to know what they mean in the other. Yea, (that which is much conſiderable, and I fear, much wants that which belongs to it) they may ſeem to deliver many pleaſing and plauſible Anſwers, under the Shadow whereof the Judgment and Conſcience of a Man may be much refreſhed for a ſeaſon, ſo that they may be ready to ſhout for Joy, and congratulate themſelves with his Acclamation, that cried Ἕυρηκα, Ἕυρηκα, he had found, he had found; and yet none of theſe Anſwers be the τὸ ζητούμενον, the true, direct and bottom meaning of them. As Sampſon gave Dalilah Anſwer upon Anſwer to her Queſtion or Demand, which pleas'd her for a time, carrying a plauſible Semblance and Reality of Truth in them, but ſtill her Experience diſcovered the Inſufficiency of them, and then ſhe rejected them, and would not give over till ſhe had the true Anſwer indeed; Judg. 16. 7, 8, &c. So (doubtleſs) the Scriptures may in many places to our Apprehenſions affirm many things, and deliver out many Notions of choice Approbation to us for a time, the Weakneſs and Defects whereof notwithſtanding, further Time and Experience, and a clearer Light may diſcover. Yea, there may from the very ſame Scriptures riſe up many Meanings and Interpretations before us one after another, that may be in our Eye, as Eliab Jeſſe's eldeſt Son was in Samuel's, (when he was ſent to anoint one of his Sons for King) Surely (ſaith he, looking on Eliab) the Lord's Anointed is before him: but he was yet a great way off from the Lord's Anointed; there was Eliab, and Abinadab, and Shammah, and more than as many more preſented before him, before David came in ſight, (who was the Lord's Anointed indeed) he was behind, and a great way off in the Field, and muſt be ſent for before he comes: So the anointed ſenſe and meaning of the Scriptures may be yet far off, when we perſwade our ſelves with the greateſt

Confidence, that it is before us. And as he ſaid of Benefits, multa perdenda ſunt, ut ſemel ponas benè, a Man muſt beſtow many amiſs, that he may beſtow one well: So many times a Man muſt be content, firſt to take up, and then to caſt away many Interpretations of Scripture (and thoſe ſometimes ſuch, which otherwiſe he would not willingly part with) that he may interpret at laſt as he ought to do. I make no queſtion but you have had Experience of theſe things in your ſelf more than once: For my part, I confeſs it hath been a frequent thing with me in the courſe of my Studies and Meditations, to meet with both from the Pens or Mouths of others, and from mine own Conceptions alſo, ſeveral Interpretations, which have much affected me upon the firſt greeting, yea, which for a time I have nouriſhed in my Boſom, and made Treaſure of; and yet afterwards have apparently ſeen, that ὁ θησαυρὸς, ἄνθρακες ἦσαν, my Rejoicing was not good, and by a ſtrong Hand of ſuperiour Conviction, have been compelled to call that Darkneſs, and to caſt it from me, which ſometimes I called Light, and kept cloſe unto. Wherefore I beſeech you by the tender Mercies of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, and (if it be fitting ſo to engage you) by the Glory of thoſe many Talents given unto you, the Strength whereof (methinks) ſhould work through a Napkin, and diſdain ſo weak and contemptible an Incloſure, once more to ſurvey with a ſingle, impartial, deliberate and diſingaged Eye (if you can get out, whether it be Mote or Beam, that is gotten into it) your preſent Thoughts and Apprehenſions concerning thoſe things that have removed you from off an Engliſh Table, and put you under a Holland Buſhel. Confident I am, that there is a Light beyond your Light in theſe matters, if your Eyes by long Slumber be not over-heavy to open; and that your Rods will make but the Enchanter's Serpents, which Aaron's Serpent will devour. I profeſs in the ſight of God, and in as great ſingleneſs and ſimplicity of Heart, as ever Man in this World ſpake word unto you, that I do as clearly apprehend Error and Miſtake throughout the greateſt part of your Way, as I do Truth in this Concluſion, that twice two makes four. The neceſſity of your Covenant, prolix Confeſſion of Faith, putting Men to deliver their Judgments in Points of doubtful Diſputation upon and before their Admiſſion into your Churches; the Power of the Keys, and of Ordination of Miniſters, to be the Right and Inheritance of the whole Body of the Congregation, and of every Member promiſcuouſly and indifferently; the Divine Inſtitution or peremptory Neceſſity of your Ruling Elders, the Neceſſity of Widows as of Officers in the Church; the abſolute Neceſſity of one and the ſame Government or Diſcipline in all Particulars whatſoever, in all Churches, in all Times and Places; a full and peremptory Determination of all things whatſoever, appertaining to the Worſhip of God, with divers like Poſitions (which are the very Life, Soul and Subſtance of your Way) I am at perfect Peace in my Thoughts, that you will never be able to demonſtrate or prove from the Scriptures, to any ſober-minded and conſidering Man. I am loth to over-charge you with Words and Writings. To deſire you to return, and to repair the Breach you have made upon us, I confeſs were a hard Motion, and of ſlender hope to be obtain'd, were it not made to a truly great and noble Spirit: and (cæteris paribus) the Requeſt from you to me and others with me to come over unto you, were more reaſonable, than that we ſhould deſire you to return back again unto us, becauſe you have ſuffered already (at leaſt in the Thoughts of many) under the Diſparagement of ſome Unconſtancy: and equal it is, where there is not ſome over-ruling Reaſon to the contrary, that Burdens ſhould not be doubled, but rather divided. But herein I beſeech you conſider, your Advantage is the greater, you have by this means πλείονα θυσίαν, the greater and better Sacrifice to offer upon the Service of the Truth, than we, if you can apprehend the Truth with us, and deny your ſelf the ſecond time, in turning back again unto us. And yet give me leave to ſay this unto you; tho your Reſtitution to us be one of the firſt-born of my-this-World's Wiſhes, and the day thereof would be above the reſt of the days of the Year; yet had I rather mourn over your Abſence ſtill, than bring you back again any otherwiſe than by the Hand of an Angel of Light. I reliſh no Satisfaction from any Man to any Requeſt, but what I purchaſe more by reaſoning than by requeſting. And for your part, I know, that in the Motions of this Nature, a Friend and a Feather are both alike, except Reaſon makes the difference. I have made bold upon ſome words of Encouragement from your Mouth, related unto me by Dr. P. to propound a Query unto you, concerning the Head of your Way, your Church-Covenant, with ſome Reaſons of my ſcrupling, partly the Lawfulneſs, but eſpecially the Neceſſity of your indiſpenſible Exaction thereof. If you be willing to treat with your old Friend in a way of this Commerce, I ſhall hereafter (God willing) as Health and Liberty will agree, deſire like Satisfaction from you in ſome other Particulars of your Way; but if the Motion diſlikes you, neither have I any further Pleaſure in it. If you ſhall ſuſpend your Anſwer, give me leave ſo far to pleaſe my ſelf, as to interpret your Silence, a ground of Hope, that your own coming is not far off: Or otherwiſe, if your Anſwers be too ſtrong for me, and able to remove my Mountains out of my way, they are not the Seas that ſhall keep Friends aſunder any longer: I am yours (if you care to own me). Send me over the Silver and bright-ſhining Wings of Truth, and upon theſe I come flying over to you out of hand. I would be as glad of a Bargain of Truth at any rate as another, God having taught me how to drown the World in the leaſt drop of the Water of Life. Only this I deſire may be the Law of this Diſſertation between us, that ſince the ſtrength of your Confidence in your Way is ſuch, as to break out into a Departure from us, (and I conceive double Light to be requiſite for a Separation in any kind, whereas ſingle Light ſufficeth for any Man's continuance in his Standing) you will go to work as a Prince, and not as a Beggar, and commend the Truth of what you hold and practiſe in oppoſition to us, by a high hand of pregnant and expreſs Scriptures, and not beg any thing by any looſe or faint Interpretation or Suppoſition. We look for from you, Letter for Letter, Word for Word, Tittle for Tittle, for the proof of all you maintain againſt us; and otherwiſe cannot but judg it ſomewhat hard to be ſo forſaken, only becauſe our Logick is more dull, and leſs piercing than yours. I have uſed the more liberty of Speech unto you, becauſe I know you are well able to bear it. The Queries and Objections which I offer againſt your Church-Covenant are theſe.

We doubt by what Warrant of Scripture, or otherwiſe, any Church of Chriſt can impoſe any ſuch expreſs and formal Covenant upon all thoſe that deſire Memberſhip with them, as a peremptory Condition of their Admittance, as is now generally practiſed in all your Churches. We conceive the Scripture will no where juſtify theſe Proceedings, but rather judg there is much Evil, and a manifold Inconvenience, in the urging and exacting ſuch a Covenant.

1. Confident we are (as Confidence it ſelf can make us) that there is no Command given to the Churches for exacting any ſuch Covenant of thoſe that are to be admitted into Church-Fellowſhip with them: So that we conceive any ſuch Exaction to be a meer Human Invention, and a ſtrain of that Wiſdom that deſires to exalt it ſelf not only above all that is practiſed by Men, but above that which is written by God himſelf: Yea, tho Inſtances and Examples could be produc'd of ſuch Covenant, both demanded and given, yet this may ſtand without any Warrant of Lawfulneſs, much more without the Impoſition of any Neceſſity upon Churches at this day, to make the like Demand of their intended Members; and moſt of all it may ſtand, without any Neceſſity upon Churches to make the Demand as of a Duty of abſolute Neceſſity, or as a part of the Worſhip and Service of God. Becauſe, (1.) No Example bindeth but by virtue, and in the ſtrength of ſome Commandment. And if there were any thing neceſſary to be done which is not commanded by God, then muſt there be found Weakneſs and Imperfection in his Law. Therefore to make any thing neceſſary which the Law of God maketh not neceſſary, is not to keep the Law, but (as James ſaith) to judg it. (2.) There may be Examples found of many things done by Chriſtians (yea by whole Churches) in the Primitive Times, not only lawfully, but with high and ſpecial Approbation; the doing whereof in theſe Times, is not only no ways neceſſary, but liable to much queſtion, whether lawful or convenient. The ſelling of Lands and Houſes by thoſe that were the Poſſeſſors of them, and bringing and laying the Money at the Apoſtles Feet, was practiſed (we know) in the Apoſtles times; Acts 4. 34, 35. and, as Tertullian witneſſeth, continued 200 Years together in the Church: But I know no Man now pleads for the Neceſſity of any ſuch Practice; yea, whether it would not be much inexpedient for the Goſpel (and conſequently in ſome degree unlawful) if now put in practice, a few Thoughts would ſufficiently diſcover, (3.) And laſtly, there is no queſtion to be made but that many times the Diverſification of Circumſtances and Aſpects of things in the World, and Courſe of God's Providence, have not only a lawful Power of diſſolving the binding Force and Authority of many Examples, but of ſuſpending our Obedience to many Rules, and Precepts, and Exhortations. As for Example, that kind of Salutation between Men, mentioned Gen. 27.26. 1 Sam. 20.41. and oft elſewhere, being generally left and out of uſe. Thoſe Injunctions of Paul, Rom. 16.16. 1 Cor. 16.20. and elſewhere, Greet ye one another with an holy Kiſs, impoſe no ſuch literal Tie upon the Saints in theſe days, as when they were written; neither do I conceive, nor (I ſuppoſe you) that the Elders of the Church are now bound to anoint the Sick with Oil, becauſe this is commanded, James 5.14. Neither do I conceive that the French Churches lie under any Guilt of Sin, for ſuffering their Teachers to have their Heads covered in their publick Miniſtry, notwithſtanding the Rule or Direction of Paul, 1 Cor. 11.4. Every Man praying or propheſying, having any thing on his Head, diſhonoureth his Head: becauſe that Topical Cuſtom among the Grecians, upon which Paul built this Rule or Aſſertion, is wholly diſuſed by their Nation, and the contrary generally practiſed among them. Tho I do not think this Scripture is to be reſtrained to the Teachers only, but to concern as well the whole Aſſembly of Men preſent, who are all here ſaid to pray or propheſy in a Paſſive Senſe, (as Women alſo are, v. 5.) that is, to partake of theſe Ordinances with the Teachers. Other like Inſtances might be given. And doubtleſs the Rule that Cameron gives, (who was a Man of as much Learning, Sharpneſs of Wit, and Happineſs in opening the Scripture, as any the Reformed Churches in France, yea I may ſay in any part of World, have enjoy'd of latter times) is moſt true. There Myrothec. in cap. 5. Jacobi. are many things commanded in Paul's Epiſtles whereof there is no uſe at this day, (viz. as touching the literal and preciſe Obſervation) as is that of Propheſying, 1 Cor. 14. and concerning the Habit of Women propheſying, which belong not to our Times. But concerning Propheſying, we ſhall (God willing) move ſome ſpecial Queries afterwards. And I verily believe, that one main Reaſon and grand Occaſion of all Separation from us (on that hand you are gone) is, becauſe the words of the ſacred Text fitted to particular Occaſions, and to the Condition of the Times wherein they were written, are taken and applied by ſuch Men to themſelves and others as they find them, without due reſpect had to thoſe weighty and material Differences that are between the one and the other; (as might be demonſtrated at large if it were any part of our preſent purpoſe.) In the mean ſeaſon it is evident by what hath been ſaid, that tho particular Inſtances could be produced, that the Covenant ſo much magnified, ſo indiſpenſably urged by your Churches (generally) upon their Members before their Admiſſion, yea by ſome great Maſters of your Way, defended in Writing as the very Form and Eſſence of a true Church (the Writing whereof hath gone a long time under your own Name, but of late I hear you have diſclaimed it) hath been practiſed by former Churches, and put upon thoſe that deſired Memberſhip with them, yet this is no ſufficient Ground to conclude a Neceſſity now lying upon all Churches to do the like, except there be a Precept or Command found for the doing it; no, nor yet to prove a Lawfulneſs of doing it, except all Circumſtances be clear and fair for the doing it: nay, a Precept or Command it ſelf will not evince a Neceſſity hereof, if any maſter or grand Circumſtance be now changed or altered, upon which the Precept was firſt given.

2. But yet notwithſtanding I add in the ſecond place, neither do the Scriptures afford any Inſtance or Example wherein any ſuch Covenant hath ever been demanded or exacted by any particular Church of thoſe who deſired Fellowſhip with it. But many Inſtances there are, wherein only upon a ſober Profeſſion of their Faith in Chriſt and Entertainment of the Goſpel, Men have been received into Churches without the leaſt noiſe or mention of any ſuch Covenant: Act. 2.41. They that gladly received his Word, were baptized: and the ſame day there were added (viz. to the Church) about three thouſand Souls. Some of your Judgment ſtrongly conceit that they eſpy their Covenant in thoſe words [were added;] but ſurely if they were aſſiſted by the ſame Imagination, they might as ſoon diſcover it in thoſe words, Gen. 1.1. In the beginning God made Heaven and Earth: for to any reaſonable and diſingaged Apprehenſion that word ϖροσετίθεντο, with the number of Chriſtians joined with it, only expreſſes the exceeding great Work of God in making ſo great an Enlargement or Addition to his Church in ſo ſhort a time; and doubtleſs a Man muſt get a Diſpenſation for his Underſtanding, to enable him to think or believe, that within the compaſs of half a day, or a little more at the moſt (perhaps ſomewhat leſs, for the former part of the day was well ſpent before Peter began his Sermon, and how long he continued preaching is uncertain, it ſeems he was not very brief, ver. 40.) three thouſand Perſons ſhould particularly and diſtinctly, one after another, in the ſame Place, and before the ſame Perſons, be examined and tried, take a ſolemn Covenant, repeating your Contents and Words thereof. Doubtleſs the Art and Method of ſuch Diſpatch is utterly loſt and periſhed from the World at this day: Either the Covenant they made was very brief, and but an Ace to yours, or elſe the Motion of their Tongues in ſpeaking much ſwifter than our Thoughts. You muſt favour your ſelf beyond all reaſon, in both theſe Suppoſitions, or elſe ſuppoſe your Covenant no longer here. Beſides, evident it is, that thoſe that were added to the Church, were baptized, before this is affirmed of them. Now being baptized, and that in an orderly and right way (as you will not deny) this did immediately qualify them for Church-Fellowſhip according to your own Grounds, and the Truth it ſelf; therefore they needed not the Mediation of a Covenant to make them capable hereof; ſo that you ſee an impoſſibility of any Covenant to be implied here: And if you be not relieved at this Door, there is little hope to find more Charity in this kind at others. Philip required no other Covenant or Condition of the Eunuch to qualify him for Baptiſm, and thereby to give him Entrance into the Church, but only to believe in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt with all his Heart, and to profeſs it to him, Acts 8.37. When Paul aſſayed to join himſelf with the Diſciples at Jeruſalem, the reaſon why they declined him for a time, was not becauſe they tendred a Covenant to him, and he Acts 9.26. refuſed it, but becauſe they were all afraid of him, and believed not that he was a Diſciple; implying, that had they believed this concerning him that he had been a Diſciple, i. e. a Believer, they would have received him without more ado: Yea, upon Barnabas his meer Teſtimony of him, without any Covenant ſubſcribed, Confeſſion made, or word ſpoken by himſelf, he was received, ver. 27, 28. So again, Acts 11. 24. there is mention made of many that were added or joined to the Lord, i. e. were immembred into the Church; but no more words of any ſuch Covenant as you urge, than a deaf Man may hear. If you propoſe the Paſſages of the New Teſtament further, you will deſcry many more Stars of this Conſtellation. Neither here can you have recourſe to thoſe Covenants mentioned in Old Teſtament, to pattern yours Ezr.10.3. withal; for then you fly to a Sanctuary which your ſelves have polluted, by deſtroying Nehem.9. 38, &c. all Sympathy and Agreement between a National Church, and that which you call inſtituted or particular. And beſides, to forſake the Guidance of the Spirit of God under the New Teſtament, to ſeek to make out our Thoughts by the Old, is to ask the Twilight in the Evening, whether it were light at Noon-day. Moreover, (if deſire of Brevity for the preſent did not bind my Hands) it were eaſy to demonſtrate unto you, what a ſolemn Diſagreement there is many ways between theſe Covenants and yours, and particularly in that preciſe Circumſtance which muſt have relieved you.

3. To me there is no imaginable Uſe or Neceſſity of this your Covenant, becauſe Believers willing or agreeing to live together in the ſame Body, are bound by greater Bands a thouſandfold, than any Covenant they can make between themſelves, to perform mutually all manner of Chriſtian Love, Service and Duties whatſoever. Chriſt himſelf is the greateſt of all Bands, and of all manner of Obligements and Engagements whatſoever, both to knit and hold Chriſtians together, to make them of one Heart and of one Soul, and to keep them ſo: By whom (i. e. by Chriſt) all the Body be- Eph.4.16. ing coupled and knit together, &c. And where the Scriptures ſpeak of other Bands with him and beſides him, (yet all relating to him) indearing and binding Chriſtians together as cloſe as ever their Hearts and Souls will pack, or work into one; amongſt them all your Covenant cometh not into any mention or remembrance. There is one Body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your Vocation. There is one Lord, one Faith, one Baptiſm, one God and Father of all. Surely if they had been joined and jointed together by any ſuch Covenant as you ſpeak of, and this Covenant been of Divine Inſtitution, and of that high and ſovereign Conſequence, as to give them their Life, Being and Subſtance, as a Church, or Body, the Apoſtle could not ſo far have forgotten himſelf, as not to have mention'd it amongſt its Fellows, eſpecially there being no place (that I can readily call to mind) more commodious throughout all his Writings, to have made a particular and expreſs mention hereof, than here. And for my part, I freely and ingenuouſly, and in the ſimplicity of my Heart profeſs to you, that I neither know what further or greater Duty, or Service of Love in any kind I can deſire or wiſh of thoſe my Brethren in Chriſt, upon whom the Providence of God (together with my own voluntary Election) either hath, or hereafter ſhall caſt me in Church-Fellowſhip, than what they ſtand bound by the common Band of our mutual Intereſt in the ſame God, in the ſame Lord, in the ſame Baptiſm, in the ſame Hope, to exhibit and tender, and perform unto me, without the expreſs of any ſuch Covenant made with, or unto me: Nor yet can I conceive how poſſibly I ſhould have any better, richer or ſtronger Aſſurance from them for the Performance hereof unto me, by the Virtue or Aid of any ſuch Covenant, above what I have by the Power of that Grace or Godlineſs, which (as far as I am able to judg) worketh effectually in them, and ſubjecteth them to all the ſaid Bands and Obligations: Nor, can I think, that he whoſe Strength to do Evil will ſerve him to trample under foot the Blood of the Lord Chriſt, to caſt the Commandments of the glorious God behind his Back, to betray the Hope of his own Peace and Glory, will ever be kept in a Chriſtian Compaſs towards me, by any Promiſe, Band or Covenant, of his own. I know not how to think it a Sin in me, not to deſire or exact a greater Security for my Portion in the Saints than God himſelf hath given me, and eſtabliſhed me in. If here your Anſwer be, that your Covenant reſpecteth as well every Man's Faithfulneſs towards God, as diſcharge of Duty one towards another; and therefore in this regard (at leaſt) there may be a neceſſity of it. To this I anſwer, (in few words) 1. Why is not then the unneceſſary part (at leaſt) of your Covenant (which I conceive to be the greateſt) viz. that which concerns the Covenanter's Duty towards his Fellows, ſtruck off? 2. If ſuch a Covenant as this, with or towards God, be ſo neceſſary a Duty, why is the Place of it nowhere to be found amongſt all the Commandments of God? Doubtleſs God requires it not at our Hands, to be either more provident or jealous for his Glory, than he is himſelf. 3. And laſtly, This Covenant is neither lawful before Baptiſm, nor neceſſary after; therefore the Neceſſity of it falls to the Ground, and is not defenſible. That it's not lawful before Baptiſm, is evident, becauſe it's not lawful for a Church to receive the unbaptized into Fellowſhip with them, as Members of their Body, neither is there Example or appearance of Warrant in Scripture for ſuch a thing: As evident it is, that after Baptiſm it is altogether unneceſſary, becauſe Baptiſm doth immediately qualify for Church-Fellowſhip (as hath been ſaid, your own Principles not gainſaying) and your Church it ſelf, by admitting any to her Baptiſm, ipſo facto, admits into her Fellowſhip. Therefore I add,

4. That the requiring and exacting of ſuch a Covenant of Men, and the imparting of Church-Fellowſhip upon it, I conceive to be an unchriſtian Uſurpation upon the Conſciences of Men, and a tempting of God, by laying ſuch a Burden upon his People, which he muſt give Strength (more than otherwiſe were neceſſary) to bear, or otherwiſe they muſt ſuffer (at leaſt) if not fall under it. And I believe I know ſome, worthy every ways of the Honour (according to the Line of Men) who, deſirous of Entrance into ſome of your Churches, were turned back by a diſlike of that new Door of your Covenant.

And laſtly, We conceive the exacting and giving ſuch a Covenant is not only a thing unneceſſary, and a ὑπὲρ ὃ γέγραπται, a ſomething above any thing that is written, but of worſe Inconvenience alſo (at leaſt, as many of thoſe that are engaged in it, are wont to draw and interpret the Importance thereof): For many look upon the Covenant they have made with a particular Church, as a Partition-Wall, wholly to ſeparate them in Care, Affection, Dependance, &c. upon all other Churches, and the Saints of God throughout the World; and take it for an authentical Diſcharge and Releaſe from Heaven, from troubling themſelves any ways with the Affairs of other Churches, or miniſtring unto their Neceſſities at any time. It was not much ſhort of this which a great Defender of your Faith profeſſed plainly unto me not long ſince, and that before ſome Witneſſes. Calvin well obſerves upon Rom. 16. 16. that Paul's Study and Deſire was, by his careful remembrance, and ſending the mutual Salutations of one Church to another, quantum in ſe eſt, mutuo amoris nexu devincire inter ſe omnia Chriſti Membra, as far as lay in his Power, to bind all the Members of Chriſt wheresoever in one and the ſame mutual Band and Affection together. Now if Paul herein did the Will and Commandment of God (which I cannot think you will deny) then as our Saviour charged the Scribes and Phariſees, that they made the Commandment of God of no effect (i. e. they had taken a courſe to do it, done that which directly tended thereunto) by their Tradition: So (we conceive) we may juſtly challenge your Covenant, for an ill Look or malignant Aſpect upon that part of the Will of God, wherein he deſires, that all Believers all the World over, ſhould deſire to maintain a free Intercourſe of the deareſt Love, and tendereſt Affection one towards another. The mighty God, and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, teach us how to make ſomething of nothing, and by the uſe of a miſerable, diſtracted, and broken World, to compaſs and fetch in the day of Eternity. Grace, Peace and Truth be multiplied to you and yours from the great Fountain of theſe Heavenly Treaſures.

I am,

Colemanſtreet, London,
Octob. 25. 1639.

Yours in the Lord for the greateſt Services of Chriſtian Love and Acquaintance,

JOHN GOODWIN.

To the Reverend Mr. John Goodwin.

MY antient Friend, and dear Brother in the Lord, and Work of the Lord. I received from you now about ten Weeks ſince, a Letter, together with an incloſed Confutation of the Church-Covenant (as you ſuppoſe it is) practiſed amongſt us: Your Letter is full enough of Provocation to an Anſwer, which you needed not to have ſeemed (ſo much) to doubt; and yet further to provoke unto it, and to get ground of us in it too, I hear that Copies either of your Letter, or Query, or both, as by you ſent to me, were diſperſed every-where abroad, and ſome afore the time they came to my Hand. Your Letter bears Date from you Octob. 25. I received it about the 20*th* of November; you had indeed uſed liberty of Speech enough in your Letter to me, as your ſelf excuſes it, becauſe (as you ſay) you know I am well able to bear it, yea and this alſo. And whereas now you, or at leaſt thoſe who had yours ſo long afore my ſelf, may think it high time to expect a full Anſwer, I muſt ingenuouſly tell you, what (perhaps in moſt Mens Eyes) will yet add to that Advantage you have already taken, that I do but now begin to conſider by way of Study to anſwer your Objections; you then took me in the very midſt of many other Notions upon another Subject, which both my own Heart and Promiſes had ingaged me in: And truly I reſolved that this of yours ſhould not take me off (notwithſtanding all thoſe Urgencies) until I had quitted my ſelf of that which hath ſo much took up my Thoughts, that (God knows) I have not caſt a Thought (more than what aroſe in the very firſt reading of it) upon this of yours: And beſides other Reaſons for this, I thought it a little unnatural to extrude what I was then a going with, or to entertain any other Conception that might weaken or abortive it, and I have not Strength enough to go with two together: But now that I am delivered of that Burden, I ſhall, as Health, and many other Miniſterial Labours (which my Heart is much more in) will permit, apply my ſelf (through Chriſt) to ſatisfy you in this, and I long and am ſtraitned till I have accompliſhed it. But now I muſt further tell you to your greater Advantage ſtill for the preſent, that I foreſee the true and right ſtating this one particular Query, which you have ſingled out of the Drove as the weakeſt (which you thought to hunt and purſue to death) together with the clearing of it acording to your Mind, will neceſſarily require yet a longer time than happily may be expected: It was wiſely done to begin to ſet down firſt before this ſmall Fort, which being thus ſingly ſet upon, and alone, you made account to carry with an eaſy and glorious Conqueſt; for indeed it lies ſomewhat high and remotely up in the Regions of thoſe other Fundamental Opinions about Church-Fellowſhip wherein we differ from you; ſo as to ſpeak Truth, I cannot ſo fairly come at you to raiſe your Siege, until I have forced you to give up Truths of greater moment, which when I ſhall have done, this about a Church-Covenant ſhall fall into our Hands again with few or no Blows. I could for the preſent make out an Anſwer ſufficient to your Arguments (as in your Diſcourſe you will needs ſtate the Queſtion) by nothing but a bare relation of what is our common Practice and Judgment here at Arnheym in this Particular, which had you informed your ſelf of afore you fell upon us, I am confident you would never have begun the Quarrel with us here, and have made this the great Seat of the War. For as to the putting any to deliver their Judgments in Points of doubtful Diſputations, upon and before Admiſſion into our Church (I ſpeak it in the words of the Charge in the Letter, and by ſome Expreſſions in the Arguments, I perceive it one Ground of this Quarrel, ſuppoſing that this is the manner of our Covenant;) we know not what you mean. Look what Knowledg and Light agreeing with ours, any one voluntarily holds forth, we take and hear with rejoicing in the Unanimity: But profeſs in rigor, to exact no more Aſſent and Light (I ſpeak in Matters of Church-Fellowſhip) than of being convinced, that Church-Fellowſhip is an Ordinance of Chriſt for Saints to enjoy other Ordinances in together, which is no more than what is eſſentially and abſolutely neceſſary to that very Act of joining in it, and is in effect to profeſs they underſtand what they are about to do, that ſo we may be ſure that a Name and Ordinance of God, is not taken in vain by them. And for any ſuch Covenant (which you blame “ ſo for length, that the Apoſtles their Diſpatch was but an Ace to this Covenant of “ ours, and for Tyranny as unchriſtian Uſurpation upon the Conſciences of Men, and “ a tempting of God by laying ſuch a Burden upon his People. And for Schiſm, you “ would accuſe it as a Partition-Wall wholly to ſeparate Men in Care, Affection, De-“ pendance upon all other Churches and Saints of God throughout the World) it is no more with us than this, an Aſſent and Reſolution profeſſed (by them to be admitted by us) with Promiſe to walk in all thoſe Ways pertaining to this Fellowſhip, ſo far as they ſhall be revealed to them in the Goſpel: Thus briefly, indefinitely, and implicitly, and in ſuch like words, and no more or othewiſe do we apply our ſelves to Mens Conſciences, not obtruding the mention of any one Particular upon them before or in Admiſſion, but wholly leaving before and after, their Spirits free to the Entertainment of the Light that ſhines, or ſhall ſhine, both to them and us out of the Word, and unto the ſweet Guidance of the holy Spirit of Chriſt, to lead both them and us into all Truth, without either our haling or driving them. Indeed we that are to admit, do it upon a Conviction and Perſwaſion of the Party's true Grace, ſomeway made forth viſible to us: And we think any Chriſtian Man may bluſh to name (now under the New Teſtament, when Types and Shadows are fled away, and the Body of the Truth is come) a Body, and Church, and Members of Chriſt our Head, and not mean Saints, and by Saints underſtand at leaſt ſuch as by the Rules of the Word given by God himſelf, to judg others by, are viſible Saints: And we find Confeſſion with the Mouth of the Work of Faith in the Heart, a Means among other ſanctified by God to make any ones Grace evident and viſible to others, and the Judgment we make hereupon to admit our Members, is no other, nor more rigorous, than what the Word holds forth as meet for us to judg of others by, and but ſuch as I know your Conſcience carries about with you, and which you can never loſe, and which as occaſion is given, you do uſe to judg of the Differences of Men by; and we know that in us it is righteous Judgment, being ſquared by the Rule given us, altho it is not infallible Judgment; for Men may deceive us in our Applications of it. Thus we do and have practiſed, and this is all for matter of Covenant, or Confeſſion in uſe with us, and that from the beginning. And thus much in effect you grant, or ſeem to grant, whilſt about Confeſſion in the beginning of the ſecond Argument you uſe theſe words; “ Many Inſtances there “ are, wherein only (ſay you) upon a ſober Profeſſion of their Faith in Chriſt, and “ Entertainment of the Goſpel, Men have been received into Churches, ſpeaking of Scripture-Inſtances in the Apoſtles times. And in the beginning of the third Argument you add theſe words, Believers, willing and agreeing to live together in the ſame Body with you, afterwards inſtancing in your own, you do call Church-Fellowſhip. Well, let them be Believers, willing and deſirous upon Knowledg of each other to be ſuch upon a Profeſſion of their Faith, and alſo what this Fellowſhip is: and let them withal but agree, by mutual Conſent and Aſſent expreſſed to each other (or how elſe do they agree to live together in a Fellowſhip and Body?) ſo to live in that Relation, and all the Duties, and you and I are agreed: and now ſuppoſe unto this agreeing of yours, we join Covenanting and Promiſe, yet ſtill but with thoſe indefinite Expreſſions mentioned, aſſuredly whatever you and I mutually agree to do, if it be a matter of Moment, we may as well and as lawfully promiſe and covenant to do: And therein what do we more than tie a double Knot where you tie a ſingle one? And yet that you and I may ſtill agree, if you or any Believer comes to be admitted among us, upon the Terms aforeſaid, and did ſcruple the word Covenant and Promiſe, we would take your ſingle Agreement without ſuch double Security: And this Knot and Band, this firmly by a Covenant made to tie us among our ſelves to the Duties of this Relation, is yet ſo far from being a Wall of Partition (as you would fain charge both us and it) from all Saints and Churches elſe, whom we love, pray for, hold Communion with, and honour as the Spouſe and Churches of Chriſt, and yours alſo (only give us leave to have our Churches not ſeparated, divided, tho in ſome things differing from yours, which therefore we could not be permitted to enjoy in our own Land): It is ſo far, I ſay, from being a Wall of Separation from all others, that we count it not indiſſoluble among our ſelves, (as that of Marriage is) but only obliging us to live together in this Fellowſhip, and the Duties of it as becometh Saints, whilſt you are caſt to live together as Men by your outward Calling and Conditions. Which Cohabitation, the firſt, tho remoteſt Ground of Church-Fellowſhip, and almoſt of all Fellowſhip elſe, wherein, if Providence maketh any Alteration, requiring a juſt remove, they may lawfully ſeek, and we do willingly grant a Diſmiſſion from us to any other Church, notwithſtanding this our Covenant, obliging us to this particular Fellowſhip; but whilſt we live together, a Covenant, and that made afore God, and an Oath unto God, are both and alike Ordinances, which may warrantably be uſed in all Affairs Human and Divine, wherein there paſſeth mutuus Compactus, a mutual Agreement between Men, or any ſpecial Relation made up among Men by Agreement. Thus if you marry, you make a ſolemn Covenant of it, to perform the Duties of that Relation: If you enter into any new League, even of Friendſhip, you may bind it by a Covenant, as did Jonathan and David; thus to be admitted into any Body or Polity Civil, Men make not only a Covenant, but do often add thereto an Oath, and ſuch is called the Covenant of God, as that of Marriage; and the Oath of God, as that between Prince and People in a Common-wealth. Now if this Church-Fellowſhip be a Body, and that to be entred into by Believers agreeing to live in the ſame Body, as your Words and the Truth expreſs, and ſuch a Body as ſuperadds any thing of a ſpecial Relation mutual between each other of that Church, more than that more common Communion, and Relation of, and unto all Saints in the Church Catholick, (and if it did not ſo, there were no need of any ſuch Act of Agreement to live in the ſame Body; for they were Members of the Catholick Church without it, and before it) Why then ſhould not ſuch a Covenant, and the Uſe and Benefit of it, be allowed to this Body, and ſpecial Relation of Church-Fellowſhip, to form up and knit faſt the Agreement of it, as is common to all Bodies and Societies, and particular Relations made up in the World? Not any of which you can well make up, or not ſo well without a Covenant, or at leaſt an Agreement, and that paſſed by way of Words mutually expreſſing Conſent, and muſt needs be confeſſed moſt ſuting with, and neareſt to the very Dictate of Nature, whilſt theſe Societies ſhall be made up of Men, to whom, to that very end that they might be ſociable, their Speech was given them; and ſo this comes to be argued not barely from the faint Illuſtration of a lifeleſs and lame Similitude and Reſemblance, but from the true and real Analogy and like Intereſt and Correſpondence with the Nature of the thing it ſelf; which this Divine Society, Body and Relation of Men doth in common hold and retain in this common Bond of all ſuch Societies, for their making up, namely, an Agreement expreſſed in Words, and a ſolemn Covenant, and this Jure naturali, even by a Right which both God and the Nature of the thing it ſelf hath endued it withal.

Firſt, Nature doth evince it, the Laws and Rules of which doth run along with, and are alike common to things ſpiritual and human, ſo far as both are ſaid to agree in one common Nature together: For as when God made ſpeaking to Men in a publick Aſſembly (as that of Preaching and Propheſying) a ſacred Ordinance, inſtantly did all the Laws of Nature and right Reaſon, that ſeem to regulate and covenantly concur to all orderly Speeches and Orations of Men in publick Aſſemblies made, fall upon this Ordinance alſo, as to ſpeak aloud, not to ſpeak in an unknown or ſtrange Tongue which the Aſſemblies underſtand not, not to ſpeak confuſedly two or three at once, but one by one: Even ſo when God made this Fellowſhip of Saints, and this ſpecial Relation of a few in a Church-Fellowſhip and Ordinance, inſtantly doth this of making up this Relation by a joint Agreement, and conſtantly expreſt in Words, preſent it ſelf as the natural and common way of knitting all ſorts of Men together in all other Relations elſe in the World.

Secondly, God hath ordained it: for if God hath thus lent in common (as we may ſo ſpeak) a ſolemn Covenant as before himſelf made, unto all other Relations and Societies of any importance unto Mankind, which, when in ſuch Civil Affairs uſed, is to be eſteemed ſacred, and an Ordinance of God, a Covenant of God (as was ſaid) and an Oath with God; hath he not with that ſame Breath much more allotted and allowed the Practice of ſuch a Covenant to have place in the Obligation of this Divine Society and Relation, which is it ſelf an Ordinance, and ſo of the two the more proper Element for ſuch a holy Covenant? ſo as this is ſo far from being an ὑπὲρ ὃ γέγραπται, any thing above what is written (as you ſpeak of it) that it rather comes within the compaſs of the Apoſtles χρειαν ἔχετε γραφειν, yea indeed which needed not at all to have been written: For (as he then ſpeaks of Love) ye are taught it of God, in a Law of Nature ſpiritualized; who alſo hath fully, roundly taught us to acknowledg, if we be ſpiritual, yea but reaſonable, ſuch Dictates of Nature and right Reaſon, in things wherein Divine Ordinances and Humane do alike partake in common, to be no leſs than the Commands of God; for of ſuch like Rules (even the ſame we but now inſtanced in) doth the Apoſtle there ſpeak. Nor yet is this Covenant the renewing that ſolemn general Covenant of Grace entred into at Converſion, where the Sacraments of Baptiſm and the Lord's-Supper are the Seals which you mention as Band ſufficient; but this Covenant is but a particular Covenant, and ſo a Branch of that general one, and but to oblige unto the Duties more properly and ſpecially pertaining unto this Fellowſhip, though all this in the virtue of the general Covenant. And therefore altho (as you ſay truly) the common Band of our mutual Intereſt in the ſame God, in the ſame Baptiſm, &c. do bind us to all thoſe Duties, yet that hinders not a ſpecial particular Covenant to be made upon ſome ſpecial Duties upon various occaſions; even as particular Leaſes and Compacts uſed to be made out of ſome general Charter: For Example, Baptiſm, and all thoſe common Intereſts in the ſame Lord, &c. do oblige Man and Wife, Maſter and Servant, Friend and Friend, and alſo Societies unto all the Duties belonging unto theſe ſeveral Relations, as they are laid down in the Word; and yet particular and ſolemn Covenants do and may paſs between Men for the Performance of all theſe; or (to take your own Inſtance, which in your third Argument you have uſed) for the confirming thoſe Duties and Services of Love to be performed towards your ſelf by thoſe our Brethren in Chriſt, upon whom the Providence of God, together with your own voluntary Election, either here or hereafter, ſhall caſt you into Church-Fellowſhip with. To maintain Miniſters for their Labour and Work of the Miniſtry, is (to go on to uſe your own words) one Duty and Service of Love, to which they ſtand bound by the common Band of their mutual Intereſt in the ſame God, in the ſame Baptiſm, in the ſame Hope, to exhibit, tender, and perform unto you, and which you may expect from the Power of Grace which worketh effectually in them, and ſubjecteth them to all the ſame Bonds and Obligations; and yet I believe you did, at leaſt you might, expreſly have covenanted with them that they ſhould perform it, and yet what's this but a Duty and a Branch of Church-Fellowſhip, you have a Statute for in the New Teſtament? And doth not the like Reaſon hold for all other Duties of that whole Fellowſhip? And of this ſort were thoſe Covenants, which beſides the Obligation of the general Covenant in the Law in Horeb, and in Circumciſion were made of old by the People of God the Jews, namely, ſpecial Covenants upon ſpecial occaſions made to engage them more expreſly unto ſome ſpecial Duties unto God, or one another, whereof two Inſtances you cite, but withal do ſhut the Doors of thoſe Sanctuaries upon us, if we ſhould thither fly for Refuge by alledging the Forfeiture of our Privilege therein, “Our ſelves having (as you ſpeak) polluted them by deſtroying all Sympathy and Agreement between a National Church, “ and that which we call Inſtituted or Particular. But we affirm with all Orthodox Divines, that all the moral Equity of theſe Covenants, do ſtill hold under the New Teſtament as much as ever, as all things that were moral under the Covenant alſo do, as a ſeventh-day-Sabbath, Infant-Baptiſm, &c. And the Miniſters Maintenance is argued from that of not muzling the Oxes Mouth: And we have deſtroyed only that Sympathy, with what was but typical then, which part of this Sanctuary God himſelf both polluted and abandoned, whilſt we deny thoſe wonted Arguments drawn from the Mould and Pattern of the National Church then, and from the univerſal mixture of all Iſrael therein, to prove the like now in any whole National Church in the World: And we affirm the Dedication of all that People to be a holy Nation, and a Kingdom of Prieſts, and ſo generally to be Members of that Church, to be done but in a Type and Shadow, as moſt things elſe were, altho a real Holineſs was commanded then as now, and required by God of all then, as now; as were their Temples alſo Types of that Royal Nation, and true Prieſthood, and living Stones of Saints in Truth, and viſibly ſuch in reality, (as Peter expoundeth it) of whom alone a particular Church, the only inſtituted Church we can find mentioned in the New Teſtament ſucceeding that National, is to conſiſt, as the only Truth and Reality of that Type. And as God made Perſons and Actions unclean in the Type, that morally were not unclean; ſo on the contrary, in the like Type all the Nation holy, who yet morally were neither ſuch, nor by the Saints in thoſe times were judged ſuch; but the moral part of this Sanctuary (which is ſtill to continue) your ſelf ſhall defile and deſtroy, if you either affirm the ground of making thoſe ſpecial Covenants, not to have been moral, or being moral, not to hold for Paſtors for a Church or Society, or Society of Men together, to enter into the like now. But I reſolved not to write a Scripture (which yet confirms all this) but do now only leave you unto your own Reaſon ſpiritualized to anſwer you out of what hath been ſaid, in all that is materially objected by you, yea even to that ſame Reaſon that tells you that twice two is four, as your ſelf ſpeaks of, there appearing ſo clearly Error in the greateſt part of your whole Way. And now you know both our Judgments and Practice, (altho the Difference between you and us in this Particular can prove but ſmall) to have anſwered all the material things in the Query, ſo far as they relate unto this Covenant, would be but an eaſy and no long Work; yet for their ſakes to whom you have made this Challenge againſt our whole Church-Fellowſhip ſo publick, and endeavoured to make as odious as publick (who yet are ignorant of it) I ſhall, God willing, put my ſelf to further Pains, yet to ſhow more largely the Foundation of our Church-work, and ſo of this Practice; and in doing this I ſhall take the larger Compaſs, and require the more time, becauſe I ſee you will not allow me ſo much as a Stick or a Stone unto this Building, yea, I am to fight for the very Ground I am to build upon; for notwithſtanding what I have took hold of in your Diſcovery as granted by you, yet I cannot aſſure my ſelf of any one Principle from you about Church-Fellowſhip, but that there is a Catholick Church, and a Communion of Saints in the Creed, which we all acknowledged; for otherwiſe when we ſpake of a particular Inſtituted Church, you ſeem to make it a Matter of our making, and not as of God's Inſtitution: And beſides, if I ſhould go about to beg any one of theſe Principles, even the loweſt about a Particular Church, I know not what, nor indeed how large I may be denied. You have enacted a ſupream Law (as you call it) againſt all ſuch Beggars in this Diſſertation; and if the Foundation ſhould be denied, what can we do till we have eſtabliſhed them? I am reſolved therefore, and muſt be at the more Pains, and expence of Time (who yet am able to take but little Pains in much time) to ſatisfy and make good as I go along all thoſe Principles which you ſlight as looſe and faint Suppoſitions: And therein I have but one Requeſt to make to you, and by you to make to others, to whom you have made your Letter and Objections ſo common; Let not this my taking a longer day, add one Hair to the Stature of your Confidence (which is full high and tall enough already in any Man's view, even in the very firſt words of your Arguments) neither unto your own, or any of their Opinions of the Strength of theſe their Arguments. But above all, I beſeech you not to draw ſo hard a Conſequence from the Suſpenſion of a more full Anſwer, as to expect me ſooner with you than an Anſwer; for I aſſure you, did not the Merit of the Cauſe it ſelf, and the Condition of it (not being underſtood by moſt) require it, that Men may come to a right underſtanding of us, I ſhould not have needed any more time for the clearing of any Scruple or Doubt, which all this your Diſcourſe had any way begotten in my own Reaſon or Conſcience, than ſimply when I was a reading it firſt over. And in this my Anſwer I ſhall not go about to contend with you, either in Rhetorick, or Subtilty of anſwering, but in Solidity and Faithfulneſs through the Grace of Chriſt. To ſay I ſhall ſo anſwer thus or thus ſoon, I make account is but the Credit of the Anſwer (which I have learned not to ſtrive with you about) but to give you (as you ſee) all the fair Advantages, but to anſwer you with words of Truth and Soberneſs, that may (through Chriſt) convince you and others, ſhall be my only Aim; and then I know, altho I ſhould be long in doing of it, yet Delays and Charges will therein be paid with Intereſt and Advantage unto the Cauſe and Truth, which I expect more than what I am elſe in this World; neither yet will I undertake to anſwer you as you expect, Letter for Letter, Tittle for Tittle, Word for Word, in ſome things in your Letter; I know ſuch Retortions are affixable to any Perſon or Cauſe, and never decided Controverſies; much leſs will I begin to vie moral Imputations with you, no, though you ſhould begin, and we fear not what you can beſide: but my Endeavours ſhall be to return you Matter for Matter, and in that Buſineſs alone through Chriſt that ſtrengthens me, to give you Meaſure for Meaſure preſſed down and running over; and withal, which ſhall be unto me the ſupream Law of this Diſſertation, to give a new Conſideration to every Grain that addeth Weight in any thing you ſay; yea and re-cal and retract alſo whatever I ſhall find that we are out in: And this kind of Inconſtancy, however you would blemiſh me for, yet I count one of the greateſt Perfections of us imperfect Men, imperfect in Knowledg here below. And all this I ſhall do with the greateſt Candor and Simplicity, and which ſhall alſo be ſacred to me along this Diſpute, ſo to handle Matters, as to be ſure to part good Friends: And in the mean time let this be laid up in your Boſom, to ſweeten theſe Waters of Strife between us, viz. an Aſſurance from me, that you ſtill hold in my Heart as high and full Eſteem of ſo great Worth, Learning and Piety as ever you did, and how much you did, your ſelf knows and many others; and withal that I retain as candid a Judgment of the Truth of your Church-ſtate and Calling in the Miniſtry for the Eſſentials of it, as is in any of your beſt Hearers: account but of me as the Servant of Chriſt, the unworthieſt, and one of

Your moſt faithful loving Friends,

THO. GOODWIN.

TWO

TWO LETTERS
OF THE AUTHOR, TO THE
Reverend Mr. ROBERT ASTY of Norwich,
CONCERNING
The Equal Authority and Power of Paſtor and Teacher in a Church.

The Firſt LETTER.

Reverend Sir;

I See you are preſſed in your Spirit (and it may be from the Lord) to ſeek my Judgment in the caſe of your accepting or not accepting your Call at Norwich to the Miniſtry. I perceive you have given up your ſelf to ſerve Chriſt in the way of Preaching, with good and ſincere Intention, and you do only doubt, by reaſon of the ſenſe of your own Inability, whether you ſhould accept of a fixed Place of Office to be added to that of Preaching without it. To this Caſe thus ſtated, I give, according to my preſent poor Judgment, two Anſwers; The firſt is, that the great ſenſe of your own Inability, tho, as conſidered in it ſelf, it may deter you, yet that you have this deep ſenſe before-hand, ought to be a great Encouragement to you, that God hath given you ſuch a Spirit. As in the caſe of Profeſſion of Religion, the Fears of falling away, and not being able to do any thing as we ought (and twenty ſuch Diſcouragements) ought not, nor do they finally keep any that are ſincere from their Profeſſion of Religion: But (as ſaith one) the Power and Aſſiſtance of Chriſt they are to live upon for enabling them. Parallel to this, whether you ſhould be a Chriſtian or no, is whether you ſhould be a Miniſter or no. Senſibleneſs of our Inſufficiency is a Character of ſuch a frame of Spirit, as above all fits a Man for the Miniſtry: For who is ſufficient for theſe things as of our ſelves? and wherein you are weak, you ſhall find your ſelf ſtrong through the Power of Chriſt that reſts upon you; for Sufficiency is of God, and we are not able to think a good Thought of our ſelves. And with theſe Apprehenſions did Paul both enter into the Miniſtry, and was carried on in it. And as for your Apprehenſions of your Gifts for the Miniſtry, and Fitneſs for that Work, you are to take the Judgment of a Church (that have been uſed to Men of Gifts and great Gifts) now in chooſing of you, and that as by the Holy Ghoſt: For it is the Holy Ghoſt who makes Overſeers over the Church. Therefore the Church's Choice, and the Promiſe, that in what God calls a Man to, he will not leave him nor forſake him, may be ſufficient Satisfaction to you. And then beſides, There is a ſpecial Bleſſing will accompany a Man in an Office (through the Grace of God) more than doth in his ordinary Preaching without Office. I uſe to ſay the Loadſtone doth draw, but eſpecially if it be ſet in Steel, 1 Cor. 12. 28. 1 Tim. 3. 15. Sir, I ſhould adviſe this concerning him that is to be joined with you in Office, endeavour to obſerve by all ways you can his Temper of Spirit, not as to Religion (I ſuppoſe Sincerity and Ability to be in him) but as to his Carriage, his natural Temper; there are oftentimes very great Burdens upon Mens Spirits that are yoked together, and Breaches from Unſutableneſs of Spirit do often fall out unto ſad Events in Churches. [The Man is utterly a Stranger to me.] You know the ſad Events between Paul and Barnabas, there was a ſelfiſhneſs in Barnabas to have Mark go with them; he was his Siſter's Son, and tho Barnabas was a good Man, an Apoſtle, yet he ſtuck unto this ſelfiſh end ſo much, he was ſo pertinacious in it, that it cauſed a Breach to part, and they never met again that we read of, and Paul was in the right. I heard ſince you wrote to me, as if there were ſome Diſcouragements that you have beſides them that you wrote, which I muſt leave wholly to your ſelf. But if you be yoked with your own Conſent, you are irrevocable; but yet you are free as to your own Conſent, and you have as great a Freedom on your part to accept or not, as the Church had of chooſing on their part.

For your other Query, of the Equality or Inequality of Power of the Office of a Paſtor and a Teacher, and of their Adminiſtrations wherein they differ: For the firſt, I know no difference of Superiority, and the Apoſtle condemned it in Diotrephes, 3 Joh. v. 9. of one above the other, they are Propheſying Elders both: Epheſ. 4. 11. Some Paſtors and Teachers, they are yoked together alike, whereas the former are ſingle; ſome Apoſtles, and ſome Prophets, and ſome Evangeliſts. Theſe being extraordinary Miniſters they may admit Subordination, as an Evangeliſt was under and lower than the Office of an Apoſtle; but theſe two are yoked together in one, Some Paſtors and Teachers. They that labour in the Word and Doctrine are to have double Honour alike, there is not a third Honour to be given to one above the other. The 65th and 66th Chapters of Iſaiah are Promiſes of the laſt and beſt Times of the Goſpel, which ver. 22. ſhows ſufficiently, and their Worſhip is ſpoken in ver. 23. their Officers in the 21*th*, whereof there were two ſorts in general, Prieſts and Levites; the Levites were thoſe that helped about Sacrifices, and were under the Prieſts, but the Prieſts were equal: and who are the Prieſts but thoſe whoſe Lips preſerve Knowledg? for the Subſtance of their Office, they were co-ordinate Officers, not ſubordinate, as the Levites to the Prieſts. Anſwerably in Rom. 12. where the Officers of a Church are ſet out at the 6th Verſe, and ſo on to the 9th, he ſays, having then Gifts differing according to the Grace that is given us, for Miniſterial Gifts and Offices are always ſuted, and then he divides them firſt into two Generals: 1. Prophecy. 2. Miniſtry. He ſpeaks of ordinary Officers: thoſe that are to propheſy have to do with Matters of Faith; Let us propheſy according to the proportion of Faith given us: or Miniſtry, Let us wait on our Miniſtry. Then he comes to ſubdivide theſe into theſe Particulars; Firſt, he that teacheth, to attend on Teaching, as upon an Office; he that exhorteth on Exhortation: thoſe are the Particulars belonging to Prophecy: And as Paſtor is ſet before Teacher in the Epheſians, here Teacher is ſet before Paſtor; ſo that comparing one with another I make them equal with thoſe Offices that belong to the Miniſtry. The other Generals are three, as it follows, and are lower and under, he that giveth, and he that ruleth, and that ſheweth Mercy; you may ſee this opened at large by Mr. Cotton in the Way of the Churches of New-England: this for the Equality; only I ſay this, as to the higheſt of their Work, which is the Word and Prayer, they are both equal.

For the ſecond; for the difference in their Adminiſtrations this is one Principle with me, that the Diſtinction of Officers ariſes from the Diſtinction of Gifts God doth give unto Men fitted for Office, and I found it upon 1 Cor. 12. 4, 5, 6. There are diverſities of Gifts, but the ſame Spirit. And there are differences of Adminiſtrations, but the ſame Lord: and there are diverſities of Operations, Succeſſes of God's working upon Mens Hearts, that is, from God the Father. All three Perſons are intereſted in the Miniſtry, as well as in our Salvation. The Gifts are what the Holy Ghoſt gives, and endows a Man habitually withal, and they are divers: The Adminiſtrations are Offices appointed by the Lord Chriſt the great Shepherd, and there are differences of Adminiſtrations, ſuted for the difference of Exerciſe of Gifts. And thirdly, the Succeſs is from God the Father, who is the God of all Grace, and the Founder of all, as the 6th Verſe has it. Now the diverſity of Gifts for Teacher and for Paſtor are as apparent, and that before called to Office, which is ſuted to theſe diverſities of Gifts, habitually given by the Holy Ghoſt, as Jeſus Chriſt appointed Offices: and happy is the Man that is a Miniſter, that is called to that kind of Office which his Gifts ſutes, for then they will run in a more natural Channel. The diverſity of Gifts by the Holy Ghoſt doth appear. Some more comparatively have a powerful way of exhorting, perſwading, working upon the Affections, and abound in Uſes: Others have a Gift of handling things in a Doctrinal way, to open and fetch out the true meaning and ſenſe of Scripture, which often needs an Acuteneſs to find out, and to give Reaſons for the Proof of a thing; an Ability to anſwer Objections and untie Knots, have a good Judgment in Controverſies, yet both may have Ability either way, but with a Diſproportion one more than the other: anſwerably in that Rom. 12. of the Propheſying Officers, one is an Exhorter, to bend himſelf to Exhortation, and Exhortation is put for Comfort, and for like Reaſon for Reproof, and for what is directly practical. And the Teacher he has Ability to eſtabliſh Mens Hearts in Truth, and they are to bend themſelves accordingly: He that exhorteth on Exhortation; He that teacheth on Teaching, 1 Cor. 12. 8. To one is given Wiſdom, to another Knowledg by the ſame Spirit; theſe are meant plainly of ordinary Gifts. That which follows in the 9th Verſe is Healing, and thoſe that are extraordinary. Thus alſo that place in Timothy is underſtood by ſome of Preaching Officers, that are worthy of double Honour, that labour in the Word, that is of Exhortation, and that labour in Doctrine: and ſome have fetch'd the Difference to be ſet out by that Scheme of a Church in Rev. 4. of the four Beaſts, the fourth was like an Eagle, that has an Eagle's Eye into Truths, &c.

Thus, Sir, I have given you my Thoughts that I have at preſent (for my Notes about Church-Government at preſent are not with me, being I am removing); with my Love remembred to you, and Prayers to guide you, I reſt

London, March the 25th, 1675.

Your very affectionate Friend and Brother in Chriſt,

THO. GOODWIN.

The Second LETTER.

Reverend Sir;

I Received your important Letter about two Months ſince, which was time enough to have anſwered it if opportunity had ſerved, but truly I have been weak and ſickiſh ever ſince, and my Eyes fail me that I cannot write my ſelf ſo much as to ſet down my own Thoughts and private Studies; and beſides, I did ſuppoſe that you had the Strength of what I could ſay in that Letter I wrote you by Mr. Berman, which your ſelf ſays in your laſt, ſatisfied you ſo much, that I thought I needed to write no more, or if I did, I ſhould but fall into the ſame Thoughts again: but you having now reviv'd it in your Letters to the Elders in general, and therein required my Cognizance, I ſtrain my ſelf to write again.

This Controverſy about the Authority and Power of Paſtor and Teacher, was firſt ſtarted among the Browniſt Churches in Holland, by Francis Johnſon one of the rigid Separation, who out of the Old Teſtament went about to prove the Government by Paſtors and Teachers under the New to be conformed to the Analogy of the Old, and ſo to make a Paſtor in a Congregational Church to be as a High Prieſt; but as I remember it took not with his Brethren. This Book I have either loſt, or it was burnt in the Fire of London, elſe I would ſend it you.

The Arguments in my preſent Thoughts to prove that the Paſtor and Teacher are equal in Power (which is the particular Point of which you enquire) are ſuch as theſe.

1. The firſt is taken from what the Apoſtle ſays (1 *Cor.*4.1.) Let a Man ſo account of us, as of the Miniſters of Chriſt, and Stewards of the Myſteries of God. 1. He ſpeaks it of the Preaching Elders of the New Teſtament, the ordinary Miniſters of the Word. 2. He ſpeaks what Eſteem they are to have according to their Order and Rank, from all Men, and then much more from the Church over which they are placed. 3. He ſpeaks univerſally of all ſuch as are the Miniſters to ſuch Churches; Let a Man ſo account of us, &c.

Now their Office in common to them all is to be Stewards of Chriſt, and of the Myſteries of God, whereby the Sacraments are eſpecially intended as well as the Diſpenſation of the Word and Prayer: For the Sacraments are in a figurative Signification the Perſon of Chriſt himſelf, and in a ſpecial manner Myſteries; and the Antients did uſually and generally term them Myſteries: and accordingly that place Epheſ. 5. 32. This is a great Myſtery, is interpreted by them a great Sacrament; and thereupon the Papiſts, who are the great Pretenders to Antiquity, have made Marriage a Sacrament to this day; but that Scripture is genuinely meant of Chriſt and his Church, as appears by the words ſpoken after.

2. When our Saviour Chriſt did inſtitute the new Miniſtry of the Goſpel in the room of the old, he firſt choſe twelve Apoſtles, who were the extraordinary Miniſters of the New Teſtament; and beſides thoſe he ſent out ſeventy Diſciples to preach the Goſpel, and ſent them out two by two, one having like Authority and Equality with the other: and theſe are, as Biſhop Andrews doth interpret it rightly, the ſtanding ordinary Miniſters of Congregations.

3. When Chriſt at laſt afore his Aſcenſion, gave Authority to go preach the Goſpel, and teach all Nations with the ſame Breath, he gives them Authority to adminiſter the Sacraments, Go and baptize as well as preach the Word. The Commiſſion was for the Sacraments and Word together, and for one Sacrament as well as another, ſo as the Adminiſtration of theſe are of like extent, as occaſion is: and correſpondently to this the Apoſtle Paul (Epheſ. 4. 10, 11.) confirms it, When he aſcended up on high (ſays he) and gave Gifts unto Men, he gave ſome Apoſtles, and ſome Prophets, and ſome Evangeliſts. Theſe are extraordinary Miniſters in thoſe times of differing Degrees and Order each particular of them, and therefore each particular is diſtinguiſhed by the word ſome. And then he ſpecifies the ordinary ſtanding Miniſters that were to continue in all Ages to the end of the World, Paſtors and Teachers, about whom the preſent Queſtion is. Now obſerve the difference he puts. Indeed the word ſome is ſet before Paſtors and Teachers, to diſtinguiſh them from the extraordinary he had ſpoke of afore, and to ſhew they were of another Rank than the former: But obſerve again, that he puts no ſuch difference between the Paſtors and Teachers, he doth not ſay, ſome Paſtors, and ſome Teachers. He doth not place the word ſome afore each, as he had done afore, but ſays only Paſtors and Teachers, to ſhew they are of equal Commiſſion and Rank.

See Ainſworth's Diſcourſe on the Miniſtry in 4°.

4. I might here add that grand Record (Rom. 12.) which the Apoſtle Paul left behind him, on purpoſe as it were to check the Pride of the Church of Rome (which the Holy Ghoſt foreſaw would be the Miſtreſs of Miſrule) and to prevent that Diſorder of Officers in the Church riſing unto that Grandure (to which the Roman Clergy have aſcended) of Thrones and Dominions, &c. and to depreſs and ſuppreſs all ſuch Attempts in thoſe Officers. The Holy Ghoſt left a Scheme of thoſe ſeveral Officers and Works of them; firſt dividing their Functions into two Heads, (ver. 6, 7.) Prophecy and Miniſtry; and then ſubdividing them into Particulars, That he who teacheth ſhould wait on teaching, (ver. 7.) There is one Preaching Elder, your Teacher; and he that exhorteth on Exhortation, there is your Paſtor: and theſe two Particulars come under that firſt Head of Prophecy, and they that do ſo are the two Preaching Elders, as appears by the following words, Let us propheſy according to the Proportion of Faith: So as Matters of Faith are the ſubject Matter and Work of their two Offices; and then follows the three other particular Officers which are to be reduced under the other general Head of Miniſtry, or διακονία, which are the inferior Officers. He that giveth, let him do it with Simplicity; (which we call the Deacon):

He that ruleth, with Diligence; (the Ruling Elder is meant): He that ſheweth Mercy, with Chearfulneſs; which intends looking to the Sick and Infirm, which is a nauſeating Work. And if any object, that this Office of ſhewing Mercy runs in the Language of the Maſculine Gender: I anſwer, (1.) Whether it be a Man or Woman who undertakes the Work, it is all one.

(2.) The Apoſtle had begun the Enumeration of theſe Officers in the Maſculine Gender.

(3.) It is to be conſidered, that in all the other particular Offices he mentions, the Officers thereof are Males, and therefore at the laſt he continues the ſame Gender, noting out a Perſon, to keep to the Analogy of the Language with which he had begun. This Chapter I thus opened in the Aſſembly, but you may ſee it more largely in Mr. Cotton's Treatiſe of the Way of the Churches in New-England.

5. Conſider what the Apoſtle ſays (1 Tim. 5. 17.) Let the Elders that rule well, be counted worthy of double Honour, eſpecially they who labour in the Word and Doctrine. The Apoſtle's ſcope is to ſet the differing Valuation that Churches were to put upon their Officers for their Works ſake, and he puts a ſpecial Note upon the Preaching Elders that labour in the Word and Doctrine. The difference he puts is only between them and the Ruling Elders; but he yokes them, viz. the Paſtor and Teacher together, as co-ordinate and of like Rank, for their Works ſake; yea (and as I have thought) with a Diſtinction of their Offices, intimated in thoſe Phraſes, that labour, namely in the Word of Exhortation, which is the Paſtor's Office (it is the Apoſtle's Phraſe elſewhere); and in Doctrine, which the Teacher is to apply himſelf to.

6. The ſeveral Gifts God gives (which are ſuted to Offices and Officers to them) do warrant this Diſtinction. Thus in 1 Cor. 12. he diſcourſes of the ſeveral Gifts and Offices of thoſe that are the eminent Members of the Body. And by Helps in Government (ver. 28.) I underſtand the Ruling Elder aſſiſting their Teachers. In the fore part of the Chapter, ver. 4, 5, 6. he ſhews how God has given Gifts (that is, infuſed Habits) and they are ſuted to Offices, and both bleſſed by God.

Now among thoſe Gifts fitting Men for thoſe Adminiſtrations and Operations, To one is given a Word of Wiſdom, which is more proper to a Paſtor; to another a Word of Knowledg, that is for the Teacher, which is a Gift more ſpeculative. And you may find in Experience that ſome Mens Gifts are more for Exhortation, and to ſet home Uſes; others to invent Reaſons for Proofs and Explanations of Truths: And look into your Auditors, and you will find ſome to affect a Miniſtry that moves and perſwades their Affections, and ſtirs their Wills; and you will find others that affect Depths of Knowledg, and each profiteth by either, for that is the Rule, 1 Cor. 12. 7. The Miniſtration of the Spirit in all theſe Adminiſtrations is given to every Man to profit withal; and thus harmoniouſly doth one thing anſwer, and is ſuted to another, and by theſe God ſhews his Care and Wiſdom, by ſeveral Gifts and Offices ſuted to Mens Needs and Spirits, and ſhews his Love in making Proviſion for the Defects and Wants that are in his poor Saints. The Teacher has the Care of their Underſtandings to cure the Errors and Defects therein; and the Paſtor has their Wills and Affections principally committed to his Charge to work upon and move them; and which of theſe you will prefer moſt in Man, the Will or Underſtanding to be the more principal Faculty, you may by the ſame meaſure give Dignity to theſe Officers for their Work ſake.

7. God further ſhews he has a Care of Mens Lives and Converſations, in ſetting up the Ruling Elder to watch over their Converſations, for that is his Charge: God ſhews his Care over their Bodies and Eſtates, in appointing the Office of a Deacon to look to their Wants. And he takes care of their Bodily Infirmities, by appointing them that are to ſhew Mercy. And thus God has taken care for all about his People, both for his own Honour, and their Good who are his Children. He hath ſufficiently provided for their Education in this World, till they come to Heaven. As Perſons that are great Kings and Princes have ſeveral Offices for every Buſineſs, tho very ſmall, and they have them to ſhew their Greatneſs; ſo Chriſt will have the like too in his Church.

Let theſe things be ſufficient to anſwer this my Scope, and Deſign, and to prove that theſe two Offices of Paſtor and Teacher, and their Gifts and Labours are co-ordinate in reſpect of Preference of one to the other, or Dependance of the one upon the other; much more are they freed from any Subjection of one unto the other. So that to advance one above the other, is an apparent Violation of the ſacred Order which God has inſtituted and fixed, and is an injurious Uſurpation out of Ignorance and Pride, ſuch as was in Diotrephes, whom the Apoſtle John ſo condemns: The breaking of Churches will be hazarded if this Principle prevail; and let any Man take heed how he defile the Temple of God, much more deſtroy it, for him will God deſtroy.

I am,
Yours, &c.

THO. GOODWIN.

POST-SCRIPT.

I Intended by my Letter to take away all Precedency whatſoever, and my Reaſons do manifeſtly tend to it, and thereſore I make it my Concluſion; and thoſe words in reſpect of Preference, are all one as if I had ſaid in reſpect of Precedency.

FINIS.

AN Alphabetical Table.

N. B. The Letters a, b, c, ſignify the firſt, ſecond and third Parts of Juſtifying Faith; d the large Diſcourſe of Church-Government; and e the ſhort Diſcourſe by way of Queſtion and Anſwer.

A.

ABaſement by God the way to the greateſt Glory. p. 311. d.

Accidents in God not inherent or permanent. p. 81. a.

Acts of Faith in a Believer are ſutable to the Promiſes. p. 195. a.

Acts of Faith in a Believer, how conformable to the Tenour of the Promiſes ſhewn. p. 184. a.

Acts Principal and Eſſential of Faith in Prayer, what they are. p. 155. b.

Act humble of Faith put forth in Prayer. p. 156. b.

Acknowledgment muſt be made of all that God doth in a way of Believing. p. 75. c.

Adherence to God one Act of Faith in Prayer. p. 159. b.

Adminiſtration of the Lord's Supper, how often it ſhould be, muſt have an Inſtitution left in Scripture. p. 333. d.

Admonitions muſt be given where all of a Church uſe to meet. p. 129. d.

—— —— and Examination better attained in Congregational Government than in a Claſſical one. p. 130. d.

—— —— that are leſs, ſooner ripen an Officer's Sin. p. 387. d.

—— —— to Love and Peace, why given by Chriſt. p. 405. d.

Aim of a Believer's Coming to God and Chriſt is purely that he may be juſtified. p. 184. a.

Alluſion of our Lord, Mat. 18. is to thoſe Courts which were among the Jews. p. 170. d.

Analogy that is great between the Jews Synagogues and Congregations now. p. 60. d.

Anathema Maran-atha, what it is. p. 37. d.

Angels rejoice at the Mercies to Men. p. 50. a.

Anointing with Oil a ſtanding Ordinance to confirm the Promiſe of Healing to Church-Members. p. 387. d.

—— —— being a ſtanding Ordinance, is to make more Sacraments than two. p. 388. d.

—— —— gives countenance to the Extream Unction of the Papiſts. p. 389. d.

Appeals not abſolutely neceſſary to the Government of Churches. p. 197. d.

—— not to be made to other Churches after the Sentence of Excommunication is paſt in a particular Congregation. p. 199. d.

—— may be made to Synods in caſe of male-Adminiſtrations. p. 202. d.

Applying of Chriſt, what it is. p. 65. d.

Apoſtacy of many may daſh a Believer's Aſſurance. p. 90. b.

Apoſtles, tho made immediately by Chriſt, yet the Choice of one Apoſtle was made by one particular Congregation, Acts 1. p. 65. d.

Apoſtles being ſaid to be the Church Univerſal, anſwer'd. p. 160. d.

—— were Miniſters of the Church Univerſal, as it was a Body Politick then, and why not now? p. 159. d.

—— they direct to ordain Elders in every Church. p. 163. d.

—— firſt converted Men to God, and afterwards knit them into Church-Fellowſhip. p. 262. d.

Application and ſpecial Appropriation of Chriſt, wherein it lies. p. 81. b.

Arrogancy of Church-Governours who aſſume to themſelves the Power of appointing times of Worſhip. p. 344. d.

Aſſemblies that have conſtant Worſhip as well as Government, are truly Churches. p. 75. d.

—— muſt be convened by lawful Authority. p. 257. d.

—— that are particular under the Goſpel are indeed very neceſſary. p. 247. d.

Aſſent that is barely to what Chriſt hath done and ſuffered, is reſted in by many. p. 64. d.

Aſſurance follows upon Faith. p. 78. b.

—— —— is as a Reward of Faith. ibid.

—— —— the Cauſe of it diſtinct from Faith. ibid.

—— —— of Salvation, attainable. p. 81. b.

—— —— the Apoſtles might have it, yet we can't expect it. p. 87. b.

—— —— may be vouchſafed to ſome below Apoſtles, yet it is to ſuch as are of long ſtanding in Chriſtianity. p. 88. b.

—— —— not to be obtained by God dealing with Men in the ordinary way. ibid.

—— —— many may think they have it, and have it not. p. 89. b.

—— —— does not make Men more licentious. ibid.

—— —— hath Evidence from the Sacred Trinity. p. 98. b.

—— —— is to be ſought after. p. 100. b.

—— —— of Faith in the Underſtanding, what. p. 176. a.

—— —— —— in the Will, what. ibid. b.

—— —— Cautions laid down about it. p. 99. b.

—— —— of God's Love in the Benefits that he beſtows. p. 103. b.

—— —— of Salvation is not to every Believer. p. 98. b.

—— —— that God gave to Abraham the greateſt that Heaven could afford. p. 186. a.

Attributes of God ſtiled his Godhead. p. 59. a.

—— —— are eminently in him. p. 61. a.

—— —— are not himſelf. p. 75. a.

—— —— how they are of his Nature ſhewed. p. 58. a.

Attri-

Attributes of God reduced to three Heads. p. 79. a.
—— —— are his Vertues. p. 80. a.
—— —— are incomprehenſible. p. 61. a.
—— —— to which Faith is to apply it ſelf in Prayer, have reſerved to themſelves a Latitude in what Particular to anſwer Prayer. p. 145. b.
—— —— natural in God vaſtly different from thoſe in Men. p. 82. a.
Averſeneſs in the Will to believe. p. 45. c.
Authority among the Jews derived from the Synagogues. p. 58. d.

B.

BAnds of a Church, what they are. p. 3. e.
Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper were generally receiv'd and practiſed by the Chriſtians in Primitive Times. p. 30. d.
—— —— —— —— are to be continued to after-Ages. p. 31. d.
Bearing one another's Burden, what it is. p. 402. d.
—— —— —— —— a ſpecial Law of Chriſt. p. 403. d.
Believers the true Seed of Chriſt. p. 52. a.
—— may ſee what great things were done for them when converted. p. 118. a.
—— all have not the ſame full Aſſurance of Faith. p. 164. a.
—— whether they come to Chriſt under the Apprehenſion of God-man, anſwer'd. p. 148. a.
—— wait on Chriſt for the Manifeſtation of his Love and Grace. p. 49. b.
—— are perſwaded of the Graciouſneſs in Chriſt Jeſus. p. 12. b.
—— have Fellowſhip with God the Father, and God the Son. p. 103. b.
—— have Communion with all the three Perſons, and their Love, ſeverally and diſtinctly. p. 104. b.
—— how they may be aſcertained of their future ſtanding. p. 121. b.
—— falling into Sin may daſh their Aſſurance. p. 90. b.
—— ſee the All-ſufficiency in Chriſt Jeſus. p. 12. b.
—— living by Free Grace makes them heartleſs to urge the Condition of a Promiſe. p. 166. b.
—— have to do with God's Mercy in Praying in Faith. p. 147. b.
—— in referring themſelves to God's Heart and former Proceedings may improve every Promiſe. p. 140. b.
—— in Prayer ought to apply themſelves to God's All-ſufficiency with full Aſſurance in it. p. 145. b.
—— can't be a formal Seat of Government till they be united into the State and Order of a Church. p. 49. d.
—— temporal do not ſee ſpiritual things in their own Nature. p. 10. b.
Believing in Chriſt is a giving up our ſelves to him as our Lord and Husband. p. 122. a.
—— —— is a waiting on him in his own way. p. 50. b.
Biſhops and Elders, what manner of Perſons God hath appointed them to be. p. 14. e.
—— what ſort God hath ſet in his Church. p. 16. e.
Bleſſedneſs of God the Riſe of Goodneſs in him. p. 44. a.
Bleſſing ſpecial promiſed to all the Aſſemblies and Inſtitutions under the Old and New Teſtament, evinced from Pſal. 132. 1, 2, 3. p. 291. d.
—— peculiar promiſed to every Office, according to its Degree, Rank and Order of Inſtitution. p. 294. d.
Blood, Water and Spirit, what are meant thereby. p. 59. b.
Body inſtituted of Chriſt the only proper Seal of the Ordinance of the Lord's Supper. p. 354. d.
—— —— —— is to be only Congregational. p. 3. d.
—— —— —— it is meant where we find the Body with Members and Variety of Gifts ſpoken of. p. 254. d.
Bounds and Extent of Church-Officers the Subject of God's Inſtitution. p. 99. d.
Bowels, when ſpoken of God, what it imports. p. 88. a.
Breaking of Bread as ſimply ſpoken is uſed for common Eating together. p. 329. d.
—— —— —— put for the Lord's Supper. ibid.
Brethren in Scripture what it imports. p. 12. e.
—— and Members of God's Church, what ſort they are to be. p. 30. e.
Brotherly Unity, wherein it conſiſts. p. 33. e.
—— Equality, wherein. p. 35. e.
Brother offending muſt be authoritatively admoniſhed by the Presbytery before he be put to publick Shame before the Congregation. p. 130. d.

C.

CALL of Elders to exerciſe Juriſdiction ſhould be occaſionally from a Congregation that is in need. p. 231. d.
Calling of Elders hath two Parts. p. 195. d.
Care that every Member of a Church hath over another differs from that of the Officers. p. 301. d.
Caſting a Perſon out of the Church implies the Conſequent of it. p. 35. d.
—— of a Believer on Chriſt is to have Juſtification from him, and Union with him. p. 130. b.
Cenſures in Churches are by the Efficacy of God's Inſtitution. p. 10. b.
Chriſt a quickning Spirit. p. 142. a.
—— made a quickning Spirit to us. p. 143. a.
—— the true Son of God. p. 144. a.
—— an immediate King to his Saints. p. 258. d.
—— the true Bread of Life. p. 138. a.
—— the bleſſed Efficient of the Union of a Soul with him. p. 125. b.
—— in relation to his Church a King of Saints. p. 244. d.
—— knows all his by Name. p. 114. a.
—— by the Spirit leads us to the Father. p. 195. a.
—— what in himſelf the ſpecial Object of Faith ſhewed. p. 28. b.
—— in bringing Souls to believe, deals variouſly with them. p. 56. b.
—— as the Head of the Church hath need of us. p. 4. e.
—— as being God-man can't be taken in all at once. p. 151. a.
—— hath not left his Church deſtitute of Rules for her Government. p. 6. d.
—— in the Inſtitution of his Church follows the

Appen-

An Alphabetical Table.

Appendixes of the Old Teſtament. p. 59. d.
Chriſt hath conſtituted his Churches under the New Teſtament, for Prayer and Worſhip, as the Synagogues. p. ib. d.
——— never gave an Inſtitution that was not brought into Act. p. 154. d.
——— as good to his Church under the Goſpel as under the Law. p. 244. d.
——— imparts to his Saints all that is needful to their Work. p. 258. d.
——— ordained in his Name the gathering of Churches. p. ib. d.
——— hath given an immediate power to his Saints to enjoy the Ordinances, not deriving it from any other. p. 259. d.
——— hath inveſted his Saints with Power to judge of, and to call each other into Church-fellowſhip. p. 260. d.
——— inveſts the Saints with right by communicating the Ordinances to them. p. ib. d.
——— when he aſcended, gave Gifts to the Church, that by their Miniſtry he might dwell in their Hearts. p. 263. d.
——— aſcending into Heaven was by way Triumph. p. 311. d.
——— deſcended to the loweſt, and aſcended to the higheſt place. p. 310. d.
——— challenges the prerogative to appoint Officers in his Church, as their Lord, King, and Ruler. p. 268. d.
——— conſecrates his Death, and prays for the application of it. p. 305. d.
——— by a ſtrange providence ſingles out ſome particular perſons, to make them partakers of ſpecial priviledges from himſelf. p. 108. b.
——— vouchſafed his preſence to Mary, that was the greateſt ſinner, after the Reſurrection. p. ib. d.
——— when he appears, owns us before we can own him. p. 112. b.
——— not to be known by us after the fleſh, being riſen and aſcended. p. 115. b.
——— is not only careful to dye for us, but to apply comfort to us. p. ib. b.
——— Jeſus is all to a poor ſinner thro' Grace. p. 27. a.
——— ſpoke oftentimes after the manner of the Old Teſtament, when the ſame thing is not meant. p. 60. d.
——— manifeſting himſelf to Souls, ſtill riſeth higher and higher. p. 116. b.
——— how the Object of our Faith, a twofold Account of it. p. 148. a.
Chriſtians are to be like-minded one to another. p. 401. d.
——— all are to ſtrive after aſſurance. p. 101. b.
Church, a New Teſtament one, what it is. p. 3. e.
——— which is the ſeat of Government, is of a divine Inſtitution. p. 102. d.
——— Inſtitution. Mat. 18. p. 55. d.
——— Catholick, what it is. p. 91. d.
——— in the New-Teſtament, imports the Saints and people in a ſpecial manner. p. 74. d.
——— The name never given to the meeting of the Elders in the New-Teſtament. p. ib. d.
——— the Form and Eſſence of it. p. 5. e.
——— are Bodies fixed not only in reſpect of Worſhip, but alſo of Judicature. p. 52. d.
——— primitive ones, ſhews they were fixed. p. 51. d.
——— members are joyned together by Holy Covenant. p. 7. e.
——— being called the Spouſe of Chriſt, ſhew they are ſo joyned. p. 8. e.
——— having power to call her own Officers, ſhews it. p. ib e.
——— particular ones, part of the Church univerſal. p. 3. d.
——— under the Goſpel are by an Inſtitution of Chriſt. p. ib. d.
——— all of them in the primitive times were ordered by the ſame Rule. p. 25. d.
——— a particular one meant, Mat. 18. demonſtrated. p. 56. d.
——— particular ones in the Apoſtles days, appear by their practice. p. 60. d.
——— a particular one beſt agrees with the promiſe of his Spirit. p. 63. d.
——— that of the Jews a worldly external frame. p. 91. d.
——— bounded and ſtated, is the ſeat and receptive of all the promiſes. p. 103. d.
——— congregational ones, the beſt that could be found out for the entire communion of the Saints in the World. p. 92. d.
——— having a company of Elders, is an Organized Body. p. 116. d.
——— politick, having a ſufficiency of Elders, can do all Church-Acts, and Excommunicate. p. 112. d.
——— at Corinth, Coloſs, &c. were but congregational. p. 69, 74, 86. d.
——— congregational, is natural and uniform. p. 123. d.
——— of Corinth, had not its Name from the Meeting or Aſſembly, but from its ſtate and Company. p. 72. d.
——— in the firſt planting of them by the Apoſtles, were every where congregaiional. p. 132. d.
——— that were firſt, muſt of neceſſity do that which ſingle Congregations may not do. p. 130 d.
——— are not to be conſidered as they were when the Apoſtles firſt began, but as they were when they left them. p. 135 d.
——— tho' they can't give away their Rights, yet they may joyn with them that will corroborate them. p. 136 d.
——— if it have but one Elder, or no Elders, where is the power then. p. 138. d.
——— whether they have not power to ask advice of other Congregations. p. 139. d.
——— Reaſons of their not ſo doing. p. 140. d.
——— Catholick political, the principle and foundation of Popery. p. 156. d.
——— of the Jews, not a pattern of a National one. p. 161. d.
——— how it may be ſaid to be National. p. 175 d.
——— in Scripture, and all the Officers are alike relative, as a Church and Elders. p. 188. d.
——— every one is a body ordered. p. 189 d.
——— all variation of it is from God. p. 215. d.
——— may deal with Churches in the Name of Chriſt. p. 226 d.
——— may deal with Churches by Authority of commanding in Chriſt's Name. p. ib. d.

—— one is to afford part of its ſpiritual good to another Church. p. 227 d.

—— one is bound to communicate to another in temporal things. p. 229 d.

—— being under one Civil Government more near. p. 235 d.

—— ought to be, is the confeſſion of all. p. 243 d.

—— inſtituted, is a Church as well as a Church general. p. 248 d.

—— Myſtical and Inſtituted, wherein they agree. p. 204 d.

—— Myſtical is a company of Saints, ſo is a Church inſtituted. p. 249 d.

—— inſtituted, hath Ordinances which the Church myſtical out of ſuch a ſtate, cannot at all partake of p. 255 d.

—— Congregational inſtituted hath a Bleſſing on all duties. p. ib. d.

—— may be ſo as to their ſtate, when not in uſe with Spints. p. 261 d.

—— being under age, muſt have theſe Officers over her, till ſhe comes to a perfect man. p. 265 d.

—— every one hath its affairs in common, therefore it hath need of many Officers. p. 266 d.

—— every one ought to have many Officers, to whom the exerciſe of Church-power may be committed. p. 267 d.

—— National, not according to God's appointment. p. 6. e.

—— under the Goſpel, had as well as the Synagogues, more Elders than one. p. 270 d.

—— may be ſaid to meet in parts, urged from Acts 12. 5. p. 355 d.

—— in chooſing Officers, are to rank men into Offices according to their Gifts. p. 287 d.

—— congregational, and Body of Chriſt, conſidered as ſuch, is the proper ſeat of the Ordinance of the Lords-Supper, with difference from other Ordinances and Meetings. p. 351 d.

—— may not diſclaim an Officer for an Offence, that is not worthy of Excommunication. p. 379 d.

—— concerned alike in many things in a brotherly way. p. 229 d.

—— their end in uniting in Covenant. p. 9 e.

The choice of Chriſt ſhaddowed in David. p. 55 a.

No circumſtance of an Ordinance left to Man's will, or the Authority of others. p. 330 d.

—— that are outward, or Occaſions may cauſe that ſome Church ſhould have the Sacrament every Lords-day. p. 333. d.

Comfort, that is great to thoſe who are the Objects of Gods Grace and Mercy. p. 51 a.

Coming to God and Chriſt one act of Faith in the Will. p. 184 a.

—— in Prayer, with an Aſſurance of Faith that he is, doth many ways encourage the Soul. p. 156 b.

—— to Chriſt, what it is for. p. 53 b.

A Commiſſion of power being given, is a declared Inſtitution. p. 19 d.

The Command and Appointment of Chriſt to all Believers to be in Church-fellowſhip, in enjoying the Ordinances and Sacrament, a greater Obligation than that which Members have to a particular Church. p. 398 d.

Communion and Fellowſhip to Believers, with all the three Perſons in the Trinity. p. 104 b.

—— with God and Chriſt, is moſt vital. p. 122 b.

—— with Chriſt, is by Faith. p. 14 c.

—— between God and a Believer, hath for its ſeat both the Underſtanding and Will. p. 123 b.

—— between God and a Believer, hath the moſt perfect Object. p. ib. b.

—— which Members of a Church ought to have together, for their mutual Edification and encreaſe of their Graces. p. 298 d.

—— of Saints in a particular Church, is deſigned to the Glory of God thro' Chriſt. p. 256 d.

—— of Churches in reſpect of Members as Members, and of Elders as Elders, anſwer one another. p. 232 d.

—— between Churches in matters of Advice. p. 228 d.

—— may be in whatever is matter of Priviledge, but not in Juriſdiction. p. 227 d.

—— of differing kind by way of Authority and Juriſdiction, according to the Law of Nature. p. 223 d.

—— in it God gives himſelf wholly to us. p. 60 a.

—— of Saints on Earth, muſt be by parts. p. 91 d.

—— with Churches, is in a moral way, and ſo is their Obligation. p. 234 d.

—— with other Churches, is not in a fixed but occaſional way. p. ib. d.

—— national of Churches kept in a myſtical way. p. 235 d.

A Communication of Churches, in ſending out Elders from one Church to another that wants. p. 228 d.

The Condition of primitive Saints afford a principle of the Equity of ſeparating from Churches. p. 398 d.

—— the particular one of a Believer in Prayer, which is moſt for the Glory of God, is moſt known to him. p. 148 d.

Confeſſion taken in a twofold ſence. p. 372 d.

—— of the Name of God, muſt not be extended to the forbearance of a Truth or Ordinance, tho' commanded by a Magiſtrate, proved. p. ib. d.

Conferences ſpiritual among the members of a Congregation, whether a Duty, conſidered. p. 299 d.

Confidence in God, is to truſt perfectly in him. p. 46 b.

Confuſion by a Preſbytery ſet forth. p. 190 d.

Congregations particular do not meet by virtue of a Charter, given firſt to the Church univerſal. p. 43 d.

—— where God is truly worſhipped, &c. are called each of them a Church. p. 72 d.

—— diſtinct Churches proved by the Apoſtles writing to them as ſuch. p. 98 d.

—— A ſingle one of Saints, having a ſufficient number of Elders, the entire ſeat of Government and Excommunication as well as Worſhip. p. 111 d.

—— A ſingle one, being able to ſuſpend, without conſulting others, may alſo excommunicate. p. 112 d.

—— a ſingle one, as it is the ſeat of Worſhip, ſo of Government. p. 117 d.

—— a ſingle one, the entire ſeat of Government, proved from the nature of Excommunication. p. 118 d.

—— a particular one the ſeat of Authoritative Admonitions, and ſo alſo of Excommunication.

munication. p. 128 d.
——— which are Churches before God, yet we are not bound to continue in, and not to remove from. p. 267 d.
——— are to have more Elders than one ſet over them for the publick adminiſtration of Worſhip and Government. p. 270 d.
Conjunctions, the four great ones of the ſacred Trinity about Man's ſalvation. p. 113 a.
Conſideration of Chriſt as God-man, will at firſt or laſt induce us to believe in him. p. 149 a.
Conſcience, a good principle in Man. p. 35 c.
——— ſhews a man his ſinfulneſs. p. 38 c.
——— what Liberty of it is to be indulged. p. 399 d.
Conſtitution of Churches is of one kind and ſort p. 10 d.
——— of Churches as Bodies politick Jeſus Chriſt hath made, he takes care for the Government of them. p. 175 d.
Counſel of God, what it means. p. 187 a.
——— imports his purpoſes which have been from everlaſting. p. 188 a.
Covenant of Grace, what it is. p. 153 a.

D

Day of the Lord, is the inſtituted time for every Ordinance, according to the Courſe and Tenour of the New Teſtament. p. 340 d.
Dangers eminent, there may be a forbearance of Ordinances. p. 365 d.
David perſonates Chriſt in the Promiſes. p. 53 a.
——— in his fleſhly ſeed a Type of Chriſts ſpiritual ſeed. p. ib. a.
Deacons, what manner of men they are to be. p. 23 e.
——— what their Office is. p. 25 e.
——— muſt ſhew mercy with chearfulneſs. p. 27 e.
Declarations abſolute, of God and Chriſt what. p. 162 a.
——— in them, and promiſes of Salvation, are two things eminently to be attended to. p. 175 a.
Dependance that is true of a believing Soul upon electing Love for ſalvation. p. 198 a.
——— in it, on the power of Gods working Faith, what ſins are to be forbore. p. 69 c.
Decree or Counſel, that determined to give thoſe things promiſed to Abraham, was abſolute, without any regard to his Acts. p. 190 a.
Definition of a true Goſpel Church. p. 256 d.
——— of a Church in general. p. 244 d.
Delivery to Satan, what it implies. p. 35 d.
Depths of Sin, what they are p. 2 a.
Deſcending of God upon the Mount, a Type of his deſcending in Fleſh under the Goſpel. p. 10 a.
Deſpair of Mercy no ſin in Devils. p. 5 a.
Devils ſhut out of the Mercy of God p. ib. a.
Difference between Churches under the Old Teſtament, and thoſe under the New. p. 147 d.
——— between the Church myſtical and inſtituted ſhewn. p. 250 d.
——— and Diverſity of Offices in a Church, what they are. p. 274 d.
——— between Paſtor and Teacher. p. 285 d.
——— of Paſtor and Teacher, is in reſpect of a larger commiſſion that the one hath than the other, in adminiſtration of holy things. p. 283 d.
——— that is great between the Duty of relieving the neceſſities of the poor, and maintaining the Miniſtry. p. 323 d.
——— between a Faith of ſimple Adherence, and a Faith of Aſſurance. p. 177 a.
——— apparent, between Baptiſm and the Lords-Supper, ſhews one to be properly an Ordinance of a particular Church, and that other of the univerſal one. p. 378 d.
Difficulty of Faith ſhewed. p. 21 e.
——— appears by conſidering what God does for man in Heaven when faith is wrought. p. 23 c.
Directions which God hath given, have a ſupernatural efficacy in them. p. 16 d.
——— that are manifold in the New Teſtament, to direct in Government of Churches. p. 12 d.
——— for building Gods Church, a matter of Honour and Prerogative due to God alone. p. 15 d.
Diſcipline and Worſhip, of the ſame extent as to the ſeat of it. p. 67 d.
——— diſtinguiſhed. p. 11 d.
Diſcoveries of Chriſt are made to Believers, who are vehement in affections to him, when not to others. p. 110 b.
——— of the Fathers Heart by Chriſt Jeſus. p. 132 a.
Diſproportion between the relation of Elders to a Church, in the extent of their Relation and Power. p. 187 d.
——— between Ruling and Preaching Elders compared among themſelves. p. 193 d.
Diſtortions of Adminiſtration by the Presbyterians. p. 123 d.
Diverſity of Churches, proved out of Acts 9. 31. & 14. 23. p. 78 d.
Diviſion in general of all Officers into two Ranks and Orders. p. 279 d.
Drawing nigh to God, what it is. p. 71 c.
Duty of a true faithful Miniſter. p. 317 d.
——— of ſpiritual conferences, whether it is to be exerciſed as the Providence of God gives opportunity, and according to the Relation in which Men are ſet in. p. 299 d.
——— of Communion of Saints, wherein it lyes. p. 302 d.
——— is a Communication of their Experiences as to the growth of their Graces, and as to the exerciſe of them. p. ib. d.
Duties, whether they are not Helps afore Faith. p. 62 c.
——— of Elders to preach and rule, ought to be of the ſame Extent. p. 67 d.
——— many, and Actions of Juriſdiction, may be performed by a greater number of Churches, but only by communion myſtical. p. 224 d.
——— that one Church owes to another, are to be by way of Brotherly Love, and not by a Spiritual Rod. p. 227 d.

E

Eating Chriſt's fleſh. p. 137 a.
Effects of the Gifts of the Church, and Gods dwelling in them, will be growth in Grace. p. 264 d.

El, the Name of God twofold. p. 35 a.

Elders and Churches have relation one to the other. p. 181 d.

—— muſt have a ſpecial relation to their Churches, appears by the practice of Government. p. ib. d.

—— exerciſing acts of Government over diſtinct congregations, muſt have the relation of Elders to them. p. 183 d.

—— and Officers being given to the Church univerſal, therefore it is a body politick. p. 160 d.

—— of one congregation a ſufficient Presbytery. p. 114 d.

—— of a particular congregation, are but publiſhers of the Act of Presbytery. p. 121 d.

—— if every one was of the Church univerſal, then the Church as ſuch ſhould call him to it. p. 155 d.

—— being aſſembled together, have no power over many congregations, appears from the New Teſtament. p. 180 d.

—— and Members of a particular Congregation meeting in common, the Elders are a diſtinct Presbytery to themſelves. p. 183 d.

—— in ſenſu aggregato & reſpective, conſidered. p. 184 d.

—— tho' exerciſing ſome Acts of Elders in other Churches, is not ſufficient to prove their juriſdiction over them. p. 233 d.

—— may be mentioned, when truly there was but one Elder. p. 270 d.

—— not ordained for Cities as Bodies, but only as a Church. p. 80 d.

—— if they alone were a Church, then Diſcipline muſt meerly conſtitute a Church as ſuch. p. 76 d.

—— and Churches ſettled into fixed Presbyteries. p. 54 d.

—— Ruling ones, their Work and Office, what it is. p. 19 e.

Encouragement to act in a way of believing, becauſe God may joyn with one in it. p. 19 c.

Endeavours being reſted in, an hindrance to Faith. p. 58 c.

—— Cautions to be obſerved in uſing of them. p. 63 c.

—— muſt be uſed to believe, being fearful to offend God, on whom we depend. p. 68 c.

—— to be uſed by us for faith, tho' it be the gift of God. p. 83 c.

—— do nothing derogate from the power of God in working, p. 84 c.

—— and Duties of a Man, are againſt attaining of Faith. p. 33 c.

—— to be uſed to believe what they are. p. 55 c.

Elect, how they are ſaid to be juſtified from Eternity, and in Chriſt, and yet not truly till they believe, ſhewn. p. 107 a.

Election it ſelf expreſſed by finding favour in God's ſight. p. 202 a.

—— that is particular, a diſcouragement to poor ſinners to come to God. p. 94 c.

Entrance into the Ark, a figure of the ſaving work that God effects upon the heart of his people, to bring them into the Covenant of Grace. p. 129 a.

Entring into Reſt, what it is. p. 79 c.

End, or Deſign of Chriſt in Aſcending and Deſcending in general, what it was. p. 311 d.

—— of Church-fellowſhip, is the form of it. p. 249 d.

—— of Communion of Saints in a particular Church, is to edifie one another in Faith and Love. p. 255 d.

—— a ſpecial one of Chriſt's Aſcenſion, was to beſtow Gifts. p. 311 d.

—— a general one of Paſtors and Teachers, is the work of the Miniſtry. p. 314 d.

—— ſpecial ones of the Miniſtry, what they are. p. ib. d.

Excommunication more than a bare caſting out of the Church. p. 35 d.

—— of a Man, is throwing him into the World under Satan. p. 36 d.

—— imports a poſitive puniſhment. p. ib. d.

—— gives a Man to Satan, as an Accuſer and Tormentor. p. ib. d.

—— A Church Ordinance, inſtituted by Chriſt. p. 38 d.

—— promulged in a particular Congregation, becauſe they have a primary Intereſt in him that is excommunicated. p. 127 d.

—— being a matter ſo great, ſhould be adviſed of by the Elders of more than one congregation. p. 147 d.

—— it being a matter of common concern, therefore others ſhould conſent to it. p. ib. d.

—— of a Church, is only of the Perſons, materially conſidered, but not of their Church-ſtate. p. 207 d.

—— as it differs from Non-communion, to be a puniſhment, wherein it lyes. p. 237 d.

Extent of Bodies, of Saints and Elders, making Churches, are ſubſtantial points of Order. p. 96 d.

—— of the power and juriſdiction of Elders bounded. p. 98 d.

—— of Officers power and juriſdiction, the matter of Inſtitution under the New Teſtament. p. 100 d.

—— of Deacons and Elders office relating to a Church, are commenſurable. p. 188 d.

—— of a Paſtors ordinary power of Ruling, reacheth only to that flock he feeds. p. 191 d.

Eunuch, Acts 8. being of the Jewiſh Religion, did not make him capable of Goſpel-Baptiſm. p. 377 d.

F

Faith the Gift of God. p. 31 c.

—— what it is, ſhewed. p. 16 b.

—— an Effect of infinite power alone. p. 43 c.

—— a matter of the greateſt difficulty. p. 1 a.

—— the excellency of it. p. 3 c.

—— a Mother Grace. p. 7 c.

—— unites us to Chriſt, and enables us to lay hold on him for Juſtification. p. 6 c.

—— makes things it believes real and preſent. p. ib. c.

—— of Recumbence, what it is. p. 120 a.

—— in the nature of it, is a Marriage of us to God. p. 193 a.

—— much confirmed by the belief of the mercies in God's Heart and Nature. p. 94 a.

—— the

—— the Objects of it not ſcanty. p. 2 a.
—— two of its Objects equally neceſſary. p. 131 a.
—— on Chriſt's perſon as God-man, is the foundation of all we believe in him for, as he is our Saviour. p. 148 a.
—— in general, reſpects all divine Objects, and is called Wiſdom. p. 16 b.
—— that which is ſpecial, what is is. p. 18 b.
—— ſaving called ſpecial, why ſo. p. 19 b.
—— ſpiritual, pitched upon any Object beſides God as juſtifying, and Chriſt for Righteouſneſs, is ſaving Faith in general. p. 21 b.
—— as it is an Act not to be commended, but as an Inſtrument whereby God does all in us. p. 3 c.
—— in a primary ſenſe a ſole Inſtrument in the Covenant of Grace. p. 5 c.
—— doth all in us, till it hath brought us to Salvation. p. ib. c.
—— honours God moſt. p. 10 c.
—— finds out Chriſt. p. 13 c.
—— prepares the Soul for Chriſt. p. ib. c.
—— brings the Spirit into the Heart. p. 15 c.
—— ſweetens all Croſſes. p. 16 c.
—— will be found to Honour and Glory at the appearing of Chriſt in reſpect of Man's Salvation. p. 12 c.
—— being exalted thereby, we ſlight Holineſs and Obedience. p. 17 c.
—— that which is attributed to it, muſt not cauſe a neglect of Holineſs and Obedience. p. 19 c.
—— that which is true, what it is. p. 164 a.
—— wrought by an Almighty power. p. 30 c.
—— muſt deal with the Free-grace of God. p. 50 c.
—— fruſtrated without a renouncing our own Endeavours. p. 67 c.
—— one great part of it, is to be ſenſible of our own unability and inſufficiency to believe. p. 85 c.
—— the conſideration that God muſt work it an Encouragement, rather than a diſcouragement. p. 87 c.
—— God beſtows in the end to thoſe that endeavour after it. p. 88 c.
—— one Act of it is appointed by God to be a ſtep and degree to another. p. 101 c.
—— Acts of it are to be renewed by us, and we muſt not faint or give over. p. 112 c.
—— Office of it, what it is. p. 1 b.
—— is a ſpiritual ſight of Chriſt. p. 2 b.
—— is a ſight to diſtinguiſh it from Reaſon and Knowledge. p. 3 b.
—— the ſight of it a genuine Knowledge. p. 6 b.
—— the ſight of it intuitive. p. ib. b.
—— not proportioned to the natural underſtanding. p. ib b.
—— by which we are ſaved, ſeated in the whole heart. p. 2 b.
—— its Light deſtroys not Reaſon. p. 7 b.
—— the knowledge of it certain. p. 8 b.
—— the knowledge of it a real ſight of Chriſt, and of ſpiritual things. p. 10 b.
—— one great Object, it is Chriſt. p. 11 b.
—— conſiſts not meerly in aſſent. p. 14 b.
—— hath the ſame principle, by which we believe in the Scripture and on Chriſt. p. 22 b.
—— that which is right, is a belief of all things. p. 23 b.
—— that which is ſpecial, is the only cauſe by which we obtain an intereſt in Chriſt to Salvation and Juſtification. p. 25 b.
—— the end of it. p. 29 b.
—— the Object of it, pacifieth the Heart againſt Condemnation, that God annexes Juſtification. p. 33 b.
—— the Benefits of it beſtowed upon us by God, are ſuited to, or pitched upon the benefits he beſtows. p. 36 b.
—— in Devils, makes them more to tremble. p 5 a.
—— one great and eminent act of it, is truſt. p. 44 b.
—— that which is true and genuine, applies and faſhions the Heart to the Law of Faith. p. 51 b.
—— the Spirit of it that great principle, by which the Soul treats with God and Chriſt. p. 55 b.
—— the applying the Soul to Chriſt, not the formal act of it. p. ib. b.
—— as to our firſt preception, is confuted. p. 58 b.
—— in the way of it, Men are apt to err. p. 63 b.
—— in many ſouls, is a meer want of doubt, and not an application to Chriſt with Comfort. p. 64 b.
—— that act of it which juſtifies, diſtinct from that of Knowing he hath Eternal Life. p. 71 b.
—— that that is true, may be without full aſſurance. p. 72 b.
—— the Reaſon of it. p. 76 b.
—— one Act of it is waiting. p. ib. b.
—— the great promiſe that it looks to, is Chriſt. p. 77 b.
—— principally ſeated in the Will. p. ib. b.
—— the end of it may be attained without aſſurance. p. 79 b.
—— one main end of it, is to glorifie God's free and rich Grace. p. ib. b.
—— another end, is to put Men into a ſtate of Grace and Juſtification before God. p. 80 b.
—— hath two grand Objects to act upon. p. 109 a.
—— hath Chriſt as a quickning ſpirit for its proper Object. p. 142 a.
—— hath Chriſt as the Son of God, in union with the Man Chriſt Jeſus, for its prime Object. p. 145 a.
—— hath Chriſt for its chief Object. p. 8 c.
—— the cauſe of our ſtanding in Grace. p. 15 c.
—— by it we ſhould endeavour to enter into reſt. p. 79 c.
—— the poſitive grounds thereof. p. 166 a.
—— being an evident demonſtration, or real ſubſiſtence, claims the higheſt certainty and infallibility. p. 121 b.
—— as it unites us to Chriſt, ſo it is ſometimes ſtrengthened from above, and makes a Believer rejoice with joy unſpeakable. p. 123 b.
—— what Acts and Application thereof a Believer ſhould put forth to Juſtification. p. 137 b.
—— in a Believer, is to be anſwering and con- forming to the promiſes in the Word. p. 195 a.

—— may act, not with a bare ſubmiſſion only, but with a reference alſo to be juſtified by vertue of what has been done. p. 139 b.
—— in prayer, is bound up ſtrictly unto ſuch a Belief as is not wavering. p. 143 b.
—— in prayer, is not to be bound up to a certain perſwaſion. p. 144 b.
—— in prayer, hath to deal with the Glory of God. p. 148 b.
—— how it is ſaid to be acted towards each of the promiſes of Salvation, and how our prayers are to be managed to them. p. 169 b.
—— what manner of it in prayer, a Soul may treat with God, for a performance of the abſolute promiſes p. 172 b.
—— Acts of it, are not to be ſtayed from a Soul, till that it feels that it is clouthed with ſuch a power as does enable it to believe. p. 103 c.
—— as to its acts, is to be attempted by us. p. 107 c.
—— in it we ſhould relye upon God. p. 22 a.
Fall of Adam diſenabled us all from believing. p. 32 c.
Falling ſhort of reſt, lyes in Man's own Will. p. 81 c.
Father, how he teaches us to know Chriſt, and draws us to him. p. 119 a.
—— teaches us to come to Chriſt. p. 124 a.
—— gives us Eternal Life. p. 125 a.
—— directs us to ſeek Chriſt, as his Son, as well as a Saviour. p. 126 a.
Fear and Trembling, how taken in Scripture. p. 64 c.
—— we ſhould fear omitting any opportunity that God gives us. p. 71 c.
Fellowſhip in Churches, how manifold. p. 255 d.
Forgiveneſs with God, what it is. p. 3 a.
Fruits and Effects from the regulation of Churches. p. 241 d.
—— of God's Chaſtiſement, is to take away ſin. p. 55 a.

G

Gathering of Saints into particular Bodies, is the Inſtitution of Chriſt. p. 3 d.
Holy Ghoſt, the only Interpreter of Scripture. p. 7 d.
—— when he works Faith, doth two things. p. 3 b.
—— why called El. p. 35 a.
—— how he is ſaid to be a diſtinct Witneſs in Earth, and alſo in Heaven. p. 98 b.
Gifts of the Church, bequeathed it by Chriſt at his departure. p. 263 d.
—— of two ſorts. p. 302 d.
—— the general end of them are three. p. 312 d.
Glory of God, intereſted in the uſe of Ordinances. p. 374 d.
God is of a merciful nature p. 8 a.
—— deſcends to the capacity of his People, to ſhew his Grace. p. 10 a.
—— takes occaſion to declare his mercies upon the greateſt ſins. p. 13 a.
—— loves the Glory of his mercy. p. 17 a.
—— uſeth the Naime Jehovah as a ſeal to his gracious Covenant with Moſes. p. 20 a.
—— calls us to be his ſons. p. 26 a.
—— makes us righteous by his call. p. 27 a.
—— hath eminently in his Heart thoughts of Peace and Mercy. p. ib. a.
—— is ſaid to be good, ſtrong and true, not from his doing good, &c. p. 69 a.
—— is faithful as God. p. 75 a.
—— the Father, how he teacheth us concerning his Son. p. 126 a.
—— the Father, as a juſtifier of ungodly Men, is declared and ſet forth as the Object of a Sinners Faith. p. 171 a.
—— teaches the Soul to treat with his Grace in the free ſoveraignty of it. p. 155 a.
—— whatever is in him is himſelf. p. 74 a.
—— the whole in him is merciful and gracious. p. 34 a.
—— commands us to venture our Souls upon him. p. 51 c.
—— oftentimes makes a Man in believing to wait upon him long. p. 52 c.
—— does not always come with a predominant power to draw the Soul to believe. p. 98 c.
—— himſelf ſimply conſidered is the primary object of our Faith. p. 30 b.
—— honours that moſt which honours him moſt. p. 10 c.
—— requires ſelf-denial in our will when we come to believe. p. 48 c.
—— as juſtifying the ultimate object of our Faith. p. 103 a.
—— ſwearing his Holineſs, what it is. p. 55 a.
—— intending relation for many, is an Encouragement and Hope for ſinners. p. 95 c.
—— how he is ſaid to be the firſt and laſt. p. 28. a.
—— makes Faith an Inſtrument to honour and glorifie his Free Grace. p. 11. c.
—— moulds his Church according to the future condition of it. p. 89 d.
—— hath enlarged the liberty and promiſes of his Grace under the Goſpel. p. 117 d.
—— might have made the Government of Cities an Ordinance for Church-government. p. 16 d.
—— what he ſwore to Abraham, he ſwore to his Seed, the Heirs of promiſe. p. 190 a.
—— where he works Faith in a Soul, conveys a hint of his Mind and Inclination to it. p. 197 a.
—— oftentimes uſeth the weakeſt Inſtruments, to reveal the greateſt Truths to his Children. p. 116 b.
—— and the Soul to dwell together in Unity, and rejoice in one another, is a moſt pleaſant thing. p. 125 b.
—— tho' juſtifying ſome from all Eternity in his Secret Will, hath in his Revealed Will folded them up in indefinite promiſes to Sinners. p. 130 b.
—— the Maſter-builder of his own Houſe. p. 15 d.
—— in his Promiſes hath not obliged himſelf to give us the particular Bleſſing which we pray for. p. 150 b.

——— takes advantage to put off, or not perform a temporal Bleſſing which a Man hath prayed for. p. 165 b.

——— in a Goſpel-way, to thoſe to whom he means to do moſt good, brings things clearly contrary to the temporal Promiſes to them. p. 168 b.

——— under the Goſpel takes a greater latitude for performing temporal promiſes than under the Law. p. ib. b.

——— makes an univerſal promulgation of the promiſes, to move and ſtir up all Men to come to him with ſuch an indefinite act of Faith. p. 172 b.

——— containing his Anger a Token of his Strength. p. 38 a.

——— accounts Mercy his greateſt Attribute. p. 21 a.

——— joyns his Attributes to induce us to believe in him. p. 36 a.

——— applying a Type under the Old Teſtament to an Inſtitution in the New, we are to be led by it as far as he applies it. p. 173 d.

——— ſuits his Ordinances to the ordinary way of his Providence. p. 205 d.

——— having a Church, very natural and requiſite. p. 243 d.

——— hath ordained that particular Bodies, ſhould be to encreaſe every Member fit for this Aſſembly. p. 255 d.

——— the Holy Ghoſt is engaged to accompany the preaching the Word with his bleſſing unto the ſeed of Chriſt for ever. p. 306 d.

——— before he exalts he humbles. p. 310 d.

——— maintained the preaching of the Word, where he meant to have a Church called. p. 305 d.

——— continues no Gifts in his Church in vain. p. 312 d.

——— hath from everlaſting given to Jeſus Chriſt as a Head, a Company of Perſons ordained to make a Body to him. p ib. b.

Goodneſs and Kindneſs, eſſential Attributes in God. p. 72 a.

——— of God, appears in his having made proviſion for all defects. p. 287 d.

Goſpel, what it is. p. 26 b.

Government of Churches which is right, is part of Worſhip under the New Teſtament. p. 6 d.

——— of Churches, muſt be a ſpecial Divine Inſtitution. p. 7 d.

——— of Churches, not without order. p. 50 d.

——— congregational, hath its bounds from the ſufficiency of Elders. p. 67 d.

——— national, not a Rule of Eccleſiaſtical. p. 68 d.

——— presbyterial, makes Congregations to be united for Government to one presbyterial Church. p. 76 d.

——— congregational, adequate with natural. p. 237 d.

Grace, an eſſential Attribute of God. p. 71 a.

——— aſcribed to the Father in point of Juſtification. p. 160 a.

——— the Honour and Glory of it ſhewed. p. 10 c.

——— of God, the manner in which it is ſuperabounding. p. 161 a.

——— that is free, loves to be treated according to his own fulneſs. p. 155 a.

——— of God, to be magnified in calling us. p. 119 a.

——— of God, muſt be treated with, as that which is abſolute. p. 156 a.

——— that which is free, the ſpecial Object of our Faith. p. 30 b.

——— that which is free, teaches the Heart to renounce all ſelf. p. 154 a.

Greatneſs of the Sins of God's Children. p. 54 a.

——— of the Benefits and Favour of God to his Church, is vouchſafed in the Donation of Miniſters and Officers. p. 316 d.

Grounds of Non-communion. p. 238 d.

——— for diſtinction of Churches in Scripture. p. 245 d.

Growth in Knowledge of Faith, one ſpecial end of the Miniſtry. p. 315 d.

H

Hearing the Word expounded, why rather appointed by God than hearing it read alone. p. 308 d.

——— the Word of God, why rather appointed than reading it alone by our ſelves. p. 307 d.

Help alone from Chriſt, to a Soul that believes on on him. p. 42 b.

Holineſs is God himſelf. p. 76 a.

Honour of Chriſt conſiſts in having many Officers in his Church. p. 267 d.

——— of Chriſt, conſiſts in having particular Congregations. p. 247 d.

Holy Ghoſt, is he that ſhews Mercy. p. 35 a.

——— hath ſet bounds and limits of power to ſeveral Ordinary Officers in the Church. p. 102 d.

Hope does not neceſſarily ſpeak full Aſſurance, but a Faith rather that wants it. p. 193 a.

——— is ſaid to be ſet before us to lay hold on, becauſe the Ground-work and Foundation is in the Promiſes, which gives the Heart this Hope for its Salvation. p. ib. a.

——— being called an Anchor, ſeems to expreſs the Hope of Recumbance, rather an Hope of Aſſurance. p. ib. a.

——— of an Humbled Soul is in God. p. 2 a.

I

Jeſus Chriſt far more jealous of our Faith than Love. p. 43 b.

——— Chriſt, why he hath put Excommunication rather in one Church than in a multitude. p. 239 d.

——— Chriſt that ſtrong man. p. 27 a.

Jehovah merciful, gives being to all things in which we can truſt. p. 28 a.

——— imports everlaſting being. p. 29 a.

——— the firſt in Grace and Mercy to us. p. 31 a.

Jewiſh Oeconomy no pattern for modelling the Church under the Goſpel. p. 167 d.

Immutability of God's Counſel in his Electing Grace, doth in the whole of it lye as a fit Object of Faith to all Believers. p. 191 a.

Imperfection of Congregational Churches, wherein it lyes. p. 113 d.

Incongruity

Incongruity that is great, falls upon the very relation of Elders offices to the Presbyterial Doctrine. p. 180 d.

——— that will follow the Presbyterial Doctrine, in reſpect of mutual Duties of People to Elders. p. 193 d.

Inſtances out of the New Teſtament for forbearance of Ordinances, in caſe of eminent Dangers. p. 375 d.

——— of Chriſt, avoiding dangers. p. 376 d.

Inſtitution, what it is. p. 17 d.

——— may be gathered from promiſes made to things above their natural Efficacy. p. 19 d.

——— ſometimes declared by implicite Directions. p. ib. d.

——— virtual and formal, what. p. ib. d.

——— made known by the Prophecies in the Old Teſtament of the times of the Goſpel. p. 20 d.

——— of God, may be known by Examples we meet with in Scripture. p. 21 d.

——— that are divine, may be known by parallel Reaſon between things of a kind and nature. p. 20 d.

——— of meeting together ſuited to the Saints when multiplied. p. 42 d.

——— of Congregational Churches, beſt ſuits all the condition of the Church of Chriſt. p. 89 d.

——— of a Church, if it falls upon the univerſal, then it is a politick one. p. 152 d.

——— for Non-communion. p. 239 d.

——— of Churches, by it Chriſt ſets up a Kingdom, and judgeth aforehand. p. 348 d.

——— of Officers by God, which depends only on his Will. p. 267 d.

——— every one, and Office appointed by God, hath a ſpecial Bleſſing ſuited to it. p. 290 d.

——— muſt be found for the Lords-Supper, on ſet Lords-days. p. 342 d.

——— no one is ſuch, thae all other muſt give way to it. p. 346 d.

——— congregational, rather appointed than national, becauſe more certain than natural. p. 67 d.

——— that were firſt fell upon particular Congregations, as the Seats and Bounds of power. p. 63 d.

Intereſt, that any Ordinance hath, is not ſuch but that in ſome caſes any of them may give way to the other. p. 346 d.

Joy in the Holy Ghoſt, what. p. 119 b.

——— of a Believer, encreaſeth more and more. p. 25 b.

——— we have in Chriſt by believing. p. 15 c.

Iſraelites, while in Egypt, did forbear Sacrifices and publick Worſhip. p. 357 d.

Juriſdiction of Cities, not a pattern of Eccleſiaſtical Power. p. 68 d.

——— of Elders, and Meaſure of Churches, both to be fetch'd from Inſtitution. p. 104 d.

Juſtification and Sanctification have the Title of being given to them. p. 26 a.

——— only from Jehovah. p. 29 a.

——— given to us at the Reſurrection of Chriſt. p. 105 a.

——— in ſeeking of it, we muſt have recourſe to God, as juſtifying. p. 103 a.

——— attributed to Free-grace, as much as to the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt. p. 104 a.

——— the Acts of it are immanent in God. p. 106 a.

——— receiv'd by us, only when we believe. p. 16 a.

——— that is actual, which a Sinner hath on God's part juſtifying, is a conſequence of juſtifying Faith. p. 168 a.

——— not by Faith of ours, but by laying hold on the Free-grace of God and Jeſus Chriſt. p. 37 b.

——— in it God begins with the Soul. p. 57 b.

——— would properly be by ſanctification, if a Man was juſtified upon an act of believing any Divine Truth. p. 38 b.

——— by Faith, in Foro Conſcientiæ. p. 169 a.

Juſtified, how the Elect are ſaid to be ſo from all Eternity, and yet not truly till they believe. p. 107 a.

——— to be ſo by Chriſt and Faith, all one in Scripture. p. 4 c.

Juſtifying, in it God hath three progreſſes, which anſwer to the ſeveral Acts in Jeſus Chriſt. p. 107 a.

——— Faith ſeated in the whole heart. p. 14 b.

——— Faith is not a bare Aſſent to the Promiſes, tho' never ſo ſpiritual. p. 13 b.

Impropriëtatis & Excecutionis, what. p. 55 d.

K.

KEys of the Kingdom of Heaven, what. p. 46 d.

——— given to Peter both as a Saint and a Miniſter. p. 66 d.

Knowledge of the mercies of God's Nature, not ground of Faith, without the purpoſes of Mercy declared to us. p. 5 a.

——— if it be a ſaving one of the Mercies of God, whether ſufficient. p. 133 a.

——— that that is falſe of Chriſt in carnal Men. p. 127 a.

——— whereby Jeſus Chriſt knows himſelf, a Natural Knowledge. p. 5 b.

L.

LAw of Nature not ſufficient to ſet any thing that is parallel to Divine Inſtitution. p. 6 d.

——— of Nature, requires not to make appeals to any. p. 197 d.

——— all Men in their Natural Condition are under it. p. 37 c.

——— the common one of Myſtical Communion, takes place in Inſtituted Bodies of Churches. p. 4 d.

Lawfulneſs of gathering Churches out of Churches, p. 390 d.

——— of gathering Churches out of others, proved by the Principle and Practice of Presbyterians. p. 395 d.

Laying hold of the Hope ſet before us, what. p. 192 a.

Liberty of Appeals to a Presbytery, will breed great Inconveniencies. p. 200 d.

——— of Conſcience, what ſort is to be indulged. p. 399 d.

Life eternal, through Jeſus Chriſt the fountain of Life. p. 125 a.
Like-mindedneſs of Affection is to be among Brethren of a Church, notwithſtanding Differences. p. 401 d.
Love in God ariſeth from his Goodneſs. p. 45 a.
——— and Grace, are the roots of Mercy. p. ib. a.
——— a Man through it to himſelf ſhould ſeek Life and Salvation in Chriſt. p. 125 a.
——— of Members of a Church one to another, ought to be ſo great, as not to be diſcharged, but in the performance of it. p. 302 d.
——— of God, aſſured in the Benefits he beſtows. p. 103 b.
——— of God to Believers, is to be ſhed abroad in their Hearts. p. ib. b.
——— of a Believer, is from him who loves without any preceeding Merit. p. 125 b.
——— that is brotherly, ought to be between Churches. p. 227 d.

M.

Magiſtrates are to grant what we requeſt, not unlawful or contrary to the Word of God. p. 391 d.
Maintenance of a Miniſter, is to be regulated by the common Rules of Juſtice, which are to be found in like caſes. p. 323 d.
Man after the fall, before the promiſe of the Meſſiah, had no ground of Faith. p. 5 a.
——— hath nothing in himſelf that will help to the attaining of Faith. p. 26, 33 c.
——— to be a Publican and Heathen, what. p. 38 d.
Manifeſtation of Chriſt to the Soul, gives full Joy to it, and nothing elſe can. p. 112 b.
Matter of the Promiſe and Oath God made with Abraham. p. 187 a.
——— of the Oath made with Abraham, how it belongs to us now. p. 191 a.
——— Practical, better repreſented by Examples than Rules. p. 25 d.
——— of much Liberty, to remove from one Church to another, on civil conveniencies. p. 394 d.
Means, God doth all in the uſe of them. p. 88 c.
——— if we ſhould fail in the uſe of them, yet we ſhould not neglect them. p. ib. c.
——— which God took, to bring the Apoſtles Apoſtleſhip to perfection. p. 296 d.
Members, what ſort God hath ſet in his Church. p. 10 e ——— of a Church may be ſo, of the Church univerſal by way of priviledge, but an Elder can't. p. 156 d.
——— of the Body ſpiritual, are of ſeveral meaſures of gifts and graces. p. 253 d.
Mercy with God. p. 2 a.
——— of God, procreative of Faith. p. 3 a.
——— of God's Heart and Nature, the prime Object and Support to Faith. p. 8 a.
——— in God, extends not only to the Jews, but to the Gentiles alſo. p. 17 a.
——— of God, the main Article of the Old Teſtament. p. 8 a.
——— ours are ſubſtantial ones. p. 21 a.
——— uſed for merciful Effects. p. 25 a.
——— of God, flows to us thro' the Heart of Chriſt.
——— have a ſure foundation in God's Heart. p. 32 a.
——— of God, proceeds from his Strength. p. 37 a.
——— of God, is eminently called his Glory. p. 41 a.
——— is in God as a perfection. p. 44 a.
——— in God's Heart, are founded on Jeſus Chriſt. p. 56 a.
——— in God, different from that in Men. p. 62 a.
——— and Grace, glorious properties in the divine Being. p. 63 a.
——— in God, is properly an inward principle in him. p. 64 a.
——— and Grace joyned together in God. p. 70 a.
——— in its Effects, aſcribed to God as the proper cauſe of them. p. 65 a.
——— an eſſential and genuine Attribute of God. p. 67 a.
——— and Goodneſs joyned together in God. p. 7[illegible] a.
——— of God, one with Jehovah. p. 75 a.
——— of God, are wonders. p. 49 a.
——— of God, the cauſe of his pardoning the Ninevites. p. 16 a.
——— of God from everlaſting. p. 30 a.
——— and Grace, the higheſt Attributes in God. p. 82 a.
——— ariſing from weakneſs cannot be conſiſtent with the Nature of God. p. 85 a.
——— not in God, if Men had never been miſerable. p. 86 a.
——— in God, a Metaphorical Attribute. p. 87 a.
——— the Subject of Faith. p. 88 a.
——— of God, faith in them ſtrengthens the Heart to ſtay it ſelf upon God for forgiveneſs. p. 93 a.
——— that are in the Heart and Nature of God, ſhould encourage us to come to him. p. 97 a.
——— of God, by depending on them we greatly honour him, and it will prove moſt comfortable to our ſelvees. p. 100 a.
——— of God, a belief of them does give a ſubſiſtence to forgiveneſs in the promiſes. p. 90 a.
——— that are rich, a ſoveraign Cordial to fainting Souls. p. 93 a.
——— ſhewn by God, depends on an Act of his Will. p. 6 a.
——— ſhewn by God to ſinners, an Act of the greateſt condeſcenſion in him. p. 10 a.
——— why joyned with ſtrength by God. p. 36 a.
——— of God's Nature, a conſideration to Sinners to lay hold on the promiſes. p. 92 a.
——— it is to enjoy Ordinances, and they are to be preferred to all things. p. 385 d.
Method which Chriſt preſcribed to be taken with unorderly Brethren, ſhews that particular Churches are meant, Mat. 18. p. 63 d.
Miniſter, what it ſignifies. p. 10 e.
——— what his Office is. p. 11 e.

——— or Offices, what ſort God hath ſet in his Church. p. 12 e.
——— makes not a Church, neither they nor their power requiſite to the gathering of it. p. 257 d.
——— the Servant of Chriſt to the Church, to do his Work therein. p. 297 d.
——— are to employ their Gifts for the Converſion of thoſe without, as well as building up thoſe under his particalar charge. p. 313 d.
——— are in a true and proper ſence to thoſe without, as well as thoſe within. p. ib. d.
——— muſt diſpence the Ordinance of the Lord's-Supper, let the neceſſity of it be what it will. p. 351 d.
Miniſtry is neceſſary, to prevent Errors and Miſtakes. p. 316 d.
Miſtakes, thoſe are liable to, that are throughly humbled for ſin. p. 67 b.

N.

NAme of God, ſpeaks his abſolute Exiſtence. p. 19 a.
——— Jehovah, beſt ſuits with his being merciful. p. ib. a.
——— Jehovah, matter of Wonder above all the reſt. p. 21 a.
——— Jehovah, the Subject of Grace. p. ib. a.
——— of God, El what it is. p. 34 a.
——— of God intends Mercy. p. 10 a.
——— of God, the ground of a Chriſtian's Faith. p. 18 a.
——— of God Jehovah, induceth us to truſt in him at all times. p. 31 a.
Nature Humane of Chriſt the Head of all, being in the Order of Grace. p. 240 a.
——— pure innocent afore the fall, was far above the believing thoſe things which we believe. p. 31 c.
——— corrupt, loſt all ability of truly believing in Chriſt ſince the fall. p. 25 c.
——— of Man prone to reſt in performances, and not to look to the free Grace of God. p. 60 c.
——— of the Lords-Supper ſhewn. p. 333 d.
Neceſſity of Faith in Chriſt. p. 134 a.
——— of Officers and Miniſters in Churches. p. 262 d.
——— of waiting on God in the diſpenſation of his Word. p. 308 d.
——— Uſe and Excellency of Officers and Miniſters to a Church ſhewed. p. 263 d.

O.

OAth of God irrevocable. p. 56 a.
——— of God, what it imports. p. 188 a.
——— of God abſolute. p. ib. a.
——— of God, conſidered two ways. p. 191 a.
Object, principally of Faith, is the Love and Grace, which was, and is in God's Heart and Nature. p. 200 a.
——— the ſame of ſame of juſtifying Faith in God and Chriſt, according to what they have declared themſelves to be, as to their ſaving and juſtifying Men. p. 170 a.
Obligation of Members to particular Churches under the New Teſtament, far leſs than under the Old. p. 304 d.
——— of Members to Churches, if it were by divine Inſtitution indiſſoluble, yet the Magiſtrate might make a ſeceſſion of it. p. 395 d.
Occaſion and Object of the Aim of a Believer's Faith in an act of Recumbency. p. 129 b.
Offices, Adminiſtrations and Ordinances in the Church, are divers. p. 253 d.
——— every one in the Church hath the power of Chriſt imparted to it. p. 268 d.
——— of a Church, what they are. p. 272 d.
——— of a Church are divers. p. 273 d.
——— of Paſtor and Teacher of an Equal Rank and Power, their difference only in a differing manner of adminiſtration of the Word. p.
——— that is common to a Superiour Officer, with an inferiour, may be the proper difference of the inferiour one. p. 283 d.
——— every miniſterial one hath a bleſſing to accompany it, according to its Order and Inſtitution. p. 293 d.
Officers and Gifts of the Church, are the joynt and diſtinct Work of the Trinty. p. 263 d.
——— proceed from Chriſt, as their King and Lord. p. 269 d.
——— the ordinary ones, which Chriſt hath appointed in his Church. p. 271 d.
——— is an Officer to the whole Church. p. ib. d.
——— is ſeparated to ſome ſpecial Work. p. ib. d.
——— is inveſted with ſpecial Authority, to do that lawfully which in others could not be done. p. 272 d.
——— of a Church, have the ſpecial Gifts of Jeſus Chriſt. p. 293 d.
——— being diſplaced for a Crime, cleaving to the adminiſtration of his Office, is a falſe ſuppoſition. p. 379 d.
——— can't be thoſe out of the Body, being guilty of ſome Crimes, ſo the ſame Crimes matter of diſplacing him after he is choſen. p. 385 d.
——— of a Church, are precions to God as well as the Church. p. 292 d.
——— ſimply diſclaiming them, leſs than Excommunication. p. 384 d.
Ordinances of Church-worſhip, eſtabliſhed in the New Teſtament, which are to continue to the end of the World. p. 29 d.
——— or inſtituted Worſhip under the New Teſtament, are to continue to the end of the World. p. 32 d.
——— the four ſtanding ones of the Church, in Acts 2. 42. p. 328 d.
——— occaſional ones, what. p. 334 d.
——— continual ones, what. p. ib. d.
——— but of two kinds in the Church, occaſional and continual. p. 335 d.
——— no one inſtituted for meer negative Occaſions, or Vacancy from other hindrances. p. 336 d.
——— that are not occaſional, but ſtanding and continual, muſt of neceſſity have a ſet time by Inſtitution. p. 337 d.
——— not occaſional under the Old Teſtament, had a fixed time by Inſtitution. p. 338 d.
——— of the Lords-Supper, a continual ſtanding Ordinance. p. 339 d.
——— continual, muſt have an Inſtitution to appoint a time for them. p. 341 d.
——— continual and occaſional, are ordained for the Lords-day. p. 342 d.
——— con-

——— continual, which of them hath the moſt Intereſt. p. 347 d.

——— occaſional, what Intereſt they have in the Lords-day. p. 347 d.

Order in Churches, what it may denote. p. 253 d.

P.

Parallel drawn between the Prieſts and Levites under the Law, and the Officers under the Goſpel. p. 281 d.

Pariſhes, diſtinguiſhed by divine Inſtitution. p. 7 e.

Paſtor and Teacher, their Work and Office. p. 16 e.

——— and Teacher, waiting on Teaching, what it means. p. 17 e.

Parts Eſſential, of Church-Order and Worſhip, have expreſs and direct Rules. p. 27 d.

Pardon of Sin proceeds from the Strength of God. p. 38 a.

——— of Iniquities by God, is a Wonder of Wonders. p. 50 a.

People ought to lay hold on God, when he is near. p. 73 a.

——— of a Congregation, makes a Church under one Elderſhip. p. 74 d.

——— being fixed for Worſhip in ſeveral Bodies without Elders, are defective. p. 93 d.

Πόλις, taken indefinitely, both for Cities and Countrey Towns. p. 81 d.

Performance of Duties, that Chriſt ſets us to do in their ſeaſon, better than enjoying Communion with him. p. 115 b.

Perſons that Chriſt delights to diſcover himſelf to, are ſuch that are paſſionately fond of him. p. 109 d.

Prayer and Worſhip exerciſed in the Synagogues. p. 58 d.

——— that which is true, ſpiritual and effectual in Faith, what it is. p. 143 b.

Places of congregational Meetings, are in almoſt all Languages, called the Church. p. 73 d.

Poteſtas Ordinis & Juriſdictionis, what. p. 230 d.

Power in God, twofold. p. 25 a.

——— and Mercy joyned together, when ſpoken of God. p. 70 a.

——— Spiritual and Eccleſiaſtical, what. p. 17 d.

——— of an Office in the Church, is a relation of ſome conſtant adminiſtration. p. 190 d.

——— of an Elder to rule, is an adjunct of his power to preach. p. 192 d.

——— of Excommunication, not in the Presbytery, but in a congregation. p. 121 d.

——— of governing, not given to the Church univerſal. p. 152 d.

——— of the Apoſtles themſelves, of ruling in all the Churches, was founded upon their commiſſion to preach. p. 193 d.

——— that is denyed to Synods in point of male adminiſtrations. p. 202 d.

——— that Synods are entruſted with, is primarily to be exerciſed upon a Church that neglects its Duties. p. 209 d.

——— which Chriſt Jeſus hath placed in his Church by inſtitution, hath the ſuper-added Authority of Chriſt, beyond the force of Moral or Rational Inducements. p. 225 d.

——— of Long-ſuffering to Abraham, was engaged to the utmoſt to work upon Abraham*'s Soul.* p. 187 a.

Preaching the word of Faith, is as the firſt Link of that chain of outward means of Salvation. p. 304 d.

Precepts or Examples there is not for Synods to excommunicate Churches. p. 205 d.

Presbytery over many Congregations, twofold. p. 177 d.

——— being ſet over many Congregations, the Presbyters muſt bear a ſpecial relation of Elders to all thoſe Congregations. p. 180 d.

——— to bear a Relation of ſtanding Elders, to all thoſe Congregations as one Church, hath many Incongruities in it. p. 187 d.

——— the Practice of it contrary to the Rule given by Chriſt of Love and Peace. p. 405 d.

——— the Doctrine of it, the Abſurdity thereof ſhewn. p. 153 d.

——— makes three ſorts of Churches to make up one. p. 122 d.

Prerogative of Chriſt, to determine the bounds of Juriſdiction of Elders, as well as to conſtitute them. p. 106 d.

——— of Chriſt, to aſſign and conſtitute the Church, that is the Seat of Government. p. 105 d.

——— of Chriſt, is alone to diſſolve a Churches external State as to all Ordinances. p. 208 d.

Praiſes, God being terrible in them, what it implies. p. 36 a.

Pride in the Will of Man, which will not be ſubject to the Righteouſneſs of God. p. 47 c.

Primitive Churches, argues that that they were fixed Bodies. p. 51 d.

Principles, two in general laid down to diſprove the Presbyterian Doctrine. p. 176 d.

——— inward in God, which is the cauſe of Mercy. p. 67 a.

Promiſes of God ſure in their Event. p. 96 a.

——— no one of them can be laid hold on, either by way of Aſſurance or Recumbency, further than pitched on the ſpecial Mercies of God. p. 34 b.

——— abſolute ones do lay before Faith in the Underſtanding great Truths, which are productive of Faith in the Will. p. 180 a.

——— abſolute, and Declarations, lay before the Underſtanding, that thoſe that were to be converted, are to be vile Sinners. p. 181 a.

——— abſolute hint to the poor Soul, that he may be one that God will be merciful to. p. 182 a.

——— of God, contain the matter of the Oath ſworn to. p. 189 a.

——— indefinite, are ſufficient ground to draw the Soul to believe. p. 195 a.

——— indefinite, what they are. p. 194 a.

——— of God, how they are indefinite. p. 131 b.

——— indefinite of God, do agree with the Intentions of God. p. 131 b.

——— in declared ones of God, he ſuited them ſo, that there is extant ſome Promiſe, Inſtance or Declaration, for every good thing he means to beſtow. p. 150 b.

——— for whatſoever God actually performs. p. 151 b.

——— in their Tenour are to be conſidered apart from their matter. p. ib. b.

——— being indefinite, it is ſufficient to obtain them, that their Faith on them be a Faith anſwering to the Tenour of the Promiſes. p. 152 b.

——— are to be conſidered as they come under our Prayer, or ſuited to them. p. 153 b.

——— of three ſorts, what they are. p. 162 b.

——— temporal, as to their Tenour are conditional. p. 164 b.

——— conditional, depend on the pleaſure of God, upon what Qualification he will beſtow them. p. 165 b.

——— temporal in their performances, are to underſtood disjunctively. p. 166 b.

——— concerning our Salvation, are of three ſorts. p. 169 b.

——— ſpiritual, being abſolute, all Men are to pray abſolutely for them, with a Faith of Aſſurance and Certainty. p. 170 b.

——— of Salvation, how they are abſolute. p. 171 b.

——— temporal, to God's People are but indefinitely, not univerſal. p. 163 b.

——— indefinite ones, may be, and are ſufficient ground to draw the Heart to believe. p. 195 a.

Proceedings civil, run not parallel with thoſe eccleſiaſtical. p. 20 d.

——— they are the ſame uſed, and courſes to be taken for the diſcharge of Duties between Church and Church occaſionally. p. 240 d.

Prophecy, what it denotes in the Language of the Apoſtle. p. 295 d.

——— in the Church, implies two things; viz. Teaching and Exhorting. p. 280 d.

Φρονεῖν, in Rom. 12. what it ſignifies. p. 275 d.

Proviſion gracious God hath made in the World for his Worſhip, and to feed his Flock. p. 344 d.

Proſpect in general of the Opinions about Church-conſtitution. p. 1 d.

Preſent in Spirit, what it is. p. 12 d.

Puniſhment Spiritual, doth not always follow Excommunication. p. 37 d.

——— Spiritual inſtituted, where it is placed, there the ſeat of Government is truly placed. p. 237 d.

Prudence uſed by our Saviour in caſe of eminent Dangers, an Example to us. p. 375 d.

Purport, the true one of the grand Charta given by Chriſt, Mat. 16. 19. p. 44 d.

Q.

QUalification, no one in a Man can be a Ground and Object for his firſt Act of Faith. p. 164 a.

Queſtion between the Presbyterians and Independants ſtated. p. 179 d.

R.

RAnks, the differing ſorts of Officers typified by the Prieſt and Levites under the Law. p. 280 d.

Readineſs God is in to declare his Mercy. p. 12 a.

Reaſons, why God would have us in order to Salvation, to know Chriſt, and come to him. p. 134 a.

——— Spiritual, falls in to prove both the bounding Elders power, and the Bounds of Churches, is the ſole prerogative of Chriſt. p. 106 d.

——— why Chriſt hath inſtituted ſuch a particular Congregation to be a Temple apart to himſelf, and why he hath endowed them with the Priviledge, Name and Nature of the whole. p. 246 d.

——— why the Churches are not bound to bind an Error upon their Brethren, which are Members of them. p. 397 d.

——— why all do not believe. p. 119 a.

——— why Chriſt would have Mary at firſt to tell his Diſciples, that he would aſcend. p. 117 b.

Reconciliation propounded to all, that all might be ſtirred up to endeavour after it. p. 96 c.

Redemption with God. p. 3 a.

Relation mutual, the fountain of all power. p. 68 d.

——— of Elders to a Church, may be removed. p. 230 d.

Renouncing our own Abilities in it, we work in ſubordination to the power of God. p. 65 c.

Reſidency-non, is againſt the Rule of Chriſt. p. 61 e.

Reſting in Duties muſt not be. p. 59 c.

Reſpect the ſame of Churches, and other Elders as of Churches, and the Brethren of other Churches. p. 231 d.

Revelation of Mercy in God's Nature, the only ground of Faith. p. 6 a.

——— in Gal 1. 14. is oppoſed to two other ways of knowing Divine Truths. p. 319 d.

Riches of Mercy in God. p. 5 a.

——— of Grace, fully given to us in Heaven. p. 30 a.

——— of Mercy diſplayed in pardoning the greateſt Sinners. p. 91 c.

Righteouſneſs of Chriſt and that of Faith, all one in God's Account. p. 11 c.

——— of Man's own, hinders the work of Faith. p. 27 c.

——— and Endeavours of Men, are Enemies to the way of believing. p. 78 c.

Riſe of Mercy, ſhewn whence it is. p. 43 a.

Romans 12. 3, —— 8. explicated at large. p. 271 d.

Root and Foundation of Myſtery of Iniquity, laid by Church Officers aſſerting preheminence. p. 276 d.

Rule in general made for Uniformities ſake, to bind up the weak and ſtrong, contrary to the Apoſtle's Rule. p. 236 d.

——— and Government in common to the Paſtor and Teacher, with the Elders. p. 283 d.

——— by which Stipends in Humane Governments are meaſured. p. 322 d.

——— two given to determine the circumſtances of times of an Ordinance. p. 330 d.

——— of ſuch circumſtance as do belong to the third Commandment. p. 331 d.

S.

SAints formed up into Congregations with their Elders, have only inſtituted Authority

rity in them, and all other Relation of Saints and Churches is myſtical. p. 224 d.
—— when by mutual conſent they do joyn into Societies, ought to ſhew their Commiſſion that they have from Jeſus Chriſt. p. 242 d.
—— are joyned into one Body ſo, as Occaſion is, not confuſed but ordered. p. 253 d.
—— and Members of Chriſt myſtical, have an immediate independant Power and Authority from Jeſus Chriſt their Head and King, to gather and combine themſelves into an Aſſembly, without any warrant from on Earth. p. 257 d.
—— tho' but two or three, have power from Chriſt to begin this Fellowſhip. p. ib. d.
—— living under Chriſtian Governours, what Warrant they have for this ſetting up a Church. p 260 d.
—— or Perſons profeſſing Chriſt, ought not to judge or diſpiſe, but forbear one another according to Chriſt. p. 402 d.
—— viſiting one another, a ſign of Grace. p. 301 d.
Sacrament to be adminiſtred every Lords-day, is more for Edification. p. 333 d.
—— being Seals, are fixed to abſolute promiſes, and when rightly uſed in Faith, have certainly their Effects, but anointing is not ſo. p. 389 d.
Salvation, the buſineſs not to be neglected. p. 117 a.
—— great, offered in the Goſpel, ought to encourage and excite us to ſeek it. p. 96 c.
—— ſought by Sinners, and continued ſo to be, they ſhall certainly obtain it. p. 97 c.
Sanctification hath the Title of being given to it in Scripture. p. 26 a.
—— a Witneſs ſhewn, by the workings of it. p. 94 b.
Saul had true juſtifying Faith ſhewn, in that Chriſt ſaith of him, Behold he prays. p. 174 a.
—— his Faith at firſt on Chriſt was but a bare act of Recumbency at his Converſion. p. 173 a.
Scriptures, tho' written under the Old Teſtament, are readily applicable to the new conſtituted Churches of Saints under the Goſpel. p. 291 d.
Seat of Government in Churches twofold. p. 95 d.
Seeking of Chriſt concerns us above all things. p. 126 a.
Self in every Man againſt believing. p. 46 c.
Sentence of Excommunication hath two parts, what they are. p. 203 d.
Separation to the Work of the Miniſtry aſcribed to the Holy Ghoſt. p. 297 d.
Seaſon, in which God takes to declare his Mercy. p. 12 a.
Sight of Sin prepares the Soul for Faith juſtifying. p. 2 a.
—— ſpiritual, which diſtinguiſhes it from all knowledge of Chriſt after the fleſh. p. 2 b.
Sin, the Hainouſneſs of it, a great diſcouragement to Men in believing. p. 91 c.
—— ought not to be a bar, to hinder our coming to Chriſt.
—— the greateſt pardoned by God, becauſe of the end he aimed at in ſetting up his Grace and Mercy. p. 93 c.
—— the greateſt ones of the Children of God come under the proviſo, Pſal. 86. p. 54 a.
Sinners ſet light by the mercy of God. p. 1 a.
—— pardoned under the Old Teſtament upon the Security of Chriſt. p. 3 a.
—— can't rejoyce in Chriſt till they believe on him. p. 150 a.
—— ſeeking Salvation, and continuing ſo to do, ſhall certainly obtain it. p. 97 c.
—— can never come to cloſe with God, but under the repreſentation of a pardoning and juſtifying God. p. 31 b.
—— calling them, is giving them a New Nature and Being. p. 26 a.
Souls, how they may for its Salvation treat with the Free-Grace of God in the Covenant. p. 153 a.
—— a poor one coming to God, what it was for. p. 28 b.
—— ſenſible of his own Inability, ought to act in believing, without examining whether the power be of God. p. 101 e.
—— that have not the Faith of Aſſurance, may yet have recourſe to ſuch abſolute Promiſes, and with what kind and degree of Faith. p. 177 a.
Spirit ſpeaking to our Spirit, is not always diſtinct, perceived to be from another. p. 197 a.
Strength ought to be ſought from God. p. 41 a.
Subject of the New Teſtament Church. p. 4 e.
Subordination of Synods, ought to have the moſt expreſs Warrant in Scripture. p. 211 d.
—— of Synods, to introduce a forreign eccleſiaſtical power. p. 214 d.
—— of Synods, requires a repreſentation ariſing from other Repreſentations of ſpiritual power, and ſo hath no warrant for it in Scripture. p. 217 d.
—— of Officers to another, is not in reſpect of ſubjection of any Juriſdiction of a Superior. p. 285 d.
Supper of the Lord, whether to be adminiſtred every Lords-Day or no. p. 330 d.
—— of the Lord, a continual Ordinance, from its having a time fixed it by Inſtitution. p. 338 d.
—— of the Lord, is not occaſional in its firſt Inſtitution. p. 339 d.
Suitableneſs of one, that knows not of a certainty of himſelf, to be intended unto the Tenour of the Promiſes, as it reſpects Perſons. p. 180 a.
Synagogues among the Jews had their diſtinct Officers. p. 58 d.
Synods have not a power to reſcind the Sentence of Excommunication. p. 202 d.
—— have not a power given by Chriſt, to compel a Church to acknowledge their Sentence. p. 203 d.
—— have not a Juridicial Superiour Power. p. ib. d.
—— have not in them a power given them by Chriſt, to excommunicate other Churches. p. 204 d.
—— have not Power to Excommunicate Churches, proved from the Nature of Excommunication. p. 206 d.
—— ſuppoſing the Fault of Excommunication be laid in the Elders, and not in the Church, to deal with the Elders. p. 210 d.

An Alphabetical Table.

T.

TElling the Church, what it is. p. 56 d.

—— the Church ſuppoſes not only two or three Elders. p. 66 d.

Tenure, by which Miniſters have a right to a due maintenance. p. 322 d.

—— of the promiſes is indefinite to Perſons, and not univerſal to all Men. p. 178 a.

—— of the promiſes, have yet ſomething that is abſolute concerning perſons, and yet ſomething that is indefinite. p. ib. a.

—— of the Covenant, altered under the Goſpel. p. 118 b.

Teſtament, the New one, uſes the Terms of Elders and Presbyters indifferently. p. 183 d.

—— the New holds forth a twofold Communion of Churches. p. 222 d.

Throne of Chriſt, ſaid to be the Throne of David, becauſe ſhewed out by him. p. 49 a.

Times of occaſional Ordinances, are left for Men to determine by general Rules. p. 331 d.

—— no inſtituted one ſet for any Ordinance under the Goſpel, but the Lords-day. p. 340 d.

—— no one under the New Teſtament, in which out of Duty Chriſtians are to meet, but on the Lords-day. p. 349 d.

—— of Chriſt's diſcovery of himſelf to the Soul, is, when it hath run thro' all means for it. p. 110 b.

Timothy 1 Ep. 1. 13, 14. opened at large. p. 158 a.

Tolleration among Chriſtians, muſt be according to Chriſt. p. 401 d.

Towns, each one and Cities among the Jews, had all things in themſelves. p. 61 d.

Trinity, the whole of it, are equally merciful and long-ſuffering. p. 74 a.

—— they do all concur in the Converſion of a Sinner. p. 112 a.

—— what it bears witneſs to. p. 91 b.

—— how it bears witneſs in Heaven. p. 97 b.

—— every perſon there hath a particular hand in Man's Salvation. p. ib. b.

—— each perſon hath his love diſtinct. p. 98 b.

—— merciful to poor ſinners. p. 34 a.

—— they concurring together, ſhews that Salvation is no ſlight matter. p. 117 a.

Truth and Mercy in God, the ſame. p. 68, 73 a.

—— of the ſeveral Officers of a Church eſtabliſhed. p. 287 d.

Truſt, one great and eminent act of Faith. p. 44 b.

—— in God, competent with the Eſtate of a Chriſtian here below. p. 45 b.

—— honours God moſt, and hath more Faith in it. p. 46 b.

Types and Bands between Churches, by which Communion is to be exerciſed, and what they are. p. 229 d.

—— the Ark was one of Chriſt. p. 130 a.

V.

VAriation of power into Subordination, has no Rule from the Word of God. p. 215 d.

Variety that is great in the method of God's juſtifying us. p. 111 a.

Unbelief the inward priſon of the Soul. p. 33 c.

Underſtanding and Will have their proper acting; and exerciſing of Faith towards God and Chriſt, as they have revealed themſelves in theſe Declarations and Promiſes of Salvation. p. 175 a.

Unlawfulneſs of leaving one Church, and ſetting up another, depends on what, and how great the Obligation of Members is to Churches. p. 394 d.

Union with Chriſt by Faith, what. p. 15 b.

—— of Believers into one Body, neceſſary to make a Church. p. 50 d.

—— without it Believers can't excommunicate. p. 51 d.

—— which is founded on Communion with the Father and Son, is of all other Unions the cloſeſt. p. 123 b.

—— conjugal, of the Will to God, in the Bonds of Love, proceeds from Communion with the Sacred Trinity. p. 124 b.

Unity, brotherly, wherein it conſiſts. p. 33 e.

W.

WArrant, no one or Deſignment for the Subordination of Synods in Scripture. p. 213 d.

Ways of God, what they are. p. 15 a.

—— by which Inſtitutions are made known, and declared by Chriſt. p. 18 b.

—— of Juſtification, may be conſidered as to us, of that juſtification in the Promiſes to quiet the hinderances of Faith. p. 136 b.

Widdows, what ſort they are to be choſen into that number. p. 28 e.

Will of Man, all the power in it can't enable him to believe. p. 40 c.

—— of Man, ſet to be ſaved in its own way. p. 45 c.

—— of God, muſt be ſubmitted to in this World, if that we would be ſaved. p. 51 c.

—— of Man, ſets the higheſt value on the Excellency of Chriſt. p. 41 b.

—— of a Believer, is ſtamped with an Inſtinct after Chriſt. p. 41 b.

—— of Man, in it is to be a fixed and firm adherence unto God and Chriſt, and to the good things promiſed by them. p. 176 a.

Witneſs of the Spirit, 1 John 5. 8. what. p. 95 b.

Wiſdom natural, and Reaſon againſt Faith. p. 28, 34 c.

—— of God, reſerves it ſelf a Liberty. p. 147 b.

Work of the Father, is to teach ſouls to come to Chriſt, and to draw them to him. p. 121 a.

—— performed by ſinful Men, are carnal and abominable. p. 58 c.

—— of Faith in Chriſt's Blood, and it beſprinkled, have a Teſtimony in them. p. 93 b.

Workings of Natural Conſcience, will not help a Man to believe. p. 35 c.

—— which depend on God's Free-grace, will not be Natural. p. 84 a.

Z.

ZEal for God, what. p. 77 c.

ERRATA.

Reader,

YOu have here the Errata not only of this Fourth Volume, but of the Firſt, Second and Third Volumes of the Author's Works. Where the Number of the Line hath a fi. added to it, (ex. gr. 9 a fi.) it ſignifies that you muſt count the Lines beginning from the bottom of the Page. But in this Fourth Volume the Lines are always to be counted from the top of the Page; and where there happens any void and unprinted ſpaces in a Page, yet the Lines muſt be reckoned to go on, as if the Page had been filled up: Ex. gr. in the Treatiſe of Church-Government, p. 147. l. 28. that Erratum is but in l. 23. if you count only the printed lines: This came to paſs, becauſe in collecting the Errours of this Fourth Volume, the Lines were computed by applying a Scale of Figures to them, and not by telling every Line, which would have been exceeding tedious, and alſo more liable to Miſtakes.

Vol. I. Part I.

page	line
72	25	FOr likewiſe Read likeneſs
84	6	f. Affection r. Aſſertion
128	9	a fi. r. ſumm'd up ſo many particulars as in
152	9	a fi. f. on Earth r. in Heaven
154	19	a fi. f. ſecond r. firſt
	3	a fi. r. in its ſelf
164	13	r. be to the
188	24	r. to the praiſe of his Glory.
197	9	f. now r. much
205	ult.	r. in his Word
211	3	f. heir r. their
213	3	r. faith before, they had faith under
214	24	f. ſpeaking r. ſpoken
215	17	a fi. f. wrought r. not
217	3	a fi. f. a pledge r. an earneſt
226	6	a fi. r. needeth
	4	a fi. r. that is not actual
227	26	f. there r. here.
279	8	f. hundred r. thouſand
285	15	a fi. r. Contriver
289	37	r. he addeth ὑπερβάλλον
295	27	f. ordinary r. extraordinary
330	6	a fi. dele Love
		f. page 350. r. p. 354
372	31	f. raiſing r. raiſed
382	1	dele both the
403	11	a fi. f. ſatisfie r. ſanctifie
437	7	a fi. f. ſtrengthneth r. anſwereth
451	14	a fi. r. then perhaps is here meet
476	29	dele unto
	12	a fi. f. New Browniſts r. Old Browniſts

Part II.

page	line
13	3	f. death r. ſin
19	1	r. only left a Man
		f. page 32 r. 40
56	13	dele it
103	1	r. but there were thoſe who held that they were ſo, not by Nature, but by Imitation or Cuſtom
123	2	r. whoever ſins that ſin, God makes an
	21	r. and in that Image we
129	20	a fi. f. nothing any Creature r. to reduce the Creature to nothing
133	30	f. that r. a
143	12	f. commemorating r. communicating
186	ult.	f. ſpirit r. ſoul
187	1	dele [he] after and
214	4	a fi. r. theſe are things
215	2	f. union r. declaration
222	6, 7.	r. hath upon the ſoul now under
257	16	r. any thing out of God to move
279	5	r. ſpoken of, which as it is given
281	7	a fi. dele it too, and by
283	13	r. but whether we are ſaved thereby
	15	r. do not hold that we are juſtified
290	18	f. eminent r. immanent
297	27	dele on account of his Act
299	6	r. which we had not before
300	25	f. where r. whereas
	19	a fi. f. mediate r. immediate

Part III.

35	26	f. does r. do
39	3	r. ſhould not work
67	28	r. 2 Cor. 3. 18. & dele loſt
67	12	a fi. dele under
94	7	f. extra r. intra
102	8	r. Heb. 10. 7.
	10	f. attain r. again
108	10	a fi. r. he alſo took part of the ſame
	9	a fi. dele to
	6	a fi. r. extended
108	4	a fi. r. becauſe he had not
	3	a fi. r. tho' his mediation be of
108	penult.	r. yet it doth
117	11	f. fourthly r. fifthly
126	9	a fi. r. but mediately by
142		f. Fourthly r. Fifthly

Vol. II. Part I.

On the Revelations.

page	line
4	6	FOr Covenant Read Rainbow
5	40	r. in one Engliſh word to expreſs it, ſignifies ſo
34	23	f. Cyrus r. Cyprus
67	38	dele parentheſis
120	5	a fi. f. culta r. cultu
	ult.	r. Antichriſti.

Part II. Of the Knowledge of God.

page	line
9	25	f. that r. not
11	16	a fi. r. as the Son and the Father
16	28	a fi. dele punctum
16	48	r. John 6. ver. 57.
20	13	f. is r. his
	9	a fi. dele ſemicolon f. a r. as
24	23	a fi. dele [that] after ſo
25	15	f. 2 r. 1
40	1	r. this ſoul as it will
	14	r. Pſal. 41. 13.
52	21	put ſemicolon after firſt
53	15	a fi. r. deliverer by the hands of
63	antepenult.	r. Pareus doth
66	32	r. denying it unto
	33	r. is intended
71	11	a fi. r. indigitation
73	37	f. 1 Joh. 5. 28. r. 1 Joh. 5 18.
77	6	a fi. f. tis here r. this
	3	a fi. r. ſimilar yet is
92	penult.	r. not all as
100	24	f. this of Reconciliation here r. thoſe before
101	34	r. εὐδόκητοι
116	15	dele ſemicolon after decreed
124	6	a fi. r. perſon that prayeth
125	10	r. Genuine
140	6	a fi. f. come under r. be
	5	a fi. dele when, dele and
156	18	r. Maſius
159	9	f. 81 r. 1
160	45	r. Rabbim
161	15	r. Lordſhip
174	20	f. 15 r. 13
176	21 & 29	f. Creature r. Creator
177	20	a fi. f. in r. is
	ult.	put the comma at ſo
179	antipen.	put the comma at he
193	30	put the ſtop not at λογος, but after again
	28	f. ſeeing r. ſeeth.
	ult.	f. 200 r. 202

Part III. Of the Creation.

6	33	r. wore that Glory
7	48	f. Davids r. Adams
15	16	dele near to
16	34	f. John 14. r. John 1. 14.
20	6	f. deſtroy r. deſcry
23	23	a fi. f. the r. their
26	17	r. nothing but what he
	25	r. not a Debtor
28	12	r. may fall out
29	18	a fi. r. from Entity
	26	a fi. r. imperfect
	12	a fi. r. their defectibility
31	17	f. unalterable r. unutterable
32	11	a fi. r. imperfect, to the end (as Heb. 11. ult.) that
33	20	f. Creator r. Creation
34	24	a fi. f. World r. Word
35	24	a fi. f. relation [illegible] revelation
39	1	f. preſent r. preve[illegible]
42	7	a fi. f. whom r. [illegible]en
44	14	f. one r. once, and put comma after once
46	5	f. Mortality r. Immortality
51	3	dele punctum ante and
53	22	f. ſupernatural light r. natural light
53	52	f. and r. in
57	14	f. Chriſt r. Chriſts
57	ult.	f. entend r. intend
60	48	f. is the manner r. in the manner
63	14	r. known by Revelation
	31	dele to, dele comma after all, put comma at had
	48	r. principle

ERRATA.

page	line
	46	r. principle
	49	f. ſaith, enough r. faith enough,
65	11	a fi. r. that 40th. Pſalm
67	27	r. the Old Teſtament ſays
	38	r. not naturally
70	10	a fi. r. he began to be
71	2	f. Chriſt r. Adam,
	3	f. Adam r. Chriſt
	5	r. principle
76	15	r. referring
79	4	f. but r. not
	16	f. this r. his
81	42	f. out r. in
83	32	f. aſſuring r. aſſuming
86	11	a fi. r. premiſe
88	11	a fi. f. Abraham r. Adam f. Enoch r. Enos
89	10	r. [Col. 2. 9. The
90	20	f. aſſuring r. aſſuming
91	51, 52.	f. confirm r. conform
94	51	r. promiſe of God did it
95	8	r. moulder
96	7	r. Candle doth diffuſe
	29	r. who hath
101	25	r. impaſſible
103	12	f. which now have r. we now have
104	35	r. the Humane Nature of Chriſt hath by
	37	r. what this Godhead raiſeth
109	7, 8.	r. (1 Cor. 12) when he came down from Heaven. They were
115	22	f. lone r. lower
116	7	f. active r. to act
117	8	a fi. f. no more r. not

Part IV. Of Election.

3	16	a fi. f. that r. than
	8	a fi. r. ſevered
4	7	a fi. r. priviledge rather than
5	5	r. obtain Salvation
	8	r. which they make of Chriſt is that Chriſt
8	18	dele it
9	8	f. as r. us
9	15	dele between
10	14	f. when r. whom
13	13	r. and they who were
14	27	a fi. f. our r. his
15	11	f. forces r. ſorts
21	54	f. ſelfly r. ſetly
24	ult.	f. ſo r. to
26	3	dele his
26	21	r. with God by Faith
29	26	dele punctum
	31	f. proceed r. proceeding
	32	put parentheſis after [Amos]
	14 & 15.	a fi. dele comma at [Egypt] put comma at [became]
30	32	dele punctum after [did] and put a comma after Paul
31	38	f. blind r. bind
32	2	put a comma at ſubſequent
32	41, 42.	f. immutability r. mutability
37	27	a fi. dele comma after (decreed) and put it in the next line after (them)
37	9	a fi. f. doth r. hath
	26	a fi. dele ſemicolon after promiſes
	24	a fi. dele comma after Subjects f. perſon r. perſons
	20	a fi. f. though not r. and
	11	a fi. r. that are within the hearing of it to ſeek
	8	a fi. dele two, dele colon at ſtory
39	23	f. any r. and
40	18	a fi. r. recourſe to for himſelf
41	7	f. Covenant and Grace r. Covenant of Grace
44	16 and 17	a fi. r. and all, by the uſe
47	8	a fi. r. he is pacified
48	17	f. ſet by r. ſetly
	18	a fi. f. begun r. begin
	42	f. receiveth r. reciteth
51	4	a fi. r. follow in my
55		dele the firſt line
57	1	f. commenſurate r. commiſerate
52	15	f. any r. my
59	30	f. gim r. him
60	15	dele at all
62	50	f. bounds r. bonds
63	7	a fi. f. ſignified r. ſignifying
64	23	f. which r. without
65	3	r. righteous
	10	r. Salvation but by, and
66	21	a fi. dele [in that he intended an Oath]
	15	a fi. r. this is as the
69	18	a fi. r. of, in Noah's
	41	r. New Teſtament
80	27	f. expiate r. expatiate
82	7	a fi. f. do r. doth
	6	a fi. put punctum at ſame f. for r. For dele us
	5	a fi. dele punctum after Glory f. Firſt r. firſt, dele of, f. Man r. Men
	4	a fi. dele comma after ſelf, put comma after more
83	4	r. Acts 13. 48.
	19	a fi. f. things r. they
	7	a fi. f. without r. with
	9	a fi. r. exclude
	30	f. yet r. that
84	3	f. which r. with
85	7	a fi. r. but in another following inſtant in which ſuch a non-elected perſons final perſevering
85	40	f. præ-election r. præterition and in the margent f. præ-electionis r. præteritionis
86	7	a fi. make a parentheſis of the five laſt Words
89	17	dele who
	11	a fi. dele colon r. of this Image ſee
91	3	f. deſire r. deſign
92	30	dele or
93	47	dele ſufficient
95	25	a fi. r. conſummated in that Union
97	11	r. Pſal. 135. 4.
	12	f. and r. in dele comma after explained
97	33	f. for us r. in us
	34	dele and ante is
104	15	r. as that of the reſt
	22	f. this r. his
	25	r. draw dele comma after draw
	11	a fi. r. he had prayed for
106	11	a fi. r. but as it ſhall be in Heaven
107	29	f. when r. whom
108	3	r. afore he came down
	30	dele for
109	28	r. Aſcenſions
110	4	make the parentheſis to end at me
111	4	in the Contents of the Chapter r. we are Creatures
116	11	dele to
117	ult.	f. ordain r. deſign
120	12	a fi. dele to
	34	f. is r. in
121		is twice over (1) at the 2*d. Book* and 6*th. Chap.* and the (2) is at the 3*d. Book* and 1*ſt. Chap.*
		The 2*d.* Number is marked thus [2] in the Table
123	21	r. explained
126	6	f. renounced r. renowned
	24	f. it is r. is it
127	9	a fi. r. expreſs words
128	15	a fi. f. own r. one
131	22	f. to r. do
133	12	f. not r. that
	16	a fi. f. my r. by
140	26	r. I do not ſubmit
141	27	r. again and again ſaid
	2	r. circuminceſſion
142	9	a fi. r. readineſs
121		[in Book 3] Title of the Book f. is r. in
123	13	f. paraſes r. parentheſes
124	15	a fi. f. that reaſon r. what reaſon
126	8	dele punctum
127	1	f. here r. he
128	37	r. propounded
129	19	f. purpoſes r. purpoſed
	23	f. yet r. that
	35	f. came to be decreed r. come to be employed
	37	f. now r. I ſay it will now be tryed
	41	r. to perform them
	42	r. to call him f. in them r. in him
132	2	f. the account r. that account
	7	f. abſolutionis r. abſolutum
	14	f. rtvived r. reviewed
	21	r. as clear and glorious
	39	f. in creating r. uncreated
	42	r. Deſtination to ſo great
	48	f. yet r. to
133	3	f. Law r. Love
135	23	a fi. r. were conſidered penult.	dele and regeneration f. ſuppoſing r. tho' we ſhould ſuppoſe
	ult.	dele and
136	15	f. elſe r. eſſe actuale
137	penult.	r. till then they
139	4	f. Grace r. Elect
	35	f. through r. to
140	4	f. and the r. in his
	5	r. condition ; did take Men and viewed them at, and afte calling them, as they
	6	f. of r. at
	7	f. a calling r. at calling
	8	a fi. f. out of r. into
143	5	f. with r. which
	15	f. many r. may
144	2	dele in
146	1	f. redeemed r. relieved
147	3	f. there r. thee
	8	dele away
	16	f. give in r. given
	18	a fi. r. this occaſion
149	23	a fi. f. many r. may
150	11	f. continuation r. conſideration f. ſerve r. ſerves
	13	f. contemns r. contempt
	14	r. compared with the Honour and Riches of others
	ult.	f. height r. light
151	3	f. hight r. light
	penult.	f. letted r. ſetled
152	13	f. ſtay r. ſtory
153	22	r. behold in this
154	7	r. one and the ſame act
155	13	f. theif r. chief
	28	f. who r. we
	31	f. and r. as
	34	f. Marrow r. Mate
157	9	a fi. f. it is r. his

158

ERRATA.

page	line
158	40	f. thy r. this
160	7	r. were not Sons of Belial
161	6	a fi. r. by the Law that was then in force
162	10	r. worſhip
165	21	a fi. dele in
169	1	r. World
175	4	a fi. r. not being profited
176	7	a fi. f. inſpected r. inſpired
179	3	a fi. f. loves the ſame r. loves himſelf
180	20	a fi. r. Iſa. 55. 3. Acts 13. 34.
	13	a fi. f. ſome r. ſon
184	22	a fi. r. not only the iſſue
	17	a fi. dele for
190	8	a fi. r. proper Order
193	7	a fi. f. from r. for
	ult.	r. which are in
194	1	put ſemicolon before [both]
197	28	a fi. f. them r. ſhew f. ſaid r. ſad
	21	a fi. f. yet r. that
205	13	f. indignation r. indigitation
211	7	a fi. r. 2 Kings 6. 10.
212	5	a fi. dele than
221	14	r. Rom. 9. 2, 3.
224	6	r. 1 Chron. 17. 19.
226	penult.	f. abſolute r. able
231	29	f. 3 r. 5
236	13	f. Commotion r. Connotation
	30	r. intend (if he intended any at all) other than
237	12	dele to r. tittle
242	7	f. ſhewn r. ſhewing
	22	a fi. dele not
	12	a fi. f. there r. theſe f. term r. terms.
250	18	a fi. r. as are expreſly
	17	a fi. make the parentheſis end at [purpoſe] f. in r. is
252	9	r. its ſelf unto Eternal Love
254	12	a fi. f. no r. a
260	1	f. words r. works
	20 and 21.	a fi. f. counter-faith r. counterfeits
264	4	dele of
265	4	a fi. f. or r. our
	penult.	f. ſin r. him
267	25	r. God or the times
272	6	f. imparted r. imputed
273	10	f. directed r. diverted
	13	r. if any thing did they would
	19	r. ſhall not hinder
274	14	f. contrived r. continued
283	2	f. no r. all f. yet r. yea
	14	f. ſuſpected r. ſuſpended
286	13	dele not
290	8	a fi. f. bitter r. better
291	3	r. if you could
	12	a fi. f. Epheſ. r. Epiſt.
293	15	r. I do not ſay, that he will then ſhine more excellently in the Perſon of Chriſt himſelf; but that he will then ſhine more illuſtriouſly to us, than ever he did, either before the day of Judgment, or in and by Chriſt during the day of Judgment.
298	6	f. but r. put
317	3	f. you r. us
	21	a fi. r. turned to him
	13	a fi. f. him r. us
	5	a fi. f. but r. or
319	7	a fi. r. he being actually
320	24	f. tends r. ſends
321	7	a fi. r. and pull (as it were)
344	24	f. them r. then
345	24	f. his r. is
352	5	a fi. f. him r. the vertue dele comma after again
353		f. page 153 r. 353
353	22	f. Chriſts r. Chriſt
	28	dele this conſideration of
355	25	f. could r. would
356	6	dele comma at ſheep
	7	put , at for, dele , at main
	8	put ; at them, dele : at Lord
	16	put a comma at means, dele comma at is
364	4	r. is, becauſe as he is the God of all Grace, he loves our perſons; which makes him to account ſin our greateſt real miſery, and cauſeth him to look
	6	put comma at loves
369	2	f. Pſal. 53. r. Pſal. 55.
374	1	f. like r. life
375	7	a fi. f. like r. life
376	7	f. Pſal. 12. r. Pſal. 121.
378	12	f. and r. ſo be
381	4	a fi. f. doth r. hath
382	16	r. Dickſon, Glaſcow Profeſſor
	6	a fi. f. Adams r. Adam
	7	a fi. r. continued to Man
page next to 387.		f. 390, r. 388, 389.
393	24	a fi. r. continued it to others
399	7 and 11	r. 1 Cor. 7.
438	28	f. Effects r. affects
439	25	f. Fourthly, r. 4.
	29	f. Fifthly, r. 5.
	32	r. Faith, and with Faith
440	15	f. Secondly, r. Fourthly
448	7	a fi. f. thus r. this
	5	a fi. dele are
	ult.	r. I may ſay as
450	20	f. impropable r. improbable
454	2	r. comfort
454	8	dele that is not in your power
	25	f. waken r. weaken
	14	a fi. r. Church, as a Mother

Vol. III. Part I.

Of an Unregenerate Man's Guiltineſs.

page	line
3	6	DEle for Sin
	8	f. approving r. proving
15	penult.	f. caſt it r. cauſed it
16	21	r. two Objections clog this Aſſertion
	22	dele Aſſertion
	5	a fi. f. they though r. though they
17	13	r. having been ſpoken
18	20	r. comes up with chaff
20	10	r. repreſentatively
24	4	a fi. put the ſtop at Wiſe, f. to r. To
	3	a fi. f. [:] after Body, r. [;]
37	5	f. Entrenchments r. Entrenchers
	10	a fi. dele [and] ante Notes
43	14	f. Covenant r. Conſequence
52	ult.	f. of r. in
56	2	f. a r. as
63	8	f. purges r. purge it
65	18	a fi. f. though r. through
	ult.	f. thee r. me
68	28	r. aſide; as it is James
70	13	r. beſtow them upon thee
	23	r. for all this if thou wilt not be clean, mark
71	17	f. and r. as penult.	r. Grief. And ſenſible we muſt be of it, thus particularly 74	32	a fi. r. Then in a higher demonſtration the
78	20	f. primitive r. privative
83	24	f. his r. in his
87	13	a fi. dele Anſw.
88	29	r. Anſw. This ſeems to be a great
92	22	r. But this light if it
98	3	r. as well for
101	10	a fi. f. of ſending r. offending
102	13	a fi. f. Enemy r. Enmity
111	29	r. punctum after [them]
	30	dele punctum at [general]
138	4	f. World r. Word
144	5	r. 1 Cor. 13. 1, 2, 3. Tho' I ſpeak with the Tongues of Men and of Angels, &c. & dele line 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11.
152	27	a fi. r. manifeſt them
162	40	f. The grew r. They grew
174	21	r. Eternal Life
176	28	r. They have not a taſting
185	12	a fi. r. Day of Death
186	10	a fi. f. croſs r. right courſe
193	24	f. one r. ones
194	22	r. ſuit at Law
195	27	a fi. r. deed will give
197	3	a fi. dele ſemicolon after [King] put punctum after [him] f. that r. That
202	13	a fi. f. too r. ſo
204	5	f. ſave r. ſome
	6	f. ſave the r. ſome
	14	a fi. r. Invents
207	9	a fi. f. aſſerted r. diſſented
208	2	dele punctum after it
210	1	r. throw them down
	44	dele not
213	10	a fi. f. Chriſts r. Chriſt
214	11	f. oppreſſions r. oppreſſors
215	15	r. to us concerning the Antients
	21	f. who know r. They who knew
217	7	a fi. r. becauſe ſhe ſaw a Creature to ſubſiſt
219	5	a fi. r. that whole Line thus, here is better than the beſt hereafter, what they have here, is better than the beſt hereafter, ſo
221	4	a fi. f. Second r. Secondly
226	6	f. promiſe r. promiſes
	17	dele all
	24	f. 2 r. 3
231	9	a fi. f. and r. which
233	6	a fi. f. have r. burn
236	29	f. haſte r. heart
243	24	f. mad r. made
244	24	a fi. r. diſcover it in
246	8	a fi. f. naturally r. natural
249	10	dele the
	13	a fi. f. none r. one
255	25	f. hath r. have
	18	a fi. dele and
256	22	r. Ezekiel 16. 63. To remember and
270	12	f. they r. ſhe
274	2	f. come r. common
299	27	f. metaphorically r. metaphyſically
	32	f. looking r. looketh
300	38	f. privately r. privatively
303	18	f. you r. them
305	26	f. ſignifie r. ſignifies
307	ult.	after heavy and ſad r. if it be at a diſtance from God
309	13	f. come r. came
310	13	dele both
311	2	f. many r. mans
	15	after that is r. Lovers.
	23	f. and r. that
312	2	dele parentheſis
	6	f. that is r. as
	19	put ſemicolon after End
	9	a fi. put ſemicolon after himſelf, dele comma after otherwiſe
313	20	a fi. f. ſhews r. ſhewed
318	7	f. untainted r. untamed
327	22	put punctum after Acts
	23	dele punctum after Law
	34	f. lie r. lies
	16	a fi. put Interrogatory point after Eſſence
	15	a fi. dele Interrogatory point
352	8	a fi. put the comma after out

ERRATA.

page line
356 10 f. elevate r. alleviate 25 dele [this] ante my
5 a ſi. r. that it is partly 358 27 f. hence r. home
13 a ſi. dele of
367 ult. r. more than the ſight of any other ſin
369 2 f. God in juſtice r. God's juſtice
370 13 r. as well as
375 25 a ſi. f. through r. though
390 11 a ſi. put the colon after ſin
411 7 f. Mens r. Men
412 10 a ſi. f. though r. through 413 14 f. and r. a
414 ult. f. wet r. went
12 a ſi. dele too
417 11 f. Aſſiſtance r. Aſſiſtant
421 17 dele ſo
430 13 a ſi. f. regenerate r. unregenerate
433 9 f. confirmation r. conformation
436 ult. dele for
446 ult. f. of God r. in defiance of God
473 29 f. have r. hath
482 12 f. Omiſſion r. Commiſſion
483 8 f. thoſe foregoing r. the foregoing
18 f. Converſations r. Converſions
492 9 a ſi. f. ſay r. ſaw
493 in Cont. of the Chap. f. Valour r. Value
16 a ſi. f. it r. its 501 19 f. foiled r. ſoiled
505 13 a ſi. f: as r. a 515 5 dele our
20 f. collaterially r. collaterally, f. concomitantly r. circumſtantially
516 31 f. New r. Now
9 a ſi. f. any r. man
517 2 f. World r. Word
518 11 a ſi. f. For, 1. r. For the 1ſt.
527 5 r. moral; Juris
528 17 a ſi. r. ſo much the worſe
11 a ſi. f. National r. Notional
533 12 a ſi. f. and r. as 539 6 a ſi. r. thou art gone
545 22 r. Goodneſs
550 25 a ſi. f. may r. my 26 a ſi. f. as r. are 561 27 a ſi. f. only r. openly
562 16 a ſi. f. than r. that
26 a ſi. f. conſideration r. conſidering
571 5 r. the truth, and real 586 penult. f. were r. we
588 6 a ſi. f. verum r. rerum
591 29 f. nor nor r. no nor 37 f. cario r. corio
592 7 r. it not that an 21 a ſi. f. in r. is 593 18 f. provoke r. prove 594 8 f. or r. a
607 3 a ſi. f. yours r. your 609 7 r. begins
619 5 dele of

Part II. Of Man's Reſtoration.

14 16 f. 3. r. 2.
24 r. ſcatteredly
15 9 r. Chriſt's
18 8 a ſi. r. Sanctification as here

Part III. Of Chriſt the Mediator.

7 4 r. Father is the
11 26 a ſi. f. low r. love
22 a ſi. r. the gladder ſhould he be 12 10 f. cloſe r. chooſe
16 18 dele the firſt [and]
25 21 r. Rev. 13. 8. dele Here, & dele l. 22, 23.

page line
3 a ſi. r. John 17. 2. & dele the two laſt lines
29 16 a ſi. f. word r. award
40 8 a ſi. dele the firſt [of]
42 12 dele not
48 14 f. unequal r. equal
19 r. as a middle
71 15 f. beginning r. beloved
34 f. Word r. World
75 13 a ſi. f. in r. is 12 a ſi. f. is r. in
88 28 a ſi. r. ſame time ſuffer
17 a ſi. dele comma
3 a ſi. r. Pſal. 49. 8. dele not
89 27 dele or
98 6 r. an incongruity
105 6 f. Articles r. Actions
9 f. perſons r. perſon
108 23 f. loſt by him r. loſt by ſin
125 5 a ſi. f. mocking r. mocked
136 19 a ſi. dele [to] ante lay
154 5 r. Glory of the People
155 33 r. conceived in 159 22 dele is ante uſed
36 f. Net, for r. Nexer
6 a ſi. f. of r. or
164 1 f. ſtreams r. ſtream
189 18 a ſi. f. ſacrificer r. ſacrifice
191 ult. dele that
192 15 f. ſo r. ſon
193 in Cont. of the Chap. dele how, put comma after demonſtrated.
194 16 a ſi. dele will 195 13 r. we will now ſhew that it was;
24 a ſi. f. we r. he
196 13 f. with ob r. which
15 dele it
204 11 f. formerly r. formally
213 12 a ſi. r. with-held
216 21 dele great
221 19 f. Obſerv. 2. r. Obſerv. 3.
226 12 a ſi. f. thee r. thou
228 16 f. put to r. to put 7 a ſi. f. thee r. be 230 ult. f. be r. are
235 9 f. us r. him (twice in that line)
19 dele punctum after us, put punctum after hereby 248 17 f. Waiting r. Writing
253 24 a ſi. r. art not thou one 258 24 a ſi. r. aimed at 260 ult. f. have r. hath
272 antepen. put the parentheſis after him
275 19, 20. begin the parentheſis at as, end it at ſpeaks
292 17 f. me r. thee
11 a ſi. f. ye r. yet
293 2 r. croſſed and
18 a ſi. f. ſo r. to
298 penult. r. Europe and Aſia, and of the Mogul
301 27 a ſi. f. therefore r. thereof
303 8 f. that r. what
311 9 dele punctum after [hers]
17 dele fruits
312 3 dele comma after extraordinary
9 dele with
314 18 a ſi. f. hundred r. thouſand
321 8 r. of a ſtraw by a Rapier
12 f. hath r. have
22 a ſi. dele of Satan
323 2 f. Matth. 12. 23. r. Mat. 12. 43.
341 15 f. Rights r. Rites
342 dele line 20
343 9 a ſi. f. in r. it
344 13 a ſi. r. ſays of Chriſt that he is 354 15 f. Aſſentions r. Aſſertions
359 6 f. one r. no

page line
10 dele 3
9 a ſi. r. juſtified by Faith
362 23 a ſi. f. three r. theſe
12 a ſi. f. and other r. over
365 31 f. as ſo r. and ſo
366 8 r. I ſay he had
9 f. and much as r. when
369 32 r. gives you ordinances
374 7 r. inſtant
377 32 f. hant r. than 379 13 r. endleſs life
387 9 a ſi. dele not only
8 a ſi. r. required not only on 389 26 dele in
391 penult. r. whom Thomas ſeems to ſpeak it
397 19 a ſi. dele that doubt 401 11 r. we ſinners much more who 402 3 r. As to the inferiour Prieſts
14 As to the Kohathites
403 10 f. at r. as 406 penult. r. is by our Apoſtle obſerved
ult. & penult. dele is by our Apoſtle
407 6 dele and vices
409 13 r. Tabernacles of Moſes were the Type which were 410 4 r. of Guilt, comeſt into Heaven; and that 411 10 f. in r. is, l. 11. after Wilderneſs r. is the other
413 3 r. thereof: the Anſwer is; it
7 dele in
414 4 f. his r. our antepenult. dele was 417 26 a ſi. f. invitation r. intuition
420 11 f. of all r. ſo
422 22 dele not
423 27 a ſi. dele and
424 ult. and 425 1 f. adorning r. adoring
427 7 a ſi. dele that is

Vol. IV. Part I.

Of the Object of Faith.

page line
2 12 Dele thoſe the Subjects of
38 f. v. 7. r. v. 5.
3 22 f. III. r. 3.
8 50 dele before
11 53 r. and no further
14 10 f. his r. their 15 17 f. exhale r. exhaled
25 f. 24 r. 34
22 15 r. for in that relation
23 52 dele thoſe of our Redemption
27 18 and 22 f. imminent r. immanent
50 r. whatever he is made
30 21 dele was which
45 31 r. deitatem
49 25 f. ditto r. ditty
51 f. praiſes r. praiſers
59 8 dele either
68 10 r. unrighteouſneſs
72 22 f. mine r. his
75 26 f. above r. alone
76 1 f. with r. which
82 penult. f. third r. ſixth
89 25 r. let us try if 92 5 r. to embrace
7 f. do r. doth
98 8 f. there r. their
100 48 dele [and] after ſuch
101 13, 14 r. punctum at ſupply, comma at quick ſand
102 21 dele only
47 dele for
103 56 f. Job 13. 26. r. Job 33. 26.

104

ERRATA.

page	line
104	14 f. then r. when
105	39 r. right and Title
119	14 r. and believe not penult. f. how r. that
120	50 f. where r. there
123	6 r. punctum at ſecretly, comma at given, put (?) after words, dele (?) after John 6. 37.
129	ult. dele punctum at only, put punctum at Chriſt
130	56 f. Heb. 11. 3. r. Heb. 4. 3.
132	21 f. him r. me
134	1 dele I have ſaved you and you
143	1 r. as Fleſh his Humanity
149	1 dele and
151	46 f. way r. ſtage
154	25 f. words r. works
167	40 r. firſt act of juſtifying Faith
169	29 f. after r. before
170	13 f. accordingly r. according
	42 r. he believes, he doth
171	1 r. to be the Juſtifyer
	39 f. on r. out
174	6 f. altogether r. all together
175	9 dele Comma after Scripture, put Comma after in
177	1 dele to
	39 & 42 dele parentheſis
	44 r. Adherence? The
	55 put ? after Faith
179	12 f. have r. hath
180	36 r. a certainty himſelf
	49 f. this r. his
182	42 dele ſemi-colon
	43 r. to me (2 Sam. 12. 22.) in ſparing his Life?
	48 f. Apprehenſions r. Declarations
183	55 dele it may be's
185	3 dele and Peter of himſelf
	34 f. deſire r. deſired
	35 dele with
187	27 dele parentheſis after him, put parentheſis after perſonally
189	8 dele comma at God, put comma at performed
191	4 dele but
192	41 dele into
199	57 r. ſound or appearance of the leaſt ſuch preference
200	52 dele comma after principal
202	31 r. God himſelf uſeth in

Part II. Of the Acts of Faith.

page	line
6	51 dele yet
	penult. dele no
8	11 r. ſenſe is never deceived
9	52 f. maneſt r. meaneſt
13	12 f. wiſper r. whiſper
18	2 f. punctum r. comma
19	10 r. nor hath it only
23	13 dele it
	14 f. deny all r. denial
27	1 put comma after ſaved
	52 f. quidam r. quidem
28	51 f. conſideration r. conſiderations
33	22 f. that r. the
	25 dele on
37	57 r. πρῶτον
39	27 put colon at plant
	28 f. if r. If
45	18 dele [in] after Faith
52	15 r. Law or Nature of Faith
	48 f. hath it r. ſaith
55	1 dele 6
	27 after Chriſt r. and it is 28 r. which is
56	7 put ſemicolon after (mentioned)
	8 dele ſemicolon
58	53 r. Word of God
60	35 f. Thy r. my
63	39 r. falſe Shepherds
64	57 r. in a twelve month
66	46 dele ſemicolon after (nothing)
68	18 r. make out to Chriſt
69	31 dele of the
70	4 dele on
71	penult. dele is
72	34 f. whereof r. where antepenult. r. poor in Spirit
77	23 r. and he is made
78	3 f. whereof r. thereof
	5 r. And if it
80	26 dele and
84	49 f. argues r. argue
86	25 r. Men that have
97	10 dele comma after (beſides)
98	37 f. ſuggeſts r. ſuggeſt
102	9 f. ye r. yet
	14 r. men are as their
110	2 f. nor r. nothing
	18 dele parentheſis
	penult. dele comma after (them)
113	15 r. comma at (King) r. comma at (he).
116	49 r. calleth them Brethren
119	44 dele comma after Aſſurance
120	penult. dele that
121	52 f. fall way r. fall away
122	11 dele it
123	46 f. delight r. delights
125	11 r. to be beloved
127	32 f. pulls r. pull
	33 f. ſweetens r. ſweeten
128	56 dele ? after God, put ? after juſtifying
129	3 r. Firſt, ſome make
130	55 dele comma after firſt
131	antepen. f. ſay it may r. it may ſay
132	14 r. purpoſed from Eternity
	15 dele from Eternity
133	6 f. act r. acts
	24 f. him r. them
134	21 f. together r. to gather
	ult. dele is
136	47 f. Thirdly, r. 3.
137	7 f. it r. its
	8 r. dealing with others
139	20 f. them r. him
140	3 f. 3 r. 4
	49 f. 4 r. 5
	antepen. dele an
141	15 dele comma at Election, put comma at then, f. than r. then
144	52 f. therefore r. before
147	3 f. Attributes r. Attribute
	18 dele comma at latitude
	49 dele are
148	37 f. deſtines r. deſigns
150	11 a fi. f. a part r. apart, & dele and
151	7 r. and not without a promiſe
152	40 put comma at ſuch
155	35 f. Iſa. 1. 6. r. Jam. 1. 6.
	51 f. too r. to
158	Margin dele comma after minuens
159	22 f. χωρὶς r. χωεὶς
160	3 r. come to me
161	34 f. cauſes r. clauſes
	6 a fi. put punctum at Children
	f. but r. But
	f. ſate r. caſe
	put comma after hand
163	13, [illegible], 22, 29. f. tenure r. tenour
	27 r. concerning
164	2 put interrogatory point after things.
	3 after virtually f. ? r. :
	after this, f. , r. ?
	after things f. ? r. .
	13 f. Auge r. [illegible]
	23 f. univerſals r. univerſally
171	penult. dele in ante thoſe
173	8 r. is there uſed, and in 1 John 3. 2, 3.
	16 a fi. r. that ſo far as a Man's

Part III. Of the Properties of Faith.

page	line
3	5 a fi. dele [it] ante to
5	9 f. given r. giving, dele comma at nothing
6	17 put colon at ſecure: put comma at rage
	26 f. 2. r. 3*ly.*
	53 f. 3. r. 4*ly.*
7	1 f. 4 r. 5*ly.*
	25 f. 5. r. 2.
9	37 dele (in us) after that
11	17 dele (in) after and
13	26 f. ſin r. ſins, f. ſet upon by all, r. it being ſet upon by them all.
16	47 r. ſo it juſtifieth his works
18	22 f. impleaded r. pleaded
	26 f. caſe r. cauſe
19	51 dele comma after infallibilitatis, put comma after only
20	7 f. thoſe r. this
22	20 f. eaſieſt r. the moſt difficult
26	37 dele no
	51 f. 5 r. 2
28	46 put ſemicolon after Eſtate
31	34 f. yea r. yet
34	25 r. it is utterly
37	ult. f. Faith r. Works
38	9 f. thereto r. there to
	52 f. Thy r. They
39	31 r. Obedience
47	58 f. 2 r. 3 f. ſecond r. third
50	8 f. all r. no
60	11 r. himſelf doth juſtifie me without
	34 dele out
62	37 put comma at them, dele comma at faith
64	2 r. Endeavours is in
67	penult. r. Self-endeavouring
71	20 put ſemicolon after that, put comma after it, f. ; after words r. , penult. r. Soul ſaith is the thing
79	39 f. Mans r. Means
87	penult. r. to wait in a way
88	51 f. bands r. band
94	1 f. he r. you
	antepen. f. that r. yet
111	43 f. than r. as
112	55 r. Language or Words

The Government of the Churches.

page	line
3	34 For Original Read Organical
5	5 r. than that of Inſtitution
	14 r. at the latter day
	15 dele comma after the first [worſhip]
7	56 dele (out) after (of)
8	35 f. Cannon r. Common
10	antepen. f. all ſo r. alſo
12	3 dele ſemicolon after (are)
15	11 f. 1 Cor. 10. 26. r. 1 Cor. 10. 4, 5, 6.
	20 f. therein, we r. wherein we
	22 f. Apoſtles r. Apoſtle
	29 f. nor r. or
	41 f. [illegible] r. meaning
16	50 f. 1 Cor. 2. 5, 7. r. 1 Cor. 12. 5, 6, 7, 8.
17	4 f. 1 Cor. 10. 4. r. 2 Cor. 10. 4.

ERRATA.

page	line
20	33	f. Heb. 6. 4. r. Heb. 4. 7. f. of r. of the Chriſtian-Sabbath
24	18	f. in Chriſt r. of Chriſt, & dele for
	27	f. the r. The
	38	dele [in] after alike
25	1	f. Tit. r. Tim.
	17	r. 1 Cor. 11. 16.
	21	f. almoſt r. moſt
	28	f. cirections r. directions
	38	f. Apoſtorum r. Apoſtolorum
26	50	dele [for] after Precepts
27	15	put comma after (from)
	16	dele comma after both
	17	dele comma after Creation
	21	f. is r. are
28	40	dele parentheſis
	44	r. would have given no Rules
	50	r. any the like
	51	f. eat r. eek
	55	f. walking r. walk
	57	dele comma after experience, put comma after practice
29	10	f. deſires r. deſire
	31	r. way or means
	39	dele beſides what
31	26	f. as this one r. in this one
	30	f. theſe r. thoſe
	31	r. Argument would have had
	35	r. eat at his Table
32	8	f. his r. this
	24	r. and on this ſide
	32	f. or r. and
33	16 17	r. good and evil
34	8	f. they r. that
	10	f. v. 6. r. v. 7.
	12	f. Lord r. Lords-Supper
	23 and 36	f. theſe r. thoſe
	30	r. admoniſheth as a Remedy
	48	f. hath r. have
	55	r. to be for this end
36	19	r. they are not to eat
38	12	f. could r. would
	16	r. comma after them
	17	dele comma after elſewhere
	49	r. Rules for Church
	53	f. convert r. cenſure
39	2	r. 1 Tim. 5. 24. doubtful diſputations
	5	f. 1 Tim. 25. r. 2 Tim. 2. 25.
	7	f. alſo r. elſe
	13	r. 1 Cor. 5. 5. is called
39	19	f. Mat. 11. 15. r. Mat. 18. 15.
	21	f. prevent r. preſerve
	27	put the ſemicolon after impenitency
42	53	f. 2 r. 3
44	3	r. univerſal Church
45	39	f. word r. words
48	10	dele as
	44	dele ; after admonition
50	15	f. politick r. politie
	30	dele us
	34	f. this r. their
51	8	f. togethor r. together
51	14	f. by r. but, f. but r. and
	15	dele ver. 3.
	26	f. John 10. r. John 9. 34.
	30	f. inclines r. includes
52	16	dele it
	ib.	put colon after argues
	17	begin the parentheſis at collectively
53	28	f. promiſed r. premiſed
	45	f. implied r. employed
54	9	f. Acts 29. 5. r. Acts 22. 5.
55	54	r. as Amen doth alſo, being ſet
56	46	dele comma after himſelf
	47	f. all, I grant r. All grant
57	2	f. them r. then
	51	f. τε̃ r. τε̃
	52	r. call it Eccleſia
58	6	f. thereof r. therefore
	45	r. συμφωνήσωσιν
61	55	r. would conduce more to the eſtabliſhment of the
62	44	r. yet the Queſtion
	53	r. making a particular Church in
62	54	f. Chriſtian's r. Chriſtians, & dele Church
64	2	dele comma after meeting, put comma after Church
	7	dele the firſt (of)
	55	f. being r. bring
65	51 52	dele as they are in
66	5	r. aſſiſting in the Acts
	6	f. in vocato r. invocato
	21	f. to their r. to the
69	11	r. comma after all
	12	f. inſtances r. inſtance
	22	dele be
	24	f. thereupon r. there, upon
71	penult.	r. the party be
74	3	f. to r. too
	4	r. 2 Cor. 6. 16. ſhew. Ye are the Temple
75	49	dele of
76	22 23	r. abeſſe, not be; and adeſſe, be
	46	dele a
77	47	r. inaſmuch as it concerns
79	9	f. It is r. Is it
80	2	f. for (afore r. (for afore
	19	dele as
	28	f. Acts 14. 13. r. Acts 14. 23;
81	31	r. former, κατὰ πόλιν by κατ' ἐκκλησίαν, City here
	36	r. he was not to ordain
	39	r. they are here
82	21	f. for ſo Pliny (who r. (for ſo Pliny who
	27	f. place r. places
	33	f. there r. then, & dele [and Church]
83	penult.	f. is r. as
84	in the Title of the Chap.	f. many Churches r. a ſingle Church
	penult.	f. full r. faithful
85	5	dele comma after there, put comma after beſides
	21	r. if it had been
	ult.	dele [as] after [well]
86	7	f. and r. ſo
89	28	f. given r. grown
90	29	r. it hath fallen out
92	19	r. Wits of the World
	penult.	f. the of r. of the
95	17	r. within which
	23	dele did
96	9	f. touch r. truth
	35	f. Notive r. Native
97	6	f. give r. get
	9	f. as r. than
102	10	r. than what is affirmatively declared and extended in
	19	dele and
	20	f. there r. their
	30	f. hey r. they
103	57	f. Ocumenick r. Oeconomick
106	45	dele comma after have
	46	put comma after not
107	46	f. beſet r. to ſee
109	14	dele and the efficacy of them
	17	dele if
	56	dele are
112	20	f. up r. upon
114	36	dele comma at over
116	penult.	f. clearly r. clear
117	51	f. Diſciple r. Diſcipline
119	25	f. Excommunicati r. Ex communi
126	33	f. obſerved r. abſurd
127	12	f. fall r. full
	44	dele be, f. acknowledging r. acknowledge
129	56	f. do r. may
	57	f. may r. do
130	30	f. Common r. Community
	37 and 38	f. Diſcipline, Admonitions, r. Diſcipline-Admonitions
	51	dele a
132	27	f. one r. our
	29	r. ſhall ſpeak unto when
133	15	f. for r. from
	43	f. Emperial r. Imperial
	58	f. on r. in
135	1	r. Apoſtles did ſtay in places but till
136	22	f. expected r. excepted
	53	f. while r. whole
137	2	f. ſtrong thing r. ſtrengthning
	31	f. this r. it is
139	15	r. who had not infirmities
	20	f. with r. want
	24	f. conveniences r. inconveniences
	34	f. diſcerned r. delivered
140	3	f. ſuppoſe there r. ſuppoſe they
141	38	f. Bleſſing r. leſſening
142	13	f. direct r. directive
	16	r. and not guided of it ſelf
143	5	f. adviſed r. adviſe
144	6	r. way of Reverence
145	20	f. yet r. that
	22	f. a condition r. but a ſuppoſition
	52	f. principal r. provincial
147	28	f. execution r. excommunication
148	17	dele and, dele it
149	49	f. Rulers r. Rules
151	5	a fi. r. ἀνθρωπίνη κτίσις
152	8	dele on
153	20	r. Kingdom is thus large and
156	10	r. whole Kingdom only while the Parliament ſits,
159	7	r. greater part among
161	9	f. of r. or
162	21	f. warly r. worldly
163	12	f. Cyprius r. Lipſius
	18	r. if the Church
	23	f. there r. their
	40, 41	dele no more than could make up
	45	r. becauſe (as hath been ſhewn) by πόλις, City, is meant ſmall
165	16	r. Chriſt, he hath
	32	r. To the third
166	5	f. is r. are
	18	dele then
	23	r. Creation, it would be
	39	f. is to be r. are
	40	f. But as r. But that
167	55	f. uttering r. altering
171	18	f. our r. over
	22	dele that
173	3	f. were r. are for
	5	f. ſo now for r. as to
	29	r. ſo to do, is but humane
176	41	f. ſimular unto r. ſimilar thereunto
	53	f. Term r. Form
182	1	r. bear not
189	15	f. original r. organical
192	11	f. Offices r. Officers
	16	dele they
	31	f. whereas r. where as
	33	dele in which
	45	f. no this r. not his
201	38	f. pœnæ r. pœna
202	57	r. will not own
203	44	r. ſuperior power in Synods
	51	r. punctum after explained
204	5	dele ſuch
	6	f. Mens r. Mans
206	13	f. infallibly r. infallibility
207	12	f. excommunicate r. communicate
208	21	f. that r. not
209	49	f. without r. within
210	18	r. care and cure
211	40	f. be r. is
	57	dele that there ought to be

57 dele

ERRATA.

page	line
212	25	f. thoſe r. theſe
	27	f. diſadvantage r. advantage
	33	dele ? f. Well r. well
	36	f. if r. that
	59	f. from r. with, f. with r. from
213	16	dele ?
	17	f. now r. nor
	21	f. ſaltem r. ſaltum
	ult.	f. therein r. there, in & dele comma after [in] f. Aſiæ r. Aſia
214	33	r. Oecumenical
215	16	dele comma after [it] put comma after [of]
216	3	f. woſe r. worſe
	4	f. expreſs r. expel
	35	f. either r. neither
219	17	f. preſent r. preſented
221	23	f. inſuitablenes r. in ſuitableneſs
222	39	r. parallel proportion, Communion of Saints being
223	23	f. Commonwealth r. Commonwealths
224	7	r. as a duty of
	34	r. for him to ſeize
225	52	dele in
227	16	dele but
228	31	f. Sociacia r. Socia
231	7	r. any Diet
232	34	r. in this they do
235	25	r. tho' their having one Language
236	47	f. ſome r. ſoon
237	10	dele hold
	24	f. Rulers r. Rules
	30	f. obtineat r. obtineant,
	49	f. inflicting of r. of inflicting f. now Excommunication being r. ſince Excommunication is
238	53	dele not
239	32	f. When before r. When he foreſaw (all
	33	put parentheſis after Chriſtianity
240	34	f. or r. for
245	51	r. he calls it Chap. 3. 15.)
249	1	r. agrees, ſaith our
	7 and 8	f. as Paſtors r. a Paſtor
250	51	after 1 Cor. 2. 15. interline are the matter of the Inſtituted Church
256	10	f. through r. though
	40	r. in all is the
257	55	r. hath not power to forbid thoſe Ordinances
259	47	f. either r. their
262	40	f. the r. their
263	8	r. was at firſt
264	42	dele we find
	43	r. we find 1 Cor. 12. 18.
	44	put colon after Reaſon, put (referring to this) in a parentheſis
265	5	r. ſpeak of them in
266	52	f. them, theſe r. them. Theſe
	53	f. Excommunications. To exanine r. Excommunications, and to examine
268	2	f. ſtrained r. ſtand
271	11	f. other r. either
273	12	f. Age r. Man
274	46	r. that is good in this particular
	48	f. much r. man's
275	36	f. annexion r. extenſion
	38	f. about r. above
277	4	dele to be
	38	f. ordinants r. organs, dele comma after Church, dele as ordinary Officers
	49	f. their r. the
278	1	r. diligent for
279	12	r. ſo to convict that whore
281	ult.	f. Deacons r. Teachers
282	1	f. Deacons r. Teachers
282	27	f. they r. Paſtor and Teacher
283	23	put comma after all, dele parentheſis
	25	f. Deacons r. Teachers
	37	dele 2
285	53	f. preach r. baptize, f. baptize r. preach
286	20	f. Ordinance r. Ordnance
289	13	f. confuſion r. diſtinction
290	18, 19, 20, 21.	f. Keep not thou ſilence O God, &c. r. Behold how good and how pleaſant it is for Brethren to dwell, &c.
	42	r. phorenically
293	11	f. inſtitution r. inſtruction
	38	f. Miniſtries r. Myſteries
295	11	f. Beaſt r. Boaſt
297	28	r. adminiſters, is from
298	23	r. convert, God bleſſes
299	11	f. Iſa. 5. 16. r. Jam. 5. 16.
	41	f. theſe r. the
303	5	f. Iſa. 5. 16. r. Jam. 5. 16.
304	13	aſt. put punctum after anſwered.
	Ibid.	The Text Rom. 10. 14, 15. doth not belong to the Contents of the Chapter, but ſhould have been printed ſeparately from them.
313	6	f. choſe r. chuſe
	17	dele [as] after well
	24	f. unconverted r. converted
	42	r. the Elect as to build up Saints
314	15	f. plaining r. placing
315	37	f. is r. hath
	39	r. gainſaying, they ſin
	53	r. Liberty of Conſcience
316	51	dele of
	54	r. they are his laſt
	56	f. which r. where
320	21	r. taught us in this
321	10	f. ſolicited r. ſolicitude
324	25	f. they r. he
326	41	f. 5. r. 4.
327	4	f. or r. on
	35	f. forget r. forgo
332	48	r. muſt not appoint
333	36	r. from Lords day to Lords day
334	29	r. uſe of which
336	12	f. diſperſed r. diſpenſed
	23	f. thoſe r. theſe
	47	dele the publick worſhip of God would ſoon have permitted it
337	36	f. and r. or
341	28	dele upon
	34	r. two ſorts of Ordinances
344	49	dele have
346	23	f. face r. fall
	37	f. their r. his
349	17	f. place r. peace
	27	r. on other dayes
	43	r. amittitur
	50	f. for r. on
354	42	f. Office r. Officer
	48	f. prayer r. pray
355	33	f. preſent r. prevent
356	34	f. commanded r. command
357	antepenult.	f. your r. our
360	38	f. brought r. bought
361	3	dele was
362	29	dele not
	antepenult.	r. incognito
363	26	dele had
	38	dele to be
365	42	f. farther r. father
	43	f. letter r. latter
366	12	f. ſeaſon r. reaſon
367	15	dele in
370	14	dele was
372	12	f. puts r. put
	14	f. bind r. binding
	25	f. their r. there, f. alongs r. along
	44	r. This is called
374	57	f. hide in the Cauſes r. hid in the Caves
375	12	f. caſed r. ceaſed
376	2	dele that
	41	dele an, dele [of] after loſs
385	1	f. when r. then
387	44	r. viz. (1.) The Elders prayers
	50	f. Third r. Second
389	29	f. converted r. turn'd to a like uſe
391	10	r. rather than they ſhould remain
	ult.	dele [of] after up
393	25	f. leſt r. leſs
396	22	f. together r. to gathtr
397	24	f. then r. them
	25	dele [that] after they
	39	f. and ſo run r. they own
	41	dele comma at practice, put comma after deſire
	49	f. Members r. Member
398	3	dele For
401	14	f. Rom. 16. 12. r: Rom. 12 16.
402	24	f. they r. be

The Government of the Churches, by way of Queſtion and Anſwer.

page	line
5	35	FOr keepeth Read teacheth
6	7	f. 1 Cor. 3. 4. r. 1 Cor. 5. 4. f. To r. to, put punctum after place
	24	r. 2. And from
	38	f. it r. that
7	12	f. they r. that
	32	dele and
8	10	f. and yet he ſpeaks r. when he ſpake
10	35	f. Magiſtrates r. Miniſters
11	44	r. Spirit with the New Teſtament
14	26	f. Name r. mean
18	21	f. wind r. mind
	46	f. Liberty r. Propheſy
19	27	f. ſhe r. they
	32	r. rule, and here it is
	35	f. herein, r. hear us
	38	f. but r. nor
22	13	r. Anointment with Oil, it is not ceaſed,
24	7	f. deſiries r. deſires
	19	f. Miniſters r. Members
26	31	r. mercy, but a matter of Juſtice
29	10	dele comma after is
	43	f. which r. hath
30	37	f. from r. of
34	19	dele there as, f. unleſs r. if
45	10	f. you r. we
	11	f. your r. our
46	32	f. our r. your
47	18	f. your r. our